R.C., Times' Whistle (1871), p. 94. (1616)

I am ready even to skip out of my skin for Joy.

HENRY MORE, Divine Dialogues. Bk. iii, ch. 36. (1668)

I am ready to leap out of my skin for joy.

HENRY FIELDING, The Miser. Act v, sc. 1. (1732)

I could almost have jumped for joy.

MADAME D'ARLAY, Early Diary, ii, 69. (1775)

'Twould make me jump out of my skin for joy.

GEORGE COLMAN THE YOUNGER, The Blue Devils. Act i, sc. 1. (1798)

1
Joys do not abide, but take wing and fly away.

(Gaudia non remanent, sed fugitiva volant.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. i, epig. 15. (A.D. 85)

O brotel wele of mannes joye unstable!

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. iii, l. 820. (c. 1380)

Joye of this world, for tyme wol nat abyde;

Fro day to night it changeth as the tyde.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Tale of the Man of Lawe, l. 1035. (c. 1386)

The ioyes of this worlde dure but litle. (L'alegreze di questo mondo duran poco.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 32. (1578)

Headlong joy is ever on the wing, . . . Soon swallow'd up in . . . night.

JOHN MILTON, The Passion, l. 5. (c. 1630)

Joy, whose hand is ever at his lips,

Bidding adieu.

JOHN KEATS, Ode on Melancholy. St. 3. (1820)

2
Remembered joys are never past.

JAMES MONTGOMERY, The Little Cloud. (1818)

See under REMEMBRANCE.

3
Everything that is leavened rises, and joy is the rational elevation or rising of the soul.

(πάν τὸ ἐζυμώμενον ἐπάρεται· χαρὰ δὲ ψυχῆς ἐστὶν ἐβλογος ἐπαρσις.)

PHILO, De Specialibus Legibus. Bk. ii, sec. 185.

(c. A.D. 40) The regular Stoic definition of χαρὰ, in contrast with ἡδονή.

Joy is the life of man's life.

BENJAMIN WHICHCOTE, Moral Aphorisms. (1753)

Joy is the grace we say to God.

JEAN INGELow, Dominion. (1857)

4
'Tis sweet torture when joy is held in. (O dulce tormentum ubi reprimatur gaudium.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 487. (c. 43 B.C.)

5
Real joy, believe me, is a serious matter.

(Mihi crede, verum gaudium res severa est.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xxiii, sec. 4. (A.D. 64)

All great joys are serious.

ALEXANDER SMITH, Dreamthorp. Ch. 3. (1863)

6
I wish him joy of her.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado about Nothing, ii, 1, 200. (1598)

You will even go the length of wishing them joy of their bargain.

JAMES PAYN, Heir of the Ages. Ch. 46. (1885)

7
Joy delights in joy.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. Sonnet viii. (1609)

Joy makes us giddy, dizzy. (Die Freude macht drehend, wirblicht.)

LESSING, Minna von Barnhelm. Act ii, sc. 3. (1775) Goethe has, "Die Freudigkeit ist die Mutter aller Tugenden" (Joyfulness is the mother of all virtues).

II—Joy and Sorrow

See also Laughter and Tears; Pleasure and Pain; Smile and Tear

8
Joy steals over me, challenging my tears. (χαρὰ μ' ὑφέρπει δάκρυον ἐκκαλουμένη.)

AESCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 270. (458 B.C.)

9
Excess of sorrow laughs; excess of joy weeps.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell. (1808)

Great joys weep, great sorrows laugh.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest. Pt. v, No. 3. (c. 1870)

10
Joy must not transport, nor sorrow break. (Non laeta extollant animum, non tristitia frangant.)

CATO (?), Collectio Monostichorum, l. 2. (c. 175 B.C.) See Minor Latin Poets, Loeb, p. 624.

11
Sorrow is the outcome of evil; joy is the outcome of good.

DHAMMAPALA, Commentaries. Verse 117. (c. A.D. 475)

12
We should publish our Joys, and conceal our Grievs.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5458. (1732)

13
It is better to sorrow with the sorrowful than to rejoice with the joyful.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Peninim (Choice of Pearls). No. 521. (c. 1050)

14
Joy must have sorrow and sorrow, joy. (Freud' muss Leid, Leid muss Freude haben.)

GOETHE, Faust. Pt. i, sc. 10. (1806) The proverb is, "Keine Freud', ohne Leid."

15
Eche one daie was three, tyll lybertee was borow,

For one monthis ioie to bryng hir hole liues sorow.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)

Eighty odd years of sorrow have I seen, And each hour's joy wrecked with a week of teen.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, iv, 1, 96. (1592)

Hunting, hawking, and paramours, for ane joy, a hundred displeasures.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 42 (c. 1595)

For one day of joy, a thousand of grief. (Per un giorno di gioja, n'abbiamo mille di noja.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 193. (1856) An Italian proverb.

Every inch of joy has an ell of annoy.

W. G. BENEAM, Proverbs, p. 756. (1907)

16
With all your ioye, ioygne all your ieoperdie.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 11. (1546)

17
Upon her soul came joy and grief in one moment. (τὴν δ' ἄμα χάρις καὶ ἄλγος ἐλε φέρεα.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xix, l. 471. (c. 850 B.C.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, x, 61, gives the Latin proverb as "Gaudium dolori iunctum."

<sup>1</sup> Sorrow is but the shadow of joy; joy is but the cloak of sorrow.

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue). Sec. 58. (c. 550 B. C.) Old, tr.

<sup>2</sup> From the very fountain of joy springs a drop of bitterness to torment even in the flowers. (Medio in fonte leporum | surgit amari aliquid quod in ipsis floribus angat.)

LUCRETIVS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. iv, l. 1133. (c. 45 B. C.)

No man can enjoy honey unmixed with venom. SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Penimim (Choice of Pearls). No. 556. (c. 1050) "The delights of the world resemble honey mixed with venom."—Mishlei Shualim, fable 68.

Full from the fount of Joy's delicious springs
Some bitter o'er the flowers its bubbling venom flings.

LORD BYRON, Childe Harold's Pilgrimage. Canto i, st. 82. (1812)

<sup>3</sup> Great joys, like griefs, are silent.

SHACKERLEY MARMION, Holland's Leaguer. Act v, sc. 1. (1632) See also GRIEF: VOCAL AND SILENT.

<sup>4</sup> My joys were the beginning of my woe. (Gaudia principium nostri sunt doloris.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. vii, l. 796. (c. A. D. 7)

<sup>5</sup> Eche joy is made more pleasant by first tasting some sower sops of sorrow.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 61. (1576)

<sup>6</sup> Sorrows remembered sweeten present joy.

ROBERT POLLOK, The Course of Time, i, 464. (1827) See also under REMEMBRANCE.

<sup>7</sup> Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning. (Ad vesperum demorabitur fletus, et ad matutinum laetitia.)

Old Testament: Psalms. xxx, 5. (c. 250 B. C.) It is heaven's will for sorrow to follow joy. (Ita divis est placitum, voluptatem ut maeror comes consequatur.)

PLAUTUS, Amphitruo, l. 635. (c. 200 B. C.) The proverb is usually given as "Voluptatem maeror sequitur" (Sorrow follows joy).

Sorrow is sometimes blent with joy. (Interdum miscetur tristitia laetis.)

OVID, Fasti. Bk. vi, l. 463. (c. A. D. 8) The usual form of the proverb is, "Extrema gaudii luctus occupat" (On the extremes of gladness sorrow lurks).

Next the derke night the glad morwe;

And also joy is next the fyn [fin, end] of sorwe. CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. i. l. 946. (c. 1380)

For every wo ye shal recovere a blisse.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde, iii, 181
Joye after wo, and wo after gladnesse.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Knight's Tale, l. 1983. (c. 1386)

Evere the latter ende of loye is wo.

CHAUCER, The Nonnes Preestes Tale, l. 385.

Next the ende of sorowe, anon entreth joy.

THOMAS USK, Testament of Love. (c. 1387)

Whom weal pricks, sorrow comes after and licks.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 335. (1605)

There is no pleasure without sorrow.

JAMES MABBE, tr., Celestina, p. 149. (1631)

No joy without annoy.

JOHN CLARKE, Paraemiologia, p. 134. (1639)

Cited by Ray and Fuller.

Sadness and gladness succeed each other.

JOHN CLARKE, Paraemiologia, p. 326. (1639)

Cited by Ray and Fuller.

As it is in the proverb, After joy comes sorrow.

MABBE, tr., Exemplary Novels, i, 59. (1640)

A joyful Evening may follow a sorrowful Morning.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 230. (1732)

No joy without alloy.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 461.

(1855) See also under COMPENSATION.

Joy and sorrow are next door neighbors.

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 469 (1869)

<sup>8</sup> One is content to miss joy when sorrow is also missed. (Bene perdis gaudium ubi dolor pariter perit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 94. (c. 43 B. C.)

<sup>9</sup> A little mirth (they say) is worth a great deal of sorrow.

BARNABY RICH, Irish Hubbub, p. 4. (1619)

A pennyworth of mirth is worth a pound of sorrow.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 176. (1678)

An ounce of mirth is worth a pound of sorrow.

HENRY CAREY, Chrononhotonthologos, ii, iv. (1734)

One joy scatters a hundred griefs.

H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs, p. 291. (1937)

<sup>10</sup> The rose and thorn, the treasure and dragon, joy and sorrow, all mingle into one.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. vii, Apologue 21. (c. 1258)

Better feel sorrow ere we gladness know,
Than to be happy and then suffer woe.

SADI, Gulistan, viii, 92. (c. 1258)

<sup>11</sup> Joy and sorrow come not of themselves, but only at the call of men. ('Huo fu wu mên, wei jên so chao.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 786. (1875)

Sorrow is born of excessive joy. (Lê chi shêng pei.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 825.

Joys never come in pairs; troubles never come singly. (Fu pu shuang chih, 'huo pu tan hsing.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs, No. 829.

<sup>12</sup> Brief is sorrow, and endless is joy. (Kurz ist der Schmerz, und ewig ist die Freude!)

SCHILLER, Die Jungfrau von Orleans. Act v, sc. 14. (1800)

<sup>1</sup> 'Tis cruel to prolong a pain and to defer a joy.
SIR CHARLES SEDLEY, Love Still Has Something of the Sea. (a. 1701)

<sup>2</sup> It is usually said that sudden joy as soon kills as excessive grief.

THOMAS SHELTON, tr., Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 52. (1620)

Sudden Joy kills sooner than excessive Grief.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4283. (1732)

<sup>3</sup> There is a sweet joy which comes to us through sorrow.

C. H. SPURGEON, Gleanings Among the Sheaves: Sweetness in Sorrow. (c. 1880)

<sup>4</sup> Of thy sorow be nott to sad,
Of thy ioy be not to glad.

UNKNOWN, Proverbs of Wysdom, p. 51. (c. 1450)

<sup>5</sup> God give you joy, as the old said proverb is, and some sorrow among.

UNKNOWN, The London Prodigall. Act iii, sc. 3. (1605) Shakespeare Apocrypha.

God send you joy, for sorrow will come fast enough.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 185. (1639)

<sup>6</sup> A sorrow that's shared is but half a trouble,
But a joy that's shared is a joy made double.

UNKNOWN. An English Proverb.

Grief can take care of itself, but to get the full value from joy you must have somebody to divide it with.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's New Calendar. (1893)

One can endure sorrow alone, but it takes two to be glad.

ELBERT HUBBARD, One Thousand and One Epigrams, p. 36. (1900)

JUDAS

<sup>7</sup> I . . . shall be therefore taken all my lyffe as a Iudas.

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., The Foure Sonnes of Aymon, ix, 209. (c. 1489)

Inwardly very Iudasses.

RICHARD TAVERNER, tr., Erasmus' Adagia, fo. 150. (1539)

Three Judases, each one thrice worse than Judas!

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, iii, 2, 132. (1595)

<sup>8</sup> Iudas he iaped [deceived] with iuwen [Jewish] siluer,

And sithen on an eller honged him after.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. Text B, passus i, l. 67. (1362)

Fast by is the elder-tree on which Iudas hanged himselfe.

SIR JOHN MANDEVILLE, Travels: The Pool of Siloe. (c. 1400)

Judas was hanged on an elder.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, v, 2, 610. (1595)

<sup>9</sup> And forthwith he came to Jesus, and said, Hail, Master; and kissed him. (καὶ εὐθὺς προσελθὼν τῷ Ἰησοῦ εἶπεν Χαῖρε, ραββί· καὶ κατεφίλησεν αὐτόν.)

New Testament: Matthew, xxvi, 49. (c. A. D.

50) The Vulgate is, "Et confestim accedens ad Iesum, dixit: Ave Rabbi. Et osculatus est eum." Hence, "Judas kiss." See under KISS.

To say the truth, so Judas kiss'd his master, And cried "All hail!" when as he meant all harm.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI, v, 7, 33. (1591)

The Judas way, to kiss me, bid me welcome. And cut my throat.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Loyal Subject. Act iv, sc. 5. (1618)

JUDGE

<sup>10</sup> The arbitrator has regard to equity and the judge to law. (ὁ γὰρ διαιτητὴς τὸ ἐπιεικὲς ὁρᾷ, ὁ δὲ δικαστὴς τὸν νόμον.)

ARISTOTLE, Art of Rhetoric. Bk. i, ch. 13, sec. 19. (c. 330 B. C.)

Judges ought to remember that their office is Ius dicere, and not Ius dare; to interpret law, and not to make law, or give law.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Judicature. (1597)

The law proverb, as usually quoted, is, "Iudicis est ius dicere non dare" (It is the duty of the judge to interpret the law, not to make it). There is another, "Iudicandum est legibus non exemplis" (Judgment should be according to the laws, not according to the precedents). An ironical distich, "Slavish fidelity is out of date; | When exposition fails, interpolate," is of unknown authorship.

When he departs from the letter of the law, the judge becomes a law-maker. (Cum receditur a litera, iudex transit in legislatorem.)

FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum: Verba Legis. (1605)

The judge is nothing but the law speaking.

BENJAMIN WHICHCOTE, Moral Aphorisms (1753)

<sup>11</sup> Woe to the generation which judges its judges. SIMEON ASHKENAZI (?), Yalkut. Sec. 1. (c. 1250;

<sup>12</sup> A Judge who accepts a gift will become mad before he dies.

Babylonian Talmud: Kethuboth, fo. 105b (c. 450)

The ass came and kicked away the lamp.

Babylonian Talmud: Shabbath, fo. 116b. (c. 450) A certain judge was presented with a golden lamp by one litigant and with a Libyan ass by the other. The verdict went in favor of the latter.

<sup>13</sup> A judge should always imagine that a sword is pointed at his heart, and that Hell yawns beneath him.

Babylonian Talmud: Sanhedrin, fo. 7a. (c. 450)

Judges are apt to be naïve, simple-minded men.
O. W. HOLMES, II, Speech, New York, 15 Feb., 1913.

1
He hath put off the person of a judge, that puts on the person of a friend. (Exuit personam iudicis, quisquis amici induit.)

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons, ii, 550. (1629) Quoting a proverb which he attributes to Cicero. When he [the judge] put on his robes, he put off his relations to any; and like Melchisedech becomes without pedigree.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: The Good Judge. (1642)

He that puts on a publick Gown, must put off a private Person.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No: 2257. (1732)

2
Go not to law with a judge,
For he will judge to his own advantage.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), viii, 14. (c. 190 B. C.) Oesterley, tr.

Neither side is guiltless if its adversary is the judge. (Nulla manus, belli mutato iudice, pura est.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. vii, l. 263. (c. A. D. 60)

3
He who will have no judge but himself condemns himself.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, 401. (1855)

4
Judges, like Caesar's wife, should be above suspicion.

MR. JUSTICE BOWEN, Judgment, Leeson vs. General Council of Medical Education (1889)

5
He who has the judge for his father goes into court with an easy mind. (Quien padre tiene alcalde, seguro va á juicio.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 43. (1615)
See under FATHER.

6
If a magistrate receives no bribes, his clerks will be thin, but his people will be contented.

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 676. (1872)

If you want to enjoy peace, first square the magistrate.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. xlii. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

7
Saint Jame seith in his epistle: "jugement withouten mercy shal be doon to him, that hath no mercy of another wight."

CHAUCE, Tales of Melibeus, Sec. 77. (c. 1387) Show thyself lenient and forbearing; for though the attributes of God are all equal, to our eyes that of mercy is brighter and loftier than that of justice. (Muestratele piadoso y clemente.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 42. (1615) Be this, ye rural magistrates, your plan, Firm be your justice, but be friends to man.

JOHN LANGHORNE, The Country Justice, l. 133. (1774)

8
The magistrate is a speaking law. but the law is a silent magistrate (Magistratum legem esse loquentem, legem autem mutum magistratum.)

CICERO, De Legibus. Bk. iii, ch. 1, sec. 2. (c. 46 B. C.) It is always the business of a judge in a trial to find out the truth. (Iudicis est semper in causis verum sequi.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. ii, ch. 14, sec. 51. (c. 45 B. C.) The law proverb is, "Iudicis est iudicare secundum allegata et probata" (It is the duty of a judge to judge according to what things are alleged and what things are proved). Another proverb indicates another duty, "Boni iudicis est causa litium dirimere" (It is the duty of a good judge to prevent litigation).

It is a judge's duty to investigate both the circumstances and time of an act. (Iudicis officium est ut res, ita tempora rerum | quaerere.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. i, eleg. i, l. 37. (c. A. D. 9)

9
It is unjust for anyone to be a judge in his own cause. (Iniquum est aliquem rei sui esse iudicem.)

SIR EDWARD COKE, Institutes of the Lawes of England. (1628) The law proverb is usually given, "Nemo debet esse iudex in propria causa" (No one ought to be judge in his own cause).

No man's a faithful judge in his own cause.

MASSINGER, Bashful Lover. Act ii, sc. 7. (1636) We must not Judges be in our own Cause.

SIR SAMUEL Tuke, The Adventures of Five Hours. Act iii, sc. 4. (1663)

It is unreasonable that, if a wrong be done to a man, he should be his own judge thereof, according to the maxim, nemo debet esse iudex in propria causa.

H. BROOM, Legal Maxims, p. 418. (1845)

A man may judge impartially even in his own cause.

LORD MANSFIELD, Judgment, Rex vs. Cowle (1759)

10
Who made thee a prince and a judge over us? (Quis te constituit principem et iudicem super nos?)

Old Testament: Exodus, ii, 14. (c. 550 B. C.)

11
He who distrusts his own cause is most suspicious of the judge.

EDWARD FITZGERALD, Polonius: Precedency. (1852)

12
The magistrate should obey the laws, the people should obey the magistrate.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734. A rendering of the Latin proverb, "Cives magistratibus pareant, magistratus legibus."

13
Of ten reasons which a judge may have for deciding a case, nine will be unknown to men.

HART, 700 Chinese Proverbs. No. 13. (1937)

14
A good and faithful judge prefers what is right to what is expedient. (Bonus atque fides | iudex honestum praetulit utili.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 9, l. 40. (23 B. C.)

A corrupt judge weighs truth badly. (Male verum examinat omnis | corruptus iudex.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 2, l. 8. (35 B. C.)

<sup>1</sup> The jokes of the judge will convulse the court.
F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 122. (1902)

<sup>2</sup> The duty of a judge is to administer justice, but his practice is to delay it. (Le devoir des Juges est de rendre la justice; leur métier de la différer.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Sec. 14. (1688)

<sup>3</sup> There is need of many judges, for a few will always be ruled by the few. (Bisogna che i giudici siano assai, perchè pochi sempre fanno a modo de' pochi.)

MACHIARELLI, Dei Discorsi, i, 7. (c. 1520)

<sup>4</sup> Consider what you think justice requires, and decide accordingly. But never give your reasons; for your judgement will probably be right, but your reasons will certainly be wrong.

WILLIAM MURRAY, Earl of Mansfield, Advice to Judges. See CAMPBELL, Lives of the Chief Justices. Vol. iv, p. 26.

<sup>5</sup> That money is well lost which the culprit gives to the judge. (Bene perdit nummos iudici cum dat nocens.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 85. (c. 43 B. C.)

<sup>6</sup> The judge is condemned when the guilty is acquitted. (Iudex damnatur cum nocens absolvitur.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 296. (c. 43 B. C.) This line was chosen as the motto of The Edinburgh Review, and marked its tendency toward severity in criticism.

The Judge is condemn'd, when the Criminal is absolv'd.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4610. (1732)

As anger does not become a judge, so neither does pity; for one is the mark of a foolish woman, as the other is of a passionate man.

MR. JUSTICE SCROGGS, Judgment, Rex vs. Johnson. (1794) See also under JUSTICE AND MERCY.

<sup>7</sup> A judge who condemns the innocent condemns himself. (Se damnat iudex innocentem qui opprimit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 673. (c. 43 B. C.)

A judge passes judgment on himself as well as on the accused. (Tam de se iudex iudicat quam de reo.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 698.

When the accuser is judge, force, not law, prevails. (Ubi iudicat qui accusat, vis non lex valet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 729.

<sup>8</sup> The judge five cucumbers as a bribe will take,

And grant ten beds of melons for their sake.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. viii, Apologue 103. (c. 1258)

Justice of Peace . . . for half a Dozen of Chickens will Dispense with a whole Dozen of Penal Statutes. . . . These be the basket-Justices.

HAYWARD TOWNSHEND, Historical Collections, p. 268. (1601)

A basket Justice; a Jyll Justice; a good forenoon Justice. He'll do Justice right or wrong.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 74. (1678)

The basket-justices were so called because they allowed themselves to be bought over by presents of game.

ANDREW WYNTER, Curiosities of Civilization, p. 493. (1860)

To Gallician judges go with feet in hand. (A juezes Gallicianos, con les pies en las manos.)

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Curiosities of Literature: The Philosophy of Proverbs. (1791) A Gallician proverb, alluding to a present of poultry, usually held by the legs.

Like the judges of Galicia, who for half-a-dozen chickens will dispense with a whole dozen penal statutes.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 443. (1855)

<sup>9</sup> The upright judge condemns the crime, but does not hate the criminal. (Bonus iudex damnat improbanda, non odit.)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. i, ch. 16, sec. 7. (c. A. D. 54)

<sup>10</sup> And then the justice,
In fair round belly with good capon lined,
With eyes severe and beard of formal cut.
Full of wise saws and modern instances.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, ii, 7, 153. (1600)

If thou be a severe, sour-complexioned man, then I disallow thee to be a competent judge.

WALTON, The Compleat Angler: Preface. (1653)

<sup>11</sup> A man may see how this world goes with no eyes. Look with thine ears: see how yond justice rails upon yond simple thief. Hark, in thine ear: change places; and, handy-dandy which is the justice, which is the thief?

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, iv, 6, 153. (1605)

Thieves for their robbery have authority
When judges steal themselves.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, ii, 2, 176 (1604)

<sup>12</sup> Judges are best at the beginning, and deteriorate toward the end. (Initia magistratum nostrorum meliora, ferme finis inclinat.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. xv, sec. 21. (c. A. D. 116)

<sup>13</sup> You are the judge. (Tu es iudex.)

TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos, l 352. (163 B. C.)

I don't pretend to be a judge.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation Dial. ii. (1738)

<sup>14</sup> There is no happiness, there is no liberty, there is no enjoyment of life, unless a man can say, when he rises in the morning, I shall be subject to the decision of no unwise judge today.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Speech, New York, 10 March, 1831.

JUDGMENT

See also Self-Judgment

<sup>1</sup> Fortune is for all; judgment is theirs who have won it for themselves. (κοινὸν τύχη, γνώμη δὲ τῶν κεκτημένων.)

AESCHYLUS, Fragments. No. 217, Smyth (c. 458 B. C.) STOBÆUS, Anthology, ii, 8, 10.

<sup>2</sup> The judgment of the world is conclusive. (Securus iudicat orbis terrarum.)

SAINT AUGUSTINE, Contra Litteras Parmeniani, iii, 24. (c. A. D. 397)

Judge me by myself. (σκόπει δὲ με ἐξ ἑαυτοῦ.)

BION, Apothegm. (c. 100 B. C.) See DIOGENES

LAERTIUS, Bion. Bk. iv, sec. 47

She judges others by herself.

WALTER BESANT, All Sorts and Conditions of Men. Ch. 45. (1882)

He measures others by his own ell.

E. B. MAWR, Analogous Proverbs, p. 38. (1885)

A proverb common to most European languages. The French say, "Chacun mesure les autres à son aune"; the Germans, "Er misst alle andere nach seiner Elle aus"; the Italians, "Egli misura gli altri con la sua canna."

<sup>3</sup> Judge not at all. (Minime iudice.)

CATO (?), Disticha: Prologus. No. 53. (c. 175 B. C.)

Judge not thy neighbour until thou comest into his place.

RABBI HILLEL, Mishnah: Pirké Aboth, ii, 5 (c. 50 B. C.)

Judge not, that ye be not judged (μὴ κρίνετε, ἵνα μὴ κριθῆτε.)

New Testament: Matthew, vii, 1 (c. A. D. 50)

The Vulgate is, "Nolite iudicare, ut non iudicemini." Also Luke, vi, 37, in slightly different form, "Judge not, and ye shall not be judged."

Ye mortals, hold yourselves straitly back from judging. (E voi, mortali, tenetevi stretti | a giudicar.)

DANTE, Paradiso Canto xx, l. 133. (c. 1300)

The Italian proverbial form is, "Chi altri giudica, sè condanna" (He who judges others condemns himself).

Forbear to judge, for we are sinners all.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, iii, 3, 31. (1590)

<sup>4</sup> Men's judgments sway on that side fortune leans.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, The Widdowes Teares. Act ii, sc. 2. (1612)

<sup>5</sup> Ye shall not respect persons in judgment; but ye shall hear the small as well as the great. (Nulla erit distantia personarum, ita parvum audietis ut magnum.)

Old Testament: Deuteronomy, i, 17. (c. 650 B. C.)

A judge were better a briber than a respecter of persons; for a corrupt offendeth not so highly as a facile. (Qui cognoscit in iudicio famiem. non bene facit.)

FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum: Civil Knowledge. Sec. 16. (1605)

<sup>6</sup> Sound judgment, with discernment, is the best of seers. (γνώμη δ' ἀρίστη μάντις ἢ τ' εὐβουλα.)

EURIPIDES, Helen, l. 757. (c. 412 B. C.)

<sup>7</sup> Four things do corrupt al iudgmentes, Fat giftes, hatred, fauour, and feare. (Quatro cose corompono tutte le sentenza, Doni graffi, odio, fauore, & paura.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 25. (1578)

<sup>8</sup> I can promise to be sincere, but not to be impartial. (Aufrichtig zu sein, kann ich versprechen, unparteiisch zu sein aber nicht.)

GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa. (1819)

Our senses do not deceive us, our judgment does. (Die Sinne trügen nicht, aber das Urteil trügt.)

GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa

<sup>9</sup> Verily, he hazardeth too much, who reposeth himselfe in his own judgement.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation Bk. i. p. 42. (1574) Pettie, tr.

He hath a good judgment that relieth not wholly on his own.

SAMUEL PALMER, Moral Essays on Proverbs, p. 330. (1710) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1882

Who judges best of a Man, his Enemies or himself?

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1751

<sup>10</sup> Hee that hath no judgement, is no better than a beast.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i. p. 47. (1574) Pettie, tr.

<sup>11</sup> The kyng . . . sat in iudgment upon the offenders.

EDWARD HALL, Chronicle: Henry VI, p. 161. (1548)

We shall all of us have enough to do, without sitting in judgment upon other folks.

WALTER SCOTT, Redgaunlet. Letter v. (1824)

<sup>12</sup> The seat of knowledge is in the head; of wisdom, in the heart. We are sure to judge wrong if we do not feel right.

HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 380. (c. 1821)

<sup>13</sup> In my judgment. (Me iudice.)

HORACE, De Arte Poetica, l. 244. (c. 20 B. C.) Cicero has, "Tuo tibi iudicio est utendum" (You must use your own judgment).

<sup>14</sup> A fine judgment in discerning art. (Iudicium subtile videndis artibus.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 1, l. 242. (20 B. C.)

Arbiter of the drinking. (Arbiter bibendi.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 7, l. 25. (23 B. C.)

Master of the feast.

Arbiter of beauty. (Arbiter formae.)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. xvi, l. 69. (c. 10 B. C.)

He was appointed arbiter in this mirthful contest. (Arbiter hic sumptus de lite iocosa.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. iii, l. 332. (A. D. 7)

A judge of matters of taste. (Elegantiae arbiter.)
TACITUS, Annals. Bk. xvi, sec. 18. (c. A. D. 116)
Usually quoted, "Arbiter elegantiarum."

1 He looked for judgment, but behold oppression; for righteousness, but behold a cry. (Expectavi ut faceret iudicium, et ecce iniquitas: et iustitiam, et ecce clamor.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, v, 7. (c. 725 B. C.)

2 Every one finds fault with his memory, but none with his judgement. (Tout le monde se plaint de sa mémoire, et personne ne se plaint de son jugement.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 89. (1665)
Many complain of their memory, few of their judgment.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1745. An admirable example of Franklin's faculty for epigrammatic statement.

3 We sometimes see a fool possessed of wit, but never of judgment. (On est quelquefois un sot avec de l'esprit; mais on ne l'est jamais avec du jugement.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 456. (1665)

4 Out of thine own mouth will I judge thee. (ἐκ τοῦ στόματός σου κρινω σε.)

New Testament: Luke, xix, 22. (c. A. D. 65)
The Vulgate is, "De ore tuo te iudico."

5 That is the ryghtwys Iugement of god.

MALORY, Morte Darthur. Bk. iv, ch. 23. (1470)
Every event is a judgment of God. (Aller Ausgang ist ein Gottesurtheil.)

SCHILLER, Wallenstein's Tod. Act i, sc. 7. l. 32. (1799)

He hears the judgment of the King of kings.

TENNYSON, Geraint and Enid, l. 799. (1870)

6 All wholesale judgments are loose and imperfect. (Touts jugements en gros sont lasches et imparfaits.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 8. (1595)

He has need of tough ears to hear himself frankly judged. (Il faict besoing d'oreilles bien fortes, pour s'ouïr franchement juger.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 13.

7 The judgment of man is fallible. (Hominum sententia fallax.)

OVID, Fasti. Bk. v, l. 191. (c. A. D. 8) Erasmus cites a similar proverb, "Nihil morosius hominum iudiciis" (Nothing is more captious than men's judgments).

No human judgment is so vigilant that it does not nod at times. (Il n'est jugement humain, si tendu qui ne sommeille par fois.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 12. (1580)

8 When we are too young our judgment is weak; when we are too old, ditto. (Si on est trop jeune, on ne juge pas bien. Si on est trop vieux, du même.)

PASCAL, Pensées. Pt. i, art. vi, No. 2. (c. 1660)

9 Knowledge is the Treasure, but Judgment is the Treasurer of a Wise Man.

WILLIAM PENN, Some Fruits of Solitude. No. 162. (1693)

10 Judge every man favourably.

JOSHUA BEN PERACHIAH. Mishnah: Pirke Aboth, i, 6. (c. 450) Oesterley, tr.

11 Put on the reversed toga. (Toga perversa.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 58. (c. A. D. 60) The magistrate wore his toga reversed when he pronounced sentence of death. The "black cap" of English law.

12 What you condemn is often found to be more useful than what you praise. (Laudatis utiliora, quae contempseris, saepe inveniri.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. i, fable 12. (c. 25 B. C.)

This is the fable of the stag who admired his spreading antlers and despised his thin legs, but his legs would have carried him safely away from the hounds if his antlers had not caught in the trees as he ran through a wood

Full often what you now despise

Proves better than the things you prize.

CHRISTOPHER SMART, Phaedrus' Fables, i, 12. (1765)

13 Mature means neither "too soon" nor "too late," but something between the two. (Mature est, quod neque citius est neque serius, sed medium quiddam.)

PUBLILIUS NIGIDIUS, Fragments. Frag. 48, Swoboda. (c. 60 B. C.) Quoted by AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticae, Bk. x, ch. 11.

The chief end, the skeptics say, is suspension of judgment, which brings tranquillity with it like its shadow. (τέλος δὲ οἱ σκεπτικοὶ φασὶ τὴν ἐποχὴν, ἢ σκιᾶς τρόπον ἐπακολουθεῖ ἡ ἀταραξία.)

DIODEGENES LAERTIUS, Lives: Pyrrho. Bk. ix, sec 107. (c. A. D. 230)

Take each man's censure, but reserve thy judgment.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, i, 3, 69. (1600)

14 He speeds to repentance who judges hastily. (Ad paenitendum properat, cito qui iudicat.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 32. (c. 43 B. C.)

In giving judgment haste is criminal. (In iudicando criminosa est celeritas.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 293.

To hasten judgment is to look for guilt. (Properare in iudicando est crimen quaerere.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 518.

Who so yeveth hasty jiggymint

Must be the fyrst that shall repent.

UNKNOWN, Partonope of Blois, l. 9977. (c. 1440)

A good Judge conceives quickly, judges slowly.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 601. (1640)

Who suddenly will judge, hastens himself to repentance.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 105. (1666)

He that passeth a Judgment as he runs, overtaketh repentance.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2244. (1732)

<sup>1</sup> Good judgment never humors one who is going wrong. (Bonus animus numquam erranti obsequium commodat.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 70. (c. 43 B. C.)
A clear case brings the right verdict with it. (Manifesta causa secum habet sententiam.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 396.

<sup>2</sup> We should hesitate to pronounce judgment, lest we fall into the common error of condemning what we do not understand. (Damnent quae non intelligunt.)

QUINTILIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae. Bk. x, ch. 1, sec. 26. (C. A. D. 80)

No man can justly condemn another, because no man truly knows another.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. ii, sec. 4. (1643)

We'll pass no judgment upon that.

DICKENS, Our Mutual Friend. Bk. i, ch. 6. (1865)

<sup>3</sup> Weigh, not merely count, men's judgments. (Aestimes iudicia, non numeros.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xxix, sec. 12. (C. A. D. 64)

<sup>4</sup> Make the judicious grieve.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 2, 31. (1600)

<sup>5</sup> Blest are those Whose blood and judgement are so well commingled

That they are not a pipe for fortune's finger
To sound what stop she please.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 2, 73. (1600)

<sup>6</sup> This was a judgement on me.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII, ii, 4, 194. (1612)

Some people said it was a judgment on him.

ANN RADCLIFFE, The Italian. Ch. 22. (1797)

<sup>7</sup> As when an authentic watch is shown,
Each man winds up and rectifies his own.
So in our very judgments.

SIR JOHN SUCKLING, Aglaura: Epilogue. (1638)

'Tis with our judgments as our watches, none
Go just alike, yet each believes his own.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. i, l. 9. (1709)

<sup>8</sup> Men see and judge the affairs of other men better than their own. (Aliena ut melius videant et dijudicent, | quam sua.)

TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos, l. 504. (163 B. C.)

You must stand far off to judge St. Peter's

WENDELL PHILLIPS, Speech, 17 Feb., 1861.

<sup>9</sup> The judgment of Paris. (Iudicium Paridis.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. i, l. 27. (19 B. C.) See under PARIS.

<sup>10</sup> From one crime, you can judge all. (Crimine ab uno disce omnes.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. (19 B. C.) As quoted by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, ii, 78.

From one you can judge all. (Ex uno omnia spectat.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. ii, No. 78. (1523) From one act, the real character of a man may be judged.

<sup>11</sup> Crime has its heroes, error has its martyrs:
Of true zeal and false, what vain judges we are!

(Le crime a ses héros; l'erreur a ses martyrs:
Du vrai zèle et du faux vains juges que nous sommes!)

VOLTAIRE, La Henriade. Chant v, l. 200. (1723)

<sup>12</sup> One cool judgment is worth a thousand hasty councils.

WOODROW WILSON, Speech, Pittsburgh, 29 Jan., 1916.

II—Judgment: Hear Both Sides

<sup>13</sup> Two parties are here present; he hears but half who hears one party only. (δυσὶν παρόντων ἡμισυς λόγου πάρα.)

AESCHYLUS, Eumenides, l. 428. (458 B. C.)

He shal nat rightfully his yre wreke
Or he have herd the tother party speke.

CHAUCER, The Legend of Good Women: Prologue, l. 324. (c. 1385)

There ben many that complayne on other and ben in the defeaute them selfe. Audi alteram partem, here that other partye.

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., Reynart the Foxe, xxv. 57. (1481)

A man should here all partis, er he iudge any.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 13. (1546)

<sup>14</sup> Decide no suit until you have heard both sides. (μηδὲ δίκην δικάσῃς πρὶν ἂν ἀμφοῖν μῦθον ἀκούῃς.)

CHIRON, Precepts of Chiron. No. 2. The Precepts of Chiron is a collection of teachings said, in Greek mythology, to have been given by the Centaur Chiron to his pupil Achilles. The collector is supposed to have been Hesiod, c. 800 B. C. However, it is usually given as a gnome or maxim of Phocylides (c. 600 B. C.). Cicero quotes it, Ad Atticum, vii, 18, and says that it has been wrongly ascribed to Hesiod.

Wise was the counsel of him who taught that men
Should hear the arguments of the other side.

(σαφὸν τι χρῆμα τοῦ διδάξαντος βροτοῦς λόγους ἀκούειν τῶν ἐναντίων πάρα.)

EURIPIDES, Andromache, l. 957. (c. 430 B. C.)

Who can give judgment, who grasp arguments,
Ere from both sides he clearly learn their pleas?

(τίς ἂν δίκην κρίνειεν ἢ γνολὴ λόγον, πρὶν ἂν παρ' ἀμφοῖν μῦθον ἐκμάθῃ σαφῶς;)

EURIPIDES, Heracleidai, l. 179. (c. 430 B. C.)
Way, tr.

Don't make up your mind until you have heard
both sides. (πρὶν ἂν ἀμφοῖν μῦθον ἀκούῃς, | οὐκ ἂν δικάσῃς.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Wasps, l. 725. (422 B. C.)

Referred to as the saying of an intelligent man. Repeated in l. 919.

Have you already heard what is to be said on both sides? (Iam utrimque quid diceretur audisti?)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. ii, ch. 29, sec. 4. (c. A. D. 55)
Hear the other side. (Audi alteram partem.)

ST. AUGUSTINE, De Duabus Animabus. Ch. 14, sec. 22. (c. A. D. 390)

'Tis against common justice to pass sentence without hearing both sides.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, Fables of Aesop, xi, 14. (1692)

For God's sake, let us freely hear both sides.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to M. Dufief, 19 April, 1814.

I should wish to hear both sides.

CHARLES READE, Perilous Secret. Ch. 6. (1883)

1
Being a magistrate, hear both the just and the unjust. (Magistratum gerens, audi et iuste et iniuste.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. ii, cent. vii, No. 89. (1508)

2
Judge nothing till the end be seene.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, p. 105. (1591)

3
If you judge, investigate. (Si iudicas cognosce.)

SENECA, Medea, l. 194. (c. A. D. 60)

He who has judged aught, with the other side unheard, may have judged righteously, but was himself unrighteous. (Qui statuit aliquid parte inaudita altera, | aequum licet statuerit, haud aequus fuit.)

SENECA, Medea, l. 199.

4
He who hears one side only, hears nothing.

TOBIAS SMOLLETT, tr., Gil Blas, iv, 105. (1750)

The French say, "Qui n'entend qu'une cloche, n'entend qu'un son" (He who hears only one bell hears only one sound). See also TALE: ONE TALE IS AS GOOD AS ANOTHER.

5
Thou shalt not juge ne deme toforn thou knowest.

THOMAS USK, The Testament of Love. (c. 1387)

6
To take snap judgments on the American people.

Congressional Globe, app., 14 June, 1841, p. 42/3.

Snap, rapid, quick, off-hand. "A snap judgment."

R. M. CHIPMAN, Notes on Bartlett's Americanisms, p. 422. (c. 1870)

[His habit was] not to deliver snap judgments about anything.

C. T. BRADY, The Bishop, p. 173. (1903)

JUDGMENT DAY, see under DAY.

JUICE

7
It's the same as snails living on their own juices when there's no dew falling. (Quasi cocleae . . . suo sibi suco vivont.)

PLAUTUS, Captivi, l. 80. (c. 200 B. C.)

[He] could not better discover Hypocrites, than by suffering them (like Oysters) to stew in their own water.

HENRY CAREY, tr., Advertisements from Parnassus, ii, liii. (1656)

Let them cool in the same place they grew hot in.

EARL OF MAR, Letter to Sir D. Nairne, 1706.

Quoted as a proverb.

Aweel, lass, . . . thou must pickle in thine own poke-nook.

SCOTT, Heart of Midlothian. Ch. 28. (1818)

They may stew in their own juice.

S. J. WEYMAN, Shrewsbury. Ch. 24. (1898)

Let the Allies stew in their own juice.

CLARE BOOTHE, Europe in the Spring, p. 122. (1940)

He could now proceed to stew in his own juice.

LEE THAYER, Murder Is Out, p. 47. (1942)

See also under GREASE.

JUMP

8
When a wretched scribbler was, in vulgar phraseology, to be "jumped upon."

MISS BRADDON, Dead Sea Fruit. Ch. 5. (1868)

9
Being, as they phrased it, the "jumping off place," it is necessarily the resort of desperate . . . creatures.

TIMOTHY FLINT, Recollections of the Last Ten Years, p. 366. (1836)

Olean point was denominated the "jumping-off place."

J. H. SHERBURNE, Memoirs. Ch. 11. (1828)

I think we have come to the financial jumping-off place.

CHARLES EGBERT CRADDOCK (MARY N. MURFREE), Where the Battle Was Fought, p. 54. (1884)

He had come to a jumping-off place in his life.

BOOTH TARKINGTON, The Gentleman from Indiana. Ch. 15. (1899)

I had often heard of the Jumping Off Place, but I never expected to actually see it.

FRANCES LITTLE (FANNIE C. MACAULAY), The Lady of the Decoration, p. 116. (1906)

10
All this jumped wel together.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Letter-Book, p. 27. (1573)

Our humors jump together completely.

WASHINGTON IRVING, Life and Letters, iv, 125. (1853)

11
Iumpe by Iumpe, subsultim.

RICHARD HULOET, Abcedarium: Iumpe. (1552)

Began with speed, for to plucke up my feete,

Because the place did put me to my jumps.

RICHARD ROBINSON, A Golden Mirrour. (1589)

Gran isn't the only one that ought to be put over the jumps.

LEE THAYER, Hanging's Too Good, p. 84. (1943)

They took me over the jumps from the cradle—well, till I was almost ready for the grave.

SARA MASON, Murder Rents a Room, p. 196. (1943)

12
I thought he had been drinking, and in fact was on the verge of "the jumps."

JAMES PAYN, High Spirits, ii, 204. (1879) Delirium tremens.

It gave him the jumps to that extent that he couldn't eat a thing.

W. E. NORRIS, Matrimony, i, 1, 17. (1881)

It gives me the most fearful jumps to think of it.
MAXWELL GRAY, The Silence of Dean Maitland.
Bk. i, ch. 10. (1886)

1 To leap like a cock at a blackberry.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 209. (1670)
Butter that Siserah would have jumped at.

THOMAS GRAY, Letter to Wharton, 3 Oct., 1769.
Think before you reject the offer. . . . I should have jumped at it like a cock at a gooseberry.

WALTER SCOTT, Letter to Southey, 4 Sept., 1813.
He just jumped at the ready penny, like a cock at a grosart [gooseberry].

SCOTT, St. Ronan's Well. Ch. 2. (1824)
Ancient maidens who at forty loup like a cock at a grousart . . . at the homo they turned up their noses at twenty.

MICHAEL SCOTT, The Cruise of the Midge. Ch.
8. (1836)

The guests . . . all jumped at the invitation.

ALBERT R. SMITH, The Adventures of Mr. Ledbury. Ch. 7. (1844)

She jumped at the bargain.

ROBERT BRIDGES, Feast of Bacchus, iii, 988. (1894)

2 We will be back in a squirrel's jump.

MAYNE REID, The Scalp Hunters. Ch. 9. (1851)

JUNE

3 Knee-deep in June.

ALFRED AUSTIN, A Wild Rose. (c. 1896)

Tell you what I like the best—

'Long about knee-deep in June.

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY, Knee-Deep in June.
(1912)

4 And what is so rare as a day in June?

J. R. LOWELL, The Vision of Sir Launfal: Pt.
i, Prelude. (1848) For weather proverbs about June, see INWARDS, Weather Lore.

JURY

5 Wise men plead causes, but fools decide them.
(λέγουσι μὲν οἱ σοφοί, κρίνουσι δὲ οἱ ἀμαθεῖς.)

ANACHARSIS, Apothegm. (c. 550 B. C.) See PLU-TARCH, Lives: Solon. Sec. 5.

The man who laugh'd but once, to see an ass
Mumbl'ing to make the cross-grain'd thistles pass,
Might laugh again, to see a jury chaw
The prickles of an unpalatable law.

JOHN DRYDEN, The Medal, l. 145. (1682)

The jury system puts a ban upon intelligence and honesty, and a premium upon ignorance, stupidity and perjury.

MARK TWAIN, Roughing It. Ch. 48. (1872)

6 Trial by jury itself, instead of being a security to persons who are accused, will be a delusion, a mockery, and a snare.

LORD THOMAS DENMAN, Judgment, O'Connell
vs. The Queen, 4 Sept., 1844.

Jurors are not to judge de iure but de facto, not of matter of Lawes, or right itself, but of matter of fact only.

THOMAS FITZHERBERT, Apology of His Innocence, p. 12. (1602) An amplification of the law maxim, "Ad quaestionem iuris respondeant iudices, ad quaestionem facti respondeant iuratores" (Let the judges answer to the question of law, the jurors to the question of fact). More briefly, "Iuratores sunt iudices facti" (Jurors are the judges of fact).

7 A London jury; hang half and save half. . . .
As if Londoners, frequently impanelled on juries . . . to make quick riddance, . . .
acquit half and condemn half.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies: London, ii, 340.
(1662)

A Kentish jury; hang half and save half.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 231. (1732)
The Westmoreland jury, who found a man guilty of manslaughter who was tried for stealing a grindstone.

MICHAEL DENHAM, ed., Denham Tracts, i, 223.
(1846)

A jury too frequently has at least one member more ready to hang the panel than to hang the traitor.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Letter to Erastus Corning,
12 June, 1863.

8 They have been grand-jurymen since before
Noah was a sailor.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, iii, 2, 16. (1599)

9 Submitting my self to be tried by my Country, and allowing any Jury of 12 good Men and true, to be that Country.

RICHARD STEELE, The Tatler. No. 50. (1709)
In my mind, he was guilty of no error, . . . who once said that all we see about us, kings, lords, and Commons, the whole machinery of the State,
. . . end in simply bringing twelve good men into a box.

LORD BROUGHAM, Present State of the Law 7
Feb., 1828.

JUST

10 Heaven gives long life to the just and the intelligent.

CONFUCIUS, The Book of History. Bk. v. (c.
500 B. C.)

There shall no evil happen to the just. (Non contristabit iustum quidquid ei acciderit.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xii, 21. (c. 350 B. C.)

11 That which is altogether just shalt thou follow. (Iuste quod iustum est persequeris.)

Old Testament: Deuteronomy, xvi, 20. (c. 650
B. C.)

Follow what is just in a just way. (δικαίως τὸ δίκαιον διώκειν.)

PHILO, Quod Deterius Potiori Insidiari Soleat.
Sec. 18. (c. A. D. 40) Philo is quoting Deuteronomy.

Be just to all, but trust not all.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 325. (1855)

12 Only in a righteous cause is there hope of safety. (ἐν τῇ δικαίᾳ δ' ἐλπιδες σωτηρίας.)

EURIPIDES, Helen, l. 1031. (c. 412 B. C.)

He can be bold who hath his quarrel just. (ἐὼν τῷ δίκαιῳ γὰρ μέγ' ἔξιστιν ὀρνεῖν.)

SOPHOCLES, Ajax, l. 1125. (c. 409 B. C.) Storr, tr. Every place is safe to him who lives in justice.

EPICETUS, Fragments. Frag. 102. (c. A. D. 100) I am arm'd with more than compleat steel,
The justice of my quarrel.

CHRISTOPHER MARLOWE (?), Lust's Dominion.

Act iv, sc. 3. (c. 1590) Although the original 1657 edition of the play bears on its title-page the name "Christofer Marloe," Marlowe's authorship has been questioned. In 1677, Mrs. Aphra Behn published Abade-lazer, or The Moor's Revenge, an adaptation of Lust's Dominion, and retained these two lines exactly as given. For this reason they are often attributed to her.

Thrice is he arm'd that hath his quarrel just,
And he but naked, though lock'd up in steel,
Whose conscience with injustice is corrupted.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, iii, 2, 233. (1590) "Thrice is he arm'd that hath his quarrel just"—
And four times he who gets his fist in fust.

ARTEMUS WARD (CHARLES FARRAR BROWNE),
Shakespeare Up-to-Date. (1862)

The weakest Arme is strong enough, that strikes
With the sword of Justice.

JOHN WEBSTER, The Dutchesse of Malfy. Act v, sc. 2, l. 379. (1614)

A wicked hero will turn his back to an innocent coward.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734.

Without justice, courage is weak.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734

Justice with courage is a thousand men.

THOMAS MORELL, Judas Maccabaeus. (1746) She believes that virtue needs no weapon and grows its own armor like a turtle.

REX STOUT, Bad for Business. Ch. 6. (1940)

1
A just man is not one who does no ill,
But he, who with the power, has not the will.

PHILEMON, Sententiae. (c. 275 B. C.)

2
The noble grace of their kinsmen on earth is not buried in the dust. (κατακρύπτει δ' οὐ κόνις | συγγόνων κεδρὸν χάριν.)

PINDAR, Olympian Odes. Ode viii, l. 103. (460 B. C.)

The memory of the just is blessed. (Memoria iusti cum laudibus.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, x, 7. (c. 350 B. C.)

The righteous shall be in everlasting remembrance. (In memoria aeterna erit iustus.)

Old Testament: Psalms, cxii, 6. (c. 250 B. C.)

The bad man's death is horror: but the just Keeps something of his glory in the dust.

WILLIAM HABINGTON, Elegie. (c. 1640)

Only the actions of the just Smell sweet and blossom in their dust.

JAMES SHIRLEY, The Contention of Ajax and Ulysses for the Arms of Achilles. Sec. iii, l. 23. (1659)

The sweet remembrance of the just Shall flourish when he sleeps in dust.

NAHUM TATE AND NICHOLAS BRADY, New Version of the Psalms, cxii, 6. (1696)

And Heav'n, that ev'ry virtue bears in mind,
Ev'n to the ashes of the just is kind.

POPE, tr., Iliad. Bk. xxiv, l. 523. (1715)

The memory of the just survives in Heaven.

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. vii, l. 388. (1814)

The bright actions of the just Survive unburied in the kindred dust.

C. A. WHEELWRIGHT, tr., PINDAR: Olympian Odes, viii, 103. (1837)

3
The just are gentle, as Homer said. (οὐκοῦν οὐ γὰρ δίκαιοι ἡμεροί, ὥς ἔφη Ὅμηρος.)

PLATO, Gorgias. Sec. 516C. (c. 385 B. C.) The present text of Homer contains no such saying. The nearest is that in the Odyssey, vi, 120, and ix, 175: "Wanton and wild are they, not just." Perhaps Plato's memory slipped.

4
That most kingly and godlike surname, The Just. (τὴν βασιλικωτάτην καὶ θειοτάτην προσηγορίαν τὸν Δίκαιον.)

PLUTARCH, Lives: Aristides. Ch. 6, sec. 1 (c. A. D. 110) Referring to Aristides.

I don't know the fellow, but I am tired of hearing him everywhere called The Just.

The reply of a citizen to Aristides, when the latter asked why he was voting against him. See PLUTARCH, Lives: Aristides, 7, 6.

5
The path of the just is as the shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day. (Iustorum autem semita, quasi lux splendens, procedit et crescit usque ad perfectam diem.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, iv, 18. (c. 250 B. C.)

The righteous shall flourish like the palm tree. (Iustus ut palma florebit.)

Old Testament: Psalms, xcii, 12. (c. 250 B. C.)

There is a similar Latin proverb, "Justi ut sidera fulgent" (The just shall shine as stars)

II—Just and Unjust

6
Iniquum petas, ut Aequum feras [Seek what is unjust that you may obtain what is just], is a good Rule. where a Man hath strength of Favour.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Sutours. (1597)

7
To every act and to every word one of two epithets is applicable: it is either just or unjust. (καίτοι πᾶσιν εἰσι πράγμασι καὶ λόγοις δύο προσθήκαι, ἡ τοῦ δικαίου καὶ ἀδίκου.)

DEMOSTHENES, Against Aristocrates. Sec. 75 (352 B. C.)

8
The just man enjoys the greatest peace of mind, while the unjust is full of the utmost disquietude. (ὁ δίκαιος ἀταρακτότατος, ὁ δ' ἄδικος πλείστης ταραχῆς γέμων.)

EPICURUS, Souvan Maxims. No. 17. (c. 300 B. C.)

9
He maketh his sun to rise on the evil and on the good, and sendeth rain on the just and on the unjust. (ὅτι τὸν ἥλιον αὐτοῦ ἀνατέλλει ἐπὶ πονηροῦς καὶ ἀγαθοῦς καὶ βρέχει ἐπὶ δικαίους καὶ ἀδίκους.)

New Testament: Matthew, v, 45. (c. A. D. 50)

The Vulgate is, "Qui solem suum oriri facit super bonos, et malos: et pluit super iustos et iniustos."

More important is a day of rain than the Day of Resurrection, for rain is for both the righteous and the wicked.

Babylonian Talmud: Taanith, fo. 7a. (c. 450)

The modern proverbial form is, "When it rains, it rains on all alike."

When God dawns, he dawns for all. (Quando Dios amanece, para todos amanece.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 49. (1615)

The height of injustice is to seem just without being so. (ἐσχάτη γὰρ ἀδικία δοκεῖν δίκαιον εἶναι μὴ ὄντα.)

PLATO, Republic. Bk. ii, sec. 4. (c. 411 B. C.)

Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 50F. Babbitt (Loeb) renders it, "It is the height of dishonesty to seem to be honest."

To entreat what is unjust from the just is wrong; but to seek what is just from the unjust is folly, for unfair folk of that sort neither know nor keep justice. (Iniusta ab iustis impetrari non decet, | iusta autem ab iniustis petere, insipientia est; quippe illi iniqui ius ignorant neque tenent.)

PLAUTUS, Amphitruo: Prologue, l. 35. (c. 200 B. C.)

JUSTICE

I—Justice: Definitions

Justice is a great gift of God.

AMEN-EM-APT, Teaching How to Live. Col. xxi, l. 5. (c. 700 B. C.) Griffith, tr.

In justice is all virtue found in sum. (ἐν δὲ δικαιοσύνῃ συλλήβδην πᾶσ' ἀρετῇ 'νι.)

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. Bk. v, ch. i, sec. 15. (c. 335 B. C.) Quoted as a proverb.

Justice is the first of the virtues. (πανταχοῦ τῇ δικαιοσύνῃ ἀπέβαινε πρωτεύειν τῶν ἀρετῶν.)

AGESILAUS II, Apothegm. (c. 383 B. C.) See

PLUTARCH, Lives: Agesilaus, xxiii, 5.

Justice in which is the crowning glory of the virtues. (Iustitia, in qua virtutis est splendor maximus.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 7, sec. 20. (c. 45 B. C.)

Justice compriseth in it all virtue. (Iustitia in se virtutem complectitur omnem.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. ii, cent. iii, No. 73.

(1508) Taverner, tr., fo. 35. (1550) There is another form, "Iustitia virtutum regina" (Justice is the queen of virtues).

Justice is the virtue that innocence rejoiceth in.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Religio. (1636)

Democrats say that justice is whatever seems good to the larger number. (φασὶ οἱ δημοτικοὶ τοῦτο δίκαιον εἶ τι ἂν δόξῃ τοῖς πλείοσιν.)

ARISTOTLE, Politics. Bk. vi, ch. 1, sec. 11. (c. 330 B. C.)

Justice is compliance with the written laws. (Iustitia est obtemperatio scriptis legibus.)

CICERO, De Legibus. Bk. i, ch. 15, sec. 42. (c. 46 B. C.) This is cited by Cicero only for the purpose of refutation.

Justice is what is established. (La justice est ce que est établi.)

BLAISE PASCAL, Pensées. Pt. i, ch. 9, No. 6. (c. 1660)

Justice is the end of government.

DANIEL DEFOE, The True-born Englishman. Pt. ii, l. 368. (1700)

Justice is the sum of all moral duty.

WILLIAM GODWIN, An Enquiry Concerning Political Justice. (1793)

Justice is truth in action. (La justice est la vérité en action.)

JOSEPH JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 203. (1810)

Quoted by DISRAELI, Speech, House of Commons, 11 Feb., 1851.

Justice is the only friend that follows men after death.

MANU, Institutes of Manu, viii, 17. (c. 700 B. C.)

Justice is king of all things. (νόμος δὲ πάντων βασιλεὺς ἐστί.)

PINDAR, Fragment. (c. 480 B. C.) As quoted by PLUTARCH, Lives: Demetrius, 42, 5.

Justice is to give every man his due. (τὰ ὀφειδόμενα ἑκάστῳ ἀποδιδόναι δίκαιόν ἐστι.)

SIMONIDES. (c. 475 B. C.) As quoted approvingly by PLATO, Republic, i, 331E.

It is the function of justice to assign to each what he deserves. (ἀπονεμητική τῶν κατ' ἄξιαν ἐστὶν ἡ δικαιοσύνη καὶ τέτακται.)

PHILO, Legum Allegoria. Sec. 87. (c. A. D. 40) The Stoic definition of Justice. (S.V.F., iii, 262)

Justice is the firm and continuous desire to render to everyone that which is his due. (Iustitia est constans et perpetua voluntas ius suum cuique tribuendi.)

JUSTINIAN, Corpus Iuris: Pt. i., Institutiones. Bk. i, sec. 1. (c. 560)

Justice is the other man's good and your own loss. (ἀλλότριον μὲν ἀγαθόν, οἰκέλα δὲ ζημία.)

PLATO, Republic. Bk. iii, sec. 392B. (c. 375 B. C.)

II—Justice: Apothegms

The anvil of Justice is planted firm. (Δίκας δ' ἐπειδεται πυθμῇ.)

AESCHYLUS, Libation-Bearers, l. 646. (458 B. C.)

Justice protects her champions. (δίκη γὰρ ἐνυμμάων ὑπερστατεί.)

AESCHYLUS, Suppliant Maidens, l. 343. (c. 485 B. C.)

Where might and justice are yoke-fellows—what pair is stronger than this? (ὅπου γὰρ ισχύς συζυγοῦσι καὶ δίκη, | πόλα ξυνωρίς τῆσδε καρπερωτέρα;)

AESCHYLUS, Fragments, Frag. 381, Nauck. (c. 475 B. C.) MIGHT AND RIGHT, see under MIGHT.

<sup>1</sup>
I am a man of justice, like the scales impartial.

ANTER, Philosophy. No. 17. From his stele in British Museum, c. 2200 B. C. Budge, tr. There were the scales of judgment set for them both. (κείθι γὰρ ἀμφοτέροισι δίκης κατέκειτο τάλαντα.)

UNKNOWN, Homeric Hymns: To Hermes, l. 324. (c. 600 B. C.)

We weigh them in the same balance. (Pensantur eadem trutina.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, No. i, l. 29. (c. 15 B. C.) See also JUVENAL, vi, 437; PERSIUS, i, 6. "To weigh in the same balance" (Eadem pensari trutina) is quoted by Erasmus as a proverb. Adagia, i, v, 15.

You know exactly how to weigh justice in the twin scales of the wavering balance. (Scis etenim iustum gemina suspendere lance | ancipitis librae.)

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. iv, l. 10. (a. A. D. 58)

Do not step over the beam of a balance. (μὴ σὺ γὰρ ὑπερβαίνειν.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: Education of Children, 12E. (c. A. D. 95) Plutarch is quoting a proverb attributed to Pythagoras, meaning to pay heed to justice and not transgress it. Also in Latin, "Iugum ne transilas." Another Latin proverb is, "Libra iusta iustitiam servat" (A just balance preserves justice).

Not to goe aboute the ballaunce, that is to reuerence Iustice.

JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 148. (1579) Quoted as a saying of Pythagoras.

You are right, justice, and you weigh this well: Therefore still bear the balance and the sword.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, v, 2, 102. (1598)

<sup>2</sup>
Let justice be done though the world perish. (Fiat ius et pereat mundus.)

ST. AUGUSTINE (?). (c. 390) The attribution is by Jeremy Taylor, but the saying has not been found in St. Augustine's works.

Let justice be done though the world go to ruin. (Fiat iustitia et ruat mundus.)

UNKNOWN, The Egerton Papers, p. 52. (c. 1552) See AIKEN, Court and Times of James I, ii, 500. Said to be the motto of Ferdinand I, Emperor of Germany. See MANLIUS, Loci Communes, ii.

Let justice be done though the heavens fall. (Fiat iusticia et ruant coeli.)

WILLIAM WATSON, A Decacordon of Ten Quodlibetical Questions Concerning Religion and State. (1602) The whole quotation is, "You go against the general maxim in the laws, which is, 'Fiat iusticia et ruant coeli.'" This is the first appearance in English literature, so far as discovered, of the maxim in the exact form most generally used. It will be noted that it is referred to as already well known. It was used by many writers after 1600, but was given its widest celebrity in 1768 when it was quoted by Lord Mansfield in Rex vs. Wilkes. Lord Mansfield used the form, "Iustitia fiat, ruat coelum" (Let justice be done though the sky falls). MANNINGHAM, in his Diary, 11 April, 1603, uses still another form, "Fiat iustitia et coelum ruat." The context of Lord Mansfield's use of the phrase is, "The constitution does not allow reasons of state to influence our judgment. God forbid it should! We must not regard political consequences, however formidable they might be; if rebellion was the certain consequence, we are bound to say, 'Iusticia fiat, ruat coelum.'"—WILLIAM MURRAY, EARL OF MANSFIELD, Judgment, Rex vs. Wilkes. See BURROWS, Reports, Vol. iv, p. 2562. In this judgment, Lord Mansfield reversed the sentence of outlawry passed upon John Wilkes for the publication of The North Briton.

Let justice reign though the heaven fall. (Regnet iusticia et ruat coelum.)

DUKE OF RICHMOND, Speech, House of Lords, 31 Jan., 1642. See Old Parliamentary History, Vol. x, p. 28.

Let the Sky fall, Justice ought to be done, without doubting, lingering, and disputing.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs With Moral Reflexions, p. 184. (1709)

Let justice be done, though the ceiling fall.

BERNARD SHAW, Captain Brassbound's Conversion. Act iii. (1899)

<sup>3</sup>
It is due to Justice that man is a God to man and not a wolf. (Iustitia debetur, quod homo homini sit Deus, non lupus.)

FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum: Iustitia. (1605)

<sup>4</sup>
Justice put up at a price is sold at a price. (Pretio parata pretio vendita iustitia.)

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of a King. (1597)

He that buyeth magistracy must sell justice.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 114. (1678) A rendering of the Italian proverb, "Chi compra il magistrato, forza è che venda la giustizia."

<sup>5</sup>
A good parson once said that where mystery begins religion ends. Cannot I say, as truly at least, of human laws, that where mystery begins, justice ends?

EDMUND BURKE, A Vindication of Natural Society. (1756)

<sup>6</sup>
Good faith is the foundation of justice. (Fundamentum autem est iustitia fides.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 7, sec. 23. (c. 45 B. C.) Justice shines by its own light. (Aequitas enim lucet ipsa per se.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 9, sec. 30.

<sup>7</sup>
Nothing that lacks justice can be morally right. (Nihil enim honestum esse potest, quod iustitia vacat.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 19, sec. 62. (c. 45 B. C.)

He can't be good who is not just to all. (Vir bonus esse nequit nisi qui siet omnibus aequus.)

COLUMBANUS, Carmen Monostichon, l. 3. (c. A. D. 600)

1 Justice does not descend from its pinnacle. (Cima di giudizio non s' avvala.)

DANTE, Purgatorio. Canto vi, l. 37. (c. 1300)

2 Justice, with change of interest, learns to bow, And what was merit once is murder now.

DANIEL DEFOE, A Hymn to the Pillory. (1703)

3 Justice is too good for some people and not good enough for the rest.

NORMAN DOUGLAS, Good-bye to Western Culture. (1930)

4 We are glad when we behold his Crimes are punish'd, and that Poetical Justice is done upon him.

DRYDEN, Troilus and Cressida: Preface. (1659)

Poetic Justice, with her lifted scale, Where, in nice balance, truth with gold she weighs,

And solid pudding against empty praise.

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. i, l. 52. (1728)

5 Justice is blind, he knows nobody.

JOHN DRYDEN, The Wild Gallant. Act v, sc. 1. (1663)

For Justice, though she's painted blind, Is to the weaker side inclined.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. iii, canto iii, l. 709. (1678)

Justice is lame as well as blind, amongst us.

THOMAS OTWAY, Venice Preserved. Act i, sc. 1. (1682)

Justice is justly represented as Blind, because she sees no Difference in the Parties concerned.

WILLIAM PENN, Some Fruits of Solitude. No. 407. (1693)

Justice discards party, friendship, kindred, and is therefore always represented as blind.

JOSEPH ADDISON, The Guardian. No. 99. (1713)

There is a similar legal maxim, "Iustitia non novit patrem nec matrem; solum veritatem spectat" (Justice knows neither father nor mother; it has regard only to truth).

Justice is blind not deaf.—Justice listens too much and looks too little.

STEELE MACKAYE, Paul Kauvar. Act i. (1888)

Justice is blind. Blind she is, an' deaf an' dumb an' has a wooden leg.

FINLEY PETER DUNN, Cross-Examinations. (1903)

6 Justice again our guide. (Astraea redux.)

DRYDEN, Title of poem. (1660) Astraea was the goddess of justice.

7 A better thing than bravery is justice. (Melius est virtute ius.)

ENNIUS, Hectoris Lytra. Frag. 201, Loeb. (c. 180 B. C.)

8 Justice without wisdom is impossible.

J. A. FROUDE, Short Studies on Great Subjects: Party Politics. (1850)

9 Justice will not condemn even the Devil himself wrongfully.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3116. (1732)

10 There is virgin Justice, the daughter of Zeus. (ἡ δὲ τε παρθένος ἐστὶ Δίκην, Διὸς ἐκγεγαυία.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 256. (c. 800 B. C.)

Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 781C: "She is a virgin, according to Hesiod, uncorrupted."

11 The Foole hath sayd in his heart, there is no such thing as Justice.

THOMAS HOBBS, Leviathan. Pt. i, ch. 15. (1651)

12 None calleth for justice, nor any pleadeth for truth: they trust in vanity, and speak lies; they conceive mischief, and bring forth iniquity. (Non est qui invocet iustitiam, neque est qui iudicet vere.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, lix, 4. (c. 725 B. C.)

Justice pleaseth few in their own house.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 398.

(1640) After the Spanish proverb, "Justicia, mas no por mi casa." A variant is, "Every man loves justice at another man's expense."

13 Equal and exact justice to all men, . . . freedom of religion, freedom of the press, freedom of person under the protection of the habeas corpus; and trial by juries impartially selected,—these principles form the bright constellation which has gone before us.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, First Inaugural Address, 4 March, 1801. Sometimes quoted, "Equal rights for all, special privileges for none," but this exact phrasing has not been found in Jefferson's works.

14 There should be no sword in the hand of Justice. (Tractanda putabat inermi iusticia.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. iv, l. 80. (c. A. D. 120)

15 He who refuses justice surrenders everything to him who is armed. (Arma tenati | omnia dat qui iusta negat.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. i, l. 348. (c. A. D. 60)

16 Justice may wink a little, but see at last.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, The Mayor of Queensborough. Act i, sc. 1. (c. 1625)

So Justice, while she winks at crimes, Stumbles on innocence sometimes.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto ii, l. 1177. (1663)

17 If mankind does not relinquish at once, and forever, its vain, mad, and fatal dream of justice, the world will lapse into barbarism.

GEORGE MOORE, Confessions of a Young Man Ch. 8. (1888)

<sup>1</sup> Justice without force is powerless; force without justice is tyrannical. (La justice sans la force est impuissante: la puissance sans la justice est tyrannique.)

BLAISE PASCAL, Pensées. Pt. i, art. ix, No. 8. (c. 1660)

<sup>2</sup> Is it not by justice that the just are just? (ἀρ' οὐ δικαιοσύνη δίκαιοι εἰσιν οἱ δίκαιοι;)

PLATO, Greater Hippias. Sec. 287C. (c. 375 B.C.) Things which partake of justice are just. (ὅλον δίκαια μὲν ὅσα τοῦ δίκαιου.)

PLATO, as quoted by DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Plato. Bk. iii, sec. 13.

<sup>3</sup> To do justice and judgment is more acceptable to the Lord than sacrifice. (Facere misericordiam et iudicium, magis placet Domino, quam victimae.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxi, 3. (c. 350 B.C.)

The Mahomettans say, "One hour in doing justice is worth a hundred in prayer."

<sup>4</sup> We love justice greatly, and just men but little.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest. Pt. iv, No. 10. (c. 1870)

<sup>5</sup> Two parties whose aim is justice only never refer matters to the judge.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. viii, Maxim 102. (c. 1258)

<sup>6</sup> Though the sword of justice be sharp, it will not slay the innocent. (Kang tao sui k'uai, pu chan wu tsui chih jên.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1141. (1875)

<sup>7</sup> The memory of Dunbar's [the Earl of Dunbar] legal proceedings at Jedburgh are preserved in the proverbial phrase, "Jeddart Justice," which signifies trial after execution.

WALTER SCOTT, The Minstrelsy of the Scottish Border: Preface. (1802)

We will have Jedwood justice—hang in haste and try at leisure.

WALTER SCOTT, The Fair Maid of Perth. Ch. 32. (1828)

"Jeddart Justice"—hang first and try afterwards. P. H. BROWN, History of Scotland, ii, 263. (1902)

Servants'-hall justice all the world over. MISS BRADDON, Aurora Floyd. Ch. 16. (1867)

The "justice's justice" of the Vibiuses and Floruses.

F. W. FARRAR, Life of St. Paul, p. 357. (1879)

<sup>8</sup> Liberty plucks justice by the nose.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, i, 3, 29. (1604)

Through tatter'd clothes small vices do appear; Robes and furr'd gowns hide all. Plate sin with gold,

And the strong lance of justice hurtless breaks; Arm it in rags, a pigmy's straw does pierce it.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, iv, 6, 168. (1605) See also LAW: THE NET OF LAW.

<sup>9</sup> Justice, even if slow, is sure. (πάντως ὕστερον ἔλθε δίκη.)

SOLON, Fragments. Frag. 13, Bergk. (c. 600 B.C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Lives: Solon, ii, 3.

Justice overtaketh every man. (Δίκη κίχθε πάντας.)

MOSCHUS, Lament for Bion, l. 114. (c. 150 B.C.)

Justice, though moving slowly, seldom fails to overtake the wicked. (Raro antecedentem scelerum | deseruit pede poena claudo.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 2, l. 31. (23 B.C.)

For though usurpers sway the rule a while, Yet heavens are just, and time suppresseth wrongs.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI, iii, 3, 76. (1591)

Man is unjust, but God is just; and finally justice | Triumphs.

LONGFELLOW, Evangeline. Pt. i, sec. 3, l. 34.

(1847) See also under PUNISHMENT.

<sup>10</sup> As soon as Justice returns, the golden age returns. (Iam redit et Virgo, redeunt Saturnia regna.)

VERGIL, Eclogues. Ecl. iv, l. 6. (37 B.C.)

<sup>11</sup> Judging from the main portions of the history of the world, so far, justice is always in jeopardy.

WALT WHITMAN, Democratic Vistas. (1870)

<sup>12</sup> To no one will we deny justice, to no one will we delay it. (Nulli negabimus, nulli differemus iustitiam.)

UNKNOWN, Magna Carta, 12 June, 1215.

IV—Justice and Mercy

<sup>13</sup> He who spares the bad seeks to corrupt the good. (Parcit quisque malis, perdere vult bonos.)

CLEOBOLUS OF RHODES, Maxim. (c. 550 B.C.)

This is the Latin version, as given by AULONSIUS, Septem Sapientum Sententiae, l. 19.

There is a similar Latin proverb included in some editions of Publilius Syrus, also, possibly, a translation of Cleobolus: "Bonis nocet quisquis pepercerit malis" (He hurts the good who spares the bad). The Italians say, "Chi pardona al cattivo, offende il buono."

Law is weakened when the judge grows tender-hearted. (Dissolvitur lex cum fit iudex misericors.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 171. (c. 43 B.C.)

You may honorably spare the bad if you spare the good. (Honeste parcas improbo ut parcas probo.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 261. (c. 43 B.C.)

You harm the honorable by championing the unworthy. (Honestum laedis cum pro indigno intervenis.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 268.

You yourself do wrong when you do not punish it. (Iniuriam ipse facias ubi non vindices.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 323.

You may spare even the bad, if the good must perish with him. (Malo etiam parcas, si una periturus bonus.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 386. There is a similar Latin proverb, "Satius est prodesse etiam malis propter bonos, quam bonis deesse propter malos" (Better to be of service even to the bad for the sake of the good, than to fail the good on account of the bad).

In overlooking the offences even of a good man, you impair the laws. (Probi delicta negligens, leges teras.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 516. To do good to the evil is evil.

SADI, Bustan. Ch. 4. Apol. 11. (c. 1257) He who confers benefits on evil men heaps injuries upon the good.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. 1, Apologue 4. (c. 1258) Mercy to the bad is cruelty to the good.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. 8, Apologue 8. He who shows mercy to a serpent injures humanity.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. 8, Apologue 16. Kindness to the sharp-toothed tiger is cruelty to the harmless flock.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. 8, Apologue 53. A wys man seith: that "the juge that correcteth nat the sinnere comandeth and biddeth him do sinne."

CHAUCER, Tale of Melibeus, Sec. 44. (c. 1387) Who that lawe hath upon honde And spareth forto do justice, For merci, doth noght his office.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. i, l. 353. (1390)

In my opinion to favour the ill, is to offende the good.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 106. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Mercy but murders, pardoning those that kill.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, iii, 1, 202. (1595)

Nothing emboldens sin so much as mercy.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens, iii, 5, 2. (1608) For true's the saying, . . . "He harmes the good that doth the evil spare."

R. C., The Times' Whistle, l. 1350. (c. 1615) Miniatur innocentibus qui parcit nocentibus. He threatens the innocent who spares the guilty.

SIR EDWARD COKE, Institutes. (1628)

He that's merciful Unto the bad, is cruel to the good.

THOMAS RANDOLPH, The Muses' Looking Glass. (c. 1630)

When by a pardon'd murderer blood is spilt, The judge that pardon'd hath the greatest guilt.

SIR JOHN DENHAM, Of Justice, l. 81. (c. 1650) He that helpeth an evil man hurteth him that is good.

NICHOLAS LING, comp., Politeuphnia, p. 186. (1669)

Our mercy is become our crime.

JOHN DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. ii, l. 734. (1681)

In the public administration of justice, mercy to one may be cruelty to others.

ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 169. (1711)

He that helpeth the Evil, hurteth the Good.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2163. (1732) Every unpunished murder takes away something from the security of every man's life.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Argument, murder of Captain Joseph White. Salem, Mass., 3 Aug., 1830.

There is a mercy which is weakness, and even treason against the common good.

GEORGE ELIOT, Romola. Bk. iii, ch. 59. (1863)

<sup>1</sup> Thwackum was for doing justice, and leaving mercy to Heaven.

FIELDING, Tom Jones. Bk. iii, ch. 10. (1749)

<sup>2</sup> There is, I think, an old saying, that we "ought to be just before we are generous."

MRS. ELIZA HAYWOOD, The Female Spectator, ii, 27. (1744)

How much easier to be generous than just.

JUNIUS, Letters. No. 56. (1771)

It is easier to be beneficent than to be just.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (c. 1776) As quoted by EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Natural Religion.

Be just before you're generous.

SHERIDAN, The School for Scandal. Act iv, sc. 1. (1777) MARRYAT, Peter Simple. Ch. 11. (1833)

There is a most remarkably long-headed, flowing-bearded, and patriarchal proverb, which observes that it is the duty of a man to be just before he is generous.

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 13. (1843)

The proverb is also quoted in David Copperfield, ch. 13.

<sup>3</sup> Justice, that in the rigid paths of law, Would still some drops from Pity's fountain draw.

JOHN LANGHORNE, The Country Justice: Introduction, l. 125. (1774)

<sup>4</sup> It is safer for a criminal to go unaccused than to be acquitted. (Hominem improbum non accusari tutius est quam absolvi.)

LIVY, History. Bk. xxxiv, ch. 4, sec. 19. (c. 10. B. C.)

<sup>5</sup> Pardon one offence and you encourage many. (Qui culpae ignoscit uni suadet pluribus.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 587. (c. 43 B. C.)

The legal maxim is, "Impunitas semper ad deteriora invitat" (Impunity encourages worse offences).

Sparing justice feeds iniquity.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 1687. (1594)

Every unpunished delinquency has a family of delinquencies.

HERBERT SPENCER, The Study of Sociology: Postscript. (1873)

<sup>6</sup> Mercy and justice, marching cheek by jowl.

JOSHUA SYLVESTER, tr., Divine Weekes and Workes. Week i, day 1. (1591)

<sup>1</sup> He who is merely just is severe. (Qui n'est que juste est dur.)

VOLTAIRE, Letter to the King of Prussia, 1740.
One can not be just if one is not humane. (On ne peut être juste si on n'est humain.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 28. (1746)

V—Justice and Injustice

See also Just and Unjust

<sup>2</sup> Justice requires no subtle sophistries;
It in itself hath fitness; but injustice,
Being rotten at the heart, needs cunning treatment.

(κού ποικίλων δέι τάνδιχ' ἐρμηνευμάτων ἔχει γὰρ αὐτὰ καιρόν ὃ δ' ἄδικος λόγος ποσῶν ἐν αὐτῷ φαρμάκων δέϊται σοφῶν.)

EURIPIDES, Phoenissae, l. 470. (c. 420 B. C.)

<sup>3</sup> Justice needs not Injury to assist it, in getting its own.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3115. (1732)

<sup>4</sup> I have loved justice and hated iniquity; therefore I die in exile. (Dilexi iustitiam et odi iniquitatem, propterea morior in exilio.)

POPE GREGORY VII (HILDEBRAND). (1085) See BOWDEN, Life. Bk. iii, ch. 20.

<sup>5</sup> Love of justice, with most men, is nothing but the fear of suffering injustice. (L'amour de la justice n'est, en la plupart des hommes, que la crainte de souffrir l'injustice.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 78. (1665)

<sup>6</sup> Delay of justice is injustice.

W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: Peter Leopold and President Du Paty. (c. 1829)

<sup>7</sup> The hour of justice does not strike
On the dials of this world.

(L'heure de la justice ne sonne pas Aux cadrans de ce monde.)

MAURICE MAETERLINCK, Measure of the Hours. (c. 1900)

<sup>8</sup> Injustice is relatively easy to bear; what stings is justice.

H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices. Ser. iii, p. 101. (1922)

<sup>9</sup> Justice itself is sometimes fraught with harm. (ἀλλ' ἔστιν ἐνθα χη δίκη βλάβην φέρει.)

SOPHOCLES, Electra, l. 1042. (c. 409 B. C.)

The laws of justice cannot exist without some mixture of injustice. (Les lois mesmes de la justice ne peuvent subsister sans quelque mélange d'injustice.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 20. (1580)

The Expenditure is so high that the Remedy, Justice, is worse than Injustice, the Disease.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1742.

<sup>10</sup> The strictest justice is sometimes the greatest injustice. (Ius summum saepe summast malitia.)

TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos, l. 796. (163 B. C.) Cited as "a true saying."

Injustice often arises through chicanery, that is, through an over-subtle and even fraudulent construction of the law. This it is, that gave rise to the now familiar saw, "The greatest justice, the greatest injustice." (Summum ius, summa iniuria.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 10, sec. 33. (c. 45 B. C.) The axiom is variously translated: "Extreme justice, extreme injury," "The greater the justice, the greater the injury," "The more law, the less justice," and so on. It is cited by many writers, among them ERASMUS, Adagia, i, x, 25, and is included by TAVERNER in his Translations from Erasmus, fo. 28, with the rendering, "Extreme law is extreme wrong." A later variant is, "Summum ius, summum crux" (The highest justice, the highest cross).

The greatest justice the ancients held to be the greatest torture. (Summum ius antiqui summam putabant crucem.)

LUCIUS JUNIUS COLUMELLA, De Re Rustica, i, 7. (c. A. D. 35)

How true it is that "complete legality is complete injustice." (O vere "ius summum summa malitia.")

ST. JEROME (HIERONYMUS), Letters Let. i. sec. 14. (A. D. 370)

Too much severity is hateful. (Triste rigor nimius.)

CLAUDIAN, De Quarto Consulatu Honorii Augusti, l. 403. (A. D. 398)

According to the adage, the extremities of justice are extreme injustice.

RICHARD GRAFTON, Chronicle, ii, 228. (1569)

Justice without mercy were extreme injury.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 461. (1580)

Extremity of right is wrong. . . . Extremity of law is extremity of wrong.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, pp. 172, 182 (1639)

To strictest justice many ills belong,
And honesty is often in the wrong.

NICHOLAS ROWE, tr., Lucan's Bello Civili. Bk. viii, l. 657. (1718) An interpolation by Rowe.

There is one motto that ought to be put at the head of our penal code, "Summum ius, summa iniuria."

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Pt. ii, No. 139. (1820)

The Germans say, "Zuviel Recht ist Unrecht" (Too much justice is injustice), or "Scharf Recht ist Unrecht," or "Streng Recht, gross Unrecht," or "Je mehr Gesetze, je weniger Recht" (The more laws the less justice)

Justice can be a very harsh thing.

CLARISSA CUSHMAN, I Wanted to Murder, p. 133. (1941)

<sup>11</sup> Justice is sweet and musical: but injustice is harsh and discordant.

H. D. THOREAU, Slavery in Massachusetts. (1854)

K

KALENDS, GREEK, see under Never

KEEPING

See also Getting and Keeping

<sup>1</sup> As the proverb says, that which is good to take is good to keep. (Comme dit le proverbe. ce qui est bon à prendre est bon à garder.)

BEAUMARCHAIS, Le Barbier de Seville. Act iv, sc. 1. (1775)

<sup>2</sup> Who may holde a thing that wol away?

CHAUCER (?), Troilus. Bk. iv, l. 1628. (c. 1374)

Who maie holde that will awaie?

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 6. (1546)
Lament no more, good wife, for who can kepe that must needes awaie?

WILLIAM BULLEIN, A Dialogue Against the Fever Pestilence, p. 121. (1564)

Who can hold that will away?

BEN JONSON, Bartholomew Fayre. Act i, sc. 1. (1614)

Keep me not under lock and key,
For who can hold what will away?

JAMES MABBE, tr., Exemplary Novels, p. 196. (1640)

WHAT YOU HAVE, HOLD, see under HAVE.

<sup>3</sup> You'll keep it no longer than you can a Cat in a Wheel-barrow.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6025. (1732)

<sup>4</sup> He that keeps his own, makes war.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 847. (1640)

<sup>5</sup> According to the proverb, keep a thing seven years, and then if thou hast no use on't, throw't away.

THOMAS KILLIGREW, The Parson's Wedding. Act ii, sc. 7. (1663)

They say, keep a thing seven year, an' ye'll aye find a use for't.

WALTER SCOTT, The Antiquary. Ch. 21. (1816)
As my canny subjects in Scotland say, If you keep a thing seven years, you are sure to find a use for it at last.

WALTER SCOTT, Woodstock. Ch. 28. (1826)
King Charles II to Dr. Rochecliffe.

It is the very thing. . . I put it away and forgot it. They say if you keep a thing seven years . . .

CHARLES READE, Hard Cash. Ch. 29. (1863)

<sup>6</sup> Keep all you have and try for all you can.

LORD LYTON, King Arthur. Bk. ii, l. 70. (1848)

<sup>7</sup> It is not easy, single-handed, to keep what others want. (Non facile solus serves quod multis placet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 453. (c. 43 B. C.)

<sup>8</sup> Keep some till furthermore come.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 110. (1670)

KENT

<sup>9</sup> Kent first in our account, doth to itself apply, . . . this Blazon first, Long Tails and Liberty.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, Poly-olbion, xxiii, 237. (1613)
The Kentish men of old were said to have tails, because trafficking in the Low Countries, they never paid full payments of what they did owe, but still left some part unpaid.

FYNES MORYSON, Itinerary, iii, i, 53. (1617)
I shall not dispute whether Long-tails of Kent, Or papist, this name of disgrace did invent.

UNKNOWN, Rump Songs. Pt. ii, p. 47. (c. 1639)

<sup>10</sup> "A man of Kent." This may relate either to the liberty or the courage of this county men.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies: Kent, ii, 122. (1662)

Are all to idle discord bent,

These Kentish men—those men of Kent.

CHRISTOPHER SMART, Fables. No. 2. (c. 1750)

All the inhabitants of Kent east of the river Medway, are called Men of Kent. . . The rest . . . are stiled Kentish-men.

FRANCIS GROSE, A Provincial Glossary: Kent (1787)

<sup>11</sup> A knight of Cales [Cadiz] and a gentleman of Wales,

And a laird of the North countree,
A yeoman of Kent, with his yearly rent,
Will buy them out all three.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 17. (1659)

Cited by FULLER, Worthies, ii, 121. (1662)

GROSE, Provincial Dictionary: Kent. (1790)

BARHAM, Ingoldsby Legends: The Leech of Folkstone. (1840) Cadiz, in Spain, it may be explained, was captured by the Earl of Essex in 1596, who made some sixty of his retainers Knights of Cadiz.

<sup>12</sup> Very reasonable is their conceite, which doe imagine that Kent hath three steps, or degrees, of which the first (say they) offereth wealth without health; the second giveth both wealth and health; and the thirde affordeth health onely, and little or no wealth.

WILLIAM LAMBARDE, A Perambulation of Kent, p. 181. (1576)

The Inhabitants distinguish it into three . . . portions . . . , the upper, lying upon the Thames. . . healthy, but not altogether so rich; the middle, . . . both healthy and rich; the lower, . . . rich, but withal unhealthy, because of the wet marshy soil.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Britannia: Kent, i, 215. (1586)

<sup>13</sup> Sith the Saxon king,

Never was woofe seene, many nor some,
Nor in all Kent, nor in Christendome.

EDMUND SPENSER, The Shepheardes Calender: September, l. 151. (1579)

I can live in Christendome as well as in Kent.

JOHN LVLV, Mother Bombie. Act ii, sc.4. (1592)
William the Conquerour hauing heard the prou-erb of Kent and Christendome, thought he had woone a countrey as goode as all Christendome when he was enfeofed of Kent.

THOMAS NASHE, Works (Grosart), v, 221. (1599)
"Neither in Kent nor Christendom." . . . This home proverb . . . ought to be restrained to English Christendom, whereof Kent was first converted to the faith.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies: Kent, ii, 122. (1662)
"Neither in Kent nor Christendom." Kent is obviously singled out as containing the metropolis (Canterbury) of an English Christendom.

W. W. SKEAT, in PEGGE, Kenticisms, p. 62. (1876)

KENTUCKY

1 In the Blue Grass region

A "Paradox" was born.

The corn was full of kernels

And the "colonels" full of corn.

CHIEF JUSTICE JOHN MARSHALL, *Impromptu
Epigram*. (c. 1825) He had been asked for a rhyme on the word "paradox," which, of course, this is not. See BROOKS, The World of Washington Irving, p. 365, note.

Here's a health to old Kentucky . . .

Where each succeeding morn

Finds "the corn is full of kernels,
And the Colonels full of corn."

W. J. LAMPTON, To Old Kentucky. St. 7. (c. 1900)

2 Nine cheers went up for "Old Kaintuck."

J. A. QUITMAN, in CLAIBORNE, Life, i, 42. (1819)
There's no place on the universal 'arth like old Kaintuck.

C. F. HOFFMAN, A Winter in the West, ii, 119.
(1835)

Old Kaintuck. . . Dat ain't no sech kentry as dis heah.

KATE CHOPIN, Bayou Folk, p. 132. (1894)

3 When the said Henderson & Co. proposed purchasing the lands below the Kentuckey, the Dragging Canoe told them it was the bloody Ground, and would be dark, and difficult to settle it.

Virginia State Papers, i, 283. (1777)

The fertile region, now called Kentucke, then but known to the Indians, by the name of the Dark and Bloody Ground.

JOHN FILSON, *The Discovery, Settlement, and
Present State of Kentucke*, p. 8. (1784)

In consequence of which [fighting], the country being thickly shaded was called in their [hunters'] expressive language, the dark and bloody ground.

MARSHALL, Kentucky, p. 10. (1812) Marshall is right and Filson wrong. The phrase is not a translation of the Indian name for Kentucky, but was given the state because of the early strife over its hunting grounds and land. The Cherokee word "kentucke" meant simply a meadow or prairie.

Sons of the Dark and Bloody Ground.

O'HARA, The Bivouac of the Dead. (1847)

KEY

4 You can't get in tonight; you've got the key of the street, my friend.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 47. (1837) "To have the key of the street" is used of a man who has been turned out, or locked out, of his house.

5 He tries all the keys in the bunch.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 189. (1633)

CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 60. (1639)

The used key is always bright.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1744. See under SLOTH.

6 Youre key is mete for euery lok.

JOHN SKELTON, Works (Dyce), i, 20. (c. 1525)

Your Key fits not that Lock.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6052. (1732)

7 Not all keyes hongen atte oon wyues gyrdell.

UNKNOWN. MS. Latin No 394, Rylands
Library. (c. 1400)

The keys hang not all by one mans gyrdell.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

All the keyes hang not at one man's girdle.

GOSSON, The Schoole of Abuse, p. 45. (1579)

All the keys of the countrey hangs not at ane belt.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 8. (c. 1595)

All keys hang not on one girdle.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 721. (1640)

The keys hang not at one man's girdle.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 110. (1670)

All the keys of the world hings not at your belt
Spoken to those who refuse us their help.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 62. (1721)

The French say, "Tout le clefs ne pendent pas à une ceinture"; the Italians, "Tutte le chiavi non pendono ad una cintura." It is also a proverb in other languages.

KICK

8 It is human nature to kick a fallen man.
(ὥστε σύγγονον | βροτοῖσι τὸν πεσόντα λακτίσαι πλέον.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 884. (458 B. C.)

It is a base Thing to tread upon a Man, that is down.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2847. (1732)

What! Ben, my old hero, is this your renown?
Is this the new go?—kick a man when he's down?

THOMAS MORE, Epistle from Tom Crib to Big Ben. (1815) Referring to Napoleon Bonaparte, and his exile to St. Helena. "Big Ben" was a nickname for the Prince Regent.

I don't know whether it is very brave in you to hit a chap when he is down.

THACKERAY, The Newcomes. Ch. 29. (1853)

"Hit him, he has got no friends."—Ibid.

When a man's down, you know, people are inclined to kick him.

HUGH PENTECOST, The Twenty-Fourth Horse,
p. 80. (1940) An American variant is, "Kick him again; he's down."

<sup>1</sup> He's not got a kick left in him. He's done for, "down and out." The phrase is from pugilism.
E. C. BREWER, Dictionary of Phrase and Fable:
· Kick. (1870)

<sup>2</sup> He who takes his own course is a Kicker or Bolter.

JAMES BRYCE, The American Commonwealth.
Vol. ii, bk. iii, ch. 63. (1888)
There were some kickers, of course, but the crowd agreed.

KIRK MUNROE, The Golden Days of '49, p. 40. (1889)

Every one of the kickers has left.

C. T. WINCHESTER, An Old Castle, p. 203. (1900)
His people had been kickers—they had kicked over the grub, and the cooking, and the camp sites.

R. CUMMINS, Sky-High Corral, p. 71. (1924)

<sup>3</sup> I marched the lobby, twirled my stick, . . .
The girls all cried, "He's quite the kick."

GEORGE COLMAN THE YOUNGER, Broad Grins.
(a. 1836)

<sup>4</sup> A kick that scarce would move a horse,
May kill a sound divine.

COWPER, The Yearly Distress, l. 63. (1779)

<sup>5</sup> The kick of the Dam hurts not the Colt.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4611. (1732)

<sup>6</sup> To kick the bucket, to die.

FRANCIS GROSE, A Classical Dictionary of the Vulgar Tongue: Kick. (1785)

Pitt has kick'd the bucket.

JOHN WOLCOT (PETER PINDAR), Tristia. (1806)
Till time himself' turn auld and kick the bucket.

ROBERT TANNAHILL, Poems, p. 57. (1810)

To kick the bucket, an unfeeling phrase for to die.

WILLIAM CARR, Dialect of Craven, i, 55. (1828)
Despondency may make you kick the beam and the bucket both at once.

THOMAS HOOD, Hood's Own. Ser. i, No. 5. (1838)
The beam referred to is the beam on which a pig is suspended by the heels to be slaughtered, and which it kicks in its death struggles. In Norfolk, England, it is called a "bucket," which is one of several explanations of the origin of the phrase.

[He] will do the right thing in the end before he kicks the bucket.

GRANT ALLEN, Tents of Shem. Ch. 10. (1890)
A man that's getting near to kicking the bucket can't be too careful of what he says.

W. P. RIDGE, Son of the State. Ch. 11. (1899)
Gin and rum and destiny play funny tricks,
And poor Jenny kicked the bucket at seventy-six.

MOSS HART, Lady in the Dark. Act ii. (1941)

<sup>7</sup> I'll go about with the rogue. He is inclined to kick over the traces.

HENRY KINGSLEY, Ravenshoe. Ch. 42. (1861)
The effervescence of genius which drives men to kick over the traces of respectability.

LESLIE STEPHEN, Hours in a Library, ii, 354. (1876)

<sup>8</sup> You needn't kick before you're spurred.

A. B. LONGSTREET, Georgia Scenes. (1835)

<sup>9</sup> You have an ugly kick in your gallop.

B. H. MALKIN, tr., Gil Blas. Bk. iii, ch. 10. (1809)

A grapeshot . . . had shattered his left thigh, and considerably shortened it, thereby giving him a kick in his gallop.

MICHAEL SCOTT, The Cruise of the Midge. Ch. 1. (1836)

<sup>10</sup> It is a slippery course to kick against the goads. (ποτὶ κέντρον δὲ τοι | λακτιζέμεν τελέθει ὀλισθηρὸς οἶμος.)

PINDAR, Pythian Odes. No. ii, l. 94. (c. 475 B. C.)

Kick not against the pricks. (πρὸς κέντρα κῶλον ἐκτενεῖς.)

AESCHYLUS, Prometheus Bound, l. 325. (c. 470 B. C.)

Kick not against the pricks lest thou strike to thy hurt. (πρὸς κέντρα μὴ λάκτιζε, μὴ παῖσας μογῇς.)

AESCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 1624. (458 B. C.)

Better slay victims unto him than kick

Against the pricks, man raging against God.

(θύοιμ' ἄν αὐτῷ μάλλον ἢ θυμούμενος πρὸς κέντρα λακτίζοιμι θνητὸς ὢν θεῷ.)

EURIPIDES, The Bacchae, l. 794. (c. 410 B. C.)

If you strike a goad with your fists, it's your hands that suffer. (Si stimulos pugnīs caedis, manibus plus dolet.)

PLAUTUS, Truculentus, l. 768. (c. 186 B. C.)

Cited by HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 410, with the addition, "Spit against the wind and you spit in your own face."

It's folly kicking against the pricks (Inscitias, advorsum stimulum calces.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 78. (161 B. C.) The proverb is cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, iii, 46, who explains that it applies to anyone who, impatient under any affliction or injury, by attempting to avenge themselves, increase their misfortunes. The adage originates from the custom of goading oxen to make them go forward, and if they are restive or push back, they merely drive the goads in farther.

It is hard for thee to kick against the pricks. (σκληρόν σοι πρὸς κέντρα λακτίζειν.)

New Testament: Acts, xxvi, 14. (c. 65 A. D.)

The Vulgate is, "Durum est tibi contra stimulum calcitrare." The phrase is used in ix, 5, in the Revised Version, and is also in the Vulgate, but not in the Greek. The Latin cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, iii, 46.

Says horse to ass, Kick not against the goad. (ἵππος βῶν, πρὸς κέντρα μὴ λάκτιζε πῶ.)

PRISCIAN, Elements of Grammar, 356, 13. (c. A. D. 500)

Hit is to the ful harde and wik for to wirk a-gaine the prik.

UNKNOWN, Cursor Mundi, l. 19626. (c. 1300)

And eek be war to sporne ageyn an al.

CHAUCER, Truth, l. 11. (c. 1380)

And thus min honde ayein the pricke

I hurte and have don many a day.

GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. iii, l. 116. (1390)

Foly it is to spurne against a pricke,
To stryue against the streme, to winche or kicke
Against the hard wall.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)
It is hard to fling at the brod [goad] or kick at the prick.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 64. (c. 1595)
It is madness in a man to kick against a thorne, to strive against a stream.

DAVID TUVIL, Vade Mecum, p. 46. (1638)
To blow against the wind, to kick against the pricks.

ISAAC BARROW, Sermons, iii, 394. (c. 1670)
Advising that honest man is kicking against the pricks.

SMOLLETT, tr., Don Quixote, iv, 214. (1755)
It is folly to kick against tenpenny nails.

MARRYAT, Percival Keene. Ch. 3. (1842)
I just knock enough not to start kicking against the pricks.

AGATHA CHRISTIE, Murder in Retrospect, p.
56. (1942)

1
I am going to be an absolute wreck astern.
(Puppis pereunda est probe.)

PLAUTUS, Epidicus, l. 74. (c. 200 B.C.)

But Hudibras gave him a twitch
As quick as lightning in the breech,
Just in the place where honour's lodg'd,
As wise philosophers have judg'd;
Because a kick in that place more
Hurts honour than deep wounds before.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto iii, l.
1065. (1663)

Give the Methusalahs a kick in the pants.

R. A. J. WALLING, The Spider and the Fly,
p. 20. (1940)

2
"Which is the monkey's allowance, I suppose," said the traveller, "more kicks than halfpence."

WALTER SCOTT, St. Ronan's Well. Ch. 34. (1824)

The allusion is to monkeys led about to perform their tricks. If they perform badly they get the kicks, but their masters get the half-pence. More abuse than profit is the meaning of the phrase.

When you get on board, you'll find monkey's allowance—more kicks than half-pence.

MARRYAT, Peter Simple. Ch. 2 (1833)

On active service kicks are more plentiful than halfpence.

E. J. HARDY, Mr. Thomas Atkins, 297. (1900)

3
To kick one's self, often used with an infinite variety of adjuncts,—i. e., to kick one's self
"all over the house," "all over the place," etc.,—means to feel or express violent dissatisfaction with one's self.

W. S. WALSH, Handy-Book of Literary Curiosities, p. 584. (1892)

4
Musae repudiatæ, "Muses kickt downe stairs."

ANTHONY WOOD, Life, 27 Feb., 1685.

When late I attempted your pity to move,
Why seemed you so deaf to my prayers?

Perhaps it was right to dissemble your love,
But—why should you kick me downstairs?

UNKNOWN. Published anonymously in An Asylum for Fugitive Pieces. Vol. i, p. 15.
(1785) Quoted by John Philip Kemble, in his play, The Panel. Act. i, sc. 1. (1788) He is sometimes credited with the authorship of the lines.

Lord Melville informs me that he is about to be kicked upstairs (his expression) to be Secretary of State.

J. W. CROKER, Diary, 31 May, 1821.

KIDNEY

5
To pronounce all to be thieves to a man, except myself, of course, and those men . . .
that are of my own kidney.

HUGH LATIMER, Sermons and Remains, p. 312.
(c. 1550)

Think of that, a man of my kidney . . . that am as subject to heat as butter.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor,
iii, 5, 116. (1601)

This fellow is not quite of the right kidney.

HENRY FIELDING, Don Quixote in England. Act
iii, sc. 4. (1733)

I am heartily glad to meet with a man of your kidney.

FIELDING, Joseph Andrews. Bk. ii, ch. 8. (1742)

It was a large and miscellaneous party, but all were of the right kidney.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Endymion. Ch. 17. (1880)

KILLING, see Murder

KIN

6
Kinsfolk know well to envy, too. (τὸ συγγενεὶς γὰρ καὶ φθονεῖν ἐπιστάται.)

AESCHYLUS, Fragmenta Incerta. No. 166.
Smyth. (c. 458 B.C.) Quoted by ARISTOTLE
Rhetoric, ii, 10, 5.

Your kinfolk are your scorpions.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 522.
(1938) The French say, "On n'est jamais trahi que par ses siens" (One is never betrayed except by one's kindred); the Hindus
"Do no business with a kinsman"

7
He is na more cosin un-to me
Than is this leef that hangeth on the tree.

CHAUCER, *Canterbury Tales: The Shipman's
Tale*, l. 150. (c. 1386)

He's my cousin-german, quite removed

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

A Welsh cousin. A relation far removed; the Welsh making themselves cousins to most of the people of rank born in the country.

FRANCIS GROSE, Provincial Dictionary: Welsh.
(1790)

And so do his sisters and his cousins and his aunts
W. S. GILBERT, H.M.S. Pinafore. Act i. (1878)

8
If we are related we shall meet.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Character. (1844)

<sup>1</sup> Kinsfolkes with kinsfolke, wo to hym that hath nothing. (Parente con parente, guai á chi non ha niente.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 32. (1578)
Kinsman helps kinsman, but woe to him that hath nothing.

Book of Meery Riddles. Prov. 19. (1629)

<sup>2</sup> Visit your Aunt, but not every Day; and call at your Brother's, but not every night.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1742.

There is an old English Proverb which hints this, Love your relations, but live not near them.

R. S. HAWKER, in BYLES, Life, p. 312. (1858)

<sup>3</sup> As much akin as Lenson-hill to Pilson-pen. That is no kin at all. . . . Spoken of such as have vicinity . . . without the least . . . consanguinity.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies: Dorset, i, 453. (1662) Lewesdon and Pillesden, two neighboring hills.

As much sib'd as sieve and ridder, that grew both in a wood together.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 207. (1670)

A "ridder" or "riddle" is a coarse wire sieve. As sib as sive and riddle that grew both in one wood. Spoken to them who groundlessly pretend kindred to great persons.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 31. (1721)

Whilk . . . sounds as like being akin to a peatship and a sheriffdom, as a sieve is sib to a riddle.

WALTER SCOTT, Redgauntlet. Lett. 13. (1824)

<sup>4</sup> Our English proverb, "It is good to be near a-kin to land," holdeth in private patrimonies, not titles to crowns.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies, ii, 227. (1662)

It is good to be near of kin to an estate.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 110. (1670)

It is something to be sib [akin] to an estate. Because at the long run it may fall to us.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 197. (1721)

My sister says, in the words of an old saw, It is good to be related to an estate.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Clarissa, i, 81. (1748)

<sup>5</sup> It is a common proverb, "A man shuld kepe fro the blynde and gevyt to is kyn."

GAIRDNER, ed., Paston Letters, ii, 73. (1461)

Give your own sea maws your own fish guts. If you have any superfluities give them to your poor relations.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 118. (1721)

We maun gie our ain fish-guts to our ain sea-maws.

WALTER SCOTT, The Antiquary. Ch. 15. (1816)

Repeated in Redgauntlet, letter 13.

Keep your ain fish guts to your ain sea maws. This was a favourite proverb with Scott when he meant to express the policy of first considering the interests that are nearest home.

EDWARD B. RAMSEY, Reminiscences of Scottish Life, v, 197. (1857)

<sup>6</sup> Moral, The nearer of kin, the sooner in.

SIR JOHN HARINGTON, tr., Orlando Furioso. Bk. xvi. (1591)

The nigher kinne the farther in.

ROBERT TOFTE, tr., Blazon of Iealousie, p. 28 (1615)

<sup>7</sup> Many kynsfolke and few freends, some folke saie.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i. ch. 11. (1546)

A man may haue many kinsfolks, but few friends.

THOMAS GAINSFORD, Rich Cabinet, fo. 50. (1616)

The love of kinsmen is grown cold, "many kinsmen (as the saying is) few friends."

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. i, memb. ii, subs. 2. (1621)

Many kinsfolk and few friends.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 26. (1639)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 94, (1670) with the comment, "One's kindred are not always to be accounted one's friends."

Many relations, few friends.

SAMUEL PALMER, Moral Essays on Proverbs, p. 252. (1710)

Many aunts, many emms [relations], many kinsfolk, few friends.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 251. (1721)

<sup>8</sup> The kinsman's ear will hear it.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 4. (1659)

<sup>9</sup> For all your kindred make much of your friends.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 5. (1659)

Wheresoever you see your kindred, make much of your friends.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 15. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5660. (1732)

<sup>10</sup> A man cannot bear all his kin on his back. Spoken when we are upbraided with some bad kinsman.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 42. (1721)

He that hath neither fools nor beggars among his kindred, is the son of a thunder-Gust.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1736.

'Tis a strange Forest that has no rotten Wood in 't, and a strange Kindred that all are good in 't.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1747.

It is a melancholy truth that even great men have their poor relations.

CHARLES DICKENS, Bleak House. Ch. 28. (1852)

The Emperor also has straw-sandaled relatives. ('Huang ti yeh yu 'tsao hsieh 'chin.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 188. (1872)

Even the Son of Heaven has his poor relations. (T'ien tzü chiao hsia yu p'in ch'in.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2628. (1875)

<sup>11</sup> Fer fro kitth and fro kynne.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman, text B, xv, 497. (1377) Kith and kin, country and kinsfolk, friends and relatives. The first meaning of "kith" is native land, and in later use, countrymen, friends, neighbors.

- A mayd that's neither kiffe nor kin to me.
 THOMAS MIDDLETON, A Chast Mayd in Cheap-side. Act iv, sc. 1. (1620) An early spelling of "kith."
- Mark the natural kiths and kins
 Of circumstance and office.
 E. B. BROWNING, Casa Guidi Windows, i, 888. (1851)
- 1
 The greater the kindred is, the less the kindness.
 JOHN LYLY, Mother Bombie. Act iii, sc. 1. (1594)
 A little more than kin, and less than kind.
 SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, i, 2, 65. (1600)
- 2
 It is a piece of luck to have relations scarce.
 (εὐτύχημα δ' ἐστὶν ὀλίγους τοὺς ἀγαθαίους ἔχειν.)
 MENANDER, The Doortender. Frag. Loeb, p. 361. (c. 300 B. C.)
 God gives us relatives; thank God, we can choose our friends.
 ADDISON MIZNER, The Cynics' Calendar, p. 1. (c. 1910)
- 3
 O too, too forgetful of your own kin! (O nimium, nimiumque oblite tuorum!)
 OVID, Heroides. Epis. i, l. 41. (c. 10 B. C.)
- 4
 When you are with your own kin, even far away, you do not miss your fatherland. (Ubi sis cum tuis et absis, patriam non desideres.)
 PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 705. (c. 43 B. C.)
- 5
 A bag full of flour and a purse full of money are the best relations in the world.
 H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 485. (1940)
- 6
 Relations are simply a tedious pack of people who haven't got the remotest knowledge of how to live, nor the smallest instinct about when to die.
 OSCAR WILDE, The Importance of Being Earnest. Act iii. (1895) A somewhat similar epigram is, "Relatives are persons who live too near and die too seldom." A West African proverb declares, "He who refuses to die does not love his relatives."
- KINDNESS
- 7
 This kindness you have sown in no barren field. (Quod beneficium haut sterili in segete.)
 ACCIUS, Andromeda. Frag. 73. (c. 140 B. C.)
- 8
 Life is short. Let us make haste to be kind. (La vie est courte. . . . Hàtons-nous d'être bons.)
 HENRI AMIEL, Journal Intime, 16 Dec., 1868.
- 9
 Kind hearts are soonest wronged.
 NICHOLAS BRETON, Crossing of Proverbs. (1616)
 A kind heart loeth nought at last.
 JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 45. (1639)
 Hertfordshire Kindness (i. e. kindness of heart).
 THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2498. (1732)

- 10
 Little deeds of kindness, Little words of love Help to make earth happy, Like the Heaven above!
 JULIA FLETCHER CARNEY, Little Things. (1845)
 Do not forget little kindnesses and do not remember small faults.
 S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 366. (1938) A Chinese proverb.
- 11
 God help me so, I was to him as kinde
 As any wyf from Denmark un-to Inde.
 CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Wife of Bath's Prologue, l. 823. (c. 1388)
- 12
 It is difficult to say how much men's minds are conciliated by a kind manner and gentle speech. (Sed tamen difficile dictu est, quantopere conciliet animos comitas affabilitasque sermonis.)
 CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. ii, ch. 14, sec. 48. (c. 45 B. C.)
 Kindness to the good is a better investment than kindness to the rich. (Quam ob rem melius apud bonos quam apud fortunatos beneficium collocari puto.)
 CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. ii, ch. xx, sec. 71.
 Nothing is so popular as kindness. (Nihil est tam populare quam bonitas.)
 CICERO, Pro Ligario. Ch. xii, sec. 37. (45 B. C.)
 Quoted by MONTAIGNE, ii, 17.
 Persistent kindness conquers the ill-disposed. (Vincit malos pertinax bonitas.)
 SENECA, De Beneficiis. Bk. vii, sec. 31. (c. A. D. 54)
 All Mankind is beholden to him that is kind to the Good.
 FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1746.
 "Kindness is a language that the deaf can hear and the dumb can understand."
 Then within my bosom
 Softly this I heard:
 "Each heart holds the secret;
 Kindness is the word."
 JOHN BOYLE O'REILLY, What Is Good? (1878)
 So many gods, so many creeds,
 So many paths that wind and wind,
 While just the art of being kind
 Is all the sad world needs.
 ELLA WHEELER WILCOX, The World's Need.
- 13
 O wouldst thou be less killing, soft or kind.
 CONGREVE, Mourning Bride. Act iii, sc. 6. (1697)
- 14
 'Tis sweet to gaze into a kind man's eyes.
 (εἰς ὁμματ' εὖνου φωτὸς ἐμβλέψαι γλυκύν.)
 EURIPIDES, Ion, l. 732. (c. 440 B. C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 49F, 69A.
- 15
 Kindnesse lyes not ay in ane syde of the house.
 FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 70. (c. 1595)
 Kindnesse comes of will.
 FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 70. That is, love cannot be forced.
 Kindnesse cannot be bought for geir.
 FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 70. "But rather by mutual good offices," adds JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 227.

We can puind [distrain] for debt, but not for kindness. If our friends will not be kind to us, we have no remedy at law.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 349. (1721)

1 A forced Kindness deserves no Thanks.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 113. (1732)
Kindnesses which we cannot requite, are troublesome.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3126. See also under BENEFIT.

2 What boots the possession of the body, without that of the heart? Affection gained by kindness insures allegiance.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Penimim (Choice of Pearls). No. 242. (c. 1050) Quoted as Aristotle's advice to Alexander. The same maxim transcribed by DUKES from the Sod Hassodoth, in the Bodleian. In ALGAZILI'S Ethics, bk. ii, ch. 4, a similar maxim is ascribed to Solon.

3 Enough, and more than enough, has your kindness enriched me. (Satis superque me benignitas tua | ditavit.)

HORACE, Epodes. No. i, l. 31. (c. 20 B.C.)

4 Yet still he fills affection's eye,
Obscurely wise, and coarsely kind.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, On the Death of Dr. Robert Levett. (1782)

5 Kindness consists in loving people more than they deserve. (Une partie de la bonté consiste peut-être à estimer et à aimer les gens plus qu'ils ne le méritent.)

JOSEPH JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 71. (1810)
Kindness is the sunshine in which virtue grows.
R. G. INGERSOLL, A Lay Sermon. (c. 1890)

6 One can pay back the loan of gold, but one dies forever in debt to those who are kind—so says a Malay proverb.

AGNES N. KEITH, Land Below the Wind. See Atlantic Monthly, Oct., 1939, p. 572/1.

7 I should resemble the Ape, and kill it by culling it.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England: Epistle Dedicatory (Arber), p. 215. (1579)

With kindless, lo, the ape doth kill her whelp.

GEOFFREY WHITNEY, Choice of Emblemes, 188. (1586)

She [the ape] killeth that which she loueth, by pressing it too hard.

EDWARD TOPSELL, The Historie of Foure-Footed Beastes, p. 5. (1607)

The ape so long clippeth her young that she at last killeth them.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 2. (1670)

The Ape hugs her Darling till she kills it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4396. (1732)

That is a way to kill a wife with kindness.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, iv, 1, 211. (1594)

A Woman Kilde with Kindnesse.

THOMAS HEYWOOD. Title of play. (1607)

I bear her an amorous grudge still. . . . I could kill her with kindness.

GEORGE FARQUHAR, Love and a Bottle. Act iii, sc. 1. (1699)

You absolutely kill him with kindness.

GEORGE COLMAN, sr., The Jealous Wife. Act iv, sc. 1. (1761)

Don't let them kill you with claret and kindness.

BYRON, Letters and Journals, iii, 205. (1815)

He suffocates me with kindness.

HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 421. (1869)

8 Better do a kindness near home than go far off and burn incense.

ARTHUR E. MOULE, Proverbs from Ningpo. See DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 323. (1872)

CHARITY BEGINS AT HOME, see under CHARITY

9 It is useless to do anyone a kindness, it is just as if you put your kindness in a well. (Neminem nihil boni facere oportet; aequae enim ac si in puteum conicias.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 42. (c. A.D. 60)

It is tint [lost] that is done to child and auld men.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 60. (c. 1595)

We have a saying from Aristotle, Nec in puerum, nec in senem collocandum esse beneficium,—That our beneficence should not be fixed upon a child or an old man; for the child, before he comes to age will forget it, and the old man will die before he can requite it.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons (1861), i, 135. (1629)
Kindness is lost that's bestowed on children and old folks.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 45. (1639)

Kindness to the starfish is as wind in the desert.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 377. (1938)

A Chinese proverb.

10 Not always actions show the man: we find
Who does a kindness is not therefore kind.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. i, l. 109. (1732)

11 It is a man's kindly acts that are remembered of him in the years after his life.

PTAH-HOTEP, Instruction. No. 34. (c. 3550 B.C.)
Prisse Papyrus. Gunn, tr.

12 Kindness alters when provoked by wrong.
(Mutat se bonitas irritata iniuria.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 375. (c. 43 B.C.)

Kindness holds herself ever rich. (Semper beatam se putat benignitas.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 650.

13 That soft upbringing which we call kindness, destroys all the vigor both of mind and of body. (Mollis illa educatio quam indulgentiam vocamus, nervos omnes mentis et corporis frangit.)

QUINTILIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae. Bk. i, ch. 2, sec. 6. (c. A.D. 80)

Kindness will creep whar it mauna gang.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 247. (1678)

1 If thou cherish the tree of kindness, thou wilt assuredly eat the fruits of a good name.

SADI, Bustan. Ch. iv, Apologue 11. (c. 1257)

Ungovernable anger causes terror, and unseasonable kindness kills respect.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. viii, Maxim 18.

Sternness and gentleness are best combined: The leech both salves and scarifies, you'll find.

SADI, Gulistan, viii, 18.

"Use kindness," saith the sage, "yet not so much That the wolf be emboldened thee to clutch."

SADI, Gulistan, viii, 18.

2 Rule by kindness rather than fear. (Beneficiis magis quam metu imperium.)

SALLUST, Bellum Catalinae. Ch. 9. (c. 41 B.C.)

Kindness is the noblest Weapon to conquer with.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3127. (1732)

3 Kindness is greater than law. (Jên ch'ing ta kuo wang fa.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1898. (1875)

4 Too full of the milk of human kindness.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, i, 5, 17. (1606) See under MILK.

5 Kindness in women, not their beauteous looks, Shall win my love.

SHAKESPEARE, Taming of Shrew, iv, 2.41. (1594)

And thy despised disdain too late shall find That none are fair but who are kind.

THOMAS STANLEY, The Deposition. (1651)

6 Kindness always begets kindness. (χάρις χάριν γάρ ἐστίν ἢ τίς τινος' del.)

SOPHOCLES, Ajax, l. 522. (c. 409 B.C.) A line repeated in Oedipus at Colonus. Erasmus cites it, Adagia, i, i, 34, and gives the Latin, "Gratia gratiam parit."

Kindness is produced by kindness. (Benignitate benignitas tollitur.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. ii, ch. 15, sec. 52. (c. 45 B.C.)

Thanks for one courtesy is a good usher to bring on another.

JAMES HOWELL, Letters. Bk. i, No. 9. (1645)

One Kindness is the Price of another.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3764. (1732)

ONE GOOD TURN DESERVES ANOTHER, see TURN. Kindnesses, like grain, increase by sowing.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 437. (1855)

For a kindness as small as a drop of water one should give in return a whole spring.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 366. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

7 Kindness is very indigestible. It disagrees with very proud stomachs.

THACKERAY, The Adventures of Philip. Bk. ii, ch. 6. (1862)

We hate the kindness which we understand.

H. D. THOREAU, Letter to Emerson, 12 Feb., 1843.

8 Kindness is the first of all virtues. (L'humanité est la première des vertus.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 441. (1746)

9 One can always be kind to people one cares nothing about.

OSCAR WILDE, The Picture of Dorian Gray. (1891)

10 Animosities are mortal, but the Humanities live for ever.

JOHN WILSON, Noctes Ambrosianae. No. 35. (1828)

11 Kindness out of season is the same as enmity. (ἀκαιρος εὐνοία οὐδὲν ἐχθρὰς διαφέρει.)

ZENOBIUS, Adagia, i, 50. (c. A.D. 130)

12 As kind as Cockburn; I'll break my heart to do them good.

UNKNOWN, The Weakest Goeth to the Wall Act ii, sc. 3. (1600)

As kind as a kite, all you cannot eat you'll hide.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 202. (1670)

Kind as kings upon coronation day.

DRYDEN, Hind and Panther. Pt. i, l. 271. (1678)

KING

See also Crown, Monarch, Prince, Throne

13 Our converse with kings should be either as rare or as pleasing as possible. (τοῖς βασιλεῦσι δεῖ ὡς ἥκιστα ἢ ὡς ἥδιστα ὁμιλεῖν.)

AESOP, to Solon, who had been banished by Croesus. (c. 550 B.C.) To which Solon replied, "No, indeed! Either as rare or as beneficial as possible." See PLUTARCH, Lives: Solon. Ch. 28, sec. 1.

Affect not wisdom in the presence of a king.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus). vii, 5. (c. 190 B.C.) Oosterley, tr.

When you differ in opinion from the king, you have your hands in your own blood.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. i, Apologue 31. (c. 1258)

With the King and the Inquisition, hush! (Con el Rey y con la Inquisicion, chitos!)

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 570 (1855) A Spanish proverb.

14 Sharp is the speech of a king, sharper and stronger than a two-edged sword.

AHIKAR, Teachings. Col. vii, l. 100. (c. 550 B.C.) Why should wood strive with fire, flesh with a knife, a man with a king?

AHIKAR, Teachings. Col. vii, l. 104.

Soft is the tongue of a king, but it breaks the ribs of a dragon.

AHIKAR, Teachings. Col. vii, l. 105.

15 These unhappy kings, of whom so much evil is said, have their good points sometimes. (Ces malheureux rois dont on dit tant de mal, ont du bon quelquefois.)

FRANÇOIS ANDRIEUX, Meunier de Sans Souci. (c. 1810)

1 It is the lot of a king to do well but to be ill spoken of. (βασιλικόν πράττειν μὲν εὖ, κακῶς δ' ἀκούειν.)

ANTISTHENES, to Cyrus the Younger, King of Persia. (c. 405 B.C.) This is the form of the proverb given by EPICTETUS, iv, 6, 20. DIOGENES LAERTIUS, vi, 3, gives it in slightly different form; but also credits it to Antisthenes, as does MARCUS AURELIUS, vii, 36. PLUTARCH, Sayings of Kings, 181F, credits it to Alexander the Great (c. 325 B.C.), but Alexander was probably merely quoting a proverb already well established. Carlyle saw it written in Latin on the town-hall of Zittau, Germany: "Bene facere et male audire regium est." See CARLYLE, Frederick the Great, xv, 13.

Hold proud kings in hate. (Reges odisse superbos.)

LUCILIUS, Sermones. Frag. (c. 140 B.C.) Quoted by CICERO, Ad Atticum, ii, 8; vi, 3.

The first art of kings is to be able to suffer hate. (Ars prima regni est posse invidiam pati.)

SENECA, Hercules Furens, l. 353. (c. A.D. 60) Alexander understanding that some misreported him, went not about any way to revenge it, but answered sagely, and with a Princely modestie, that it belonged to a King to doe well, and heare yll.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 75. (1574) Pettie, tr.

2 The king is a living law. (νόμον δὲ ὁ μὲν ἔμψυχος, βασιλεὺς.)

ARCHYTAS OF TARENTUM. (c. 400 B.C.) Repeated by Diotogenes and Musonius. STOBÆUS, Florilegium, xlvii, 67. PHILO, De Vita Mosis, ii, 4, added a second clause: "and the law is a just king" (τὸν δὲ νόμον βασιλεῖα δίκαιον.)

The king and the law are twins—one cannot exist without the other.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Penimim (Choice of Pearls). No. 364. (c. 1050) A version of a sentence in the Sod Hassodoth, erroneously ascribed to Aristotle: The following Greek inscription was found engraved upon a stone: "The king and the law are brothers—the one cannot exist without the other."

Laws go as kings please. (Allá van leyes do quieren Reyes.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 45. (1605) Pt. ii, ch. 37. (1615) This old proverb is said to have originated in 1085, when, in order to decide the contest between the two liturgies, Roman and Gothic, which had divided the Church of Spain for so long, Alfonso VI threw a copy of each into a fire which had been kindled and blessed for the purpose, pledging himself to adopt the one which should come out unburnt. The Gothic manuscript was successful, but the king, who favored the other, broke his word and tossed it back into the flames, thus giving rise to the proverb. There are two other Spanish forms, "Tal la ley qual al rey" (The law is as the king is), and "Nuevo rey, nueva ley" (New king, new law). The French say, "Que veult le roy ce veult la ley" (What the king wishes the law wishes), and "De nouveau seigneur nouvelle mesnie."

Tholde spoken proverbe here take place: New lordes, new lawes.

EDWARD HALL, Chronicle (1809), p. 233. (1548)

Cited by Ray and Kelly, with the Latin, "Novus Rex, nova lex." See also SCOTT, St. Ronan's Well. Ch. 14. (1824) and HARDY, Fur from the Madding Crowd. Ch. 8. (1874)

Of a new prince, new bondage.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640) Kings, that made laws, first broke them.

APHRA BEHN, The Golden Age. (1680)

Quod placuit principi legis habuit vigorem: that is, the will and pleasure of the prince had the force of law.

SAMUEL ADAMS, On Resistance to Tyranny. (1771)

3 A father may disregard an attack on his honor, but not a king.

Babylonian Talmud: Kiddushin, fo. 32b. (c. 450)

4 The world is growing weary of that most costly of all luxuries, hereditary kings.

GEORGE BANCROFT, Letter, March, 1848.

Kingship is passing down the yellow road.

DONALD EVANS, Bonfire of Kings. (c. 1915)

A modern king has become a vermiform appendix—useless when quiet, when obtrusive in danger of removal.

AUSTIN O'MALLEY, Epigram. (1932)

5 He that is to day a king to morrow shall die.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus). x, 10. (c. 190 B.C.)

6 For comonly it is said that a kyng without letter or conynge is compared to an asse crowned.

LORD BERNERS, Huon of Burdeux, 730. (c. 1534)

An unlettered king is a crowned ass.

EDWARD FREEMAN, The History of the Norman Conquest. Vol. ii, p. 277. (1868)

7 The king and his staff Be a man and a half.

R. D. BLACKMORE, Lorna Doone. Ch. 54. (1869) Cited as "an ancient saying."

8 An honest king's the noblest work of God.

EDMUND BLUNDEN, Elegy on King George V of England. (1936)

9 King Harry lov'd a man.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 327. (1605)

King Harry loves a man, I can tell yee.

SAMUEL ROWLEY, When You See Me, sig. D3. (1613)

The people bath it to this day in proverb, King Harry loved a man.

SIR ROBERT NAUNTON, Fragmenta Regalia (Arber), p. 28. (c. 1630)

These three were knighted for their valour by King Henry the Eighth (who never laid his sword on his shoulders who was not a man).

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies, iii, 263. (1662)
King Harry lov'd a man, i. e. valiant men love such as are so, hate cowards.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 100. (1670)
This was a hill in King Harry's days.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 73. (1678)
King Harry robbed the Church and died a beggar.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 354. (1678)
The reference is, of course, to Henry VIII, not to Henry V.

1
The animal known as king is by nature carnivorous. (ἀλλὰ φύσει τοῦτο τὸ ζῷον ὁ βασιλεὺς σαρκοφάγον ἐστίν.)

MARCUS CATO, Apothegm. (c. 160 B.C.) See
PLUTARCH, Lives: Marcus Cato. Ch. viii, sec. 8.
Kings are naturally lovers of low company.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech, House of Commons, 11 Feb., 1780.

We hardly know any instance of the strength and weakness of human nature so striking and so grotesque as the character of this haughty, vigilant, resolute, sagacious blue-stocking, half Mithridates and half Trissotin, bearing up against a world in arms, with an ounce of poison in one pocket and a quire of bad verses in the other.

MACAULAY, Essays: Frederick the Great. (a. 1859)

All kings is mostly rascallions.

MARK TWAIN, Huckleberry Finn. Ch. 23. (1884)

2
Better the king's leavings than the lord's bounty. (Más vale migaja de rey, que merced de señor.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 39. (1605)

The Marquis of Santillana and the Comendador Nuñez give it: "Más vale meajas del rey que zatico de caballero." The king's authority in the time of Cervantes had become paramount, and the power of the great nobles had been crushed by the policy of Ferdinand and Isabella. This proverb therefore must date from the sixteenth century

Kings chaff [chaff] is worth other men's corne.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 70. (c. 1595)
They say . . . that kings' chaff is better than other folk's corn.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 34. (1818) Scott cites the proverb again in his Familiar Letters, ii, 318.

3
Without king or rook being able to help it. (Sin poderlo remediar rey o roquè.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 25. (1615)

Alluding of course to the game of chess.

I neither put down king nor set up king. (Ni quito rey, ni pongo rey.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 60. (1615)

The words of Henry of Trastámara's page when he helped his master to get the better of Pedro the Cruel; from a ballad on the death of King Pedro.

4
The vices of kings cannot remain hid, for the splendor of their lofty station permits naught to be concealed. (Nec posse dari regalibus usquam | secretum vitiis; nam lux altissima fati | occultum nihil esse.)

CLAUDIAN, Panegyricus de Quarto Consulatu Honorii Augusti, l. 272. (A.D. 398)

Kings' misdeeds cannot be hid in clay.

SHAKESPEARE, Rape of Lucrece, l. 609. (1594)
'Tis so much to be a king, that he only is so by being so. The strange lustre that surrounds him conceals and shrouds him from us. (C'est tant estre roy, qu'il n'est que par la. Cette lueur estrangiere qui l'environne, le cache et nous le desrobbe.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 7. (1595)

Many eyes are upon the King.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 106. (1616)

In the fierce light which beats upon a throne And blackens every blot.

TENNYSON, Idylls of the King: Dedication, l. 26. (1870)

5
To be a good king is difficult.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. xiii, ch. 15. (c. 500 B.C.) Giles, tr. Confucius refers to this as a common saying, or proverb.

6
Whoever is king, is also the father of his country.

CONGREVE, Love for Love: Dedication. (1695)

FATHER OF HIS COUNTRY, see under FATHER.

7
He that eats the king's goose doth void fethers an hundred years after.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Oye. (1611)

Who eats of the king's goose will void a feather forty years later. (Qui mange de l'oy du Roy chiera une plume quarante ans après.)

SIR DUDLEY CARLTON, Letter on the Impeachment of Lord Middlesex. (1623) The French also say, "Qui mange du Pape en meurt" (He who eats what is from the Pope, dies of it).

Remember the proverb: "He that eats the king's goose shall have the feathers stick in his throat seven years after."

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons (1861), ii, 507. (1629)

He that eats the king's goose shall be choked with the feathers.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 15. (1670)

Often have I thought of that excellent old adage, He that eats the King's goose shall be choaked with his feathers.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Clarissa, iv, 243. (1748)

8
Everie one hath not the kings eare at command.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Parler. (1611)

Every man cannot come at the king.

WILLIAM ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis, 788. (1681)

9
The royal prerogative of mercy, expressed by the old adage, "The King's face gives grace."

T. H. CROKER, Note to Boswell, Johnson's letter of 20 June, 1777.

Henry VIII . . . blamed the implacability of James . . . and quoted an old proverb—A King's face should give grace.

SCOTT, Tales of a Grandfather. Ch. 26. (1827)

<sup>1</sup> Royalty is but a feather in a man's cap: let children enjoy their rattle.

OLIVER CROMWELL, when rejecting the offer of the title of king, in 1658.

What shall we do with the bauble? Take it away!

OLIVER CROMWELL, picking up the mace, when dissolving the Long Parliament, 20 April, 1653. (CARLYLE, Cromwell.)

<sup>2</sup> A King's a King, do Fortune what she can.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, The Barons' War. Bk. v, st. 36. (1596)

<sup>3</sup> Woe to thee, O land, when thy king is a child. (Vae tibi terra, cuius rex puer est.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, x, 16. (c. 250 B. C.)

That the greate wise manne well perceived, when hee sayde: Vae regno cuius rex puer est, Woe is that realme that hathe a chylde to theyr kynge.

SIR THOMAS MORE, Works (1557), p. 63/2. (c. 1513)

Woe to that land that's governed by a child!

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, ii, 3, 11. (1592)

Wo be to the kingdome whose King is a child, yet blessed is that kingdome whose King, though a child in age, is a man in worth.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: Gustavus Adolphus. (1642)

<sup>4</sup> All the kings of the earth, before God, are as grasshoppers; they are nothing, and less than nothing: both their love and their hatred is to be despised.

JONATHAN EDWARDS, Sinners in the Hands of an Angry God. Sermon preached 8 July, 1741.

If any of our countrymen wish for a king, give them Aesop's fable of the frogs who asked a king; if this does not cure them, send them to Europe. They will come back good republicans.

JEFFERSON, Letter to David Ramsay, 1787.

No race of kings has ever presented above one man of common sense in twenty generations.

JEFFERSON, Letter to Benjamin Hawkins, 1787.

There is not a crowned head in Europe, whose talents or merits would entitle him to be elected a vestryman by the people of any parish in America.

JEFFERSON, Letter to Washington. (1788)

<sup>5</sup> If the king is in the palace, nobody looks at the walls.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Nature. (1844)

Bad kings and governors help us, if only they are bad enough.

EMERSON, Progress of Culture. (1875)

<sup>6</sup> There is no fellowship inviolate, No faith is kept, when kingship is concerned. (Nulla sancta societas | nec fides regni est.)

ENNIUS, Thyestes. Frag. (c. 175 B. C.) As quoted by CICERO, De Officiis, i, 8, 26.

A king promises, but observes only when he pleases.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 292. (1855)

<sup>7</sup> That which is called firmness in a king is called obstinacy in a donkey.

THOMAS ERSKINE (?), Epigram. (c. 1800)

<sup>8</sup> And sovranty, so oft, so falsely praised, Winsome its face is, but behind the veil Is torment.

(τυραννίδος δὲ τῆς μάτην αἰνουμένης τὸ μὲν πρόσωπον ἡδύ, τὰν δόμοισι δὲ λυπηρά.)

EURIPIDES, Ion, l. 621. (c. 419 B. C.) Way, tr. On kings and captains weigheth many a care. (πόλλ' ἀνδρὶ βασιλεῖ στρατηλάτῃ μέλει.)

EURIPIDES, Iphigenia at Aulis, l. 646. (c. 410 B. C.) The ploughman hath more ease than a king.

ROBERT GREENE, Farewell to Follie. (1587)

He knows not what it is to be a king That thinks the sceptre is a pleasant thing.

ROBERT GREENE, Selimus. (1594)

To bee a king is Fames butt, and Feares quiver.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Newes from Any

Whence: Answer to the Court Newes. (1613)

What is a king? a man condemn'd to bear

The public burthen of the nation's care.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Solomon. Bk. iii, l. 275. (1718)

<sup>9</sup> Now there arose up a new king over Egypt, which knew not Joseph. (Surrexit interea rex novus super Aegyptum, qui ignorabat Ioseph.) Old Testament: Exodus, i, 8. (c. 350 B. C.)

<sup>10</sup> I like neither a devouring Stork, nor a Jupiter's log [as king].

OWEN FELTHAM, Resolves (Dent), p. 169.

(1620) In allusion to Aesop's fable of the frogs who appealed to Jupiter for a king, and, dissatisfied with the log Jupiter gave them, found it replaced by a stork.

If you despise King Log, you shall fear King Crane.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2749. (1732)

<sup>11</sup> Kings are out of play.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 70. (c. 1595)

Cited by KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 225 (1721), with the comment, "It is not right, in subjects, to jest upon kings."

<sup>12</sup> Kings and Bares oft worries their keepers.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 70. (c. 1595)

Kings are kittle cattle to shoe behind.

SCOTT, Heart of Midlothian. Ch. 38. (1818)

<sup>13</sup> Where nothing is, the king looseth his right. (Doue ci è nulla, il Re perde il suo dritto.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruits, fo. 29. (1578)

The French say, "La où il n'y a que prendre, le roi perd son droit," or "Le roi perd sa rente où il n'y a rien à prendre" (The king loses his rent where there is nothing to take).

Where there is nothing to be had, even the King of France must lose his right.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5677. (1732)

<sup>1</sup> Such is our good pleasure. (Tel est nôtre bon plaisir.)

FRANÇOIS I OF FRANCE. (c. 1515) His form of assent, and the formula by which his successors indicated their approval of legislative enactments. See SULLY, Mémoires. "Le Roi le veut" (The King wills it), is the formula of royal assent as signified by the British king to the parliament.

<sup>2</sup> Mad Kings and mad Bulls are not to be held by treaties and packthread.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1746

<sup>3</sup> Good Kings never make War, but for the sake of Peace.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1715. (1732)

<sup>4</sup> Kings judge the world, but the wise judge kings.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Pennim (Choice of Pearls). No. 25. (c. 1050)

A king may be compared to a fire: too far, we feel its want; too near, we scorch.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Pennim. No. 366. Ali's Sayings, Appendix, p. 85. Has: "The dainties of kings scorch the lips."

<sup>5</sup> The sun has set; no night has followed. (Sol occubuit; nox nulla secuta est.)

GIRALDUS DE BARRI, in 1189, referring to the death of Henry II, and the accession of Richard I, Coeur-de-Lion, to the English throne.

I had already begun to think that the lawyers for once talked sense, when they said the King never dies. He [George II] probably got his death . . . by viewing the troops.

HORACE WALPOLE, Letters, 25 Oct., 1760.

Rex nunquam moritur. The king never dies.

SIR WILLIAM BLACKSTONE, Commentaries on the Laws of England. Bk. iv, p. 249. (1769)

The last fiery segment had disappeared beneath the purple horizon, and all was over. "The King is dead . . . the King is dead! Long live the King!" And up from the sea rose the young monarch of a new day.

LORD DUFFERIN, Letters from High Latitudes, p. 116. (1859)

The death of Louis XIV was announced by the captain of the body-guard from a window of the state apartment. Raising his truncheon above his head, he broke it in the centre, and throwing the pieces among the crowd, exclaimed in a loud voice, "Le Roi est mort!" Then seizing another staff, he flourished it in the air as he shouted, "Vive le Roi!"

JULIA PARDOE, Life of Louis XIV. Vol. iii, 457. (a. 1862) "Le Roi est mort. Vive le Roi!" was first used on the death of Charles VII, in 1461, and last on that of Louis XVIII, in 1824.

"It is true," said Lord Lyndhurst, "that the king never dies. . . . The sovereign always exists; the person only is changed."

H. BROOM, Legal Maxims, p. 36. (1911)

For Tom the Second reigns like Tom the First.
DRYDEN, To Mr. Congreve, l. 48. (a. 1700)

<sup>6</sup> King's words may not offend.

ROBERT GREENE, Orpharion. (1589)

<sup>7</sup> A certaine king used to say, that hee was like a Plane tree, under whose boughes, while the weather is foule, many shroude themselves, but when fayre weather commeth, they pull it uppe by the rootes.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 199. (1574) Pettie, tr.

<sup>8</sup> The king must wait while his beer's drawing.
W. C. HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 375. (1869)
They do say as the Queen must wait while her beer's a-drawin'.

QUILLER-BOUCH, Troy Town. Ch. 19. (1888)

<sup>9</sup> Love and the Graces evermore do wait
Upon the man that is a Potentate.

ROBERT HERRICK, Potentates. (1648)

This axiom I have often heard,
Kings ought to be more lov'd, than fear'd.

ROBERT HERRICK, Love

<sup>10</sup> Mightier is a king, when he is wroth at a baser man. (κρείσσων γὰρ βασιλεὺς, ὅτε χῶσεται ἀνδρὶ χερσὶ.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. i, l. 80. (c. 850 B.C.)

The wrath of a king is as messengers of death (Indignatio regis, nuncii mortis.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xvi, 14. (c. 350 B.C.)

Grievous ever is the wrath of kings. (Gravis ira regum est semper.)

SENECA, Medea, l. 494. (c. A.D. 60)

Beware! for dreadful is the wrath of Kings

POPE, tr., The Iliad. Bk. ii, l. 234. (1715)

<sup>11</sup> It is not good that many lords should rule,
let there be one lord, one king. (οὐκ ἀγαθὸν πολυκοιρανίῃ· εἰς κοίρανος ἔστω, | εἰς βασιλεὺς.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. ii, l. 205. (c. 850 B.C.)

<sup>12</sup> Proud is the heart of kings, fostered of heaven, for their honor is from God. (θυμὸς δὲ μέγας ἐστὶ διωτρεφέων βασιλῶν. | τιμὴ δ' ἐκ Διὸς ἐστ.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. ii, l. 196. (c. 850 B.C.)

Kings are from God. (δὲ Διὸς βασιλῆες.)

UNKNOWN, Homeric Hymns: To the Muses l. 4. (c. 600 B.C.)

Kings are made by God, and laws divine.

They give an account of their actions to God only.

SIR WALTER RALEGH, History of the World Bk. ii, ch. 4. (1614)

The power of kings (if rightly understood)
Is but a grant from Heaven of doing good.

WILLIAM SOMERVILLE, Fables. No. 12. (1727)

Unto my flock I daily preach'd

Kings are by God appointed,

And damn'd are those who dare resist,

Or touch the Lord's anointed.

UNKNOWN, The Vicar of Bray. (1734)

May you, may Cam and Isis, preach it long!
"The right divine of Kings to govern wrong!"

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. iv, l. 187. (1742) Although Pope encloses the last line in quotation marks, it is probably his. Cam and Isis, the universities of Cambridge and Oxford.

The Prussian kings hold their crown, not by the gift of the people, but by the grace of God.

OTTO VON BISMARCK, Speech, in the Prussian Reichstag, 1847.

Divine right of kings means the divine right of anyone who can get uppermost.

HERBERT SPENCER, Social Statics. Pt. ii, ch. 6, sec. 3. (1851)

<sup>1</sup> He is both a noble king and a mighty warrior.
(ἀμφοτέρων βασιλεύς τ' ἀγαθὸς κρατερὸς τ' αἰχμητής.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. iii, l. 179. (c. 850 B.C.) Of Agamemnon. This was the favorite line of Alexander the Great, who always carried the Iliad and the Odyssey with him. See PLUTARCH, Moralia, 331C. Quoted by XENOPHON, Memorabilia, iii, 2, 2, who wonders what reason Homer had for praising Agamemnon for qualities he did not possess.

<sup>2</sup> It is no bad thing to be a king. (οὐ μὲν γάρ τι κακὸν βασιλεύμεν.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. i, l. 392. (c. 850 B.C.)

King David and King Solomon

Led merry, merry lives,

With many, many lady friends,

And many, many wives;

But when old age crept over them,

With many, many qualms,

King Solomon wrote the Proverbs

And King David wrote the Psalms.

JAMES BALL NAYLOR, David and Solomon. (c. 1925)

<sup>3</sup> You'll be king if you do right. (Rex eris si recte facies.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 1, l. 59. (20 B.C.)

Horace says that boys at play cry this, and the Scholiast gives the verse thus: "He who does right will be king; he who doesn't, won't be" (Rex erit qui recte faciet; qui non faciet, non erit).

He who acts rightly, not he who holds sway, will be a king. (Qui recte faciet, non qui dominatur, erit rex.)

AUSONIUS, Technopaegnon, vii, 3. (C.A.D. 390)

<sup>4</sup> Presently the kingly pile will leave but few acres to the plough. (Iam pauca aratro iugera regiae | moles relinquunt.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 15, l. 1. (23 B.C.)

When kings are building, draymen have something to do. (Wenn die Könige bau'n, haben die Kärner zu thun.)

SCHILLER, Kant und Seine Ausleger. (a. 1805)

<sup>5</sup> The King's cheese goes half away in parings; viz. among so many Officers.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 1. (1659)

Whence grew the proverb, that the King's cheese goes away three parts in parings?

HOWELL, The Parley of Beasts, p. 19. (1660)

It is impossible for the King to have things done as cheap as other men.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 21 July, 1662.

The King's cheese goes away half in parings. . . .

The courts of princes . . . are seldom free from pilferers . . . in places of trust.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 299. (1709)

The king's cheese is half wasted in parings; but no matter, 'tis made of the people's milk.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1735.

<sup>6</sup> To love the king is not bad, but to be loved by the king is better.

F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 122. (1902)
A West African proverb.

<sup>7</sup> It is the misfortune of kings that they will not hear the truth.

JOHANN JACOBY, to King Friedrich Wilhelm IV of Prussia, 2 Nov., 1848.

<sup>8</sup> Though good faith should be banished from the rest of the world, it should be found in the mouths of kings. (Si la bonne foi était bannie du reste du monde, il faudrait qu'on la trouvât dans la bouche des rois.)

JEAN II OF FRANCE, speaking to his council. (c. 1275) See his life in Biographie Universelle. L'Esprit dans l'Histoire, p. 113, attributes much the same phrase to François I, "If fidelity were lost, it should be found in the heart of a king."

A king's word should be a king's bonde.

UNKNOWN, Lancelot of the Laik, l. 1673. (c. 1500)

It is a comyn prouerbe. Verbum regis stet oporet, A kynges worde must stand.

BISHOP JOHN FISHER, English Works (E.E.T.S.), p. 230. (1509)

The king's word is more than another man's oath.

PRINCESS ELIZABETH, in ELLIS, Original Letters. Ser. ii, p. 255. (1554) Cited as "this olde saynge."

Ye should be a king of your word.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 112. (c. 1595)

<sup>9</sup> Few indeed are the kings who go down to Ceres' son-in-law [Pluto] save by sword and slaughter. (Ad generum Cereris sine caede ac vulnere pauci | descendunt reges.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. x, l. 112. (C.A.D. 120)

For God's sake, let us sit upon the ground

And tell sad stories of the death of kings:

How some have been depos'd, some slain in war;

Some haunted by the ghosts they have depos'd;

Some poison'd by their wives, some sleeping kill'd:

All murder'd.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, iii, 2, 155. (1595)

It is one of the incidents of my profession.

UMBERTO I OF ITALY, after escaping assassination. (c. 1885) Sometimes quoted: "Assassination is the perquisite of kings." In 1900 an assassin got him.

An accident of my trade.

ALFONSO XIII OF SPAIN, to his English bride, as a bomb was hurled at their carriage on their wedding day, 31 May, 1906. Alfonso, however, died in his bed.

1 I would not call the king my cousin. Had I such a thing, . . . I would think myself so happy, that I would flatter no body.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 225. (1721) There's the way it is wid women. When they get a daughter marrit, no matter to who, they'll be that proud, . . . that they wouldn't call the King their cousin.

K. F. PURDON, Folk of Furry Farm. Ch.1. (1914)

2 The King may come to Kelly yet, and when he comes he'll ride.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 323. (1721) The King's errand may come the cadger's [beggar] gate [way] yet. A great man may want a mean man's service.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 311. Would to God the King's errand might lie in the cadger's gate.

WALTER SCOTT, Journal, 22 Feb., 1826.

See also GREAT AND SMALL.

3 A king must not punish in the heat of passion.

KHATI I, KING OF EGYPT, Teaching. No. vii. (c. 2500 B. C.) Budge, tr.

4 One king maintains the reputation of another.

KHATI I, KING OF EGYPT, Teaching. No. xxvi. Kings have most need to guard the life of kings. (Regi tuenda maxime regum est salus.)

SENECA, Oedipus, l. 242. (C. A. D. 60)

5 When the King speaks, every one else should be silent.

FRANZ LISZT, Remark, as he had suddenly stopped playing before the Russian Emperor, when Alexander began whispering to the persons sitting near him. (c. 1856)

6 A king of France dies, but ought never to be ill.

LOUIS XVIII, when urged on account of illness not to hold his usual reception to celebrate the anniversary of St. Louis, 25 August, 1824.

A KING SHOULD DIE STANDING, see under DEATH.

7 A king is known better by his courage, than his crowne.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 190 (1579)

8 Hiest in Court, nixt the weddie [gallows].

SIR DAVID LYNDESAY, The Complaint of Babsche, l. 151. (c. 1536)

Nearest the king, nearest the widdie.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 252. (1678)

9 The kingliest kings are crowned with thorn.

GERALD MASSEY, The Kingliest Kings. (c. 1883) See also under CROWN

10 [She] was more royalist than the king.

H. S. MERRIMAN, The Last Hope, Ch.35. (1904)

11 Under kings women govern, but under queens, men.

J. S. MILL, The Subjection of Women. Ch. 3. (1869) Quoted as "a bad joke."

12 Kings most commonly, though strong in legions, are but weak in arguments.

MILTON, Tenure of Kings and Magistrates. (1649)

13 The virtue of kings seems to consist chiefly in justice. (La vertu royale semble consister le plus en la justice.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 6. (1595)

The king-becoming graces, As justice, verity, temperance, stableness, Bounty, perseverance, mercy, lowliness, Devotion, patience, courage, fortitude.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, iv, 3, 91. (1606)

14 Unless either philosophers become kings in our states, or those whom we now call kings and rulers take to the pursuit of philosophy seriously, . . . there can be no cessation of troubles for our states, nor, I fancy, for the human race either. (ἐὰν μὴ ἢ οἱ φιλόσοφοι βασιλεύσωσιν ἐν ταῖς πόλεσιν ἢ οἱ βασιλεῖς τε νῦν λεγόμενοι καὶ δυνάσται φιλοσοφῶσιν γενναίως . . . οὐκ ἔστι κακῶν παῦλα ταῖς πόλεσι, δοκῶ δ' οὐδὲ τῷ ἀνθρωπίνῳ γένει.)

PLATO, The Republic. Bk. v, sec. 473D. (c. 375 B. C.) Perhaps the most famous sentence in Plato. He touches upon the same idea in Laws, 711D, 712A, and 713E, and it is paraphrased by the author of the seventh Epistle, 324B, 326A-B, 328 A-B. It is implied in Phaedrus, 252E (φιλόσοφος καὶ ἡγεμονικός), and in Politics, 293C. It has attracted the attention of scores of writers from POLYBIUS, xii, 28, to Bernard Shaw. It was the favorite maxim of Marcus Aurelius, who was himself the most famous example of a philosophic king, though Constantine, James I, Frederick the Great and Napoleon always liked to regard themselves as philosophers. Only a few of its many paraphrases and parodies can be quoted here.

And Plato, that foremost of men in genius and learning, thought that states would only be prosperous when learned and wise men began to rule them, or when those who ruled them devoted all their mental energies to learning and wisdom.

CICERO, Ad Quintum Fratrem. Bk. i, epis. i. sec. 29. (60 B. C.)

Thou didst decree that sentence by the mouth of Plato: That commonwealths should be happy, if either the students of wisdom did govern them, or those which were appointed to govern them would give themselves to the study of wisdom. (Beatas fore res publicas, si eas uel studiosi sapientiae regerent uel earum rectores studere sapientiam contigisset.)

BOETHIUS, Philosophiae Consolationis. Bk. i, ch. 4, l. 20. (A. D. 524) It was Boethius who passed Plato's thought on to the Middle Ages.

That which Plato saith, That those common-wealths are happy whose rulers philosophate, and whose philosophers rule. (Ce que dict Platon, que lors les republiques seroient heureuses, quand les roys philosopheroient ou les philosophes regneroient.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 45. (1534)
Plato's remark about when philosophers would be Kings and Kings philosophers this world would be better off.

MABEL DODGE LUHAN, Movers and Shakers, p. 326. (1936)

<sup>1</sup> The more regal king of kings. (Regum rex regaliior.)

PLAUTUS, Captivi, l. 825. (c. 200 B.C.)
Mightiest of mighty kings. (Magnorum maxime regum.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 3, l. 136. (35 B.C.) In Epistles, i, 1, 107, Horace has, "Rex denique regum" (King of Kings). The Greek is, βασιλεὺς βασιλέων.

<sup>2</sup> The heart of kings is unsearchable. (Cor regum inscrutabile.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxv, 3. (c. 250 B.C.)

<sup>3</sup> It is more kingly to enrich than to be rich. (τοῦ πλουτεῖν τὸ πλουτίζειν εἶναι βασιλικώτερον.)

PTOLEMY SOTER, KING OF EGYPT, Maxim. (c. 290 B.C.)

<sup>4</sup> I do not wish to be a king because that is to be tempted to cruelty. (Rex esse nolim ut esse crudelis velim.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 635. (c. 43 B.C.)

<sup>5</sup> It is my Lord the King of three patches. (C'est monsieur du Roy de troys cuittes.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. ii, ch. 31. (1532)
We are all made of patches. (Nous sommes tous de lopins.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 1. (1580)

A king of shreds and patches.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 4, 102. (1600)

The theory of the world is a thing of shreds and patches.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Plato. (1850)
Man is, . . . a thing of shreds and patches.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Beauty. (1860)

A wandering minstrel I,—

A thing of shreds and patches.

W. S. GILBERT, The Mikado. Act i. (1885)

<sup>6</sup> A king's favour is no inheritance.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 163. (1678)

<sup>7</sup> The service of a king is like a sea-voyage, at once profitable and fraught with peril.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. i, Apologue 16. (c. 1258)

<sup>8</sup> It is less disgraceful for a king to be vanquished in war than to be outdone in gratitude. (Regem armis quam munificentia vinci minus flagitiosum est.)

SALLUST, Bellum Jugurthinum. Ch. 110. (c. 40 B.C.)

<sup>9</sup> God save the king. (Vivat rex.)

Old Testament: 1 Samuel, x, 24. (c. 600 B.C.)

God save our gracious king.

HENRY CAREY (?), God Save the King. The authorship of the English National Anthem is uncertain. Carey is said to have been heard to sing it as his own composition in 1740. See The Gentleman's Magazine, ii, 1075 (1796). But there is some evidence that the music was composed by Dr. John Bull, organist of Antwerp Cathedral about 1622, and of course nothing could be more fitting! It was also claimed by James Oswald, chamber composer to George II (1742). The earliest version known appeared in Harmonia Anglicana in 1742, and the three verses usually sung in The Gentleman's Magazine, Oct., 1745, beginning, "God save great George our King." The words have often been altered.

Now let us sing long live the King.

WILLIAM COWPER, John Gilpin. St. 63. (1782)

He so far compromised his loyalty, as to announce merely "The King," as his first toast. . . . Our guest made a motion with his glass so as to pass it over the water-decanter . . . and added, "Over the water."

WALTER SCOTT, Redgauntlet. Let. 5. "The king over the water," i. e. the representative of the exiled Stuart dynasty.

O Richard! O my king, the universe forsakes thee!
(O Richard! O mon roy, l'univers t'abandonne!)

MICHEL JEAN SEDAINE, Richard Cœur-de-Lion: Blondel's Song. Sung at a dinner given at Versailles, 1 Oct., 1789, by the King and Marie Antoinette. See CARLYLE, French Revolution. Pt. i, bk. vii, ch. 2.

<sup>10</sup> The King can do no wrong, that is no Process can be granted against him.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk (Arber), p. 61. (a. 1654) The legal maxim is, "Rex non potest peccare."

Goldsmith disputed against the well-known maxim of the British constitution, 'the King can do no wrong.'

JAMES BOSWELL, Life of Johnson, 6 July, 1763. The king can do no wrong. . . . The prerogative of the crown extends not to do any injury: it is created for the benefit of the people, and therefore cannot be exerted to their prejudice.

SIR WILLIAM BLACKSTONE, Commentaries on the Lawes of England, i, vii, 246. (1765) In bk. iii. ch. 17, Blackstone adds, "That the king can do no wrong is a necessary and fundamental principle of the English constitution."

The doctrine inculcated by our laws, That the king can do no wrong, is admitted without reluctance.

JUNIUS, Letters. No. 35, 19 Dec., 1769.

The king can do no wrong; he cannot constitutionally be supposed capable of injustice.

MR. JUSTICE NICOLL, Judgment, in the case of the goods of King George III. (1822)

The King can do no wrong, but he may be misguided.

E. M. SNEYD-KYNNERSLEY, H.M.I. Ch. 19. (1908)

The Emperor can do no wrong and therefore cannot be forgiven.

SHAW, Androcles and the Lion. Act ii. (1912)

1 Never King dropped out of the clouds.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Power. (a. 1654)

A King is a thing men have made for their own sakes, for quietness sake.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: King.

Kings are not born: they are made by universal hallucination.

SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists. (1903)

2 He who knew the weight of a sceptre, would never deign to pick it up, when he found it lying on the ground. (Qui sçauroit le poids d'un sceptre, ne daigneroit l'amasser, quand il le trouveroit à terre.)

SELEUCUS I, King of Babylonia. (c. B. C. 300)

As quoted by MONTAIGNE, i, 42.

It is something to hold the scepter with a firm hand. (Est aliquid valida sceptrum tenere manu.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 480. (c. 1 B. C.)

Stolen sceptres are held in anxious hands. (Rapta sed trepidu manu | sceptrum obtinentur.)

SENECA, Hercules Furens, l. 341. (c. A. D. 60)

A sceptre is one thing, and a ladle another.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 547. (1640)

After the Latin, "Alia res sceptrum, alia plectrum." Cited also by Ray and Fuller.

3 The halls of kings are full of men, but void of friends. (Atria regum hominibus plena sunt, amicis vacua.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. (c. A. D. 64)

The fortune which made you a king, forbade you to have a friend. It is a law of nature, which cannot be violated with impunity.

JUNIUS, Letters. Letter 35, 19 Dec., 1769.

4 It is mercy that makes the distinction between a king and a tyrant. (Clementia efficit, ut magnum inter regem tyrannumque discrimen sit.)

SENECA, De Clementia. Bk. i, ch. 12, sec. 3. (c. A. D. 55)

5 [He] made the proverb true—One must be born either a Pharaoh or a fool. (Aut regem aut fatuum nasci oportere.)

SENECA(?), Ludus de Morte Claudii. Sec. 1. (c. A. D. 55)

6 Scratch a king and find a fool!

DOROTHY PARKER, Salome's Dancing Lesson. (1936)

7 A king is he who has no fear; a king is he who desires naught. (Rex est qui metuit nihil; Rex est qui cupiet nihil.)

SENECA, Thyestes, l. 388. (c. A. D. 60)

The true king is one whom all good men can praise without compunction, not only during his life but even afterwards. (ὁ χρηστός βασιλεὺς, ὃν οἱ ἀγαθοὶ ἄνθρωποι οὐκ αἰσχύνοινται ἐπαινοῦντες οὐτὲ τὸν παρόντα χρόνον οὐτὲ τὸν ὑστερόν.)

DIO CHRYSOSTOM, First Discourse on Kingship. Sec. 33. (c. A. D. 98)

He is a good king that preserves his people.

HORACE WALPOLE, Letter to William Mason, 4 July, 1778.

8 Every king is subject to a mightier one. (Omne sub regno graviore regnum est.)

SENECA, Thyestes, l. 612. (c. A. D. 60)

Ne'er to that king may states allegiance own Who bows not humbly at th' Almighty's throne.

SADI, Gulistan, viii, 19. (c. 1258)

9 To prefer his country to his children becomes a king. (Praeferre patriam liberis regi decet.)

SENECA, Troades, l. 332. (c. A. D. 60)

10 Ay, every inch a king.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, iv, 6, 109. (1605)

A king so good, so just, so great, That at his birth the heavenly council paused And then at last cried out, This is a man!

DRYDEN, The Duke of Guise. Act i, sc. 1. (1682)

11 He who slays a king and he who dies for him are alike idolaters.

SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists. (1903)

Vulgarity in a king flatters the majority of the nation.

BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists.

12 'Tis hard for monarchs to show piety. (τόν τοι τύραννον εὐσεβεῖν οὐ ῥάδιον.)

SOPHOCLES, Ajax, l. 1350. (c. 409 B. C.)

It is impossible to reign innocently. (On ne peut régner innocemment.)

ANTOINE SAINT-JUST, beginning his speech on the sentence of Louis XVI. (1792)

13 Kings are wise through converse with the wise. (σοφοὶ τύραννοι τῶν σοφῶν συνουσίᾳ.)

SOPHOCLES, The Locrian Ajax. (c. 409 B. C.)

Quoted by PLATO, Theages, 125B, who attributes the line to EURIPIDES, as he does also in The Republic, 568A, but it appears really to belong to Sophocles. See EDMONDS, Lyra Graeca, ii, 183.

Kings need wise men more than wise men need kings.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. viii, Maxim 6. (c. 1258)

14 Whoever comes to traffic with a king Is slave to him, however free he come.

(δοῖς δὲ πρὸς τύραννον ἐμπορεύεται, κείνου 'στὶ δοῦλος, κὰν ἐλεύθερος μὲλῃ.)

SOCRATES. Frag. 789, Nauck. (c. 450 B. C.)

Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 33D, 204E, Life of Pompey, ch. 78. APPIAN, Civil Wars, ii, 84, and DIO CASSIUS, xlii, 4, state that these lines were quoted by Pompey shortly before his death, when he was slain by order of the king's counsellors.

Whoever prefers the service of princes before his duty to his Creator, will be sure, early or late, to repent in vain.

BIDPAI, Fables: The Prince and His Ministers. (c. 300 B. C.)

Put not your trust in kings. (Fidite ne regnis.)

AUSONIUS, Epitaphs. No. xxv, l. 5. (c. A. D. 385)

Take heed not to trust yourself to the current of a river, the claws of a tiger, or the promises of a king.

UNKNOWN, Niti Sastras (Moral Stanzas). (c. 1250)

Ah! vainest of all things
Is the gratitude of kings.

H. W. LONGFELLOW, Belisarius. St. 8. (1875)

<sup>1</sup>
Kinquering Congs their titles take.

WILLIAM A. SPOONER, Warden of New College, Oxford, announcing the hymn, "Conquering Kings their titles take," in 1879. Hence, "spoonerism," or accidental transposition of the initial sounds of words. Most of the famous ones are inventions.

<sup>2</sup>
The king goes as far as he may, not as far as he would. (Va el rey do puede, no do quiere.)

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 43. (1853)

<sup>3</sup>
The prince who does not love his people may be a great man, but he cannot be a great king. (Le prince qui n'aime point son peuple peut être un grand homme, mais il ne peut être un grand roi.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 376. (1746)

<sup>4</sup>
He too was a king, yet he could not ward off death. (Rex idem, . . . | sed non . . . potuit depellere pestem.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. ix, l. 327. (19 B.C.)

But methought it lessened my esteem of a king, that he should not be able to command the rain.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 19 July, 1662. KING SAID GO, WIND SAID STAY, see under WIND

<sup>5</sup>
The first king was a successful soldier. (Le premier qui fut roi fut un soldat heureux.)

VOLTAIRE, Méropé. Act i, sc. 3. (1734)

What can they see in the longest kingly line in Europe, save that it runs back to a successful soldier.

WALTER SCOTT, Woodstock. Ch. 37. (1826)

King is Kön-ning. Kan-ning, Man that knows or cans.

THOMAS CARLYLE, On Heroes and Hero-Worship: The Hero as Divinity. (1840)

<sup>6</sup>
There is a quadrobular saying, which passes current in the Western World, That the Emperour [of Germany] is King of Kings, the Spaniard, King of Men, the French, King of Asses, the King of England, King of Devils.

NATHANIEL WARD, The Simple Cobler of Aggawam, p. 51. (1647)

The King of England is the king of devils.

THOMAS FULLER, History of the Worthies of England, i, 118. (1662)

<sup>7</sup>
I never heard of a king being drowned. Make haste, loose your cables, you will see the elements join to obey me.

WILLIAM RUFUS, in 1099. See FREEMAN, Life of William Rufus, ii, 284

Name me an emperor who was ever struck by a cannonball.

CHARLES V. OF SPAIN, when urged not to expose himself at the battle of Pavia, 1525.

<sup>8</sup>
A king is not king by reigning, but by ruling according to law. (Non a regnando rex est, sed iure regendo.)

THOMAS WRIGHT, ed., Political Poems and Songs, i, 57. (c. 1500)

The king reigns but does not govern. (Rex regnat sed non gubernat.)

JAN ZAMOISKA, Speech, at the Diet of 1605, referring to King Sigismund III.

She governed but she did not reign. (Elle gouvernait, mais elle ne régnait pas.)

CHARLES HÉNAULT, Mémoires, p. 161. (c. 1770)

Referring to Madame des Ursins, favorite of Philip V of Spain.

The king reigns but does not govern. (Le roi régne, il ne gouverne pas.)

LOUIS ADOLPHE THIERS, Editorial, in Le National, Paris, 18 Jan., 1830. In a debate in the Reichstag, 24 Jan., 1882, Bismarck quoted this in order to deny its application to Germany.

He reigns but does not govern.

BISHOP WILLIAM STUBBS, Constitutional History of England. Bk. i, ch. 2, p. 36. (1874)

Of the English king. "The phrase, 'The king reigns but does not govern' was first used by French writers, and is intended to characterize those monarchies in which the action of the sovereign, as in England, is mainly confined to the selection of responsible ministers."—O.E.D.

They are not kings who sit on thrones, but they who know how to govern.

R. W. EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Eloquence. (1870)

<sup>9</sup>
A king is a king though fortune do her worst.

UNKNOWN, The Troublesome Raigne of King John. Pt. ii, l. 106. (1591)

Queen Ann departed out this life,
King James the First, his loving wife,
Of whom it hath a proverb been,
A hunting King, a dancing Queen.

UNKNOWN. A rhyme dating from the death of Queen Anne, 23 April, 1619.

II—Kings: Their Eyes and Hands

<sup>10</sup>
An nescis longas regibus esse manus? (Know you not that kings have far-reaching hands?)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. xvii, l. 166. (c. 10 B.C.)

Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, ii, 3, who contracts it to the proverbial form, "Longae regum manus." Included by TAVERNER in his Translations from Erasmus, fo. 4, with the comment, "They can brynge in men, they can plucke in thynges, though they be a great waye of."

Knowest not that Princes hands will reach a great way off?

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 199. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Kings have long armes and rulers large reches.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 77. (1579)
Great men have reaching hands.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, iv, 7, 87. (1590)
Gentle poddocks [frogs] has long toes. Spoken to dissuade you from provoking persons of power and interest, because they can reach you, though at a distance.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 114. (1721)
Kings have long arms.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richards' Almanack, 1742.
They say kings have long hands—I think they have as much occasion for long memories.

WALTER SCOTT, Peveril of the Peak. Ch. 45. (1823) The French say, "Les rois ont les mains longues"; the Germans, "Fürsten haben lange Hände und viele Ohren" (Princes have long hands and many ears), or "Herrenhand reicht in alle Land." (The ruler's hand reaches to all lands).

1 The king has many ears and many eyes.
(πολλὰ μὲν βασιλέως ὦτα, πολλοὶ δ' ὀφθαλμοί.)

XENOPHON, Cyropaedia. Bk. viii, ch. 2, sec. 12. (c. 370 B. C.) Xenophon is explaining how Cyrus set up a wide circle of spies by bestowing gifts and honors, until his people everywhere feared to say anything to his discredit.

Kings have many ears and eyes. (ὦτα καὶ ὀφθαλμοὶ πολλοὶ βασιλέως.)

LUCIAN, Adversus Indoctum. Sec. 23. (c. A. D. 170) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, 2, 2, with the Latin, "Multae regum aures atque oculi."

Kings hes long ears.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 70. (c. 1595) Another Scottish form is, "Kings hae long lugs."

The number of spies and emissaries employed by Midas, king of Phrygia, who was a cruel tyrant, gave occasion to the fable of that prince's having ass's ears.

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs, i, 35. (1814)

III—King and Beggar

2 A Countryman may be as warm in Kersey, as a King in Velvet.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 55. (1732)
A country man may be as warm in fustian as a king in velvet.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman. Ch. 2. (1869)

3 There is no king but is descended of slaves, nor slave, but commeth of kings.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 177. (1574) Pettie, tr.

There's legions now of beggars on the earth,
That their original did come from kings:
And many monarchs now whose fathers were
The riff-raff of their age.

W. S., Thomas Lord Cromwell. Act i, sc. 2. (1602) Shakespeare Apocrypha.

We have a saying, Every beggar is descended from some king, and every king is descended from some beggar.

THOMAS FULLER, Infants Advocate, in Collected Sermons (1891), ii, 222. (a. 1659)

4 I had rather be a beggar and spend my last dollar like a king, than be a king and spend my money like a beggar.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Liberty of Man, Woman and Child. (1877) THE KING'S BUT A BEGGAR AFTER THE PLAY, see under ACTING.

5 A beggar free from care is richer than a troubled king.

SADI, Bustan. Ch. vi, Apologue 8. (c. 1257)
When man makes up his load this world to leave,
The beggar finds less cause than kings to grieve.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. ii, Maxim 47. (c. 1258)
A beggar whose end is blest is better than a king who dies miserably.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. viii, Maxim 92.
The king is the least independent man in his dominions; the beggar the most so.

J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth. (1827)

IV—King and Subject

6 The King's wight has the King's right.

Babylonian Talmud: Shebuoth, fo. 47a. (c. 450)
Minions too great argue a king too weak.

SAMUEL DANIEL, The History of the Civil War Bk. i, st. 38. (1595)

7 Titles are shadows, crowns are empty things.
The good of subjects is the end of kings.

DANIEL DEFOE, The True-born Englishman. Pt ii, l. 315. (1700)

8 Every citizen is king under a citizen king.
(Tout citoyen est roi sous un roi citoyen.)

CHARLES FAVART, Les Trois Sultanes. Act ii, sc 3. (c. 1760)

Every man is born a king, and most people die in exile.

OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance. Act iii. (1893)

Every man a king.

HUEY LONG, Slogan, of his Share-the-Wealth campaign, 1933. He is said to have taken the slogan from W. J. Bryan's cross of gold speech, before the Democratic National Convention, in 1896.

9 He that is hated of his subjects cannot be counted a king.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 44. (c. 1595)
He that is hated o' his subjects, canna be a king

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 240. (1678)

10 A bad King but a good Subject.

W. S. GILBERT, Utopia, Limited. Act i. (1893)

11 Whatever folly the kings commit, the Achaeans pay the penalty. (Quidquid delirant reges plectuntur Achivi.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 2, l. 14. (20 B. C.)
Always the little folk suffer for the follies of the great. (De tout temps | Les petits ont pâti des sottises des grands.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: Les Deux Taureaux et Une Grenouille. Bk. ii, fab. 4. (1668)

Sichem marries the wife (viz. Dinah) and Mifgaeus is circumcized (i. e. punished). Delirant reges plectuntur Achivi.

JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 398. (1678)
COHEN, Ancient Jewish Proverbs, p. 98, explains that this is a Palestinian proverb based on the incident narrated in Genesis, xxxiv, the defiling of Dinah by Shechem.

The prosperity of bad kings is fatal to their subjects. (Les prospérités des mauvais rois sont fatales aux peuples.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 23. (1746)

Still as of old, "what devilry soever Kings do, the Greeks must pay the piper."

THOMAS CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. ii, ch. 8. (1834)

The master sins, the peasant atones. (Der Herren Sünd', der Bauern Buss'.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 325. (1856) A German proverb.

The old proverb, Delirant reges, plectuntur Achivi, requires to be amended in the light of recent events. It should run Delirant Achivi, plectuntur reges, Nations go mad, and make scapegoats of their rulers.

DEAN W. R. INGE, in Times (London), 3 Sept., 1928, p. 11/1.

When the king makes a mistake, all the people suffer.

H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs, No. 5. (1937)

1 Habit robs kings of all shame; the subjects' yoke is lightest where their king is new. (Nil pudet adseutos sceptris; mitissima sors est | regnorum sub rege novo.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. viii, l. 452. (c. A. D. 60)

2 Kings are called "shepherds of their people" as a term of highest honor. (ποιμένες λαών.)

PHILO, De Vita Moysis. Bk. i, sec. 61. (c. A. D. 40)

The king will show that he belongs to the state, not the state to him. (Probavit non rem publicam suam esse, sed se rei publicae.)

SENECA, De Clementia. Bk. i, ch. 19, sec. 8. (A. D.

55) The legal maxim is, "Rex datur propter regnum, non regnum propter regem" (Kings exist for the sake of the kingdom, not the kingdom for the sake of the king).

Kings are but guardians, who the poor should keep;

Though this world's good wait on their diadem.

Not for the shepherd's welfare are the sheep:

The shepherd rather is for pasturing them.

SADI, Gulistan, i, 28. (c. 1258)

A good king is a public servant.

BEN JONSON, Explorata. (1636)

Happy when both to the same centre move,

When kings give liberty and subjects love.

SIR JOHN DENHAM, Cooper's Hill, l. 333. (1642)

Who knows not that the king is the name of a dignity and office, not of person.

JOHN MILTON, Tenure of Kings and Magistrates. (1649)

The subject's love is the king's life-guard.

NATHAN BAILEY, Dictionary: Subject. (1736)

Bailey also cites, "The subject's riches is the king's power." There is a Latin proverb, "Opes regum, corda subditorum" (The riches of kings are the hearts of their subjects). Another is, "Nec regi, nec populo, sed utrique" (Neither for king, nor for people, but for both).

The king is not the nation's representative, but its clerk (commis).

ROBESPIERRE, Speech, National Assembly, 17 May, 1790.

I am indeed the clerk (commis) and the explorer (voyageur) of democracy.

GAMBETTA, Speech, Havre, 18 April, 1872, accepting the nickname of "Commercial Traveler" (Commis-voyageur), which had been given him because of the rapidity of his movements during the war.

3

No great effort nor vast length of time is necessary to a monarch, when he decides to change the moral habits of a state; it is only necessary that he himself be willing to lead.

PLATO, Laws. Bk. iv, sec. 711B. (c. 345 B. C.)

As are the leaders in a commonwealth, so are the other citizens apt to be. (Quales in republica principes essent, tales reliquos solere esse vives.)

CICERO, Ad Familiares. Bk. i, epis. 9. (54 B. C.)

This is the famous letter to Lentulus, and Cicero in this quotation is paraphrasing Plato. The Latin proverb is, "Qualis rex, talis grex" (Such a king, such a people), or, in the more common alliterative form, "Like prince, like people."

Men adopt the sentiments of their kings.

MOHAMMED, The Koran. (c. 625) Quoted in the Atish Kadah introduction to Sadi's Gulistan.

The fickle mob changes always with the ruler (Mobile mutatur semper cum principe vulgus.)

SIR DAVID LYNDESAY, Satire of the Three Estates, l. 1051. (1540) This is a medieval proverb, and there is another which says, "Regis ad exemplar totus componitur orbis" (The whole community is ordered by the king's example).

4

He is a king and no subject who does only what he likes. (Regnat non regitur qui nihil nisi quod vult facit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 632. (c. 43 B. C.)

KINGDOM

5

Thy kingdom come. (ἐλθάτω ἡ βασιλεῖα σου.)

New Testament: Matthew, vi, 10. (c. A. D. 50)

The Vulgate is, "Adveniat regnum tuum."

He is gone to Kingdom come, he is dead.

FRANCIS GROSE, ed., A Classical Dictionary of the Vulgar Tongue: Kingdom. (1785)

Sending such a rogue to Kingdom-come.

JOHN WOLCOT (PETER PINDAR), Subjects for Painters. (1789)

They will all be in Kingdom come tomorrow morning, if the breeze comes more on the land.

MARRYAT, Mr. Midshipman Easy. Ch. 30. (1836)

6

Kingdoms (they say) are but cares.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 248. (1576)

KINK

There! there!—that's a new kink.

JOHN NEAL, Brother Jonathan, iii, 291. (1825)
You always want to find out all the kinks.

SEBA SMITH, Jack Downing, p. 38. (1830)
I resolved to get the kinks out of me by walking.

T. B. ALDRICH, Marjorie Daw, p. 235. (1873)

To take the kinks out of our thinking.

W.F.CRAFTS, The Sabbath for Man, p. 267. (1886)

A little turn . . . to get the kinks out of our muscles.

FRANK NORRIS, The Octopus, p. 23. (1901)

There's nothing like the whirligig of time to take the kinks out of a crooked politician.

FORREST CRISSEY, Tattlings of a Retired Politician, p. 223. (1904)

KISS AND KISSING

<sup>2</sup> I wonder who's kissing her now?

FRANK R. ADAMS AND WILL M. HOUGH. Title and refrain of lyric. (1912)

<sup>3</sup> Tongue kisses. (καταγωγτισμάτων.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Clouds, l. 51. (423 B.C.)
Usually expanded to "Wanton kisses with the tongue."

Take me by the earlaps, and match lips to lips. (Prehendere auriculis, compara labella cum labellis.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 668. (c. 200 B.C.) The rendering, "Match my little lips to your little lips," is, of course, closer to the spirit of the original.

Give me another love-kiss before we part. (Da saviūm etiā prius quam abis.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 940. (c. 200 B.C.) Nixon (Loeb) renders it, "Naughty kiss." "A sweetheart's kiss" might be better—which recalls the French "Baiser de Lamourette" or "de l'amourette" (Kiss of a little sweetheart), a pun dating from 7 July, 1792, when, in the French National Assembly, in response to an appeal from the Abbé Lamourette, the Senators embraced each other, wiping out old feuds and grudges—for a time.

Let me take you by the ear-laps, let me give you a nice long kiss. (Sine prehendā auriculis, sine dem saviūm.)

PLAUTUS, Poenulus, l. 375. (c. 194 B.C.)
The close-smacking kisses of youth, full of relish, greedy and sticky. (Les estroicts baisers de la jeunesse, savoureux, gloutons et gluants.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 55. (1580)

Ten kisses short as one, one long as twenty.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 22. (1593)

Then come kiss me, sweet and twenty.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, ii, 3, 52. (1599)

Kiss me hard,
As if he pluck'd up kisses by the roots
That grew upon my lips.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, iii, 3, 421. (1605)

Kissing with the inside lip.

SHAKESPEARE, The Winter's Tale, i, 2, 286. (1610)

A horse kiss, a rude kiss, able to beat one's teeth out.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 74. (1678)

A paroxysmal kiss.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, at the trial of Theodore Tilton's suit against him, describing the kiss he had given Mrs. Henry C. Bowen. See Tilton vs. Beecher. Vol. 1, p. 66.

<sup>4</sup> Kiss and be kissed. (καὶ δὲς κύσαι καὶ τὸς κύσων.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Frogs. l. 755. (405 B.C.)

There is always one who kisses and one who only allows the kiss.

SHAW, Man and Superman. Act i. (1903)

One turns the cheek, the other kisses it.

SHAW, Heartbreak House. Act ii. (1913)

<sup>5</sup> Wanton kisses are the keys of sin.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Crossing of Proverbs. (1616)

Kisses are keys. Wanton kisses are keys of sin.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 28. (1639)

Kissin' is the key o' love,

An' clappin' is the lock.

ROBERT BURNS, O Can Ye Labour Lea? (c. 1787)

Do not make me kiss, and you will not make me sin.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 345. (1855)

For love or lust, for good or ill,

Behold the kiss is potent still.

JOHN RICHARD MORELAND, The Kiss. (c. 1928)

<sup>6</sup> Kisse and be gode frende in lufe and in a wille.

ROBERT MANNING OF BRUNNE, tr., Langtoft's Chronicle, p. 64. (1338)

Come, buss and be friends.

FRANCES QUARLES, Divine Emblems, ii, 8. (1635)

Weep not, Nurse! I am satisfied. Come, kiss and be friends.

JOHN LACY, The Dumb Lady. Act iv. (1672)

The People and the Prince kind and were Friends, and so things were quiet for a while.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Money. (a. 1654)

They shall kiss, and be friends.

SWIFT, The Yahoo's Overthrow, l. 62. (1734)

Swift uses the phrase twice in Polite Conversation, in Dial. i, "You must kiss and be friends"; in Dial. iii, "Let's kiss and be friends." He also used it in a letter dated Jan., 1711.

Let's see you buss and be friends.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Pamela, ii, 73. (1740)

He'll do you no harm, man!—come, kiss and be friends!

FRANCES BURNEY, Evelina, ii, 269. (1778)

Kiss and be friends, like children being chid!

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. vi, l. 271. (1847)

<sup>7</sup> A kiss without mustachio is bread without salt.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, tr., The Thousand Nights and a Night. Nt. 424. (1885) Quoting a Persian proverb.

To be kissed by a man without a mustache was like eating an egg without salt.

JENNY BALLOU, Period Piece, p. 4. (1940) Quoting a saying of the 1880's. The Germans say, "Ein Kuss ohne Bart hat keine Art" (A kiss without a beard has no thrill).

<sup>8</sup> Our sweetest memorial the first kiss of love.

LORD BYRON, The First Kiss of Love. (c. 1820)

How delicious is the winning
Of a kiss at Love's beginning.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Song. (c. 1839)

1 Kissing goes by favour.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 327.

(1605) JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 28.

(1639) QUARLES, The Virgin Widow. (1649)
etc., etc.

Kissing commeth by favour.

THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 64. (1616)

Kissing more than ever now is found to go by favour.

J. R. PLANCHÉ, Extravaganzas, v, 300. (1871)

Ere they hewed the Sphinx's visage,

Favouritism governed kissage,

Even as it does in this age.

RUDYARD KIPLING, General Summary. (1892)

2 My mouth hath icched al this longe day;
That is a signe of kissing atte leste.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Miller's Tale,
l. 496. (c. 1386)

3 Unknowe, unkist, and lost that is unsought.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. i, l. 809.
(c. 1380)

On old Englis it is said, unkissid is unknowen.

THOMAS WRIGHT, ed., Political Songs of England, ii, 59. (1401)

She and I haue shaken handes, farewell, unkyst.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)

Unknowne unkyst, it is lost that is unsought.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11.

Who for that hee is vncouth (as sayd Chaucer) is vnkist, and vnkowne to most men, is regarded but of few.

EDWARD KIRKE, *Epistle Dedicatory to SPEN-
SER'S Shepheardes Calender*. (1579)

Uncouth, unkiste, sayde the olde famous Poete Chaucer.

EDWARD KIRKE, Letter to Gabriel Harvey. (1580)

I will have a lover's fee; they say, Unkissed, unkind.

GEORGE PEELE, The Araynement of Paris, p.
355. (1584)

Unknown, unkissed.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 27. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5402. (1732)

4 Kiss till the cow come home, kiss close, kiss close knaves.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Scornful Lady. Act ii, sc.
1. (c. 1612) See under Cow.

Kiss me till I grow white, and that will be an ill web to bleach.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 226. (1721)

5 Your lips are destined to a better use,
Or else the proverb fails of lipping maids.

JOHN FORD, The Ladies Triall. Act iv, sc. 2. (1639)

They say that lithping wenches are good to kith.

FRANCES QUARLES, The Virgin Widow. Act iv,
sc. 2. (1638)

A lipping lass is good to kiss.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 349. (1678)

6 She had rather Kiss than Spin.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4123. (1732)

7 Reap many kisses and little love.

ROBERT GREENE, Orpharion. (1589)

A kiss of the lips often does not touch the heart.
(Baccio di bocca Spesso il cuor non tocca.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes,
p. 180. (1856) 'The French say, "Baiser le lèvres ne vient pas toujours du cœur" (A kiss of the lips doesn't always come from the heart).

8 Kis and be kind, the fiddler is blind.

HENDERSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 38. (1832)

Kiss and be kind, the fiddler's blind. When the fiddler gives the signal, take the hint, . . . he won't notice you. In Scotland when at a dance the fiddler causes his instrument to emit a squeak, somewhat resembling a kiss, the gentlemen forthwith kiss their partners.

CHEVIOT, Scottish Proverbs, p. 226. (1896)

9 What is a Kisse? Why this, as some approve;
The sure sweet-Sement, Glue, and Lime of Love.

ROBERT HERRICK, A Kisse. (1648)

The anatomical juxtaposition of two orbicular oris muscles in a state of contraction.

DR. HENRY GIBBONS, Definition of a Kiss. (c.
1925)

10 Kissing and bussing differ both in this:

We busse our Wantons, but our Wives we kisse.

ROBERT HERRICK, Kissing and Bussing. (1648)

Kisses and Favours are sweet things;

But Those have thorns and These have stings.

ROBERT HERRICK, The Showre of Blossomes.

11 The sound of a kiss is not so loud as that of a cannon, but its echo lasts a great deal longer.

O. W. HOLMES, *The Professor at the Breakfast-
Table*. Ch. 11. (1860)

12 No one can object to an honorable kiss.
(Einen Kuss in Ehren kann niemand wehren.)

LUDWIG HEINE HÖLTY. (c. 1776) Although this is usually attributed to Höltz, he was probably only quoting it, as it is said to have been in print before he was born.

There's nothing wrong in a connubial kiss.

LORD BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iii, st. 8. (1818)

Many a miss would not be a missus

If liquor did not add a spark to her kisses.

E. L. C., Listen. In Life, March, 1933.

13 The kiss of peace . . . was one of the rites of the eucharistic service in the primitive church.

WALTER HOOK, A Church Dictionary, 424. (1852)

Usually given in the Latin, "Osculum pacis."

14 Several persons suffering from swollen faces visited the Emergency Hospital in Washington and complained that they had been bitten by some insect while asleep. . . . Thus began the "kissing bug" scare.

L. O. HOWARD, Spider Bites and Kissing Bugs. In Popular Science Monthly, Nov., 1899, p. 33. On p. 35, "The kissing bug, in its own way, and in the short space of two months, produced almost as much of a scare as did the San José scale."

<sup>1</sup> He is a fool that kisseth the maid when he may kiss the mistress.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs (1659)

<sup>2</sup> 'Tis no sin love's fruit to steal,
But the sweet theft to reveal.

BEN JONSON, Song: To Celia. (1616)

And if he needs must kiss and tell,
I'll kick him headlong into Hell.

CHARLES COTTON, Burlesque, p. 200. (1675)

Oh, fie, Miss, you must not kiss and tell.

CONGREVE, Love for Love. Act ii, sc. 10. (1695)

Why must they kiss and tell?

MURPHY, The Upholsterer. Act ii. (1757)

'Gin a body kiss a body, Need the world ken?

BURNS, Comin' thro' the Rye. (c. 1792)

The old reproach against their admirers of "Kiss and tell."

LORD BYRON, Letters, iii, 339. (1816)

As a gentleman, I do not kiss and tell.

BERNARD SHAW, Misalliance, p. 88. (1910)

<sup>3</sup> How full he hits a woman between the lips when he kisses!

BEN JONSON, Every Man Out of His Humour.

Act iv, sc. 1. (1599)

<sup>4</sup> Contentibus, quoth Tommy Tomson, kiss my wife and welcome.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 81. (1721)

To seal an agreement.

With all my heart; kiss my wife and welcome.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

<sup>5</sup> Kiss a slate-stone and that will not slaver you.
An answer of a girl to him that asks for a kiss.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 229. (1721)

Kiss ye slate-stanes, they winna weet your mou'.
And aff she gaes.

ALEXANDER ROSS, Helenore. (1768)

<sup>6</sup> Sweet Helen, make me immortall with a kisse!

CHRISTOPHER MARLOWE, Doctor Faustus, l.
1330. (c. 1590)

It was thy kiss, Love, that made me immortal.

MARGARET FULLER, Dryad Song. (a. 1850)

<sup>7</sup> Kisses I reject, save those I have ravished from reluctant lips. (Bastia dum nolo nisi quae luctantia carpsi.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. v, epig. 46. (c. A. D. 85)

Boldness trembling at his first thefts. (In primis titubans Audacia furtia.)

CLAUDIAN, Epithalamium, l. 81. (A. D. 398)

"Sweetest the kiss that's stolen from weeping maid."

Yit wol he stele a buss or two.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. ii, l. 348.
(1300)

To kiss in private, An unauthorized kiss.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, iv, 1, 2. (1605)

The kiss, snatch'd hasty from the sidelong maid.

JAMES THOMSON, The Seasons: Winter, l. 625.
(1726)

Stolen kisses are always sweeter.

LEIGH HUNT, The Indicator. (1821)

A legal kiss is never as good as a stolen one.

GUY DE MAUPASSANT, A Wife's Confession. (c.
1885)

Mayhem, death and arson

Have followed many a thoughtless kiss

Not sanctioned by a parson.

DON MARQUIS, On Kissing. (1924)

See also under PROHIBITION.

<sup>8</sup> And while he yet spake, lo, Judas, one of the twelve, . . . came to Jesus, and said, Hail,
Master; and kissed him.

New Testament: Matthew, xxvi, 47-49. (c. A. D.
50) See under JUDAS.

A false Judas kysse he hath gyven and is gone.

JOHN BAYLE, Kynge Johan, l. 2109. (c. 1550)

Of a flattering foe to haue a Judas kisse.

ALEXANDER BARCLAY, *The Mirrour of Good
Manners*, p. 75. (c. 1510)

Marry, his kisses are Judas's own children.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, iii, 4, 10. (1600)

They'l giue you a Judas kisse.

UNKNOWN, Roxburghe Ballads, vii, 473. (1684)

Her lips were glued on his, in a close "Judas' kiss."

THOMAS HOOD, Hood's Own, i, 323. (1838)

Sophronia found it necessary to . . . give Bella a kiss. A Judas order of kiss.

DICKENS, Our Mutual Friend. Pt. iii, ch. 5. (1865)

'Twas ever thus with misses,

They leave the ancient home

To plant their Judas kisses

Upon some manly dome.

UNKNOWN. Punch, 2 Sept., 1925.

<sup>9</sup> Kissing don't last: cookery do.

GEORGE MEREDITH, The Ordeal of Richard Feverel. Ch. 28. (1859)

<sup>10</sup> The slowest kiss makes too much haste.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, A Chaste Maid in Cheapside. Act iv. (c. 1607)

<sup>11</sup> If you kiss me you hate me, and if you hate me you kiss me. But if you don't hate me, dear friend, don't kiss me! (εἰ δὲ με μὴ μισεῖς, φίλτατε, μὴ με φίλει.)

NICARCHUS, Epigram. (c. A. D. 200) See Greek Anthology. Bk. xi, epig. 252.

<sup>12</sup> He who has taken kisses, if he take not the rest beside, deserves to lose even what was granted. (Oscula qui sumpsit, si non et cetera sumet, | haec quoque, quae data sunt, perdere dignus erit.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. i, l. 669. (c. 1 B. C.)

For who to kissing may attayne,
Of loves payne hath, soth to sayne,

The beste and most avenaunt,
And ernest of the remenaunt.
(Esachiez bien cui l'en otroie
Le baisier il a de la proie
Le miauz e le plus avenant,
Si a erres dou remenant.)

GUILLAUME DE LORRIS, Roman de la Rose,
l. 3405. (c. 1240) CHAUCER (?), tr., l. 3677.
(c. 1365)

The kyssynge is nyghe parente and cosyn vnto
the fowle faytte or dede.

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., Geoffroi de la Tour l'An-
dri. Ch. 33. (1484)

After kissing comes more kindness.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 28. (1639)

He that doth kiss and do no more
May kiss behind and not before.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 9. (1650)

She that will kiss, they say, will do worse.

ROBERT DAVENPORT, The City-Night-Cap. Act i.
(1661)

Getting kisses out of a woman is like getting olives out of a bottle; the first may be devilish difficult, but the rest come easy.

DENNIS WHEATLEY, The Scarlet Impostor, p.
178. (1942)

1 Giving her the bezolas manos.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace: Pigmaliions
Freinde, p. 234. (1576) Beso las manos, "I kiss the hands," a respectful salutation. The phrase is used also by Gascoigne, Nashe, and others.

Kiss my foot, there's more flesh on it. Spoken to them who tauntingly say, I kiss your hands.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 228. (1721)

I can kiss your hand, madame. You'll wash the hand afterwards.

D. B. OLSEN, Cat's Claw, p. 52. (1943) Reminiscent of Maurice Chevalier's famous song.

2 Kissing is a thing that, at every proper opportunity, we set our face against.

GEORGE D. PRENTICE, Prenticeana, p. 6. (1860)

3 So she caught him and kissed him. (Apprehen-sumque deosculatur iuvenem.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, vii, 13. (c. 350 B. C.)

4 Speak, cousin, or, if you cannot, stop his mouth with a kiss.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing, ii, 1,
321. (1598)

Were kisses all the joys in bed,
One woman would another wed.

SHAKESPEARE [?], The Passionate Pilgrim, l.
345. (1599)

5 Till thy wound be thoroughly heal'd;
And thus I search it with a sovereign kiss.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona,
i, 2, 116. (1594)

Kiss the place to make it well.

ANN TAYLOR, My Mother. (1808)

6 A chuck under the chin is worth two kisses.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

Bachelor's fare: bread and cheese and kisses.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i.

We may kiss where we like best.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii.

7 Lord! I wonder what fool it was that first invented kissing.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

Tell me who first did kisses suggest?

It was a mouth all glowing and blest;

It kissed and it thought of nothing beside.

HEINE, Buch der Lieder. No. 25. (1827)

May his soul be in heaven—he deserves it I'm sure—

Who was first the inventor of kissing.

UNKNOWN, The Inventor of Kissing. (c. 1900)

8 "Naught goes to a kiss," as the saying is.
(κενὸν τὸ φίλημα λέγουσιν.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. No. xxvii, l. 3. (c. 270 B. C.)

Even in an empty kiss there's sweet delight.
(ἔστι καὶ ἐν κενεοῖσι φιλάμασιν ἀδία τέρψις.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. No. xxvii, l. 4.

9 Those who can number their kisses
Will always with few be content.

C. H. WILLIAMS: On Lady Ilchester's Asking
Lord Ilchester How Many Kisses He Would
Have. (1740)

10 Alas! that women do not know
Kisses make men loath to go.

UNKNOWN, Kisses Make Men Loath to Go. (c.
1675)

The woman that cries hush bids kiss: I learnt
So much of her that taught me kissing.

SWINBURNE, Marino Faliero. Act i, sc. 1. (1885)

11 Dog-days are in he'll say's the reason
Why kissing now is out of season:
But Joan says furz in bloom is still,
And she'll be kissed if she's her will.

UNKNOWN, Poor Robin's Almanack, Aug., 1752.

When whins are out of bloom, kissing's out of fashion. Whins are never out of bloom.

MICHAEL DENHAM, Proverbs, p. 12. (1846)

"When the gorse is out of bloom, young ladies," quoth Sir Giles, "then is kissing out of fashion!"
... There is no day in the year when the blossom is off the gorse.

WHYTE-MELVILLE, Holmby House. Ch. 2. (1860)

II—To Kiss the Clink, Post, Rod, etc.

12 Thou shalt lose thy meat and kisse the post.

ALEXANDER BARCLAY, Egloges, ii, B4. (c. 1514)

"To kiss the post": To be shut out because of carelessness or tardiness. To be given the key of the streets. See under KEY.

Troylus also hath lost
On her moch loue and cost,
And now must kys the post.

JOHN SKELTON, Phyllip Sparowe, l. 716. (c. 1520)

But some that lost thier blood in countries right
May kisse the post.

THOMAS CHURCHYARD, Charitie, 10. (1595)

Make haste thou art best, for feare thou kiss the post.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, Edward IV. Pt. i. (1600)
Such as come late must kiss the post.

UNKNOWN, New and Merrie Prognostics, p. 19, (1623)

You must kiss the post, or hare's foot, sero venere bubulci.

WILLIAM ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis, p. 475. (1681)

To kiss the post, to be too late for anything.

J. O. HALLIWELL, Dictionary: Kiss. (1847)

<sup>1</sup> Where perceiving a Crosse, he kissed it with tears.

FRANCIS BROOKE, tr., Le Blanc's Travels, p. 187. (1660)

<sup>2</sup> You must kisse the rod.

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., Reynart the Foxe. Ch. 12. (1481) Accept chastisement submissively.

Yet he durst not but kiss his rod and gladly make much of his entertainment.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Arcadia (1867), ii, 190. (c. 1586)

Foolish love

That, like a testy babe, will scratch the nurse,
And presently all humble kiss the rod!

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona, i, 2, 57. (1594)

Take thy correction mildly, kiss the rod.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, v, i, 33. (1595)

Come, I'll be a good child and kiss the rod.

JAMES SHIRLEY, The Wittie Faire One. Act i, sc. 3. (1628)

<sup>3</sup> I shall true constable be . . . so helpe me god and my hollydome, and kysse the boke.

JOHN FITZHERBERT, The Boke of Surueyng, p. 20. (1523) To kiss the book: i. e. the Bible

Make them kiss the book.

UNKNOWN, The Manner of Keeping a Court Baron. (c. 1539)

Come, swear to that, kiss the book.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, ii, 2, 145. (1611)

<sup>4</sup> Vpon payne to dine with Duke Humfrie, or kisse the Hares foote.

HAZLITT, Inedited Tracts: Servingman's Comfort, p. 112. (1598) To dine with Duke Humfrie is not to dine at all. See under DINING

We had need

Make haste away, unlesse we meane to speed
With those that kisse the Hares foot.

WILLIAM BROWNE, Britannia's Pastorals, ii, 2. (1616)

It was my lord's fault: I doubt you must kiss the hare's foot.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

Keith got the earldom, . . . and the poor clergyman nothing whatever, or, as we say, the hare's foot to lick.

WALTER SCOTT, Letter to Croker, 5 Feb., 1818.

To kiss the hare's foot, to be too late for anything.
J. O. HALLIWELL, Dictionary: Kiss. (1847)

<sup>5</sup> More . . . honorable, a man compleyne of thrist,

Than dronken be, when he the cup hath kist.

THOMAS HOCCEVE, De Regimine Principum, l. 3815. (c. 1412)

Kissing the cupp too often.

STEPHEN GOSSON, The Schoole of Abuse, p. 25. (1579)

<sup>6</sup> Then some the Counter oft doo kisse,
If that the money be not paid.

HENRY HUTH, ed., Ancient Ballads, p. 227. (c. 1560)

You kisse the Counter, sirra.

SAMUEL ROWLANDS, The Night-Raven. (1620)
Go to prison.

<sup>7</sup> I will not yield

To kiss the ground before young Malcolm's feet.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, v, 8, 27. (1606)

Rome, for empire far renown'd,

Tramples on a thousand states;

Soon her pride shall kiss the ground.

WILLIAM COWPER, Boadicea, l. 19. (1782)

<sup>8</sup> To kiss the dust before monstrous superstitions.

ISAAC TAYLOR, Spiritual Despotism, x, 410. (1835)
She had yielded, and had kissed the dust.

ANTHONY TROLLOPE, The Last Chronicle of Barset. Bk. ii, ch. 56. (1867)

TO KISS THE DUST, TO DIE, see under DEATH: EUPHEMISMS

<sup>9</sup> I will make thee kiss the Clinke [go to prison] for this gear.

JOHN UDALL, Diotrephes (Arber), p. 22. (1588)

<sup>10</sup> To kiss the child for love of the nurse. (Osculor hunc ore natum nutricis amore.)

UNKNOWN, 13th cent. MS, quoted by WRIGHT. Essays on the Middle Ages, i, 150.

Ofte me kyssyt the child for the nurse's sake. (Osculor hunc ore puerum nutricis amore.)

UNKNOWN, Harleian MS, 3362. (c. 1470)

Many kisse the childe for the nurses sake.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)
BACON, Promus, 216. (1594) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3351. (1732)

Aliena . . . thought she kist the childe for the nurses sake.

THOMAS LODGE, Rosalynde, p. 98. (1590)

Some will kiss the child for the nurse's sake, and like the present for the hand that brings it.

WILLIAM GURNALL, The Christian in Compleat Armour, i, 82. (1655)

For love of the nurse the bairn gets mony a cuss.

GEORGE MERITON, Yorkshire Ale, p. 83. (1683)

Many one kisses the bairn for love of the nurrish.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 243. (1721)

Among men, dame, many one caresses the infant that he may kiss the child's maid.

SIR WALTER SCOTT, Peveril of the Peak. Ch. 8. (1823)

KITCHEN

- <sup>1</sup> The taste of the kitchen is better than the smell.
THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 41. (1633)
- <sup>2</sup> The bodie to the wormes keitching, go.
ROBERT HENRYSON, The Morall Fabillis of Esope, viii. (c. 1470) The worms' kitchen: the grave.
- <sup>3</sup> A youth devoted to kitchen-studies. (Iuventus . . . studiosa culinae.)
HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 5, l. 80. (35 B.C.) That is, to eating. CICERO has, "Studio culinae tenetur" (He is possessed with thoughts of the kitchen).
Then did he study some paltry half-hour with his eyes fixed upon his book; but (as the Comic saith), his mind was in the kitchen. (Puis estudioit quelque mechante demye heure, les yeulx assis dessus son liure, mais (comme dict le Comicque) son ame estoit en la cuysine.)
RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 21. (1534)
- <sup>4</sup> All that is said in the kitchen, should not be heard in the hall.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 9. (1721)
- <sup>5</sup> He [the French cook] learnt his trade in a towne of garrison neere famish't, where hee practised to make a little goe farre. . . . He is the prime cause why noblemen build their houses so great: for the smalnesse of their kitchin, makes the house the bigger.
SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Characters: A French Cooke. (1614)
A little kitchen makes a large house.
HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 472. (1640)
A king of France going to see the lodgings and roomes of a faire house belonging to the steward of his household, said, That the kitchin was a great deale too little, in respect of the greatnesse of the house, but the steward answered him, that, that small kitchin had made the house so great.
STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 188. (1574) Pettie, tr.
The Smallness of the Kitchen makes the House the bigger.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4753. (1732)
- <sup>6</sup> The first foundation of a good House must be the Kitchin.
RICHARD SURFLET, (tr.), Maison Rustique, or the Countrie Farme, p. 3. (1616)
- <sup>7</sup> By a kitchen fat and good makes the poor most neighbourhood.
JOHN WODROEPHE, The Spared Houres of a Souldier, 481. (1623)
A fat kitchen has poverty for neighbor. (A grassa cucina, pobertà vicina.)
CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 185. (1856) Quoting an Italian proverb. Another one is "Grassa cucina, magro testamento" (A fat kitchen, a lean will). See FAT.

KNAVE

See also Honesty and Knavery;
Fool and Knave

- <sup>8</sup> Successful knaves are insufferable. (κακοὶ γὰρ εὖ πρᾶσσοντες οὐκ ἀνασχετοί.)
AESCHYLUS, Fragmenta Incerta. No. 226, Smyth. (c. 458 B.C.) STOBÆUS, Anthology, iv, 4, 14. The success of knaves entices many to crime. (Successus improborum plures adlicit.)
PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. ii, fab. 3, l. 7. (c. 25 B.C.)
- <sup>9</sup> A knavish wit, a knavish will.
NATHAN BAILEY, Dictionary: Knave. (1736)
- <sup>10</sup> There is no packe of Cardes without a Knaue.
NICHOLAS BRETON, Pasquils Fooles-Cappe, p. 26. (1600)
- <sup>11</sup> It is better kiss a knave than to be troubled with him.
WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 326. (1605)
I'd rather give a knave a kiss for once than be troubled with him.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)
- <sup>12</sup> The more knave the better luck.
WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 333. (1605) See under LUCK.
- <sup>13</sup> One false knave accuseth another.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 79. (1639)
There I caught a knave in a purse-net.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 127. Cited by Howell, Ray and Fuller.
- <sup>14</sup> The Sun see much Knavery in a yere, and the Moone more in a quarter.
THOMAS DEKKER, If It Be Not Good, the Devil Is in It. (1612)
There is more knavery by sea and land than all the world beside.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 311. (1721)
- <sup>15</sup> Bold knaves thrive, without one grain of sense, But good men starve for want of impudence.
DRYDEN, Constantine the Great: Epil. (c. 1690)
- <sup>16</sup> When Knaves fall out, honest Men get their goods: When Priests dispute, we come at the Truth.
BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1742. See also under THIEF.
Knives & Nettles are akin; stroak 'em kindly, yet they'll sting.
FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1748.
When knaves betray each other, one can scarce be blamed or the other pitied.
FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1758.
- <sup>17</sup> Knavery, without Luck, is the worst Trade in the World.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3132. (1732)
Knives imagine nothing can be done without Knavery.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3135.

- 1 The mo knaves the worse company.
W. C. HAZLITT, ed., Old English Plays: Four Elements. Vol. i, p. 35. (1519)
Some saie also it is mery when knaues meete,
But the mo knaues, the woorse company to greete.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)
- 2 If ye would know a knave, give him a staff.
HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 20. (1640)
- 3 Two false knaues neede no broker, men say.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)
"For they can easily enough agree in wickedness Sine mediantē," adds ALEXANDER NOWELL, Sword Against Swearers, sig. B3. (1611)
A crafty knave does need no broker.
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, i, 2, 100. (1590)
ROBERT GREENE, Works (Grosart), x, 185. (1592) JONSON, Every Man in His Humour, iii, 2. (1598)
A false knave needs no broker.
WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 318. (1605)
Two cunning knaves need no broker.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 111. (1670)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5322. (1732)
- 4 One of the four and twenty policies of a knave is to stay long at his errand.
JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 2. (1659)
The first of the nine orders of knaves is he that tells his errand before he goes it.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 318. (1721)
- 5 Once a knave, and ever a knave.
JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 2. (1659)
Once a knave and never an honest man.
WILLIAM WALKER, Paroemiologia, p. 49. (1672)
Like most knaves he was a coward at heart.
T. C. H. JACOBS, The Thirteenth Chime, p. 94, p. 238. (1937)
- 6 An olde knaue is no chylde.
SIR THOMAS MORE, Works (1557), p. 242/1. (1528) JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs, i, 2. (1546)
There is no knave like to the old knave.
RICHARD EDWARDS, Damon and Pithias. (1571)
An old knave is no bairne.
FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 10. (c. 1595)
No knave to the learned knave.
FYNES MORYSON, An Itinerary, iii, i, 5. (1617)
- 7 Whan knaues in graine mete.
JEHAN PALSgrave, Acolastus, sig. S2. (1540)
O maltster! break that cheating peck; 'tis plain
Whene'er you use it, you're a knave in grain.
FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1739.
Knave in grain, a knave of the first rate.
FRANCIS GROSE, ed., A Classical Dictionary of the Vulgar Tongue: Knave. (1785) See also under ROGUE.
- 8 Against the knave knavery is useful. (πὸ τὸν πονηρὸν οὐκ ἀχρηστον ἐπὶ πονηρία.)
PLUTARCH, Moralia: How to Study Poetry, 21E. (c. A. D. 95) Quoting from an unknown source. He repeats the quote in 534A.
TO FIGHT FIRE WITH FIRE, see under FIRE.

- 9 As good a knave I know as a knave I know not.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 74. (1678)
He hath a cloak for his knavery.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 235.
No more mortar, no more brick,
A cunning knave has a cunning trick.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 296. FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6425. (1732)
- 10 'Tis the base knave that jars.
SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, iii, 1, 47. (1594)
'Gainst knaves and thieves men shut their gate.
SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, v, 1, 404. (1599)
- 11 One of you two are both knaves.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii. (1738)
- 12 As the English in Drollery will say, There's cheating in all Trades, but ours.
TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 19. (1666)
There is knavery in all trades.
HEAD AND KIRKMAN, The English Rogue, ii, 115. (1671)
Jupiter appointed Mercury to make him a composition of fraud and hypocrisy, and to give every artificer his does on't. . . . Mercury gave the tailors the whole quantity that was left, and from hence comes the old saying, There's knavery in all trades, but most in tailors.
L'ESTRANGE, tr., Aesop. Fab. 183. (1692)
- KNEE
- 13 Supple knees feed arrogance.
H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 492. (1855)
- 14 The body of my brother's son
Stood by me, knee to knee.
S. T. COLERIDGE, The Ancient Mariner. Pt. v, st. 12. (1798)
Cheek by jowl, and knee by knee.
TENNYSON, A Vision of Sin, l. 84. (1842)
- 15 Set your knee to it and right it.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 293. (1721)
- 16 Up to the knee is free. (Bis an't Kni ist fri.)
UNKNOWN. A Low German proverb, indicating how far a suitor may go.
MY KNEE IS NEARER THAN MY SHIN, see SELF
KNEES OF THE GODS, see under GODS.
- KNEE-HIGH
- 17 He has lived with me ever since he was "knee high to a musquitoe."
UNKNOWN, The Microscop: (Albany, N.Y.), 12 June, 1824, p. 55/1.
He want more'n knee high to a bumbly-bee.
JOHN NEAL, The Down-Easters, i, 78. (1833)
Ever since I was knee high to a splinter.
W. G. SIMMS, The Kinsmen, ii, 63. (1841)
Since I was knee-high to a grasshopper.
W. T. PORTER, ed., Spirit of the Times, 15 Nov. 1856, p. 172/1.

I know'd 'im when he wasn't kneehigh to a duck.
WILL HARBEN, The Georgians, p. 89. (1904)
I've known you since you were knee-high to a duck.

WILLIAM O'FARRELL, Repeat Performance, p. 5. (1942)

He taught me to sail when I was knee-high to a duck.

CLAYTON RAWSON, No Coffin for the Corpse, p. 73. (1942)

I learned that when I was knee-high to a grass-hopper.

ANNE NASII, Said with Flowers, p. 133. (1943)

I've known her since she was knee-high to a woodchuck.

LEE THAYER, Accessory After the Fact, p. 66. (1943)

KNIFE

<sup>1</sup> The knife has reached the bone.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 709. (1817)

<sup>2</sup> A man may sleen him-self with his owene knyf, and make him-selven drunken of his owene tonne.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Persones Tale, Sec. 76. (c. 1389)

<sup>3</sup> It was "no time for swapping knives."

LEWIS COLLINS, Historical Sketches of Kentucky, i, 218. (1871) To change plans or tactics.

It was no time to "swap knives."

MARK TWAIN, Old Times on the Mississippi. Ch. 6. (1875) Huckleberry Finn. Ch. 32

<sup>4</sup> The same knife cutteth bread and a man's finger.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 223. (1633)

The same knife cuts my bread and my finger.

HOWELL, Proverbs: Span.-Eng., p. 19. (1659)

<sup>5</sup> Carry your Knife even, between the Paring and the Apple.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1065. (1732)

<sup>6</sup> He leaves me under the knife. (Sub cultro linquit.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 9, l. 74. (35 B.C.)

In extreme danger. Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, x, 83. A proverb of similar meaning is "Between the victim and the knife" (Inter sacrum et saxum).

<sup>7</sup> If you had stuck a knife in my heart, it would not have bled. The thing was a great surprisc.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 192. (1721)

A chill came over me. If you had stuck a knife in me I shouldn't have bled.

READE, Jack of All Trades. Ch. 12. (1858)

<sup>8</sup> Every knife of his'n has a golden haft, i. e. everything he undertakes turns out well.

EGERTON LEIGH, Cheshire Glossary, p.96. (1877)

<sup>9</sup> Domingo, after playing a good knife and fork, took himself off.

BENJAMIN MALKIN, tr., Gil Blas. Bk. i, ch. 6. (1809)

I am but a poor knife and fork at any time.

DICKENS, Bleak House. Ch. 45. (1852)

[He] played a good knife and fork.

ROLF BOLDREWOOD (T. A. BROWNE), Robbery Under Arms. Ch. 45. (1889)

<sup>10</sup>

I reckon you've got your knife into Mr. Jousserau.

D. C. MURRAY, John Vale's Guardian. Ch. 36. (1890)

They seldom lose the opportunity of 'getting their knife' into him.

Spectator (London), 3 June, 1911, p. 854.

<sup>11</sup>

It's a good knife, it will cut butter when 'tis melted.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 255. (1678)

It is a good poor man's blade, it will bow e'er it break.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 187. (1721)

It is a good Knife, 'twas made at Dull-edge.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2857. (1732)

One may ride to Rumford upon this knife, it is so blunt.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

KNIGHT

See also Chivalry

<sup>12</sup>

Chaucer sayeth that habite maketh no monke, ne wearing of gilt spurs no knyghte.

JOHN BOSSEWELL, Workes of Armorie, fo. 90. (1572) See also under APPEARANCE.

<sup>13</sup>

The Knight of the Rueful Countenance. (El Caballero de la Triste Figura.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 19. (1605)

<sup>14</sup>

He was a verray parfit gentil knight.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 72. (c. 1386)

He was of knighthode and of fredom flour.

CHAUCER, The Monkes Tale, l. 652.

When Knighthood Was in Flower.

CHARLES MAJOR. Title of novel. (1898)

<sup>15</sup>

Fitter to be one of Cupid's carpet captaines, then to march under the manly ensigne of Mars.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 133. (1576)

Hee was become a carpet Knight.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 203. (1576)

A Carpet knight corrupteth and effeminateth a valiant man.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i. p. 44. (1581) Pettie, tr.

Mignon de couchette, a Carpet-Knight, one that ever louses to be in women's chambers.

RANDALL COTGRAVE, Dictionarie of the French and English Tongues: Couchette. (1611)

Brave Carpet Knights in Cupid's fights.

THOMAS D'URFEY, Pills to Purge Melancholy, iv, 276. (1719)

His square-turned joints, and strength of limb,
Showed him no carpet knight so trim.

WALTER SCOTT, Marmion. Canto i, st. 5. (1808)

The prouerbe is olde, and it may be true, that as knights grow poor, ladies grow proud.

BARNABY RICH, Faultes Faults, fo. 28. (1606)

So faithful in love, and so dauntless in war,
There never was knight like the young Loch-invar.

SCOTT, Marmion. Canto v, st. 12. (1808)

He died a gallant knight,

With sword in hand, for England's right.

SCOTT, Marmion. Canto vi, st. 37. (1808)

For I was of Christ's choosing, I God's knight.

SWINBURNE, Laus Veneris. St. 53. (c.1880)

A gentle knight was pricking on the plaine.

EDMUND SPENSER, The Faerie Queene. Bk. i, canto i, st. 1. (1590)

Yet was he but a squire of low degree.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. iv, canto vii, st. 15.

Knight without fear and without reproach.
(Chevalier sans peur et sans reproche.)

Applied to PIERRE DU TERRAIL, CHEVALIER DE
BAYARD. There is a similar proverbial Latin phrase, "Nec male notus eques" (A knight of no bad repute).

KNOT

One knot in a thread will stay a Needle's Passage as well as five hundred.

ROBERT BOLTON, *Instructions for the Right
Comforting of Afflicted Consciences*, p. 333.
(1631)

Fools tie knots and wise men loose them.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 88. (1639)

Cited by Ray, Kelly, Fuller, and others.

When the knot is loose the string slippeth.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 248. Cited by Ray and Fuller.

Tie it well and let it go.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 644. (1640)

You haue giuen vnto me a true loue[r]'s knot wrought of chaungeable Silke.

JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 80. (1579)

We might knit that knot with our tongues, that we shall never vndoe with our teeth.

JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 468. (1579)

A woman may knit a knot with her tongue, that shee cannot untie with all her teeth.

ROBERT GREENE, Works (Grosart), ix, 76. (1617) Marriage . . . may make or mar you. . . . The tongue useth to tie so hard a knot that the teeth can never untie.

JAMES HOWELL, Familiar Letters, 5 Feb., 1625.

He tied a knot with his tongue, that he can't untie with all his teeth.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 183. (1670)

He has tied a knot with his tongue that he can never untie with his teeth.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

I cannot conceive that I should have tied a knot with my tongue which my teeth cannot untie.

WALTER SCOTT, Journal, 6-7 May, 1831.

To get married is: to tie a knot wi' the tongue, 'at yan cannot louze wi' yan's teeth.

E. M. WRIGHT, Rustic Speech, p. 272. (1913)

You are hunting for a knot in a bulrush. (In scirpo nodum quaeris.)

PLAUTUS, Menaechmi, l. 247. (c. 200 B.C.) A proverbial phrase, meaning to look for a difficulty where none exists. Used by TERENCE,
Andria, l. 941, "Nodum in scirpo quaeris."

They are seeking a knot in a bulrush, as the saying goes. (Quaerunt in scirpo soliti quod dicere nodum.)

ENNIUS, Satires. Frag. 27, Loeb. (c. 180 B.C.)
To make a knot in a bulrush, a sore on a sound body. (Nodum in scirpo, in sano facere ulcus.)

LUCILIUS, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 2. (c. 123 B.C.)

Thet sekth thet uel ine the aye other thane knotte ine the resse.

DAN MICHEL, Ayenbite of Inwyt, p. 253. (1340)

It is a childish labour to seek a knot in a rush, and to imagine doubts where the case is clear.

JOHN JEWEL, A Defence of the Apologie. Pt. iv.
p. 733. (1567)

As they say, seeke knottes in Bulrushes.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p.
80. (1574) Pettie, tr.

They thinke themselves no scholers, if they bee not able to finde out a knotte in euery rushe.

STEPHEN GOSSON, The Schoole of Abuse (Ar-ber), p. 46. (1579)

Myne opposed adversary will seeke after a knott in a Bullrush, as the Proverbe is.

JAMES BELL, tr., Haddon Against Osorius, p.
436. (1581)

To cavil at every step, and raise moot points, like finding knots in rushes.

ROGER NORTH, Lives of the Norths, i, 206. (1740)

Don't look for a knot in a bulrush. (Nodum scirpo ne quaeras.)

PONTANUS, Collectio Proverbiorum, p. 131. (1778)

If you are here not to fasten, but to undo the knot. (εἰ μὴ ξυνάψω, ἀλλὰ συλλύσων πάρε.)

SOPHOCLES, Ajax, l. 1317. (c. 409 B.C.)

Until this knot is untied. (Dum hic nodus expediatur.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. v, epis. 21. (50 B.C.)

To untie the knot. (κόθαιμα λύειν.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chl. i, cent. i, No. 6. (1508)

Erasmus gives the Latin, "Nodum solvere." and tells the story of the famous knot, intricately tied by Gordius, a Phrygian king, with the prophecy that whoever untied it was to rule Asia. Alexander the Great cut it through with his sword. "To cut the Gordian knot" is therefore to solve any difficulty in a summary manner

He has found out a sworde to cutt in sunder this Gordian knot.

WILLIAM FULKE, Heskins Parleament Repealed, p. 396. (1579)

Turn him to any cause of policy,
The Gordian knot of it he will unloose,
Familiar as his garter.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, i, 1, 45. (1599)
As slippery as the Gordian knot was hard.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline, ii, 2, 34. (1609)
This Knot is of those that must be cut through, and cannot be untied.

SIR WILLIAM TEMPLE, Letter to Sir John Wilmson. (1676)

Death will find some ways to unty or cut the most Gordian knots of life.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt. ii, sec. 13. (1682)

Suicide . . . is a way . . . of cutting the Gordian knot of the difficulties of life.

WARREN, Ten Thousand a Year. Ch. 3. (1841)
It was she who found the short cut and loosed the Gordian knot.

HENRY JAMES, Aspern Papers. Ch. 1. (1888)
Although the English phrase "To cut the Gordian knot" has lost the original idiom, which is preserved in the German, "Den gordischen Knoten lösen" (To loosen or untie the Gordian knot), it gives us a better and clearer picture.

ARCHER TAYLOR, The Proverb, p. 186. (1931)

1
O time! thou must untangle this, not I;
It is too hard a knot for me t' untie.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, ii, 2, 42. (1599)
'Tis more easie To tie knots, then unloose them.

JOHN WEBSTER, The Dutchesse of Malfy. Act v, sc. 2. (1614)

KNOWLEDGE

See also Learning; Self-Knowledge; Wisdom

2
Desire for knowledge is the path of honor; desire for wealth is the path of dishonor. Wealth is the chain that slaves wear; knowledge the kingly crown.

ABDULLAH ANSARI, Invocations. (c. 1075)

3
Pass on, for thou hast knowledge.

ANI, Papyrus: The Book of the Dead. Ch. cxxv, l. 25. (c. 4000 B. C.)

4
Knowledge can only be attained by sacrifice.

Babylonian Talmud: Gitin, fo. 56a. (450)
He alone is poor who is not possessed of knowledge.

Babylonian Talmud: Nedarim, fo. 41a.

5
I have taken all knowledge to be my province.

FRANCIS BACON, Letter to Lord Burghley. (1592)
A man is but what he knoweth.

FRANCIS BACON, Miscellaneous Tracts: In Praise of Knowledge. Sec. 1. (c. 1626)

The desire of power in excess caused the angels to fall; the desire of knowledge in excess caused man to fall

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Goodness. (1597)

Knowing too much long since lost paradise.

SIR JOHN SUCKLING, Against Fruition. (a.1642)
It is safer to know too little than too much.

SAMUEL BUTLER, The Way of All Flesh. Ch. 5. (a. 1902)

6
Men are called fools in one age for not knowing what they were called fools for averring in the age before.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Life Thoughts. (c.1885)

7
There is knowledge and knowledge.

JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. i. (1678)

8
The Tree of Knowledge is not that of life.

LORD BYRON, Manfred. Act i, sc. 1. (1817)
Banish me from Eden when you will, but first let me eat of the fruit of the tree of knowledge.

R. G. INGERSOLL, The Gods. (1872)

9
For whatsoever I bestowed upon my head, the delicate sweet-smelling unguents, all lost their fragrance straightway; and whatsoever entered into my ungrateful belly remained until the morrow; but what I laid within my hearing ears, these things alone still abide with me. (ὅσα δ' ἀκουαῖς | εἰσεθέμην. ἔτι μοι μούνα παρέσσι τάδε.)

CALLIMACHUS, Aitia, ii, 1. (c. 250 B. C.)
Learn something; for when Luck is sudden gone. Knowledge remains, nor e'er leaves man alone.

(Disce aliquid; nam cum subito Fortuna recessit, ars remanet vitamque hominis non deserit umquam.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. iv, No. 19. (c. 175 B. C.)
An investment in knowledge pays the best interest

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack. (1758)
Knowledge is the only instrument of production that is not subject to diminishing returns.

J. M. CLARK, Overhead Costs in Modern Industry. Journal Pol. Econ. Oct., 1927.

10
Surely much knowledge is a grievous thing for him who controls not his tongue: verily this is a child with a knife. (ὡς ἐρεδν παῖς ὅδε μάστιγιν ἔχει.)

CALLIMACHUS, Aitia, iii, 1, 8. (c. 250 B. C.)
He knoweth much, that knoweth not, if he can hold his peace. (Assal sa, chi non sa, se tacer sa.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 27. (1578)
He knoweth ynough who knoweth nothing if he know how to holde his peace.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, fo. 55. (1586) Pettie, tr.

He is cunning enough that can live and hold his peace.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Sçavoir. (1611)
See also under SILENCE.

11
There's lots of people—this town wouldn't hold them—

Who don't know much excepting what's told them.

WILL CARLETON, City Ballads, p. 143. (1885)

All I know is what I read in the papers.

WILL ROGERS. Frequently in his syndicated newspaper column. (c. 1930)

1 What is all Knowledge but recorded Experience?

THOMAS CARLYLE, Essays: On History. (c.1847)

Our knowledge is the amassed thought and experience of innumerable minds.

EMERSON, Quotation and Originality. (1876)

2 Let him who knows how ring the bells. (Quien las sabe las tane.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 59. (1615)

Let him, that can play, take the Lute.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3182. (1732)

A variation is, "Let him who knows the instrument play upon it."

3 Therfor I will seye a proverbe,
That "he that fully knoweth therbe
May sauffy leye hit to his yē."

CHAUCER, Hous of Fame. Bk. i, l. 290 (c. 1384)
For of all trespere connyng is flowur.

UNKNOWN, Proverbs of Good Counsel. (c.1460)
That which a man knows best he should use most.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Herbe. (1611)

Cotgrave is giving a rendering of the French proverb, "L'herbe qu'on cognoist, on la doit lier à son doigt" (The herbe one knows best one should bind to one's finger).

Knowledge directeth Practice; but yet Practice increaseth Knowledge.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3137. (1732)

Knowledge is a Treasure, but Practice is the Key to it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3139.

Knowledge, without Practice, makes but half an Artist.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3141.

A man knows no more to any purpose than he practises.

HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 321. (1869)

PRACTICE MAKES PERFECT, see under PRACTICE.

4 Let knowledge stop at the unknowable. That is perfection.

CHUANG-TSZE, Philosophy. Ch. 11. (c. 400 B. C.)

Our life has a limit, but knowledge is without limit.

CHUANG-TSZE, Philosophy. Ch. 11.

5 Knowledge that is divorced from justice should be called cunning rather than wisdom. (Scientia, quae est remota ab iustitia, calliditas potius quam sapientia est appellanda.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 19, sec. 63. (c. 45 B. C.)

Quoted as "a fine saying of Plato."

6 Grace is given of God, but knowledge is bought in the market.

ARTHUR H. CLOUGH, The Bothie of Tobernavue. Pt. iv. (1848) See under GRACE.

7 He that shortens the road to knowledge, lengthens life.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Pt. ii, No. 137. (1820)

8 Know your fellow men.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. xii, ch. 22. (c. 500 B. C.)

His definition of knowledge. See under MAN.

9 Knowledge puffeth up, but charity edifieth. (ἡ γνώσις φυσιοῖ, ἡ δὲ ἀγάπη οἰκοδομεῖ.)

New Testament: 1 Corinthians, viii, 1. (c. A. D.

60) The Vulgate is, "Scientia inflat, charitas vero aedificat."

Knowledge bloweth up, but charity buildeth up.

FRANCIS BACON, 1 Corinthians, viii, 1. (c. 1600)

10 As full of knowledge as an egg is full of meat. F. S. COZZENS, Sayings, p. 4. (1870)

11 The Pursuit of Knowledge Under Difficulties. GEORGE LILLIE CRAIK. Title of book. (1830)

Wot's that you're a doin' of? Pursuit of knowledge under difficulties, Sammy?

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 33. (1836)

12 Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased. (Plurimi pertransibunt, et multiplex erit scientia.)

Old Testament: Daniel, xii, 4. (c. 170 B. C.)

13 Knowledge is the only elegance.

R. W. EMERSON, Journal, 1856.

Knowledge is the antidote to fear.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Courage. (1870)

14 Almost everyone knows this, but it has not occurred to everyone's mind. (Acidunt plerique omnes, sed non omnibus hoc venit in mentem.)

ERASMUS, Colloquia: Epicureus. (1531)

15 One man can not know everything. (ἄλλ' οὐ γὰρ αὐτὸς πάντ' ἐπίστασθαι βροτῶν | πέφυκεν.)

EURIPIDES, Rhesus, l. 106. (c. 450 B. C.)

Nothing more sweet than knowing everything. (οὐδὲν γλυκύτερον ἢ πάντ' εἰδέναι.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. iv, epis. 11. (55 B. C.)

Quoting an unknown author.

It is not permitted to know all things. (Nec scire fas est omnia.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode iv, l. 22. (23 B. C.)

A legal proverb attributed to Coke is, "Multi multa, nemo omnia novit" (Many have known many things, no one all things).

It is not permitted you to know everything. (οὐ θέμις ἀπαντὰ σε εἰδέναι.)

LUCIAN, Zeus Catechized. Sec. 3. (c. A. D. 170)

But John P. Robinson, he

Sez they didn't know everythin' down in Judee

LOWELL, Biglow Papers. Ser. i, No. 3. (1848)

Ole man Kno-All died las' year.

J. C. HARRIS, Plantation Proverbs. (1880)

Who knows too much knows only sound and vapor.

LION FEUCHTWANGER, Paris Gazette, p. 541. (1940)

KNOW ALL, FORGIVE ALL, see UNDERSTANDING.

16 A man of knowledge, like a rich soil, feeds
If not a world of corn, a world of weeds.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1739.

What signifies knowing the Names, if you know not the Natures of Things.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1750.
Tim was so learned, that he could name a Horse in nine Languages. So ignorant, that he bought a Cow to ride on.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1750.

1 Every one thinks he knows much.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1451. (1732)

2 You may know by a Handful the whole Sack.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5949. (1732)

The sack is known by the sample.

W. C. HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 397. (1869)

3 A man without knowledge is like a house without a foundation.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Peninin (Choice of Pearls). No. 17. (c.1050) Ascher, tr.

A man without knowledge, an I have read,
May well be compared to one that is dead.

THOMAS INGELAND, The Disobedient Child. (c. 1560)

A man without knowledge, a world without light.
(Hombre sin noticias, mundo á obscuras.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 4 (1647)

'Tis a great thing to know, little to live: no real life without knowledge. (Hay mucho que saber y es poco el vivir, y no se vive si no se sabe.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim. 15.

4 Knowledge is folly except grace guide it.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 250. (1640) A rendering of the Spanish proverb, "Ciencia es locura si buen senso no la cura" (Knowledge is madness if good sense does not direct it).

Knowledge is no burthen.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 694.
Knowledge makes one laugh, but Wealth makes one dance.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 955.

5 The worst of human sorrows is to have much knowledge but no power. (πολλὰ φρονέοντα μηδένος κρατεῖν.)

HERODOTUS, History. Bk. ix, ch. 16. (c.445 B. C.)
He that increaseth knowledge increaseth sorrow. (Qui addit scientiam, addit et laborem.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, i, 18. (c. 250 B. C.)
He who increases knowledge increases sorrow. (Qui multiplicat scientiam, multiplicat dolorem.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 361. (1869) "In much wisdom is much grief."

He who knows has many cares. (Wer viel weiss Hat viel zu sorgen.)

LESSING, Nathan der Weise. Act iv, sc. 2. (1779)
To know all is to fear all. ('Chüan shih 'chüan ching.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 186. (1872)

6 Knowledge and timber shouldn't be much used till they are seasoned.

O. W. HOLMES, The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 6. (1858)

7 It is the peculiarity of knowledge that those who really thirst for it always get it.

RICHARD JEFFERIES, Country Literature. (c.1880)

8 We speak that we do know, and testify that we have seen. (ὁ οἶδμεν λαλοῦμεν καὶ ὁ εἰδράκαμεν μαρτυροῦμεν.)

New Testament: John, iii, 11. (c. A. D. 95) The Vulgate is, "Quod scimus loquimur, et quod vidimus testamur."

He said it that knew it best.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Boldness. (1597)

9 All wish to know, but none to pay the fee. (Nosse volunt omnes, mercedem solvere nemo.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vii, l. 157. (c. A. D. 150)

10 The mind is trained by knowledge.

KHATI I, KING OF EGYPT, Teaching. No. ix. (c. 2500 B. C.) Budge, tr.

11 But the fact is, a man may do very well with a very little knowledge and scarce be found out, in mixed company.

CHARLES LAMB, Essays of Elia: The Old and the New Schoolmaster. (1823)

12 He that knows thee will never buy thee.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, tr., Quevedo's Visions, p. 28. (1667) Cited as "the old proverb."

13 We must view with profound respect the infinite capacity of the human mind to resist the introduction of useful knowledge.

THOMAS R. LOUNSBURY, Apothegm. (c. 1910)
See LOCKWOOD, The Freshman and His College, p. 44.

14 To know is not to know, unless some one else has known that I know. (Scire est nescire, nisi id me scire alius scierit.)

LUCILIUS, Satires. Bk. i, frag. 31. (c. 123 B. C.)

Your knowing is nothing unless some other person knows that you know. (Scire tuum nihil est, nisi te scire hoc sciat alter.)

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. i, l. 27. (c. A. D. 58) There is a similar Latin proverb, "Scientia non visae, ut thesauri absconditi, nulla est utilitas" (In knowledge unseen, as in hidden treasure, there is no usefulness). A jingle, sometimes attributed to Lord Nancy, has also been built around these epigrams:

To have a thing is nothing, if you've not the chance to show it,

And to know a thing is nothing, unless others know you know it.

This you know I know.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream, iii, 2, 163. (1596)

A good Edge is good for nothing, if it has nothing to cut.

GEORGE FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 145. (1732)

BEAUTY UNSEEN IS NO BEAUTY, see under BEAUTY.

<sup>1</sup> What can give us surer knowledge than our senses? (Quid nobis certius ipsis | sensibus esse potest?)

LUCRETIVS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. i, l. 700. (c. 45 B.C.)

<sup>2</sup> Knowledge advances by steps, and not by leaps.

T. B. MACAULAY, Essays: History. (c. 1844)

<sup>3</sup> Knowledge that puffeth up the possessor's mind

Is ever more of a pernicious kind.

WILLIAM MATHER, The Young Man's Companion: Preface. (1681)

<sup>4</sup> In vain have you acquired knowledge if you have not imparted it to others.

Midrash: Deuteronomy Rabbah, 2. (c. 500)

<sup>5</sup> Go in quest of knowledge even unto China.

MOHAMMED, Sunnah. (c. 630) Sayings of Muhammad, p. 92.

If a man will not seek knowledge, it will not seek him.

SIMEON ASHKENAZI(?), Yalkut Mishly, 132. (c. 1250)

The struggle for knowledge hath a pleasure in it like that of wrestling with a fine woman.

LORD HALIFAX, Moral Reflections. (c. 1690)

<sup>6</sup> Knowledge is an excellent drug, but no drug is strong enough to preserve itself without alteration and corruption, according to the defect of the vase which contains it. (C'est une bonne drogue que la science, mais nulle drogue n'est assez forte pour se préserver sans alteration et corruption, selon le vice du vase qui l'estuye.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 24. (1580)

To know by rote is not to know. (Sçavoir par cœur n'est pas sçavoir.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 25.

What good is knowledge, if knowledge makes us cowards? (A quoi faire la cognoissance des choses, si nous en devenons plus lasches?)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 40.

What's the use of knowledge to a man who no longer has a head? (A quoy la science, à qui n'a plus de teste?)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 10.

<sup>7</sup> To know much is often the cause of doubting more. (Luy que le beaucoup sçavoir apporte l'occasion de plus douter.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 12. (1580) Montaigne quotes this as a saying of Aristotle, but he probably had in mind "Qui plura novit, eum maiora sequuntur dubia," which is attributed to AENEAS SILVIUS, who later became Pope Pius II.

He that knows nothing, doubts nothing. (Qui rien ne sait, de rien ne doute.)

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Rien. (1611)
Herbert, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

We know accurately only when we know little; with knowledge doubt increases. (Eigentlich weiss man nur wenn man wenig weiss; mit dem Wissen wächst der Zweifel.)

GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa. (c. 1825)

Here is excellently unfolded to us the secret of the fool's confidence, Who knows nothing, doubts nothing.

TRENCH, Lessons in Proverbs. Ch. 4. (1852)

He who knows nothing is confident in everything.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk. Ch. 2. (1869)

Learning learns but one lesson: doubt!

SHAW, The Admirable Bashville. Act i. (1926)

<sup>8</sup> Too much, and too little knowledge, have made the world mad.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Newes from the Church (1613)

<sup>9</sup> Yea, knowledge is the armour of prooffe which neither Cannon, Hargabus, nor Pistol can peerce.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 255. (1576)

<sup>10</sup> I don't think it, I know it. (εὐ μὲν οὖν οἶδα.)

PLATO, The Republic. Bk. i, sec. 341A. (c. 375 B.C.)

I wot what I wot, though I few wordis make.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

JOHN DAVIES, Scourge of Folly, p. 47. (1611)

I know what I know.

CHRISTOPHER MARLOWE, The Jew of Malta. Act iv, sc. 1. (c. 1592) WEYMAN, Starvecrow Farm. Ch. 28. (1905)

<sup>11</sup> Even a child could see that. (τοῦτο δὲ κἀν παῖς γινώσκει.)

PLATO, Euthydemus. Sec. 279D. (c. 390 B.C.)

That's clear even to a child. (ὁῦλον τοῦτό γε ἤδη καὶ παῖδι.)

PLATO, Symposium. Sec. 204B. (c. 380 B.C.)

Every schoolboy has that famous testament of Grunnius Corocotta Porcellus at his fingers' ends.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. i, memb. i, subs. 1. (1621)

Every schol-boy knows it.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Real Presence Sec. 5. (1654)

How haughtily he lifts his Nose,

To tell what ev'ry School Boy knows

SWIFT, The Journal, l. 81. (1721)

An old tale which every schoolboy knows.

WILLIAM WHITEHEAD, The Roman Father: Prologue. (1750)

The frequency of Macaulay's reference to somewhat abstruse matters as subjects which any public schoolboy would know, has led to his being credited with the phrase. It is to be found, however, in many earlier authors.

W. G. BENHAM, Proverbs, p. 455. (1907)

<sup>12</sup> Know not what you know, and see not what you see. (Etiam illud quod scies nesciveris | ne videris quod videris.)

PLAUTUS, Miles Gloriosus, l. 572. (c. 200 B.C.)

You, in truth, if you are wise, will not know what you do know. (Tu pol, si sapiis, quod scis nescis.)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 721. (161 B.C.)

1 Through knowledge shall the just be delivered. (Iusti autem liberabuntur scientia.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xi, 9. (c. 350 B. C.)
The lips of knowledge are a precious jewel. (Vas pretiosum labia scientiae.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xx, 15.

'Tis a godlike attribute to know.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Solomon. Bk. i, l. 43. (a.1721)

2 A wise man is strong; yea, a man of knowledge increaseth strength. (Vir sapiens, fortis est; et vir doctus, robustus et validus.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxiv, 5. (c. 250 B. C.)
Knowledge and human power are synonymous. (Scientia et potentia humana in idem coincidunt.)

FRANCIS BACON, Novum Organum. Aphor. 3. (1620)

Knowledge itself is power. (Nam et ipsa scientia potestas est.)

FRANCIS BACON, De Heresibus. (c. 1626)

They say that "Knowledge is power." I used to think so.

LORD BYRON, Letters, vi, 11. (1822)

"Knowledge is power," but . . . knowledge of itself, unless wisely directed, might merely make bad men more dangerous.

SAMUEL SMILES, Self Help. Ch. 11, (1859)

There is no knowledge that is not power.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Old Age. (1870)
Knowledge is power, and I never sell power.

SHAW, Mrs. Warren's Profession. Act i. (1893)
[Bacon's] Latin apophthegm, "nam ipsa scientia potestas est—for knowledge is power—might be described as the watchword of the intellectual history of England . . . in the sixteenth century.

SIDNEY LEE, Great Englishmen of the Sixteenth Century, p. 4. (1907) The French say, "Savoir c'est pouvoir."

Women understand men . . . better than any man understands women. Since knowledge is power, woman has a control over man which man never had over her.

SPENDER, Comments of Bagshot. Ch. 9. (1925)

3 What harm in getting knowledge even from a sot, a pot, a fool, a mitten, or a slipper? (Que nuist scavoir tousiours, & tousiours aprendre, feust ce d'un sot, d'un pot, d'une guedoufle, d'une moufle, d'une pantoufle?)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 16. (1545)

Learn of the mole to plough, the worm to weave.

POPE, An Essay on Man. Epis. iii, l. 176. (1732)

Acquire learning even from the mouth of cows.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 234. (1817)

Another form is, "Be eager for knowledge, even if it comes from the snout of a hog."

4 Knowledge of itself is riches.

SADI, Gulistan. Tale ii: Of the Effects of Education. (c. 1250)

Let the fools talk: knowledge has its price. (Laissez dire les sots: le savoir a son prix.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: L'Avantage de la Science. Bk. viii, fab. 19. (1678) Wright renders it, "Let fools the studious despise, | There's nothing lost by being wise."

There is no knowledge that is not valuable.

EDMUND BURKE, American Taxation. (1774)

5 It is one thing to remember, another to know. (Aliud autem est meminisse, aliud scire.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xxxiii, sec. 8. (c. A. D. 64)

All knowledge is remembrance.

THOMAS HOBBES, Human Nature. Ch. 6. (1651)

6 Too much to know is to know nought but fame.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, i, 1, 92. (1595)

7 He knew many things, but knew all badly. (πολλ' ἤπιστατο ἔργα, κακῶς δ' ἤπιστατο πάντα.)

STASINUS OF CYPRUS (?), The Margites. No. 3. (c. 675 B. C.) Quoted by PLATO, Alciades, ii, 147A. See also JACK OF ALL TRADES.

Far better to know one thing thoroughly,

Than to be superficially dressed up with many.

(πολὺ κρείττον' ἐστὶν ἐν καλῶς μεμαθηκέναι ἢ πολλὰ φαιλῶς περιβεβληθῆαι πράγματα.)

MENANDER, Fragments. Frag. 683K. (c. 300 B. C.)

Haue in all Sciences a smacke.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 151. (1579)

It is far better to know something about everything than to know all about one thing. Universality is the best.

BLAISE PASCAL, Pensées. Sec. 1, No. 37. (c. 1660)

I altogether disagree with the maxim which says that A cultured man should know something of everything. Knowledge is almost always useless, and sometimes harmful, if it is superficial. (Je n'approuve point la maxime qui veut qu'un honnête homme sache un peu de tout. C'est savoir presque toujours inutilement, et, quelquefois, pernicieusement, que de savoir superficiellement.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 217. (1746)

8 The desire of knowledge, like the thirst of riches, increases ever with the acquisition of it.

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. ii, ch. 3. (1759)

9 When you know one you know all. (Unum quom noris omnis noris.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 265. (161 B. C.)

10 There are many things, the knowledge of which is of little or no profit to the soul. (Multa sunt, quae scire parum vel nihil animae prosunt.)

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Bk. i, ch. 2. (c. 1420)

11 Knowledge is no proof of genius. (Le savoir n'est preuve de génie.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 217. (1746)

12 Knowledge is the only fountain, both of the love and the principles of human liberty.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Address, at the dedication of Bunker Hill monument, 17 June, 1843.

Knowledge is now no more a fountain seal'd.

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. ii, l. 76. (1847)

A Fountain Sealed.

ANNE DOUGLAS EDGWICK, Title of novel. (1907)

1 A mirror is of no use to a blind man, nor knowledge to a man without discernment.

UNKNOWN, Niti Sastras (Moral Stanzas). (c. 1250)

2 First come I; my name is Jowett.
There is no knowledge but I know it.
I am Master of this college:
What I don't know isn't knowledge.

UNKNOWN, Epigram on Dr. Benjamin Jowett.
Written probably by a group of Balliol undergraduates, c. 1876. A later and more euphonious form is:

My name is Benjamin Jowett,
I'm Master of Balliol College;
Whatever is knowledge I know it,
And what I don't know isn't knowledge.

II—Knowledge: Knowing Nothing

3 Our knowledge, compared with Thine, is ignorance. (Scientia nostra, scientiae tuae comparata, ignorantia est.)

ST. AUGUSTINE, Confessions. Bk. xi, sec. 4. (A. D. 397)

Before God we are all equally wise—equally foolish.

ALBERT EINSTEIN, Cosmic Religion, p. 105. (1933)

4 Train thy tongue to say, "I do not know," lest thou be entrapped into falsehood.

Babylonian Talmud: Berachoth, fo. 9b. (c. 450)

5 I come from my vineyard, I know nothing.
(De mis viñas vengo, no sé nada.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 25. (1605)
i. e. I am only an ignorant country fellow, a vine-dresser.

6 What man knows is not to be compared with what he does not know.

CHUANG-TSZE, Philosophy. Ch. 1. (c. 400 B. C.)
Giles, tr.

The cock crows and the dog barks. So much we know. But the wisest of us could not say why one crows and the other barks, nor guess why they crow or bark at all.

CHUANG-TSZE, Philosophy. Ch. 5.

Spread out your knowledge, and you will see how shallow it is.

CHUANG-TSZE, Philosophy. Ch. 11.

7 When you know, to know that you know, and when you do not know, to know that you do not know, that is knowledge. (Chee hoo chee chee wy chee chee put chee wy put chee see chee.)

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. ii, ch. 17. (c. 500 B. C.)
Legge, tr.

What I do not know I do not think I know.
(ὅτι ἂν μὴ οὐδὲ οἶμαι εἰδέναι.)

PLATO, Apology of Socrates. Sec. 21D. (399 B. C.)
Mankind may be divided into four classes: (1) those who know and know that they know—of them seek knowledge; (2) those who know but do not know that they know—awaken them; (3) those who do not know and know that they do not know—instruct them; (4) those who do not know but think that they know—they are fools, dismiss them.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Peninim (Choice of Pearls). No. 60. (c. 1050)

For when I dinna clearly see,

I always own I dinna ken,

An' that's the way o' wisest men.

ALLAN RAMSAY, The Clock and Dial. (1721)

To be conscious that you are ignorant is a great step to knowledge.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Sybil. Bk. i, ch. 5. (1845)

To know that we know what we know, and that we do not know what we do not know, that is true knowledge.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden. Ch. 1. Quoting Confucius. (1854)

There are four sorts of men:

He who knows not and knows not he knows not:
he is a fool—shun him;

He who knows not and knows he knows not: he is simple—teach him;

He who knows and knows not he knows: he is asleep—wake him;

He who knows and knows he knows: he is wise—follow him.

LADY BURTON, Life of Sir Richard Burton.

Quoted as an Arabian proverb, but it is evidently a paraphrase of Salomon Ibn Gabirol, as given above. (See Spectator, 11 Aug., 1894, p. 176.) The saying is sometimes attributed to Darius the Persian.

8 Knowledge is the knowing that we cannot know.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Montaigne. (1850) The proverb is usually put in this form: "He knows most that knows he knows little."

9 'T is better not to know, than knowing err.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1751.

Better know nothing than half know many things
(Lieber nichts wissen, als vieles halb wissen.)

FRIEDRICH NIETZSCHE, Also Sprach Zarathustra
Pt. iii, Der Bluteigel. (1885)

It is better not to know so much than to know so many things that ain't so.

JOSH BILLINGS. See JEROME A. HART, In Our Second Century, p. 307. The form of the saying was varied by its author from time to time. On 13 Oct., 1885, he wrote it for a friend: "It is better to know less than to know so much that ain't so." The original wording in Josh Billings's Encyclopedia of Wit and Wisdom, p. 286 (1874), was: "It is better to know nothing than to know what ain't so."

A man of vast and varied misinformation.

WILLIAM GAYNOR. When Mayor of New York, referring to Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, who had criticized his administration. (1911)

A LITTLE LEARNING IS A DANGEROUS THING, see under LEARNING.

1 To know, but to be as though not knowing, is the height of wisdom. Not to know, and yet to affect knowledge, is a vice. (Chih pu chih 'shang; pu chih chih ping'.)

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue). Sec. 71. (c. 550 B. C.) Giles, tr.

2 Nothing is so firmly believed as that which a man knoweth least. (N'est rien creu si fermement que ce qu'on sçait le moins.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 31. (1580)

He that knows nothing, doubts nothing.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 860. (1640) From the Italian, "Chi niente sa, di niente dubita."

He who knows nothing is confident in evèrything. C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk. Ch. 2. (1869)

3 Man, who prides himself upon his knowledge, does not yet know what knowledge is. (L'homme, qui presume de son sçavoir, ne sçait pas encore ce c'est que sçavoir.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 12. (1580)

4 No one have I seen who knew all that a man should know. (Neminem vidi qui sciret quicquid scito opust.)

NAEVIUS, Fragments. Frag. 41, Loeb. (c. 220 B. C.)

5 Who pretend to know everything, and don't know anything. (Qui omnia se simulant scire, neque quicquam sciunt.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus, l. 205. (c. 194 B. C.)

6 He that knows little soon repeats it. (Quien poco sabe presto lo reza.)

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Spanish, p. 104. (1678)

He that knows little often repeats it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2209. (1732)

He that knows least commonly presumes most.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2208.

7 The only thing that we never know is to ignore what we cannot know. (La seule chose que nous ne savons point, est d'ignorer ce que nous ne pouvons savoir.)

ROUSSEAU, Emile. Bk. iv. (1762)

8 It is better to know useless things than to know nothing. (Satiùs est supervacua scire quam nihil.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxxviii, sec. 45. (c. A. D. 64)

9 Nature has given us the seeds of knowledge, but not knowledge itself. (Natura . . . semina nobis scientiae dedit, scientiam non dedit.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. cxx, sec. 4. (c. A. D. 64)

10 I know nothing except the fact of my ignorance. (εἰδέναι μὲν μηδὲν πλὴν αὐτὸ τοῦτο [εἰδέναι].)

SOCRATES, Epigram. (c. 400 B. C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Socrates. Bk. ii, sec. 32

I am conscious of my own ignorance. (συνειδὼς ἑμαυτῷ ἀμαθίαν.)

PLATO, Phaedrus. Sec. 235D. (c. 385 B. C.)

H. N. FOWLER, tr.

This one of you, O men, is wisest, who, like Socrates, recognizes that he knows nothing in respect to wisdom. (ὁτι οὗτος ὑμῶν, ὃ ἄνθρωποι, σοφώτατός ἐστιν, ὅστις ὥσπερ Σωκράτης ἔγνωκεν ὅτι οὐδενὸς ἀξίός ἐστι τῇ ἀληθείᾳ πρὸς σοφίαν.)

PLATO, The Apology of Socrates. Sec. 23B. (c. 375 B. C.)

I know nothing except that I know nothing. (Nil scio nisi nescio.)

PLAUTUS, Bacchides, l. 323. (190 B. C.) Quoting Socrates.

The method of discussion pursued by Socrates . . . is to affirm nothing himself, . . . to assert that he knows nothing except the fact of his own ignorance, and that he surpassed all other people in that they think they know things that they do not know but he himself thinks he knows nothing, and that he believed this to have been the reason why Apollo declared him to be the wisest of all men. (Eoque praestare ceteris quod illi quae nesciant scire se putent, ipse se nihil scire, id unum sciat.)

CICERO, Academica. Bk. i, ch. 4, sec. 16. (c. 45 B. C.)

If anyone thinks that nothing is known, he does not even know whether that can be known, since he declares that he knows nothing. (Nil sciri quis putat, id quoque nescit | an sciri possit, quoniam nil scire fatetur.)

LUCRETIUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. iv, l. 469. (c. 45 B. C.) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, Essays, Bk. ii, ch. 12.

The wisest man that ever was, when asked what he knew, answered, the only thing he knew was that he knew nothing. (Le plus sage homme qui feut oncques, quand on luy demanda ce qu'il sçavoit, respondit, "Qu'il sçavoit cela, qu'il ne sçavoit rien.")

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 12. (1580) The Spaniards say, "Bien sabe el sabio que no sabe; el nescio piensa que sabe" (The wise man knows well that he does not know; the ignorant man imagines that he knows).

The wisest of all mortal men

Said he knew nought, but that he nought did know.

SIR JOHN DAVIES, The Vanity of Human Learning. St. 20. (1597)

Socrates was pronounced by the oracle of Delphos to be the wisest man of Greece, which he would put from himself ironically, saying, "there would be nothing in him to verify the oracle, except this; that he was not wise and knew it; and others were not wise, and knew it not."

FRANCIS BACON, Apophthegms. No. 233. (1625)

Heads of capacity . . . think they know nothing till they know all; which being impossible, they fall upon the opinion of Socrates, and only know they know not any thing.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. ii, sec. 8. (1643)

Great souls, who, having run through all that men can know, find that they know nothing. (Les grandes âmes, qui, ayant parcouru tout ce que les hommes peuvent savoir, trouvent qu'ils ne savent rien.)

BLAISE PASCAL, Pensées. Pt. i, art. vi, No. 25. (1660)

The first and wisest of them all profess'd
To know this only, that he nothing knew.

MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. iv, l. 293. (1671)

You read of but one wise man, and all that he knew was that he knew nothing.

WILLIAM CONGREVE, The Old Batchelor. Act. i, sc. 1. (1693)

He who knows most knows best how little he knows.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. (c. 1790) See BOYKIN,
Wisdom of Jefferson, p. 11.

Well didst thou speak, Athena's wisest son!
"All that we know is, nothing can be known."

LORD BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto ii, st. 7. (1812)
All things I thought I knew; but now confess
The more I know I know, I know the less.

ROBERT OWEN, Works. Vol. vi, ch. 39. (1857)
The only thing that we can know is that we know nothing, and this is the highest flight of human wisdom!

TOLSTOY, War and Peace. Vol. ii, pt. ii, ch. 1.
(1865) Dole, tr.

1 In knowing nothing is the sweetest life.

SOPHOCLES, Ajax, l. 554. See under IGNORANCE:
WHERE IGNORANCE IS BLISS.

He which knoweth least, lyueth longest.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber),
p. 264. (1580) There is a Latin proverb,
"Nihil scire est vita iucundissima" (The happiest life is to know nothing).

2 Do they not show by too much knowledge that they know nothing? (Faciumtne intellegendo ut nil intellegant?)

TERENCE, Andria: Prologue, l. 17. (166 B. C.)

3 No man knows distinctly anything, and no man ever will. (καὶ τὸ μὲν οὐ σαφὲς οὐτις ἀνὴρ ἰδεν οὐδέ τις ἔσται εἰδώς)

XENOPHANES, Fragments. Frag. 34. (c. 550 B. C.)
See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pyrrho, ix, 72.

Now I see that we can know nothing finally.
(Und sehe, dass wir nichts wissen können!)

GOETHE, Faust. Pt. i, sc. 1. (1806)

We know nothing rightly, for want of perspective.
R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Nature. (1844)

What is all our knowledge? We do not even know what the weather will be tomorrow.

BERTHOLD AUERBACH, On the Heights. (1870)
We know nothing important. In the essentials we are still as wholly a mystery to ourselves as Adam was to himself.

BOOTH TARKINGTON, Looking Forward, p. 74.
(1926)

We do not know one millionth of one per cent about anything.

THOMAS A. EDISON. See Golden Book, Apr., 1931.

4 Strange how much you'd got to know
Before you know how little you know!

UNKNOWN, Epigram on Knowledge.

III—To Know What's What

5 He knew white. (τὸ λευκὸν οἶδεν.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Knights, l. 1279. (424 B. C.)
The proverb is "To know black from white"
(ὅστις οἶδε τὸ λευκὸν ἢ τὸ μέλαν), but Aristophanes provides a surprise ending in ἢ τὸν ὄρθιον νόμον.

To know number. (ἀριθμὸν εἰδέναι.)

EURIPIDES, Erechtheus. Fr. 17, l. 19. (c. 420 B. C.)

6 I knew right off the bat.

F. W. BRONSON, Nice People Don't Kill, p. 14.
(1940)

7 O Pandarus, now knowe I crop and rote!

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde, Bk. v, l.
1245. (c. 1380)

8 The captain . . . who "knew the ropes," took the steering oar.

R. H. DANA, Two Years Before the Mast. Ch. 9
(1840) See under ROPE.

9 Our governor's wide awake. . . . He knows what's o'clock.

DICKENS, Sketches by Boz, p. 451. (1836)

You've learnt your lesson, found out what's o'clock.

ROBERT BROWNING, The Two Poets of Croisic
St. 94. (1878)

10 I know 'em from sidecombs to shoelaces.

O. HENRY, Nemesis and the Candy Man. (1908)

11 Myselfe knowth him, I dare boldly brag,
Euen as well as the beggar knowth his bag.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

Such as he knew as well as the Begger his dishe.

GOSSON, The Schoole of Abuse, p. 74. (1579)

As well as the beggar knows his dish.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, The Wise-Woman of Hogs-don. Act ii, sc. 1. (1638)

Know him! ay, as well as the beggar knows his dish.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738) "Saberlo como su Paternoster" (He knows it as well as the Lord's Prayer), is a Spanish proverb, common, with slight variations, to most continental languages

12 I know on which side my bread is buttered.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)
See under BREAD.

I know . . . which waie the winde blewe and will blow.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)
See under WIND.

13 You know a thing or two, Mr. Selby.

THOMAS HOLCROFT, The Road to Ruin. (1792)
She loved a book, and knew a thing or two.

WALTER SCOTT, The Search after Happiness.
Ch. 18. (1817)

14 You know me, Al.

RING LARDNER. Title and refrain of a book of baseball stories. (1916)

<sup>1</sup>
I know all your blots and black marks. (Tuas omnes maculasque notasque.)

LUCILIUS, Satires. Bk. xxx, frag. 1070, Loeb. (c. 125 B. C.)

<sup>2</sup>
I know that better than I know my name. (Teneo melius ista quam meum nomen.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. iv, epig. 37, l. 7. (c. A. D. 90) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, iv, 91. Erasmus also quotes from Juvenal, "Tanquam unguis digitosque suos" (I know it better than I know my nails and fingers).

<sup>3</sup>
I know you within and on the skin. (Ego te intus et in cute novi.)

PERSIUS, Satires. No. iii, l. 30. (c. A. D. 58) I know you inside and outside.

I know him as well as if I'd gone thro' him with a lighted Link.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2611. (1732)

I know him as well as though I had gone through him with a lighted candle.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Pictures, p. 97. (1880)

I know him like a book.

CHARLES F. BRIGGS, Adventures of Henry Franco, i, 73. (1839)

I know him from A to Izzard.

H. S. KEELER, The Sharkskin Book, p. 207. (1941)

I know him as well as I know the back of my hand.

MARGARET MILLAR, Wall of Eyes, p. 154. (1943)

I know that book like the back of my hand.

MICHAEL INNES, The Weight of the Evidence, p. 156. (1943)

<sup>4</sup>
I knew that before you were born. (Ante hac novi quam tu natus es.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. v, fable 9. (c. 25 B. C.) The fable of the calf that tried to instruct the bull, concluding, "Let him who would instruct a wiser man, consider this as said to himself."

<sup>5</sup>
He knowes how many days go to the week.

THOMAS POWELL, Tom of All Trades, p. 171. (1631)

<sup>6</sup>
I know that you know an ace more than the devil.

THOMAS SHELTON, tr., Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 28. (1620)

He knows one point more than the devil.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs: Spanish-English, p. 2. (1659)

<sup>7</sup>
For wa I wist noght what was what.

UNKNOWN, Ywaine and Gawin, l. 432. (c. 1400)

And elles woot I beuere what is what.

THOMAS HOCCLIVE, Minor Poems, p. 138. (1440)

He said he knew what was what.

JOHN SKELTON, Why Come Ye Not to Court, l. 1107. (c. 1520)

Nowe I see you know what is what.

NICOLAS UDALL, Ralph Roister Doister. Act i, sc. 2. (c. 1550)

I know what's what.

JOHN FORD, Lady's Trial. Act ii, sc. 1. (1638)

He knew what's what, and that's as high

As metaphysic wit can fly.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, Canto i, l. 149. (1663)

This sly saint . . . understands what's what as well as you or I.

RICHARD STEELE, The Spectator. No. 132. (1711)

That 'ere young lady . . . knows wot's wot, she does.

DICKENS, The Pickwick Papers. Ch. 37. (1837)

TO KNOW ONE'S SELF, see under SELF-KNOWLEDGE.

IV—Knowledge and Ignorance

<sup>8</sup>
A seeming ignorance is often a most necessary part of worldly knowledge.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 15 Jan., 1753.

<sup>9</sup>
Knowledge hath no enemy but ignorance.

WILLIAM CUNNINGHAM, The Cosmographical Glasse, p. 46. (1559)

For thus the saying goes, and I hold so:

Ignorance onely is true wisdomes foe.

GEORGE WITHER, Abuses Stript and Whipt, Bk ii, sat. 1. (1613)

<sup>10</sup>
He that boasts of his own Knowledge, proclaims his Ignorance.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2051. (1732)

<sup>11</sup>
True knowledge is modest and wary; 'tis ignorance that is bold and presuming.

JOSEPH GLANVILL, Scep sis Scientifica. (1661)

<sup>12</sup>
To know one's ignorance is the best part of knowledge.

LAO-TSZE, The Simple Way. No. 71. (c. 550 B. C.)

<sup>13</sup>
Knowledge is better than ignorance.

EARL RIVERS, tr., Dictes and Sayenges of the Philosophers, p. 27. (1477)

<sup>14</sup>
Ignorance is the curse of God, Knowledge the wing wherewith we fly to heaven.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, iv, 7, 78. (1500)

<sup>15</sup>
There is only one good, that is knowledge; there is only one evil, that is ignorance. (μόνον ἀγαθόν εἶναι, τὴν ἐπιστήμην, καὶ ἐν μόνον κακόν, τὴν ἀμαθίαν.)

SOCRATES, Epigram. (c. 400 B. C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Socrates, ii, 31.

Knowledge is the mother of all virtue; all vice proceeds from ignorance. (La science est mere de toute vertu, et tout vice est produit par l'ignorance.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 12. (1580) Quoting an old saying.

<sup>16</sup>
Knowledge holdeth by the hilt, and heweth out a road to conquest; Ignorance graspeth the blade, and is wounded by its own good sword.

M. F. TUPPER, Proverbial Philosophy: Of Self-Acquaintance. (1839)

V—Knowledge and Wisdom

1 There is no great concurrence between learning and wisdom.

FRANCIS BACON, Of the Advancement of Learning: Civil Knowledge. Sec. 4. (1605)

2 Where no knowledge is wisdom faileth.

BEN SIRA, Book of wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), iii, 25 (c. 190 B. C.) Oesterley, tr.

3 Knowledge is the parent of love; wisdom, love itself.

J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth. (1827)

Love is ever the beginning of Knowledge as fire is of light.

CARLYLE, Essays: Death of Goethe. (1833)

A loving heart is the beginning of all knowledge.

CARLYLE, Essays: Biography.

4 Knowledge, when wisdom is too weak to guide her,

Is like a headstrong horse, that throws the rider.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Miscellanies. (a. 1644) Sometimes attributed to Robert Robinson, Vicar of Harlow. (c. 1580) See Notes and Queries, 25 June, 1910.

5 No man is the wiser for his learning.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Learning. (a. 1654)

We live and learn, but not the wiser grow.

JOHN POMFRET, Reason, l. 112. (a. 1702)

Knowledge and Wisdom, far from being one,

Have ofttimes no connexion. Knowledge dwells

In heads replete with thoughts of other men;

Wisdom in minds attentive to their own. . . .

Knowledge is proud that he had learn'd so much;

Wisdom is humble that he knows no more.

WILLIAM COWPER, The Task. Bk. vi, l. 88. (1784)

6 It is the province of knowledge to speak, and it is the privilege of wisdom to listen.

HOLMES, Poet at Breakfast-Table. Ch. 10. (1872)

7 Knowledge comes, but wisdom lingers.

TENNYSON, Locksley Hall, l. 141. (1842)

As the poet says, "Knowledge comes, but wisdom lingers." Wisdom is dew, which, while we know it not, soaks into us, refreshes us and makes us grow. Knowledge is a strong stream of water turned on us through a hose. It disturbs our roots.

O. Henry, The Higher Pragmatism. (1909)

VI—Knowledge: Not to Know

8 The kid doesn't know his head from a cabbage.

STEPHEN ACRE, Yellow Overcoat, p. 221. (1942)

9 He does not know in the heavens any star but Syrius.

J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 608. (1817) He knows nothing about the business.

10 He knew less than the Pope of Rome.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto iii, l. 894. (1663)

To know one no more than he does the Pope of Rome.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 255. (1678)

I can read no more than the Pope of Rome.

UNKNOWN, Oxford Jests, p. 93. (1706)

He . . . assured the gentleman . . . that he knew no more of Italy than the Pope of Rome.

UNKNOWN, The Looker-On. No. 73. (1793)

11 Fooles . . . have the wit to keep themselves out of the rain.

HENRY BUTTES, Dyets Drie Dinner, sig. B4. (1599)

In business matters they [literary persons] do not know enough to come in when it rains.

MARK TWAIN, In Eruption, p. 177. (1906)

[He doesn't] know enough to go in when it rains

EDITH WYATT, The Invisible Gods, p. 19. (1923)

He didn't know enough to come in out of the rain

BUDD SCHULBERG, What Makes Sammy Run, p. 9. (1941)

An innocent old lamb who didn't know enough to come in out of the rain.

F. W. CROFTS, Double Tragedy, p. 19. (1943)

12 I didn't know my ear from a hole in the ground.

O. R. COHEN, Sound of Revelry, p. 123. (1943)

13 He does not know a fox from a fern-bush.

MICHAEL DENHAM, Denham Tracts, ii, 107 (1846) See also under Fox.

14 He knew not a B from a battledore, nor ever a letter of the book.

JOHN FOXE, The Book of Martyrs, ii, 474. (1553)

He . . . knewe not a letter, or a b from a batel-dore.

JOSEPH HALL, Hist. Expostulation, p. 16. (1565)

The learnedest of them could not say . . . B to a battledore.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Works (Grosart), ii, 208 (1593) A hornbook was shaped something like a battledore, and to be able to say B when B was pointed to in the hornbook was called "to say B to a battledore." In other words, to know the letters of the alphabet.

You shall not need to buy bookes, no, scorne to distinguish a B from a battle dore.

THOMAS DEKKER, The Guls Horne-Booke, p. 3 (1609)

15 They don't, as a rule, know a goose from a gridiron.

J. C. HUTCHESON, Crown and Anchor. Ch. 6 (1896)

I do not know a nut from a meg.

OGDEN NASH, Suppose He Threw It in Your Face. (1942)

He don't know a plow from a thrashin' machine.

OSCAR HAMMERSTEIN, Oklahoma! Act i. (1943)

16 Not knowing even his Q. (οὐδὲ κῶππα γινώσκων.)

PARMENIDES, Apothegm. (c. 470 B. C.) See

ATHANAUEUS, Deipnosophistai. Sec. 221A. Q was a letter of the older Greek alphabet which had fallen out of use in writing. A similar Greek proverb is οὐδὲ τὰ τρία Στρατιχοῦ γινῶναι (Not to know even Stesichorus' three rules), i. e. strophe, antistrophe, and epode—in other words, to be completely ignorant.

<sup>1</sup>
So long as I know it not, it hurteth mee not.
GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace: Cephalus and Procris, p. 204. (1576)

What a fellow doesn't know doesn't hurt him.
EUGENE WALTER, The Easiest Way. Act iii. (1908)

I always say that what a person don't know don't hurt them.

RING LARDNER, Zone of Quiet. (1926)
What they don't know won't hurt them.
KATHLEEN KNIGHT, Rendezvous With the Past, p. 83. (1940)

What she doesn't know she can't crab about.
FRANCIS BONNAMY, Dead Reckoning, p. 43. (1943)

<sup>2</sup>
He knows not whether his shoe goes awry.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 81. (1678)
He knows not a pig from a dog.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 264.

<sup>3</sup>
On I wrote, knowing no more than the man in the moon how I was to end.
WALTER SCOTT, in LOCKHART, Life, ii, 28. (1805)
I knew no more than the man in the moon about my only occupation.
R. L. STEVENSON, An Inland Voyage: Down the Oise. (1878)

<sup>4</sup>
I know a hawk from a handsaw.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, ii, 2, 399. (1600) "Handsaw" is usually explained as a corruption of "heronshaw," or "hernshaw," a heron.

He knows not a hawk from a handsaw.
SUSANNA CENTILVRE, The Stolen Heiress. Act iii, sc. 4. (1703)

Who can tell a hawk from a handsaw?
CHARLES KINGSLEY, Alton Locke. Ch. 4. (1850)
I have heard the proverb, "He doesn't know a hawk from a handsaw."

R. L. GALES, Studies in Arcady. Ser. ii, p. 241. (1912)

He attracted much unfavorable attention by trying to saw wood with a hawk.

OGDEN NASH, The Strange Case of the Wise Child. (1935)

<sup>5</sup>
We'll teach him to know turtles from jays.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, iii, 3, 44. (1601)

I know a cat from a cowl staff.
THOMAS DILKE, Lover's Luck. Act iii, sc. 1. (1696)

Johnson just knew the bell of St. Clement's church from the organ.

MACAULAY, Essays: Madame D'Arblay. (c.1859)

<sup>6</sup>
As God loves me, I know not where I am!
(Ita me di ament, ubi sim nescio.)

TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos, l. 308. (163 B. C.)

<sup>7</sup>
He knows not whether I am alive or dead.
(οὐδ' ἔγνω, πότερον τεθνήκαμεν ἢ σοὶ εἰμὲς.)

THEOCRITUS, Elegies. No. ii, l. 5. (c. 270 B. C.)
He doesn't know he's alive. (Non novit natos.)

CICERO, Ad Familiares, Bk. ix. (c. 50 B. C.) As quoted by Erasmus, i, vi, 100, who remarks that the phrase is a way of saying that a person is ignorant of everything.

<sup>8</sup>
He doesn't know enough to pound sand in a rat-hole.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 488. (1940) Similar ones are, "He doesn't know enough to pull his head in when he shuts the window," "He doesn't know twice round a broomstick," "He can't see a hole through a ladder," "He doesn't know enough to suck alum and drool." "As ignorant as Thompson's colt" is a well-known proverbial comparison whose origin is a mystery.

<sup>9</sup>
I know him not though I should meet him in my dish.

WILLIAM WALKER, Paroemiologia, p. 13. (1672)
I know him not, should I meet him in my pot-tage dish.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 265. (1678)
I know him not, tho' I should meet him in my Porridge.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2613. (1732)

<sup>10</sup>
I know not A from a wynd-mylne, ne a B from a bole foot.

THOMAS WRIGHT, ed., Political Poems, ii, 57 (1401)

He knows not B from a bull's foot. That is, he is illiterate.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 159. (1721)
Fie upon you!—not to know B from a bull's foot.

GEORGE COLMAN, JR., The Review. Act ii, sc. 2 (1800)

One who . . . could distinguish the difference between a B and a bull's foot.

D. M. MOIR, Mansie Wauch. Ch. 21. (1824)
He does not know A from the gable end of a house.

ROBERT FORBY, The Vocabulary of East Anglia, p. 434. (1830)

The common description of a dolt or ignoramus is . . . he does not know B from a bull's foot.

F. T. ELWORTHY, The West Somerset Word-Book, p. 36. (1886)

<sup>11</sup>
Thow canst not see, thow wretch, canst thow. whan thow art well?

UNKNOWN, Respublica. Act iv, sc. 4. (1553)
Neyther of them know when they are well.

GEORGE WAPULL, The Tide Taryeth No Man: Prologue. (1576)

You are very happy in the discretion of a good lady, if you know when you're well.

THOMAS SOUTHERNE, The Wives Excuse. Act iii, sc. 2. (1692)

I know when I'm well.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)
Don't you know when you are well off?

KINGSLEY, Westward Hol Ch. 19. (1855)

L

LABOR

See also Industry, Work

<sup>1</sup> To him that labors God oweth glory, child of his labor. (τῷ ποιοῦντι δ' ἐκ θεῶν | ὀφείλεται τέκνωμα τοῦ πόνου κλέος.)

AESCHYLUS, Fragments. Frag. 175, Smyth. (c. 458 B. C.) CLEMENT OF ALEXANDRIA, Miscellanies, iv, 7, 586.

<sup>2</sup> Labor is a treasure to men. (ὁ κάματος θησαυρὸς ἐστὶ τοῖς ἀνθρώποις.)

AESOP, Fables: The Husbandman and His Sons. (c. 570 B. C.) The husbandman, dying, tells his sons they will find a treasure hidden in his fields, so they dig them up thoroughly, searching vainly for the treasure, and the crops are more abundant than ever. La Fontaine includes this in his Fables, bk. v, fab. 9, with the moral, "Le travail est un trésor."

He that labours and thrives, spins gold.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 343. (1640) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2211. (1732) A rendering of the Spanish proverb, "El que trabaja y madra, hila oro."

<sup>3</sup> Of others' labor others gain. (ἄλλων κοπιῶντων ἄλλοι κερδαίνουσι.)

AESOP, Fables: The Lion and the Bear. (c. 510 B. C.)

Those who labor with their minds govern others; those who labor with their strength are governed by others.

MENCIUS, Discourses. Bk. iii, pt. i, ch. 4, sec. 6. (c. 300 B. C.)

It costs no strength to watch other men labor.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 366. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

<sup>4</sup> There is nothing displeasing to God in manual labor.

AMEN-EM-APT, Teaching How to Live. Col. xxvi, l. 20. (c. 700 B. C.)

Honest labour bears a lovely face.

CHETTLE AND DEKKER, Patient Grissell. Act i, sc. 1. (1603)

The dirt of labour rather than the saffron of indolence.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 232. (1817)

<sup>5</sup> The rights and interests of the laboring man will be protected and cared for, not by labor agitators, but by the Christian men to whom God in His infinite wisdom has given the control of the property interests of the country.

GEORGE F. BAER, President of the Philadelphia and Reading Railway, Letter to the Rev. W. F. Clark, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., 17 July, 1902.

"What d'ye think iv th' man down in Pinnsylvanya who says th' Lord an' him is partners in a coal mine?" asked Mr. Hennessy. "Has he divided th' profits?" asked Mr. Dooley.

FINLEY PETER DUNNE, Machinery. (1902)

No wan knew whether he had th' inthrests iv th' toillin' masses at hear-rt or whether he wint to mass at all, at all.

F. P. DUNNE, Oratory in Politics. (1896)

<sup>6</sup> He that laboryth not, let him not eate.

HENRY BRINKLOW, Complaynt of Roderyck Mors. Ch. 16. (1542) See under WORK.

<sup>7</sup> Labor builds up strength, but long idleness destroys it. (Robur confirmat labor, at longa otia solvunt.)

CATO (?), Collectio Monostichorum, l. 71. (c. 175 B. C.) See Minor Latin Poets, Loeb, p. 628. The Dutch say, "Arbeid verwarmt, luiheid verarmt" (Labor warms, sloth harms)

<sup>8</sup> Labor often dries the tear and brings happiness. (Saepe labor siccatur lacrimas et gaudia fundit.)

CATO (?), Collectio Monostichorum, l. 36. (c. 175 B. C.) See Minor Latin Poets, Loeb, p. 626.

Labor is itself a pleasure. (Labor est etiam ipsa voluptas.)

MANILIUS, Astronomica, iv, 155. (a. 25 B. C.)

O sweet solace of labor. (O laborum | dulce lenimen medicumque.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 32, l. 14. (23 B. C.)

The labor itself is a delight. (Iuvat ipse labor.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. i, epig. 107. (A. D. 85)

A little labor, much health.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 691. (1640)

Labor is often the father of pleasure. (Le travail est souvent le père du plaisir.)

VOLTAIRE, Discours. No. 4. (1734)

The fruit of labor is the sweetest of pleasures (Le fruit du travail est le plus doux des plaisirs.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 200. (1746)

The Danes say, "Arbeide har en bitter Rod, men sôd Smag" (Labor has a bitter root, but a sweet taste).

From labor there shall come forth rest.

H. W. LONGFELLOW, To a Child, l. 162. (1845)

Taste the joy That springs from labor.

LONGFELLOW, The Masque of Pandora. Pt. vi: In the Garden. (1875)

Labor is the law of happiness.

ABEL STEVENS, Life of Mme. de Staël. Ch. 16 (c. 1881)

<sup>9</sup> Absolon may blowe the bukkes horn.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Miller's Tale, l. 201. (c. 1386) To have his labor for his pains.

They haue nought but their toil for their heat, their pains for their sweat, and (to bring in our English proverbe) their labour for their trauaile.

THOMAS NASHE, To the Gentlemen Students of Both Universities: Introduction to Robert Greene's Menaphon. (1589)

I have had my labour for my travail.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, i, 1, 73. (1601)
They are but few that carry away the prize in the world's lottery; the greater number have only their labour for their pains.

WILLIAM GURNALL, The Christian in Compleat Armour, i, 224. (1655)

To have nothing but one's labour for one's pains.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 183. (1670)

And all that I by that should gain
Would be my labour for my pain.

CHARLES COTTON, Burlesque, p. 186. (1675)

Take your labour for your pains.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

I'm glad the villain got nothing but his trouble for his pains.

FANNY BURNEY, Evelina. Lett. 33. (1778)

The fowl pecks the clam and breaks her bill. (Chi cho 'han 'che tsui.)

J. L. DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 193. (1872) Her labor for her pains.

1 The habit of toil renders the endurance of pain easier. (Consuetudo enim laborum perpressionem dolorum efficit faciliorem.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. ii, ch. 15, sec. 35. (45 B. C.)

The labour we delight in physics pain.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, ii, 3, 55. (1606)

2 If you toil so for trash, what would you do for treasure?

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 194. (1639)

3 What profit hath a man of all his labour which he taketh under the sun? (Quid habet amplius homo de universo labore suo, quo laborat sub sole?)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, i, 3. (c. 250 B. C.)
In all labour there is profit. (In omni opere erit abundantia.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xiv, 23. (c. 350 B. C.)

4 Every man should eat and drink and enjoy the good of all his labour, it is the gift of God. (Omnis enim homo, qui comedit et bibit, et videt bonum de labore suo, hoc donum Dei est.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, iii, 13. (c. 250 B. C.)
To rejoice in his labour: this is the gift of God. (Laetetur de labore suo: hoc est donum Dei.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, v, 19.

5 The gods demand of us labor as the price of all good things. (τῶν πόνων πωλοῦσιν ἡμῖν πάντα τὰγάθ' οἱ θεοί.)

EPICHRMUS, Aphorism. (c. 550 B. C.) Quoted by XENOPHON, Memorabilia, Bk. ii, ch. 1, sec. 20. The Latin proverb is, "Dii laboribus omnia vendunt" (The gods sell all things at the price of labor).

Without labor nothing is to be got among men. (ἀπῆμαντον δὲ οὐδέν ἐστιν ἐν αὐτοῖς.)

SIMONIDES, Dirges. Frag. 32. (c. 475 B. C.)
Quoted by THEOPHILUS OF ANTIOCH, To Autolycus, ii, 8.

All things are attained by diligence and toil. (ἀλωτὰ γίνετ' ἐπιμελεῖα καὶ πόνω | ἅπαντα.)

MENANDER, The Peevish Man. Frag. 132K. (c. 300 B. C.) Menander frequently stresses the importance of good work. In frag. 131K of this same play he says, "The man who labors well need never despair of anything at all," and in The Flute Girl, frag. 68K, "Secure livelihood exists in handicraft."

Life grants no boon to man without much labor. (Nil sine magno | vita labore dedit mortalibus.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 9, l. 59. (35 B. C.)

Probably a quotation from an unknown poet. There is nothing truly valuable that can be purchased without pains and labour.

JOSEPH ADDISON, The Teller. No. 97. (1709)
Everything in the world is purchased by labour, and our passions are the only causes of labour.

DAVID HUME, Human Nature. Ch. 1. (1739)
Thou, O God, sellest all good things at the price of labor.

DAVID BELASCO, The Return of Peter Grimm Act i. (1911)

6 Sweet is the memory of past labor. (ἀλλ' ἡδὺ τοι σωθέντα μεμνήσθαι πόνων.)

EURIPIDES, Andromeda. (c. 430 B. C.) See CICERO, De Finibus, ii, 32, 105. Cicero's Latin is, "Suavis laborum est praeteritorum memoria." The line from the lost Andromeda is quoted by Plutarch and others.

Labors accomplished are pleasant. (Iucundi acti labores.)

CICERO, De Finibus. Bk. ii, ch. 32, sec. 105. (c. 45 B. C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, iii. 43, and included by TAVERNER in his Translations from Erasmus, fo. 34, with the rendering, "Labores ones done, be swete."

7 Virtue proceeds through toil. (ἀ δ' ἀρετὰ βαίνει διὰ μόχθων.)

EURIPIDES, Herakleidae, l. 625. (c. 430 B. C.)
The nobility of labor—the long pedigree of toil
H. W. LONGFELLOW, Nuremberg. (1844)

Honor lies in honest toil.

GROVER CLEVELAND, Letter, accepting nomination for President, 18 Aug., 1884. See STODDARD, Life of Cleveland. Ch. 15.

8 Six days shalt thou labour and do all thy work. (Sex diebus operaberis. et facies omnia opera tua.)

Old Testament: Exodus, xx, 9. (c. 550 B. C.) Repeated in Deuteronomy, v, 12.

9 Who wil not suffer labor in this world, let not him be borne. (Chi non vuol durar fatica in que sto mondo non nasca.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 28. (1578)

10 In all social systems there must be a class to do the menial duties, to perform the drudgery of life. Its requisites are vigor, docility, fidelity. Such a class you must have, or you would not have that other class that leads progress. civilization and refinement. It constitutes the very mudsill of society and of political government.

J. H. HAMMOND, Speech, U. S. Senate, 4 March, 1858.

The world is agreed that labor is the source from which human wants are mainly supplied. . . . From this point, however, men immediately diverge. By some it is assumed that labor is available only in connection with capital, . . . and they naturally conclude that all laborers are either hired laborers or slaves. They further assume that whoever is once a hired laborer, is fatally fixed in that condition for life; and thence again that his condition is as bad as, or worse than, that of a slave. This is the "mud-sill" theory.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Address, before the Wisconsin State Agricultural Society, Milwaukee, 30 Sept., 1859. Senator Hammond had referred to a building he had erected on swampy ground, using "mud-sills" sunk by his slaves. This was the kind of work that made necessary rough work directed by men of intelligence. He said further that the "hireling system" of the North did the same thing. This aroused resentment, and on 7 Oct., 1858, at the Galesburg, Ill., debate with Douglas, Lincoln's followers had brought in a banner with the words, "Small-fisted farmers, mudsills of society, greasy mechanics for A. Lincoln." It was this incident, probably, which led to Lincoln's address the following year.

A brawny Yankee, with his arm in a sling, said the "mudsills and greasy mechanics" had been heard from.

FRANK MOORE, Rebellion Records, v, ii, 24. (1862)

<sup>1</sup> We are ruined by Chinese cheap labor,"—
And he went for that heathen Chinese.

BRET HARTE, Plain Language from Truthful James. (1871)

<sup>2</sup> Your work and labour of love. (τοῦ ἔργου ἡμῶν καὶ τῆς ἀγάπης.)

New Testament: Hebrews, vi, 10. (c. A. D. 60)

The Vulgate is, "Operis vestri et dilectionis."

The phrase is repeated in I Thessalonians, i, 3.

Women . . . founded Hospitals, and yet with a labour of love, as the Apostle styles it, Heb., vi, 10, disdain'd sometimes to work in them.

UNKNOWN, The Ladies Calling. Bk. ii, ch. 3, sec. 12. (1673)

The humble stock phrases in which they talked of their labours of love.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, Hypatia. Ch. 9. (1853)

This labour of love.

WILLIAM BLACK, Life of Goldsmith. Ch. 14. (1878) Black is referring to the composition of The Deserted Village.

Labour and love! there are no other laws.

EDMUND GOSSE, Labour and Love. (a. 1911)

<sup>3</sup> Labour as long lived, pray as ever dying.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 482. (1640)

<sup>4</sup> So they were engaged in unending labor, and the end with victory came never to them, and the contest was ever unwon.

HESIOD (?), Shield of Heracles, l. 310. (c. 600 B. C.) The reference is to the warriors depicted on the shield, and the resemblance to Keats's "Bold lover, never, never canst thou kiss, Though winning near the goal,"

in the second stanza of his Ode on a Grecian Urn is striking.

<sup>5</sup> Set forward, ye shall neuer labour yonger.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 9. (1546)

<sup>6</sup> No labor is difficult if you wish to do it. (Nullus difficilis cupienti labor.)

ST. JEROME (HIERONYMUS), Letters. Lett. xxii, sec. 40. (A. D. 384)

Labour is light where love doth pay.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, Idea. Sonnet lix. (1594)

<sup>7</sup> Man is born to labour. (Homo nascitur ad laborem.)

Old Testament: Job, v, 7. (c. 350 B. C.) This is the Vulgate. The King James Version has, "Man is born into trouble."

Life grants nothing to mortals without great labor. (Nil sine magno | vita labore dedit mortalibus.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 9, l. 59. (35 B. C.)

Why seekest thou rest, since thou art born to labor? (Cur quaeris quietam: cum natus sis ad laborem?)

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Bk. ii, ch. 10, sec. 1. (c. 1420)

Labour we must, and labour hard

I'th Forum here, or Vineyard.

ROBERT HERRICK, Labour. (1648)

Every one will labour, the poor man in seeking what he wants, and the rich man in preserving what he hath.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 4. (1666)

Where wilt thou go, ox, that thou wilt not have to plough? (Ahont aniràs, bou, que no llaures?)

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 98. (1852) A Catalan proverb. "A remonstrance addressed to anyone, who imagines by any outward change of circumstances to evade the inevitable toil of existence."

<sup>8</sup> No man loves labour for itself.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 26 Oct., 1769.

Labour is not joyous but grievous.

THOMAS CARLYLE, The Nigger Question. (1849)

<sup>9</sup> The modest wants of ev'ry day

The toil of ev'ry day supplied.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, On the Death of Dr. Robert Levett. (1782)

Labour is exercise continued to fatigue; exercise is labour used only while it produces pleasure.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letter to Hester Piozzi.

<sup>10</sup> Let us lift up our heart with our hands unto God in the heavens. (Levemus corda nostra cum manibus ad Dominum in caelos.)

Old Testament: Lamentations, liii, 41. (c. 600 B. C.)

Who prays and labors lifts up to God his heart with his hands. (Qui orat et laborat, cor levat ad Deum cum manibus.)

ST. BERNARD, Ad Sororem. (c. 1130) Works, ii, 866. Gregory the Great was the author of a similar expression.

He who labors, prays. (Qui laborat, orat.)

Attributed to ST. AUGUSTINE. (c. A.D. 390) "Laborare est orare" (To labor is to pray), the ancient motto of the Benedictine monks, is a variation.

Lo! all life this truth declares,

Laborare est orare;

And the whole earth rings with prayers.

DINAH M. M. CRAIK, Labour is Prayer. (c. 1860)

1 Each needs the other: capital cannot do without labor, nor labor without capital.

POPE LEO XIII, Rerum novarum, 15 May, 1891.

When we oppose labor and capital, labor means the group that is selling its product, and capital all the other groups that are buying it.

JUSTICE O. W. HOLMES, Speech, New York, 15 Feb., 1913.

2 Let us, then, be up and doing,
With a heart for any fate;

Still achieving, still pursuing,

Learn to labor and to wait.

H. W. LONGFELLOW, A Psalm of Life. (1838)

Learn to labour and to wait, but learn to labour first.

F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 208. (1902)

3 Some men labor with their minds and some with their muscles. Those who labor with their minds govern those who labor with their muscles.

MENCIUS, Discourses. Bk. iii. (c. 250 B.C.)

Bodily Labour earns not much.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1001. (1732)

When labor is reduced to turning a crank, it is no longer amusing nor truly profitable.

H. D. THOREAU, Autumn, 19 Oct., 1858.

4 Labour is but refreshment from repose.

MONTGOMERY, Greenland. Canto ii. (1819)

For this of old is sure,

That change of toil is toil's sufficient cure.

LEWIS MORRIS, Love in Death. (c. 1875)

5 If fortune aids, no need for labor:

If fortune aids not, so much less labor.

(Si fortuna iuvat, nihil laboris:

si non adiuvat, hoc minus laboris.)

PERIANDER OF CORINTH, Sententiae. (c. 600 B.C.) According to AUSONIUS(?), Septem Sapientum Sententiae. No. 4. There are various versions of this epigram. For another, see under FORTUNE.

6 To labor uphill, as they say. (Clivo laborare, quod aiunt.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 47. (c. A.D. 60)
An uphill task.

He who can live on cabbage stalks is equal to any task. (Yao tê ts'ai kên pai shih k'o tso.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 25. (1875)

7 He that laboreth laboreth for himself. (Anima laborantis laborat sibi.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xvi, 26. (c. 250 B.C.)

Thou shalt eat the labour of thine hands: happy shalt thou be, and it shall be well with thee. (Labores manuum tuarum quia manducabis: beatus es, et bene tibi erit.)

Old Testament: Psalms, cxxviii, 2. (c. 250 B.C.)

There is a Latin proverb, "Suavis cibus a venatu" (Food is sweet from the fact of being hunted for). Bacon renders it, "Venison is sweet to him that kills it."

The man who eats the fruit of his labour is greater than he who fears God.

Babylonian Talmud: Berachoth, fo. 8a. (c. 450)

A barley loaf procured by the exertions of one's own arm is better than a loaf of flour from the table of the liberal.

SADI, Bustan. Ch. vi, Apologue 6. (c. 1257)

Than the mayor's kid and loaf more dainty far
Are our poor herbs, self earned, and vinegar.

SADI, Gulistan, viii, 75. (c. 1258)

8 Those who earn their bread by their own efforts need not be fed by alms.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. iii, Apologue 15. (c. 1258)

9 Labour is the real measure of the exchangeable value of all commodities.

ADAM SMITH, The Wealth of Nations. Vol. i, bk. i, ch. 5, p. 35. (1776)

10 Who labors best,
His labors ended, has the sweetest rest.

(ἡ τοι καίριος σπουδῇ τόπον λήξαντος ὕπνον κἀνάπαυλαν ἤγαγεν.)

SOPHOCLES, Philocetes, l. 637. (c. 409 B.C.)

The Germans say, "Nach der Arbeit ist gut ruhen" (After labor, rest is sweet). A proverb in many languages.

For all there is one season of rest and one of labor. (Omnibus una quies operum, labor omnibus unus.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. iv, l. 184. (29 B.C.)

No period of rest releases me from my labor (Nullum ab labore me reclinat otium.)

HORACE, Epodes. Ep. xvii, l. 25. (c. 20 B.C.)

They wear out night and day. (Noctemque diemque fatigant.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. viii, l. 94. (19 B.C.)

A continuity of labor deadens the soul. (Nascitur ex assiduitate laborum animorum hebetatio.)

SENECA, De Tranquillitate Animi. Ch. 17, sec. 5. (c. A.D. 50)

Every labour som-tyme moot han reste,
Or elles longe may he nat endure.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Marchantes Tale, l. 617. (c. 1388)

Whose sore task

Does not divide the Sunday from the week.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, i, 1, 75. (1600)

Our ardent labours for the toys we seek
Join night to day, and Sunday to the week.
EDWARD YOUNG, Love of Fame Sat. v, l. 101.
(1728)

A toiling Dog comes halting home.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 441. (1732)

Count no travell slaverie
That brings in penny saverlie.
THOMAS TUSSEY, Five Hundreth Pointes of Good Husbandrie. Ch. 9: The Ladder to Thrift. (1573)

Think no labour slavery that brings in penny saverly.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 42. (1678)

What region of the earth is not full of our labors? (Quae regio in terris nostri non plena laboris?)
VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. i, l. 460. (19 B. C.)

This is the task, this is the labor (Hoc opus, hic labor est.)
VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. vi, l. 129. (19 B. C.) Quoted by OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. i, l. 453

Labor conquers everything (Labor omnia vicit.)
VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. i, l. 145. (29 B. C.)

There is nothing which persistent labor will not conquer. (Nihil est, quod non expugnet pertinax opera.)
SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. 50, sec. 6. (c. A. D. 64)

Nature is inexhaustible and untiring labor is a god which rejuvenates her. (La nature est inépuisable, | Et le travail infatigable | Est un dieu qui la rajeunit.)
VOLTAIRE, Sur l'ingratitude. (c. 1775)

Six hours are most suitable for labor, and the four that follow, when set forth in letters, say to men "Live." (ἓξ ὥραι μόχθοις ικανώταται· αἱ δὲ μετ' αὐτὰς | γράμμασι δεικνύμεναι ΖΗΘΙ λέγουσι βροτοῖς.)
UNKNOWN. The Greek Anthology. Bk. x, epig.
43. Often attributed to Lucian. (c. A. D. 170)

The letters of the alphabet were used as figures: ΖΗΘΙ, meaning "live." is 7. 8. 9. 10.
See also under HOUR

II—Labor Lost

Though a man pour out his all to atone for one deed

Of blood, it is labor lost: so runs the proverb.
(τὰ πάντα γὰρ τις ἐκχέας ἀπὸ αἵματος ἐνός, μάτην δὲ μόχθους ὧδ' ἔχει λόγος.)

AESCHYLUS, Libation-Bearers, l. 520. (458 B. C.)
That's all labor lost. (Omnem operam perdis.)

PLAUTUS, Poenulus, l. 880. (c. 194 B. C.)
Labor lost. (Frustra operam.)

TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos, l. 693. (163
B. C.)

Leten here labowre lost & alle here longe studye
WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman B text.
Prologue, l. 181. (1377)

The leill labour lost, and leill service.

WILLIAM DUNBAR, Poems, lxvi, 13. (c. 1510)

It is but lost labour that ye ryse up early.

MILES COVERDALE, tr., Old Testament: Psalms, cxxxvii, 2. (1535) The King James version is,
"It is vain for you to rise up early," following the Vulgate, "Vanum est vobis ante lucem surgere."

It were labour lost to speak of love. (Sarebbe pena persa, a parlar di amore.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 71. (1578)

It is labour lost for me to perswade you, and winde vainly wasted for you to exhort me.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 44. (1579)

When labor is lost, man's need grows. (Quum labor in damno est, crescit mortalis egestas.)

CATO, attr. (c. B. C. 160) Quoted by RABELAIS,
Pantagruel, iii, 42. It is the second line of a distich, the first line of which is, "Better keep what's gained by labor "

Then I said, I have laboured in vain, I have spent my strength for nought. (Et ego dixi:
In vacuum laboravi, sine causa, et vane fortitudinem meam consumpsi.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, xlix, 4. (c. 725 B. C.)
Your labor is all in vain. (Opera nequiquem perit.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. ii, fab. 5. (c. 25 B. C.)

His labour was in veine.

GOWER, Confessio Amantis, iii, 293. (1390)

Let Nature doe her best, we dwelt at the signe of the Labour-in-vaine.

THOMAS ADAMS, England's Sickness, p. 10. (1615)
Labour in vain is loss of time.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 61 (1639)

I lose my labor. (Meam operam luserim.)

PLAUTUS, Casina, l. 424. (c. 200 B. C.)

I lose my labor. (Operam perdo.)

PLAUTUS, Persa, l. 233. (c. 200 B. C.)

I've lost my oil and my labor. (Oleum et operam perdidi.)

PLAUTUS, Poenulus, l. 332. (c. 200 B. C.) A proverb used twice by CICERO, Ad Atticum, ii, 17; xiii, 38, and cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i,
iv, 62. It has two explanations: (1) students who failed in an examination lost both their labor and the oil in the lamp by whose light they had studied; (2) contestants in the public games anointed their limbs with oil before entering the arena, and if defeated lost both their oil and labor.

Wel may that man, that no good werke ne dooth, singhe thilke newe Frenshe song: "Jay tout perdu mon temps et mon labour."

CHAUCER, *Canterbury Tales: The Persones
Tale*, Sec. 11 (c. 1389)

He who has gained wealth without enjoying it, and he who has acquired knowledge without practising it, have labored fruitlessly.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. viii, Maxim 3. (c. 1258)

Whence all the labor was wasted. (Ibi omnis effusus labor.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. iv, l. 491. (c. 29 B. C.)

III—Labor Lost: Some Examples

See also Impossibility

<sup>1</sup> Like a child chasing a bird on the wing. (διώκει παῖς ποταμὸν ὄρνιν.)

AESCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 394. (458 B. C.) A proverbial phrase for futile actions. You are chasing one with wings to fly away with. (πετόμενόν τινα διώκεις.)

PLATO, Euthyphro. Sec. 4A. (c. 375 B. C.)

<sup>2</sup> I wail before a tomb in vain. (θρηνεῖν πρὸς τύμβον μάτην.)

AESCHYLUS, Libation-Bearers, l. 926. (458 B. C.) "To wail to a tomb" was a proverbial expression, according to Scholiast, who cites the saying, "'Tis the same thing to cry to a tomb as to a fool," in other words a futile action.

<sup>3</sup> To weave a rope of sand. (ἐκ τῆς ψάμμου σχοινοῦ πλέκειν.)

ARISTIDES, (c. 475 B. C.) As cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, iv, 78, who gives the Latin, "Ex harena funiculum nectis." Labor lost like "To yoke foxes" (Jungere vulpes), or "To milk a he-goat" (Mulgere hircum). See under ROPE.

<sup>4</sup> Flaying a flayed dog. (κύνα δέρειν δεδαρμένην.)

ARISTOPHANES, Lysistrata, l. 158. (412 B. C.) Quoting from PHERECRATES (c. 437 B. C.). Cited by both SUIDAS and DIOGENIANUS, and by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, iii, 54, who gives the Latin as "Canem excoriatam excoriare." The Greek proverb was frequently written "κύνα δ.δ."

<sup>5</sup> To kill a dead man. (Iugulare mortuos.)

ARISTOPHANES. (c. 410 B. C.) The attribution is by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, ii, 54, who cites also "Defunctos occidere," a proverb for labor lost. Similar in meaning is "You're anointing a corpse" (νεκρὸν μύρτζεις), or, in Latin, "Mortuum unguento perunguis."

He sees not he 's slaying a dead man. (κοῦκ οἶδ' ἐναίρων νεκρὸν.)

SOPHOCLES, Philoctetes, l. 946. (c. 409 B. C.)

You're whipping a dead horse. (Rem actam agis.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 260. (c. 195 B. C.)

You flog a dead man. (νεκρὸν μαστίζεις.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. iv, No. 65. Erasmus gives the Latin, "Mortuum flagellas," and in ii, v, 72, cites another of the same sort. "Verberare lapidem" (To flog a stone).

It's no use to flog a dead horse.

R. C. TRENCH, Lectures in Medieval Church History. Ch. 10. (1879)

<sup>6</sup> You cook a stone. (λίθον ἔψεις.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Wasps, l. 280. (422 B. C.)

They may garlycke pyll,
Carry sakes to the myll,
Or pescoddes they may shyll,
Or elles go rost a stone.

JOHN SKELTON, Why Come Ye Not to Court? l. 109. (1522)

Her carrain carkas (saide he) is so colde, . . .
I do but roste a stone In warmyng hir.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 2. (1546)

<sup>7</sup> One building, and another pulling down,
What profit have they but [useless] labour?

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xxxiv, 28. (c. 190 B. C.) Oesterley, tr. The French say, "Faire un trou pour en boucher un autre" (To make one hole to stop up another).

<sup>8</sup> Puff not against the wind.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 330.
See under WIND.

<sup>9</sup> The salt cargo returns whence it came. (ἀλῶν δέ φόρτος ἐνθεν ἦλθεν ἐνθ' ἦλθεν.)

CERCIDAS, Cercidea, l. 106. (c. A. D. 350) A proverb of wasted labor, with a gibe at the Cynic's diet.

<sup>10</sup> To put gates to the open plain. (Poner puer-tas al campo.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 25 (1605); Pt. ii, ch. 55. (1615) Sometimes it runs: "Querer atar las lenguas querer," etc. (Trying to stop people's tongues is trying to, etc.)

<sup>11</sup> To look for dainties at the bottom of the sea (Pedir cotufas en el golfo.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 30; ii, 3, 20 The real or primary signification of cotufas is Jerusalem artichokes, but Pineda says they are the same as criadillas or truffles. The word seems to be applied generally to any vegetable delicacy.

It is all preaching in the desert and hammering on cold iron. (Todo es predicaren desierto. y majar in hierro frio.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 6. (1615)

<sup>12</sup> He butted with his horns the vacant air (πολλά μάτην κεράσσειν ἐς ἥερα θυμήναντα.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. viii, epis. 5. (49 B. C.) Quoting an unknown author.

You are spurring a willing horse. (Currentem tu quidem.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. xiii, epis. 45. See under HORSE.

<sup>13</sup> As good beat your heels against the ground.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 154. (1639)

<sup>14</sup> It is bootless to discuss accomplished facts, to protest against things past remedy, to find fault with things bygone.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. (c. 500 B. C.) Giles, tr. p. 96.

<sup>15</sup> Look not for musk in a dog's kennel.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Chien. (1611)

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 24. (1640)

You must not expect perfumes in a pigsty.

G. F. NORTHALL, Folk Phrases, p. 34. (1894)

<sup>1</sup> To fight with a punch-ball. (πρὸς κώρυκον γυμνάζεσθαι.)

DIOGENIANUS, Adagia. (c. A. D. 125) "To knock down a straw-man."

<sup>2</sup> He goes into the water to grasp the foam. (Lo shui 'chin shui pao.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 184. (1872) He twists a rope to bind a typhoon. ('Tso shêng fu chü fêng.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 185.

<sup>3</sup> You write in water. (In aqua scribis.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, i, iv, 56. (1508) A proverbial phrase for labor lost, as was also another cited by Erasmus, i, iv, 57, "In harena aedificas" (You build on sand). See also under WATER.

<sup>4</sup> To fish in the air or hunt in the sea. (In aëre piscari, venari in mari.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. iv, No. 74. (1508) Erasmus cites many other Greek and Latin proverbs for labor lost, among them, "Arancorum telas texere" (To weave a spiders web); "Surdo oppedere" (To belch at a deaf man), this being a form of insult; "Ignem dissecare" (To cut fire asunder); "Ferrum natate docere" (To teach iron to swim); "Ventos colere" (To plough the wind); "Cribro aquam haurire" (To draw water in a sieve); "Ollam exornare" (To ornament a pot); "Ovum agglutinere" (To glue an egg together); "Cotem alere" (To feed a flint); "Hylam inclamare" (To call for Hylas), a waste of time, for Hylas had been drawn down by a water nymph who had fallen in love with him; "Nudo vestimenta detrahère" (To strip a naked man); "In coelum iacularis" (You are throwing your javelin into the sky); "Fluvius cum mari certas" (A river, you contend with the sea); φαλακρῷ κτένας δανίζειν (To lend a bald man a comb); "Nudo mandas excubias" (You watch an unarmed man); "Leonem tondere" (To shave a lion). All of these and many others are cited by Erasmus, with indications as to their origins.

<sup>5</sup> Wolf's feathers. (λύκον περά.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. iv, No. 81. (1523) Quoting a Greek comic fragment of about 400 B. C., and giving the Latin, "Lupi alas quaeris" (You're looking for wolf's feathers). The proverb was noted by Suidas. "Horse feathers" may possibly be a derivative. There is a variant, δρου πόκας ζητεῖς, of which the Latin is "Asini vellera quaeris" (You seek wool from a donkey), or "Asinum tondes" (You shear a donkey).

If he looks for the fleeces of the parsonage, he shall have, after the proverb, lanam caprinam [goat's wool].

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons (1861), i, 330. (1629) You come to the goat's house to thig [beg] wool.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 364. (1721)

<sup>6</sup> You are teaching a fish to swim. (ιχθύν νήχεσθαι διδάσκεις.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. iii, cent. vi, No. 19. (1508) Erasmus gives the Latin, "Pisces natate doces," and adds that "To teach a dolphin (delphinum) to swim" is a variation. The French say, "Il ne faut apprendre aux poissons à nager" (It is not necessary to teach fish to swim). Erasmus notes another proverb of labor lost, "Aquilam volare doces" (You are teaching an eagle to fly).

Like Sisyphus to roll the stone. (Saxum volvere.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, iv, 40. See under SISYPHUS.

<sup>7</sup> Kicking against the wave. (πρὸς κύμα λακτίζοντες.)

EURIPIDES, Iphigenia in Tauris, l. 1396. (c. 414 B. C.) TO KICK AGAINST THE PRICKS, see under KICK.

He wags a wand in the water.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 48. (c. 1595)

<sup>8</sup> Ye seek hot water under cold yce.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 112. (c. 1595)

You look for hot Water under Ice.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5933. (1732)

<sup>9</sup> He that seeketh after these thinges. looſet'h his tyme, A fatte hogge among Iewes, truth among hypocrites, faith in a flaterer, sobernesse in a drunkard, mony with a prodigal, wisdom in a foole, great riches in a scool-maister, silence in a woman, vertue in euyl company.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 24. (1578)

Three things to none effecte, To holde water in a Sieue, to run after fowles in the ayre, and weepe after dead men.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 24.

To seek these things is lost labour: Greese in an oil-pot, fat Hogs among Jews, and Wine in a fishing-net.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1154. (1640)

It is wasting time to look for milk in a gate-post, or blood in a turnip, or sense in a fool.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk. Ch. 11. (1869)

<sup>10</sup> Who washeth an Asses head loseth both labour and sope.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 34. (1578) See under Ass.

<sup>11</sup> If you squeeze a Cork, you will get but little Juice.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2791. (1732)

It is lost Labour to play a Jigg to an old Cat. It is lost Labour to sow, where there's no Soil.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. Nos. 2971-2.

<sup>12</sup> I know my labour lost, to hop against the hill.

GEORGE GASCOIGNE, Posies. (1575) Works (Cunliffe), i, 335.

TO ROW AGAINST THE STREAM, see under STREAM.

1 It is vain to water the plant when the root is dead.

ROBERT GREENE, Morando. (1584) Works, iii, 54. Who waters a dry stake with any heart?

BISHOP SAMUEL WARD, Sermons, p. 107. (1636) Why do I thus water a dull and doltish post?

WILLIAM ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis, p. 511. (1681)

You do but water a dead Stake.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5897. (1732)

I am afraid I have been watering a dead stake.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman. Ch. 1. (1869)

2 As great a waste of effort, as to train an ass To race upon the Campus, obedient to the rein.

(Infelix operam perdas, ut si quis asellum in Campo doceat parentem currere frenis.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, Sat. 1, l. 90. (35 B.C.) You teach an ass to obey the rein. (Asinum sub freno currere doces.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. iv, No. 40. (1500)

3 Teach your father to get children.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 9. (1659) See under FATHER.

4 He has dug a well where there is no water.

LANGDON, Babylonian Proverbs. Tablet K 4347. (c. 2300 B.C.) See under WELL.

5 You are endeavoring to wash an Ethiopian white.

LUCIAN, Adversus Indoctum. Sec. 28. (c. A.D. 170) See under NEGRO.

6 To pour water into a bowl and pound it with an iron pestle. (εἰς δῶνον ὕδωρ ἐγχεῖν ὑπὲρ σιδηρῶ πτίττειν.)

LUCIAN, Hermotimus. Sec. 79. (c. A.D. 170) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, i, 59, with the Latin, "Aquam in mortario tundere."

The house of Yorke had hitherto but beaten water in a mortar, and lost all their former labour.

WILLIAM LAMBARDE, A Perambulation of Kent, p. 423. (1576)

7 Why castrate eunuchs? (γάλλους τί τέμνεις:)

LUCIAN. (c. A.D. 170) SUIDAS, iv, 65. ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, i, 54, gives the Latin, "Gallos quid execas?"

8 You would haue one runne in a circle, where there is no way out, or builde in the ayre, where there is no meanes howe.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 404. (1580)

9 To look for water in the sea. (Per mare quaeris aquam.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. (c. A.D. 85) A proverbial phrase for waste of time. See under WATER.

10 Let him seek honey in the middle of a river. (E medio flumine mella petat.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. i, l. 748 (c. 1 B.C.)

11 Why sow seeds in sand?

OVID, Heroides. Epis. v, l. 115. (c. 10 B.C.) See under SOWING.

To plough the sea-shore. (Litus arare.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. v, eleg. 4, l. 48. (c. A.D. 9) See under PLOUGH.

12 The work perishes fruitlessly. (Opera nequidquam perit.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. ii, fab. 5, l. 24. (c. 25 B.C.)

13 You are trying to cut off the Hydra's head. ("Ὅδραν τέμνουσιν.")

PLATO, The Republic. Bk. iv, sec. 426E. (c. 411 B.C.) The first instance of the now trite metaphorical use of this phrase. In Euthydemus, sec. 297C, Plato has Euthydemus say, "I am sadly inferior to Hercules, who was no match for the hydra—that she—professor who was so clever that she sent forth many heads of debate in place of each one that was cut off." See STOBÆUS, Florilegium, xliii, 91, and xxxvii, 21, where a similar thought is attributed to Arcesilaus and Theophrastus. The proverbial Greek form is "Ὅδρας κεφαλὰς κόπτεῖς."

The hydra, as its frame was hewn, grew mightier against Hercules. (Hydra secto corpore firmior vinci dolentem crevit in Herculem.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, No. 4, l. 61.

'Tis a hydra's head contention; the more they strive the more they may: and as Praxiteles did by his glass, when he saw a scurvy face in it, brake it in pieces; but for that one he saw many more as bad in a moment.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. ii, sec. iii, mem. 7. (1621)

14 The more you put out to sea, the more the tide brings you back to harbor. (Quam magis te in altum capessis, tam aestus te in portum refert.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 158. (c. 200 B.C.)

15 He talks to the dead. (Verba facit mortuo.)

PLAUTUS, Poenulus, l. 840. (c. 194 B.C.) He talks in vain. A proverbial phrase.

The words are spoken to a dead man. (Verba fiunt mortuo.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 1015. (161 B.C.)

We're pouring words into a broken pot: our labor's wasted. (In pertusam ingerimus dicta dolium: operam ludimus.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 369. (c. 195 B.C.)

You are talking to a stone. (Lapidi loqueris.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. iv, No. 89. (1508) Variations are, "Littori loqueris" (You are talking to the sea-shore) and "Parieti loqueris" (You are talking to a wall).

TO SING TO DEAF EARS, see under SONG.

16 You pour water into a sieve. (Imbrem in cribrum geras.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 102. (c. 195 B.C.) See under SIEVE.

Whom your fair speeches might have made believe That water could be carried in a sieve.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, tr., Orlando Furioso. Bk. xxxii, st. 59. (1591)

1 You're a fool; you're doing a thing already done. (Stultus es; rem actam agis.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 260. (c. 195 B.C.)

They say, "Do not do what is already done." (Actum, aiunt, ne agas.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 419. (161 B.C.)

2 You're complaining to a stepmother. (Apud novercam querere.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 314. (c. 195 B.C.)

3 He paints the dead.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 65. (1678)

The Arabs say, "He paints the water."

He is teaching a pig to play the flute.

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 75. See under PIC

4 Thou hast dived deep into the water, and hast brought up a potsherd.

JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 407. (1678)

He dives deep and brings up a potsherd.

R. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 9. (1902)

5 To dam the water with sand. (Chua sha ti shui.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 621. (1875)

6 It'd only be waste o' time to muzzle a sheep.

BERNARD SHAW, John Bull's Other Island. Act iii. (1904)

7 You are washing bricks. (Laterem lavas.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 87. (161 B.C.) ERASMUS, Adagia, i, iv, 48, cites the proverb, which means labor lost, for with the clay bricks of ancient days the more they were scoured, the muddier they became. The French have a somewhat similar proverb, "To wash the head of an ass" (Laver la tête d'un âne), which may also be applied to persons who endeavor to make a thing more beautiful by loading it with ornaments. The French also say, "Il a travaillé pour le roi de Prusse" (He has worked for the King of Prussia), that is, in vain.

8 Don't scrape the top of an empty measure. (μή μοι κενεὴν ἀπομάτῃς.)

THEOCRITUS, Idylls. No. xv, l. 95. (c. 270 B.C.)

Don't waste your breath.

9 Let him yoke foxes and milk he-goats. (Iungat vulpes et mulgeat hircos.)

VERGIL, Eclagues. No. iii, l. 91. (37 B.C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, iii, 50.

Doesn't it seem to you, friends, that one of these fellows is milking a he-goat and the other is holding a sieve for him? (τράγον ἀμύλγειν.)

LUCIAN, Demonax. Sec. 28. (c. A.D. 170) Of two philosophers ignorantly debating. ERASMUS, Adagia, i, iii, 51, gives the Latin as

"Mulgere hircum," and quotes the well-known "Similes habent labra lactucas" (Such lips, such lettuce). "Milking a he-goat" passed into a proverb for labor lost.

III—Coals to Newcastle

10 Who brought an owl to Athens? (τίς γλαῦκ' Ἀθήνας' ἤγαγεν;)

ARISTOPHANES, The Birds, l. 301. (414 B.C.)

The Athenian coins were stamped with an owl. See under OWL.

11 To carry vegetables to the town of vegetables.

Babylonian Talmud: Menachoth, fo. 85a. (c. 450) Some Talmudic variants are, "They carry brine to Apamea and fish to Acco" (Exodus Rabbah, ix, 6), and "Thou art carrying straw to Ephraim" (Menachoth, 85a). The latter proverb is put into the mouth of Pharaoh, speaking to Moses, when the latter performed some miracles. The story from Rabbinical literature is that Pharaoh ridiculed the miracles which Moses performed, telling him that miracles meant nothing in Egypt, where magicians abounded. "You are bringing straw to Ephraim," he said, and calling some children from school, bade them perform some miracles for Moses, which they did. Then Pharaoh asked Moses whether any man could be considered wise who carried muria to Spain, or fish to Acco, and Moses countered with another proverb. "Where there is a market for greenstuff, there will I take my greenstuff." Also derived from this is the Hebrew proverb, "To carry enchantments to Egypt."

12 To add a penny to the wealth of Croesus. (Teruncium addere Croesi pecuniae.)

CICERO, De Finibus. Bk. iv, ch. 12, sec. 29. (c. 45 B.C.)

13 Where there's an orchard, fling an apple.

JOHN CLARE, Rural Life, p. 114. (1821) See under APPLE.

14 He hath brought his hogs to a Banbury market.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 201. (1639)

15 He takes betel-nuts to Canton. (Tao fan pin lang 'chu kuang tung.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 180. (1872)

Before the door of Confucius to sell the Filial Piety Classic.

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 686.

16 To carry wood into the forest. (In silvam ligna ferre.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 10, l. 34. (35 B.C.)

Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, vii, 56, who gives the form, "In silvam importat ligna."

Fuel is not sold in a forest, nor fish on a lake.

(Lin chung pu mai hsin, 'hu shang pu yu yü.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 185. (1875)

<sup>1</sup> Salt to Dysart, or colles to Newcastle.
SIR JAMES MELVILLE, Autobiography, i, 163.
(1583) See under COAL.

He calcs [drives] salt to Dysart.
DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 47.
(c. 1595)

It would be sending coals to Newcastle . . . , not to mention salt to Dysart, and all other superfluous importations.

WALTER SCOTT, Letter, 10 Feb., 1822.

Carry saut to Dysart and puddings to Tranent.
ALEXANDER HISLOP, Proverbs of Scotland, p. 70.
(1862)

<sup>2</sup> Why add leaves to the trees, stars to a full sky, and heaped-up waters to the deep seas?
(Quid folia arboribus, quid pleno sidera caelo,
| in freta collectas alta quid addis aquas?)

OVID, Amores. Bk. ii, No. x, l. 13. (c. 13 B.C.)
Whoever is not content with these, let him pour sands upon the shore, grain ears into the field, or water into the sea. (His qui contentus non est, in litus harenas, | in segetem spicas, in mare fundat aquas.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. v, eleg. 6, l. 43. (c. A.D. 11)
See under WATER.

<sup>3</sup> Why do you add gall to serpents? (Quid virus in angues adicis?)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. iii, l. 7. (c. 1 B.C.)

<sup>4</sup> To add light to the sun. (Soli lumen inferre.)
QUINTILIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae. Bk. v. (c.
A.D. 80)

<sup>5</sup> To carry pepper to Hindostan. (Infers piper in Hindostan.)

SADI, Bustan. (c. 1250) The Hebrews say, "To carry oil to the City of Olives." Cited by ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Curiosities of Literature, iii, 46, and by ARCHBISHOP TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, ch. 3.

<sup>6</sup> To gild refined gold, to paint the lily,
To throw a perfume on the violet,
To smooth the ice, or add another hue
Unto the rainbow.

SHAKESPEARE, King John, iv, 2, 11. (1596) See under EXCESS.

<sup>7</sup> In the Middle Ages they had this proverb:
Indulgences to Rome, Rome being the centre and source of this spiritual traffic.

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs.
Ch. 3. (1852) There are many other variants, in addition to those given above, depending largely upon the country in which the proverb circulates. The Hindus say, "Is it necessary to add acid to the lemon?"; the French, "Vendre coquilles à ceux qui vien-nent de Saint Michel" (To sell shells to those who come from Saint Michel); the Dutch, "Spaanderen naar Noorwegen bren-gen" (To carry fir trees to Norway); the Persians, "To carry blades to Damascus," and so on.

LABORER

See also Workman

<sup>8</sup> Seven years lasted the famine, but it came not to the artisan's door.

Babylonian Talmud: Sanhedrin, fo. 29a. (c. 450)

A bag of silver and gold is soon emptied; the purse of an artisan is ever filled.

SADI, Bustan. Ch. vii, Apologue 16. (c. 1257)

<sup>9</sup> A shedder of blood is he that depriveth the hireling of his hire.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus),
xxxiv, 26 (c. 190 B.C.) Oesterley, tr.

Wages make the slave. (Merita hominem et servum facit.)

PACUVIUS, Thralldorestes. Frag. 167, Loeb. (c.
160 B.C.)

The labourer is worthy of his hire. (ὁ ἐργάτης τοῦ μισθοῦ αὐτοῦ.)

New Testament: Luke, x, 7. (c. A.D. 65) The Vulgate is, "Dignus est enim operarius mercede sua." Repeated in I Timothy, v, 18.

Frequently quoted.

According to the labour, so is the reward.

BEN HE-HE, Mishnah: Pirké Aboth, v, 33.
(c. 500)

Good is the hire of those who labor.

MOHAMMED, The Koran, iii, 130.

The hye god, that al this world hath wrought,
Seith that the werkman worthy is his hyre.

CHAUCER, The Somnour's Tale, l. 264. (c. 1388)

A dog is worthy of his food. (Digna canis pabulo.)
ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, vi, 3. (1508) See under DOG.

A wise and frugal government which . . . shall not take from the mouth of labor the bread it has earned.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, First Inaugural, 4 March, 1801.

<sup>10</sup> The labouring people are only poor because they are numerous.

EDMUND BURKE, Thoughts and Details on Scarcity. (1795)

<sup>11</sup> The grinders cease because they are few.
(Otiosae erunt molentes in minuto numero.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, xii, 3. (c. 250 B.C.)

The harvest truly is plenteous, but the labourers are few. (ὁ μὲν θερισμὸς πολὺς, οἱ δὲ ἐργάται ὀλίγοι.)

New Testament: Matthew, ix, 37. (c. A.D. 50)

The Vulgate is, "Messis quidem multa, operarii autem pauci."

<sup>12</sup> Hewers of wood and drawers of water. (Ligna caedant, aquasque comportent.)

Old Testament: Joshua, ix, 21. (c. 550 B.C.)

When Foes are o'ercome, we preserve them from Slaughter,

To be Hewers of Wood and Drawers of Water.
SWIFT, A Serious Poem, l. 1. (1724)

I'm none of your common hewers of wood and drawers of water.

BERNARD SHAW, Major Barbara. Act ii. (1905)

1 These last [laborers] have wrought but one hour. and thou hast made them equal unto us, which have borne the burden and heat of the day. (τὸ βάρος τῆς ἡμέρας καὶ τὸν καύσωνα.)

New Testament: Matthew, xx, 12. (c. A. D. 65)
The Vulgate is, "Pondus diei, et aestus."

2 He was an honest man and a good bricklayer.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, iv, 2, 42. (1590)

Another lean, unwashed artificer.

SHAKESPEARE, King John, iv, 2, 201. (1596)

Mechanic slaves,

With greasy aprons, rules, and hammers.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, v, 2, 209. (1606)

Horny-handed sons of toil.

DENIS (BIG DENNY) KEARNEY, Speech, on the "sand lot" at San Francisco. (c. 1878) See also under HAND.

LADDER

3 [Polydore Virgil] is said to have burned all those rare authors. . . . Thus he cut down those stairs whereby he ascended the throne of his own knowledge.

THOMAS FULLER, The Church-History of Britain. Bk. v, ch. 3. (1655)

There is nothing like kicking down the ladder a man rises by.

HORATIO NELSON, in NICHOLAS, Dispatches and Letters: of Lord Nelson, i, 449. (1794) The proverb says, "You cannot climb a ladder by pushing others down."

She has struggled so gallantly for polite reputation that she has won it: pitilessly kicking down the ladder as she advanced degree by degree.

THACKERAY, The Book of Snobs. Ch. 7. (1848)

4 After the Domo, I saw the Church of the Annunciata, which draweth up the Ladder after it for neatness.

RICHARD LASSELS, The Voyage of Italy, i, 87. (1670)

5 Can't ye see through a ladder, ye black nigger?

HARRIET BEECHER STOWE, Uncle Tom's Cabin. Ch. 6. (1852)

6 The family was obliged to begin at the foot of the ladder.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX, Autobiography. (1919)
Of her own family.

LADY

7 No lady is ever a gentleman.

J. B. CABELL, Something About Eve, p. 25. (1927)

8 The lady of the hous ay stille sat.

CHAUCER, The Somnour's Tale, l. 492. (c. 1386)

Are you the lady of the house?

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, i, 5, 198. (1599)

9 My Lady Bountiful.

FARQUHAR, Beaux' Stratagem. Act i, sc. 1. (1706)

10 They say that the lady from Philadelphia, who is staying in town, is very wise. Suppose I go and ask her what is best to be done?

LUCRETIA P. HALE, Peterkin Papers. Ch. 1. (1880)

11 There is nothing in this worlde that agreeth wurs

Than dooeth a Ladies hert and a beggers purs.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)

12 I shall be a lady forever. (In sempiternum ero domina.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, xlvii, 7. (c. 725 B. C.)

13 I do not know the lady, but damn her at a venture.

CHARLES LAMB, Remark, to an inquisitive fellow-guest at a dinner, who was inquiring persistently as to Lamb's acquaintance with persons of note: "Do you know So-and-So? Do you know Thus-and-Thus? Do you know Miss —?" "No, madam, I do not," Lamb replied, "but damn her at a venture." (a. 1834) See LUCAS, Charles Lamb. Vol. i. p. 440.

14 Let not women intentionally move their feet in such manner as to display the hidden beauties of their persons.

MOHAMMED, The Koran, xxiv, 31. (c. 622)

A lady is one who never shows her underwear unintentionally.

LILIAN DAY, Kiss and Tell. (1931)

A lady is known by the product she endorses.

OGDEN NASH, First Families, Move Over.

(1936) Of unknown authorship is the quip,

"When a lady says no she means perhaps; when she says perhaps she means yes; when she says yes she is no lady."

15 If ladies be but young and fair,

They have the gift to know it.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, ii, 7, 37. (1600)

He injures a fair Lady, that beholds her not.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1904. (1732)

16 There is scarce a lady of quality in Great Britain that ever saw the sun rise.

RICHARD STEELE, The Tatler, 14 Dec., 1710.

17 There is nothing of so tender a nature as the reputation and conduct of ladies.

JONATHAN SWIFT, The Tatler, 13 Sept., 1709.

18 Women all want to be ladies, which is simply to have nothing to do, but listlessly to go they scarcely care where, for they cannot tell what.

MARY WOLLSTONECRAFT, A Vindication of the Rights of Woman. Ch. 9. (1792)

19 Ferre ifet and dere i-bought is goode for ladys.

UNKNOWN, Douce MS., 52. (c. 1350) Förster, ed.

A thyng ferre fett is good for ladyes.

HILLS, Common-place Book, p. 132. (c. 1530)

Dear bought and far fet Are dainties for ladies.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)
Farre fet and deere bought is good for Ladies.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 93. (1579)
Far sought and dear bought is good for Ladies.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 32. (c. 1595)
Far-fetch'd and dear-bought is fit for ladies.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)
Far-fetched and dear-bought, as the proverb rehearses,

Is good, or was held so, for ladies.

A. C. SWINBURNE, A Singing Lesson. (c. 1870)
"Where did these beautiful things come from?"
—"India, . . . they are 'far-fetched and dear-bought,' and so must be good for you, my lady."

MRS. LINNAEUS BANKS, Manchester Man. Ch. 42. (1876)

LAFAYETTE

<sup>1</sup> We have given you Lafayette and French fried potatoes.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), Tictocq. (1894)

<sup>2</sup> Lafayette, we are here.

COLONEL C. E. STANTON, as he saluted the grave of Lafayette in the Picpus Cemetery, Paris, 4 July, 1917. The remark was often wrongly attributed to General John J.
Pershing, who has himself stated that it was Colonel Stanton who made it. See PERSHING,
My Experiences in the World War. Vol. i,
p. 93.

Lafayette, we have quit!

Legend on cartoon by Harding, cartoonist for the Brooklyn Eagle, June, 1920, showing President W. G. Harding scampering off astride the G.O.P. elephant.

LAMB

See also Sheep and Wolf

<sup>3</sup> The lamb goes [to the butcher] as soon as the sheep. (Tan presto se va el cordero como el carnero.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1615)
Shelton renders it, "As soone goes the yong lambe to the roste, as the olde sheep." See under SHEEP. AS SOON DIES LAMB AS SHEEP, see DEATH: DEATH AND YOUTH.

<sup>4</sup> An egge's as much to a poor man as an oxe.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Povre. (1611)
A Lamb is as dear to a poor Man, as an Ox to the rich.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 234. (1732)

<sup>5</sup> According to the proverbe, The meeke Lambe sucketh the teates of his owne damme and of others also.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii,
p. 158. (1574) Pettie, tr. MEEK AS A LAMB, see under MEEKNESS.

Every Lamb knows its Dam.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6490. (1732)
The lamb drinks its milk kneeling.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 442. (1938)

<sup>6</sup> Mary had a little lamb,

Its fleece was white as snow,
And every where that Mary went
The lamb was sure to go.

SARAH JOSEPHA HALE, Mary's Lamb. The Mary in question is said to have been Mary Sawyer, who was born at Sterling, Mass., in 1803. The incident is said to have occurred in 1814, and to have been commemorated in these verses by one John Roulstone, one of Mary's schoolmates. But they are undoubtedly Mrs. Hale's. They were first printed over her initials in The Juvenile Miscellany, Sept., 1830, and were included in her Poems for Our Children, published in Nov., 1830.
See FINLEY, The Lady of Godey's. Ch. 17.

Where Mrs. Pym went headlines were sure to follow.

NIGEL MORLAND, Murder in Wardour Street,
p. 16. (1940)

<sup>7</sup> He is brought as a lamb to the slaughter.

(Sicut ovis ad occisionem ducetur.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, liii, 7. (c. 725 B.C.)

I was like a lamb or an ox that is brought to the slaughter. (Et ego quasi agnus mansuetus, qui portatur ad victimam.)

Old Testament: Jeremiah, xi, 19. (c. 600 B.C.)

For as the lomb toward his death is broght.
So stant this innocent before the king.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Tale of the Man of Lawe, l. 519. (c. 1386)

You must go as a lamb to the slaughter.

SHAW, Androcles and the Lion. Act ii. (1912)

<sup>8</sup> Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world. (ἴδε ὁ ἀμνὸς τοῦ θεοῦ ὁ αἴρων τὴν ἁμαρτίαν τοῦ κόσμου.)

New Testament: John, i, 29. (c. A. D. 95) The Vulgate is, "Ecce agnus Dei, ecce qui tollit peccatum mundi."

There is a fountain fill'd with blood

Drawn from Emmanuel's veins;
And sinners, plung'd beneath that flood,

Lose all their guilty stains.

WILLIAM COWPER, There is a Fountain. (1772)

Are you washed in the blood of the Lamb?

VACHEL LINDSAY, *General William Booth
Enters into Heaven*. (1913)

<sup>9</sup> He has an ill look among lambs. Applied to wanton young fellows casting an eye to the girls.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 155. (1721)
The lamb where she's tipped, and the ewe where she's clipped. A proverbial rule about tithes, signifying that the lamb shall pay tithes in the place where the ewe was when she took the ram.
but the old sheep where they are shorn.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 307.

<sup>10</sup> A lambe in the house and a lyon in the field.
GEORGE PUTTENHAM, English Poesie, p. 299.
(1589) See under LION.

<sup>1</sup> In for the lamb, as the saying is, in for the sheep.

RICHARDSON, Clarissa. Bk. i, ch. 10. (1748)
AS WELL BE HANGED FOR A SHEEP AS A LAMB, see
under HANGING.

<sup>2</sup> But the poor man had nothing, save one little ewe lamb, which he had bought and nourished up . . . and was unto him as a daughter. (Pauper autem nihil habebat omnino, praeter ovem unam parvulam.)

Old Testament: II Samuel, xii, 3. (c. 700 B. C.)

LAME

<sup>3</sup> "As lame as St. Giles Cripplegate." Spoken of such who for some slight hurt lag behind, [or who] counterfeit infirmity.

FULLER, Worthies: London, ii, 349. (1662)
"Lame as a dog" . . . severe lameness, whether in man or beast.

F. T. ELWORTHY, West Somerset Word-Book, p. 202. (1886)

As lame as a cat.

EDWARD PEACOCK, Manley Glossary, p. 98. (1889)

<sup>4</sup> In a retreat the lame are foremost.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 882. (1640)

The lame returns home sooner than his servant.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 40. (1659)
If you dwell with a lame man, you will learn to limp. (ἄν' χωλῷ παροικήσης, ὑποσκάσειν μάθησῃ.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: De liberis Educandis. Sec.

6. Quoted as a proverb.

You halt before you are lame.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 179. (1670)

LAMENTATION

See also Mourning

<sup>5</sup> Truly lamentation is a prop of suffering. (ὅς τοι στεναγμοὶ τῶν πόνων ἐρείσματα.)

AESCHYLUS, Fragmenta Incerta. No. 213, Smyth. (c. 458 B. C.) SCHOLIAST ON SOPHOCLES, Electra, 286.

It somewhat easeth the afflicted to utter their annoy.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 260. (1576)

<sup>6</sup> Wher-as thise bacheleres singe "allas."

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Marchantes Tale, l. 30. (c. 1388)

For Absolon may waille and singe "allas."

CHAUCER, The Milleres Tale, l. 212.

For I may singe "allas" and "weylaway."

CHAUCER, The Shipman's Tale, l. 118.

For which his song ful ofte is "weylaway."

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde, iv, 1166.

<sup>7</sup> The stars and the rivers and the waves call thee back. (ἄστρα τε καὶ ποταμοὶ καὶ κύματα ἀγκαλεῖ σε πόντον.)

PINDAR, Dirges. Frag. 136, Sandys. (c. 480 B. C.)

Whom universal Nature did lament.

JOHN MILTON, Lycidas, l. 60. (1637)

<sup>8</sup> What boots it to make woe heavier by lamentation? (Quid iuvat mala gravare questu?)

SENECA, Oedipus, l. 81. (c. A. D. 60)

He loves not most that doth lament thee most.

UNKNOWN, Lochrine. Act iii, sc. 1. (1595)

Moderate lamentation is the right of the dead, excessive grief the enemy to the living.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, i, 1, 64. (1602)

They lament most loudly who grieve the least. (lactantius maerant qui minus dolent.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. ii, p. 158. (1814)

A similar proverb is, "Light griefs are noisy, deep ones are silent" (Curae leves loquuntur, ingentes stupent). See under GRIEF.

LAMP

<sup>9</sup> She sold the lamp and bought a curtain.

J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 140. (1817) To hide the doings in her bed-chamber. There is a similar French proverb, "To sell the sofa" (Vendre le canapé).

<sup>10</sup> The lamps are going out all over Europe; we shall not see them lit again in our lifetime.

VISCOUNT GREY OF FALLODEN, Twenty-Five Years. Vol. ii, ch. 20. (3 Aug., 1914)

<sup>11</sup> To pass on the lamp while running. (Cursu lampado tradere.)

LUCRETIUS, De Rerum Natura. (c. 45 B. C.) As quoted by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, ii, 38.

Still the race of Hero-spirits

Pass the lamp from hand to hand.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, The World's Age. (1848)

<sup>12</sup> His impromptus smell of the lamp. (ἐλλυχνίων δξεν αὐτοῦ τὰ ἐνθυμήματα.)

PYTHEAS, referring to the orations of Demosthenes and to the underground room which he used as a study, lighted only by a lamp. (c. 340 B. C.) See PLUTARCH, Lives: Demosthenes. Ch. 8, sec. 3. In his Life of Timoleon, Plutarch applies the phrase to over-finished paintings, as well as to labored writing. Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, vii, 70, with the Latin, "Olet lucernam." FRANCIS BACON, Of the Advancement of Learning, bk. i, ch. 2, wrongly credits the saying to Aeschines.

Your words smell of the apron. (περιζώματος δξουσιν.)

ANTIGONUS I, to Aristodemus, a cook's son, when the latter advised him to curtail his expenditures and the giving of presents. (c. 320 B. C.) See PLUTARCH, Moralia, sec. 182D.

At midnight their lamp sees them at their wretched toil. (Media miseros nocte lucerna videt.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. viii, epig. 3. (A. D. 93)

This little volume of mine smelleth of the oyle and candle.

JOHN GRANGE, Golden Aphroditis, sig. N1. (1577)

We say of some compositions that they smell of the oil and of the lamp. (Nous disons d'aucuns ouvrages, qu'ils puent à l'huyle et à la lampe.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 10. (1580)
Proclamations set forth in such a stile, . . . smelling too much of the inkhorn.

ARTHUR GOLDING, tr., De Mornay's Christian Religion. Ch. 26. (1587)

If that bee commendation . . . for a mans labours to smell of the candle.

SAMUEL HIERON, Works. Vol. i, p. 504. (1604)
A well-laboured sermon that smelt of the candle.

SIR JOHN HARINGTON. (c. 1608) See Nugae Antiquae, ii, 190.

A work not smelling of the lamp.

BEN JONSON, Staple of News: Prologue. (1626)
A work of this nature . . . should smell of oyl, if duly and deservedly handled.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Pseudodoxia Epidemica: To the Reader. (1646)

That dry . . . pedantic style that smells of the lamp.

BISHOP GEORGE BERKELEY, Alciphron. Ch. 5, sec. 20. (1732)

But they [familiar letters] should seem easy and natural, and not smell of the lamp.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, p. 268. (1768)
His sentences . . . smell of the library.

J. R. LOWELL, My Study Windows, p. 282. (1871)
A man who thinks much of his words as he writes them will generally leave behind him work that smells of oil.

TROLLOPE, Autobiography. Ch. 10. (a. 1882)

1
It was asked him [Plato] howe he might haue lerned so moche wysdom? He ansuerd by-cause I haue putte more oille in my lampe to studie by than wyn in my cuppe.

EARL RIVERS, tr., Dictees and Sayenges of the Philosophirs, fo. 58. (1477)

2
Who will change old lamps for new ones? . . . new lamps for old ones?

UNKNOWN, The Arabian Nights: History of Aladdin. (c. 1300)

LAND

See also Sea and Land

3
A man who does not possess land is not really a man.

Babylonian Talmud: Jebamoth, fo. 63a. (c. 450)
Walk on your own lands. (Tuam ipsius terram calcas.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. iv, cent. iv, No. 17. (1528)
Nor has the world a better thing,

Though one should search it round,
Than thus to live one's own sole king,
Upon one's own sole ground.

W. S. BLUNT, The Old Squire. (1892)

4
As fruitful a place, as any the crow flies over.

BUNYAN, Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. ii, p. 98. (1684)
As good land as any the crow flies over.

B. E., A New Dictionary of the Canting Crew, sig. D4. (1690)

5
He that hath some land, must have some labour.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 59. (1639)
Cited by Ray and Fuller.

6
Better be poor on land than rich on water.
(ἐν γῇ πένεσθαι μᾶλλον ἢ πλουτοῦντα πλεῖν.)

DIOGENIANUS, Adagia, iv, 83. (c. A. D. 125)

7
And I came down to deliver them out of the hand of the Egyptians, and to bring them up out of that land unto a good land and a large, unto a land flowing with milk and honey. (In terram quae fluit lacte et melle.)

Old Testament: Exodus, iii, 8. (c. 550 B. C.)
Repeated in Ezekiel, xx, 6, the Vulgate being, "In Terram . . . fluentem lacte, et melle," in Numbers, xvi, 13, and elsewhere.

The milk and honey of the political Canaan.

DISRAELI, Vivian Grey. Bk. ii, ch. 1. (1826)

8
Arise, walk through the land in the length of it and in the breadth of it. (Surge, et perambula terram in longitudine, et in latitudine sua.)

Old Testament: Genesis, xiii, 17. (c. 550 B. C.)

9
He that hath land hath quarrels.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)
Who buies land buies war. (Chi compra terra, compra guerra.)

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 284. (1666)

Who has land has war.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 566. (1855)

10
Half an acre is good land.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 4. (1659)
Cited by Ray and Fuller.

Half acres bear good corn.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 143. (1721)
Many acres will not make a wiseacre.

W. G. BENHAM, Proverbs, p. 807. (1907)

Ancestral acres. Land inherited from ancestors . . . now often jocular.

ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés. (1942)

11
On fat lond and ful of donge foulest wedes groweth.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. Text C. passus xiii, l. 224. (1393)

Most subject is the fattest soil to weeds.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, iv, 4, 54. (1597)

There is best land, where there is foulest way.

JOHN DONNE, Poems (Grierson), i, 81. (1633)
Good land, evil way.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 803. (1640)
The foul way serves to justify the fertility of the soil, according to the proverb, "There is good land, where there is foul way."

CHARLES COTTON, Walton's Angler. Pt. ii, ch. 1. (1676)

12
By faith he sojourned in the land of promise.
(ἐἰς γῆν τῆς ἐπαγγελίας.)

New Testament: Hebrews, xi, 9. (c. A. D. 90)

The land of repromission, that men calles the Holy Land.

SIR JOHN MAUNDEVILLE, Travels: Preface. (c. 1400)

Duke Iosue . . . leading the Isrehelytes to the lande of promysyn.

HENRY BRADSHAW, The Life of Saint Werburge. Ch. 1. (1513)

To all these exiled sects America was the land of promise.

WILLIAM HEPWORTH DIXON, William Penn. Ch. 15. (1851)

The Promised Land is the land where one is not. (La Terre promise, c'est celle où l'on n'est pas.)

HENRI AMIEL, Journal Intime, 10 Feb., 1853.

1 Fertile soils yield infertile spirits. (Les terres fertile font les esprits infertiles.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 12. (1580) Quoting a saying of Cyrus, when refusing to permit the Persians to quit their barren and craggy country.

2 The day is aye fair,
In the land o' the leal.

CAROLINA NAIRNE, The Land o' the Leal. (c.1840)

3 These are the names of the men which Moses sent to spy out the land. (Haec sunt nomina virorum, quos misit Moyses ad considerandam Terram.)

Old Testament: Numbers, xiii, 16. (c. 550 B. C.) "Terra incognita" (An unknown land).

How lies the land? How stands the reckoning?

B. E. A New Dictionary of the Canting Crew. (a. 1700)

To see how the land lies; to spy out the land (figurative). To make preliminary investigations for a project; to discover what a place is like.

ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés. (1941)

4 As light and the day are free to all men, so nature has left all lands open to brave men. (Quomodo lucem diemque omnibus hominibus, ita omnes terras fortibus viris natura aperuit.)

TACITUS, Histories. Bk. iv, sec. 64. (c. A. D. 109)

5 As the man is worth, his land is worth.

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs. Ch. 6. (1853)

6 No-mans-land.

UNKNOWN, Chronicles of Edward I. Rolls, i, 291. (1320) A phrase used to indicate waste ground between two kingdoms.

There happened so grievous pestilence in London, that . . . the dead might seem to jostle one another. . . . Whereupon the bishop [Ralph de Stratford, d. 1354] bought ground near Smithfield. It was called No-man's-land, . . . as designed and consecrated for the general sepulture of the deceased.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England: Warwick, iii, 277. (1662)

This was a kind of Border, that might be called no Man's Land, being a part of . . . Grand Tartary.

DANIEL DEFOE, Robinson Crusoe. Ch. 2. (1719)

In the United States, the most famous No Man's Land was a strip of territory 25 miles wide and 167 miles long ceded to the National Government by Texas in 1850, and without form of government, the refuge of outlaws and hostile Indians until incorporated with Oklahoma in 1890.

[He] undergoes dreadful experiences in "No Man's Land." . . . before he can escape from his shell-hole, the French launch a minor attack.

UNKNOWN, Times (London), 16 April, 1929, p. 22/4. The area between the Allied and German armies, covered with barbed wire and pitted with shell-holes, was universally known as "No man's land."

LAND'S END

7 Thou gossepest at home, to meete me at landis ende.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

Some newe fellows when they thinke onc a Papist, they will call him streight a Catholique, and bee euen with him at the land's end.

THOMAS WILSON, The Arte of Rhetorique, p. 148. (1560)

8 I can beat Wolverine from the Land's-End to Johnnie Groat's.

WALTER SCOTT, St. Ronan's Well. Ch. 10. (1823)

From the most westerly point of England to the most northern point of Scotland.

From the Land's End to John of Groat's House, scarcely a man any longer remembers that the business of governors is to govern.

HARE, Guesses at Truth, i, 232. (1827)

Who forages for articles in all quarters, from John o' Groat's House to the Land's End.

T. L. PEACOCK, Crotchet Castle. Ch. 4. (1831)

If you laid it down in sovereigns, . . . it would have reached from the Land's End to John o' Groat's.

JAMES PAYN, The Burnt Million. Ch. 14. (1890)

LANDLORD

9 He never hath a bad lease, that hath a good landlord.

UNKNOWN, in Berkeley MSS, iii, 32. (1639)

A quick landlord makes a careful tenant.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 165. (1678)

Quick Landlords make careful Tenants.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3994. (1732)

Better an empty House than an ill Tenant.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 870.

LANDMARK

10 Remove not the landmark on the boundaries of the sown, nor shift the position of the measuring-cord.

Amen-em-apt, Teaching How to Live. Col. vii, l. 12. (c. 700 B. C.) Griffith, tr.

Thou shalt not remove thy neighbour's landmark, which they of old time have set in thine inheritance. (Non assumes, et transferes terminos proximi tui, quos fixerunt priores in possessione tua:)

Old Testament: Deuteronomy, xix, 14. (c. 650 B. C.)

Remove not the ancient landmark. (Ne transgrediaris terminos antiquos.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxii, 28. (c. 350 B. C.)

Repeated in xxiii, 10.

Who removeth landmark-stones bruise his fingers.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 25. (1670) See under STONE.

LANE

1 It's a long lane that has no turning.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Clarissa, iv, 237. (1748)

FOOTE, Trip to Calais, ii. (1778) SCOTT,

Chronicles of the Canongate, Ch. 5. (1827)

LYTTON, Caxtons. Pt. xvii, ch. 1. (1774), etc.

It's a long lane with no turn in it.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws, Ch. 27. (1843)

It is a long lane, they say, which has no turn.

THEODORE PARKER, The State of the Nation. Sermon preached 28 Nov., 1850.

The longest lane, however, has a turning.

W. E. NORRIS, Misadventure. Ch. 17. (1890)

Good lanes have their turnings as well as bad.

LORD AVEBURY, The Use of Life. Ch. 3. (1894)

It's a long line that has no turning.

O. HENRY, Schools and Schools. (1909)

It is a long worm that has no turning.

P. C. WREN, The Uniform of Glory, p. 11. (1941)

2 It is become a turn-again lane with them.

WILLIAM TINDALE, Exposition of the Epistles of St. John (P.S.), p. 140. (1531)

Finde meanes to take a house in turne againe lane.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Epigrams. Cent. v, No. 69. (1562)

He must take him a house in Turn-again Lane.

This . . . lieth in the parish of St. Sepulchre's, going down to Fleet-dike; which men must turn again the same way they came, for there it is stopped. The proverb is applied to those who . . . must seasonably alter their manners.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England: London (1840), ii, 348. (1662)

3 Quiet and clene to swallowe down the narrow lane.

NICOLAS UDALL, tr., Erasmus' Apophthegms, p. 119. (1542) The throat.

Sweete malte maketh ioly good ale for the nones, Whiche will slide down the lane without any bones. . . .

Good ale downe your throte hath good easie tumbling.

NICOLAS UDALL, Ralph Roister Doister. Act i, sc. 3. (a. 1553)

O butter'd egg! . . .

I bid your yelk glide down my throat's red lane.

GEORGE COLMAN, jr., Poetical Vagaries. (1812)

LANGUAGE

See also English, Greek, Latin

4 No metaphor should of necessity run like a coach on four wheels.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons (1861), i, 376. (1629) Nullum simile quatuor pedibus currit. (No simile, or resemblance, runs on all fours.)

SIR EDWARD COKE, Institutes of the Lawes of England. (a. 1634)

No metaphor of that sort goes on all fours.

ALEXANDER MACLAREN, Exposition, Matthew iii, 39. (1905)

5 Billingsgate compliments.

RICHARD BROME, The New Academy. (a. 1652) Most bitter Billingsgate rhetoric.

EDMUND GAYTON, Don Quixot, p. 60. (1654)

Rail at him . . . with her Billingsgate.

APHRA BEHN, Lucky Chance. Act i, sc. 2. (1687)

The Language Billingsgate excel,

The Sentiments resemble Hell.

SWIFT, A Panegyric on Dean Swift, l. 108. (1730)

Such Billingsgate language as should not come out of the mouth of any man.

ROGER NORTH, Lives of the Norths, i, 288. (1740) I'll work the Laureate . . . as soon as I can muster Billingsgate therefor.

LORD BYRON, Letters and Journals, vi, 4. (1822)

Rather too close an imitation of that language which is used in the apostolic occupation of trafficking in fish.

SYDNEY SMITH, Letters to Archdeacon Singleton. Let. 3. (a. 1845)

The word "Billingsgate" as a synonym for coarse language is an aspersion on the fish-porters.

MUIRHEAD, Blue Guide to London, p. 389. (1918)

6 Knowing any language imperfectly is very little better than not knowing it at all.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 29 Dec., 1747.

Speak the language of the company that you are in; speak it purely, and unlarded with any other

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 22 Feb., 1748.

What progress do you make in that language

[Italian] in which Charles the Fifth said that he would choose to speak to his mistress? . . . You already possess, and, I hope, take care not to forget, that language [English] which he reserved for his horse. You are absolutely master, too, of that language [French] in which he said he would converse with men.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 25 Jan., 1750.

This refers to Charles V of Spain, and is usually quoted, "If I were to speak to the ladies,

I would speak Italian; to men, French; to my horse, High Dutch; to God, Spanish."

Gaspar A. Reiss is credited with, "German for soldiers, French for women, Italian for princes, Spanish for God."

7 In language clearness is everything.

CONFUCIUS, Analecks. Bk. xv, ch. 40. (c. 500 B. C.) Legge, tr. Or, as Giles puts it: "If language is lucid, that is enough."

The raison d'être of language is an idea to be expressed. When the idea is expressed, the language may be ignored.

CHUANG-TSZE, Philosophy. Ch. 11. (c. 400 B. C.) That is not good language which all understand not.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 304. (1640) That must be fine, for I don't understand a word. (Ça est si beau, que je n'y entends goutte.)

MOLIÈRE, Le Médecin Malgré Lui. Act ii, sc. 4. (1666)

1 Sweet language will multiply friends. (Verbum dulce multiplicat amicos.)
Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, vi, 5. (c. 190 B. C.)

Fair language grates not on the tongue.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 800. (1640) Smooth language grates not on the tongue.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 5. (1659) Good Language cures great Sores.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1716. (1732)

2 My English text is chaste, and all licentious passages are left in the decent obscurity of a learned language.

EDWARD GIBBON, Memoirs. (a. 1794)

3 When he's excited he uses language that would make your hair curl.

W. S. GILBERT, Ruddigore. Act i. (1887)

4 A man who does not know foreign languages is ignorant of his own. (Wer fremde Sprachen nicht kennt, weiss nichts von seiner eigenen.)

GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa. (1819) Charles V is supposed to have said, "Quot linguas calles, tot homines vales" (You are worth as many men as you know languages).

No man fully capable of his own language ever masters another.

SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists. (1903)

5 There were no ill language, if it were not ill taken.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 296. (1640) Nothing's ill said, but what's ill taken.

GEORGE FARQUHAR, Love and a Bottle. Act iv, sc. 2. (1609)

6 Language!—the blood of the soul, Sir! into which our thoughts run, and out of which they grow. . . . Every language is a temple in which the soul of those who speak it is enshrined.

O. W. HOLMES, The Professor at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 2. (1859)

7 He that hath eaten a bear-pie, will always smell of the garden, i. e. the Bear-garden.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 18. (1659) He speaks Bear-garden. That is, such rude and uncivil, or sordid and dirty language, as the rabble that frequent those sports, are wont to use.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 66. (1678)

This is brave Bear-Garden language!

JEREMY COLLIER, A Short View of the Immorality of the English Stage, p. 232. (1698)

He's as great a master of ill language as ever was bred at a Bear-Garden.

EDWARD WARD, London Terraefilius. No. 3, p. 29. (1707)

He talks in the Bear-Garden Tongue.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2033. (1732)

8 Language is the dress of thought.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Lives of the Poets: Cowley. (1779) See also CHESTERFIELD, under WORD.

Language is called the Garment of Thought: however, it should rather be, Language is the Flesh-Garment, the Body, of Thought.

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. i, ch. 11. (1833)

Language is the picture and counterpart of thought.

MARK HOPKINS, Address, 1 Dec., 1841.

Language is the most imperfect and expensive means yet discovered for communicating thought.

WILLIAM JAMES, Thought and Character, ii, 203. (1907)

9 Custom is the most certain mistress of language, as the public stamp makes the current money.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Consuetudo. (1636)

10 Languages are the keys of the sciences, nothing more. (Les langues sont la clef ou l'entrée des sciences, et rien davantage.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Ch. 12. (1688)

Language is the only instrument of science, and words are the signs of ideas.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Dictionary: Preface. (1755)

11 The Turkish language is like that: it says a lot in few words. (La langue turque est comme cela, elle dit beaucoup en peu de paroles.)

MOLIÈRE, Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme. Act iv, sc. 4. (1670)

12 My dialect, which you discommend so much.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, ii, 2, 115. (1605)

The accent of one's country dwells in the mind and the heart, as well as on the tongue. (L'accent du pays où l'on est né demeure dans l'esprit et dans le cœur, comme dans le langage.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 342. (1665)

Accent is the soul of language. (L'accent est l'âme du discours.)

J. J. ROUSSEAU, Émile. Bk. i. (1762)

13 You taught me language; and my profit on 't Is, I know how to curse.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, i, 2, 363. (1611)

There was language in their very gesture.

SHAKESPEARE, The Winter's Tale, v, 2, 14. (1610)

LAPWING

14 In this I resemble the Lappwing who . . . flyeth with a false cry farre from their nestes.

JOHN LYL, Euphuus (Arber), p. 214. (1580)

Wherein you resemble the lapwing, who crieth most where her nest is not.

JOHN LYL, Campaspe. Act ii, sc. 1. (1584)

Who . . . cry with the Lapwing farthest from their nest.

GREENE, Art of Conny Catching, ii, 4. (1592)
Far from her nest the lapwing cries away.

SHAKESPEARE, Comedy of Errors, iv, 2, 27. (1593)
'Tis my familiar sin

With maids to seem the lapwing and to jest,
Tongue far from heart.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, i, 4, 31. (1604)

He will lie like a lapwing, when she flies
Far from her sought nest, still "here 'tis," she cries.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, The Revenge of Bussy d'Ambois. Act v, sc. 1. (1607)

He has the lapwing's cunning, I am afraid,
That cries most when she's furthest from the nest.

MASSINGER, The Old Law. Act iv, sc. 2. (1620)
The lapwing cries most farthest from her nest.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 256. (1670)
The Lapwing cries most, when furthest from her Nest.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4621. (1732)

LARK

1 As lightly as I were a larke.

CHAUCEUR (?), The Hous of Fame, Bk. ii, l. 546. (c. 1383)

2 The bisy larke, messenger of day,
Salueth in hir song the morwe gray.

CHAUCEUR, Canterbury Tales: The Knightes Tale, l. 633. (c. 1386)

It was the lark, the herald of the morn.
SHAKESPEARE, Romco and Juliet, iii, 5, 6. (1595)
Up springs the lark, . . . the messenger of morn.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Spring, l. 590. (1728)

3 A Leg of a larke
Is better than is the body of a kyght.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. iv. (1562)
CHAPMAN AND MARSTON, Eastward Hoe. Act v, sc. 1. (1605)

One Leg of a lark is worth the whole body of a kite.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 112. (1670)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3765. (1732)
Yea, with delight,

Say my lark's leg is better than a kite.

JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. ii, p. 192. (1684)

4 And hevyn fall we shall have meny larkys.

RICHARD HILLS, Common-Place Book, p. 140. (c. 1530)

If the skies fell he hoped to catch larks. (Si les nues tombaient esperoyt prandre les alouettes.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 11. (1534) The Spanish form is, "Si el cielo se cae, quebrarse han las ollas" (If the sky falls, the pots will be broken).

When the sky falth, we shall haue larks.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 4. (1546)

And though fowl now be scarce, yet there are clerks,

The sky not falling, think we may have larks.

BEN JONSON, Epigrams. No. 101. (1612)

Bragging of the Larks we shall catch, when the Sky falls.

DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 260. (1709)

5 Larks will fall ready roasted into his mouth.
(Les alouettes luy tomberont toutes rosties dans la bouche.)

ANTOINE OUDIN, Curiosities Françaises, p. 10. (1640)

He thinks that roasted larks will fall into his mouth.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 3. (1659)
Of a sluggard.

The larks fall there ready roasted.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 168. (1855)

6 He [Lord James of Douglas] set fire to the castle, and . . . took refuge with his followers in the hills and forests. "He loved better," he said, "to hear the lark sing than the mouse squeak."

SCOTT, Tales of a Grandfather. Ch. 9. (1831)
It were better to hear the lark sing than the mouse cheep.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 435. (1855)

Like the good Lord James Douglas, we had leifer hear the lark sing over moor and down, with Chicot, than listen to the starved mouse squeak . . . with M. Zola.

ANDREW LANG, Essays in Little, p. 4. (1891)

7 Merry larks are ploughmen's clocks.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, v, 2, 914. (1595)

RISE WITH THE LARK, see under RISING.

8 With the unmusical even the lark is melodious. (ἐν ἀμουσίοις καὶ κόρυδος φθέγγεται.)

UNKNOWN. A Greek proverb.

LAST

9 He that cometh last maketh all fast.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Three Hundred Epigrams. No. 202 (1562) Cited by Ray and Fuller.

He that cometh last, maketh the dore fast.

SAINLIENS, French Littleton, sig. Ei. (1566)

The last comer latches the door, maketh all sure.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Porte. (1611)

Last makes fast, viz. shut the door.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 6. (1659)
"Last makes fast" . . . is a recognized rule in passing through a gate that has been opened.

EVANS, Leicestershire Words, p. 302. (1881)

10 Than was it proued trow, as this prouerbe goth,

He that commeth last to the pot, is soonest wroth.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 10. (1546)

The last at the pot is the first wroth.

DAVIES, The Scourge of Folly. Prov. 43. (1611)

11 Last has luck: Finds a penny in the muck.

V. S. LEAN, Collectanea, iv, 27. (1904)

- 1 The last, but not the least.
JOHN LILLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 343. (1580)
Among the many strange conceits you told me . . . truly even the last . . . would not seem the least unto me.
SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Arcadia, i, 14. (c. 1586)
And there, though last, not least, is Action.
EDMUND SPENSER, Colin Clout, l. 444. (1591)
Though last, not least in love.
SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar, iii, 1, 189. (1599)
Though I speak last, my lord, I am not least.
THOMAS MIDDLETON, The Mayor of Quinborough. Act iii, sc. 3. (a. 1627)
These are the last, but not the least.
SHADWELL, The Virtuoso. Act iv, sc. 4. (1676)
Last but not least. An adaptation (perhaps originally a misquotation) of Spenser's 'though last, not least.'
ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés. (1941)
2 How that lyke a man he wan the barbican
With a sawte of solace at the longe last.
JOHN SKELTON, A Garlande of Laurell, l. 1398. (1523)
[She] was at the Long-Last prevail'd to hear the Will read.
SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, Fables. No. 198. (1692)
Human nature, which at the long last is always to blame.
J. R. LOWELL, My Study Windows, p. 131. (1870)
At long last. Ultimately; at last: [a cliché since] C. 20, though Carlyle used it in 1864, and at long last was current in C. 16-17.
ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés. At. (1942) Its most famous use was by King Edward VIII, as the opening words of his abdication radio speech 11 Dec., 1936.
3 Full soth is that by-word, "to pot, who comyth last! He is worst servid."
UNKNOWN, The Tale of Beryn, l. 3366. (c. 1400) The proverb is, "Last come, worst served." The French say, "Au dernier les os" (To the last comer, the bones), and also, "Les derniers venus sont souvent les maîtres" (The last comers are often the masters). See under LATENESS.

LATE

See also Delay

- 4 The foremost was always behinde.
CHAUCER (?), The Book of the Duchesse, l. 890. (c. 1369)
He's always behind hand, like the miller's filler.
W. C. HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 199. (1869)
Behind like a cow's tail.
H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 493. (1940)
5 It is better to be late than never to arrive.
(κρείττον ἐστὶν ὀψασθαι ὥπ' τὰ δέοντα πράττειν ἢ μηδέποτε.)
DIONYSIUS OF HALICARNASSUS, Romaike Archiologia. Bk. ix, sec. 9. (c. 25 B.C.)

- Better late than never. (Potius sero, quam nunquam.)
LIVY, History. Bk. iv, ch. 23. (c. 10 B.C.) Another Latin form is, "Praestat aliquando quam nunquam."
Bet than never is late,
CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Chanouns Yemannes Tale, l. 857. (c. 1389)
He seyde vyce to forsake ys bettyr late than neuer.
JOHN LYDGATE, The Assembly of Gods. St. 172. (c. 1420)
It is said in english proverbes, better to amend late than never.
Petition to the Lord Mayor of London, 1433.
Better late than neuer to repent.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)
I have been . . . much ashamed of not visiting her sooner, but better now than never.
SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 17 March, 1667.
You made up your mind but late to come to sea. However . . . "better late than never."
FREDERICK MARRYAT, Mr. Midshipman Easy. Ch. 9. (1836) Common to most languages. The Italians say, "Meglio tardi, che mai," the Spaniards, "Nunca es tarde, cuando llega," or "Mas vale tarde que nunca," the French, "Il vaut mieux tard que jamais."
Better late than never, but better never late.
C. H. SPURGEON, Salt-Cellars. (1885)
Better late than never, as Noah remarked to the Zebra, who had understood that passengers arrived in alphabetical order.
BERT LESTON TAYLOR, The So-Called Human Race, p. 265. (a. 1921)
6 Who commeth late, lodgeth yl. (Chi tardi ariua, mal allogia.)
JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 29. (1578)
He who cometh in late, has an ill Lodging.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2381. (1732)
The bones for those who come late. (Sero venientibus ossa.)
ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 406. (1869) "First come, first served." The French say, "Au dernier les os" (To the last comer the bones). See also under LAST.
7 Better late ripe and bear, than early blossom and blast.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 910. (1732)
8 Late in coming, late in fulfilling. (ὀψιμον. ὀψιτέλεστον.)
HOMER, Iliad. Bk. ii, l. 325. (c. 850 B.C.)
Often that which has come latest on the scene seems to have accomplished the whole matter. (Semper enim quod postremum adiectum sit, id rem totam, videtur traxisse.)
LIVY, History. Bk. xxvii, ch. 45. (c. 10 B.C.)
9 Go early to the fish market, and late to the shambles.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 6. (1678)
10 You come late, yet you come! (Spät kommt ihr—doch ihr kommt!)
SCHILLER, The Piccolomini. Act i, sc. 1, l. 1. (1799)

When all is gone, and nothing left, what avails the dagger with the dudgeon-haft?

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 14. (1659)

Howell explains that common daggers had a hilt made of dudgeon wood, perhaps box-wood. Cited by Ray and Fuller.

1 I have come too late in a world too old. (Je suis venu trop tard dans un monde trop vieux.)

ALFRED DE MUSSET, Citations de Rolla, l. 27. (1837)

2 The former allies have blundered in the past by offering Germany too little, and offering even that too late, until finally Nazi Germany has become a menace to all mankind.

ALLAN NEVINS, Germany Disturbs the Peace. In Current History, May, 1935.

It is the old trouble—too late. Too late with Czechoslovakia, too late with Poland, certainly too late with Finland. It is always too late, or too little, or both, and that is the road to disaster.

DAVID LLOYD GEORGE, Speech, House of Commons, on the day after the fall of Finland, March, 1940.

3 Too late you look back to the land when, the rope being loosed, the curved keel rushes into the deep. (Sero respicitur tellus, ubi fune soluto, | currit in immensum panda carina salum.)

OVID, Amores, Bk. ii, eleg. 11, l. 23. (c. 13 B. C.)

Too late I grasp my shield after my wounds. (Sero clypeum post vulnera sumo.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. i, eleg. 3, l. 35. (C. A. D. 9)

He is too late in refusing to bear the yoke to which he has already submitted. (Sero recusat ferre, quod subiit, iugum.)

SENECA, Hippolytus, l. 135. (C. A. D. 60)

'Tis too late to be cautious in the midst of dangers. (Serum est cavendi tempus in mediis malis.)

SENECA, Thyestes, l. 487. (C. A. D. 60)

There is an old proverb about gladiators, that they plan their fight in the ring. (Vetus proverbium est gladiatorem in harena capere consilium.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xxii, sec. 1. (A. A. D. 64)

When your helmet is on it is too late to repent. (Galeatum ser duelli paenitet.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. i, l. 169. (C. A. D. 120)

4 It is too late to kick when one has let himself be shackled. (Il n'est plus temps de regimber, quand on s'est laissé entraver.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5. (1595)

The putting-off man sharpens his arrows when he sees the bear.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 438. (1938)

5 "The burying's gone by," i. e. you are too late.

SAMUEL PEGGE, Derbyisms, p. 92. (c. 1791)

"The parade has passed."

6 Salves seldom help an overlong suffered sore.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 130. (1576)

Too late com salves to cure confirmed sores.

G. TURBERVILLE, Tragical Tales, p. 283. (1587)

7 It is too late to cast Anchor when the ship is shaken to peeces against the rockes.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 208. (1576)

Little auayleth the Rudder, when the shippe is lost: little auaille weapons, when the camp is broke: little helpeth the medicine, when the man is deade, and little helpeth the water, when the house is burnt.

JOHN FLORIO, Firsts Fruites, fo. 93. (1578)

Quoting Antonio Guevara.

"Baskets after the vintage," "When the dog is drowning, everyone brings him water," "When the friar's beaten, then comes James."

HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 334. (1869)

8 Arriving after the feast. (κατόπιον ἐορτῆς ἤκομεν.)

PLATO, Gorgias. Sec. 447A. (c. 385 B. C.) Referred to as a proverb (τὸ λεγόμενον). The Latin form is "Post festum venisti."

You treat me like one who has come, in the words of the proverb, too late for the feast. (ὥσπερ κατόπιον ἐορτῆς ἤκοντα [τὸ τοῦ λόγου] παρατρέχεις.)

HELIODORUS, Aethiopica. Bk. iii, ch. 1. (C. A. D. 350)

9 To protect the booty when it is too late. (Ne post tempus praedae praesidium parem.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 294. (c. 200 B. C.)

He puts a lock on a ruined house.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 506. (1817)

TO LOCK THE STABLE DOOR, see under STABLE.

10 It's a miserable business, waiting till thirst has you by the throat before you dig the well. (Miserum est opus, | igitur demum fodere puteum, ubi sitis fauces tenet.)

PLAUTUS, Mostellaria, l. 379. (Act ii, sc. 1.)

11 Too late you perceive the truth. (οἶμ' ὥς εἰκάς ὄψε' τὴν δίκην ἰδεῖν.)

SOPHOCLES, Antigone, l. 1270. (c. 441 B. C.)

12 When the war is over, then comes help. (μετὰ τὸν πόλεμον ἡ συμμαχία.)

SUIDAS, Lexicon. (c. 950) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, vi, 17, with the Latin, "Post bellum auxilium." Another form, also cited by ERASMUS, iii, i, 17, is, τὰς μηχανὰς μετὰ τὸν πόλεμον κομίζειν (Bringing up the engines after the war), with the Latin, "Machinas post bellum adferre." Japanese say, "Too late to cut a stick when the fight is over."

13 To call a council when the enemy is under the very walls. (Cogere concilium, cum muros adsidet hostis.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. xi, l. 304. (19 B. C.) The proverbial form is, "Non est apud aram consultandum" (It is too late for consultation when the enemy is within the walls).

14 Being a minute too late has led to some bright careers.

ANONYMOUS, Meditations in Wall Street, p. 140. (1940)

LATIN

- <sup>1</sup> There is but litel Latin in my mawe.
CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Shipman's Prologue, l. 28 (c. 1386)
For latyn ne kanstow yit but smal.
CHAUCER, A Treatise on the Astrolabe; Prologus, l. 31. (c. 1391)
And though thou hadst small Latine, and lesse Greeke,
From thence to honour thee I would not seeke For names.
BEN JONSON, To the Memory of My Beloved the Author, Mr. William Shakespeare. (1623)
Small skill in Latin, and still less in Greek,
Is more than adequate to all I seek.
WILLIAM COWPER, Tirocinium, l. 385. (1784)
- <sup>2</sup> Remuneration! O that's the Latin word for three farthings.
SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, iii, 1, 138. (1595)
"Hang-hog" is Latin for bacon.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, iv, 1, 50. (1601)
These two words Eate it, are the unlettered mans latine for any good meate.
HENRY BUTTES, Dyets Drie Dinner, sig. K4. (1599)
Lord Smart: Can you tell me what's Latin for a goose.
Neverout: O, my lord, I know that: why, brandy is Latin for a goose, and tace is Latin for a candle.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)
- <sup>3</sup> It seems to me that really Bonaparte "has lost his Latin."
TOLSTOY, War and Peace. Vol. i, pt. iii, ch. 9. (1865) Dole, tr. The French proverb is, "Au bout de son Latin" (At the end of his Latin), i. e. at the end of his knowledge, at the end of his string.
- <sup>4</sup> With a Florin, Latin and a good Nag, one may find out the way in any country.
TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 91. (1666)
Those who can talk Latin may always find their way to Rome.
B. H. MALKIN, tr., Gil Blas. Bk. x, ch. 10. (1809)
With Latin, a horse, and money, thou wilt pass through the world.
H. A. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 570. (1855)
- <sup>5</sup> I lou'd my father well, too; but to say,
Nay, vow, I would not marry for his death—
Sure, I should speake false Lattin, should I not?
UNKNOWN, The Puritan Widow. Act i, sc. 1. (1607) Shakespeare Apocrypha. To tell a lie. He [the king] bid us several times put on our Hats; but our Captain . . . answer'd that he would not, that they should not cause him to commit that false Latine.
GEORGE HAVERS, tr., The Travels of Pietro della Valle, p. 186. (1665) To be guilty of bad manners.

LAUGHTER

- <sup>6</sup> Man is distinguished from all other creatures by the faculty of laughter.
JOSEPH ADDISON, The Spectator, 26 Sept., 1712. Men have been wise in many different modes, but they have always laughed in the same way.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, Works, ii, 45. (a. 1784)
By nothing do men show their character more than by the things they laugh at.
GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa. (c. 1825)
How much lies in laughter: the cipher-key, where-with we decipher the whole man.
THOMAS CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. i, ch. 4. (1833)
- <sup>7</sup> Laughter and levity lead to lewdness.
RABBI AKIBA, Mishnah: Pirké Aboth, iii, 19. (c. A. D. 125.) Oesterley, tr.
"Tehee!" quod she, and clapte the window to.
CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Milleres Tale, l. 554. (c. 1386)
- <sup>8</sup> Where is the laughter that shook the rafter?
Where is the rafter, by the way?
T. B. ALDRICH, An Old Castle. (c. 1890)
- <sup>9</sup> Laffing iz the sensation ov pheeling good all over, and showing it principally in one spot.
JOSH BILLINGS (H. W. SHAW), Sayings: Laffing. (1858)
- <sup>10</sup> The landlord's laugh was ready chorus.
ROBERT BURNS, Tam o' Shanter. (1791)
- <sup>11</sup> Laughter means sympathy; good laughter is not "the crackling of thorns under the pot."
THOMAS CARLYLE, On Heroes and Hero-Worship. Lect. iii. (1840)
- <sup>12</sup> The most completely lost of all days is that on which one has not laughed. (La plus perdue de toutes les journées est celle où l'on n'a pas rit.)
SEBASTIEN CHAMFORT, Maximes. (a. 1794)
- <sup>13</sup> What is viler than to be laughed at? (Quid turpius quam illudi?)
CICERO, De Amicitia. Ch. 26, sec. 99. (44 B. C.) Let people laugh, as long as I am warm. (Y ándeme yo caliente, y riase la gente!)
CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 50. (1615)
There are few who would not rather be hated than laughed at.
SYDNEY SMITH, Sketches of Moral Philosophy. Lect. xi. (1805)
No man ever distinguished himself who could not bear to be laughed at.
MARIA EDGEWORTH, Tales of Fashionable Life: Ennui. (1812)
- <sup>14</sup> You no doubt laugh with yourself. (Tu videlicet tecum ipse rides.)
CICERO, De Finibus. Bk. ii, ch. 23, sec. 76. (c. 45 B. C.) Usually translated "laugh in your sleeve," meaning to be secretly amused.

If I coveted nowe to avenge the injuries that you have done me, I myght laughe in my sylve.
JOHN DAUS, tr., Sleidane's Commentaries, p. 64. (1506)

To that I saide nought, but laught in my sleeue.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)
Thou . . . hast fleerd and laught in the sleeve at the sincere.

DANIEL ROGERS, Naaman, p. 228. (1642)
Now did Oranda laugh within her sleeve.

JOHN CHALKHILL, Thealma and Clearchus, p. 89. (1683)

A certain gentleman . . . may be laughing in his sleeve at me.

ELIZA HAYWOOD, The Female Spectator, ii, 95. (1744)

I know you are laughing in your sleeve.

SHERIDAN, The Rivals. Act ii, sc. 1. (1775)

There was a kind of leer about his lips; he seemed laughing in his sleeve.

CHARLOTTE BRONTË, Shirley. Ch. 8. (1849)

He laughed in his sleeve.

LEO TOLSTOY, War and Peace. Vol. i, pt. i, ch. 13. (1865) The French is, "Rire sous cape."

<sup>1</sup> You are never pleased but when we are all upon the broad grin; all laugh and no Company.

CONGREVE, Double-Dealer. Act iii, sc. 9. (1694)

O, I am stabb'd with laughter!

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, v, 2, 79. (1595)

My lungs began to crow like chanticleer, . . .
And I did laugh sans intermission
An hour by his dial.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, ii, 7, 30. (1600)
With his eyes in flood with laughter.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline, i, 6, 74. (1609)

I shall laugh myself to death.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, ii, 2, 159. (1611)
Laughter holding both his sides.

JOHN MILTON, L'Allegro, l. 31. (1632)

He laughs ill that laughs himself to death.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 210. (1639)
Cited by Ray and Fuller.

You'd break a man's sides with laughing.

THOMAS BROWN, Saints in Uproar. (1687)

You will make one die of laughing.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738) The Latin proverbial phrase is, "Risum emoriri."
We all thought we should break our sides with laughing.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i.

[He] bade fair to split his sides with laughing.

DICKENS, The Old Curiosity Shop. Ch. 51. (1840)

Why, she laughed herself lame.

MARK TWAIN, The £1,000,000 Bank-note. (1898)

<sup>2</sup> 'Tis a good thing to laugh at any rate; and if a straw can tickle a man, it is an instrument of happiness.

JOHN DRYDEN, Essays. Vol. ii, p. 133. (a. 1700)

<sup>3</sup> I said of laughter, It is mad: and of mirth, What doeth it? (Risum reputavi errorem: et gaudio dixi: Quid frustra deciperis?)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, ii, 2. (c. 250 B. C.)

"Laugh or go mad," isn't that the phrase?

ELIZABETH DALY, Deadly Nightshade, p. 144. (1940)

<sup>4</sup> As the crackling of thorns under a pot, so is the laughter of the fool. (Sicut sonitus spinarum ardentium sub olla, sic risus stulti.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, vii, 6. (c. 250 B. C.)

Nothing is more silly than a silly laugh. (Nam risu inepto res ineptior nullast.)

CATULLUS, Odes. Ode 39, l. 16. (c. 57 B. C.) The Italians say, "Niente è più sciocco di un rider sciocco" (Nothing is more stupid than a stupid laugh).

The fol is knowen bi his lauhwhing.

Vernon MS: Minor Poems, p. 534. (c. 1340)

By ofte laghyng thow mayste know a fole.

UNKNOWN, Secreta Secretorum, 141. (1422)

Laughter is the hiccup of a fool.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 109. (1670)

The more one is a fool, the more one laughs. (Plus on est de fous, plus on rit.)

FLORENT DANCOURT, Maison de Campagne. Sc. 11. (c. 1700) The Latin proverb is,

"Risus abundat in ore stultorum" (Laughter is frequent in the mouth of fools), or, "Per risum multum possis cognoscere stultum" (By much laughter you may know the fool) "The more fools, the more laughter."

He who laugheth too much, hath the Nature of a Fool; he that laugheth not at all, hath the Nature of an old Cat.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2396. (1732)

The loud laugh that spoke the vacant mind.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, Deserted Village, l. 122

(1770) Usually misquoted "empty mind."

Th' loud laugh that speaks th' vacant bottle.

F. P. DUNNE, The Gift of Oratory. (1901)

<sup>5</sup> This effectually raised the laugh against poor Moses.

GOLDSMITH, Vicar of Wakefield. Ch. 7. (1766)

He . . . found no great difficulty in turning the laugh upon the aggressor.

SMOLLETT, Humphry Clinker, 17 May, 1771.

You . . . have the laugh on your side now.

FREDERICK MARRYAT, Children of the New Forest. Ch. 5. (1847)

<sup>6</sup> The company . . . laughed the cunning man out of countenance.

JOHN GOODMAN, Penitent Pardoned, ii, 2. (1679)

Love, honour, friendship, generosity . . . under the name of fopperies, have been for some time laughed out of doors.

SWIFT, Hints on Conversation. (c. 1712)

<sup>7</sup> Go to Lord John, be of good cheere, and remember that Apollo laughed once a yeere.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iv. p. 156. (1574) Young, tr.

<sup>8</sup> Many of the worshipful of the city, that make sweet gains of stinking wares; and will laugh and be fat.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, Metamorphosis of Ajax (1814), p. 68. (1596)

When shall we sup together, and laugh and be fat?

BEN JONSON, Every Man Out of His Humour.

Act iii, sc. 1. (1599)

Ille laugh and be fatte, for care kild a catte.

Roxburghe Ballads, i, 476. (c. 1610)

Whose whole life is to eat, and drink, . . . and laugh themselves fat.

JOHN TRAPP, Commentary on the Epistles and Revelation, p. 296. (1647)

Laugh and be fat all the world over.

DAVID GARRICK, Correspondence, i, 201. (1765)

The Italians put it another way, "Il riso fa buon sangue" (Laughter makes good blood).

He seems to have reversed the old proverb of "laugh and be fat."

SCOTT, Peveil of the Peak. Ch. 33. (1823)

I mean . . . to laugh till I grow fat, or at least streaky.

THOMAS HOOD, Letter to a Child, Apr., 1884.

Grow thin and laugh longer.

DR. ELLIOTT P. JOSLIN, The Treatment of Diabetes Mellitus. (1916)

He who laughs, lasts.

MARY P. POOLE, A Glass Eye at the Keyhole. (1938)

1 A thousand taels wont purchase a laugh.

H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs. No. 289. (1937)

2 Laugh, if you are wise. (Ride, si sapis.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 392.

(1869) Quoting Martial, and adding another proverbial phrase, "Ridentibus arride" (Laugh with those that laugh).

3 For me, it is to laugh.

O. HENRY, The Unprofitable Servant. (1911)

4 He laughth that wynth.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 5. (1546)

Let them laugh that win.

GEORGE PEELE (?), Syr Clyomon and Clamydes, sig. F1. (1599) GARRICK, Epilogue to Colman's English Merchant. (1767) etc.

So, so: they laugh that win.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, iv, 1, 126. (1605)

Let them laugh that win the prize.

THOMAS MAY, The Heire. Act iii, sc. 1. (1622)

Give losers leave to speak and winners leave to laugh, for if you do not they will take it.

THOMAS FIELDING, Proverbs of All Nations, p. 27. (1824) BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 361. (1855)

Let those laugh who win.

FREDERICK MARRYAT, Mr. Midshipman Easy.

Ch. 23. (1836) THACKERAY, Barry Lyndon.

Ch. 13. (1844) The French say, "C'est à ceux qui gagnent de rire" (It's for those who win to laugh); also, "Marchand qui perd ne peut rire" (The merchant who loses cannot laugh).

5 Laughter unquenchable arose among the blessed gods. (ἀσβεστος δ' ἄρ' ἐνὶ ὄρω γέλως μακάρεσσι θεοῖσιν.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. i, l. 599. (c. 850 B.C.) Hence

"Homeric laughter." Used also in the Odyssey, viii, 326; xx, 346. In viii, 343, it is varied to, "ἐν δὲ γέλωι ὤρ' ἀθανάτοισι θεοῖσιν."

If anyone represents men of worth as overpowered by laughter we must not accept it, much less if gods.

PLATO, Republic. Bk. iii, sec. 389A. (c. 375 B.C.) Plato follows this by quoting Homer's lines as unacceptable—the gods would not so far forget their dignity as to indulge in inextinguishable laughter. The idea that violent laughter is undignified is attested by many ancient writers. Plato refers to it twice in Laws, 732C, 935B, and Diogenes Laertius, iii, 26, asserts that Plato himself never laughed excessively. Lord Chesterfield would have approved.

6 She laughed with her lips, but her forehead above her dark brows relaxed not. (ἡ δὲ γέλασσε χεῖλεσιν.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xv, l. 101. (c. 850 B.C.)

He lawgheth but from the lypyes forwarde.

SIR THOMAS MORE, Consulacyon of Tindale. (1532)

Rire à grosses dents. From the teeth outward.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Rire. (1611)

The teeth are not the heart.

D. E. MARVIN, Curiosities in Proverbs, p. 63. (1916) The exposure of the teeth in laughter does not always indicate a merry heart. A Martinique Creole proverb, not Japanese, as one might think.

7 She laughed a meaningless laugh. (ἀχρεῖον δ' ἐγέλασεν.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xviii, l. 163. (c. 850 B.C.)

We may laugh a Sardinian laugh. (Rideamus γέλωτα σαρδόνιον.)

CICERO, Ad Familiares. Bk. vii, epis. 25, sec. 1.

(45 B.C.) A reference to the bitter Sardinian herbs, which caused an involuntary distension of the muscles of the mouth when eaten; hence a forced or unnatural laugh. There are many Greek proverbial phrases for different kinds of laughter: "Ionic laughter" and "Chian laughter" are lascivious or effeminate laughter; "Ajax laughter" is malignant; "Athenian laughter" is untimely; The Greek of all these will be found in DIOGENIANUS, and the Latin in ERASMUS, Adagia, pp. 167, 456, 619.

Let me seem more bitter to thee than Sardinian herbs. (Immo ego Sardoniis videar tibi amarior herbis.)

VERGIL, Eclogues. No. vii, l. 41. (37 B.C.)

Poppy-seeds served with Sardinian honey. (Sardo cum melle papaver.)

HORACE, De Arte Poetica, l. 375. (c. 20 B.C.)

Since the herbs and flowers on Sardinia were bitter, of course the honey was also.

Sardinian laughter. (Risus Sardonicus.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. iii, cent. v, No. 1. (1523) Laughter full of bitterness or madness, Erasmus explains.

1 I could not help laughing, "to save my life."
CATHERINE C. HOPLEY, Life in the South, ii, 151. (1863)

2 Were Democritus still on earth, he would laugh. (Si foret in terris, rideret Democritus.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 1, l. 194. (20 B. C.)

Democritus was the laughing philosopher but a different point is sometimes given the saying by substituting the name of Heraclitus, the weeping philosopher.

3 The case will be dismissed with laughter. (Solventur risu tabulae.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 1, l. 86. (35 B. C.)

"Laughed out of court," in the modern phrase.

4 Laughing has always been considered by theologians as a crime.

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL, Speech, Chicago, 26 Nov., 1882.

5 Laughed thee to scorn. (Subsannavit te.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, xxxvii, 22. (c. 725 B. C.)

All they that see me laugh me to scorn. (Omnes videntes me, deriserunt me.)

Old Testament: Psalms, xxii, 7. (c. 250 B. C.)

He will laugh thee to scorn. (In novissimo deridebit te.)

Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, xiii, 7. (c. 190 B. C.)

The clerks . . . loube to scorn the emperour.

UNKNOWN, The Proces of the Seven Sages, I. 1995. (c. 1425)

This change will cause Philautus to laugh me to scorn.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 95. (1579)

This was too much, and we laughed him to scorn.

WILLIAM DEAN HOWELLS, Venetian Life, p. 306. (1866)

6 To condemn by a cutting laugh comes readily to us all. (Facilis cuivis rigidi censura cachinni.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. x, l. 31. (c. A. D. 120)

The mocking laughter of Hell. (Das Hohn-gelächter der Hölle.)

LESSING, Emilia Galotti. Act v, sc. 2. (1772)

A low, gurgling laugh, so unlike a human laugh, that it caused my blood to trickle, for a moment, coldly along my veins.

TIMOTHY SHAY ARTHUR, Ten Nights in a Bar-room. Night ii, p. 30. (1854)

7 He that laughs when he's alone will make sport in company. Intimating that he is a fool.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 144. (1721)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2212. (1732)

8 We must laugh before we are happy, for fear of dying without having laughed at all. (Il faut rire avant que d'être heureux, de peur de mourir sans avoir ri.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères, Ch. 4, Du Cœur (1688)

9 Ill-timed laughter in men is a dangerous evil. (γέλως ἀκαιρος ἐν βροτοῖς δεινὸν κακόν.)

MENANDER, Monostikoi. No. 88. (c. 300 B. C.)

Do not laugh much, nor at many things, nor boisterously. (γέλως μὴ πολὺς ἔστω μὴδὲ ἐπὶ πολλοῖς μὴδὲ ἀνεμένος.)

EPICETUS [?], Encheiridion, Sec. 33. (c. A. D. 100)

Laugh not too much; the witty man laughs last.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 42. (a. 1633)

There is nothing more unbecoming a man of quality than to laugh.

WILLIAM CONGREVE, The Double-Dealer. Act i, sc. 4. (1694)

I could heartily wish that you may often be seen to smile, but never heard to laugh, while you live. . . . In my mind there is nothing so illiberal and so ill-bred as audible laughter.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 9 March, 1748.

I am sure that, since I have had the full use of my reason, nobody has ever heard me laugh.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 9 March, 1748.

The vulgar often laugh, but never smile; whereas well-bred people often smile, but seldom laugh.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 17 Feb., 1754.

'Tis not deem'd so great a crime by half

To violate a vestal as to laugh.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Rosciad, l. 463. (1761)

Beware you don't laugh, for then you show all your faults.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Behavior. (1860)

10 Laugh away, you fine laugher. (Riez donc, beau rieur.)

MOLIÈRE, L'École des Maris. Act i, sc. 2, l. 165. (1661)

Ridi, Pagliaccio! (Laugh, Pagliaccio.)

LEONCAVALLO, Pagliacci. Act i. (1892)

11 He deserves Paradise who makes his companions laugh.

MOHAMMED, The Koran. (c. 625) As quoted by BERNARD ASCHNER, The Art of the Healer, p. 292.

12 Being laughed at is better than being sneered at. (Satius est rideri quam derideri.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 61. (c. A. D. 60)

13 I'm made a laughing-stock. (Ludibrio.)

PLAUTUS, Menaechmi, l. 782. (c. 200 B. C.)

I am reputed a laughing-stock in this world.

JOHN FRITH, A Boke against Rustel, p. 219. (1533)

I was made thy stale, and Philautus your laughing stocke.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 96. (1579)

Let us not be laughing-stocks to other men's humours.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, iii, 1, 88. (1601)

I perceive my Lord Anglesey do make a mere laughing-stock of this act.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 4 Jan., 1668. The French say, "Être la fable du quartier."

<sup>1</sup> The price of a laugh is too high, if it is raised at the expense of propriety. (Nimium risus pretium est, si probitatis impendio constat.)

QUINTILIAN, De Institutionis Oratoriae. Bk. vi, ch. 3, sec. 34. (c. A. D. 80)

<sup>2</sup> To be born with the gift of laughter and a sense that the world is mad.

RAFAEL SABATINI, Scaramouche. Ch. 1. (1921)
Prize-winning answer to the question, "What makes life worth living?" "He was born," etc., is inscribed over the entrance to the Sterling Hall of Graduate Studies at Yale University, without credit to Sabatini.

<sup>3</sup> He chastises manners with a laugh. (Castigat ridendo mores.)

JEAN DE SANTEUL. (c. 1675) Adopted as the motto of the Opéra-Comique, Paris.
Win us from vice and laugh us into sense.

THOMAS TICKELL, On the Prospect of Peace. St. 38. (a. 1740)

<sup>4</sup> No one becomes a laughing-stock who laughs at himself. (Nemo risum praeibit qui ex se cepit.)

SENECA, De Constantia. Ch. 17, sec. 3. (c. A. D. 45)
He is not laughed at that laughs at himself first.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1936. (1732)
The old maxim, of beginning to laugh at yourself first where you have anything ridiculous about you.

MRS. PIOZZI, Anecdotes of Samuel Johnson, p. 99. (1786)

<sup>5</sup> I will laugh like a hyen.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, iv, 1, 156. (1600)
The purser of the ship,—a great coarse creature, who used to laugh all day long like a hyaena.

THEODORE HOOK, Jack Brag. Ch. 14. (1837)
Mrs. Proudie smiled as a hyena may probably smile before he begins his laugh. . . . And then the hyena laughed out.

TROLLOPE, Barchester Towers. Ch. 33. (1857)

Now nothyng but pay, pay,
With, laughe and lay downe.

JOHN SKELTON, Why Come Ye Nat to Courte?, l. 928. (1522) An obsolete game at cards.
What game doo you plaie at cardes? At primero, at trump, at laugh and lie down.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, fo. 67. (1591)
'Tis faire lie downe and laugh.

ANTHONY COPLEY, A Fig for Fortune, 24. (1596)
Sorrow becomes me best. A suit of laugh and lye downe would wear better.

S. R., The Noble Soldier. Act ii, sc. 2. (1634)
And when we have done
These innocent sports, we'll laugh and lie down.
Westminster Drollery, p. 28. (1671)

<sup>7</sup> The laugh of men of wit is for the most part but a faint constrained kind of half-laugh.

RICHARD STEELE, The Guardian. No. 29. (1713)
I laughed a sad laugh.

W. M. THACKERAY, Letters, 4 Oct., 1848.

A short laugh like the closing of a padlock.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), The Song and the Sergeant. (1910)

<sup>8</sup> The Horse-Laugh is a distinguishing characteristic of the rural hoyden.

RICHARD STEELE, The Guardian. No. 29. (1713)
Skill'd in the Horse-laugh and dry Rub.

SWIFT, To Mr. Delaney, l. 57. (1718)

<sup>9</sup> I laughed fit to split.

H. B. STOWE, Uncle Tom's Cabin. Ch. 38. (1852)
Then she laughs fit to kill.

Knickerbocker Magazine, Oct., 1856, p. 433.

Abram jest set back and laughed fit to kill.

E. C. HALL, Aunt Jane, p. 165. (1898)

<sup>10</sup> Lady Smart: Who's there? Bid the children be quiet, and not laugh so loud.

Lady Answerall: O! madam, let'm laugh, they'll ne'er laugh younger.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

A good laugh is sunshine in a house.

THACKERAY, Sketches: Love, Marriage. (a. 1863)

<sup>11</sup> The English say, when one has conveniently reveng'd ones self on another, Now you can laugh but on one side of your mouth, friend.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 173. (1666)

Tho' he laugh'd, 'twas on the wrong side of his mouth.

THEOPHILUS LUCAS, The Memoirs of Gamesters and Sharpers, p. 65. (1714)

If you provoke me, I'll make you laugh on the wrong side of your mouth.

JOHN OZELL, tr., Molière, iv, 36. (1714)

You laugh—'tis well—the tale applied
May make you laugh on t' other side.

COWPER, Love of the World Reproved. (1779)
Ladies may smile, but they would smile on the wrong sides of their pretty little mouths if they had been treated as I have been.

MARIA EDGEWORTH, Helen. Ch. 26. (1834)

"I'll make him laugh at the wrong side of his mouth," thought the Squire.

SAMUEL LOVER, Handy Andy. Ch. 3. (1842)

We shall be laughing on the wrong side of our mouths before the day is over.

W. E. NORRIS, Thirby Hall. Ch. 23. (1884)

I'll make some of you laugh on the wrong side.
ROLF BOLDREWOOD (T. A. BROWNE), Robbery Under Arms. Ch. 33. (1889)

He'll drub you . . . till you smile on the other side of your face.

S. J. WEYMAN, Starvecrow Farm. Ch. 7. (1905)

<sup>12</sup> Laugh and show your ign'rance!

ALLAN UPDEGRAFF, The Hills Look Down, p. 142. (1941)

<sup>13</sup> They all got drunk . . . and next morning laugh'd it off for a frolick.

SIR JOHN VANBRUGH, The Country House. Act i, sc. 1. (1715)

Instead of laughing it off, I was fool enough to be angry.

B. H. MALKIN, tr., Gil Blas. Bk. xii, ch. 1. (1809)

Clarissa . . . laughed off the proposal as a joke.
MRS. LYNN LINTON, The Rebel of the Family.
Ch. 2. (1880)

1
He laughs best that laughs last.

SIR JOHN VANBRUGH, The Country House. Act
ii, sc. 5. (1706)

Your Grace knows the French proverb, "He laughs best who laughs last."

WALTER SCOTT, Peveril of the Peak. Ch. 38.
(1823) The French is, "Il rit bien qui rit le dernier," or "Rira bien qui rira dernier."

The Italians say, "Ride bene chi ride l'ul-timo."

Better the last smile than the first laughter.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 19. (1678)

Men must have . . . laughed at the astounding simplicity of the French people. But he laughs best who laughs last.

H. S. MERRIMAN, The Last Hope. Ch. 16. (1904)
In this life he laughs longest who laughs last.

JOHN MASFIELD, *The Widow in the Bye
Street*. Pt. iv, st. 49. (1912)

They laugh best who laugh last.

OLIVER ONIONS, A Case in Camera, p. 147. (1920)
Who laughs last laughs best.

MARY ROBERTS RINEHART, *The Book of Tish:
The Treasure Hunt*. (1926)

He laughs best whose laugh lasts.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches,
p. 484. (1940) A modern improvement on the old saw.

He who laughs last laughs longest.

JOHN LODWICK, Running to Paradise, p. 343.
(1943)

2
The laughter of man is the contentment of God.

JOHN WEISS, Wit, Humor, and Shakspeare.
(1876)

II—Laughter and Tears

See also Smile and Tear

3
Like the laughter of the nut cracked between two stones.

J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 390.
(1817) Laughter amid suffering.

4
God hath not granted to woeful mortals even laughter without tears. (ἐπεὶ θεὸς οὐδὲ γελᾶσαι ἀκλαυτὶ μερόπασιν διζυροῖσιν ἔδωκε.)

CALLIMACHUS, Fragments. Frag. 118. (c. 250 B. C.)

5
I fare as doth the song of Chaunte-pleure.
For now I pleyne, and now I pleye.

CHAUCER (?), Anelida and Arcite, l. 320. (c. 1372)

6
She ys fals; and ever laughynge
With oon eye, and that other weepyng.

CHAUCER, The Book of the Duchesse, l. 633.
(c. 1369)

With ane eye laugh, and with the uther weip.

ROBERT HENRYSON, The Testament of Cresseid,
230. (c. 1460)

Full harde it is to fynde a woman stedfast,
For yf the one eye wepe, the other dothe contrary.
COLLIER, Bibliogr. Cat., ii, 482. (c. 1500)

They . . . weep with the one eye, laugh with the other; or . . . they can both together.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy.
Pt. iii, sec. ii, mem. iii, subs. 4. (1621)

One of them I saw crying with one eye . . . and laughing with the other.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, tr., Quevedo's Visions,
p. 106. (1667)

To cry with one eye, and laugh with the other.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 242. (1678)

7
He is as great a fool who laughs at everything as he who weeps at everything. (Tan necio es el que se rie de todo como el que se pudre de todo.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim
209. (1647)

8
To weep for joy is a kind of Manna.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 464. (1640)

Deep laughter leads to tears. (Risus profundior lachrymas parit.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 393.
(1869) "They laugh till they cry."

9
He that sings on a Friday will weep on a Sunday.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

He who laughs Friday will cry Sunday. (Tel qui rit vendredi, dimanche pleurera.)

RACINE, Les Plaideurs, l. 2. (1668)

10
Our present Teares here (not our present laughter)

Are but the handsells of our joyes hereafter.

ROBERT HERRICK, Hesperides: Teares. (1648)

11
Woe unto you that laugh now! for ye shall mourn and weep. (οὐαί, οἱ γελῶντες νῦν, οἱ πενθήσετε καὶ κλαύσετε.)

New Testament: Luke, vi, 25. (c. A. D. 65) The Vulgate is, "Vae vobis, qui ridetis nunc: quia lugebitis et flebitis."

12
The movements and lines of the face which serve to weep, serve also to laugh. (Les mouvements et plis du visage qui servent au pleurer, servent aussi au rire.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 20. (1580) The Germans say, "Lachen und Weinen in einem Sack" (Laughter and weeping in one sack), or, as Goethe put it, "Lachen, Weinen, Lust und Schmerz sind Geschwister-Kinder" (Laughing, weeping, joy and grief, are first cousins).

13
You waxe mery this morning, God gyue grace
you wepe nat or nyght.

PALSGRAVE, La Langue Françoyse, p. 776. (1530)

They that laugh in the morning may greet ere night.

KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 332. (1721)

Laugh before breakfast, you'll cry before supper.
(Tel rit au matin qui pleure au soir.)

VINCENT LEAN, Collectanea, iv, 28. (1902) The Italians say, "A chi troppo ride gli duole il cuore" (He who laughs too much may have an aching heart).

1 Don't weep: it's very silly of you to spoil such pretty eyes. Really now, you have more reason to laugh than to cry. (Quod rides magis est, quam ut lamentere.)

PLAUTUS, Mercator, l. 502. (c. 200 B. C.)

2 Even in laughter the heart is sorrowful; and the end of mirth is heaviness. (Extrema gaudii luctus occupat.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xiv, 13. (c. 250 B. C.)

3 The look and voice of the accused will generally awaken laughter if they fail to awaken compassion. . . . For there is no halfway house between laughter and tears. (Nihil habet ista res medium, sed aut lacrimas meretur aut risum.)

QUINTILIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae. Bk. vi, ch. i, sec. 45. (c. A. D. 80)

4 Better to write of laughter than of tears, Because to laugh is proper to a man.

(Mieux est de ris que de larmes escrire, Pource que rire est le propre de l'homme.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua: Aux Lecteurs. (1534)

The bride crying laughed, and laughing cried. (La nouvelle mariée pleurante rioyt, riant pleuroit.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 15. (1548)

My laughter and my tears come out of the same little pot.

ANNA SEGBERS, The Seventh Cross, p. 120. (1942)

5 I am forced to make myself laugh that I may not cry, for one or the other I must do.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Clarissa. Let. 84. (1749)

I hasten to laugh at everything, for fear of being obliged to weep. (Je me presse de rire de tout, de peur d'être obligé d'en pleurer.)

BEAUMARCHAIS, Le Barbier de Seville. Act i, sc. 2. (1775)

The sad truth which hovers o'er my desk Turns what was once romantic to burlesque.

And if I laugh at any mortal thing, 'Tis that I may not weep.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iv, st. 3. (1818)

I laugh because I must not cry.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN. (c. 1863) See Time, 11 May, 1942, p. 99.

6 Everything gives cause for either laughter or tears. (Aut ridenda omnia aut flenda sunt.)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. ii, ch. 10, sec. 5. (c. A. D. 55)

We ought to imitate Democritus rather than Heraclitus. For the latter, whenever he went forth into public, used to weep, the former to laugh; to the one all human doings seemed to be miseries, to the other follies. (Democritum potius imitemur quam Heraclitum. Hic enim, quotiens in publicum processerat, flebat, ille ridebat; huic omnia quae agimus miseriae, illi ineptiae videbantur.)

SENECA, De Tranquillitate Animi. Ch. xv, sec. 2. (c. A. D. 60)

Laughter and tears are meant to turn the wheels of the same machinery of sensibility; one is wind-power, and the other water-power; that is all.

O. W. HOLMES, The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 4. (1858)

7 I have heard it [love] is a life in death, That laughs and weeps, and all but with a breath.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 413. (1593)

It is hard to laugh and cry both with a breath.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 147. (1639)

He can laugh and cry and both in a wind.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 184. (1670)

She can laugh and cry, both in a Wind.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4120. (1732)

8 Laughter or mourning comes as God ordains. (ὅν τοι θεῶ νᾶς καὶ γελᾷ κῶδύπεραι.)

SOPHOCLES, Ajax, l. 383. (c. 409 B. C.)

9 When others laugh, I am not glad, When others cry, I am not sad.

H. D. THOREAU, Autumn, 7 Nov., 1840.

LAUGH AND THE WORLD LAUGHS WITH YOU, see under SYMPATHY.

10 The house of laughter makes a house of woe.

EDWARD YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Nt. viii, l. 757. (1742)

LAVENDER

11 He is ready to lend the loser money upon rings, . . . but the poor gentleman pays so dear for the lavender it is laid up in.

ROBERT GREENE, A Quip for an Upstart Courtier, p. 34. (1592)

Good faith, rather then thou shouldst pawne a rag more I'll lay my ladyship in lauender.

CHAPMAN AND MARSTON, Eastward Hoe, sig. G2. (1605)

Layd-up-in Lavender, when any Cloaths or other Moveables are pawn'd or dipt for present money.

B. E., A New Dictionary of the Canting Crew. (c. 1700)

Lowestoffe is laid up in lavender only for having shown you the way into Alsatia.

WALTER SCOTT, The Fortunes of Nigel. Ch. 23.

(1822) Lavender used to be sprinkled among linen or other clothing to preserve it from moths when it was stored for some time. So, in its original meaning, "to lay up in lavender" meant to lay aside carefully for future use, and, later on, to be put out of the way of doing harm.

What woman, however old, has not the bridal-favours and raiment stowed away, and packed in lavender, in the inmost cupboards of her heart?

THACKERAY, The Virginians. Bk. i, ch. 33. (1858)

LAW

<sup>1</sup> The devill hath eleuen poynts of the law against you; that is, possession.

THOMAS ADAMS, Works, p. 97. (1630) See under POSSESSION.

<sup>2</sup> The laws of a state change with the changing times. (νόμις ἄλλως | ἄλλοτ' ἐπαίνει τὰ δίκαια.) AESCHYLUS, Seven Against Thebes, l. 1076. (467 B. C.)

That which is a law to-day is none to-morrow. ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy: Democritus to the Reader. (1621)

The Law is not the same at morning and at night. HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 904. (1640) Whenever I hear any man talk of an unalterable law, the only effect it produces upon me is to convince me that he is an unalterable fool.

SYDNEY SMITH, Plymley Letters. Lett.1. (1807)

<sup>3</sup> Taking the law into one's own hands. (ἐν χειρῶν νόμος.)

AESOP, Fables. (c. 600 B. C.)

They . . . take the lawe into their owne hands. THOMAS DEKKER, The Seven Deadly Sinnes of London, p. 35. (1606)

He has taken the law into his own hands already. FREDERICK MARRYAT, Poor Jack. Ch.28. (1840)

The avenger of blood . . . would now be himself punished as a criminal for taking the law into his own hands.

E. B. TYLOR, Anthropology, p. 418. (1881)

<sup>4</sup> Written laws are like spiders' webs; they hold the weak and delicate who might be caught in their meshes, but are torn in pieces by the rich and powerful. (ἂ μὴδὲν τῶν ἀραχνίων διαφέρειν, ἀλλ' ὡς ἐκεῖνα τοὺς μὲν ἀσθενεῖς καὶ λεπτοὺς τῶν ἀλσικομένων καθέξειν, ὑπὸ δὲ τῶν δυνατῶν καὶ πλουσιῶν διαρραγῆσθαι.)

ANACHARSIS, to Solon, when the latter was compiling his laws. (c. 600 B. C.) Anacharsis laughed at Solon's belief that he could check injustice and rapacity by written laws. Solon is said to have answered, "Men keep their agreements when it is to the profit of both parties to do so, and they will observe the law when they realize that the practise of justice is advantageous to them." See PLUTARCH, Lives: Solon. Ch. 5, sec. 2.

The net's not spread to catch the hawk or kite who do us wrong, but for the innocent birds who do us none at all, because they pay for catching. (Quia non rete accipitri tennitur neque milvo, | qui male faciunt nobis: illis qui nihil faciunt tennitur, | quia enim in illis fructus est.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 330. (161 B. C.)

Right as lop-webbes flies smale and gnattes Taken, and suffren grete flies go,
For alle this world lawe is reulede so.

THOMAS HOCCKLEVE, De Regimine Principum, l. 101. (c. 1412)

Our laws have been a long time like to spiders' webs, so that the great buzzing bees break through, and the little feeble flies hang fast in them.

HENRY SMITH, Sermons, i, 348. (a. 1591)

For the most part, lawes are but like spiders' webs, taking the small gnats, or perhaps sometime the fat flesh flies, but hornets that have sharpe stings and greater strength, breake through them.

SIR JOHN HARINGTON, tr., Orlando Furioso. Bk. xxxii, Notes. (1591)

One of the Seven [Wise Men of Greece] was wont to say: "That laws were like cobwebs; where the small flies were caught, and the great brake through."

FRANCIS BACON, Apophthegms. No. 181. (1625)

Bacon wrongly attributes the saying to Solon, as many others have done, whereas it was a criticism of Solon.

Should I sigh, because I see
Laws like spider-webs to be?

Lesser flies are quickly ta'en,
While the great break out again.

RICHARD BRATHWAIT, Care's Cure. (c. 1631)

Laws are like cobwebs, which may catch small flies, but let wasps and hornets break through.

SWIFT, Essay on Faculties of the Mind. (1707)

Laws catch Flies, but let the Hornets go free.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3150. (1732)

In vain thy Reason finer webs shall draw,
Entangle justice in her net of law,
And right, too rigid, harden into wrong,
Still for the strong too weak, the weak too strong.

POPE, An Essay on Man. Epis. iii, l. 191. (1732)

Laws, like to cobwebs, catch small flies,
Great ones break through before your eyes.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack. 1734.

Laws are generally found to be nets of such a texture, as the little creep through, the great break through, and the middle-sized are alone entangled in.

WILLIAM SHENSTONE, On Politics. (a. 1763)

The net of law is spread so wide,
No sinner from its sweep may hide.

Its meshes are so fine and strong,
They take in every child of wrong.

O wondrous web of mystery!

Big fish alone escape from thee!

JAMES JEFFREY ROCHE, The Net of Law. (1900)

<sup>5</sup> The laws need a law to correct them. (δόνται οὐ νόμοι νόμου τοῦ διορθώσαντος.)

ANDROLES OF PITTHUS, the opponent of Alcibiades. (c. 415 B. C.) As quoted by ARISTOTLE, Rhetoric, ii, 23, 22. When the crowd tried to shout him down, he went on, "Just as fishes need salt, although it does not seem possible that they should, since they live in brine."

<sup>6</sup> Law is a bottomless pit; it is a cormorant, a harpy, that devours everything.

JOHN ARBUTHNOT, John Bull. Ch. 6. (1712)

But what lawyer would laugh, even in his own "bottomless pit"?

JOHN GALT, The Entail. Bk. iii, ch. 22. (1823)

1 Law is a form of order, and good law must necessarily mean good order. (ὁ τε γὰρ νόμος τάξις τίς ἐστι, καὶ τὴν εὐνομίαν ἀναγκαῖον εὐταξίαν εἶναι.)

ARISTOTLE, Politics. Bk. vii, ch. 4, sec. 5. (c. 330 B. C.)

2 I am of his mind that said, "Better it is to live where nothing is lawful, than where all things are lawful."

FRANCIS BACON, Apophthegms. No. 69. (1625)

3 One law for the lion and ox is oppression.

WILLIAM BLAKE, The Marriage of Heaven and Hell. (1790)

4 Equity does not demand that its suitors shall have led blameless lives.

MR. JUSTICE BRANDEIS, Decision, Loughran vs. Loughran, 30 April, 1934.

5 Laws, like houses, lean on one another.

EDMUND BURKE, Tracts on the Popery Laws. Pt. i, ch. 3. (1756)

6 He who holds no laws in awe, He must perish by the law.

LORD BYRON, A Very Mournful Ballad on the Siege and Conquest of Alhama. St. 12. (c. 1810)

7 The law speaks too softly to be heard amid the din of arms. (εἰπεῖν ὅτι τοῦ νόμου διὰ τὸν τῶν ὁπλῶν ψόφου οὐ κατακοῖσιν.)

CAIUS MARIUS, when reproached with acting illegally during the war against the Cimbri. (101 B. C.) See PLUTARCH, Lives: Caius Marius. Ch. 28, sec. 2. The saying was probably already a proverb.

Laws are silent in the midst of arms. (Silent leges inter arma.)

CICERO, Pro Milone. Ch. 4, sec. 11. (52 B. C.) Arms and laws do not flourish together. (τὸν αὐτὸν ὁπλῶν καὶ νόμων καιρὸν εἶναι.)

JULIUS CAESAR, to Metellus, when the latter protested that it was illegal to take money from the reserve funds of the state to prosecute the war against Pompey. (49 B. C.) See PLUTARCH, Lives: Julius Caesar. Ch. 35, sec. 3. Laws are of no force against armed men. (Les statuts n'avoient point de mise envers les hommes armez.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 1. (1595) Quoting what "a certain man said to the Mameritins."

Inter armes silent leges—laws are silent amid arms.

WILLIAM GURNALL, The Christian in Compleat Armour (1865), i, 553. (c. 1655)

When drums beat laws are silent.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 358. (1721) When the fifes of yesteryear bleat in the brain, the laws of today fade.

JUSTICE O. W. HOLMES. (a. 1935) As quoted by BELLAH, The Bones of Napoleon, p. 237.

8 Agree, for the law is costly.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 316.

(1605) JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 51. (1670)

Come to a composition with him, Turfe.

The law is costly.

BEN JONSON, A Tale of a Tub. Act iv, sc. 1. (1633)

Agree, agree, says the old saw, the law is costly.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, tr., Aesop, p. 383. (1692)

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

How very trifling and foolish a law-suit you wish to engage in. . . . Go home, take a pint and agree.

WALTER SCOTT, Guy Mannering. Ch. 36. (1815)

Scott, in the last phrase, is quoting a Scottish proverb: "Law's costly: tak a pint and 'gree."

9 The Reign of Law.

G. D. CAMPBELL. Title of book. (1866) James

Lane Allen used the same title in 1900.

What we seek is the reign of law, based upon the consent of the governed and sustained by the organized opinion of mankind.

WOODROW WILSON, Speech, Mount Vernon, 4 July, 1918, referring to League of Nations.

10 We are all servants of the laws to the end that it may be possible for us to be free. (Legum denique idcirco omnes servi sumus, ut liberi esse possimus.)

CICERO, Pro Cluentio. Ch. 53, sec. 146. (66 B. C.)

Goethe says, "Das Gesetz nur kann uns Freiheit geben" (Law alone can give us freedom).

11 The true law and the highest, is the very reason of the all-ruling Jove. (Lex vera, atque principis, . . . ratio est recta summi Iovis.)

CICERO, De Legibus. Ek. ii, ch. 5, sec. 10. (c. 46 B. C.)

Reason is the life of the law; nay, the common law itself is nothing but reason. . . . How long soever it hath continued, if it be against reason, it is of no force in law.

SIR EDWARD COKE, Institutes of the Lawes of England. Institute i, sec. 80. (1628)

Nothing is law that is not reason.

SIR JOHN POWELL, Coggs vs. Bernard: 2 Ld. Raym. Rep., p. 911. (c. 1690) Mirabeau is credited with the axiom, "La raison seule peut faire les lois obligatoires et durables" (Reason alone can make the laws obligatory and lasting).

Law governs Man, Reason the Law.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3149. (1732)

12 The more law the less justice. (Summum ius, summa iniuria.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 10, sec. 33. (c. 45 B. C.) See under JUSTICE AND INJUSTICE.

The old saying's true, You may have much law o' your side, and but little equity.

UNKNOWN, Terence Made English, p. 139. (1694)

Much Law, but little Justice.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3482. (1732)

The Germans say, "Je mehr Gesetze, je weniger Recht" (The more law, the less justice).

- <sup>1</sup> The gladsome light of Jurisprudence.
SIR EDWARD COKE, Institutes of the Lawes of England: First Institute: Epilogus. (1628)
Law is the safest helmet. (Lex est tutissima cassis.)
SIR EDWARD COKE, Inscription, on rings which he gave to his friends. (c. 1630)
- <sup>2</sup> I can try a lawsuit as well as other men, but the most important thing is to prevent lawsuits.
CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. xii, ch. 13. (c. 500 B.C.) Legge, tr. Said by Confucius when he was Minister of Justice.
Misery is the companion of law-suits. (Misère estre compaignie de procès.)
RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 20. (1534)
He that goes to law (as the proverb is) holds a wolf by the ears.
ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy: Democritus to the Reader. (1621) See also under WOLF.
Suits at court are like Winter nights, long and wearisome.
THOMAS DELONEY, Jack of Newbury. Ch. 6. (1597)
To go to law is for two persons to kindle a fire, at their own cost, to warm others and singe themselves to cinders.
OWEN FELTHAM, Resolves. (1623)
Lawsuits consume time, and money, and rest, and friends.
HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 778. (1640)
Be not easily provoked to enter into a suit at law, lest in the end it prove no greater refuge than did the thicket of brambles to a flock of sheep, that, driven from the plain by a tempest, ran thither for shelter, and there lost their fleeces.
BARON BALFOUR OF BURLEIGH, Advice to His Son. (c. 1650) See BLAND, Proverbs, i, 197.
Rather split the Difference, tho' you lose one Half, than spend the Whole, entangled in the Law.
FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1750.
Win your lawsuit and lose your money. (Ying liao kuan shih shu liao ch'ien.)
WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1153. (1875)
Winning a cat you lose a cow. (Ying liao mao erh shu liao niu.)
SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1154. The Germans say, "Go to law for a sheep and lose your cow."
A piece of paper blown by the wind into a law-court may in the end only be drawn out again by two oxen.
S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 367. (1938) A Chinese proverb.
- <sup>3</sup> In a hundred pound of law ther's not a half-penny weight of love. (En cent livres de plait n'a pas une maille d'amour).
RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Amour. (1611)
In a hundred ells of contention there is not an inch of love.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

- In a thousand pounds of law there's not an ounce of love.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 15. (1670)
A penny-weight of love is worth a pound of law.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 17. (1721)
"A dissuasive from lawsuits among neighbours," Kelly adds. FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 343. (1732)
- In a thousand Pounds of Law, there's not a Shilling's worth of Pleasure.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2811. (1732)
- <sup>4</sup> Be not hastie to go to the lawe.
MILES COVERDALE, Old Testament: Proverbs, xxv, 8. (1535)
- <sup>5</sup> The common good of all is the supreme law.
RICHARD CUMBERLAND, De Legibus Naturae. Ch. 1. (1672) See under GOVERNMENT.
- <sup>6</sup> She made what pleased her lawful. (Che libito fe' licito in sua legge.)
DANTE, Inferno. Canto v, l. 56. (c. 1300) From the Latin, "Si libet, licet."
LAWS GO AS KINGS PLEASE, see under KING.
- <sup>7</sup> All things by law. (πάντα νομιστί.)
DEMOCRITUS, Maxim. (c. 400 B.C.) As quoted by MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. vii, sec. 31.
- <sup>8</sup> All laws are useless, for good men do not need them, and bad men are made no better by them. (οἱ μὲν γὰρ οὐ δεύονται νόμων, οἱ δὲ ὑπὸ νόμων οὐδὲν βελτίους γίγνονται.)
DEMONAX, Apothegm. (c. A. D. 140) See LUCIAN, Demonax, sec. 59. Lucian's moving tribute to his old teacher.
No laws, however stringent, can make the idle industrious, the thriftless provident, or the drunken sober.
SAMUEL SMILES, Self-Help. Ch. 1. (1859)
- <sup>9</sup> "The law supposes that your wife acts under your direction" [replied Mr. Brownlow]. "If the law supposes that," said Mr. Bumble, . . . "the law is a ass—a idiot."
DICKENS, Oliver Twist. Ch. 51. (1838)
I think the law is really a humbug, and a benefit principally to the lawyers.
H. D. THOREAU, Autumn, 12 Oct., 1858.
- <sup>10</sup> No written laws can be so plain, so pure, But wit may gloss, and malice may obscure.
JOHN DRYDEN, The Hind and the Panther. Pt. ii, l. 318. (1687) The English proverbial form is, "Every law has a loophole." The Italians say, "Fatta la legge, trovata la malizia" (When a law is made, the way to avoid it is discovered).
- <sup>11</sup> I'll have the law of you, so I will!"—is the saying of an Englishman who expects justice.
MARIA EDGEWORTH, Castle Rackrent: Glossary, p. 24. (1800)

There's a hackney-coachman down stairs . . .
vowing he'll have the law of you.

THACKERAY, Vanity Fair, Ch. 6. (1848)

1 One lawsuit leads to another. (Litem parit lis.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chili, cent.viii, No.99.(1523)

The worst of law is that one suit breeds twenty.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 255. (1640)

One suit of Law breeds twenty.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3796.(1732)

2 Shew me the man, and I shall shew you the law.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 90. (c.

1595) Cited by KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p.

289 (1721), with the comment, "The sentences of judges may vary, according to the measure of their fear, favour, or affection."

The adage, "Show me the man, and I will show you the law," became as prevalent as it was scandalous.

SCOTT, Bride of Lammermoor. Ch. 2. (1819)

3 Better is a leane agreement than a fat sentence.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 32. (1578)

An ill agreement is better than a good judgment.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 266.

(1640) From the Italian, "Meglio è magro accordo che grassa sentenza." The Germans say, "Besser ein magrer Vergleich als ein fetter Process."

A sorry agreement is better than a good sute in law.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 1. (1666)

A lean Award is better than a fat Judgement.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1753.

4 Where carcasses are, eagles will gather,
And where good laws are, much people flock thither.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734.

Where there's no Law, there's no Bread.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1744.

Laws too gentle are seldom obeyed, too severe, seldom executed.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1756.

5 Good Men want the Laws for nothing but to defend them selves.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1720.(1732)

6 Thou knowst a barlie strawe
Will make a parish parson goe to lawe.

WILLIAM GODDARD, A Nest of Wasps. No. 16.
(1615)

He'll go to law for the wagging of a straw.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 184. (1670)

7 The statutes and the laws are still transmitted
Like an eternal disease from land to land.

(Es erben sich Gesetz' und Rechte Wie eine ew'ge Krankheit fort.)

GOETHE, Faust. Pt. i, sc. 4, l. 449. (1770) Usually quoted, "Laws are inherited, like diseases."

8 Law, licensed breaking of the peace.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 286. (1737)

Law is whatever is boldly asserted and plausibly maintained.

AARON BURR, Epigram. (c. 1800) See PARTON,
Life and Times of Aaron Burr, i, 149.

Law: A machine which you go into as a pig and come out of as a sausage.

AMBROSE BIERCE, The Devil's Dictionary. (1906)

Law: Simply a matter of the length of the judge's ears.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Book of Epigrams. (1910)

9 We are lost by what is lawful. (Perimus licitis.)

GREGORY THE GREAT, a paraphrase of *Moralium
Libri*, bk. v, homily 35. (c. 595) Used by Sir
Matthew Hale, Lord Chief Justice of England (c. 1675), meaning "We are demoralized by indulgence in things which are not contrary to law." Sometimes translated, "We perish by permitted things."

With customs we live well, but laws undo us.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 971. (1640)

Legality kills us. (La légalité nous tue.)

JEAN PONS VIENNET, Épîtres. (c. 1850)

10 The worlde is come to this passe, that it counteth anything to bee laweful, which is delightful.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii,
p. 110. (1574) Pettie, tr.

The whole drift of humane lawes, is nothing else but to refraine from doing ill.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, iii, 59.

The lawe growth of sinne, and dooth punish it.
(La legge nasce del peccato, & lo castiga.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 32. (1578)

11 Wronge lawes maketh short gouernance.

JOHN HARDYNG, Chronicle, lxxxvi, v. (c. 1470)

The atrocity of laws prevents their enforcement
(L'atrocité des lois en empêche l'exécution.)

MONTESQUIEU, De l'Esprit des Lois. (1748)

12 The law, being made, is but words and paper without the hands and swords of men.

JAMES HARRINGTON, The Commonwealth of Oceana. (1656)

Law cannot persuade, where it cannot punish.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3148.(1732)

Laws exist in vain for those who have not the courage and the means to defend them.

T. B. MACAULAY, Essays: Burleigh. (1832)

13 Cases were decided in the chambers of a six-shooter instead of a supreme court.

O. HENRY (W.S. PORTER), Law and Order. (1911)

14 Wrangles of the court-house. (ῥαῖς δ' ἀγορῆς.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 29. (c. 800 B. C.)

15 Laws they are not which public approbation hath not made so.

RICHARD HOOKER, *Of the Laws of Ecclesiastical
Polity*. Ch. 1. (1594)

Any laws but those which men make for themselves are laughable.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Politics. (1844)

<sup>1</sup> The law is laid down to you. (Dicta tibi est lex.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 2, l. 18. (20 B. C.)

The law must have its course.

MARLOWE, Jew of Malta. Act iv, sc. 5. (c. 1592)

<sup>2</sup> Of what avail are empty laws, if we lack principle? (Quid leges sine moribus | vanae proficiunt?)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode xxiv, l. 35. (23 B. C.)

How lightly do we sanction a law unjust to ourselves. (Quam temere in nosmet legem sancimus iniquam!)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 3, l. 67. (35 B. C.)

<sup>3</sup> Law is a shrewd pickpurse.

JAMES HOWELL, Familiar Letters, 20 Mar., 1618. You talked of a law-suit—law is a lick-penny, Mr. Tyrrel.

WALTER SCOTT, St. Ronan's Well. Ch. 28. (1824)

<sup>4</sup> The execution of the laws is more important than the making them.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to the Abbé Ar-nond, 1789.

<sup>5</sup> How small of all that human hearts endure, That part which laws or kings can cause or cure.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Lines, added to Goldsmith's The Traveller. (1764)

<sup>6</sup> One precedent creates another. They soon accumulate, and constitute law. What yesterday was fact, today is doctrine.

JUNIUS, Letters: Dedication. (1769)

The acts of today may become the precedents of tomorrow.

FARRER HERSCHELL, Speech, 23 May, 1878.

A precedent embalms a principle.

Attributed to WILLIAM SCOTT, BARON STOWELL, Opinion, while Advocate-General in 1788. Disraeli used it twice, once in a speech in the House of Commons, 22 Feb., 1848, and again in Endymion.

<sup>7</sup> Taken in flagrant violation of the law. (In flagranti crimine comprehensi.)

JUSTINIAN, Corpus Iuris Civilis Romani. Codex ix, tit. 13, sec. 1. (533) Usually quoted "In flagrante delicto," with special reference to adultery. Its English equivalent, "Caught red-handed," referred originally only to murderers. A. P. Herbert rendered it, "In flagrant delight."

An offender was taken in flagrant delict.

E. W. ROBERTSON, Historical Essays, p. 137. (1872)

<sup>8</sup> Worn away by the long drag-chain of the law. (Atteritur longo sufflamine litis.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. 16, l. 50. (c. A. D. 120)

<sup>9</sup> Abundance of law breaks no law. . . . Do more than the law requires, rather than leave anything undone that it does.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 45. (1721)

A rendering of the Latin, "Abundantia iuris non nocet."

He that loves law will get his fill of it.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 165.

<sup>10</sup> The greater the number of laws, the greater the number of thieves.

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue).

Sec. 57. (c. 550 B. C.) Giles, tr.

The more corrupt the state, the more numerous the laws. (Corruptissima republica, plurimae leges.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. iii, sec. 27. (c. A. D. 116)

The Italians say, "Many laws and many physicians in a country are equally signs of its bad condition."

It is saide in old sawes . . . Wars pepill wars lawes.

Towneley Mysteries, xxx, 195. (c. 1460)

So many Laws argue so many sins.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xii, l. 283. (1667)

The more Laws, the more Offenders.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4663. (1732)

Men would be great criminals did they need as many laws as they make.

C. J. DARLING, Scintillae Juris. (1877)

<sup>11</sup> The assize, where a men be friended, so (they say) things be ended.

HUGH LATIMER, Works (P.S.), ii, 399. (1538)

For (as hyt ys comynly and truly also sayd) "materys be ended as they be frendyd."

THOMAS STARKEY, England in the Reign of Henry the Eighth (Cowper), i, iii, 86. (1538)

Nowadays the law is ended as a man is friended.

HENRY BRINKELOW, The Complaynt of Roderick Mors, p. 25. (c. 1542)

Remember this old law, "As men are friended, So either right or wrong their sutes are ended."

JOHN DAY, The Blind-Beggar of Bednal-Green. Act iii, sc. 2. (1600)

As a man is friended so the law is ended.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 319. (1605)

As a man is friended, so is his difference, or cause ended.

WILLIAM ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis, p. 470. (1681)

See also FRIEND IN COURT, under FRIEND

<sup>12</sup> No law is entirely convenient for everyone: this alone is required, that it be good for the majority and on the whole. (Nulla lex satis commoda omnibus est; id modo quaeritur si maiori parti et in summam prodest.)

LIVY, History. Bk. xxxiv, ch. 3. (c. 10 B. C.)

The law is blind and speaks in general terms; She cannot pity where occasion serves.

THOMAS MAY, The Heir. Act iv. (1620)

<sup>13</sup> All things obey fixed laws. (Legibus omnia parent.)

MANILIUS, Astronomica, i, 479. (c. 25 B. C.)

Things have their laws as well as men.

EMERSON, Essays: Politics. (1844)

<sup>1</sup> A law observed is merely Law; broken, it is law and executioner. (νόμος φυλαχθεὶς οὐδὲν ἔστιν ἢ νόμος, | ὁ μὴ φυλαχθεὶς καὶ νόμος καὶ δῆμιος.)

MENANDER, Fragments. Frag. 700K. (c.300 B. C.)

<sup>2</sup> The man who does no wrong needs no law. (ὁ μηδὲν ἀδικῶν οὐδενὸς δεῖται νόμου.)

MENANDER, Fragments. Frag. 845K. (c.300 B. C.)

Rulers are not a terror to good works, but to the evil. (οἱ γὰρ ἀρχόντες οὐκ εἰσὶν φόβος τῷ ἀγαθῷ ἔργῳ ἀλλὰ τῷ κακῷ.)

New Testament: Romans, xiii, 3. (c. A. D. 57)

The Vulgate is, "Nam principes non sunt timori boni operis, sed mali.)

Who breaks no law is subject to no king.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Bussy d'Ambois. Act iv, sc. 1. (1607)

The good needs fear no law,

It is his safety and the bad man's awe.

MASSINGER AND MIDDLETON, The Old Law. Act v, sc. 1. (c. 1608)

Where there are laws, he who has not broken them need not tremble. (Ove son leggi, | Tremar non dee chi leggi non infranse.)

ALFIERI, Virginia. Sc. 2. (c. 1780) The Germans say, "Für Gerechte giebt es keine Gesetze" (For just men there is no law).

Just laws are no restraint upon the freedom of the good, for the good man desires nothing which a just law will interfere with.

J. A. FROUDE, Short Studies on Great Subjects: Reciprocal Duties of State and Subject. (c. 1870)

It is only rogues who feel the restraint of law.

J. G. HOLLAND, Gold-Foil: Perfect Liberty. (c. 1870)

<sup>3</sup> Laws and institutions require to be adapted, not to good men, but to bad.

J. S. MILL, The Subjection of Women. Ch. 2. (1869)

<sup>4</sup> It is the general law of laws that everyone should observe that of the place where he is. (C'est la générale loi des loix, que chacun observe celle du lieu où il est.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 22. (1580) See also under ROME: IN ROME DO AS ROMANS.

<sup>5</sup> Laws take their authority from possession and custom: . . . they swell and grow greater as they roll along, just as our rivers do; follow them upward to their source and you will find them but a bubble of water, scarcely to be seen.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 12. (1580)

The law is the last result of human wisdom acting upon human experience for the benefit of the public.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Miscellanies, i, 223. (a.1784)

Law is the crystallization of the habit and thought of society.

WOODROW WILSON, Lecture, Princeton, 1893.

<sup>6</sup> Law, Logic, and Switzers may be hired to fight for anybody.

THOMAS NASHE, Christ's Tears. (1593)

Law, logick, Switzers, fight on any side.

ROBERT DAVENPORT, Works, p. 327. (c. 1640)

<sup>7</sup> Laws were made that the stronger might not in all things have his way. (Inde datae leges, ne firmior omnia posset.)

OVID, Fasti. Bk. iii, l. 279. (c. A. D. 8)

The law's made to take care o' raskills.

GEORGE ELIOT, The Mill on the Floss. Bk. iii, ch. 4. (1860)

<sup>8</sup> Laws should have authority over men, not men over laws. (ὅτι τοὺς νόμους τῶν ἀνδρῶν. οὐ τοὺς ἀνδρας τῶν νόμων κυρίους εἶναιδεῖ.)

PAUSANIUS, KING OF SPARTA. (c. 400 B. C.)

When asked why it was not permitted to change any of the ancient laws.

No power ought to be above the laws. (Nulla potentia supra leges esse debet.)

CICERO. A paraphrase of De Domo Sua, ch 17, sec. 43. (57 B. C.)

The prince is not above the laws, but the laws above the prince. (Non est princeps super leges, sed leges supra principem.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Panegyricus Traianus. Sec. 67. (A. D. 100)

Magna Charta is such a fellow that he will have no sovereign.

SIR EDWARD COKE, Debate, House of Commons, 17 May, 1628.

All voice of nations and the course of things Allow that laws superior are to kings.

DANIEL DEFOE, The True-Born Englishman, ii. (1701)

Be you never so high, the Law is above you.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 943. (1732)

No man is above the law, and no man is below it.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Message to Congress, Jan., 1904.

LAWs GO AS KINGs PLEASE, see under KING.

<sup>9</sup> Law has bread and butter in it. (Habet haec res panem.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 46. (c. A. D. 60)

Unnecessary laws are not good laws, but traps for money.

THOMAS HOBBS, Leviathan. Pt. ii, ch.30.(1651)

<sup>10</sup> Lawes (the only ground of all good government) were first invented and made by Ceres. a woman.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 266. (1576)

<sup>11</sup> Law, lord of all, mortals and immortals, carries everything with a high hand. (νόμος ὁ πάντων βασιλεὺς | θνατῶν τε καὶ ἀθανάτων | ἀγει δικαίων τὸ βιαιότατον | ὑπερτάτῃ χειρί.)

PINDAR, Fragments. Frag. 169, Sandys. (c. 480 B. C.) Quoted by PLATO, Gorgias. 484B: Laws, 690B, 890A; Protagoras, 337D; HERODOTUS, iii, 38; ARISTIDES, ii, 68; PLUTARCH, Moralia, 780C.

Our city's sovereign, the law. (οἱ πόλεως βασιλεῖς νόμοι.)

ALCIDAMAS, Fragments. (c. 400 B.C.) Quoted by PLATO, Symposium, 196C; ARISTOTLE, Rhetoric, 1406A.

Law is King. (Lex Rex.)

SAMUEL RUTHERFORD. Title of book published in 1644. Cheviot says that this was a favorite saying with the Covenanters.

Law is king of all.

ALFORD, School of the Heart. Lesson 6. (1869)

<sup>1</sup> Where law ends, there tyranny begins.

WILLIAM PITT, Speech, case of Wilkes, 9 Jan., 1770.

<sup>2</sup> Obey the law, whoever you be that made the law. (Pareto legi, quisque legem sanxeris.)

PITTACUS, Maxim. (c. 675 B.C.) As quoted by AUSONIUS, Septem Sapientum Sententiae, 1.12. Accept the law which you yourself make. (Patere legem quam ipse tuleris.)

CATO, Disticha: Prologus. No. 49. (c. 175 B.C.) A people shows more respect for justice, nor refuses submission, when it has seen their author obedient to his own laws. (Tunc observantior aequi | fit populus nec ferre negat, cum viderit ipsum | auctorem parere sibi.)

CLAUDIAN, Panegyricus de Quarto Consulatu Honorii Augusti, 1. 297. (A.D. 398)

For swich lawe as man yeveth another wight, He sholde him-selven usen it by right.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Man of Law's Prologue: Introduction, 1. 434. (c. 1386)

It is a shame for the lawgiuer to break and violate his owne institutions.

UNKNOWN, Servingmans Comfort, in HAZLITT, Inedited Tracts, p. 154. (1598)

Bidding the law make curtesy to their will.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, ii, 4, 176. (1604)

Xenophanes being jeered for refusing to play at a forbidden game, answered, . . . "They that make laws, must keep them."

WILLIAM PENN, No Cross, No Crown. Ch. 19. (1669)

It becometh a law-maker not to be a law-breaker. NICHOLAS LING, Politeuphuia, p. 95. (1669)

Law makers should not be law breakers. Lat. Patere legem quam tulisti.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 232. (1721)

MARRYAT, The King's Own. Ch. 11. (1830)

What is a law, if those who make it Become the forwardest to break it?

JAMES BEATTIE, The Wolf and the Shepherds, 1. 71. (1776) This is Beattie's rendering of Aesop's fable about the wolf who looked in at the door of the shepherds' hut one day and saw them sitting around the table eating a sheep—a crime which he would be killed for.

<sup>3</sup> Law, the despot of mankind, often compels us to do many things which are against nature. (ὁ δὲ νόμος, τύραννος ὢν τῶν ἀνθρώπων, πολλὰ παρὰ τῆς φύσεως βιάζεται.)

PLATO, Protagoras. Sec. 337D. (c. 389 B.C.) The words are put into the mouth of Hippias.

<sup>4</sup> The law for rich and poor is not the same. (Aequa lege pauperi cum divite non licet.)

PLAUTUS, Cistellaria, 1. 532. (c. 200 B.C.)

The censor absolves the crow, and passes sentence on the dove. (Dat veniam corvis, vexat censura columbas.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. ii, 1. 63. (c.A.D. 120)

Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, v, 73, who adds, "The full penalty of the law is imposed upon the humble, but the rapacious and shameless escape." The French say, "Indulgente aux puissants, la censure est rigide auprès les faibles."

According as you are strong or weak, the judgments of the court make you white or black. (Selon que vous serez puissant ou misérable, | Les jugements du cour vous rendront blanc ou noir.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. vii, fab. i. (1678)

White or black, i.e., innocent or guilty. The French also say, "Les lois ont le nez de cire" (The laws have a nose of wax), which grows soft when warmed by money.

All, all, look up with reverential awe,

At crimes that 'scape, or triumph o'er the law.

POPE, Epilogue to the Satires. Dial. i, 1. 167. (1738)

Laws grind the poor, and rich men rule the law.

GOLDSMITH, The Traveller, 1. 386. (1764)

There cannot be one law for the rich and another for the poor.

MARRYAT, The King's Own. Ch. 11. (1830)

There is an objection to the taxation of the inheritance of personal property of a very serious kind. It is that it is one law for the rich and another for the poor.

J. E. T. ROGERS, The Economic Interpretation of History. Bk. ii, ch. 21. (1888)

The rich break the laws, and the poor are punished for it. (Traspasa el rico las leyes, y es castigado el pobre.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 256. (1856) A Spanish proverb, condensing into few words a volume of pessimistic social philosophy.

The law, in its majestic equality, forbids the rich as well as the poor to sleep under bridges, to beg in the streets, and to steal bread.

ANATOLE FRANCE. (c. 1897) See COURNOT, Modern Plutarch, p. 27.

One law for the rich and one for the poor, that's what there is.

M. V. HEBERDEN, The Lobster Pick Murders, p. 123. (1941) See also under THIEF: GREAT THIEVES HANG LITTLE ONES.

<sup>5</sup> You little know how hazardous it is to go to law. (Nescis quam meticulosa res sit ire ad iudicem.)

PLAUTUS, Mostellaria, 1. 1101. (c. 220 B.C.)

The glorious uncertainty of the law.

JOHN WILBRAHAM, Toast, at a dinner of the Judges and Counsel. (c. 1756) The preceding toast had been, "The glorious memory of King William," and Wilbraham's toast was a sarcastic allusion to Lord Chief Justice Mans-field's bold overruling of former decisions, gaining point from the fact that Mansfield was the guest of honor. See Gentleman's Magazine, Aug., 1830, p. 98/1.

The law is a sort of hocus-pocus science, that smiles in yer face while it picks yer pocket; and the glorious uncertainty of it is of mair use to the professors than the justice of it.

CHARLES MACKLIN, Love à la Mode. Act ii, sc. 1. (1759)

The glorious uncertainty of the law, was a thing well known and complained of, by all ignorant people, but all learned gentlemen considered it as its greatest excellency.

R. B. SHERIDAN, in Parliamentary History. Vol. xxxvi, p. 1204. (1820)

When I applied the epithet "glorious" to the uncertainty of politics, I meant it ironically, as we say "the glorious uncertainty of the law."

JOHN ADAMS, Works (1854). Vol ix, p. 630. (1811)

Being a lawyer, I don't like to advise parties to go to law. I know the glorious uncertainty of it, as it is called.

HORACE MAYHEW, The Image of His Father. Ch. 25. (1848)

1 Laws are slaves of custom. (Leges mori serviunt.)

2 PLAUTUS, Trinummus, l. 1043. (c. 194 B.C.)

I am beginning to think with Horsley—that "the people have nothing to do with the laws but to obey them."

E. A. POE, Fifty Suggestions. (1845) Graham's Magazine, May-June.

3 He that keepeth the law, happy is he. (Qui vero custodit legem, beatus est.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxix, 18. (c.350 B.C.)

4 He who lies hid in remote places is a law unto himself. (Locis remotis qui latet lex est sibi.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No.346. (c.43 B.C.) To destroy laws is to rob oneself of one's chief support. (Sibi primum auxilium eripere est leges tollere.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 663.

5 I'll make him water his horse at Highgate.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 86. (1678)

I'll sue him and make him take a journey to London.

6 I will drive a coach and six through the Act of Settlement.

SIR STEPHEN RICE, Chief Baron of the Irish Exchequer. (c. 1670) See MACAULAY, History of England, iii, xii, 426; KING, State of the Protestants of Ireland. Ch. 3, sec. 3. Daniel O'Connell is credited with modifying this to the more familiar, "I can drive a coach-and-six through any Act of Parliament."

7 But now we are delivered from the law, that being dead wherein we were held; that we should serve in newness of spirit, and not in the oldness of the letter. (ἐν καινότητι πνεύματος καὶ οὐ παλαιότητι γράμματος.)

New Testament: Romans, vii, 6. (c. A.D. 57)

The Vulgate is, "Ita ut serviamus in novitate spiritus, et non in vetustate litterae."

Jerusalem was destroyed because her inhabitants interpreted the laws according to the letter [din Tira], and not according to the spirit [lifnim mishorath hadin].

Babylonian Talmud: Baba Metzia, fo. 30b. (c. 450)

The bloody book of law
You shall yourself read in the bitter letter.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, i, 3, 67. (1605)

The severe letter of the law.

MASSINGER, The Bashful Lover, v, 1. (1636)

The strict letter of the law.

J. A. ASTRY, tr., Royal Politician, i, 160. (1700)

He most faithfully adheres to the letter of the law of conscience.

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Friend, p. 67. (1809)

8 Our national nostrum, "Not Proven" . . . a verdict which has been construed by the profane to mean "Not Guilty, but don't do it again." What Sir Walter Scott calls "that Caledonian medium quid."

WILLIAM ROUGHEAD, The Art of Murder, p 131. (1943) The "Scotch verdict."

9 Laws are always useful to those who possess and vexatious to those who have nothing. (Les lois sont toujours utiles à ceux qui possèdent. et nuisibles à ceux qui n'ont rien.)

ROUSSEAU, Contrat Social. Bk.i, ch.9, note. (1762)

10 The law often permits what honor forbids. (La loi permet souvent ce que défend l'honneur.)

BERNARD SAURIN, Spartacus. Act iii, sc. 3. (1760)

A French rendering of the Latin proverb.

"Non omne quod licet honestum est," or

"Honestum non est semper quod licet" (What is lawful is not always honorable).

Many things lawful are not expedient.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p.450. (1855)

11 In making laws, severity; in administering laws, clemency.

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No 1137. (1875)

12 The Parish makes the Constable, and when the Constable is made, he governs the Parish

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: People. (a. 1654)

Laws do not persuade just because they threaten. (Ob hoc illae non persuadent. quia minantur.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis.xciv, sec.37. (c. A.D.64)

13 Let him have all the rigour of the law.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, i, 3, 199. (1590)

He . . . follows close the rigour of the statute.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, i, 4, 66 (1604)

<sup>1</sup> Is not this a lamentable thing, that of the skin of an innocent lamb should be made parchment? that parchment, being scribbled o'er, should undo a man?

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, iv, 2, 86. (1590)

The mysterious virtue of wax and parchment.

EDMUND BURKE, Conciliation with America. (1775)

<sup>2</sup> The law hath not been dead, though it hath slept.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, ii, 2, 90. (1604)

After an existence of nearly twenty years of innocuous desuetude these laws are brought forth.

GROVER CLEVELAND, Message to Congress, 1 March, 1886. Cleveland afterwards explained that he had used these words, which startled the country, because he "thought they would please the Western taxpayers, who are fond of such things." See his interview in the New York Herald, 9 June, 1886.

<sup>3</sup> In law, what plea so tainted and corrupt,
But, being season'd with a gracious voice,
Obscures the show of evil?

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, iii, 2, 75.

An ill plea should be well pleaded.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 312. (1855)

<sup>4</sup> Is the law of our side?

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, i, 1, 54. (1595)

The laws are with us, and God on our side.

ROBERT SOUTHY, Essays: Popular Disaffection. (c. 1820)

<sup>5</sup> The world is not thy friend, nor the world's law;

The world affords no law to make thee rich;
Then be not poor, but break it.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, v, 1, 72. (1592)

<sup>6</sup> Still you keep o' the windy side of the law.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, iii, 4, 181. (1599)

Free from all restraint and awe,
Just to the windward of the law.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Ghost. Bk. iii, l. 56. (1762)

<sup>7</sup> He will give you both the law and the prophets.

BERNARD SHAW, Captain Brassbound's Conversion. Act ii. (1899) The law, i. e. the Pentateuch, the first five books of the Old Testament.

Men are not governed by justice, but by law or persuasion.

BERNARD SHAW, Misalliance, p. 91. (1910)

<sup>8</sup> 'Tis best to keep the established laws, even to life's end. (μὴ τοὺς καθεστῶτας νόμους ἀριστον ἢ σφόδρα τὸν βίον τελεῖν.)

SOPHOCLES, Antigone, l. 1113. (c. 441 B. C.)

<sup>9</sup> I will not say with Lord Hale, that "The law will admit of no rival," . . . but I will say that it is a jealous mistress, and requires a long and constant courtship.

JOSEPH STORY, The Value and Importance of Legal Studies. (1829) In Miscellaneous Writings, p. 523. This is the origin of the phrase. See Illinois Law Review, xxvii, 329.

<sup>10</sup> It is not desirable to cultivate a respect for the law so much as for the right.

H. D. THOREAU, Civil Disobedience. (1849)

The law will never make men free; it is men who have got to make the law free.

H. D. THOREAU, Slavery in Massachusetts. (1854)

<sup>11</sup> The law is not made for a righteous man, but for the lawless and disobedient, for the ungodly and for sinners, . . . for manslayers. (εἰδὼς τοῦτο ὅτι δίκαιψ νόμος οὐ κεῖται.)

New Testament: I Timothy, i, 9. (c. A. D. 62)

The Vulgate is, "Sciens hoc quia lex iusto non est posita, sed iniustus."

The best laws, the noblest examples, are produced for the benefit of the good from the crimes of other men. (Leges egregias, exempla honesta, apud bonos ex delictis aliorum gigni.)

THRASEA PAETUS, Speech, before the Roman Senate. (c. A. D. 60) See TACITUS, Annals. Bk. xv, sec. 20. (c. A. D. 116)

Good laws are begot by bad actions. (Bonae leges ex malis moribus procreantur.)

MACROBIUS, Saturnalia. Bk. iii, l. 17. (c. A. D. 400) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, x, 61. Sometimes given as "Ex malis moribus fiunt bonae leges." Included by TAVERNER in his Translations from Erasmus, with the rendering, "Good laws be gendred of euyl maners."

According to the common Proverb, "Of evil manners spring good laws."

THOMAS TIMME, tr., Calvin u; 'n Genesis, p. 70. (1578)

Ill Manners occasion Good laws, as the Handsome Children of Ugly Parents.

THOMAS FULLER, The History of the University of Cambridge, iii, 54. (1655)

Good laws come from lewd lives.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs: Fr.-Eng., p. 9. (1659)

Good laws often proceed from bad manners.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 364. (1855)

Ill manners produce good laws. (Dai cattivi costumi nascono le buone leggi.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 195. (1856) An Italian proverb.

<sup>12</sup> We enact many laws that manufacture criminals, and then a few that punish them.

B. R. TUCKER, Instead of a Book. (1893)

<sup>13</sup> Those who fear men like laws. (Ceux qui craignent les hommes aiment les lois.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 188. (1746)

The least of our servitudes is to the law. (La moindre de nos servitudes est celle des lois.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 591. (1746)

<sup>14</sup> It is necessity which makes laws, and force which makes them observed. (C'est la nécessité qui fait les lois, et la force les fait observer.)

VOLTAIRE, Dictionnaire Philosophique: Des Loix. (1764) Quoting "a citizen of London."

1 Laws were made to be broken.

JOHN WILSON, Noctes Ambrosianae. No. 24. (1826)

Good men must not obey the laws too well.

EMERSON, Essays: Self-Reliance. (1844)

2 Men are never wise but returning from law.

JOHN WODROEPHE, The Spared Hours of a Souldier, p. 501. (1623)

II—Law: Human and Divine

3 The law of human society. (Ius humanae societatis.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 7, sec. 21. (c. 45 B. C.) Natural law; the law of mankind. (Ius hominum.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. i, ch. 26, sec. 64. (45 B. C.)

4 The bond of union is closer between those who belong to the same nation, and closer still between those who are citizens of the same state. It is for this reason that our forefathers chose to understand one thing by the law of nations (ius gentium), and another by the civil or common law (ius civile).

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. iii, ch. 17. (c. 45 B. C.) That which natural reason has established amongst all men is called the law of nations. (Quod naturalis ratio inter omnes homines constituit, . . . vocatur ius gentium.)

GAIUS, Institutiones Iuris Civilis. Bk. i, sec. 1. (A. D. 161)

The law of nations. (Droit des peuples.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 44. (1545)

There is a third kind of law which touches all such several bodies politic. . . . And this third is the Law of Nations.

RICHARD HOOKER, Of the Lawes of Ecclesiasticall Politie. Vol. i, ch. 10, sec. 12. (1594)

Against the law of nature, law of nations.

MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 890. (1671)

The law of nations is a system of rules . . . established by universal consent among the civilized inhabitants of the world.

SIR WILLIAM BLACKSTONE, Commentaries on the Laws of England, iv, 66. (1769)

5 In every matter the consensus of opinion among all nations is to be regarded as the law of nature. (Omni autem in re consensio omnium gentium lex naturae putanda est.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. i, ch. 13, sec. 30. (45 B. C.)

But he the bestes wolde binde

Only to lawes of nature.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis, iii, 272. (1390)

If forgotten be al lawe positifie,
Remember the noble lawe of nature.

GEORGE ASHBY, Active Policy of a Prince, l. 695. (c. 1470)

The lawe of nature . . . is referred to all creatures as well reasonable as vnreasonable. . . . It is written in the herte of euery man.

SAINT-GERMAN, Dyaloge Between Doctor and Student. Pt. i, ch. 2. (1531)

Happy the Man, who, studying Nature's Laws,
Thro' known Effects can trace the secret Cause.

JOHN DRYDEN, tr., Vergil's Georgics, ii, 698. (1697)

6 Draco wrote his laws not with ink, but with blood. (δρι δι' αἱματος, οὐ διὰ μέλανος, τοὺς νόμους ὁ Δράκων ἔγραψεν.)

DEMADES. (c. 360 B. C.) As quoted by PLUTARCH, Lives: Solon, ch. 17, sec. 2.

Draco was the first of all to make laws for the use of the Athenians. In those laws he decreed that one guilty of any theft whatsoever should be punished with death, and added many other statutes that were excessively severe.

AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticae. Bk. xi, ch. 18. (c. A. D. 150) Hence Draconian laws.

7 The laws of gods and men. (Leges divumque hominumque.)

ENNIUS, Annals. Bk. vii, frag. 227. (c. 180 B. C.)

The law of God, which we call the moral law, must alone be the scope, the rule, and end, of all laws.

JOHN CALVIN, Institutes of the Christian Religion. Ch. 4. (1536)

8 Let it be written among the laws of the Persians and the Medes, that it be not altered. (Scribatur iuxta legem Persarum atque Medorum, quam praeteriri illicitum est.)

Old Testament: Esther, i, 19. (c. 250 B. C.)

Now, O king, establish the decree, and sign the writing, that it be not changed, according to the law of the Medes and Persians, which altereth not. (Non immutetur quod statutum est a Medis et Persis.)

Old Testament: Daniel, vi, 8. (c. 170 B. C.)

Darius' sentence against Daniel. Repeated in vi, 12.

For what his greatness hath decreed,

Like laws of Persia and of Mede, . . .

Must never of repeal admit.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Ghost, ii, 657. (1762)

His word is no longer the law of the Medes and the Persians, as it was at home.

CUTHBERT BEDE (E. BRADLEY), The Adventures of Mr. Verdant Green. Bk. i, ch. 2. (1853)

Once given, like the law of the Medes and the Persians, it altereth not.

H. RIDER HAGGARD, Dawn. Ch. 35. (1884)

Its laws as irrevocable as those of the Medes and Persians.

WENTWORTH, In the Balance, p. 107. (1941)

9 The Law of Reason or Human Nature.

RICHARD HOOKER, Ecclesiasticall Politie. Bk. i, ch. 8, sec. 8. (1594) In sec. 9 he speaks of "Laws of Reason."

Instead of the phrase, Law of Nature, you have sometimes Law of Reason.

JEREMY BENTHAM, Principles of Morals and Legislation. Works (1843), i, 9. (1780)

<sup>1</sup> Connecticut in her blue-laws, laying it down as a principle, that the laws of God should be the law of the land.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to John Adams, 24 Jan., 1814.

<sup>2</sup> Now these are the Laws of the Jungle, and many and mighty are they;

But the head and the hoof of the Law and the haunch and the hump is—Obey!

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Law of the Jungle. From The Second Jungle Book. (1895) As usually understood, however, the law of the jungle is the law of might over right; "lex talionis" (The law of retaliation).

Good rest to all That keep the Jungle Law.

KIPLING, Morning Song in the Jungle. (1895) The law of the jungle.

ELISABETH HOLDING, Speak of the Devil, p. 152. (1941) Might makes right.

<sup>3</sup> Be the lawe of Lydford.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Richard the Redeless, iii, 145. (1399)

Heere he thought . . . to call us Theeues . . . and to charge vs with the Law of Lydford.

JOHN JEWEL, A Replie unto Mr. Hardinges Answer, p. 356. (1565)

It is reported of a judge of the Stannery at Lydford, in Devonshire, who having hanged a felon among the tinnars in the forenoon, sat in judgment on him in the afternoon.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons (1861), ii, 120. (1629)

I oft have heard of Lydford Law,
How in the morn they hang and draw,
And sit in judgment after.

WILLIAM BROWNE, Lidford Castle. (1644)

First hang and draw,
Then hear the case by Lidford law.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies (1840), i, 399. (1662)

Hang a man first, and try him afterwards; Lidford law, you know!

JOHN OZELL, tr., Molière, iv, 215. (1714)

And by Lydford' law if they will, hang first and try after.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, Westward Hol Ch. 14.

(1855) Lidford is a little village between Tavistock and Okehampton.

Are you going to hang him anyhow—and try him afterwards?

MARK TWAIN, Innocents at Home. Ch. 5. (c. 1894)

JEDDART JUSTICE, see under JUSTICE.

<sup>4</sup> Under correction, my good Lord, I have had Halifax law—to be condemned first and inquired upon after.

EARL OF LEICESTER. (1586) See MOTLEY, History of the United Netherlands, i, 444.

At Hallifax the law so sharpe doth deale,
That whoso more than thirteen pence doth steale,
They have a jyn that wondrous quick and well
Sends thieves all headless into heaven or hell.

JOHN TAYLOR THE WATER-POET, Halifax Law (1630). Whoever committed theft in the liberty of Halifax was to be executed on the Halifax gibbet, a kind of guillotine. Hence Halifax law.

Hallifaxe lawe hath ben executed in kinde, I am already hanged, and now we cum to examine and consider of the evidence.

SIR THOMAS WENTWORTH, Letter to Lord Mountmorris. (a. 1641) See Notes and Queries, ser. v, vol. iv, p. 16.

<sup>5</sup> They were mostly torys & such as [Capt.] Sanders has given Lynchs Law too for Dealing with the Negroes.

CHARLES LYNCH, Letter to W. Hay, 11 May, 1782.

Colonel Charles Lynch, a brother of the founder of Lynchburg, was an officer of the American Revolution. The country was thinly settled, and infested by a lawless band of tories and desperadoes. The necessity of the case involved desperate measures, and Colonel Lynch, then a leading Whig, apprehended and had them punished without any superfluous legal ceremony. Hence the origin of the phrase "Lynch law."

HENRY HOWE, Historical Collections of Virginia. (1845)

Lynch Law. Named after Captain William Lynch (1742–1820) of Pittsylvania County, Va., and later of Pendleton District, S.C.

Dictionary of American English: Lynch. (1942)

<sup>6</sup> The lawe . . . as in treason is used in thys realme by the lawe marshall vppon warre rered.

SIR THOMAS MORE, The Debellacyon of Salem and Bizance. Pt. ii, ch. 15. (1533)

According to the law mershal thei wer adiudged to die.

EDWARD HALL, Chronicle: Henry VIII, p. 231. (a. 1548)

Let his neck answer for it, if there is any martial law in the world.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, iv, 8, 46. (1599)

Martial law was neither more nor less than the will of the general who commands the army. In fact, martial law meant no law at all.

DUKE OF WELLINGTON, in HANSARD, Parliamentary Debates. Ser. iii, vol. cxv, p. 880. (1851) The Latin phrase, "Ius gladii" (The law of the sword), is a sort of equivalent.

<sup>7</sup> Lawe of armes, droict darmes.

JEHAN PALSCRAVE, La Langue Françoysse, p. 237/2. (1530)

He might have kepte theim in straite prison, by juste lawe of Armes.

EDWARD HALL, Chronicle, p. 255. (a. 1548)

Unto Satan the professed rebel against him . . . he did vouchsafe the benefit of the law of Armes or duel.

THOMAS JACKSON, Commentaries upon the Apostles' Creed, viii, xiv, sec. 2. (1626)

<sup>8</sup> There is a written and an unwritten law. Written law is that under which we live in different cities, but that which has arisen from custom is called unwritten law. (νόμον διαίρεσει δὸς· ὁ μὲν γὰρ αὐτοῦ γεγραμμένος, ὁ δὲ ἀγραφός.)

PLATO. (c. 375 B.C.) As quoted by DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Plato. Sec. 86. The Latin is "Lex non scripta."

Dementia Americana; the unwritten law.

DELPHIN MICHAEL DELMAS. Coining a phrase, at the trial of his client, Harry Thaw, for the murder of Stanford White, in 1907, to explain Thaw's action. He succeeded in having Thaw declared insane.

1 Stopford law, no stake, no draw.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 301. (1678)

Stopford law; no stake, no draw. . . Commonly used to signify that only such as contribute to the liquor, are entitled to drink of it.

GROSE, A Provincial Glossary, p. 157. (1787)

Stoppot [Stockport] law, no stake, no draw. . . Only those who contribute to an undertaking may reap any benefit from it. Stockport is half in Lancashire and half in Cheshire.

J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 110. (1917)

2 First Clown: Argal, he that is not guilty of his own death shortens not his own life.

Second Clown: But is this law?

First C.: Ay, marry is't; crowner's quest law. SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, v, 1, 21. (1600)

3 A sumptuary law. (Lex sumptuaria.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. iii, sec. 52. (c. A. D. 116)

4 But thou were worthi be cled

In stafford blew, ffor thou art alway adred.

UNKNOWN, Towneley Plays, p. 29. (c. 1400)

Stafford blue, blue from bruises and beating. I threatned . . . to deale by Stafford law.

UNKNOWN, Hay Any Work, Aiiij. (1589) A beating; a pun upon the word staff.

The Alkoran established by Stafford law.

WILLIAM BEDWELL, Mohammedis Imposturae. Ch. 1, sec. 26. (1615)

Is this lawe?—Yes, Stafford's lawe.

HEYWOOD, The Captives. Act iii, sc. 2. (1624)

III—Law: Legal Maxims

5 But if the King make speciall lawes, . . . euery subject is bound to know that Ignorantia Iuris will excuse no man.

THOMAS ADAMS, Works: Meditations upon the Creed, 1099. (1629) The proverb is, "Ignorantia iuris quod quisque tenetur scire neminem excusat" (Ignorance of the law which everyone is bound to know is no excuse), or, more simply, "Ignorantia iuris neminem excusat."

Ignorance of the law excuses no man: not that all men know the law, but because 'tis an excuse every man will plead, and no man can tell how to confute him.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Law. (a. 1654)

Ignorance of the law is no excuse in any country. If it were, the laws would lose their effect, because it can be always pretended.

JEFFERSON, Letter to M. Limosin, 1787.

6 Quod non apperet non est—that which does not appear must be taken in law as if it were not.

H. BROOM, Legal Maxims, p. 164. (1845)

We are . . . foolish slaves of mere sense, shaping our lives on the legal maxim that things which are non-apparent must be treated as non-existent.

ALEXANDER MACLAREN, Philippians, i, 27. (1909)

7 The laws place the safety of all before the safety of individuals. (Leges omnium salutem singulorum salutis anteponunt.)

CICERO, De Finibus. Bk. iii, ch. 19, sec. 64. (c. 45 B.C.)

The safety of the people shall be the highest law. (Salus populi suprema lex esto.)

CICERO, De Legibus. Bk. iii, sec. 3. (45 B.C.)

Derived by tradition from the Twelve Tables of Roman law.

Judges ought above all to remember the Conclusion of the Roman Twelve Tables: Salus populi suprema lex; and to know that Lawes, except they bee in Order to that End, are but Things Captious, and Oracles not well Inspired.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Judicature. (1597)

8 When you have no basis for an argument, abuse the plaintiff. (In hominem dicendum est igitur, cum oratio argumentationem non habeat.)

CICERO, Pro Flacco. Sec. 10. (59 B.C.) Usually stated, "If you have a weak case, abuse the other side."

Then, if at any time you find you have the worst end of the staff, leave off the cause and fall upon the person of your adversary.

JOHN WILSON, The Cheats. Act i, sc. 4. (1662)

Bluster, sputter, question, cavil; but be sure that your argument be intricate enough to confound the court.

WYCHERLEY, Plain-Dealer. Act iii, sc. 1. (1676)

When facts were weak, his native cheek

Brought him serenely through.

C. H. SPURGEON, Salt Cellars. (1885) Quoted as being said of an "eminent lawyer."

9 An argument derived from authority is of the greatest force in law. (Argumentum ab auctoritate fortissimum est in lege.)

SIR EDWARD COKE, On Littleton, p. 144. (1628)

10 Jurists speak of Gaius Seius and Lucius Titius.

PLUTARCH, Moralia: The Roman Questions, 271E. (c. A.D. 94) The Roman equivalents for John Doe and Richard Roe. See under JOHN.

11 In trying to give fair color to a bad case, you condemn it. (Malam rem cum velis honestare improbes.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 402. (c. 43 B.C.) Hard cases make bad law, i.e. lead to legislation for exceptions.

V. S. LEAN, Collectanea, iii, 479. (1902)

A ROTTEN CASE ABIDES NO HANDLING, see CASE.

1 With litigation do laws grow, with litigation is right attained. (Litigando jura crescunt, litigando jus acquiritur.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 42. (1545)
Quoting a legal maxim of unknown origin.

2 No man is bound to accuse himself.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Law. (a. 1654)

I hope your Worship will not be angry; . . . am I obliged to accuse myself?

DEFOE, The Behaviour of Servants, p. 94. (1724)

The witnesses might have refused to give evidence on the ground that, by so doing, they might incriminate themselves.

MONTAGU WILLIAMS, Leaves of Life. Ch. 18.

(1868) The legal maxim is, "Nemo tenetur seipsum accusare" (No man is bound to incriminate himself).

3 Ye must speke to the schryne for a "cepe cop-pus."

Ellys ye must be fayn to retorn with "non est inventus."

UNKNOWN, Mankind, l. 774. (c. 1475) "Non est inventus," he was not found. The answer made by the sheriff in the return of the writ when the defendant is not to be found in his bailiwick.

Sheriffes & officers will retorne writs with a tarde venit, or with a non est inuentus.

PHILIP STUBBES, The Anatomie of Abuses, sig. Kj. (1583)

The empty bottom [of his purse] returned him a writ of Non est inuentus.

ROBERT GREENE, Never Too Late, sig. H3.

(1590) There are hundreds of legal maxims, and dozens of books about them. See BONSER, Proverb Literature, pp. 435-439. Here are a few of the better known ones: "A facto ad ius non datur consequentia" (From fact to law no deduction is permissible); "Actus Dei nemini facit iniuriam" (The act of God does no one an injury); "Actus me invito factus non est meus actus" (An act done against my will is not my act); "Actus non facit reum, nisi mens sit rea" (The act does not constitute a criminal unless the mind is criminal); "Cessante ratione legis cessat ipsa lex" (When the reason for a law no longer exists the law ceases to exist); "Consensus facit legem" (Agreement makes law); "Consuetudo est optimus interpret legum" (Custom is the best interpreter of the laws); "Consuetudo pro lege servatur" (Custom is held as law); "De minimis non curat lex" (The law does not concern itself with trifles); "Dormiunt aliquando leges, nunquam moriuntur" (Laws sleep sometimes, but never die); "Ita lex scripta" (Thus is the law written), which Ulpianus expanded to "Durum est, sed ita lex scripta est" (It is hard, but the law is so written); "Leges posteriores priores contrarias abrogant" (Later laws repeal former ones which are inconsistent); "Lex aliquando sequitur aequitatem" (Law sometimes follows equity), an expression stemming from CICERO, De Officiis, i, 19; "Lex neminem cogit ad impossibile" (The law forces no one to do what is impossible); "Quaestio fit de legibus, non de personis" (The question is what is the law, not who are the parties); "Regula ex iure, non ius ex regula sumitur" (The practice is derived from the law, not the law from the practice); "Vigilantibus, non dormientibus, subveniunt iura" (The vigilant, not the sleepers, are assisted by the laws) and finally, "Lex dilationes exhorret" (The law abhors delays).

LAWYER

4 Doctors purge the body, preachers the conscience, lawyers the purse. (Geistliche reinigen das Gewissen, Aerzte den Leib, Juristen den Beutel.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 329. (1856) A German proverb.

5 Few lawyers die well, few physicians live well.
WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 321. (1605)

6 A good lawyer, an evil neighbour. (Bon avocat, mauvais voisin.)

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Avocat. (1611)

The Spanish form is, "Buen abogado, mal vecino." Common to many languages.

A good lawyer, a bad neighbor.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1737.

7 Oh Sammy, Sammy, vy worn't there a alleybi?
DICKENS, The Pickwick Papers. Ch. 34. (1837)

8 King Corny . . . has ended . . . by being his own lawyer; he has drawn his own will so that any lawyer could drive a coach and six through it.

MARIA EDGEWORTH, Ormond. Ch. 18. (1817)

He who is his own lawyer, has a fool for his client.

CHEALES, Proverbial Folk-Lore, p. 76. (1875)

9 The heaviest thing that is, is one Etcetera.

JOHN FLORIO, Firte Fruites, fo. 38. (1578)

Heaviest because it implies a number of unspecified things, too numerous to mention. Lawyers' etceteras, in their bills of costs, were proverbial. The French say, "Heaven protect us from a lawyer's etceteras."

10 Of three things the Deuill makes his messe, Of Lawyers tongues, of Scriueners fingers, you the third may gesse. [Women]

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, fo. 179. (1591)

Corrupt and conscienceless lawyers you will confess to be sharp and wounding brambles. The Italians have a shrewd proverb against them: "The devil makes his Christmas-pies of lawyers' tongues and clerks' fingers."

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons (1862), ii, 482. (1629)

11 God works wonders now and then:
Behold: a lawyer, an honest man.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1733.

1 Lawyers, preachers, and tomtit's eggs, there are more of them hatched than come to perfection.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734.

Necessity knows no law; I know some attorneys of the same.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734.
See also under NECESSITY.

2 An old Physician, and a young Lawyer.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 652. (1732)
See under DOCTOR.

The King can make a Serjeant, but not a Lawyer.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. Nq. 4613.

You are one of those Lawyers that never heard of Littleton.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5858.

3 I know you lawyers can, with ease,
Twist words and meanings as you please.

JOHN GAY, Fables. Pt. ii, No. 1. (1727)

Lawyers are always more ready to get a man into troubles than out of them.

GOLDSMITH, The Good-Natured Man. Act iii. (1768)

Lawyers and asses always die in their shoes.

HARLAND AND WILKINSON, Lancashire Folklore, p. 20. (1867)

4 Lawyers houses are built on the heads of fools.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 949. (1640) After the old French proverb, "Les maisons des avocats sont faictes de la teste des folz."

The lawyer replied, . . . this house [his own] is made of asses heads and fools skulls.

JAMES HOWELL, Parly of Beasts, p. 17. (1660)

Fools and obstinate Men make Lawyers rich.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1565. (1732) The Spanish form is, "Necios y porfiados hacen ricos los letrados"; the Italian, "I sciocchi e gli ostinati arricchiscono gli avvocati."

Court fool: the plaintiff.

AMBROSE BIERCE, Devil's Dictionary. (1906)

5 A client twixt his attorney and counsellor is like a goose twixt two foxes.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 11. (1659)

A countryman between two lawyers, is like a fish between two cats.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734.

6 Clergymen can marry you, but if you find you have made a mistake, in order to get unmarried, you have to hire a lawyer.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Philistine, xxv, 158. (1908)
Lawyer: The only man in whom ignorance of the law is not punished.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Book of Epigrams. (c. 1910)

7 Lawyers earn their bread in the sweat of their browbeating.

JAMES HUNEKER, Painted Veils, p. 142. (1920)

8 That one hundred and fifty lawyers should do business together ought not to be expected.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Autobiography, p. 49. (1820) Referring to the Congress of the U.S.

9 I would be loth to speak ill of any person who I do not know deserves it, but I am afraid he is an attorney.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (1786) See MRS. PIOZZI, Johnsoniana.

10 The best and most blameless interpreter of the law, though he thought that even in those dread days there should be no sword in the hand of Justice. (Optimus atque | interpres legum sanctissimus.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. iv, l. 78. (c. A. D. 120)
Referring to Pegasus, who had just been appointed Praefectus Urbi in Rome.

11 I think we may class the lawyer in the natural history of monsters.

JOHN KEATS, Letter to G. Keats. 13 March, 1819.

12 The oyster is for the judge. the shells are for the litigants. (L'huitre est pour le juge, | Les écaillés pour les plaideurs.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. i, fab. 21. (1668)
The fable of the dispute as to who owned the oyster. The judge settled it by eating the oyster and giving the complainants the shell.

Blind plaintiff, lame defendant, share

The friendly law's impartial care:

A shell for him, a shell for thee,

The middle is the lawyer's fee.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1733.

I never had any over-strong affection for lawyers —gentlemen that eat the oysters and leave their clients the shells.

F. E. SMEDLEY, Frank Fairleigh. Ch. 49. (1850)

13 Kick an attorney downstairs and he'll stick to you for life.

V. S. LEAN, Collectanea, iv, 24. (1902)

Two attorneys can live in a town, when one cannot. i. e. they make work for each other.

V. S. LEAN, Collectanea, iv, 169.

14 The lawyers rejected the counsel of God. (οἱ νομικοὶ τὴν βουλὴν τοῦ θεοῦ ἠθέτησαν.)

New Testament: Luke, vii, 30. (c. A. D. 65)

The Vulgate is, "Legis periti consilium Dei spreverunt."

Woe unto you also, ye lawyers! for ye lade men with burdens grievous to be borne. . . . Woe unto you, lawyers! for ye have taken away the key of knowledge. (οὐαὶ ὑμῖν τοῖς νομικοῖς.)

New Testament: Luke, xi, 46, 52. The Vulgate is, "Vae vobis Legisperitis."

15 The quirks and quiddities of the Logicians.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 138. (1579)

But in these nice sharp quillets of the law,

Good faith, I am no wiser than a daw.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry VI, ii, 4, 17. (1591)

Why may not that be the skull of a lawyer?
Where be his quiddities now, his quillets, his cases, his tenures, and his tricks?

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, v, 1, 107. (1600)
Full of quibble and of quiddity.

W. S. GILBERT, Patience. Act ii. (1881)

1 They say the Lawyers haue the deuill and al.

THOMAS NASHE, Pierce Penilesse, A3. (1592)
Be Lawyers, get the Diuell and all.

WARNER, Albion's England, xvi, 103. (1606)

2 The good have no need of an advocate. (μή δεῖσθαι βοηθούς.)

PHOCION, when criticized for appearing in behalf of an unworthy client. (c. 325 B.C.) See PLUTARCH, Lives: Phocion. Ch. 10, sec. 5.

3 Retained by me, you plead his cause. (Hinc stas, illim causam dicis.)

PLAUTUS, Menaechmi, l. 799. (c. 200 B.C.)
Shifting his side, as a lawyer knows how.

WILLIAM COWPER, *Report of an Adjudged
Case*, l. 25. (1780)

He is no lawyer who cannot take two sides.

CHARLES LAMB, Letter to Samuel Rogers, Dec., 1833.

4 Law-mongering lawyers, turning black to white. (Les peruers aduocatz . . . tourne le noir en blanc.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 44. (1545)
There is no cause so bad which doth not find a lawyer to defend it. (Vous sçavez si maulaise cause qui ne trouve son aduocat.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 44.

5 Fair and softly, as lawyers go to heaven.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 193. (1670)
Come, now let's talk with deliberation, fair and softly, as lawyers go to Heaven.

MOTTEUX, tr., Rabelais. Bk. v, ch. 28. (1694)
You buy as slowly as lawyers go to heaven, and that takes a long time.

ALBERT R. SMITH, The Fortunes of the Scattergood Family. Ch. 15. (1845)

An inch every Good Friday, the rate lawyers go to Heaven.

Notes and Queries. Ser. ii, vol. i, p. 267. (1856)
By degrees, as lawyers go to Heaven.

G. F. NORTALL, Folk Phrases. (1894)

Why does a hearse horse snicker

Hauling a lawyer away?

CARL SANDBURG, *The Lawyers Know Too
Much*. (1920)

6 Trafficking in the mad wrangles of the noisy court, he lets out for hire his anger and his speech. (Clamosi rabiosa fori | iurgia vendens
improbis iras | et verba locat.)

SENECA, Hercules Furens, l. 172. (c. A. D. 60)
Referring to a lawyer.

What is the price of your voice? (Quod vocis pretium?)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vii, l. 119. (c. A. D. 120)
Referring to a lawyer's fee.

Than sayde the Cornysh daw,
Lytle money lytle lawe.

UNKNOWN, Parlament of Byrdes, l. 146. (c.
1550) See HAZLITT, Early Popular Poetry,
iii, 174.

No fee, no law.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Works, iii, 26. (1597)
A man might as well [try to] open an oister without a knife, as a lawyer's mouth without a fee.

BARTON HOLYDAY, Technogamia. Act ii, sc. 5.
(1618)

Corn him well he'll work the better. Taken from the usage given to horses. Apply'd to the giving of large fees that you may be the better serv'd.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 79. (1721)

7 The first thing we do, let's kill all the lawyers.
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, iv, 2, 83. (1590)

8 'Tis like the breath of an unfee'd lawyer, you gave me nothing for it [so it is worth nothing].

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, i, 4, 143. (1605)

A lawyer's opinion is worth nothing unless paid for.

V. S. LEAN, Collectanea, iii, 393. (1902) The Germans say, "A lawyer and a wagon-wheel must be well-greased."

9 The law,
Whereof you are a well-deserving pillar.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, iv,
1, 238. (1597)

10 What's the first excellence in a lawyer? Tautology. What the second? Tautology. What the third? Tautology—as an old pleader said of action.

RICHARD STEELE, The Funeral. Act i. (1701)
Steele is paraphrasing Demosthenes. See under ORATORY.

11 No good attorney will ever go to law.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 206. (1666)

A wise lawyer never goes to law himself.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 303. (1855)

A lawyer never goes to law himself.

V. S. LEAN, Collectanea, iii, 393. (1902)

12 The robes of lawyers are lined with the obstinacy of litigants. (Le vesti degl' avvocati sono foderate dell' ostinazione dei litiganti.)

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs,
p. 75. (1853) An Italian proverb.

Lawyers' gowns are lined with the wilfulness of their clients.

BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 439. (1855)

13 A good lawyer must be a great liar.

EDWARD WARD, Writings, ii, 319. (1703) Cited as "a common saying."

14 The lawyer never dieth a beggar. The lawyer can never want a livyng till the yearth want men.

THOMAS WILSON, The Arte of Rhetorique,
p. 20b. (1553)

Most good lawyers live well, work hard, and die poor.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Speech, Charleston, S.C., 10 May, 1847.

1 That litigious she pettifogger.

WYCHERLEY, Plain-Dealer. Act i, sc. 1. (1676)
Shyster lawyers—a set of turkey-buzzards whose touch is pollution and whose breath is pestilence.

G. G. FOSTER, New York in Slices, p. 20. (1849)

2 It would (to use a Yankee phrase) puzzle a dozen Philadelphia lawyers to unriddle the conduct of the democrats.

UNKNOWN, The Balance, 15 Nov., 1803, p. 363.
The New England folks have a saying that three Philadelphia lawyers are a match for the very devil himself.

UNKNOWN, Salem Observer, 13 March, 1824.
I undertook . . . to plead for myself against half a dozen Philadelphia lawyers, renowned as they are for their extraordinary cunning.

T. BROTHERS, The United States, p. 17. (1839)
We have an expression in New York, when we meet a very difficult problem—"You will have to get a Philadelphia lawyer to solve that." Few people know that there is a basis of truth in the expression, for in 1735, when no New York lawyer could be obtained to defend John Peter Zenger, accused of criminal libel, because his two lawyers, James Alexander and William Smith, having challenged the jurisdiction of the court, had already been disbarred, the friends of Zenger came to Philadelphia and obtained the services of Andrew Hamilton, then eighty years of age, to go to New York without fee, and defend the action in the face of a hostile court.

HARRY WEINBERGER, The Liberty of the Press.
Address at Independence Hall, Philadelphia, 9 March, 1934.

LAZINESS, see Sloth

LEADER

3 The chief of the flock which leads it to the pasture-grounds is only an animal like the rest.

ANI, Teaching. No. 54. (c. 2000 B.C.)

Whoever is foremost, leads the herd. (Und wer der Vorderste ist, führt die Heerde.)

SCHILLER, Wallenstein's Tod. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 10. (1709)

And when we think we lead we most are led.

BYRON, The Two Foscari. Act ii, sc. 1. (1822)

4 Woe to the age that has lost its leader; woe to the boat that has lost its oarsman.

Babylonian Talmud: Baba Kama, fo. 91a. (c. 450)

5 This County . . . takes the Lead.

ARCHBISHOP HERRING, Speech, at York, 24 Sept., 1745.

He took the lead in every jovial conversation.

DAVID HUME, History of England. Bk. ii, ch. 27, p. 127. (1761)

They take the lead, and lose it . . . by turns.

LAURENCE STERNE, A Sentimental Journey: The Rose. Paris. (1768)

For a mile or more the doctor took the lead.

THOMAS HOOD, Up the Rhine, p. 5. (1840)

6 There is no reason to despair with Teucer as our leader. (Nil desperandum Teucro duce.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 7. (23 B.C.)

You shall be safe with me as your leader. (Me duce tutus eris.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. ii, l. 58. (c. 1 B.C.)
With me as leader, ye men, control your anxieties. (Me duce damnosas, homines, conpescite curas.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 69. (c. 1 B.C.)
A good leader makes a good company. (Bonus dux bonum reddit comitem.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. viii, No. 100.

(1503) A good general makes good soldiers, a good father good children.

Follow your leader, boys.

DICKENS, Nicholas Nickleby. Ch. 13. (1838)

7 It is a kindness to lead the sober; a duty to lead the drunk.

W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: Don Victor Naez and El Rey, Nelto. (c. 1824)

8 Lead on the way.

MARLOWE, Edward II. Act ii, sc. 2. (1590)

Lead thou the way.

HENRY PORTER, The Two Angrie Women of Abington, p. 90. (1599)

The first to lead the Way, to tempt the Flood.

DRYDEN, tr., Vergil's Georgics, iii, 123. (1697)
Allur'd to brighter worlds, and led the way.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 170. (1770)

9 He was leader of leaders. (Dux erat ille ducum.)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. viii, l. 46. (10 B.C.)

10 An army of stags led by a lion is more formidable than an army of lions led by a stag. (φοβερώτερόν ἐστιν ἐλάφῳ στρατόπεδον ἡγουμένῳ λέοντος ἢ λέόντων ἐλάφου.)

PLUTARCH, Chabriae Apophthegmata. (c. A.D. 95) The Latin is, "Formidabilior cervorum exercitus, duce leone, quam leonum cervo."

Many . . . had seen . . . the fruits of bad leadership in Cabul, and had learnt to value the truth of the proverb, . . . that "a herd of deer led by a lion was more formidable to the enemy than a herd of lions led by a deer."

W. F. BUTLER, Sir Charles Napier, p. 150. (1890)

11 A leader, once hated, his deeds, whether good or ill, tell against him. (Inviso semel principi seu bene seu male facta premunt.)

TACITUS, Histories. Bk. i, sec. 7. (c. A.D. 109)
Reason and calm judgment, the qualities specially belonging to a leader. (Ratione et consilio propriis ducis artibus.)

TACITUS, Histories. Bk. iii, sec. 20

12 It seems that you have many that lead, but none that will follow. (ὅμοις οἴκατε τοὺς μὲν ἀρχοντας ἔχειν, τοὺς δὲ ἀρξομένους οὐκ ἔχειν.)

THEODOTUS, History. Bk. vii, ch. 162. (c. 445

B.C.) Gerlon, of Syracuse, to the Athenian envoys who came to ask his aid against Xerxes.

Another . . . would neither lead nor drive.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, tr., Quevedo's Visions, p. 80. (1667)

Neither lead nor drive. An untoward, unmanageable person.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 75. (1678)

People are more easily led than driven.

D. H. FINK, Release from Nervous Tension, p. 39. (1943)

LEAF

1 Naie she will tourne the leafe.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1546)
Except soch men thinke them selves wiser than Cicero for teaching of eloquence, they must be content to turne a new leafe.

ROGER ASCHAM, The Scholemaster (Arber), p. 121. (1570)

At once I turn the leaf. (Je tourne à l'instant le feuillet.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 37. (1580)

Schoole him to turn-ouer a new leafe.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Works (Grosart) ii, 328. (1593)
Turn over a new leaf.

THOMAS DEKKER, The Honest Whore. Pt. i, act iv, sc. 2. (1604) SEDLEY, Bellamira, iii. (1687) PAULDING, Bucktails, v, 1. (1815)
BURKE, Rip Van Winkle, i. 1. (1865) PINERO, Benefit of the Doubt, i. (1895) etc., etc.

It's never too late to turn over a new leaf.

CUNNINGHAM, Bancroft Murder Case, p. 117. (1942)

2 We all do fade as a leaf. (Cecidimus quasi folium universi.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, lxiv, 6. (c. 725 B.C.)

They will soon cast their leafs.

JAMES HOWELL, Dodona's Grove: To the Prince. (1640)

3 I took a leaf out of their book.

B. H. MALKIN, tr., Gil Blas. Bk. vii, ch. 2. (1809) I imitated them.

It is a great pity that some of our instructors . . . will not take a leaf out of the same book.

THOMAS HUGHES, Tom Brown at Oxford. Pt. i, ch. 2. (1861)

You should have taken a leaf out of his book.

THOMAS HARDY, The Mayor of Casterbridge. Ch. 16. (1886)

4 It is time to give over, at least, to turn down a leaf.

FRANCIS OSBOURNE, Characters. Works (1673), p. 647. (a. 1659)

5 I have lived long enough: my way of life Is fall'n into the sear, the yellow leaf.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, v, 3, 23. (1606) See under AGE.

Ere yet the green leaf of her days was come.

W. R. SPENCER, Poems, p. 44. (1811)

LEAN

6 As lene was his hors as is a rake.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 289. (c. 1386)

I waxe as leyne as anny rake.

UNKNOWN, Early Miscellanies, p. 8. (c. 1480)

His bodie leane as any rake.

ARTHUR GOLDING, tr., Ovid, ii, 967. (1567)

Let us revenge this with our pikes, ere we become rakes.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus, i, 1, 23. (1607)

Maigres comme pies, as leane as rakes, we say.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Maigre. (1611)

7 His sleep, his mete, his drink is him biraft,
That lene he wex, and drye as is a shaft.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Knightes Tale, l. 503. (c. 1386)

8 Lean as a shotten herring.

HOWELL, Proverbs: Fr.-Eng., p. 18. (1659)

A shotten fish is a fish that has spawned.

He looks like a shotten herring.

BERTHELSON, Dictionary: Shotten. (1754)

9 A lean dog to get through a hedge. Spare people most easy to pull through an illness.

V. S. LEAN, Collectanea, iii, 393. (1902)

A lean dog for a hard road.

J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 4. (1917)

A lean horse for a long race.

MONTAGUE, Broadway Stomach, p. 115. (1940)

10 Snapping so short makes you look so lean.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 345. (1678)

Snap short makes you look so lean, miss.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

11 Yond Cassius has a lean and hungry look;
He thinks too much: such men are dangerous.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar, i, 2, 194. (1599)

LEAP

12 Hee will leape at a crust.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 94. (1633)

I believe, Colonel, Mr. Neverout can leap at a crust better than you.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

13 It is to-day, my dear, that I take the perilous leap. (C'est adjourd'hui, ma belle amie, que je fais le saut périlleux.)

HENRY IV OF FRANCE, to Gabrielle d'Éstrées, when about to enter the Catholic Church. (1593) Quoted by Voltaire, when on his deathbed. (1778)

14 Now I am about to take my last voyage, a great leap in the dark.

THOMAS HOBBS, when about to die. (1679)

See WATKINS, Anecdotes of Men of Learning.

A little before you made a leap in the dark.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Letters from the Dead. (a. 1682)

Now I am for Hob's Voyage;—a great leap in the dark.

SIR JOHN VANBRUGH, The Provok'd Wife. Act v, sc. 6. (1697) Referring to matrimony.

Like matrimony, like death, a leap in the dark.

DEFOE, Moll Flanders (1840), p. 75. (1721)

The "leap in the dark" is the least to be dreaded.

LORD BYRON, Diary, 5 Dec., 1813.

I saw the feeble fools were wavering, and, to save all, made a leap in the dark.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Vivian Grey. Bk. ii, ch.

16. (1826) Repeated in Endymion. Ch. 66.

The spiritual life is a grand experiment which ends in an experience; but it is not merely a leap in the dark.

DEAN W. R. INGE. (c. 1930) See MARCHANT, Wit and Wisdom of Dean Inge, No. 3.

1 She doth not leap an inch from a shrew.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 256. (1678)

She cannot leap an Inch from a Slut.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4121. (1732)

2 He is ready to leap over nine hedges.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 353. (1678)

3 Who . . . winking leap'd into destruction.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, i, 3, 33. (1598)

LOOK BEFORE YOU LEAP, see under LOOK.

LEARNING

See also Education, Knowledge, Wisdom

4 We learn from our fathers. (ἀπὸ πατέρων μάθος.)

ALCAEUS, Fragments. Frag. 146. (c. 595 B.C.)

See EDMONDS, Lyra Graeca, i, 411.

5 How to get rid of having anything to unlearn. (τὸ περιπατεῖν τὸ ἀπομαρῶναι.)

ANTISTHENES, when asked what learning is the most necessary. (c. 375 B.C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Antisthenes, vi, 7. BACON, Apophthegms, No. 177, renders it, "To unlearn what is nought."

He does not right who unlearns what he has learned. (Haud aequum facit, qui quod didicit, id dediscit.)

PLAUTUS, Amphitruo, l. 686. (c. 200 B.C.)

The mind is slow in unlearning what it has been long in learning. (Dediscit animus sero quod didicit diu.)

SENECA, Troades, l. 633. (c. A. D. 60)

It is the worst of madness to learn what has to be unlearned. (Extremae est dementiae discere dediscenda.)

ERASMUS, Colloquia: De Ratione Studii. (1524)

Child of Nature, learn to unlearn.

DISRAELI, Contarino Fleming. Pt. i, ch.1. (1832)

6 He who learns and forgets is like a woman who bears and buries.

Babylonian Talmud: Sanhedrin, fo.99a. (c. 450)

7 Learning is pleasant fruit from bitter root. (Doctrina est fructus dulcis radicis amarae.)

CATO (?), Collectio Monastichorum, l. 40. (c. 175 B.C.) See Minor Latin Poets, Loeb, p.626.

Without learning, life is but an image of death. (Sine doctrina vita est quasi mortis imago.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. iii, No. 1.

The living man who does not learn is dark, dark, like one walking in the night.

WILLIAM MILNE, tr., Ming-hsin pao-chien. In the Indo-Chinese Gleaner, Aug., 1818.

8 Learn from the learned, but the unlettered teach. (Disce sed a doctis, indoctos ipse doceto.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. iv, No. 23. (c. 150 B.C.)

We can only learn from our betters.

M. J. ADLER, How to Read a Book, p. 32. (1940)

9 Forwhy men seyth, "impressions lighte Ful lightly been ay redy to the flighte."

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. ii, l. 1238. (c. 1380)

Soon learnt, soon forgotten.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 489. (1855)

10 Wear your learning, like your watch, in a private pocket; and do not pull it out, and strike it, merely to show that you have one.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 22 Feb., 1748.

Swallow all your learning in the morning, but digest it in company in the evenings.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 10 May, 1751.

11 As a field, however fertile, cannot be fruitful without cultivation, neither can a mind without learning. (Ut ager, quamvis fertilis, sine cultura fructuosus esse non potest, sic sine doctrina animus.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. ii, ch. 5, sec. 13. (45 B.C.)

12 Learning without thought is useless; thought without learning is dangerous.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. ii, ch. 15. (c. 500 B.C.) Legge, tr. Marshman prefers "reflection" to "thought."

There is a love of knowing without the love of learning—a beclouding which leads to dissipation of mind.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. xvii, ch. 8.

To be fond of learning is to be near to knowledge.

CONFUCIUS, Doctrine of the Mean. Ch.20,sec.10.

13 Learning is the eye of the mind.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 111. (1633)

Learning, that cobweb of the brain.

BUTLER, HUDIBRAS, i, iii, 1339. (1663)

14 Missing one doth learne. (Fallando si impari.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 30. (1578)

Learning and wisdom, let fortune do what she please, neuer is lost, waters can not marre it, nor fire burne it.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 62.

Learning is heauy, & yet it waitheth not; it is fayre, and yet fewe seeke it; sweet, but yet few will taste of her.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 63.

1 When house and land are gone and spent,
Then learning is most excellent.

SAMUEL FOOTE, Taste. (1752)

When ignorance enters, folly is at hand;
Learning is better far than house and land.

DAVID GARRICK, She Stoops to Conquer: Prologue. (1773)

I am at pains with her education, because you know "learning is better than house or land."

WALTER SCOTT, Familiar Letters, i, 31. (1805)

When land is gone, and money is spent,
Then learning is most excellent.

BARING-GOULD, Broom Squire. Ch. 26. (1896)

2 A learned blockhead is a greater blockhead than an ignorant one.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734.

Of learned fools, I have seen ten times ten; of unlearned wise men, I have seen a hundred.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1735.

Most of the Learning in use is of no great use.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1749.

3 Learning, in an ill Man, is good Wine in a musty Bottle.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3159. (1732)

Learning in the Hand of some is a Sceptre, in that of others a Fool's Bauble.

Learning is worse lodg'd in him, than Jove in a Thacht-House.

The World would perish, were all Men learned.
There is much more Learning than Knowledge in the World.

FULLER, Gnomologia. Nos. 3160-1, 4846, 4901.

4 Learning makes a good Man better, and an ill Man worse.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3162. (1732)

Another form is, "Learning makes the wise wiser and the fool more foolish." The French say, "Jean a étudié pour être bête" (Jack has studied in order to be a fool).

5 There is nothing more displeasing to the learned than the company of the ignorant.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i,
p. 31. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Learning without experience is more certaine, then experience without learning.

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, i, 38.

Learning is easilier gotten by the eares then by the eyes.

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, i, 40.

Of all thinge whiche wee possesse in this world,
only learning is immortall.

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, ii, 216.

6 Who learns by Finding Out has sevenfold
The Skill of him who learned by Being Told.

GUITERMAN, A Poet's Proverbs, p. 73. (1924)

7 Learning is like rowing upstream: not to advance is to drop back.

H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs.
No. 159. (1937)

8 Much learning does not make a scholar.
(πολυμαθία νόον οὐ διδάσκει.)

HERACLEITUS, Fragments. Frag. 16, Bywater. (c.
500 B. C.) Quoted by AULUS GELLIUS, *Noctes
Atticae: Preface*, sec. 12.

He has the facts, but not the phosphorescence of learning.

EMILY DICKINSON, of a scholarly visitor. (c.
1880) See BROOKS, *New England: Indian
Summer*, p. 324.

9 They favour learning whose actions are worthy of a learned pen.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1059. (1650)

10 Learn not and know not.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 26. (1659)

11 Abandon learning, and you will be free from trouble and distress. (Tsiieh hioh wu 'wei.)

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue).
Sec. 20. (c. 550 B. C.) Giles, tr.

Much science much sorrow.

JOHN CLARKE, Paraenialogia, p. 101. (1639)

Much Learning much sorrow.

NICHOLAS LING, ed., Politeuphuia, p. 183. (1669)

INCREASE KNOWLEDGE INCREASE SORROW, see under KNOWLEDGE.

12 Find time to be learning of some good thing more, and give up being desultory. (καὶ σχολὴν παρέχε σπαντῶ τοῦ προσμανθάνειν ἀγαθόν τι, καὶ παῦσαι ῥεμβόμενος.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. ii, sec. 7.
(C. A. D. 174)

13 No learning without beating. (ὁ μὴ δαπέει ἄνθρωπος οὐ παιδεύεται.)

MENANDER, Fragments. (c. 330 B. C.) See also under CHILD: SPARE THE ROD.

Hee that tasteth the sweet of learning endureth all the sower of labour.

JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 157. (1579)

Nobody is born learned. (Nadie nace enseñado.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 23. (1615)

Learning by study must be won;

'Twas ne'er entail'd from son to son.

JOHN GAY, Fables: The Pack-horse and the Carrier, l. 41. (1727)

14 The great end of learning is nothing else but to seek for the lost mind.

MENCIUS, Discourses. Bk. vi, pt. i, ch. 11, sec. 4.
(c. 300 B. C.)

The food of study and learning. (Pabulum studii atque doctrinae.)

CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. 14, sec. 49. (44 B. C.)

This has been adapted into the proverb,
"Doctrina est ingenii naturale quoddam pabulum" (Learning is a kind of natural food of the mind).

The end of learning is the formation of character.

KAIBARA EKKEN, Ten Kun (Ten Precepts).
Bk. ii. (1710) Ken Hoshino, tr.

1 One must give the mind, not a slight tincture, but a thorough and perfect dye. (Il ne l'en faut pas arroser, il l'en faut teindre.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 6. (1580)

Next these learn'd Jonson in this list I bring,
Who had drunk deep of the Pierian Spring.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, On Poets and Poesie. (c. 1603) "Pierian spring" from VERGIL, Culex, l. 18, "Pierii laticis decus, ite, sorores Naides" (Come, sister Naiads, glory of the Pierian spring).

A little learning is a dangerous thing;
Drink deep, or taste not the Pierian spring.

POPE, An Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 15. (1709)

"A little learning is a dangerous thing";—and a great deal cannot be hammer'd into the heads of vulgar men.

GEORGE COLMAN, jr., Random Records, i, 100. (1830)

After reading Ruskin on the love of nature, I think, "Drink deep, or taste not the Pierian spring."

H. D. THOREAU, Autumn, 29 Oct., 1857.

If a little knowledge is dangerous, where is the man who has so much as to be out of danger?

T. H. HUXLEY, Science and Culture: On Elementary Instruction in Physiology. (1881)

A little science might possibly be a dangerous thing.

AGATHA CHRISTIE, Easy to Kill, p. 119. (1939)

2 A learned man is not learned in everything. (Un personnage sçavant n'est pas sçavant par tout.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 2. (1595)

Learned men are the cisterns of knowledge, not the fountain-heads.

JAMES NORTHCOTE, Table-Talk. (c. 1875)

3 We know that you are mad with too much learning. (Scimus te prae litteras fatuum esse.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 46. (c. A. D. 60) Already proverbial, as was another, "Deliramenta doctrinae" (The mad delusions of learning).

Much learning doth make thee mad. (τὰ πολλὰ σε γράμματα εἰς μάριαν περιτρέπει.)

New Testament: Acts, xxvi, 24. (c. A. D. 65)

The Vulgate is, "Multae te litterae ad insaniam convertunt."

Out of too much learning becoming mad.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. iv, mem. i, subs. 2. (1621)

4 As when the sunne shineth, the light of the stars is not seene: so when learning appeareth, all other giftes are nothing to be accounted of.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 229. (1576)

A paraphrase of ERASMUS, Similia, "Luna cum soli coniungitur, tum obscuratur, et occultatur: cum abeat, lupet."

Learning is the life of the common wealth.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 252.

Learning and wit is the only wealth of each country, the only conquerour in warre. the only preserver of peace.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 256.

5 The learned man has always riches in himself. (Homo doctus in se semper divitias habet.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. iv, fab. 21. (c. 25 B. C.)

If a man be learned, what necessity has he for the society of others?

BHARTRIHARI, Niti Sataka. No. 55. (c. A. D. 100)

Learning makes a Man fit company for himself.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3163. (1732)

Learning is a treasure which accompanies its owner everywhere. (Shu nai sui chên chih pao.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 566. (1875)

6 A single day amongst the learned lasts longer than the longest life of the ignorant. (Unus dies hominum eruditorum plus patet quam imperitis longissima aetas.)

POSIDONIUS, Exhortations. (c. 75 B. C.) As quoted by SENECA, Ad Lucilium, Epis. lxxviii, sec. 29.

Learning teacheth more in one year than experience in twenty.

ROGER ASCHAM, The Scholemaster. (a. 1568)

7 Be not proud because thou art learned; but discourse with the ignorant man as with the sage.

PTAH-HOTEP, Instruction. No. 1. (c. 3550 B. C.)

Prisse Papyrus. Gunn, tr.

8 In ten days thou wilt spend thy father's gold: Learn what he knew if thou his place wouldst hold.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. vii, Apologue 2. (c. 1258) He that has acquired learning and not practised what he has learnt, is like a man who plows but sows no seed.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. viii, Maxim 40. (c. 1258)

A learned man without practice is like a bee without honey.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. viii, Maxim 73.

9 Most things are easy to learn, but hard to master. (Ch'ien pan yi hsiao, yi ch'iao nan tê.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 544. (1875)

Few men make themselves Masters of the things they write or speak.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Learning. (a. 1654)

A variation of the aphorism credited to St. Ambrose, "Nulla aetas ad perdiscendum est" (No age is given to learning thoroughly).

10 I am glad to learn, in order that I may teach. (Gaudeo discere, ut doceam.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. vi, sec. 4. (c. A. D. 64)

Take away from our learned men the pleasure of making themselves heard, learning would be nothing to them. (Ôtez à nos savants le plaisir de se faire écouter, le savoir ne sera rien pour eux.)

J.-J. ROUSSEAU, Julie. Pt. i, lett. 12. (1760)

1 We learn not in the school, but in life. (Non scholae, sed vitae discimus.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. cvi. (a. A. D. 64)
It's well to live that one may learn. (Bueno es viver para ver.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 32. (1615)
The Italians say, "Vivendo s'impára," the French, "Il n'y a qu'à vivre pour apprendre."
You have lived long and learned little.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 44. (1579)
A man may live and learne.

Roxburghe Ballads, i, 80. (c. 1620)
The longer that one liveth, the more he knoweth.

THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 58. (1633)
One may live and learn, and be hanged and forget all.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 13. (1659)
I see a man may live and learn every day.

JOHN WILSON, The Cheats. Act iii, sc. 3. (1662)
One must live long to learn much.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 313. (1666)
Don't stand gaping, but live and learn, my lad.

RICHARD STEELE, The Lying Lover. Act i, sc. 1. (1704)

I was innocent myself once, but live and learn is an old saying, and a true one.

DAVID GARRICK, Miss in Her Teens. Act i, sc. 2. (1747)

The longer one lives the more he learns.
THOMAS MOORE, Dream of Hindoostan. (c. 1817)
Well, we live and learn.

F. E. SMEDLEY, Frank Fairlegh. Ch. 14. (1850)
Learn to live, and live to learn,
Ignorance like a fire doth burn,
Little tasks make large return.

BAYARD TAYLOR, To My Daughter. (1865)
No doubt we go on learning as long as we live:
"Live and learn."

LORD AVEBURY, The Use of Life. Ch. 6. (1894)

2 All the learned and authentic fellows.
SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, ii, 3, 14. (1602)

A learned man is an idler who kills time with study.

SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists. (1903)

3 Learning is but an adjunct to ourself,
And where we are our learning likewise is.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, iv, 3, 314. (1595)

4 How vain is learning unless intelligence go with it. (ὡς οὐδὲν ἢ μάθος ἂν μὴ τοῦς παρῆ.)

STOBAEUS, Florilegium. (c. A. D. 400) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, Essays, i, 24.

Learning is worthless without mother-wit. (Sin el buen natural no hay ciencia que valga.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. (1605) Variants are, "Common sense is better than learning," "Cleverness counts for more than scholarship." The Japanese say, "Learning without wisdom is a load of books on an ass's back." Most proverbs belittle education, since they came from the common people who had no chance at it.

5 A prodigy in learning.

SMOLLETT, Roderick Random. Ch. 45. (1748)
I would by no means wish a daughter of mine to be a progeny of learning.

SHERIDAN, The Rivals. Act i, sc. 2. (1775)

6 I grow old learning something new every day. (γηράσκω δ' αἰ πολλὰ διδασκόμενος.)

SOLON, Apothegm. (c. 560 B. C.) Cited by VALE-RIUS MAXIMUS, Facta et Dicta Memorabilia. Bk. viii, ch. 7, sec. 14, who gives the Latin, "Quotidie aliquid addiscentem senescere."

Learning is ever in the freshness of its youth, even for the old. (αἰ γὰρ ἦβη τοῖς γέρονσιν ἐὺ μαθεῖν.)

AESCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 584. (458 B. C.)

When, if not now? (εἴτα μὴδὲ νῦν.)

LACYDES, when asked, in extreme age, why he had begun the study of geometry. (c. 218 B. C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Lacydes. Bk. iv, ch. 8, sec. 60. Often expanded to, "If I should not be learning now, when should I be?"

You should keep learning as long as there is anything you do not know; if we may believe the proverb, as long as you live. (Tamdiu discendum est, quamdiu nescias; si proverbio credimus, quamdiu vivas.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxvi, sec. 3. (A. D. 64)
I am still learning! (Ancora imparo!)

MICHELANGELO, Maxim. (c. 1560) His device represented an old man seated in a go-cart with an hour-glass upon it, and the motto, "Ancora imparo." See D'ISRAELI, Curiosities of Literature: The Progress of Old Age in New Studies.

The saying of him, whiche sayde that if hee had one foote within the grave, yet hee woulde still bee learning somewhat.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 171. (1574) Pettie, tr.

A man is never too old to learn.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, The Mayor of Quinborough. Act v, sc. 1. (a. 1627)

Never too old to learn.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 166. (1678)

It is never too late to learn what it is always necessary to know.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, tr., Seneca's Epistles, xx. (c. 1680)

A lawyer I was born, and a lawyer I will be; one is never too old to learn.

JOHN ARBUTHNOT, John Bull, i, vii. (1712)

Never too late to learn. Nunquam sera est ad bonos mores via.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 266. (1721)

SOUTHERNE, Money the Mistress. Act v, sc. 3. (1726)

An old proverb, which says, It is never too late to grow wise.

HENRY FIELDING, The Covent-Garden Journal No. 72. (1752)

7 Words are but wind; learning is nothing but words; ergo, learning is nothing but wind.

SWIFT, A Tale of a Tub. Ch. 8. (1704)

<sup>1</sup> Intelligence and learning are more easily stamped out than revived. (Ingenia studiaque opprresseris facilius quam revocaveris.)

TACITUS, Agricola. Sec. 3. (c. A. D. 98)

<sup>2</sup> How many perish in the world through vain learning. (Quam multi pereunt per vanam scientiam in saeculo.)

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Bk. i, ch. 3. (c. 1420)

Thou haste learynge, use it, to lyve well. Thou hast it not, vexe not thy selfe, goodnes sufficethe for the obtaynyng of euerlastyng helth.

RICHARD TAVERNER, tr., Erasmus' Adagia, fo. 66. (1550)

<sup>3</sup> Ever learning, and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth. (πάντοτε μανθάνοντα καὶ μηδέποτε εἰς ἐπίγνωσιν ἀληθείας ἐλθεῖν δυνάμενα.)

New Testament: II Timothy, iii, 7. (c. A. D. 63)

The Vulgate is, "Semper discentes, et numquam ad scientiam veritatis pervenientes."

It is only when we forget all our learning that we begin to know.

H. D. THOREAU, Autumn, 4 Oct., 1859.

<sup>4</sup> There is no royal road to learning; no short cut to the acquirement of any valuable art.

TROLLOPE, Barchester Towers. Ch. 20. (1857)

There's no royal road to learning; and what is life but learning.

DICKENS, Our Mutual Friend. Bk. iv, ch. 2. (1865)

It was long ago remarked that there was no royal road to learning.

LORD AVERBURY, The Use of Life. Ch. 7. (1894)

WELLS, You Can't Be Too Careful, p. 59. (1942)

<sup>5</sup> To be fond of learning is to be near to knowledge.

TSE-TZU, The Doctrine of the Mean (Chung-yang). Ch. xx, sec. 10. (c. 450 B. C.)

<sup>6</sup> Lovers of learning, lovers of rhetoric. (φιλολόγους, λογοφίλους.)

ZENO. (c. 300 B. C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, vii, 1.

Zeno was wont to say that he had two sorts of disciples, lovers of learning, and these were his darlings, and lovers of words, who respected nothing more than the language.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 25. (1580)

There are many branches of learning, but only the one solid tree-trunk of wisdom.

ANONYMOUS, Meditations in Wall Street, p. 91. (1940)

<sup>7</sup> Whoso yong lerneth, olt he ne leseth, quoth Hendyng.

UNKNOWN, Proverbs of Hendyng, p. 6. (c. 1320)

For thing i-take in [youth is] hard to put away.

UNKNOWN, The Tale of Beryn, p. 938. (c. 1400)

The French say, "Ce qu'on apprend au berceau dure jusqu'au tombeau" (What is learnt in the cradle lasts to the tomb); the Germans, "Jung gelernt, alt gethan" (Learnt young, done old). There is a medieval Latin proverb, "Quod puer adulescit, leviter dimittere nescit" (What the boy is used to he does not lightly lose).

Learn young, learn fair.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 72. (c. 1595) Sometimes expanded to, "Learn young, learn fair; learn auld, learn mair."

What we first learn we best ken.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 340. (1721)

He who will not learn when he is young will regret it when he is old.

ALEXINA OGILVIE, Profitable Proverbs. (1923)

LEATHER

<sup>8</sup> Raw leather will stretch.

JOHN DAVIES, Scourge of Folly, p. 46. (1611)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4004. (1732)

<sup>9</sup> There was a council of mechanics called to advise about the fortifying of a city. . . . Up starts a currier; Gentlemen, says he, when y'ave said all that can be said, there's nothing in the world like leather.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, Fables. No. 448. (1692)

Depend upon it, Sir, there is nothing like leather.

SIR FRANCIS PALGRAVE, Merchant and Friar, p. 147. (1837)

"I dare say, my remark came from the feeling of there being nothing like leather," replied Mr. Hale.

MRS. GASKELL, North and South. Ch. 10. (1855)

Mrs. Gilson coughed drily. "Leather's a fine thing," she said, "if you believe the cobbler."

S. J. WEYMAN, Starvecrow Farm. Ch. 2. (1905)

<sup>10</sup> Worth makes the man, and want of it the fellow,

The rest is all but leather or prunella.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 203. (1734) Prunella, a strong stuff, originally of silk, afterwards worsted, used for graduates', clergymen's, and barristers' gowns, later, for the uppers of women's shoes.—O.E.D. The preceding line, "Or, cobbler-like, the parson will be drunk," shows that Pope was referring to the difference of rank between the parson and the cobbler.

Then who shall say so good a fellow

Was only "leather and prunella?"

LORD BYRON, Epitaph for Joseph Blackett.

(1811) The beginning of the misinterpretation of Pope's words as meaning something of no account, to which one is indifferent.

A man to whom these delights of American humour are leather and prunella.

ANTHONY TROLLOPE, Thackeray, p. 192. (1879)

<sup>11</sup> Of un-boht hude [unbought hide] men kerueth [carveth] brod thong.

UNKNOWN, Proverbs of Hendyng. St. 28. (1300)

From the Latin proverb, "Ex alieno tergo lata secantur lora" (From the leather of others broad thongs are cut), or "De alieno corio liberalis" (Liberal with another man's leather).

Men cut large thongs of other men's leather.

MARGARET PASTON, Paston Letters, iii, 372. (1465)
It is not honeste to make large thonges of other mennes leder.

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., Aesop, ii, 220. (1484)
They cut large thongis of other mens lether.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)
The common proverbe which saith that wee cut large thongs of other men's leather.

ARTHUR GOLDING, tr., Calvin on Deuteronomie, cxiii, 696. (1583)

Of other mens lether, men takes large whanges.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 84. (c. 1595)
The French say, "D'autrui cuir large courroye," the Italians, "Del cuoio d'altri si fan larghe stringhe."

To cut large shives of another man's loaf.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 148. (1678)
You are very free of another man's pottage.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5861. (1732)
The comparative wastefulness wherewith that which is another's is too often used: Men cut broad thongs from other men's leather.

TRENCH, Lessons in Proverbs. Ch. 5. (1853)
I reflected that the first currency was of leather (whence pecunia, from pecus, a herd).

H. D. THOREAU, Autumn, 29 Nov., 1860.

LEAVE

<sup>1</sup>
Ye might haue knokt er ye came in, leave is light.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)
Leaue is light, which being obtained a man may be bold without offence.

THOMAS DELONEY, The Gentle Craft Pt. ii, ch. 2. (c. 1598)

You must ask my leave first. . . . Leave is but light.

BEN JONSON, New Inne. Act v, sc. 1. (1631)
Leave is ever fair, being ask'd; and granted is as light, according to our English Proverbe, Leave is light.

JONSON, Love's Welcome at Welbeck. (1633)
Leave is light. It's an easie matter to ask leave.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 113. (1670)

<sup>2</sup>
Let us not be dainty of leave-taking,
But shift away.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, ii, 3, 150. (1606)
What is called French leave [to depart without asking leave or giving notice] was introduced that one person leaving might not disturb the company.

JOHN TRUSLER, Chesterfield's Principles and Politeness. (1760)

He stole away an Irishman's bride, and took a French leave of me and his master.

SMOLLETT, Humphry Clinker, p. 238. (1771)
I felt myself extremely awkward about going away, not choosing, as it was my first visit, to take French leave.

MADAME D'ARBLAY, Diary. Vol. i, p. 476. (1782)
You'd have taken leave without asking—French leave—if I had not been there.

GEORGE COLMAN THE YOUNGER, Ways and Means. Act iii, sc. 2. (1788)

I began to think of taking French leave.

WALTER SCOTT, The Antiquary. Ch. 3. (1816)
My only plan was to take French leave, and slip out when nobody was watching.

STEVENSON, Treasure Island. Ch. 22. (1883)
To go away without saying good-bye to anyone is called in English "to take french leave." (S'en aller sans dire adieu à personne s'appelle en anglais "s'en aller à la française.")

MAX O'RELL, John Bull et Son Ile, p. 65. (1890)
The origin of the phrase is unknown. Curiously enough, the French equivalent is "Filer à l'anglaise" (To take leave after the English fashion).

LECTURE

<sup>3</sup>
The bed that holds a wife is never free from bickerings; no sleep is to be got there. (Semper habet lites alternaque iurgia lectus | in quo nupta iacet.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 268. (c. A. D. 120)
A Curtaine Lecture: as it was read by a Country Farmer's Wife to her Good Man.

UNKNOWN. Title. (1638)
Ar't Asleepe Husband? A Boulster Lecture.

RICHARD BRATHWAITE. Title. (1640)
For which I have already had two curtaine-lectures, and a black and blue eye.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Virgin Widow. Act ii. (1649)
He was lying under the discipline of a curtain lecture.

ADDISON, The Tatler. No. 243. (1710)
Curtain-lectures made a restless night.

POPE, The Wife of Bath, l. 165. (1717)
She shakes the curtains with her kind advice.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. v, l. 79. (1728)
Fill'd with trouble of my own,—

A Wife who preaches in her gown,
And lectures in her night-dress!

THOMAS HOOD, The Surplice Question (a. 1845)
Mrs Caudle's Curtain Lectures.

DOUGLAS JERROLD. Title. (1846)
Midnight discourses, commonly known under the title of curtain-lectures.

F. E. SMEDLEY, Frank Fairleigh. Ch. 45. (1850)
Take no notice of what you hear said on the pillow. (Chên pien chih yen no t'ing.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No 2229. (1875)

LEECH

<sup>4</sup>
He [Cobden] is likely to mistake a crotchet for a principle and stick to it like a leech.

W. E. FORSTER. (c. 1839) In REID, Life, i, iv, 115.
It's a sticking leech you have laid on me this time.

JOSEPH PARKER, Tyne Chylde, p. 86. (1883)

<sup>5</sup>
Now to turn myself into a leech and suck the blood out of these so-called pillars of the senate. (Iam ego me convortam in hirudinem atque eorum exsugebo sanguinem, | senati qui columen client.)

PLAUTUS, Epidicus, l. 186. (c. 200 B. C.)

A leech that will not let go the skin till gorged with blood. (Non missura cutem, nisi plena cruoris, hirudo.)

HORACE, De Arte Poetica, l. 476. (c. 20 B. C.)

Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, iv, 84.

The empty leech sucks sore.

WILLIAM WALKER, Paroemiologia, p. 36. (1672)
For leech in the sense of doctor, see DOCTOR.

LEG

<sup>1</sup> While luck lasts, the highwayman shakes a loose leg.

AINSWORTH, Rookwood. Pt. iii, ch. 9. (1834)

Those who love to "shake a free leg" and lead a roving life, as they term it.

MAYHEW, Great World of London, p. 87. (1856)
To shake a loose leg: to go "on the loose."

W. C. HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 430. (1869)
It was doubly satisfactory to find the comforts of their home appreciated . . . and to be able to refute Mr. Ashton's theory that "all young men like to shake a loose leg."

MRS. LINNAEUS BANKS, Manchester Man. Ch. 28. (1876)

<sup>2</sup> I'll laugh, an' sing, an' shake my leg
As lang's I dow!

ROBERT BURNS, Second Epistle to J. Lapraik. (1785) Shake my leg: dance. In modern American slang, however, "to shake a leg" means to hurry.

It would be positively indecent for a man at a hundred to shake a leg as merrily as a man at thirty.

BESANT AND RICE, The Ten Years' Tenant. Ch. 5. (1881)

I explain that the stage is ready for them, if they like to act . . . or the dancing-room, should they wish to shake a leg.

WALTER BESANT, All Sorts and Conditions of Men. Ch. 18. (1882)

<sup>3</sup> Ful longe were his legges, and ful lene,
Y-lyk a staf, ther was no calf y-sene.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 593. (c. 1386)

His calves are gone down to grass.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 232. (1678)

<sup>4</sup> The one-legged never stumble.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 371. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

<sup>5</sup> A broken leg is not healed by a silk stocking.
CHEALES, Proverbial Folk-Lore, p. 122. (1875)

<sup>6</sup> The wall is very low, sir, and your servant will give you a leg up.

DICKENS, The Pickwick Papers, Ch. 16. (1837)
She was now devoting all her energies to giving them a leg up.

W. E. NORRIS, Misadventure. Ch. 4. (1890)

<sup>7</sup> They took leg-bail and ran awa
With pith and speed.

ROBERT FERGUSSON, Poems, p. 234. (1774)

I'll give him leg-bail for my honesty.

JOHN O'KEEFE, The Positive Man. Act ii, sc. 2. (1784)

To give leg bail and land security, to run away.

FRANCIS GROSE, A Classical Dictionary of the Vulgar Tongue: Leg. (1785)

Shall we stand fast . . . or shall we e'en give him leg-bail?

WALTER SCOTT, Ivanhoe. Ch. 19. (1819)

I'll give them leg bail.

CHARLES BURKE, Rip Van Winkle. Act i, sc. 3. (1865)

<sup>8</sup> Who hath not a hart, let hym haue legges.
(Chi non ha cuore, habbia gambe.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 28. (1578)

Who hasn't courage, let him have legs. (Qui n'a cœur qu'il ait jambes.)

CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbs, p. 383. (1856)

<sup>9</sup> A wooden Leg is better than no Leg.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 483. (1732)

<sup>10</sup> Whoso streket his fot forthere that the whitel
[blanket] will reche, he schal streken in the straw.

ROBERT GROSSETESTE, Boke of Husbandrie. (c. 1240)

For whan he streyneth hym to stretche the strawe in his schetes.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers the Plowman. Text B, passus xiv, l. 233. (1377)

Stretch not your leg beyond the sheet. (Nadie tienda más la pierna de cuanto fuere larga la sábana.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 53. (1615)

There are two other forms for the same proverb, "Cada uno estiende la pierna como tiene la cubierta" (Everyone stretches his leg according to his coverlet), and "No estirar la pierna mas de lo que alcanza la manta" (Don't stretch out the legs farther than the coverlet reaches). A proverb in many languages.

Every one stretcheth his legs according to his coverlet.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 153. (1640)

Stretch your legs according to your coverlet.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 20. (1678)

Stretch out thy legs in proportion to the length of the garment.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 411. (1817)

He who does not stretch himself according to the coverlet finds his feet uncovered. (Wer sich nicht nach der Decke streckt, dem bleiben die Füße unbedeckt.)

GOETHE, Sprüche in Reimen. Pt. iii. (c. 1825)

The German form of the proverb is, "Man muss sich strecken nach der Decken."

Stretch your legs according to the length of your blanket, and never spend all you have.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Pictures, p. 136. (1880)

Every one stretches his legs according to the length of his coverlet.

MERRIMAN, In Kedar's Tents. Ch. 4. (1897)

Stretch your legs to the extent of your carpet.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 520 (1938) An Egyptian proverb.

DON'T STRETCH YOUR ARM FARTHER THAN YOUR SLEEVE WILL REACH, see under ARM.

1 I turned me to the Basha . . . and made a long leg.

RICHARD HAKLUYT, Voyages, Vol. ii, ch. 1, p. 152. (1599) A bow made by drawing back one leg and bending the other.

He learned to kisse his hand, and make a legge both together.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Characters: A Country Gentleman. (1613)

Made his leg and went away.

SWIFT, Apollo Outwitted, l. 44. (1709)

Each made a leg in the approved rural fashion.

TROLLOPE, Barchester Towers. Ch. 23. (1857)

2 Vse Legges, & haue Legges: Vse Law and haue Law. Vse nether & haue nether.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Marginalia (1913), p. 188.

(c. 1582) Cited by Ray and Fuller.

Use limbs and have limbs; the more thou dost, the more thou mayest.

SAMUEL WARD, Sermons (1862), p. 25. (1636)

Work legs, and win legs; hain [spare] legs, and tine [lose] legs.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 342. (1721)

3 Long be thy legs, and short be thy lyfe.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

4 I must turn my cup of sorrows quite up, And drink it to the dregs,—

For there is not another man alive, In the world, to pull my legs!

THOMAS HOOD, The Last Man, l. 219. (1826)

Hood is referring to the fact that, before the invention of the long drop in executions by hanging, the friends of the criminal were permitted to pull his legs in order to shorten his sufferings.

He preached, an' at last drew the auld body's leg, Sae the kirk got the gatherins o' our Aunty Meg.

ALEXANDER ANDERSON, Rhymes (E.D.D.), p. 17. (1867) Got around her, humbugged her.

I shall have to pull the leg of that chap Mike. He is always trying to do me.

WILLIAM BROWN CHURCHWARD, Blackbirding in the South Pacific, p. 215. (1888) The earliest discovered use of "pull the leg," in the sense of deceive or humbug.

Jamie's been drawing your leg [befooling you.]

IAN MACLAREN (JOHN WATSON), Beside the Bonnie Brier Bush, p. 200. (1895) KIPLING, The Tomb of His Ancestors. (1897)

You can't pull my leg.

O. HENRY, A Little Local Color. (1910)

The story of "Tell it to the Marines" . . . is a leg-pull of my youth.

W. P. DUKY, Letter to Gen. George Richards, 4 Feb., 1931.

He was, as the English say, "pulling my leg."

CLARE BOOTH, Europe in the Spring, p. 291. (1940)

5 Badger-like, one leg shorter than the other.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 20. (1659)

6 Com behynd and folow me, Set out the better leg I warne the.

HENRY MEDWALL, A Goodly Interlude of Nature, l. 825. (c. 1500)

They . . . set the better legge before.

LAURENCE TOMSON, tr., Calvin on Timothy, p. 17. (1579) See under FOOT.

7 My husband goes upon his last hour now.— On his last legs, I am sure.

MIDDLETON AND MASSINGER, The Old Law. Act v, sc. 1. (1599)

He had brought me to my last legs.

DRYDEN, Evening's Love. Act ii, sc. 1. (1668)

He goes on his last legs.

RAY, Proverbs. p. 89. (1678) Of a bankrupt.

What would poor battered rakes and younger brothers do, when on their last legs, were it not for good-natured widows?

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Sir Charles Grandison, iv, 50. (1753)

The "regular drama" is on its last legs.

HONE, Every-Day Book, ii, 1013. (1827)

The bishop was quite on his last legs.

TROLLOPE, Barchester Towers. Ch. 1. (1857)

The French say, "N'avoir plus ses jambes des quinze ans" (To have no longer the legs of a fifteen-year-old), not to be as young as one once was. Similarly, "Avoir ses jambes des quinze ans," to be lively, although getting on in years.

8 The latter hypothesis . . . has not a leg to stand on.

ST. GEORGE MIVART, On Truth, p. 131. (1889)

As an argument, it hasn't a leg to stand on.

OLIVER ONIONS, Beckoning Fair One. Ch. 3. (1911)

Your argument is without a leg to stand on.

M. D. POST, Uncle Abner, p. 31. (1918)

If you went into court you wouldn't have a leg to stand on.

E. S. GARDNER, The Case of the Drowsy Mosquito, p. 148. (1943)

9 I take me to my legges, I flye a waye, je me mets en fuyte.

JEHAN PALSGRAVE, La Langue Françoise, p. 749. (1530)

Every man betake him to his legs.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, i, 4, 34. (1594)

Taste your legs, sir; put them to motion.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, iii, 1, 87. (1599)

Let us legge it a little.

DEACON AND WALKER, Spirits and Devils, p. 3 (1601)

The fellow . . . laid his legges on his neck and got him gone.

UNKNOWN, Tarltion's Jests, p. 41. (1611)

He was a legging it off hot foot.

T. C. HALIBURTON, The Clockmaker, Ser. i, ch. 24. (1837)

He would rather trust to his legs.

SIR SAMUEL BAKER, Nile Tributaries. Ch. 11. (1867)

1- These people . . . will run themselves off their legs.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 25 Nov., 1668.

Soon walk him off his legs.

G. M. FENN, In an Alpine Valley, i, 205. (1894)

2 He ran away no faster than his legs could carry him.

JOHN PROCTOR, The History of Wyatt's Rebellion, sig. 14b. (1555)

I can't go faster than my legs will carry me.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

I thank Heaven my legs are very able to carry me.

FIELDING, Tom Jones. Bk. vii, ch. 7. (1749)

3 About him thy leg was laid.

SAEMUND(?), Poetic Edda: Lokasenna. St. 20. (c. 900) Loki is accusing Gefjun of committing adultery.

An' I'll ne'er lift a lawless leg
Again upon her.

ROBERT BURNS, Holy Willie's Prayer. (c. 1785)

4 Set him upon his legs and make him a man for ever.

ROBERT SANDERSON, Sermons, i, 251. (1624)

I must now stand upon my own legs.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 7 Jan., 1666.

I engage in a few weeks to set you again upon your own legs.

BROOKE, The Fool of Quality, iii, 117. (1760)

A man who has plenty of brains generally falls on his legs.

LORD LYTTON, Night and Morning, ii, 3. (1841)

5 We must have you find your legs.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, ii, 1, 147. (1590)

The fighting men . . . could scarcely keep their legs.

MACAULAY, History of England. Ch. 12. (1855)

6 If one pair of legs had not bene worth two paire of hands He had had his bearde shaven if my nayles wold have served.

JOHN STILL, Gammer Gurton's Needle. Act iv, sc. 3. (1575)

One pair of running legs is worth two pair of working hands.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Works, iii, 52. (1597)

One pair of heels sometimes is worth two pair of hands.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 2. (1659)

One pair of heels is often worth two pair of hands. Always for cowards.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 153. (1678)

Take the bent, Mr. Rashleigh. Make ae pair o' legs worth twa pair o' hands.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 25. (1817)

I made two pair of legs (and these were not mine, but my mare's) worth one pair of hands. . . . I e'en pricked off with myself.

WALTER SCOTT, The Monastery. Ch. 13. (1820)

7 I have stretch'd my legs up Tottenham Hill to overtake you.

WALTON, The Compleat Angler. Ch. 1. (1653)

We have landed to "stretch our legs."

W. H. MAXWELL, Sports and Adventures in Scotland. Ch. 12. (1844)

LEGACY, see Inheritance

LEISURE

See also Ease, Idleness

8 Leisure, with dignity. (Cum dignitate otium.)

CICERO, Pro Publio Sestio. Sec. 45. (c. 60 B. C.)

Usually quoted, "Otium cum dignitate," and referred to by Cicero as a thing supremely desirable to all good and sane men. He praises it again in his Epistle to Lentulus, ad fin.

What is more delightful than lettered leisure? (Quid est enim dulcius otio litterato?)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. v, ch. 36, sec. 105. (45 B. C.) Leisure devoted to literature. "Otium umbratile" (Leisure in the shade, retired leisure) is another proverbial phrase.

At leisure, as flax groweth.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 304. (1639)

9 He who knows not how to use his leisure has more work than when he is working at work. (Otio qui nescit uti, | plus negoti habet quam cum est negotium in negotio.)

ENNIUS, Iphigenia. Frag. 241, Loeb. (c. 180 B. C.) Quoted by AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticae, bk. xix, ch. 10, sec. 12. Another form is, "Ex otio plus negotii quam ex negotio habemus" (We have more occupation from our leisure than from our occupation).

He was never less at leisure than when at leisure. (Numquam se minus otiosum esse quam cum otiosus.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. iii, ch. 1, sec. 1. (c. 45 B. C.) Quoted as a saying of Scipio Africanus.

10 Leisure, that seductive evil. (σχολή, τερπνόν κακόν.)

EURIPIDES, Hippolytus, l. 384. (c. 428 B. C.)

11 Dearest and greatest of delights to men, leisure. (τὴν φιλάττην μὲν πρῶτον ἀνθρώποις σχολήν.)

EURIPIDES, Ion, l. 634. (c. 419 B. C.)

Leisure is the best of all possessions. (ἐπὶ πάντων σχολήν ὡς κάλλιστον κτημάτων.)

SOCRATES, Apothegm. (c. 410 B. C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Socrates. Bk. ii, sec. 30.

Leisure nourishes the body, the mind too feeds upon it. (Otia corpus alunt, animus quoque pascitur illis.)

OWEN, Ex Ponto. Bk. i, epis. iv, l. 21. (A. D. 13)

The Germans say, "Erholung thut Leib und Seele wohl" (Leisure does body and soul good).

The wisdom of a learned man cometh by opportunity of leisure; and he that hath little business shall become wise. (Sapientia scribae in tempore vacuitatis: et qui minoratur actu, sapientiam percipiet.)

Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, xxxviii, 24. (c. 190 B.C.)
Leisure is the mother of Philosophy.

THOMAS HOBBS, Leviathan. Pt. iv, ch. 46. (1651)
All intellectual improvement arises from leisure; all leisure arises from one working for another.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, BOSWELL, Life, 13 April, 1773.
There is luck in leisure.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 522. (1855)
Increased means and increased leisure are the two civilisers of man.

DISRAELI, Speech, Manchester, 3 April, 1872.
To be able to fill leisure intelligently is the last product of civilization.

BERTRAND RUSSELL, The Conquest of Happiness, p. 210. (1930)

1
Employ thy Time well if thou meanest to gain Leisure.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1758. For, as another proverb says, "Leisure is the reward of labor."

2
A Life of Leisure and a Life of Laziness are two things.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 240. (1732)
FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1746, 1758.

3
Leisure without learning, is a death and sepulture of a live man.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 26. (1574) Pettie, tr.

The wise holdeth opinion, that to enjoy leisure well, it is necessary that wee employ it in learning somewhat.

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, ii, 246.

4
To be for one day entirely at leisure is to be for one day an immortal.

H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs. No. 287. (1937) Quoted by JAN STRUTHER, Mrs. Miniver, p. 11. (1940)

5
He hath no leisure who useth it not.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 896. (1640)
It is not leisure that is not used.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1753.

Leisure is Time for doing something useful.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1758.

6
For all well-governed peoples there is a work assigned to each man in the city which he must perform, and no one has leisure to be sick and doctor himself all his days. (οὐδενὶ σχολὴ διὰ βίου κάμνειν λατρουμένῳ.)

PLATO, Republic. Bk. iii, sec. 406C. (c. 375 B.C.)
Good heavens! how did he find time to die when there was so much going on? (ὦ Ἡρόκλεις, πῶς ἐσχόλασεν ἀνὴρ ἀποθαρῆν ἐν τοσούτοις πράγμασι;)

EPAMINONDAS, of a man who fell ill and died just before the battle of Leuctra. (371 B.C.)

Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 136D.

'Zounds! how has he the leisure to be sick, In such a juggling time?

SHAKESPEARE, 1 Henry IV, iv, 1, 17. (1597)

7
Leisure breeds lust. (I tsē ssū yin.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1822. (1875)

8
Leisure without study is death. (Otium sine litteris mors est.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxxii, sec. 3. (a. A. D. 64)

What has more leisure than a worm? (Quid est otiosius verme?)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxxvii, sec. 19.

It is more difficult for men to obtain leisure from themselves than from the law. (Difficilius homines a se otium impetrant quam a lege.)

SENECA, De Brevitate Vitae. Sec. 20. (c. A. D. 49)

9
He enjoys true leisure who has time to improve his soul's estate.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 11 Feb., 1840.

What is leisure but opportunity for more complete and entire action?

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 13 Nov., 1841.

A broad margin of leisure is as beautiful in a man's life as in a book.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 28 Dec., 1852.

LENDING

See also Borrowing and Lending

10
When his questioner asked, "How about money-lending?" Cato replied: "How about murder?" (Cum ille, qui quaesierat, dixisset: "Quid faenerari?" tum Cato: "Quid hominem," inquit, "occidere?")

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. ii, sec. 89. (c. 45 B.C.)

To lend is a friendly act, but not to lend is a duty.

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 686. (1872)

11
If you would lose a troublesome Visitor, lend him money.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1744.

12
It is an old proverb that the wife and the sword may be shewed, but not lent.

EDWARD HELLOWES, tr., Guevara's Familiar Epistles, p. 509. (1574)

Three things a man not lendeth rife,

His horse, his faithful sword, his wife.

TIMOTHY KENDALL, Flowers of Epigrammes, p. 284. (1577)

Three things a man ought not to lend, His wife, his horse, his armes.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 25. (1578)

Thy sword, thy horse, and eke thy wife,

Lend not at all, lest it breed strife.

Countryman's New Commonwealth, p. 43. (1647)

13
Lend never that thing thou needest most.

HILLS, Commonplace-Book, p. 131. (c. 1530)

He that lends his pot may seethe his kail in his loof [palm of hand].

ALLAN RAMSAY, Scottish Proverbs. (1737)

14
Better give a penny than lend twenty.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 14. (1659)

Better give a Shilling than lend and lose half a Crown.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 895. (1732)
Give a shilling sooner than lend half a crown.

CHEALES, Proverbial Folk-Lore, p. 101. (1875)

1
A small sum makes a debtor, a larger sum an enemy. (Aes debitorem leve, gravius inimicum facit.)

DECIMUS LABERIUS, Mime. (c. 60 B.C.) The Italians say, "Il piccol prestito, fa un amico;
e il grande, un nemico."

2
He that lendeth to all that will borowe, sheweth great good will, but lyttle wit.

LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 229. (1580)

The leful [lending] man is the beggar's brother.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 315. (1721)

3
Whoever gold or silver lends,
In losing two good things he ends:
Both his money and his friends.
(Quiconque preste or ou argent,
Deux choses il perd entièrement,
Sçavoir: l'amy et l'argent.)

GABRIEL MAURIER, Trésor des Sentences. (c. 1550)

For loan oft loses both itself and friend.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, i, 3, 76. (1600)

Who lends loseth double.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 217. (1666)

He that doth lend will lose his friend. Qui preste aux amis perd au double. He that lends to his friend, looseth double, i. e. both money and friend.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 113. (1670)

Lend your money and lose your friend. It is not the lending of our money that loses our friend, but the demanding it again.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 240. (1721)

A ready Way to lose your Friend, is to lend him Money.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 378. (1732)
Lend money to an enemy, and thou 'lt gain him; to a friend, and thou 'lt lose him.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1740.

Lending nurses enmity.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 108. (1817)

The Spanish form is, "Quien presta al amigo, cobra un enemigo."

Very often he that his money lends, loses both his gold and his friends.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk. Ch. 4. (1869)

Lend money to a bad debtor and he will hate you.

H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs. No. 473. (1937)

4
If you lend any one any thing, it's no longer lent, it's lost. (Si quoi mutuom quid dederis, fit pro proprio perditum.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus, l. 1051. (c. 194 B.C.)

Lend not unto him that is mightier than thyself; for if thou lendest him, count it but lost.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), viii, 12. (c. 190 B.C.)

He who prefers to give Linus the half of what he wishes to borrow, rather than lend him the whole, prefers to lose only the half. (Dimidium donare Lino quam credere totum | qui malvult, malvult perdere dimidium.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. i, epig. 75. (A.D. 85)

5
Charge for helping of wasters is but losse. (Tu ne doibs point aider les foles prodigues car tes despens sont en eulx perdus.)

SAINT BERNARD, Regisme de Mesnaige. (c. 1130)
He that lends, gives.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 788. (1640)

Lend and lose; so play fools.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 110. (1678)

Them ez lends, spends.

E. R. SILL, Wize Sawz. (c. 1887)

Lending is like throwing away; being paid is like finding something.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 367. (1938)

A Chinese proverb.

6
A good man sheweth favour, and lendeth. (Iucundus homo qui miseretur et commodat.)
Old Testament: Psalms, cxii, 5. (c. 250 B.C.)

7
Out of my lean and low ability
I'll lend you something.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, iii, 4, 378. (1599)

Lend not beyond thy Ability, nor refuse to lend out of thy Ability.

WILLIAM PENN, Some Fruits of Solitude. No. 47. (1693)

8
Selde cometh lone lahdeyn hom, quoth Hendyng.

UNKNOWN, Proverbs of Hendyng. St. 25. (c. 1300)

Seldun comyth lone lawgyng home.

UNKNOWN, Douce MS, 52. (c. 1350)

A borrow'd loan should come laughing home. What a man borrows he should return with thankfulness.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 6. (1721)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6314.

9
When I lent, I had a friend;

But when I askyd, he was unkynd.

UNKNOWN, Proverbs of Wysdom, p. 163. (c. 1450)

When I lend I am a friend, when I ask I am unkind.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 169. (1639)

Similarly, "To make an enemy, lend money and ask for it again."

LETTER

10
I knew one, that when he wrote a Letter, he would put that which was most Materiall in the Post-script, as if it had been a By-matter.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Cunning. (1597)

Jove and my stars be praised! Here is yet a postscript.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, ii, 5, 187. (1599)

A woman seldom writes Her Mind, but in her Postscript.

RICHARD STEELE, The Spectator. No. 79. (1711)

The substance of a lady's letter, it has been said, always is comprised in the postscript.

MARIA EDGEWORTH, Belinda. Ch. 20. (1801)
His sayings are usually like women's letters: all the pith is in the postscript.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Boswell Redivivus. (a.1830)
Of Charles Lamb.

1
Do not answer a letter in the midst of great anger.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 366. (1938)
A Chinese proverb. Recalling the Latin proverb, "Littera scripta manet, verbum ut inane perit" (The written letter remains, as the empty word perishes).

2
If there is no news, write to say so. (Si nihil, nihil fieri.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. vi, epis. 3. (50 B. C.)
Cicero is continually exhorting Atticus to write, even if he has no news.

There is nothing to write about, you say. Well, then, write and let me know just this—that there is nothing to write about. ("Nihil est," inquis, "quod scribam." At hoc ipsum scribe, nihil esse, quod scribas, vel solum illud.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 11.
(A. D. 98)

You will say you had no news to write me; and that probably may be true; but, without news, one has always something to say to those with whom one desires to have anything to do.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 12 Jan., 1757.

The letter that he longed for never came.

PAUL DRESSER. Title and refrain of song. (1886)

3
The letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life. (τὸ γὰρ γράμμα ἀποκτείνει, τὸ δὲ πνεῦμα ζωοποιεῖ.)

New Testament: II Corinthians, iii, 6. (A. D. 57) The Vulgate is, "Littera enim occidit, Spiritus autem vivificat."

Glosing is a glorious thing, certeyn,
For lettre sleeth, so as we clerkes seyn.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Somnour's Tale, l. 85. (c. 1388)

I will obey you to the letter.

LORD BYRON, Sardanapalus, v, 1, 354. (1821)

Follow your father's commands to the letter.

HUGH CONWAY, Living or Dead. Ch. 4. (1886)

LETTER OF THE LAW, see under LAW.

4
Neither snow, nor rain, nor heat, nor gloom of night stays these couriers from the swift completion of their appointed rounds. (οὔτε νιφετός, οὐκ ὕμνος, οὐ καύμα, οὐ νύξ ἔργει μὴ οὐ κατανύσαι τὸν προκείμενον αὐτῷ δρόμον τὴν ταχίστην.)

HERODOTUS, History. Bk. viii, sec. 98. (c. 445 B. C.) Herodotus is writing of the mounted couriers of Xerxes, but the sentence has been very fittingly inscribed on the façade of the New York City postoffice.

Through rain and snow the postman always rings twice.

NORBERT DAVIS, Sally's in the Alley, p. 40. (1943)

5
Love is the marrow of friendship, and letters are the elixir of love.

JAMES HOWELL, Letters. Bk. i, sec. 1. (1645)

As keys do open chests, So letters open breasts.

JAMES HOWELL, To the Sagacious Reader.

6
A wordy and grandiloquent letter. (Verbosa et grandis epistula.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. x, l. 71. (c. A. D. 120)

This letter is too long by half a mile.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, v, 2, 54. (1595)

I have made this letter rather long only because I have not had time to make it shorter. (Je n'ai fait celle-ci plus longue que parceque je n'ai pas eu le loisir de la faire plus courte.)

PASCAL, Lettres Provinciales, 14 Dec., 1656.

Madame de Staël is credited with the similar saying, "If I had more time, I should have written you a shorter letter."

7
Your son has made a Bellerophon of me. (Bellerophonem tuos me fecit filius.)

PLAUTUS, Bacchides, l. 810. (c. 190 B. C.)

While Bellerophon, in Greek mythology the son of Sisyphus, was a guest at the court of Proteus, King of Argos, the king's wife fell in love with him, and when he repulsed her, accused him of trying to violate her. Proteus, unwilling to break the laws of hospitality by killing Bellerophon under his own roof, sent him to his father-in-law Iobates, bearing a letter requesting that Bellerophon be put to death. Hence the proverbial expression, "Bellerophonis litterae" (letters of Bellerophon). It may be added that Bellerophon defeated the Chimaera, the Solymi and the Amazons, and slew the warriors who had been placed in ambush to murder him, so Iobates finally despaired of killing him, and gave him his daughter to wife. It has been questioned whether it was really a letter which Bellerophon carried. Homer calls it σήματα λυγρά (baneful tokens). ZENOBIUS, Adagia, ii, 87 (c. A. D. 130), gives the phrase as Βελλεροφόντης τὰ γράμματα, which is cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, vi, 82.

The banquet of Phocus. (Φώκου ἔρανος.)

ZENOBIUS, Adagia, vi, 37. (c. A. D. 130) Phocus was slain by the suitors he had invited for his daughter. The same idea as "Letters of Bellerophon." ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, viii, 39, gives the Latin as "Phoci convivium."

8
Correspondences are like small clothes before the invention of suspenders: it is impossible to keep them up.

SYDNEY SMITH, Letter to Mrs. Crowe, 31 Jan., 1841.

9
Let a letter expect the messenger, not the messenger the letter.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 127. (1666)

Let your letter stay for the post, not the post for the letter.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 15. (1670)

LIBEL

<sup>1</sup> Dost not know that old Mansfield, who writes like the Bible,
Says the more 'tis a truth, sir, the more 'tis a libel?

ROBERT BURNS, Lines. (c. 1787) The reference is to Judge William Murray, first Earl of Mansfield.

"The greater the truth, the greater the libel," said Warburton, with a sneer.

LORD LYTTON, Pelham. Ch. 25. (1828)

The greater the truth the worse the libel.

THOMAS MOORE, A Case of Libel, l. 61. (a.1852)

The greater the truth, the greater the libel. A maxim of the law in vogue . . . when Mansfield [1784] presided over the King's Bench. . . . The maxim is said to have originated in the Star Chamber.

S. A. BENT, Familiar Short Sayings, p.371. (1882)

LIBERALITY

See also Generosity; Gifts and Giving

<sup>2</sup> The liberalitie of a poore man, is his good wyl. (La liberalita di vn pouero, si è il suo bon volere.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 68. (1578)

<sup>3</sup> Liberty should as well have banks as a stream.

FULLER, The Holy State. Bk. i, ch. 11. (1642)

<sup>4</sup> He cannot be termed munificent who returns liberality for liberality, but he who returns liberality for selfishness.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Peninim (Choice of Pearls). No. 390. (c. 1050)

<sup>5</sup> The liberal deviseth liberal things; and by liberal things shall he stand. (Quae digna sunt principe, cogitabit, et ipse super duces stabit.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, xxxii, 8. (c. 900 B. C.)

<sup>6</sup> Liberty consists less in giving much than in giving at the right time. (La libéralité consiste moins à donner beaucoup qu'à donner à propos.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères: Du Cœur. (1688)

Liberty is not giving much, but giving wisely.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1748.

<sup>7</sup> What is called liberality is often merely the vanity of giving. (Ce qu'on nomme libéralité n'est le plus souvent que la vanité de donner.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 263. (1665)

<sup>8</sup> I practice frugality; therefore I am able to be liberal.

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh King, lxvii, 3. (c. 550 B. C.)

All liberality should have for its basis and support frugality.

RICHARD STEELE, The Spectator, 7 April, 1712.

<sup>9</sup> The liberal soul shall be made fat: and he that watereth shall be watered also himself. (Anima, quae benedicit, impinguabitur: et qui inebriat, ipse quoque inebriabitur.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xi, 25. (c. 350 B. C.)

<sup>10</sup> "Which is the better, courage or liberality?" they asked a sage. He replied, "He who possesses liberality has no need of courage."

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. ii, Apologue 49. (c. 1258)

Graved on the tomb of Bahram Gur we read:

"Of the strong arm the generous have no need."

SADI, Gulistan, ii, 49. (Eastwick, tr.)

The liberal man who enjoys and bestows is better than the devotee who fasts and lays by.

SADI, Gulistan, viii, 60.

<sup>11</sup> His heart and hand both open and both free.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus, iv, 5, 100. (1601)

His liberality knew no bottom but an empty purse.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies, iii, 436. (a. 1661)

LIBERTY

See also Freedom

<sup>12</sup> Chains or conquest, liberty or death.

ADDISON, Cato. Act ii, sc. 4, last line. (1712)

Is life so dear or peace so sweet as to be purchased at the price of chains and slavery? Forbid it, Almighty God! I know not what course others may take; but as for me, give me liberty, or give me death!

PATRICK HENRY, Speech, Virginia House of Delegates, 23 March, 1775. This is the well-known version of Henry's speech as given by William Wirt in his Life of Henry, published in 1817. Where he got it is not certainly known, but there is little doubt that it is substantially what Henry actually said.

<sup>13</sup> Maecenas took the liberty to tell him.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Friendship. (1597)

Maybe you have made a stolen march, and taken what they call thieves' liberty.

MRS. M. M. SHERWOOD, Waste Not, Want Not Ch. 2. (1824)

<sup>14</sup> The tree of liberty grows only when watered by the blood of tyrants. (L'arbre de la liberté ne croît qu'arrosé par le sang des tyrants.)

BERTRAND BARÈRE, Speech, French National Assembly, 1792.

The tree of liberty must be refreshed from time to time with the blood of tyrants. It is its natural manure.

JEFFERSON, Letter to W. S. Smith, 13 Nov., 1787.

The libation of freedom . . . must sometimes be quaffed in blood.

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 16. (1843)

<sup>15</sup> O sweet name of liberty! (O nomen dulce libertatis!)

CICERO, In Verrem. No. v, sec. 63. (70 B. C.)

The Mountain Nymph, sweet Liberty.

JOHN MILTON, L'Allegro, l. 36. (1632)

O Liberty! Liberty! how many crimes are committed in thy name! (O Liberté! Liberté! que de crimes on commet dans ton nom!)

MADAME ROLAND, on the scaffold of the guillotine, Place de la Concorde, Paris, 9 Nov., 1793. ALPHONSE DE LAMARTINE, Histoire des Girondins, bk. II, p. 8, is the authority for this. He says, "A colossal statue of Liberty then stood in the middle of the Place de la Concorde, on the spot now occupied by the Obelisk; the scaffold was erected beside this statue. . . . Madame Roland stepped lightly up to the scaffold, and bowing before the statue of Liberty, exclaimed, 'O Liberty! Liberty! how many crimes are committed in thy name!' She then resigned herself to the hands of the executioner, and in a few seconds her head fell into the basket placed to receive it." Other authorities allege that Lamartine was inventing history, and that what Madame Roland actually said was "O Liberté, comme on t'a jouée" (O Liberty, how thou hast been trifled with), and that this was not on the scaffold, but some time before her arrest.

1 Where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty. (οὐ δὲ τὸ πνεῦμα Κυρίου, ἐλευθερία.)

New Testament: II Corinthians, iii, 17. (57 A.D.) The Vulgate is, "Ubi autem Spiritus Domini: ibi libertas.")

2 Much liberty brings men to the gallows.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Bandon. (1611)

Too much liberty corrupts an angel.

Terence Made English, p. 123. (1694)

3 The condition upon which God has given liberty to man is eternal vigilance.

JOHN PHILPOT CURRAN, Speech upon the Right of Election, 10 July, 1790.

Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, Public Opinion. Address delivered before the Massachusetts Antislavery Society, 28 Jan., 1852. Mr. Phillips was said to have been quoting Jefferson, but in a letter dated 14 April, 1879, he asserted that the phrase had never been found in Jefferson's writings.

The inescapable price of liberty is an ability to preserve it from destruction.

GENERAL DOUGLAS MCARTHUR, Letter to President Quezon of the Philippines. (1943)

4 Those, who would give up essential liberty to purchase a little temporary safety, deserve neither liberty nor safety.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN(?), An Historical Review of the Constitution and Government of Pennsylvania. (1759) This was a pamphlet published anonymously in London. Suspicion was immediately directed to Franklin as its author, but in a letter to Isaac Norris, dated 9 June, 1759, Franklin wrote, "The book relating to the affairs of Pennsylvania is now published. . . . The Proprietor is enraged. . . . He supposes me the author, but he is mistaken. . . . It is wrote by a gentleman said to be one of the best pens in England. . . . I agreed to encourage the publication by engaging for the expence." CARL VAN DOREN, Benjamin Franklin, p. 284, says the man was Richard Jackson, an English lawyer. The guess of the present compiler is that Franklin interpolated the quoted sentence when he edited the pamphlet, as he admitted he did.

5 Quhy in the beginning of your new Euangell preached ye libertie of conscience.

JOHN HAY, Catholic Tractates, p. 61. (1580)

He would suffer them to enjoy the libertie of their conscience.

ROBERT JOHNSON, Kingdoms and Commonwealths, p. 250. (1601)

The liberty of the press is . . . essential to the nature of a free state.

SIR WILLIAM BLACKSTONE, Commentaries on the Laws of England, iv, 151. (1769)

As for the liberty of the press, . . . it must be restrained.

TOBIAS SMOLLETT, Humphry Clinker, 2 June, 1771.

6 The more liberty you give away the more you will have.

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL, Speech, Boston, 20 Sept., 1880.

7 We are not to expect to be translated from despotism to liberty in a featherbed.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to Lafayette. (1790) The disease of liberty is catching.

JEFFERSON, Letter to Lafayette, 1820. In an other place he declares, "The ground of liberty must be gained by inches."

The boisterous sea of liberty is never without a wave.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to Lafayette. (1820)

In a letter to Mazzei (1796), he wrote, "Timid men . . . prefer the calm of despotism to the boisterous sea of liberty."

8 Proclaim liberty throughout all the land unto all the inhabitants thereof. (Vocabis remissionem cunctis habitatoribus terrae tuae.)

Old Testament: Leviticus, xxv, 10. (c. 570 B.C.)

In a letter written by a committee of the Pennsylvania Provincial Assembly, 1 Nov., 1751, ordering a bell for the tower of the new State House at Philadelphia, it was directed that this sentence from the Bible should be inscribed around it "well-shaped in large letters." Tradition says that it was this bell, still preserved in Independence Hall, Philadelphia, which announced the signing of the Declaration of Independence, 4 July, 1776.

9 My wood and hole, secure from alarms, will solace me with homely vetch. (Me silva cavusque | tutus ab insidiis tenui solabitur ervo.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. II, sat. vi, l. 116. (30 B.C.)

This is the way Horace concludes his long version of the fable of the City Mouse and the Country Mouse.

I would not be a king, if I had to lose my liberty. (Regnare nolo, liber ut non sim mihi.)

PHÆDRUS, Fables. Bk. iii, fable 7. (c. 25 B.C.)

This is the fable of The Wolf and the Dog.

The dog was telling the wolf how well he was fed, while all he had to do was to guard the house, and the wolf was about to join him, when he noticed that the dog's neck showed the mark of a chain. Even more famous is the Aesopian fable of the Town Mouse and the Country Mouse, where the country mouse says, "Free from care and at liberty, may acorns be my food!"

It is better to eat barley bread and sit on the ground, than to gird oneself with a golden girdle and stand up to serve.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. i, Apologue 36. (c. 1258)

Let one loaf content thy belly rather than bow thy back to the ground in others' service.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. i, Apologue 36.

I had rather munch a crust of brown bread and an onion in a corner, without ado or ceremony, than feed upon a turkey at another man's table, where I am forced to chew slowly, drink little, wipe my mouth every minute, and cannot sneeze or cough, or do other things that are the privileges of liberty and solitude.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1605)

A bean in liberty is better than a comfit in prison.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 655.

(1640) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 9. (1732)

Lean Liberty is better than fat Slavery.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3158. (1732)

"An 't please Your Honour," quoth the peasant, "This same dessert is not so pleasant;

Give me again my hollow tree,

A crust of bread and Liberty!"

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 6, l. 218. (1732)

After all, there is nothing like "my crust of bread and liberty."

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Endymion. Ch. 73. (1880)

Liberty is the right to do everything that the laws permit. (La liberté est le droit de faire tout ce que les lois permettent.)

MONTESQUIEU, De l'Esprit des Loix. Bk. xi, ch.

6. (1748) Improving upon the older Latin law proverb, "Libertas est potestas faciendi id quod iure licet" (Liberty is the power of doing what is allowed by law).

Liberty here means to do each as he pleases; to care for nothing and nobody, and cheat everybody.

WM. FAUX, Memorable Days in America. (1823)

We have no liberty except the liberty to behave ourselves.

E. W. HOWE, Sinner Sermons. (1926)

He that would make his own liberty secure must guard even his enemy from oppression.

THOMAS PAINE, Dissertation on First Principles of Government, p. 242. (a. 1809)

Free are these halls, and I have my own liberty. (Liberæ sunt aedis, liber sum autem ego.)

PLAUTUS, Miles Gloriosus, l. 678. (c. 200 B.C.)

The nearest approach to "Liberty Hall" in classic literature.

This is Liberty-hall, gentlemen. You may do just as you please here.

GOLDSMITH, The Stoops to Conquer, ii. (1773)

Let every man do as he likes. Have I not heard you call your house Liberty Hall?

G. P. R. JAMES, The Smuggler. Ch. 7. (1845)

Once you let go your liberty, you won't easily get it back. (Semel amiseris libertatem, haud facile restitues.)

PLAUTUS, Miles Gloriosus, l. 701. (c. 200 B.C.)

Where liberty has fallen, no one dares speak freely. (Ubi libertas cecidit, audet libere nemo loqui.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 724. (c. 43 B.C.)

What in some is called liberty, in others is called licence. (Quae in aliis libertas est, in aliis licentia vocatur.)

QUINTILIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae. Bk. iii, ch.

8, sec. 48. (c. A. D. 80)

Foster-child of licence, which fools call liberty. (Alumna licentiae, quam stulti libertatem vocabant.)

TACITUS, Dial. de Oratoribus. Sec. 40. (c. A. D. 81)

Liberty begets license. (Suadetque licentia luxum.)

CLAUDIAN, In Rufinum. (c. A. D. 395) As quoted by HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 421.

License they mean when they cry Liberty!

MILTON, On the Detraction Which Followed upon My Writing Certain Treatises. (a. 1645)

Our liberties and our lives are in danger. (Libertas et anima nostra in dubio est.)

SALLUST, Bellum Catilinae. Sec. 52. (c. 41 B.C.)

Liberty is having a mind that rises superior to injury. (Libertas est animum superponere iniuriis.)

SENECA, De Constantia. Ch. 19. sec. 2. (c. A. D. 45)

Liberty! it is a word to conjure with. . . . For Liberty means Justice, and Justice is the natural law—the law of health and symmetry and strength.

HENRY GEORGE, Progress and Poverty. Bk. x, ch. 5. (1879)

Liberty means responsibility. That is why most men dread it.

SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists. (1903)

I must have liberty
Withal, as large a charter as the wind
To blow on whom I please.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, ii, 7, 47. (1600)

Liberty is a more invigorating cordial than Tokay.

WILLIAM SHENSTONE, Of Men and Manners. (1764)

<sup>1</sup> Where liberty dwells, there is my country.
(Ubi libertas, ibi patria.)

ALGERNON SIDNEY, Motto. (c. 1640) A Latin phrase of unknown authorship. "Patria cara, carior libertas" (Fatherland is dear, but dearer still is liberty), is a similar one.

Libertas et natale Solum

Fine Words; I wonder where you stole 'em.

SWIFT, Whitshed's Motto on His Coach, l. 1. (1724) William Whitshed, Chief Justice of the King's Bench in Ireland, whom Swift lampooned upon several occasions, because of his prosecution of the printer of the Drapier's Letters. "Libertas et natale solum": Liberty and my native country.

<sup>2</sup> Fair Liberty was all his cry;
For her he stood prepared to die.

SWIFT, On the Death of Dr. Swift, l. 411. (1731)

Liberty's in every blow! Let us do, or die!

ROBERT BURNS, Scots Wha Hae. (1794)

"Make way for liberty!" he cried,
Made way for liberty, and died.

JAMES MONTGOMERY, Patriot's Pass-Word. (a. 1854)

<sup>3</sup> With empty praise of liberty. (Inani iactatione libertatis.)

TACITUS, Agricola. Sec. 42. (c. A. D. 98)

<sup>4</sup> The supremacy of the people tends to liberty.
(Populi imperium iuxta libertatem.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. vi, sec. 42. (c. A. D. 116)

Liberty is given by nature even to mute animals.
(Libertatem natura etiam mutis animalibus datam.)

TACITUS, Histories. Bk. iv, sec. 17.

<sup>5</sup> Liberty is the best of all things. (Libertas optima rerum.)

SIR WILLIAM WALLACE. (c. 1300) Quoting a medieval proverb. A Greek proverb, ἐπὶ πάντος ἡ εὐθεπλία (Above all, Liberty!), is said to have been the favorite motto of John Selden.

Liberty is the only true riches: of all the rest we are at once the masters and the slaves.

HAZLITT, Commonplaces. No. 2. (a. 1830)

<sup>6</sup> Liberty, when it begins to take root, is a plant of rapid growth.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Letter to James Madison, 2 March, 1788.

<sup>7</sup> God grants liberty only to those who love it, and are always ready to guard and defend it.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Speech, U.S. Senate, 3 June, 1834.

There is no liberty without security, and no security without unity.

ANDRÉ MAUROIS (EMIL HERZOG), Speech, at 45th annual convention of the National Association of Manufacturers, New York, 12 Dec., 1940

<sup>8</sup> Liberty is the only thing you cannot have unless you are willing to give it to others.

WILLIAM ALLEN WHITE, Editorial, Emporia (Kan.) Gazette, 24 Oct., 1940.

<sup>9</sup> I have always in my own thought summed up individual liberty . . . in the phrase that is common in the sporting world, "A free field and no favor."

WOODROW WILSON, Speech, at Washington, 29 Jan., 1915.

LIBRARY

See also Books, Reading

<sup>10</sup> The true University of these days is a collection of books.

CARLYLE, On Heroes and Hero-Worship. Lect. v. (1840)

<sup>11</sup> These are the tombs of such as cannot die.

GEORGE CRABBE, The Library. (1781)

A library is but the soul's burial-ground.

H. W. BEECHER, Star Papers: Oxford. (a. 1887)

<sup>12</sup> It is a vanity to persuade the world one hath much learning by getting a great library. As soon shall I believe every one is valiant that hath a well furnish'd armoury.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: Of Books. (1642)

A few good books is better than a library.

WILLIAM RAMSAY, Gentleman's Companion. (1672)

The richest minds need not large libraries.

AMOS BRONSON ALCOTT, Table Talk: Learning-Books. (1877)

<sup>13</sup> No place affords a more striking conviction of the vanity of human hopes than a public library.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Rambler, 23 March, 1751.

<sup>14</sup> My library Was dukedom large enough.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, i, 2, 109. (1611)

<sup>15</sup> Unlearned men of books assume the care,
As eunuchs are the guardians of the fair.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. ii, l. 83. (1728)

Meek young men grow up in libraries.

EMERSON, Nature Addresses and Lectures: The American Scholar. (c. 1875)

<sup>16</sup> A sanatorium for the mind. (ψυχῆς λαρπειον.)

UNKNOWN, Inscription, on the portal of the library at Alexandria, Egypt. (c. 200 B. C.) See DIODORUS SICULUS, History. Bk. i, ch. 49. Often translated "Medicine for the mind," or "Nourishment for the soul," but λαρπειον means a surgery or hospital—a place which one visits to be cured of some ailment. The inscription on the Royal Library at Berlin, "Nutrimentum spiritus" (Food for the soul) is perhaps an adaptation.

LICK

<sup>1</sup> Many love Christ with nothing but a lick of the tongue.

JOHN BUNYAN, Jerusalem Sinner Saved (1886), p. 113. (a. 1688)

He [Jeffries] could not reprehend without scolding . . . He call'd it giving a Lick with the rough Side of his Tongue.

ROGER NORTH, Life of F. North, p. 219. (a. 1733)

<sup>2</sup> Lick her spittle from the ground.

SIR WILLIAM DAVENANT, Albovine, iii. (1629)

Have you not known some in a low condition, to bow and scrape, lick the spittle on the ground?

JOHN WHITAKER, Uzziah, p. 24. (1646)

He should have learnt to lick spittle, and have drilled himself to crawl upon his belly.

WM. COBBETT, Political Register, xiii, 1009. (1808)
To hear his lickspittles speak you would think that a man of great and versatile talents was a miracle.

JOHN WILSON, Noctes Ambrosianae. Works (1855), i, 40. (1825)

<sup>3</sup> To lick his slipper. (Leicher sa pantoufle.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 2. (1534)

How does thy honour? Let me lick thy shoe.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, iii, 2, 27. (1611)

"For aye thy foot-licker."—Ibid, iv, 1, 219.

[The serpent] lick'd the ground whereon she trod.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ix, l. 526. (1667)

<sup>4</sup> He was puttin' in the biggest kind of licks in the way of courtin'.

JOHN S. ROBB, Squatter Life, p. 106. (1847)

Pa put in his best licks and run up the track.

G. W. PECK, Peck's Bad Boy and His Pa, p. 71. (1883)

Put in your best licks, old man.

S. E. WHITE, The Blazed Trail, p. 294. (1902)

<sup>5</sup> Away they started, "lickety-click."

JOHN S. ROBB, Squatter Life, p. 116. (1847)

Lickety split. Very fast, headlong. . . . Lickety cut and lickety liner are also used.

JOHN BARTLETT, Americanisms: Lickety. (1859)

Whip up and go lickety-split down this hill.

H. B. STOWE, Old-Town Folks, p. 358. (1869)

I up and put fer the village lickety-cut.

E. N. WESTCOTT, David Harum, p. 175. (1898)

[He] heard this machine coming toward him lickety-split.

MARY S. WATTS, Luther Nichols, p. 354. (1923)

<sup>6</sup> If anie men haue licked them selues whole youe be the same.

UNKNOWN, Discourse of the Common Weal of This Realm of England (1893), p. 32. (c. 1550) To heal wounds or sores by licking.

Who vnder a show of licking them whole, suck out euen their hart blood.

BISHOP WILLIAM BARLOW, Three Sermons, i, 129. (1596)

To lick one's self whole again.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 184. (1670)

TO LICK INTO SHAPE, see under BEAR.

LIES AND LYING

See also Falsehood; Truth and Falsehood

<sup>7</sup> But Peter said, Ananias, . . . thou hast not lied unto men, but unto God. And Ananias hearing these words fell down, and gave up the ghost. (εἶπεν δὲ ὁ Πέτρος Ἀνανία. . . οὐκ ἐψεύσω ἀνθρώποις ἀλλὰ τῷ θεῷ.)

New Testament: Acts, v, 3-5. (c. 65 A. D.) The Vulgate is, "Dixit autem Petrus: Anania, . . . non es mentitus hominibus, sed Deo." The origin of the proverbial use of Ananias to designate a liar. "Ananias Club," the mythical association composed of persons who had been called liars by President Theodore Roosevelt.

<sup>8</sup> At first the throne is set up for the liar, but at last his lies shall find him out, and they shall spit in his face.

AIKAR, Teachings. Col. ix, l. 133. (c. 550 B. C.)

<sup>9</sup> I have not lied willingly. I have not done aught with a false heart.

ANI, Papyrus: Book of the Dead, pl. 3. (c. 4000 B. C.) The only merit the Egyptians claimed before Osiris was neither to have spoken nor acted lies.

A lie he will not utter, for he is too wise. (ψεύδος δ' οὐκ ἐρέει: μάλα γὰρ πεπνυμένος ἐστί.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. iii, l. 20. (c. 850 B. C.)

Repeated in iii, 328.

I am truthful and cannot tell a lie. (νημερτής τε γὰρ εἰμι καὶ οὐκ οἶδα ψεύδεσθαι.)

UNKNOWN, Homeric Hymns: To Hermes, l. 369. (c. 600 B. C.) The Greek Anthology, bk. vii, epig. 93, records an epigram by an unknown author, οὐ ψεύδομαι | ὧδ' ἐγορεύων (In saying this I do not lie).

On peril of my lyf, I shal not lye.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. iv, l. 113. (c. 1380)

He was never known to make a Ly.

SIR WALTER RALEGH, Mahomet, p. 146. (a. 1618)

Father, I cannot tell a lie. I did it with my little hatchet.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, when his father asked who had cut down the cherry tree. (c. 1738)

According to "PARSON" MASON LOCKE WEEMS, A History of the Life and Death, Virtues and Exploits, of General George Washington (1918), p. 23. (1800)

I never lied save to shield a woman or myself.

RING LARDNER, Ex Parte. (1926)

I was the liftman. I did it with my little button.

NOAIO MARSH, Death of a Peer, p. 249. (1940)

I did it with my little hatchet.

P. A. TAYLOR, Six Iron Spiders, p. 187. (1942)

<sup>10</sup> When they speak the truth they are not believed. (λέγωντων ἀληθῆ, μὴ πιστεύεσθαι.)

ARISTOTLE, when asked "What is the reward of liars?" (c. 340 B. C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Aristotle. Sec. 17.

As a rule we do not believe a liar, even when he speaks the truth. (Mendaci homini, ne verum quidem dicenti, credere soleamus.)

CICERO, De Divinatione. Bk. ii, ch. 71, sec. 146. (44 B. C.)

This is the punishment of a liar: He is not believed, even when he speaks the truth.

Babylonian Talmud: Sanhedrin, fo. 89b. (c. 450) HOWELL, Familiar Letters, i, 5. (1645)

'The reward of a lyar is that he be not believed of that he reherseth.

EARL RIVERS, tr., Dictes and Sayenges of the Philosophirs, fo. 117. (1477)

Whosoever has once become known as guilty of some shameful deceit, forfeits belief even if he speaks the truth. (Quicumque turpi fraude semel innotuit, etiam si verum dicit, amittit fidem.)

PHÆDRUS, Fables. Bk. i, fab. 10. (c. 25 B. C.)

This is Phædrus' rendering of Aesop's fable of the boy who amused himself by crying "The wolf is coming," and alarming his neighbors, when there was no wolf, and did this so often that when the wolf really came not a person appeared to help drive it away.

The Liar never is believed, although an oth he take, the honest ever is beleaved, although a lye he make.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 97. (1574) Pettie, tr.

He that once deceives is ever suspected.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640) See under DECEIT.

But liars we can never trust,
Though they should speak the thing that's true.

ISAAC WATTS, Against Lying. (1720)

1
It is not the Lie that passeth through the Minde, but the Lie that sinketh in, and setteth in it, that doth the hurt.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Truth. (1597)

The lie in the soul is the true lie.

BENJAMIN JOWETT, tr., Plato's Republic. Bk. ii, Introduction. (1871)

2
Perkin . . . with oft telling a lie, was turned by habit almost into the thing he seemed to be; and from a liar to a believer.

FRANCIS BACON, The Historie of the Reign of Henry the Seventh. Works (Chandos), p. 446. (1622) Of Perkin Warbeck, Pretender to the throne of England.

As folks, quoth Richard, prone to leasing [lying],
Say things at first because they're pleasing, . . .
Till their own dreams at length deceive 'em,
And, oft repeating, they believe 'em.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Alma. Canto iii, l. 9. (1718)

Liars begin by imposing upon others, but end by deceiving themselves.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 441. (1855)

3
They gae the Queene the lie.

ARCHBISHOP RICHARD BANCROFT, Dangerous Positions, i, iii, 13. (1593)

Experience gives him the lye.

HENRY BUTTES, Dyets Drie Dinner, C ij. (1599)

The great Violation of the Point of Honour from Man to Man, is giving the Lye.

JOSEPH ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 99. (1711)
Francis the First and the Emperor Charles, gave each other the lie direct.

WALTER SCOTT, Quentin Durward. Ch. 26. (1823)

4
Delight in no lie whatsoever for its consequence will not be pleasant.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), vii, 13. (c. 190 B. C.) Oesterley, tr.

He shall not prosper who deviseth lies.

MOHAMMED, Koran. Surah xx, sec. 64. (c. 625)
I wrong myself more by lying than him of whom I lie. (Je me foy plus d'injure en mentant, que je n'en foy à celuy de qui je ments.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 17. (1580)

Lies does harm only to them that tells 'em.

UPDEGRAFF, Hills Look Down, p. 209. (1941)

5
Resolved to die in the last dyke of prevarication.

EDMUND BURKE, Impeachment of Warren Hastings, 7 May, 1789.

6
I do not mind lying, but I hate inaccuracy.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Note Books: Truth and Convenience: Falsehood. (a. 1900)

A little inaccuracy saves a world of explanation.

C. E. AYRES, Science the False Messiah. (1927)
It is better to lie—a little—than to be unhappy much.

BELASCO AND LONG, The Darling of the Gods. Act ii. (1902)

7
Cretans are always liars. (Κρήτες δὲ ψεύσται.)

CALLIMACHUS, Hymns. No. i, l. 8. (c. 250 B. C.)

Quoted as a proverb; attributed to Medea, wife of Jason. The story is that she and Thetis, having a dispute as to which was the fairer, entrusted the decision to Idomeneus of Crete. He decided in favor of Thetis, whereupon Medea said, "Cretans are always liars," and cursed them that they should never speak the truth. The phrase is also attributed to Epimenides. (c. 600 B. C.)
Quoted by St. PAUL, Epistle to Titus, i, 12, "The Cretans are always liars, evil beasts, slow bellies" (Cretenses semper mendaces, malae bestiae, ventres pigri). PLUTARCH, Lives: Aemilius Paulus, ch. 23, sec. 6, cites the Greek proverb, ἔλαθε κρητῶν πρὸς Κρήτας (Play the Cretan with the Cretans), i. e. lying to liars.

It's a liar you're trying your lies on. (Nugari nugatori postulas.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus, l. 972. (c. 194 B. C.)

More of a liar than the Parthians. (Parthis mendacior.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 1, l. 112. (20 B. C.)

If I meet with one of Crete, I was ready to lye with him for the whetstone.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 238. (1580)

St. Paul, that calls the Cretans lyars, doth it but indirectly, and upon a quotation of their own poet.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. ii, sec. 4. (1643)

<sup>1</sup> When I speak fiction, be it such fiction as persuades the listener's ear! (ψευδομὴν ἀκούων ἔκ κεν περὶθεοῖεν ἀκούων.)

CALLIMACHUS, Hymns. No. i, l. 64. (c. 250 B. C.)
A red hot lie is the best kind. (Calidum optimum mendacium.)

PLAUTUS, Mostellaria, l. 665. (c. 220 B. C.)
A good portion of speaking well consists in knowing how to lie. (Bona pars bene dicendi est scite mentiri.)

ERASMUS, Colloquia: Philetymus and Pseudocheus. (1524) The Japanese say, "Who can speak well can lie well."

Fittest for to forge true-seeming lies.

EDMUND SPENSER, The Faerie Queene. Bk. i, canto i, st. 38. (1590)

A mixture of a Lie doth ever adde Pleasure.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Truth. (1597)

It is an art to have so much judgment as to apparel a lie well, to give it a good dressing.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Mali Choragi Fuere. (1636)

A good lie for its own sake is ever pleasing to honest men, but a patched up record never.

ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine, i, 88. (1895)
There are lies so simple and lovely that saints may speak them gracefully.

CLARE BOOTHE, Kiss the Boys Good-Bye: Introduction. (1939)

<sup>2</sup> Do not tell everything, but never lie. . . .
You may always observe that the greatest fools are the greatest liars.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 17 Feb., 1754.

The greater fool, the greater liar.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Epigrams. No. 6. (1808)

<sup>3</sup> It is the nature of a scoundrel to deceive by lying. (Improbi hominis est mendacio fallere.)

CICERO, Pro Murena. Ch. 39, sec. 62. (63 B. C.)

<sup>4</sup> He writes, that, in as much as she was a Germaine, no Germaine could euer since be chosen Pope. Which is a lie with a latchet.

ALEXANDER COOKE, Pope Joane, p. 20. (1600)

That's a lie with a latchet.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 89. (1678)

Cited by FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6157. (1732), with the additional line, "All the Dogs in the Town cannot match it." CARR, Craven Dialect, i, 283, explains that "Lee-with-a-latchet" is a notorious lie; and HALLIWELL, Popular Rhymes and Nursery Tales, that it is "a circumstantial self-evident falsehood."

<sup>5</sup> The dam of that was a wisker. Said of a great lie.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 89. (1678)

With what astonishment the people were struck when they read . . . this whisking Lye.

EDMUND HICKERINGILL, News from Colchester. (1681)

That's a lie with a witness. A great lie.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 89. (1678)

That's a loud one.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 89. (1678)

"That's a lie, and a loud one," said the Friar.

WALTER SCOTT, Ivanhoe. Ch. 43. (1819)

A lie made out of the whole stuff.

ROBERT FORBY, The Vocabulary of East Anglia, p. 427. (1830).

That's a lie with a lid on.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Pictures, p. 99. (1880)

That's a lie wi' a lid on—an' a brass hundle for t' lift it wi'.

F. E. TAYLOR, Lancashire Sayings, p. 28. (1901)

The Scots say, "That's a lee wi a lid on, and a brass handle to tak' hold on."

<sup>6</sup> A liar is always lavish of oaths. (Un menteur est toujours prodigue de serments.)

CORNEILLE, Le Menteur. Act iii, sc. 5. (1642)

Liars are always most disposed to swear. (A giurar presti i mentitor son sempre.)

ALFIERI, Virginia. Act ii, sc. 3. (1777)

<sup>7</sup> He never speaks—and always lies.

LORD COWLEY, BRITISH AMBASSADOR TO FRANCE, of Napoleon III. (c. 1865)

<sup>8</sup> Lying is father to falsehood, and grandsire to perjury; fraud (with two faces) is his daughter, a very monster; treason (with hairs like snakes) is his kinsman.

THOMAS DEKKER, The Seven Deadly Sins of London. Ch. 2. (1606)

<sup>9</sup> No lie ever grows old. (Nullum mandacium senescit.)

EURIPIDES. (c. 425 B. C.) As quoted by PONTANUS, Collectio Proverbiorum, p. 140, and by BEN JONSON, Explorata: Veritas. The meaning is not that a lie enjoys perpetual youth, but, as Socrates puts it, in a fragment from his Acrisius, "A lie never lives to be old." It dies young.

Though a lie be well dressed, it is ever overcome.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 138. (1640)

No falsehood can endure.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 811. (1667)

Carlyle said "a lie cannot live." It shows he did not know how to tell them.

MARK TWAIN, In Eruption, p. 131. (1906)

<sup>10</sup> Dummie [a dumb man] cannot lie.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 28. (c. 1595)

He lies never but when the hollen [holly] is green.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 48. Holly is an evergreen.

<sup>11</sup> Lyes haue short legges. (Le bugie hanno corte le gambe.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 31. (1578) The Germans have the same proverb, "Lügen haben kurze Beine."

Lies have short wings.

JOHN DAVIES, Scourge of Folly, p. 43. (1611)

A Lye has no Leg, but a Scandal has Wings.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 263. (1732)

A lie has no legs.

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 110. (1852) "Perhaps the Spanish form of this proverb is better: La mentira tiene cortas las piernas; for the lie does go, though not far."

<sup>1</sup> A Liar is a Bravo towards God, and a Coward towards Men.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 261. (1732)

The Liar is sooner caught than the Cripple.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4641.

You are an honest Man, and I am your Uncle; and that's two Lies.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5845.

You lick'd not your Lips since you lyed last.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5931.

<sup>2</sup> Ask me no questions and I'll tell you no fibs.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, She Stoops to Conquer. Act iii, sc. 1. (1773)

If ye'll ask nae questions, I'll tell ye nae lies.

SCOTT, Heart of Midlothian. Ch. 10. (1818)

Speer nae questions, and I'll tell ye nae lies.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 18. (1818)

Ask no questions and you'll be told no lies.

DICKENS, Great Expectations. Ch. 2. (1860)

SHAW, Man and Superman. Act iii. (1903)

J. D. CARR, The Case of the Constant Sui-cides, p. 48. (1941) etc., etc

If you ask no questions you hear no lies.

EDGAR WALLACE, The India-Rubber Men. Ch. 3. (c. 1920)

<sup>3</sup> There's no liar like an old liar.

FRANK GRUBER, The Navy Colt, p. 174. (1941)

<sup>4</sup> It wer synne to lye on the deuil.

EDWARD HALL, Chronicle, p. 363. (1548)

It is a true common proverb, that it is even sin to lie upon the devil.

BISHOP NICHOLAS RIDLEY, Works, p. 10. (1550)

*Tis sin to belye the diuell.

THOMAS DEKKER, A Knight's Conjuring, 21. (1607) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 125. (1678)

<sup>5</sup> Sin has many tools, but a lie is the handle which fits them all.

O. W. HOLMES, The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 6, l. 1. (1858)

<sup>6</sup> A splendid liar. (Splendide mendax.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 11, l. 35. (23 B.C.)

Referring to Hypermnestra, who alone of all the fifty daughters of Danaus who had sworn to kill their husbands, broke her oath and was imprisoned, but declared innocent by the people. Erasmus cites a different form, "Mentiri splendide" (To lie magnificently).

Magnanimous lie! and when was truth so beautiful that it could be preferred to thee? (Magnanima menzogna! o quando è il vero | sì bello che si possa a te proporre?)

TASSO, Jerusalem Delivered. Bk. ii, st. 22. (1581) Sophronisba, a Christian virgin, falsely took upon herself the guilt of having secreted a statue of the Virgin to save it from heathen profanation.

<sup>7</sup> The intention makes the lye, not the words.
KING JAMES I OF ENGLAND. (c. 1610) See OVERBURY, Crumms Fal'n from King James's Table. No. 4.

<sup>8</sup> He is a liar, and the father of it. (ψεύστης ἐστίν καὶ ὁ πατήρ αὐτοῦ.)

New Testament: John, viii, 44. (c. A. D. 70)

The Vulgate is, "Mendax est, et pater eius."

He is a liar and the father of lies. (È bugiardo e padre di menzogna.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto xxiii, l. 144. (c. 1300)

<sup>9</sup> If a lie had worried you, you had been dead long since.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 201. (1721)

Lie you for me, and I'll swear for you.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 236.

<sup>10</sup> He begged me . . . to go home with him and swap lies.

A. B. LONGSTREET, Georgia Scenes, p. 233. (1835)

There wasn't any other place to go and swap lies.

G. H. LORIMER, Letters of a Self-Made Merchant to His Son, p. 217. (1902)

<sup>11</sup> Report hath not always a blister on her tongue.

JOHN LYLY, Sappho and Phao. Act i, sc. 2. (1584)

As we say; That a Blister will rise upon one's Tongue, that tells a lye.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Praise. (1597)

Speak, and be hang'd:

For each true word, a blister!

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens, v, 1, 135. (1608)

Common Fame hath a Blister on its Tongue.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1127. (1732)

I have a blister on my tongue, yet I don't remember I told a lie.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

<sup>12</sup> Hee that tels a lie to save his credit, wipes his mouth with his sleeve to spare his napkin.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, News from the Lower End of the Table. (1613)

The credit got by a lie lasts only till the truth comes out.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 501.

(1855) The Japanese say, "The cleverest of lies lasts only a week."

<sup>13</sup> A lie grows in size [as it is repeated]. (Mensuraque ficti crescit.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. xii, l. 57. (A. D. 7)

The rolling fictions grow in strength and size, Each author adding to the former lies.

SWIFT, tr., Metamorphoses, xii, 56. (1709)

A cruel story runs on wheels, and every hand oils the wheels as they run.

OUIDA (LOUISE DE LA RAMÉE). Wisdom, Wit and Pathos. (c. 1880)

<sup>14</sup> There are people who lie simply for the sake of lying. (Il y a des gens qui mentent simplement pour mentir.)

PASCAL, Pensées. Pt. i, art. iv, No. 32. (c. 1660)

The only form of lying that is absolutely beyond reproach is lying for its own sake.

OSCAR WILDE, The Decay of Lying. (c. 1890)

<sup>1</sup> Equivocation is half-way to lying, as lying is the whole way to hell.

WILLIAM PENN, Some Fruits of Solitude. No. 144. (1693)

Woe unto the liar, for he shall be thrust down into Hell.

JOSEPH SMITH, The Book of Mormon: II Nephi, ix, 34. (1830)

The Lord delights in them that speak

The words of truth, but every liar

Must have his portion in the lake

That burns with brimstone and with fire.

ISAAC WATTS, Against Lying. (1715)

I know where little girls are sent

For telling taradiddles.

HENRY SAMBROOKE LEIGH, Only Seven. (a. 1883)

<sup>2</sup> What you tell me is not true, never was true, never will be true. (Id quod neque est neque fuit neque futurum est | mihi praedicas.)

PLAUTUS, Amphitruo, l. 553. (c. 200 B.C.)

To stuff full of lies. (Sarcire centones.)

PLAUTUS, Epidicus, l. 455. (c. 200 B.C.) Literally "To patch up your cento," the "cento" being a sort of patchwork garment. Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, iv, 58, who notes its use by many writers.

<sup>3</sup> There is no lie so reckless as to be without some proof. (Nullum tam imprudens mendacium est ut teste careat.)

PLINY THE ELDER, History. Bk. viii, ch. 22. (c. A.D. 70)

<sup>4</sup> Lying lips are abomination to the Lord. (Abominatio est Domino labia mendacia.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xii, 22. (c. 350 B.C.)

"An abomination unto the Lord, but a very present help in time of trouble" is an American variant, a combination of Proverbs, xii, 22 and Psalms, xlvii, 1.

A poor man is better than a liar. (Melior est pauper quam vir mendax.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xix, 22.

<sup>6</sup> I said in my haste, All men are liars. (Omnis homo mendax.)

Old Testament: Psalms, cxvi, 11. (c. 250 B.C.)

All men lie, says the Sage. (Tout homme ment, dit le Sage.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. ix, fab. 1. (1678)

Sure men were born to lie, and women to believe them!

JOHN GAY, Beggar's Opera. Act ii, sc. 2. (1727)

David said "All men are liars." But if all men are liars, then David was a liar.

WILLI FRISCHAUER, Twilight in Vienna, p. 138. (1938)

<sup>6</sup> There is no doubt about the truth of the proverb that a liar should have a good memory. (Verumque est illud, quod vulgo dicitur, mendacem memorem esse oportere.)

QUINTILIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae. Bk. iv, ch. ii, sec. 91. (c. A.D. 80) Quoted by SAINT

JEROME as an old proverb (oblitus veteris proverbii), and cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, iii, 74.

A liar does not remember his lies.

Babylonian Talmud: Sanhedrin, fo. 69a. (c. 450)

How necessary it is for a liar to have a good memory.

HUGH LATIMER, Works (P.S.), ii, 312. (c. 1531)

I see it is true . . . "a liar had need have a good remembrance."

JAMES CALFILL, An Answer to Martial's Treatise of the Crosse, p. 88. (1565)

It is not without reason men say that he who does not know himself sure of memory should never try to be a liar. (Ce n'est pas sans raison qu'on dict que, qui ne se sent point assez ferme de memoire ne se doit pas mesler d'estre menteur.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 9. (1580)

One must have a good memory after one has lied. (Il faut bonne memoire apres qu'on a menti.)

CORNEILLE, Le Menteur. Act iv, sc. 5. (1642)

The usual French form is, "Il faut qu'un menteur ait bonne memoire."

Liars need have good memories.

KING CHARLES I, as quoted by GAUDEN, Eikon Basilike. Ch. 15. (a. 1649)

Indeed, a very rational saying, that a liar ought to have a good memory.

ROBERT SOUTH, Concealment of Sin. (c. 1690)

Parasites and liars have need of good memories.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, Fables. No. 353. (1692)

There is one essential point wherein a political liar differs from others of the faculty, that he ought to have but a short memory.

SWIFT, The Examiner. (1710)

Here's a pin for that lie; I'm sure liars had need of good memories.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

Be of good memory if you become a liar.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 564. (1817)

There is nothing so pathetic as a forgetful liar.

F. M. KNOWLES, A Cheerful Year-Book. (1906)

If you are a liar, recollect.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 520 (1938) An Egyptian proverb.

<sup>7</sup> A liar is commonly a coward, for he dares not avow truth.

SIR WALTER RALEGH, Instructions to His Son Sec. iv. (1616)

Liars are mean and boastful. (Les menteurs sont bas et glorieux.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 110. (1746)

Men lie, who lack courage to tell truth.

JOAQUIN MILLER, Ina. Sc. 3. (a. 1897)

<sup>8</sup> The famous maxim of Mein Kampf that any lie will be believed, if it is big enough.

HERMANN RAUSCHNING, The Revolution of Nihilism, p. 229. (1939)

1 If a lie could have choked him, that would have done it.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 89. (1678)
No law for lying. A man may lie without danger of the law.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 172. The Portuguese say, "O mentir naõ paga sisa" (Lying pays no tax).

The mou' that lies, slays the saul.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 259.

2 Lies are thin stuff; they are transparent, if you examine them with care. (Tenue est mendacium; perlucet, si diligenter inspexeris.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxix, sec. 18. (c. A. D. 64)

His lies are latticed lies, and you may see through them.

ROBERT FORBY, The Vocabulary of East Anglia, p. 429. (1830)

3 Thou liest in thy throat.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, iii, 4, 172. (1599)

To lie in one's throat is to lie foully or infamously.

Who . . . gives me the lie i' th' throat?

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, ii, 2, 600. (1600)

Gave him home the lie, adowne his throte.

JOHN LANE, Continuation of Chaucer's Squire's Tale, ix, 198. (1616)

Thou liest in thy throat. (Menteris in gutture.)

TITUS OATES, On Jude, p. 247. (1679)

In thy teeth I give thee back the lie.

KEATS, Otho the Great. Act iv, sc. 2. (1819)

He lies most foully in his throat.

WALTER SCOTT, The Lay of the Last Minstrel. Canto v, st. 20. (1824)

He strode to Gauthier, in his throat

Gave him the lie.

ROBERT BROWNING, Count Gismond. St. 13. (1845)

4 He . . . woulde lye as fast as a horse woulde trot.

JOHN SKELTON, Merie Tales. Works (1843). Vol. i, p. lx. (a. 1529)

He wyll lye as fast as a dogge will trotte.

JEHAN PALSGRAVE, La Langue Françoyse, p. 610. (1530) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 89.

(1678) MOTTEUX, tr., Rabelais, v, 30. (1694)

HAWKER, Diary, iii, 236. (1843), etc., etc.

She will lie as fast as a dogge will licke a dishe.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 151. (1721)

An egg is not so full of meat as she is full of lies.

JOHN STILL (?), Gammer Gurton's Needle. Act v, sc. 2. (1565)

He will lie, sir, with such volubility, that you would think truth were a fool.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, iv, 3, 283. (1602)

[He] will lye like a lapwing.

Sir Giles Goosecappe. Act i, sc. 1. (1606)

You lie like an Almanack-maker, that lies every hour of the Day, and all the Year long.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 230.

(1709) The French say, "Mentir comme un arracheur de dents" (To lie like a dentist); the Germans, "Er lügt, wie gedruckt" (He lies like print).

Never since the time of Tom Pepper have I heard the equal of this Cornish; he has lies enough to sink a jolly-boat.

FREDERICK CHAMIER, Tom Bowling. Ch. 21.

(1841) Whence the proverb, "As big a liar as Tom Pepper." Nobody remembers who Tom Pepper was.

A friend of his . . . who lied like a trooper.

C. D. BADHAM, Prose Halieutics, p. 443. (1854)

That Chinaman can lie the bark off a tree.

JOAQUIN MILLER, The Danites. Act i. (1877)

Lie like troopers if necessary.

CYRIL HARE, Tragedy at Law, p. 48. (1943)

5 Never tell a lie. (μὴ ψεύδου.)

OLON, Maxim. (c. 600 B. C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Solon, i, 60.

To a free-born man, the name of liar cleaves as a deadly brand. (ὥς ἐλευθέρῳ | ψευδεὶ καλεῖσθαι κῆρ πρόσσεν οὐ καλή.)

SOPHOCLES, Trachiniae, l. 453. (c. 409 B. C.)

The Latin proverb says, "Illiberale est mentiri; ingenuum veritas decet" (It is a low thing to lie; truth becomes a gentleman)

A lie is a foul blot in a man, yet it is continually in the mouth of the untaught.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xx, 24. (c. 190 B. C.)

Lying is fit for slaves only, and deserves to be hated of all men. (ψεύδεται δούλοισιν καὶ πᾶσιν ἀνθρώποις ἄξιον μισεῖσθαι.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: Education of Children, 11C. (c. A. D. 95)

A wise man blushes at a liar.

SADI, Pand Namah (Scroll of Wisdom). Sec. 22. (c. 1260)

He which lieth, doth the act of a slave.

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 96. (1574)

To lye is a vice most detestable, not to be suffered in a slave, much lesse in a sonne.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His Ephoebus (Arber), p. 146. (1579)

Dare to be true: nothing can need a lie;

A fault which needs it most, grows two thereby.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. (a. 1633)

It is better to be lied about than to lie.

ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine. Vol. xi, p. 48. (1901)

6 The cruellest lies are often told in silence.

R. L. STEVENSON, Virginibus Puerisque: Truth of Intercourse. (1874) The proverb is, "Lies may be acted as well as spoken."

7 I mean you lie—under a mistake.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

They also lie too—under a mistake.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 208. (1818)

You lie—under a mistake,—

For this is the most civil sort of lie

That can be given to a man's face.

SHELLEY, tr., Calderon's Magico Prodigious Sc. 1. (1822)

- 1
If it be a lie, you had it as cheap as I.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)
I love a liar in my heart.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i.
- 2
"Thou shalt tell a lie and stick to it" was once, we are told, the schoolboy's eleventh commandment.
A. C. SWINBURNE, *The Journal of Sir Walter
Scott*. (1891)
- 3
One lie treads on the heels of another. (Fallacia alia aliam trudit.)
TERENCE, Andria, l. 779. (166 B. C.)
One falsehood bringeth in an other.
NICOLAS UDALL, Flowers Out of Terence, fo.
25. (1533)
Having made one lye, he is fain to make more to maintain it. For an untruth wanting a firm foundation needs many buttresses.
THOMAS FULLER, *The Profane State: The
Lyer*. (1642)
He who tells a lie, is not sensible of how great a task he undertakes; for he must be forced to invent twenty more to maintain that one.
POPE, Thoughts on Various Subjects. (1727)
A Lye begets a Lye, till they come to Generations.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 262. (1732)
One Lye calls for many.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3766. The Italians say, "Una bugia ne tira dieci" (One lie draws ten after it).
- 4
There are 869 different forms of lying, but only one of them has been squarely forbidden.
Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor.
MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's Calendar.
(1893)
One of the most startling differences between a cat and a lie is that a cat has only nine lives.
MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's Calendar.
(1893) The proverb is, "Lies take a deal of killing."
The only thing that ever came back from the grave that we know of was a lie.
MARILLA M. RICKER, The Philistine. Vol. 25,
p. 101. (1908)
- 5
A liar is a man who does not know how to deceive. (Un menteur est un homme qui ne sait pas tromper.)
VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 277. (1746)
He who needs an incentive to falsehood is not a liar by nature. (Celui qui a besoin d'un motif pour être engagé à mentir, n'est pas né menteur.)
VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 520.
A lie is nothing but the rudeness of dishonest men. (Le mensonge n'est que la grossièreté des hommes faux.)
VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 686.
- 6
He that will lie will steale.
RICHARD WEST, The Court of Conscience, sig.
F1. (1607) The Germans say, "Wer lügt, der stiehlt" (He who lies, steals). A variant

- is, "Lying and stealing are next-door neighbors."
The proverb gives the liar the inseparable society of another sin: Da mihi mendacem, et ego ostendam tibi furem,—Shew me a liar and I will shew thee a thief.
THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons (1861), i, 284. (1629)
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No.
654. (1640) The French say, "Montre-moi un menteur, je te montrerai un larron."
Be sure the proverbe is as true as briefe,
A lyer's euer worser then a thiefe.
JOHN TAYLOR, Works, p. 123. (1630)
A liar is worse than a thief.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 150. (1639)
- 7
The aim of the liar is simply to charm, to delight, to give pleasure. He is the very basis of civilized society.
OSCAR WILDE, The Decay of Lying. (1891)
- 8
A certain Lady of the highest Quality . . .
made a judicious distinction between a white Lie and a black Lie. A white Lie is That which is not intended to injure any Body in his Fortune, Interest, or Reputation, but only to gratify a garrulous Disposition, and the Itch of amusing People by telling them wonderful Stories.
UNKNOWN, in Gentleman's Magazine, xi, 647.
(1741)
White lies always introduce others of a darker complexion.
WILLIAM PALEY, Moral Philosophy, i, 187. (1785)
All lies disgrace a gentleman, white or black.
FREDERICK MARRYAT, Peter Simple. Ch. 34.
(1833)
- 9
Juggement de Pillorie par iii heures, ove un ague pier entour soun col, pur mensonges controeves. (Judgment of the pillory for three hours, with a sharpening stone [whetstone] about his neck, for forged lies.)
UNKNOWN, Liber Albus, (Rolls), iv, 601.
(1364) It was formerly the custom to hang a whetstone about the neck of a liar as he stood in the pillory. Hence "to lie for the whetstone" was to be a great liar.
He, as a fals lyere, . . . shal stond . . . upon the pillorye . . . with a Westone aboute his neck.
UNKNOWN, Calendar of London Letter-Books,
i, 197. (1418)
You haue sayd enough to winne the whetstone.
WILLIAM FULKE, A Confutation of the Doctrine Touching Purgatory, p. 437. (1577)
This is a lye well worthy of a whetstone.
Harleian Miscellany, iv, 87. (1625)
He will lie for the whetstone.
THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 123. (1633)
He deserves the whetstone.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 89. (1678)
You shall have the Whetstone.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5991. (1732)
TO DRAW THE LONG BOW, see under BOW.

LIFE

I—Life: What It Is

<sup>1</sup> Life is doing things, not making things. (ὁ δὲ βίος πρᾶξις, οὐ ποιησις ἐστίν.)

ARISTOTLE, Politics. Bk. i, ch. 2, sec. 6. (c. 330 B. C.)

Life is the co-ordination of actions.

HERBERT SPENCER, A Theory of Population. (Westminster Review, April, 1852.) Repeated in Principles of Biology. Pt. i, ch. 4, sec. 24.

<sup>2</sup> Since well I've played my part, all clap your hands

And from the stage dismiss me with applause.
(ἐπεὶ δὲ πᾶν καλῶς πέπαισται, δότε κρότον καὶ πάντες ἡμᾶς μετὰ χαρᾶς προπέμψατε.)

CAESAR AUGUSTUS, Epigram, as he lay dying (A. D. 14), paraphrasing the closing words of ARISTOPHANES, The Clouds, and other Greek comedies. The Emperor had summoned his friends and asked them whether, in their opinion, he had played the comedy of life well. When they assured him that he had, he spoke the lines given above, dismissed them, and died soon afterwards. See Suetonius, Twelve Caesars: Augustus. Ch. 99, sec. 1.

All life is a stage and a play, so learn to play your part. (σκηνὴ πᾶς ὁ βίος καὶ παίγνιον· ἢ μάθε παίζειν.)

PALLADAS, Epigram. (c. A. D. 425) See Greek Anthology. Bk. x, epig. 72.

All this life of mortal man, what is it but a kind of comedy, where men come forth, disguised one in one array, and another in another, each playing his part?

ERASMUS, The Praise of Folly. Sec. 30. (1509) Draw the curtain, the farce is played out. (Tirez le rideau, la farce est jouée.)

RABELAIS. Said to have been his last words. See Works, i, 17, Duport ed.

Though the most be players, some must be spectators.

JONSON, Explorata: De Pius et Probis. (1616) Life is a tragedy wherein we sit as spectators for a while, and then act out our part in it.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects. (1714) Life's a long tragedy, this globe the stage.

ISAAC WATTS, Epistle to Mitio, l. 1. (c. 1748) Life is the farce in which every one must take a part. (La vie est la farce à mener par tous.)

ARTHUR RIMBAUD, Une Saison en Enfer. Ch. 2. (1873)

Man's life is truly a performance. (Jên shêng tsai shih wu fei shih hsi.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 915. (1875)

In the theatre of life every one may be amused except the actor.

BERNARD SHAW, Misalliance, p. 31. (1910)

<sup>3</sup> Life is a long lesson in humility.

J. M. BARRIE, The Little Minister. Ch. 3. (1891)

<sup>4</sup> Here is the sound of lutes, there screams and wailing;

Here winsome girls, there bodies old and failing;

Here scholars' talk, there drunkards' mad commotion—

Is life a nectared or a poisoned potion?

BHARTRIHARI, (c. 100 B. C.) Ryder, tr.

The whole of life is a mixture of grief and joy. (Totam aequae vitam miscet dolor et gaudium.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. iv, fab. 17. (c. 25 B. C.)

The web of our life is of a mingled yarn, good and ill together.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, i, 3, 83. (1602)

Life is made up of sobs, sniffles and smiles, with sniffles predominating.

O. HENRY, The Gift of the Magi. (1906)

<sup>5</sup> Life is like a mountain: after climbing up one side and sliding down the other, put up the sled.

JOSEPH BILLINGS (H. W. SHAW), Encyclopedia of Wisdom. (1874)

<sup>6</sup> Life is a bumper filled by fate.

THOMAS BLACKLOCK, Epigram on Punch. (a. 1791)

Life is all a variorum.

ROBERT BURNS, The Jolly Beggars. (a. 1796)

Life is a great bundle of little things.

O. W. HOLMES, The Professor at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 1. (1860)

Life is made up of interruptions.

W. S. GILBERT, Patience. Act i. (1881)

Life is simply a mauvais quart d'heure made up of exquisite moments.

OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance. Act ii. (1893)

<sup>7</sup> Life is one long process of getting tired.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Note Books: Life, vii. (a. 1900)

Life is the art of drawing sufficient conclusions from insufficient premises.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Note Books: Life, ix.

Life is (I think) a blunder and a shame.

W. E. HENLEY, In Hospital: Waiting. (1903)

What is life but a series of inspired follies?

BERNARD SHAW, Pygmalion. Act ii. (1912)

Life's a long headache in a noisy street.

JOHN MASEFIELD, The Widow in the Bye Street. Pt. iv, st. 7. (1912)

Life is like a scrambled egg.

DON MARQUIS, Frustration. (1916)

Life: a lighted window And a closed door.

CLEMENT WOOD, I Pass: Lighted Window. (1919)

Life's too damn funny for me to explain . . . it's one day sunny the next day rain.

DON MARQUIS, certain maxims of archy. (1927)

Life is not a spectacle or a feast; it is a predicament.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Articles and Essays. (c. 1930)

Life is either a feast or a famine, as the old Chinese proverb goes.

HENRY MILLER, The Cosmological Eye, p. 153. (1939)

Life is just a series of trying to make up your mind.

TIMOTHY FULLER, Reunion with Murder, p. 206. (1941)

Life is pharmaceutical from head to cuticle.

DAVID McCORD, Perambulator Poems. No. xiv. (1941)

What is life? Life is stepping down a step or sitting in a chair,

And it isn't there.

OGDEN NASH, You and Me and P. B. Shelley. (1942)

Life was a threshing machine, churning, turning, and suddenly there was no more corn and the harvest was over.

JOHN LODWICK, Running to Paradise, p. 14. (1943)

1 Do what you will, this life's a fiction,
And is made up of contradiction.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Gnomic Verses. No. 23. (1808)

2 Life is a Dream. (La Vida es Sueño.)

CALDERON. Title of comedy. (c. 1640)

Life and love are all a dream.

ROBERT BURNS, The Lament. (c. 1785)

Life is an empty dream.

ROBERT BROWNING, Paracelsus. Pt. ii. (1835)

Life, that insane dream.

ROBERT BROWNING, Easter-Day. Sec. 14. (1850)

Tell me not, in mournful numbers,

Life is but an empty dream.

H. W. LONGFELLOW, A Psalm of Life. (1838)

Tell me not in mournful wish-wash

Life's a sort of sugared dish-wash.

EZRA POUND, L'Homme Moyen Sensuel. (1910)

For life is but a dream whose shapes return,
Some frequently, some seldom.

JAMES THOMSON, The City of Dreadful Night.
Pt. i, st. 3. (1874)

Life a dream in Death's eternal sleep.

JAMES THOMSON, Philosophy. (1874)

Waking life is a dream controlled.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Little Essays, p. 146. (c. 1930)

3 The life of man is but as a stoppage at an inn.

CHUANG-TSZE, Philosophy. Ch. 11. (c. 400 B. C.)
Giles, tr.

Why not, like a banqueter fed full of life, withdraw contentedly and rest in peace? (Cur non ut plenus vitae conviva recedis | aequo animoque capis securam quietam?)

LUCRETIUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. iii, l. 938. (c. 45 B. C.)

I depart from life as from an inn, and not as from my home. (Ex vita discedo, tamquam ex hospitio, non tamquam e domo.)

CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. 23, sec. 84. (44 B. C.)
When his time is sped, let him quit life contentedly, like a guest who has had his fill. (Exacto contentus tempore vita | cedat uti conviva satur.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. i, l. 118. (35 B. C.)

This body is not a home, but an inn. (Nec domum esse hoc corpus, sed hospitium.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. cxx, sec. 14. (c. A. D. 64) In his De Consolatione ad Polybium, sec. 21, Seneca repeats the idea, "Born for a very brief space of time, we regard this life as an inn."

This life at best is but an inn.

JAMES HOWELL, A Fit of Mortification. (c. 1660)

A fair, where thousands meet, but none can stay;
An inn, where travellers bait, then post away.

ISAAC HAWKINS BROWNE, Immortality of the Soul. (a. 1760) Tr. from the Latin by Soame Jenyns.

See also under WORLD: WORLD, AN INN.

4

Vain, weak-built isthmus, which dost proudly rise

Up between two Eternities!

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Life and Fame, l. 18. (a. 1667)

I desire to have both heaven and hell ever in my eye, while I stand on this isthmus of life, between two boundless oceans.

JOHN WESLEY, Letter to Charles Wesley, 1747.

This speck of life in time's great wilderness

This narrow isthmus 'twixt two boundless seas,
The past, the future, two eternities!

THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: The Veiled Prophet of Khorassan. St. 42. (1817)

Our life—a little gleam of time between two eternities.

THOMAS CARLYLE, On Heroes and Hero-Worship. Lect. 5. (1840)

Life is a barren vale between the cold and eternal peaks of two eternities.

R. G. INGERSOLL, At His Brother's Grave. (1879) See also under PRESENT.

5

Let Nature, and let Art do what they please,
When all's done, Life is an incurable Disease.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Cde to Dr. Scarborough, fn. (a. 1667)

Life an ill whose only cure is death.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Epistle to Dr. Sherlock, l. 27. (a. 1721)

This long disease, my life.

POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 132. (1733)

That long and cruel malady which one calls life.
(Cette longue et cruelle maladie qu'on appelle la vie.)

JEAN MARIE DESCHAMPS, Epigram. (c. 1820)

Life is a fatal complaint, and an eminently contagious one.

O. W. HOLMES, The Poet at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 12. (1872)

Life is a disease; and the only difference between one man and another is the stage of the disease at which he lives.

SHAW, Back to Methuselah. Act i. (1921)

Life itself can be an incurable disease.

DYSON CARTER, Night of Flame, p. 334. (1943)

6

Life's a tumble-about thing of ups and downs.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Sybil. Bk. i, ch. 8. (1845)

His life must have been one long fall downstairs.

MARGERY ALLINGHAM, Pearls Before Swine, p. 73. (1945)

7

Life is a struggle. (παλασμαθ' ἡμῶν ὁ βίος.)

EURIPIDES, Suppliants, l. 550. (c. 421 B. C.)

The life of man on earth is a warfare. (Militia est vita hominis super terram.)

Old Testament: Job, vii, 1. (c. 350 B.C.) The Vulgate version.

Life is one long struggle in the dark. (Omnis cum in tenebris praesertim vita labore.)

LUCRETIUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. ii, l. 54. (c. 45 B.C.) The Germans say, "Das Leben heisst Streben" (Life means strife).

Cease to struggle and you cease to live.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 367. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

<sup>1</sup> Life so called is nothing but toil. (βίος θροῦ' ἔχει μόνον πόρος γηγώς.)

EURIPIDES, Fragments. Frag. 966, Nauck. (c. 440 B.C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, sec. 120A.

Life is one demd horrid grind!

DICKENS, Nicholas Nickleby. Ch. 64. (1839) Mr. Mantalini speaking.

<sup>2</sup> The life of man is nought els but a long iorney, that beginneth when he is borne, and endeth when he dyeth.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 90. (1578)

<sup>3</sup> Life is a shelvy Sea, the Passage fear, And not without a skilful Pilot steer.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1749.

Life is a chart as well as a coast, and a little care will keep you clear of rocks, reefs, and sandbars.

T. C. HALBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 17. (1843)

Life, as we call it, is nothing but the edge of the boundless ocean of existence where it comes on soundings.

O. W. HOLMES, The Professor at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 5. (1860)

<sup>4</sup> Our whole Life is but a greater and longer Childhood.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3830. (1732)

<sup>5</sup> Life is a jest; and all things show it.

I thought so once; but now I know it.

JOHN GAY, My Own Epitaph. (1720) As quoted by Gay in a letter to Pope.

Life is a Farce, the World a Jest.

SWIFT (?), The Puppet-Show, l. 17. (1721)

The world's a jest, and joy's a trinket;

I knew that once, but now I think it.

J. K. STEPHEN, Senex to Matt Prior. (a. 1892)

Life's a jest if you know how to live.

H. C. BAILEY, The Bishop's Crime, p. 55. (1941)

<sup>6</sup> The days of the years of my pilgrimage are an hundred and thirty years. (Dies peregrinationis meae centum triginta annorum sunt.)

Old Testament: Genesis, xlvii, 9. (c. 550 B.C.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, cites the Latin proverb, "Vita hominis peregrinatio" (The life of man is a pilgrimage), and adds, "According to the sententia frequent in Holy Writ, life is an exile, a residing, and a pilgrimage" (Vitam hanc esse exilium, esse incolatum et peregrinationem). A very ancient concept.

The pilgrimage of this my short life.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 63. (1576)

The whole course of life is but . . . a pilgrimage.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 181. (1579)

To-morrow . . . the utmost of his pilgrimage.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, ii, 1, 36. (1604)

<sup>7</sup> One doth but breakfast here, another dine; he that lives longest does but sup; we must all go to bed in another World.

JOSEPH HENSHAW, BISHOP OF PETERBOROUGH, Horae Succisivae, p. 80. (1631)

Man's life is like unto a winter's day,—

Some break their fast and so depart away;

Others stay dinner, then depart full fed;

The longest age but sups and goes to bed.

O reader, then behold and see

As we are now, so must you be.

An elaboration by an unknown hand of the quotation from Horae Succisivae given above. The stanza, with unimportant variations, was used frequently as an epitaph. See also QUARLES, Divine Fancies: On the Life of Man, and FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1744.

The life of man is a winter way.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 913. (1640)

The life of man is a winter's day and a winter's way.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 16. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6239. (1732)

<sup>8</sup> To live is to function. That is all there is in living.

JUSTICE O. W. HOLMES. Speech, on his 91st birthday, 8 March, 1932.

<sup>9</sup> This life is a race; we run it on earth that we may win a crown elsewhere. (Stadium est hae vita mortalibus: hic contendimus, ut alibi coronemur.)

ST. JEROME (HIERONYMUS), Letters. No. xxii, sec. 3. (A. D. 384)

<sup>10</sup> My days are swifter than a weaver's shuttle. (Dies mei velocius transierunt quam a texente tela succiditur.)

Old Testament: Job, vii, 6. (c. 350 B.C.)

I know also life is a shuttle.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, v, 1, 25. (1601)

Life is a shuttle.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 442. (1855)

<sup>11</sup> Remember that my life is wind. (Memento quia ventus est vita mea.)

Old Testament: Job, vii, 7. (c. 350 B.C.)

<sup>12</sup> Life is a progress from want to want, not from enjoyment to enjoyment.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (1775) BOSWELL, Life. Vol. iii, p. 53.

Life is a pill which none of us can bear to swallow without gilding.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. See PROZZI, Johnsoniana.

Life is to most a nauseous pill,
A treat for which they dearly pay.

PHILIP FRENEAU, Human Frailty. (1786)

1 A man's life of any worth is a continual allegory.

JOHN KEATS, Letter, 18 Feb., 1819.

2 What is our life but a succession of preludes to that unknown song whose first solemn note is sounded by Death?

ALPHONSE DE LAMARTINE, Méditations Poétiques. Ser. ii, Med. 15. (1820) Used by Franz von Liszt at the head of his tone poem, Les Préludes.

3 Our lyfe is but a shadow, a vapor, a bubble.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 113. (1579)

Would that life were like the shadow cast by a wall or a tree; but it is like the shadow of a bird in flight.

MIDRASH: Genesis Rabbah, xcvi, 2. (c. 550)

Life's but a walking shadow, a poor player
That struts and frets his hour upon the stage,
And then is heard no more.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, v, 5, 23. (1606)

4 Your life itself is a sleep. (ὁ βίος αὐτοῦς ὁ βίος ἐστὶ σὺν.)

MENANDER, The Ghost, l. 38. (c. 300 B. C.)

Life is a sleep. The old are those whose slumber has been longest. (La vie est un sommeil. Les vieillards sont ceux dont le sommeil a été plus long.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères: De l'Homme. (1688)

5 This life is but a tillage for the next; do good that you may reap there.

MOHAMMED, Sunnah. (c. 630) Sayings of Muhammad, p. 74.

6 Life is just one damned thing after another.

FRANK WARD O'MALLEY, Epigram. (c. 1906)

The attribution to O'Malley was made in the United Press story of his death, 19 Oct., 1932, and in The Literary Digest, 5 Nov., 1932. It is probably correct, although the epigram was included by Elbert Hubbard in his A Thousand and One Epigrams, p. 137. (1911) Frequently quoted.

To a nitwit life is one laugh after another.

CLIFFORD ODETS, Paradise Lost. Act i. (1935)

For most people life is one bill after another.

CLIFFORD ODETS, Paradise Lost. Act ii.

Here's one damned thing after another.

H. C. BAILEY, The Bishop's Crime, p. 64. (1941)

Life is just one parting after another.

HUGH ADDIS, Night Over the Wood, p. 116. (1943)

7 Life is a perilous voyage. (πλοῦς σφαλερὸς τὸ ζῆν.)

PALLADAS, Epigram. (c. A. D. 425) See Greek Anthology. Bk. x, epig. 65.

Life's uncertain voyage.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens, v, 1, 205. (1608)

Old and young we are all on our last cruise.

R. L. STEVENSON, Crabbed Age and Youth. (1874)

Life's a voyage that's homeward bound.

HERMAN MELVILLE. (a. 1891) As quoted by COURNOUS, Modern Plutarch, p. 87.

8 The life of man is the plaything of Fortune, a wretched life and vagrant, tossed between riches and poverty. (παλγνιὸν ἐστὶ Τύχης μερόπων βίος.)

PALLADAS, Epigram. (c. A. D. 425) See Greek Anthology. Bk. x, epig. 80.

9 Man is lent to life, not given. (Homo vitae commodatus non donatus est.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 257. (c. 43 B. C.)

Life is a debt to destiny. (δὴ καὶ μοιρίδιον χρέος εἶναι λέγεται τὸ ζῆν.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: To Apollonius, 106F. (c. A. D. 95) Referred to as a proverb.

10 Lyff may be resembled to the fleying of an arowe, and deth is like the lyghting thereof.

EARL RIVERS, tr., Dictes and Sayenges of the Philosophirs, fo. 16. (1477)

11 All life is a servitude. (Omnis vita servitium est.)

SENECA, De Tranquillitate Animi. Ch. 10, sec. 4. (c. A. D. 60)

12 To live is to do battle. (Vivere, militare est.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xcvi, sec. 5. (c. A. D. 64) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, iii, 13.

Life is a battle. (ὁ δὲ βίος πόλεμος.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. ii, sec. 17. (c. A. D. 174)

My life is a battle. (Ma vie est un combat.)

VOLTAIRE, Mahomet. Act ii, sc. 4. (1741)

13 Life is neither a good nor an evil; it is simply the place where good and evil exist. (Vita nec bonum nec malum est; boni ac mali locus est.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xcix, sec. 12. (c. A. D. 64)

14 Life is as tedious as a twice-told tale,
Vexing the dull ear of a drowsy man.

SHAKESPEARE, King John, iii, 4, 109. (1596)

Life . . . is a tale

Told by an idiot, full of sound and fury,
Signifying nothing.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, v, 5, 26. (1606)

15 The painted veil which those who live | Call life.

SHELLEY, Sonnet. (1818)

Painted Veils.

JAMES HUNTER. Title of book. (1920)

16 Human life is like a game of dice; if you don't get the throw you want, you must make the best of the throw you get. (Ita vitast hominum quasi quom ludas tesseris: | si illud quod maxume opus est iacta non cadit, | illud quod cecidit forte, id arte ut corrigas.)

TERENCE, Adelphoe, l. 739. (160 B. C.)

It is a game which has been played for untold ages, every man and woman of us being one of the two players. The chess-board is the world, . . . the rules of the game are what we call the laws of Nature. The player on the other side is hidden from us. We know that his play is always fair, just and patient. But also we know, to our cost, that he never overlooks a mistake.

THOMAS HENRY HUXLEY, A Liberal Education, and Where to Find It. (1870)

Life is a game of whist. From unseen sources

The cards are shuffled, and the hands are dealt. . . .

I do not like the way the cards are shuffled,

But yet I like the game and want to play;

And through the long, long night will I, unruffled,

Play what I get, until the break of day.

EUGENE F. WARE, Whist. (1892)

Life is like a pack of cards. Every time you think you've got the ace you find you 'aven't.

PETER CHEYNEY, A Trap for Bellamy, p. 171. (1941)

Life is a game of errors; he who makes the fewest, wins.

J. H. RHOADES, Jonathan's Apothegms. Vol. ii, No. 23. (1942)

1 My life is like a stroll upon the beach.

H. D. THOREAU, A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers. (1849)

2 I tell you we're in a blessed drain-pipe, and we've got to crawl along it till we die.

H. G. WELLS, Kipps. Bk. i, ch. 2. (1905)

I was thinking jest what a Rum Go everything is.

H. G. WELLS, Kipps. Bk. iii, ch. 3.

Life's a very funny proposition after all.

GEORGE M. COHAN, Life's a Funny Proposition. From Little Johnny Jones, 1907.

Life is rather a queer proposition after all.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), No Story. (1909)

Life's a funny proposition.

RICHARD SHATTUCK, The Snark Was a Boojum, p. 232. (1941)

3 Our life is like a bubble that forms on the surface of the water.

UNKNOWN, Niti Sastras (Moral Stanzas). (c. 1250)

4 Such is human life. (Ut sunt humana.)

PLAUTUS, Cistellaria, l. 194. (c. 200 B. C.)

"Sairey," says Mrs. Harris, "sech is life."

CHARLES DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 29. (1844)

On the Rampage, Pip, and off the Rampage, Pip; such is life.

DICKENS, Great Expectations. Ch. 15. (1861)

II—Life: Apothegms

5 Life that has grown with me. (σύνφυτος αὖν.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 107. (458 B. C.)

Life! we've been long together.

ANNA LETITIA BARBAULD, Life. St. 2. (a. 1825)

6 Enough of life! (ἀπελτρω βλος.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 1314. (458 B. C.)

Weariness of life. (Taedium vitae.)

AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticae. Bk. vi, ch. 18, sec. 11. (c. A. D. 150)

7 A life not worth living. (βλοῦ ἀβλῶτον.)

ARISTOPHANES, Plutus, l. 969. (388 B. C.) PLUTARCH, Dion, ch. 6, speaks of life being "unlivable" (ἀβιώτως εἶχειν), and SUIDAS, Lexicon, iv, 32, has "A life of thorns" (βλος ἀκανθώδης).

The life worth living. (Vita vitalis.)

QUINTUS ENNIUS. (c. 175 B. C.) As quoted by CICERO, De Amicitia. Ch. 6, sec. 22.

"Is Life worth living?" . . . he suspects it is, in a great measure, a question of the Liver.

Punch. Vol. lxxiii, p. 207. (1877) Frequently quoted, usually as, "Is life worth living? It depends upon the liver."

8 The wheels of life
Stand never idle, but go always round.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, To the Duke of Wellington on Hearing Him Mispraised. (1849)

Who saw life steadily and saw it whole.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, To a Friend. (1849) Referring to Sophocles.

9 Most men lead lives of quiet desperation.

PHILIP BARRY, You and I. Act i. (1923)

Life shouldn't be all gravy, anyway.

PHILIP BARRY, You and I. Act i.

Life is what you make it.

PETER CHENEY, A Trap for Bellamy, p. 58. (1941)

10 The vital glow. (L'élan vital.)

HENRI BERGSON, L'Évolution Créatrice. Ch. 1. (1907)

11 He who cares not for his owne, is master of another man's life.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. iv, mem. 2. (1621)

As one said of a traitor, whoso despiseth his own life may easily be master of anothers.

DANIEL ROGERS, Naaman the Syrian, x, 295. (1642)

He is Master of another's life, who slights his own.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 312. (1666)

12 With life many things are remedied. (Con la vida muchas cosas se remedian.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 39. (1615)

13 If you have a garden in your library, we shall have all we want. (Si hortum in bibliotheca habes, deerit nihil.)

CICERO, Ad Familiares. Bk. ix, epls. iv, sec. 1 (46 B. C.) Plain living and high thinking.

To live is to think. (Vivere est cogitare.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. v. ch. 38, sec. 111. (B. C. 45)

I will show myself highly fed and lowly taught.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, ii, 2, 3. (1602)

Plain living and high thinking are no more.

WORDSWORTH, Poems Dedicated to National Independence. Pt. i. (1802)

A conspicuous example of plain living and high thinking.

THOMAS HAWES, Evenings for the People: George Herbert. (a. 1820)

Not so much low livin' and high thinkin', as low lights and no thinkin'.

LANGDON MITCHELL, The New York Idea. Act ii. (1906)

He who thinks only of feeding his stomach leaves his head to starve.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 378. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

Plain living and high thinking is what expressed the ideal best.

MICHAEL INNES, Comedy of Terrors, p. 50. (1940) Stick to high living and plain thinking.

EVERY, Anything for a Quiet Life, p. 54. (1942)

1 That fellow spells Life with an £.

J. J. CONNINGTON, The Twenty-One Clues, p. 127. (1941) Quoting Edgar Wallace.

2 He lives unsafely that looks too near to matters.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Esplucher. (1611) He lives unsafely that looks too near on things.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

3 You live the life of a hare. (λαγὼ βίον ἔζη.)

DEMOSTHENES, De Corona. Sec. 314. (c. 340 B. C.) A porochial life is not a bed of roses. . . . A porochial life, ma'am, is a life of worrit.

DICKENS, Oliver Twist. Ch. 17. (1838)

4 It's a reg'lar holiday to them—all porter and skittles.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 40. (1837) All is gas and gaiters!

DICKENS, Nicholas Nickleby. Ch. 49. (1839) Life isn't all beer and skittles.

HUGHES, Tom Brown's School Days. Ch. 2. (1857) Life is with such all beer and skittles;

They are not difficult to please about their vic-tuals.

C. S. CALVERLEY, Contentment. (1862) They began to realize that a soldier's life was not all beer and skittles.

KIPLING, Drums of the Fore and Aft. (1888) Life ain't all beer and skittles, and more's the pity; but what's the odds, so long as you're happy?

GEORGE DU MAURIER, Trilby, p. 25. (1894) Life is not all plays and poems.

BERNARD SHAW, Man and Superman. Act i. (1903) Life is not wholly beer and skittles,

A treasure hunt for love and victuals.

OGDEN NASH, Electra Becomes Morbid. (1933) The French say, "Tout n'est pas rose dans la vie."

5 For the conduct of life we need right reason or a halter. (τὸν βίον παρεσκευάσθαι δεῖν λόγον ἢ βρόχον.)

DIOGENES, Apothegm. (c. 350 B. C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Diogenes. Bk. vi, sec. 24.

This is the whole of living, not to live unto one-self alone. (τοῦτ' ἐστὶ τὸ ζῆν, οὐχ εἰς αὐτῷ ζῆν μόνον.)

MENANDER, The Brothers in Love. Frag. 507K. (c. 300 B. C.)

He regulated his life wisely. (Sapienter vitam instituit.)

TERENCE, Andria, l. 67. (166 B. C.)

Rules for a happy life. (Vitae praecepta beatae.)

HORACE, Satires, ii, 4, 95. (35 B. C.)

He has spent his life best who has enjoyed it most.

SAMUEL BUTLER, The Way of All Flesh. Ch. 19. (a. 1902)

6 Not life itself, but living ill, is evil. (οὐ τὸ ζῆν, ἀλλὰ τὸ κακῶς ζῆν.)

DIOGENES, Apothegm. (c. 350 B. C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Diogenes. Bk. vi, sec. 55.

He that lives ill, fear follows him.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 115. (1640)

He that lives not well one year, sorrows seven after.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 564. (1640)

He that lives ill one year, will sorrow for it seven.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Clarissa, iv, 121. (1748)

7 Life is always interesting when you have a purpose and live in its fulfillment.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Endymion. Ch. 55. (1880)

8 We must not look for a golden life in an yron world.

THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 242. (1633)

Expect not a golden life in an iron world.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia. (1639)

We must not look for a golden life in an iron age.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 14. (1670)

A day of gold from out an age of iron

Is all that life allows the luckiest sinner.

LORD BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iii, st. 36. (1821)

Life is made up of marble and mud.

NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE, The House of the Seven Gables. Ch. 2. (1851)

9 He is unworthy of life, that causes not life in another. (Nascitur indigne per quem non nascitur alter.)

DANIEL DYKE, Six Evangelical Histories, p. 98. (1633)

10 I see . . . everything as large as life.

MARIA EDGEWORTH, Lame Jervas. Ch. 2. (1799) The Latin proverbial phrase is "Ad vivum"

(To the life).

An imposing-looking Don, as large as life and quite as natural.

CUTHBERT BEDE (E. BRADLEY), The Adventures of Mr. Verdant Greene. Ch. 6. (1853)

As large as life and twice as natural.

LEWIS CARROLL (C. L. DODGSON), Through the Looking-Glass. Ch. 7. (1871) SHAW, Mrs. Warren's Profession. Act i. (1893) BLACK-

MORE, Perlycross. Ch. 21. (1894)

Looking as big as life and twice as natural.

HILEA BAILEY, The Smiling Corpse, p. 105. (1941)

<sup>1</sup> We live amid surfaces, and the true art of life is to skate well on them.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Experience. (1844)

We live merely on the crust or rind of things.

J. A. FROUDE, Short Studies: Lucian. (a. 1881)
You cannot learn to skate without being ridiculous. . . . The ice of life is slippery.

SHAW, Fanny's First Play: Induction. (1911)

<sup>2</sup> Aimless we drift, we live but more or less.
(Incerte errat animus, praeterpropter vitam vivitur.)

QUINTUS ENNIUS, Iphigenia. Frag. 248, Loeb.
(c. 180 B. C.) Cited by AULUS GELLIUS,
Noctes Atticae, bk. xix, ch. 10, sec. 12, in his discussion of the meaning of praeterpropter.

<sup>3</sup> Nothing is more precious than life. (δῆλον μὲν οὐκ ἔστι.)

EURIPIDES, Alcestis, l. 300. (c. 438 B. C.)

Skin for skin, yea, all that a man hath will he give for his life. (Pellem pro pelle, et cuncta quae habet homo, dabit pro anima sua.)

Old Testament: Job, ii, 4. (c. 350 B. C.)

Everything would fain live.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 116. (1670)

There is nothing which men love better to preserve, and which they take care of less, than their own lives. (Il n'y rien que les hommes aiment mieux à conserver, et qu'ils ménagent moins, que leur propre vie.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères: De l'Homme. (1688)

<sup>4</sup> I tell myself that we are long time underground,
And that life is short, but sweet.

(ἢ μὴν πολὺν γε τὸν κάτω λογίζομαι χρόνον, το δὲ ζῆν μικρόν, ἀλλ' ὅμως γλυκύ.)

EURIPIDES, Alcestis, l. 692. (c. 438 B. C.) In l. 722, Pheres adds, "Sweet is the sunlight of the gods, very sweet" (φῶλον τὸ φέγγος τοῦτο τοῦ θεοῦ, φῶλον).

Life is delight; away, dull care. (τρυφή βίος, ἔρρητ' ἀνία.)

PALLADAS, Epigram. (c. A. D. 425) See Greek Anthology. Bk. v, epig. 72.

For be monnes lode neuer so luther, the lyf is aye swete.

UNKNOWN, Patience, l. 156. (c. 1350)

Crist deide him self for the feith,
But now our ferful prelate saith,
"The life is swete."

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. v, l. 239. (c. 1390)

Old women . . . ever mumbling in their mouths,
Life is sweet. (ὥς ἀγαθόν.)

ERASMUS, Moriae Encomium. Sec. 34. (1511)

Life is sweet to every one.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 180. (1576)

Life is sweet, hunger sharp; between them the contention must be short.

LYLY, Love's Metamorphosis, iii, 1. (1601)

All this is very true; but life is sweet for all that.

FIELDING, Jonathan Wild. Bk. iv, ch. 13. (1743)

Life is still beautiful. (Das Leben ist doch schön.)

SCHILLER, Don Carlos. Act iv. (1787)

The golden tree of life is green. (Und grün des Lebens goldner Baum.)

GOETHE, Faust. Pt. i, sc. 4. (1806)

Life is sweet, brother. . . . There's night and day, brother, both sweet things; sun, moon, and stars, brother, all sweet things; there's likewise a wind on the heath. Life is very sweet, brother; who would wish to die?

GEORGE BORROW, Lavengro. Ch. 25. (1851)

Life's more amusing than we thought.

ANDREW LANG, Ballade of Middle Age. (1872)

Life's not such a bad game after all.

H. J. SMITH, Mrs. Bumpstead-Leigh. Act i. (1911)

<sup>5</sup> Life reft of honor is but crushing toil. (τὸ γὰρ ζῆν μὴ καλῶς μέγας πόνος.)

EURIPIDES, Hecuba, l. 378. (c. 425 B. C.)

A shameful life is disgraceful, however pleasant. (δνειδος αἰσχρὸς βίος οὖτως κἀν ἡδὺς ἦ.)

MENANDER, Fragments. Frag. 756. (c. 300 B. C.)

Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia: How to Study Poetry. Sec. 21C.

<sup>6</sup> Man's whole life is full of anguish. (πᾶς δ' δδυνηρὸς βίος ἀνθρώπων.)

EURIPIDES, Hippolytus, l. 189. (c. 428 B. C.)

It is a misery to be born, a pain to live, a trouble to die. (Nasci miserum, vivere poena, angustia mori.)

ST. BERNARD, De Consideratione. Pt. v. (c. 1130)

If wee consider the whole course of our life, wee begin with cries, and end with cares.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 40. (1576)

Why are we so fond of a life that begins with a cry and ends with a groan?

MARY, COUNTESS OF WARWICK, on her death-bed. (1678)

We are born crying, live complaining, and die disappointed.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5427. (1732)

Human life is everywhere a state in which much is to be endured, and little to be enjoyed.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Rasselas. Ch. 11. (1759)

Tell me, all-judging Jove, if this is fair,

To make so short a life so full of care?

RICHARD CUMBERLAND, On Human Life. (c. 1800)

It better befits a man to laugh at life than to lament over it. (Humanus est deridere vitam quam deplorare.)

SENECA, De Tranquillitate Animi. Ch. 15, sec. 3. (c. A. D. 60)

<sup>7</sup> [They] sold their lives very derely.

JOHN EVELYN, Diary, 8 July, 1685.

<sup>8</sup> Who lyueth, vanquisheth. (Viue chi vince.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 33. (1578)

Unless viue and chi have been transferred by mistake in the Italian text, the sense of the proverb is completely altered in the translation, which should read, "He who wins, lives."

He that liveth, overcometh.

Book of Meery Riddles. Prov. 131. (1629)

1 Dogs, would you live forever? (Hunde, wollt ihr ewig leben?)

FREDERICK THE GREAT, shouting at a group of soldiers who were retreating from the battle of Kolin, 18 June, 1757, and forcing them back into line. CARLYLE, French Revolution, pt. ii, bk. i, ch. 4, writes, "There were certain runaways whom Fritz the Great bullied back into battle with a 'R——, wolt ihr ewig leben?' 'Unprintable Off-scourings of Scoundrels, would ye live forever?'" The word which Carlyle was too Victorian to print was perhaps Rindviehe. Strangely enough in his Frederick the Great, bk. xviii, ch. 4, he declares the episode "is to be counted pure myth." See also MARTIN, History of France, xv, 98.

Come on, you sons of bitches! Do you want to live forever?

GUNNERY SERGEANT DANIEL DALY, U. S. Marine Corps, at Lucy-le-Bocage, on the fringe of Belleau Wood, 4 June, 1918. The phrase is common to all wars, and has been credited to many soldiers.

2 He kills a Man, that saves not his Life, when he can.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1957. (1732) Who saves another's life adds ten years to his own. S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 367. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

3 Life would be too smooth, if it had no Rubs in it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3212. (1732) Life to have its sweets must have its sour.

JOHN MASEFIELD, The Widow in the Bye Street. Pt. iv, st. 25. (1912)

4 There is more to life than increasing its speed. MAHATMA GANDHI, commenting on modern life. (c. 1935)

5 Live dangerously and you live right! (Es lebe, wer sich tapfer hält!)

GOETHE, Faust. Pt. i, sc. 14: Wald und Höhle. (1806)

Thou hast made danger thy calling; there is nothing contemptible in that. (Du hast aus der Gefahr deinen Beruf gemacht, daren ist nichts zu verachten.)

FRIEDRICH NIETZSCHE, Also Sprach Zarathustra. Pt. i, sec. 6. (1883) In The Joyful Wisdom, p. 219, Nietzsche adds, "Live in danger. Build your cities on the slopes of Vesuvius."

I wish to preach, not the doctrine of ignoble ease, but the doctrine of the strenuous life.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Speech, Hamilton Club, Chicago, 10 April, 1899.

6 He who leads a fast life runs through life in a double sense. (Auien vive apriosa en el vicio, acaba presto de dos maneras.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 90. (1647)

He that lives carnally, won't live eternally.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1733.

I live high and lodge in a garret.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

A gay night life (Nachtleben) has the effect on the looks and complexion of a long spell of sickness.

JOHANN PAUL RICHTER, Hesperus, xvi. (1795)

When we're asked to decide on the wrong or the right life, Night life wins.

NOEL COWARD, Bitter Sweet. Act ii, sc. 1. (1929)

7 They live most at ease that have the world at will.

GRANGE, Golden Aphroditis, sig. H2. (1577)

Would you live at ease, do what you ought, and not what you please.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734. A rhymed rendering of the Latin proverb, "Non uti libet, sed uti licet, sic vivamus" (Not as it pleases us, but as it is right for us, so let us live).

The best thing in the world is to live above it.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 499. (1855)

8 I shall make a song of the Queen of Crete . . . And her private life was her own affair.

JOHN GRIMES, The Queen of Crete. (1923)

9 In the morning of life, work, in the midday give counsel, in the evening pray. (Ἔργα νέων, βουλὰὶ δὲ μέσων, εὐχαὶ δὲ γερόντων.)

HESIOD, Harpocration. Frag. 19. (c. 800 B. C.)

In seed time learn, in harvest teach, in winter enjoy.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell. (1808)

10 Life is short and the art is long. (ὁ βίος βραχύς, ἡ δὲ τέχνη μακρή.)

HIPPOCRATES, Aphorisms. No. 1. (c. 400 B. C.)

Referring to the art of healing. See under ART.

11 When that little wife of mine says, "Tom you're a good feller, God bless you," it goes right in where I live.

J. G. HOLLAND, Miss Gilbert, p. 386. (1860)

This hurt Brigham—right where he lived.

J. H. BEADLE, Western Wilds, p. 602. (1883)

If I could only have reached him where he lives, as our slang says!

HOWELLS, The Minister's Charge. Ch. 3. (1886)

12 Late may you return to the skies. (Serus in caelum redeas.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 2, l. 45. (23 B. C.) To Caesar Augustus.

May you live all the days of your life.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

13 The Turk meddles not with life and limb.

JAMES HOWELL, Letters, i, 335. (1623)

They venture life and member.

THOMAS BURTON, Diary, iii, 235. (1658)

[She] mercifully escaped with life and limb.

LADY DE ERESBY, in SHARPE, Correspondence, ii, 495. (1836)

<sup>1</sup> The art of life is the art of avoiding pain.
THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to Mrs. Conway, 1786.

The art of life is to know how to enjoy a little and to endure much.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Commonplaces. No. 1. (1821)
The great secret of life is to hear lessons, and not to teach them.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 20. (1843)

The finest art, the most difficult to learn, is the art of living.

JOHN MACY, About Women, p. 122. (1930)

Living is an art.

ALDOUS HUXLEY, Texts and Pretexts, p. 129. (1932)

<sup>2</sup> I would not live alway. (Nequaquam ultra iam vivam.)

Old Testament: Job, vii, 16. (c. 400 B.C.) Title and refrain of poem by W. H. Muhlenberg.

Don't try to live forever. You will not succeed.
BERNARD SHAW, The Doctor's Dilemma: Preface (1906)

<sup>3</sup> The business of life is to go forward.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Idler. No. 72. (1758)
Life can only be understood backwards; but it must be lived forwards.

SÖREN KIERKEGAARD, Life. (a. 1855)

<sup>4</sup> The hope of life returns with the sun. (Spes vitae cum sole redit.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xii, l. 70. (A.D. 120)
WHILE THERE'S LIFE THERE'S HOPE, see under HOPE.

<sup>5</sup> To no man is life given in freehold; all are tenants. (Vitaque mancipio nulli datur, omnibus usu.)

LUCRETIVS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. iii, l. 971. (c. 45 B.C.) Mancipium was the legal process by which the full ownership of any property was transferred; usus was merely the right of use. Paraphrased by HORACE, Satires, ii, ii, 134.

Nature has granted the use of life like a loan, without fixing any day for repayment. (Natura . . . dedit usuram vitae tamquam pecuniae nulla praestituta die.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. i, ch. 19, sec. 93. (45 B.C.)

Man has been lent, not given, to life. (Homo vitae commodatus, non donatus est.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 257. (43 B.C.)
We haue no lettire of owre lyf, how longe it shal dure.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers the Plowman. Text B, passus x, l. 89. (1377)

If I might have a lease of my life for a thousand years I could stay no longer.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, iv, 10, 6. (1590)
No man hath a lease of his life.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 266. (1721)

<sup>6</sup> We turn eternally in the circle which shuts us in. (Versamur ibidem atque insumus usque.)

LUCRETIVS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. iii, l. 1080. (c. 45 B.C.) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, i. 19.

<sup>7</sup> Life, like poverty, makes strange bedfellows.
LORD LYTTON, Caxtons. Pt. iv, ch. 4. (1849)

<sup>8</sup> This also, that I live, I consider a gift of God. (Id quoque, quod vivam, munus habere dei.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. i, eleg. 1, l. 20. (c. A.D. 9)
My life is moral, my Muse is gay. (Vita verecunda est, Musa iocosa mea.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. ii, l. 354. (c. A.D. 9)

<sup>9</sup> The thread of life. (Fila vitae.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. v, eleg. x, l. 46. (c. A.D. 11)
Life hangs on a slender thread. (ἀπὸ λεπτοῦ μέτου τὸ ζῆν ἤρτηται.)

SYNESIUS, Dion. Sec. 162A. (c. A.D. 400)
A bachelor compares life to a shirt-button, because it often hangs by a thread.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 330. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

<sup>10</sup> The truest end of Life is, to know that Life never ends.

WILLIAM PENN, Some Fruits of Solitude. Pt. i, maxim 489. (1693)

Life doesn't end: it goes on.

SHAW, Heartbreak House. Act iii. (1913)

<sup>11</sup> Human affairs are not what a man wishes, but what he can get, as the proverb goes. (τοιαῦτα τὰ ἡμέτερά ἐστιν, οὐχ ὅσα βούλεται τις, φασίν, . . . ἀλλ' ὅσα δύναται.)

PLATO, Greater Hippias. Sec. 301C. (c. 375 B.C.)
We live not as we like, but as we can. (ζῶμεν γὰρ οὐχ ὡς θέλομεν, ἀλλ' ὡς δυνάμεθα.)

MENANDER, Andria. Fr. 50. (c. 300 B.C.)
If you are wise, live as you can if you cannot live as you would. (Viva el discreto como puede; si no, como querria.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 120. (1647)

<sup>12</sup> I wouldn't give a rotten nut for your life. (Non ego tuam empsim vitam vitiosa nuce.)

PLAUTUS, Miles Gloriosus, l. 316. (c. 200 B.C.)

<sup>13</sup> I like to live my own life. (Mei volo vivere.)
PLAUTUS, Miles Gloriosus, l. 678. (c. 200 B.C.)
Let me live my own life. (Meo me vivere in-terea modo.)

TERENCE, Andria, l. 153. (166 B.C.)

Enjoy your own lot. (Utere sorte tua.)

VEROIL, Aeneid. Bk. xii, l. 932. (19 B.C.)

And of all men we are most wretched, who Must live each other's lives and not our own.

OSCAR WILDE, Humanitad. St. 68. (a. 1900)

It is better to lead your own life, however bad, than to lead another's, however good.

RALPH A. HABAS, The Art of Self-Control, p. 28. Quoting the Bhagavad-Gita.

<sup>1</sup> This life of ours is full of traps. (In aetate hominum plurimae fiunt trasennae.)

PLAUTUS, Rudens, l. 1235. (c. 200 B. C.)

<sup>2</sup> Life is variable. (Varia vita est.)

PLAUTUS, Truculentus, l. 219. (c. 189 B. C.)

<sup>3</sup> Do not wear a tight ring. (μή φορεῖν στενὸν δακτύλιον.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: Education of Children, 12E. (c. A. D. 95) Plutarch is quoting a proverb, meaning that one should live one's life unhampered.

Not to wear a straight ring: that is, that we should lead our life, so as we need not to fetter it with chaynes.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His Ephoebus (Arber), p. 148. (1579) Quoting Pythagoras.

"You bet your life they do," said he.

STEPHEN POWERS, Afoot and Alone, p. 244. (1872)

The congressman was asked if there had been any gambling during the trip. "Not on your life," he said.

UNKNOWN, New York Evening Post, 19 Aug., 1905, p. 2.

"You'd . . . vote the socialist ticket." . . . "Not on your life," Billy declined.

JACK LONDON, The Valley of the Moon, ii, 7. (1913)

<sup>4</sup> Life is short in itself, but misfortune makes it longer. (Brevis ipsa vita est sed malis fit longior.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 92. (c. 43 B. C.) O life, long for woe, but brief for joy. (O vita misero longa, felici brevis!)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 485.

For men who are fortunate, life is short; but for those who fall into misfortune, one night is infinite time. (τοῖσι μὲν εὖ πράττουσιν πᾶς ὁ βίος βραχὺς ἐστίν, | τοῖσι δὲ κακῶς μίᾳ νύξ ἀπληρὸς ἐστὶ χρόνος.)

LUCIAN, Epigram. (c. A. D. 170) See Greek Anthology, bk. x, epig. 28.

<sup>5</sup> The height of misery is to live at the will of another. (Miserrimum est arbitrio alterius vivere.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 413. (c. 43 B. C.) He who does not live a busy life of his own is as good as dead for others. (Qui sibi non vivit aliis merito est mortuus.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 589. The man who can not attend to his own affairs, is worthless in looking after the affairs of others. Friedrich aptly illustrates the sense from SENECA, Ad Lucillum, epis. lv, sec. 4-5, summed up by "Non continuo sibi vivit, qui nemini" (He who lives for no one does not necessarily live for himself). See also under WISDOM: WISE FOR ONESELF.

How happy the life which has passed without strife! (Quam est felix vita quae sine odiis transiit!)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 599.

<sup>6</sup> Twenty years a boy, twenty years a youth, twenty years a young man, twenty years an old man; and these four periods correspond to the four seasons, the boy to spring, the youth to summer, the young man to autumn, and the old man to winter. (παῖς εἰκοσι ἔτη, νεανίσκος εἴκοσι, νεηνίης εἴκοσι, γέρων εἴκοσι.)

PYTHAGORAS, describing the four ages of man. (c. 525 B. C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pythagoras. Sec. 10.

In man's life there are seven seasons, which they call ages, little boy, boy, lad, young man, man, elderly man, old man. (παῖδιον, παῖς, μεράκιον, νεανίσκος, ἀνήρ, πρεσβύτες, γέρον.)

HIPPOCRATES. (c. 400 B. C.) As quoted by PHILO, De Opificio Mundi, 105. Each of these ages was seven years long. Solon, as quoted by PHILO, sec. 104, divided man's life into ten weeks of years, and it is interesting to note that he did not think marriage should come until the fifth week (35), and that real maturity did not come until the sixth (42). See also HORACE, De Arte Poetica, l. 158.

One man in his time plays many parts, His acts being seven ages.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, ii, 7, 142. (1600)

Following Hippocrates: infant, school-boy, lover, soldier, justice, old age, senility.

Twenty young, Thirty strong, Forty wit, Or never none.

MRS. CHAMBERLAIN, West Worcestershire Words, p. 39. (1882)

Ten pretty, twenty witty, thirty strong, if ever; Forty wise, fifty rich, sixty saint, or never.

G. L. APPERSON, English Proverbs, p. 652. (1929) Apperson quotes this as a manuscript entry in faded ink in his copy of RAY'S Proverbs.

<sup>7</sup> Life spent returns not back again.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. i, Apologue 9. (c. 1258)

Thy life is a bird and its name is Breath. When the bird hath flown from the cage, it cometh not back to captivity.

SADI, Bustan, ix, 7. (c. 1257) Edwards, tr.

Man lives in the world but once. (Man lebt nur einmal in der Welt.)

GOETHE, Clavigo, i. (1774)

ALAS, FOR US NO SECOND SPRING, see DEATH: ITS FINALITY.

<sup>8</sup> Life is earnest. (Ernst ist das Leben.)

SCHILLER, Wallenstein. (1799)

Life is real! Life is earnest! And the grave is not its goal.

H. W. LONGFELLOW, A Psalm of Life. (1838)

<sup>9</sup> My friend has since taken out a new lease of life, and may . . . live as long as I shall.

WALTER SCOTT, Letter to Ellis, 8 Jan., 1809.

Wherever Estates still existed, they seemed to have gained a new lease of life.

SIR JOHN SEELEY, The Life and Times of Stein, iii, 397. (1878)

<sup>1</sup> No man can have a peaceful life who thinks too much about lengthening it. (Nulli potest secura vita contingere, qui de producenda nimis cogitat.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. iv, sec.4. (a. A. D. 64) Drinking and sweating—'tis the life of a dyspeptic. (Bibere et suadere vita cardiaci est.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xv, sec. 3. He that liveth by physic liveth miserably.

THOMAS COGAN, The Haven of Health: Dedication. (1588)

Who lives medically lives miserably. (Qui medice vivit misere vivit.)

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. (1621) Quoted.

Such people are the kind that seem to enjoy poor health.

J. F. MONTAGUE, Broadway Stomach, p. 104. (1940) See also HEALTH: 1104:10.

<sup>2</sup> Life is not to be purchased at any price. (Non omni pretio vita emenda est.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis.lxx,sec.7.(c. A. D. 64)

<sup>3</sup> The greatest flaw in life is that it is always imperfect. (Maximum vitæ vitium est, quod imperfecta semper est.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis.ci, sec.8. (c. A. D. 64)

<sup>4</sup> It takes the whole of life to learn how to live. (Vivere tota vita discendum est.)

SENECA, De Brevitate Vitæ. Ch. 7, sec. 3. (c. A. D. 45)

Most men employ the earlier part of life to make the other part miserable. (La plupart des hommes emploient la première partie de leur vie à rendre l'autre misérable.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Ch. 11. (1688)

The first forty years of life give us the text; the next thirty supply the commentary on it.

ARTHUR SCHOPENHAUER, Parerga und Paralipomena. Ch. 1. (1851)

The first half of life consists of the capacity to enjoy without the chance; the last half consists of the chance without the capacity.

MARK TWAIN, Letter to Edward I. Dimmitt, 19 July, 1901.

<sup>5</sup> I bear a charmed life.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, v, 8, 12. (1686)

<sup>6</sup> [He] turn'd your wit the seamy side without.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, iv, 2, 147. (1605)

See the seamy side of this intellectual trade.

CAROLINE NORTON, Letter, 4 Nov., 1837.

The seamy side and the smooth, of Life at Cirey.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Frederick the Great, iii, 223. (1865)

The seamy side of life. The worst—the most degraded—side or aspect of life. From the under side of garments.

ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés. (1941)

<sup>7</sup> According to the Dutch Prouerbe . . . Leuen ende laeten leuen. To liue and let others liue.

GERARD DE MALYNES, Consuetudo vel Lex Mer- catoria, p. 229. (1622) The Italians say, "Vivi, e lascia vivere."

Live and let live, i. e. Do as you would be done by.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 170. (1678)

What's the Whole Bus'ness at last; but Live, and let Live?

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, An Answer to a Letter to a Dissenter, p. 43. (1687)

Live and let live, is the rule of common justice.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, tr., Aesop's Fables, p. 127. (1692)

One must live and let live, as the saying is.

SMOLLETT, Sir Launcelot Greaves. Ch.16.(1762)

Live and let live. (Leben und leben lassen.)

SCHILLER, Wallenstein's Lager. Act iv, l. 106. (1799)

Liberty is the very air of the Boulevards. Live and let live.

E. V. LUCAS, Wanderer in Paris. Ch. 14. (1909)

You know how I am, Sam—live and let live.

RING LARDNER, Rhythm. (1926)

Live and let live is my motto.

MANNING COLES, They Tell No Tales, p. 56.

(1942) BEAR and FORBEAR, see under FORBEARANCE.

<sup>8</sup> Best live a careless life from hand to mouth. (εὐκὴ κἀρίστον ἥν, ὥπως δύναίτο τις.)

SOPHOCLES, Oedipus the King, l.979.(c.409 B. C.)

I live from day to day. (Je vis du jour à la journée.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 40. (1580) Florio translates it, "I live from hand to mouth."

The modern French proverb is, "Journée gagnée, journée dépensée" (A day's wages earned, a day's wages spent).

Living from hand to mouth, soon satisf'd.

JOSHUA SYLVESTER, tr., Divine Weekes and Workes. Wk. ii, day 1, l. 122. (1605)

All the means of his gettings is but from hand to mouth.

RICHARD BRATHWAIT, Whimsies, p. 143. (1631)

He has a numerous family, and lives from hand to mouth.

ARBUTHNOT, John Bull. Pt. ii, ch. 3. (1712)

I subsist, as the poor are vulgarly said to do, from hand to mouth.

WILLIAM COWPER, Letter to Newton, 5 Feb., 1790. See also SHAW, Heartbreak House. Act ii. (1913) SAROYAN, The Time of Your Life. Act ii. (1939), etc.

<sup>9</sup> You've brought me back to life. (Reddidisti animum.)

TERENCE, Andria, l. 333. (166 B. C.)

<sup>10</sup> Life holds more disappointment than satisfaction. (τὸ δὲ κενὸν τοῦ βίου πλεον τοῦ συμφέροντος.)

THEOPHRASTUS, Characters. (c. 300 B. C.) See

DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Theophrastus, v, 41.

<sup>11</sup> To execute great things, one should live as though one was never going to die. (Pour exécuter de grandes choses, il faut vivre comme si on ne devait jamais mourir.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 142. (1746) An echo of the advice credited to Isidore of Seville, "Study as if you were to live forever; live as if you were to die tomorrow."

1 It isn't life that matters, it's the courage you bring to it.

HUGH WALPOLE, Fortitude. Ch. 1. (1913)

2 His whole life is an open ledger.

PHILIP WYLIE, Corpses at Indian Stones, p. 218. (1943) "His life is an open book" is the usual form.

III—Life: Its Brevity

3 The life of man passes by like a galloping horse.

CHUANG-TSZE, Philosophy. Ch. 11. (c. 400 B. C.) Man passes through this sublunary life as a sun-beam passes a crack.

CHUANG-TSZE, Philosophy. Ch. 11.

We pass away out of the world as grasshoppers.

Apocrypha: II Esdras, iv, 24. (c. A. D. 90)

As runs the Glass Man's Life doth pass.

BENJAMIN HARRIS (?), The New England Primer. (c. 1687)

4 Men are but short-lived. (ἄνθρωποι δὲ μινυνθάδιοι τελέθουσιν.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xix, l. 328. (c. 850 B. C.) Another proverbial phrase is, "The life of a creature of a day" (ἐφήμερον ζῶν).

Reflect how short life is. (Vita quam sit brevis, simul cogita.)

PLAUTUS, Mostellaria, l. 726. (c. 220 B. C.)

The life of man is short. (Vita mortaliū brevis.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, x, 63. (1508)

O gentlemen, the time of life is short!

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, v, 2, 82. (1597)

How short is life! how frail is human trust!

JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. iii, l. 235. (1716)

5 Thy span of life is brief and endureth no long time. (ὅ νύ τοι αἶσα μινυνθά περ. οὐ τι μάλα δῆν.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. i, l. 416. (c. 850 B. C.)

The short span of life forbids us to spin out hope to any length. (Vitae summa brevis spem nos vetat inchoare longam.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 4, l. 15. (23 B. C.)

The span of life. (τὴν σπιθαμὴν τοῦ βίου.)

DIOGENIANUS, Adagia, viii, 74. (c. 950)

I know my Life's a Pain, and but a Span.

JOHN DAVIES, Nosce Teipsum: Intro. (1599)

How brief the life of man . . . the stretching of a span

Buckles in his sum of age.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, iii, 2, 140. (1600)

A life's but a span.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, ii, 3, 75. (1605)

Her waist is ampler than her life,

For life is but a span.

O. W. HOLMES, My Aunt. (1836)

6 As leaves on the trees, such is the life of man. (οἷη περ φύλλων γενεή, τοῖη δὲ καὶ ἀνδρῶν.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. vi, l. 146. (c. 850 B. C.)

Cited by STOBÆUS, Florilegium, xcvi, 29.

We all do fade as a leaf. (Cecidimus quasi folium.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, lxiv, 6. (c. 725 B. C.)

The finest flower will soonest fade.

HUTH, Ancient Ballads, p. 374. (c. 1570)

Death lies on her like an untimely frost

Upon the sweetest flower of all the field.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, iv, 5, 28. (1595)

The Wine of Life keeps oozing drop by drop,

The Leaves of Life keep falling one by one.

EDWARD FITZGERALD, tr., The Rubáiyát of Omar Khayyám. St. 8. (1859)

I came like Water, and like Wind I go.

EDWARD FITZGERALD, tr., The Rubáiyát. St. 28.

We come and go like autumn leaves before the blast.

H. J. SMITH, Mrs. Bumpstead-Leigh. Act ii. (1911)

7 For what is your life? It is even a vapour, that appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away. (ἀτμὶς γὰρ ἐστε πρὸς ὀλίγον φαινομένη, ἔπειτα καὶ ἀφανιζομένη.)

New Testament: James, iv, 14. (c. A. D. 60)

The Vulgate is, "Quae est enim vita vestra? vapor est ad modicum parens, et deinceps exterminabitur."

He that lives longest lives but a little while.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler, 20 Nov., 1750.

8 The short bloom of our brief and narrow life flies fast away. While we are calling for flowers and wine and women, age is upon us. (Festinat enim decurrere velox | flosculus angustae miseraeque brevissima vitae | portio; dum bibimus, dum sarta unguenta puellas | poscimus, obrepit non intellecta senectus.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. ix, l. 126. (c. A. D. 120)

Reminiscent of this is Uhland's, "Des Menschen Leben ist | Ein kurzes Blühen und ein langes Welken" (The life of man is a short blooming and a long withering).

The life of this present world is but a fleeting joy, which blossometh for an hour.

MOHAMMED, The Koran, lvii, 20. (c. 622)

Even so our life like to this fading flower

Doth spring, bud, blossom, wither in an hour.

UNKNOWN, Poor Robin's Almanack, 1664.

9 Life is too short for mean anxieties.

KINGSLEY, Saint's Tragedy. Act ii, sc. 9. (1848)

Life is too short to waste.

In critic peep or cynic bark.

R. W. EMERSON, To J.W. (c. 1867)

10 Soon the generations of living creatures are changed and like runners pass on the torch of life. (Quasi cursores vitae lampada tradunt.)

LUCRETIVUS, De Rerum Natura, ii, 79. (c. 45 B. C.)

11 Life is but a brief visit. (παρεπιδημία τις ἐστὶν ὁ βίος.)

PLATO, Axiochus. Sec. 2. (c. 375 B. C.)

All life is but a moment in time. (στιγμὴ χρόνον πᾶς ἐστὶν ὁ βίος.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: On the Education of Children. Sec. 13B. (c. A. D. 100)

And a man's life's no more than to say "One."

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, v, 2, 74. (1600)

Life is but a day at most.

ROBERT BURNS, Lines Written in Friar's Carse Hermitage. (1788)

1 Nature has given man no better thing than shortness of life. (Natura vero nihil hominibus brevitae vitae praestitit melius.)

PLINY THE ELDER, Naturalis Historia. Bk. vii, ch. 51, sec. 3. (A. D. 77)

2 As for man, his days are as grass: as a flower of the field, so he flourisheth. (Homo, sicut foenum dies eius, tamquam flos agri sic efflorescit.)

Old Testament: Psalms, ciii, 15.

The wind passeth over it, and it is gone; and the place thereof shall know it no more. (Quoniam spiritus pertransibit in illo, et non subsistet: et non cognoscat amplius locum suum.)

Old Testament: Psalms, ciii, 16.

3 Neither life nor luck is lasting for man. (Nec vita nec fortuna hominibus perpes est.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 456. (c. 43 B. C.)

4 The very life which we enjoy is short. (Vita ipsa qua fruimur brevis est.)

SALLUST, Bellum Catilinae. Ch. i, sec. 3. (c. 41 B. C.)

The part of life which we really live is short. (Exigua pars est vitae qua vivimus.)

SENECA, De Brevitate Vitae. Sec. 2. (c. A. D. 54)

5 Man's life is like a candle in the wind, or hoar-frost on the tiles.

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 909. (1875)

Man's days are numbered.

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 912.

6 Life speeds on with hurried step. (Properat cursu | vita citato.)

SENECA, Hercules Furens, l. 178. (c. A. D. 60)

The time allotted us is but short and scanty. (Quicquid nobis dedit, breve est et exiguum.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium, Epis. lxxiv, sec. 10. (a. A. D. 64)

7 We are such stuff
As dreams are made on, and our little life
Is rounded with a sleep.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, iv, 1, 156. (1611)

This is the state of man: today he puts forth
The tender leaves of hopes; tomorrow blossoms.
And bears his blushing honours thick upon him:
The third day comes a frost, a killing frost,
And, when he thinks, good easy man, full surely
His greatness is a-ripening, nips his root,
And then he falls, as I do.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII, iii, 2, 352. (1612)

8 You know not what evening may bring.
(Nescis quid vesp̄er vehat.)

MARCUS VARRO. Frag. 340, Bucheler. (c. 50 B. C.) AULUS GELLIIUS, i, xxii, 4, says this was the title of a satire by Varro. VERGIL, Georgics, i, 461, has "Quid vesp̄er serus vehat." The phrase soon passed into a proverb, and is cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, vii, 5. Today let me live well; none knows what it may be tomorrow. (σήμερον ἐσθλὰ παθω' τὸ γὰρ αὔριον οὐδενὶ δῆλον.)

PALLADAS, Epigram. (c. A. D. 425) See Greek Anthology. Bk. v, epig. 72.

9 Each has his day appointed; short and irretrievable is the span of life to all. (Stat sua cuique dies, breve et irreparabile tempus | omnibus est vitae.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. x, l. 467. (19 B. C.)

IV—Life: Living Long

10 Two things doth prolong thy life:
A quiet heart and a loving wife.

THOMAS DELONEY, Strange Histories, p. 70 (1607)

11 He lives longest, that is awake most Hours.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1967. (1732)

12 He will live as long as old Russe of Pottern, who lived till all the world was weary of him.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 14. (1659)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 215. (1670) Pottern is an English village near Devizes, Wilts. Who old Russe was nobody remembers.

He lives long, that lives till all are weary of him.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1966. (1732)

I shall live till all my friends are weary of me.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

13 Alas! I have lived too long by a day. (Nimirum hac die una plus vixi mihi.)

LABERIUS. (c. 60 B. C.) See MACROBIUS, Saturnalia, ii, 7. (c. 450) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, i, 18, "Ah! j'ai vécu trop d'un jour!"

How many illustrious and noble heroes have lived too long by one day! (Combien de héros, glorieux, magnanimes, ont vécu trop d'un jour!)

JEAN-JACQUES ROUSSEAU. (a. 1778)

14 Life is given to none as a disposable property, but to all for use. (Vitaque mancipio nulli datur, omnibus usu.)

LUCRETIUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. iii, l. 984 (c. 45 B. C.)

The life given us is for use. (Vita data est utenda.)

OVID, Consolatio ad Livium, l. 369. (9 B. C.)

Life, if thou knowest how to use it, is long enough (Vita, si scias uti, longa est.)

SENECA, De Brevitate Vitae. Sec. 2. (c. A. D. 54)

Life is long if it is full. (Longa est vita, si plena est.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xciii, sec. 2. (a. A. D. 64)

Our life is long, if we know how to use it.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 153. (1579)

The profit of life consists not in the length, but rather in the use. (L'utilité du vivre n'est pas en l'espace; elle est en l'usage.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 19. (1580)

To live long, is to fill up the days we live.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Newses from Any Whence: Countrey Newses. (1613)

Reflect that life, like ev'ry other blessing,
Derives its value from its use alone.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Irene. Act iii, sc. 8. (1749)
A long life may not be good enough, but a good life is long enough.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1755.
The great use of life is to spend it for something that outlasts it.

WILLIAM JAMES, Thought and Character, ii,
289. (1900)

1
By living long we learn to live. (Diu vivitur, bene vivitur.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus, l. 65. (c. 194 B. C.)

2
How many regrets does length of life incur!
(Heu quam multa paenitenda incurrunt vivendo diu!)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 249. (c. 43 B. C.)
The longer life, the greater griefe.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Vivre. (1611)
He that lives long suffers much.

THOMAS SHELTON, tr., Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch.
32. (1620) The French say, "Qui vit longtemps, sait ce qu'est douleur" (He who lives long knows what suffering is).

A long life hath commonly long cares annexed.
NICHOLAS LING, Politeuphuia, p. 203. (1669)
Long Life hath long Misery.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3270. (1732)
Nothing that lasts is very pleasant, not even life.
(Rien de long n'est fort agréable, pas même la vie.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 698. (1746)
Life protracted is protracted woe.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Vanity of Human Wishes, l. 258. (1748)

3
He which liveth longest, shall fetch his wood furthest.

SAMUEL PURCHAS, His Pilgrim, xix, 247. (1625)
They that live longest, must go furthest for wood.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 116. (1670)

4
They that live longest must die at last.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 116. (1670)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4982. (1732)

5
I love long life better than figs.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, i, 2, 32.
(1606)

6
My mother used to say that it was needful to live long to see much.

THOMAS SHELTON, tr., Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch.
52. (1620)

The langer we live we see the mae ferlies [strange sights].

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 259. (1678)
Them as lives longest sees the most.

THEODORE HOOK, Jack Brag. Ch. 17. (1837)
They who live longest will see most.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk. Ch.
20. (1869)

V—Life: Living Well

7
Knowledge, love, power,—there is the complete life. (Savoir, aimer et pouvoir, c'est là la vie complète.)

HENRI AMIEL, Journal Intime, 7 April, 1851.

8
To live well banishes fear. (Vivir bien destierra miedo.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. i, p. 190. (1814)
A Spanish proverb.

9
The most fruitful of all the arts, the science of living well. (Hanc amplissimam omnium artium, bene vivendi disciplinam.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. iv,
ch. 3, sec. 5. (45 B. C.) Quoted by MON-TAIGNE, i, 25, the French being "Dévoués au plus grand de tous les arts, à celui de bien vivre."

He that lives well hath skill enough.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Vivre. (1611)
A handful of good life is better than a bushel of Learning.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 4.
(1640) A rendering of the old French proverb, "Mieux vaut un poigne de bonne vie que plein muid de clergie."

He that lives well is learned enough.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 91.
FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1736.

10
A good Life is the only Religion.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 158. (1732)

11
He that lives well, sees afar off.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 354.
(1640) RICHARDSON, Clarissa, iv, 121. (1748)

12
Dare to be wise: begin! He who postpones the hour of living rightly is like the rustic who waits for the river to run out before he crosses. (Sapere aude; | incipe! Qui recte vivendi prorogat horam, | rusticus exspectat dum defluat amnis.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 2, l. 40. (20 B. C.)
Do you wish to live rightly? Who does not?
(Vis recte vivere: quis non?)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 6, l. 29. (20 B. C.)
If you do not know how to live rightly, make room for those who can. (Vivere si rectis nescis, decede peritis.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 2, l. 213. (20 B. C.)
Which Pope renders, "Learn to live well, or fairly make your will."

Do you wish never to be sad? Live rightly! (Vis nunquam tristis esse? Recte vive!)

ISIDORE OF SEVILLE, Origines, xiii, 223. (c. 625)

13
It is not a great thing to have been to Jerusalem, but to have lived well is a great thing.
(Non magnum est Hierosolymus fuisse, sed bene vixisse magnum est.)

ST. JEROME (HIERONYMUS), Apothegm. (c.
A. D. 400) As quoted by ERASMUS, Colloquia: Utilitate.

<sup>1</sup> While he lived, he lived well. (Vixit, dum vixit, bene.)

TERENCE, Hecyra, l. 461. (c. 160 B. C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, v, 66. "Men of that sort don't leave much for their heirs," Terence remarks. "About all you can say of him is that while he lived he lived well."

Not living well isn't living at all.

THEODORE PRATT, Thunder Mountain, p. 178. (1944)

<sup>2</sup> Live a life without a stain, after the fashion of the animals. (Sine crimen vitam | degere more ferae.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. iv, l. 550. (19 B. C.)

All of the animals excepting man know that the principal business of life is to enjoy it.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Note-Books. (a. 1902)

VI—Life: He Liveth Long Who Liveth Well

<sup>3</sup> A short space of life is long enough for living well and honestly. (Breve tempus aetatis satis longum est ad bene honesteque vivendum.)

CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. xix, sec. 70. (44 B. C.)

<sup>4</sup> I have lived enough, for I die unconquered. (Satis vixi, invictus enim morior.)

EPAMINONDAS, at the battle of Mantinea. (362 B. C.) See CORNELIUS NEPOS, Lives: Epaminondas.

[You] that prefer A noble life before a long.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus, iii, 1, 152. (1607)

So that my life be brave, what though not long?

WILLIAM DRUMMOND, Sonnets. No. xii. (a. 1649)

<sup>6</sup> The way to live much, is to begin to live well betimes.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4821. (1732)

To live long is almost everyone's wish, but to live well is the ambition of a few.

JOHN HUGHES, The Lay Monk. No. 18. (a. 1720)

<sup>7</sup> They live ill who think they will live for ever. (Male vivunt qui se semper victuros putant.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 371. (c. 43 B. C.)

They live but ill who always think to live.

JOHN BODENHAM, Belvedere, p. 228. (1600)

They seldom live well, who think they shall live long.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4971. (1732)

Better to live well than long.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 330. (1855)

<sup>8</sup> Not the longest life is the best, but the well-spent one. (οὐχ ὁ μακρότατος βίος ἀριστος ἀλλ' ὁ σπουδαϊότατος.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: To Apollonius, 111A. (c. A. D. 95)

It is a happy use of opportunity, rather than a happy old age, which wins the highest place. (τὴν γὰρ εὐκαιρίαν μάλλον, οὐ τὴν εὐγηρίαν πανταχοῦ θεωροῦμεν πρῶτεύουσιν.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: To Apollonius, 111C.

The measure of life is its excellence, not its length of years. (μέτρον γὰρ τοῦ βίου τὸ καλόν, οὐ τὸ τοῦ χρόνου μήκος.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: To Apollonius, 111D.

<sup>9</sup> It is no happiness to live long, nor unhappiness to die soon; happy is he that hath lived long enough to die well.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Enchiridion. Cent. ii, No. 84. (1640)

<sup>10</sup> It's not how long, but how well you live.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs, p. 16. (1670)

Wish not so much to live long as to live well.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1738.

If thou wouldst live long, live well; for folly and wickedness shorten life.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1739.

It matters not how long we live, but how.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Wood and Water. (1839)

<sup>11</sup> Mere living is not good, but living well. (Non enim vivere bonum est, sed bene vivere.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lxx, sec. 4. (a. A. D. 64)

It is with life as with a play: what matters is not how long it is, but how good it is. (Quomodo fabula, sic vita: non quam diu, sed quam bene acta sit, refert.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxvii, sec. 20.

The point is, not how long you live, but how nobly you live. (Quam bene vivas refert, non quam diu.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. ci, sec. 15. The usual proverb form is, "Non quam diu, sed quam bene."

<sup>12</sup> They only have lived long who have lived virtuously.

R. B. SHERIDAN, Pizarro. Act iv, sc. 1. (1799)

<sup>14</sup> Who well lives, long lives; for this age of ours Should not be number'd by years, days, or hours.

JOSHUA SYLVESTER, tr., Du Bartas' Devine Weekes and Workes. Wk. ii, day 4. (1591)

Life is not measured by the time we live.

GEORGE CRABBE, The Village. Bk. ii. (1783)

Life is not dated merely by years. Events are sometimes the best calendars.

DISRAELI, Venetia. Bk. ii, ch. 1. (1837)

<sup>15</sup> Desire not to live long, but to live well; How long we live not years, but actions, tell.

ROWLAND WATKINS, Flamma Sine Fumo: The Hour Glass. (1662)

<sup>16</sup> They liued long enough, that haue liued well enough.

THOMAS WILSON, The Arte of Rhetorique, p. 83. (1560)

If he chance to die young, yet he lives long that lives well.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: The Good Child. (1642)

He that liveth well, liveth long.

KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 168. (1721)

He that lives well, lives long.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Clarissa, iv, 121. (1748)

He liveth long who liveth well!

All other life is short and vain;

He lives the longest who can tell

Of living most for heavenly gain.

HORATIUS BONAR, He Liveth Long Who Liveth Well. (c. 1846)

VII—Life: While We Live, Let Us Live

<sup>1</sup> Let us live, my Lesbia, and love. (Vivamus, mea Lesbia, atque amemus.)

CATULLUS, Odes. Ode v, l. 1. (c. 57 B. C.)

I HAVE LIVED AND LOVED, see under LOVE.

Let us live, then, while it goes well with us. (Ergo vivamus, dum licet esse bene.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 34. (c. A. D. 60)

While we live, let us live. (Dum vivimus, vivamus.)

JAN GRUTER, Inscriptiones Antiquae. (c. 1602)
This is the earliest known appearance of this familiar Latin phrase, of which Gruter does not give the source.

<sup>2</sup> I have lived my time. (Sed mihi quidem βιωται.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. xiv, epis. 21. (44 B. C.)
That man lives happy who from day to day can say, "I have lived!" (Dixisse vixi!)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 29, l. 41. (23 B. C.)

I have lived; I have run the course Fortune allotted me. (Vixi et, quem dederat cursum Fortuna, peregi.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. iv, l. 653. (19 B. C.)

I have lived; nor shall maligner fortune ever Take from me what an earlier hour once gave. (Pervixi: neque enim fortuna malignior unquam eripiet nobis quod prior hora dedit.)

PETRONIUS, Fragments. Frag. 84. (c. A. D. 60)
When a man has said, "I have lived," every morning he arises he receives a bonus. (Quisquis dixit "vixi," cotidie ad lucrum surgit.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xii, sec. 9. (c. A. D. 64)
To-morrow let my sun his beams display,
Or in clouds hide them: I have lived to-day.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, A Vote. (a. 1667)

Fill my hour, ye gods, so that I may not say, whilst I have done this, "Behold, also, an hour of my life is gone,"—but rather, "I have lived an hour."

R. W. EMERSON, Works and Days. (1870)

<sup>3</sup> To live for the hour. (In horam vivere.)

CICERO, Philippicae. No. v, ch. ix, sec. 25. (43 B. C.)

To live for the day. (In diem vivere.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. viii, No. 62.

<sup>4</sup> Life lies not in living but in liking.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 322. (1639)

Life lieth not in living, but in liking. Martial saith, Non est vivere, sed valere vita.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 113. (1670)

<sup>5</sup> We begin not to live before we are ready to die.

WILLIAM CORNWALLIS, Essays, sig. B3. (1600)

Life is half spent, before we know what it is.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 916. (1640) After the French proverb, "La vie est moitié usée avant qu'on ne sache ce qu'est la vie."

<sup>6</sup> The fool, with all his other faults, has this also: he is always getting ready to live. (Inter cetera mala hoc quoque habet stultitia: semper incipit vivere.)

EPICURUS, Fragments. Frag. 494. (c. 300 B. C.)

As quoted by SENECA, Ad Lucilium, xiii, 16. Very few men, properly speaking, live at present, but are providing to live another time.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects. (1714)

The fool is always about to begin to live. (Stultus semper incipit vivere.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. ii, p. 68. (1814)

We are always getting ready to live, but never living.

EMERSON, Journal. Vol. iii, p. 276. (a. 1882)

<sup>7</sup> Better to die than never once to live.

RICHARD HOVEY, Fear Not the Menace. (a. 1900)

Live all you can; it's a mistake not to.

HENRY JAMES, The Ambassadors, p. 149. (1903)
We only live once.

RING LARDNER, Zone of Quiet. (1926)

We only live once. Might as well live in a big way.

FOOTNER, Murderer's Vanity, p. 148. (1940)

<sup>8</sup> It is not wise, believe me, to say, "I shall live." Too late is tomorrow's life: live thou today. (Non est, crede mihi, sapientis dicere "Vivam"; | sera nimis vita est crastina: vive hodie.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. i, epig. 15. (A. D. 85)

Tomorrow I will live, the fool does say;
Today itself's too late; the wise lived yesterday. (Cras vives? hodie jam vivere, Postume, serum est: | ille sapit quisquis, Posthume, vixit heri.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. v, epig. 58.

If thou art wise, use to the full all thy days, and ever deem each is thy last. (Si sapis, utaris totis diebus | extremumque tibi semper adesce putes.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. iv, epig. 54.

Live thy life as it were spoil, and pluck the joys that fly. (Vive velut raptio fugitivaque gaudia carpe.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. vii, epig. 47.

Live while ye may, Yet happy pair.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 533. (1667)

<sup>9</sup> My business and my art is to live. (Mon mestier et mon art, c'est vivre.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 6. (1580)

<sup>10</sup> We should live, not merely exist. (ἵκν οὐ παρὰ τὴν προήκε.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: The Education of Children. Sec. 13B. (c. A. D. 95)

<sup>11</sup> How doth thy master?—Forsooth, live, and the best doth no better.

HENRY PORTER, The Two Angrie Women of Abington. Act ii, sc. 2. (1599)

Even living, and Lairds do no better.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 400. (1721)
I live, and Lords do no more.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2616. (1732)

1 We break life into little bits and fritter it away. (Diducimus illam in particulas ac lancinamus.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xxxii, sec. 2. (c. A. D. 64)
As long as you live, keep learning how to live.

(Quemadmodum vivas, quamdiu vivas.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxvi, sec. 3.

Let us balance life's account every day. (Cotidie cum vita paria faciamus.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. ci, sec. 8.

Begin at once to live, and count each separate day as a separate life. (Ideo propra vivere et singulos dies singulas vitas puta.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. ci, sec. 10.

Enjoy thy life; swift it speeds away. (Aetate fruere; mobili cursu fugit.)

SENECA, Hippolytus, l. 446. (c. A. D. 60)

2 Whilst thy life is still in its flowering spring-tides, see that thou use it: not slow are its feet as it glides away. (At tu dum primi floret tibi temporis aetas | utere: non tardo labitur illa pede.)

TIBULLUS, Elegies. Bk. i, eleg. viii, l. 47. (c. B. C. 17)

While you can, and still are in your springtime, have your fun. (Dum licet, et vernos etiamnum educitis annos, | ludite.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. iii, l. 61. (c. 1 B. C.)

Let us live, then, and be glad,

While young life's before us.

(Gaudemus igitur, dum iuvenes sumus.)

UNKNOWN, Gaudemus Igitur. Symonds, tr.

While we live, let's live in clover,

For when we're dead, we're dead all over.

UNKNOWN, Gaudemus Igitur.

GATHER YE ROSEBUDS, see under TIME.

MAKE HAY WHILE THE SUN SHINES, see under HAY.

VIII—Life: The Merry Life

3 Living a bridegroom's jolly life. (ἡγε νυμφίων βίω.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Birds, l. 161. (414 B. C.)

Living a flute-player's life. (αὐλοῦ βίω ἡγ.)

DIOGENIANUS, Adagia, iii, 14. (c. A. D. 125) At another's expense.

Smothering yourself with honey. (ἐν μέλιτι σαυτὸν καταπάττει.)

DIOGENIANUS, Adagia, iv, 53. (c. A. D. 125)

May he live, fife, pipe, drink! (Vivat, fifat, pipat, bibat!)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 53. (1548)

The motto on the title-page of Gargantua is "Vivez joyeux" (Live merrily).

4 [They] live like fighting-cocks.

WILLIAM COBBETT, Rural Rides, ii, 107. (1826)

The servants here seem to live like fighting-cocks.

R. S. SURTEES, Ask Mamma. Ch. 24. (1858)

5 The indicted cry a merry life and a short.

EDMUND GAYTON, Don Quixot, p. 101. (1654)

A short life and a merry life, I cry.

JOHN TATHAM, The Rump. Act i, sc. 1. (1660)

Go upon the road . . . ; there you will . . . live a short life and a merry one.

SWIFT, Directions to Servants. Ch. 4. (1745)

A short life and a merry.

KINGSLEY, Westward Ho! Ch. 32. (1855)

We prefer a short life and a merry one.

CHARLES READE, Put Yourself in His Place. Ch. 24. (1870)

6 You know how to enjoy life, and that's as good as twins or triplets. (Tuam vitam habes, et tibi sunt gemini et trigemini.)

PLAUTUS, Miles Gloriosus, l. 717. (c. 200 B. C.)

7 Not how lavishly but how happily you live is what counts. (Non quam late sed quam laete habites, refert.)

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 124. (1853)

8 It is yuel to kepe a wast hors in stable, . . . but it is worse to have a womman at racke and manger.

JOHN WYCLIF, Works: (Matthew), p. 435. (c. 1378) "To live at rack and manger," to live luxuriously, in reckless abundance.

Mars himselfe hateth to be euer on Venus lappe, he scorneth to lye at rack and manger.

ROBERT GREENE, Works, ix, 178. (1590)

God help the Courtiers, That lye at rack and manger.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Little French Lawyer. Act v, sc. 1. (1625)

Tearing out the bowels of St. Edmundsbury Convent (its larders namely and cellars) by living at rack and manger there.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Past and Present. Bk. ii, ch. 1. (1843)

9 Is that Mr. Riley, can any one tell?

Is that Mr. Riley, that owns the hotel?

Well, if that's Mr. Riley, they speak of so highly,

Well upon my soul, Riley, you're doing quite well.

UNKNOWN, Is that Mr. Riley. (1883)

My name is Kelly, but I'm living the life of Riley just the same.

HARRY PEASE AND E. G. NELSON. Title and refrain of popular song. (1919) The title is a reference to two songs, "Has anybody here seen Kelly?" and "Is that Mr. Riley?" The origin of the phrase, "The life of Riley," meaning an easy and luxurious life, has not been discovered, but this use of it would seem to indicate that it came from the song of 1883, whose Mr. Riley, it will be remembered, owned the hotel, and could therefore order whatever he wanted.

He was having a wonderful time. He was living the life of Riley.

SAMUEL HOPKINS ADAMS, The Incredible Era, p. 305 (1939), referring to Jess Smith, after the inauguration of President Harding.

Living the life of Riley.

P. G. WODEHOUSE, Uncle Fred in the Springtime, p. 4. (1939) MILLER, Cosmological Eye, p. 335. (1939) MENCKEN, Newspaper Days, p. 248. (1941) LASSWELL, Suds in Your Eye, p. 159. (1942) etc., etc.

1 I live like a mouse in a mill, and have another grind my meal for me.

UNKNOWN, Three Lords and Three Ladies of London. (c. 1584) See HAZLITT, Old English Poetry, vi, 392. The French say, "Vivre comme un coq en pâte." TO LIVE IN CLOVER, see under CLOVER.

IX—Life: The Simple Life

2 A quiet life, which was not life at all.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. i, l. 289. (1856)

It may be life, but ain't it slow?

A. P. HERBERT, It May Be Life. (1935)

3 May I not eat garlic or beans. (μὴ σκόροδα μηδὲ κνύμους φάγω.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. xiii, epis. 42. (45 B. C.)

Applied to persons wishing for a simple life.

Chestnuts, which my Amaryllis loved. (Castaneasque nuces, mea quas Amaryllis amabat.)

VERGIL, Eclagues. Ecl. ii, l. 52. (37 B. C.) "But chestnuts she loves not now" (At nunc castaneas non amat illa nuces), says OVID, Artis Amatoria, ii, 268, because girls have more extravagant tastes nowadays. "A thrush would be better."

4 A child has beaten me in simplicity of living. (παῖδιον με νενίκηκεν εὐτελεία.)

DIOGENES, Remark, as he threw away his one utensil, a shell from which to drink, when he saw a boy drinking from his hands. (c. 350 B. C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Diogenes, vi, 37.

5 Live in retirement. (λαθὲ βιώσας.)

EPICURUS, Maxim. (c. 300 B. C.) Referred to by SENECA, Ad Lucilium, lxxviii, sec. 10.

Remember the Proverb, Bene qui latuit, bene vixit. They are happy that live Retiredly.

WILLIAM PENN, Some Fruits of Solitude No. 325. (1693)

Λαθὲ βιώσας, "live in the shade," was the Epicurean rule of wisdom. Pleasure was not found in feasts and sensual excess, but in sobriety of mind.

DEAN PLUMTRE, Ecclesiastes, 123. (1895)

6 The man who lives a peaceful life lives a long life. (Hombre de gran paz, hombre de mucha vida.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 193. (1647)

7 Anything for a quiet life.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, The Captives. Act iii, sc. 3. (1624) Earliest known use of the phrase.

Anythin' for a quiet life, as the man said wen he took the sitivation at the lighthouse.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 43. (1837)

8 This is what I prayed for! (Hoc erat in votis.) HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 6, l. 1. (35 B. C.)

Giving vent to his happiness and satisfaction as he looks out across his little farm.

That spot of ground pleases me in which small possessions make me happy. (Illa placet tellus in qua res parva beatum.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. x, ep. 96, l. 5. (A. D. 95) Strife never; business seldom; a quiet mind. (Lis numquam, toga rara, mens quieta.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. x, epig. 47, l. 5.

Living the life of Laertes. (Λαέρτου βίον.)

PLUTARCH, Lives: Cicero. Ch. 40, sec. 3. (c. A. D.

110) The reference is to HOMER, Odyssey, i, 189 ff., where Laertes is described as living on a little farm and never coming to Rome.

Mine be a cot beside the hill.

SAMUEL ROGERS, A Wish. (a. 1855)

9 How many things I can do without! (πόσων ἐγὼ χρεῖαν οὐκ ἔχω.)

SOCRATES, when he looked into the shop windows of Athens. (c. 425 B. C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Socrates. Sec. 25.

10 I love a life whose plot is simple,

And does not thicken with every pimple.

H. D. THOREAU, Conscience. (1849)

What is the simple life? . . . It is a form of life described by pastoral poets, or the New Testament, but not livable today.

CHARLES WAGNER, The Simple Life. Ch. 7. (1902)

Oh, for the simple life,

For tents and starry skies!

ISRAEL ZANGWILL, Aspiration. (a. 1926)

11 Living according to nature. (τέλος εἶπε τὸ ὁμολογουμένως τῇ φύσει ἔην.)

ZENO, On the Nature of Man. (c. 300 B. C.) Diogenes Laertius says (vii, 87): "Zeno was the first to designate as the end 'life in agreement with nature,' which is the same as a virtuous life, virtue being the goal towards which nature guides us." It became one of the leading Stoic ideas.

The supreme Good they believed to be the thing which they expressed by the formula, "To live according to nature." (Secundum naturam vivere.)

CICERO, De Finibus. Bk. iv, ch. 10, sec. 26. (45 B. C.) Cicero is speaking of the Stoics.

To live agreeably to Nature is our duty. (Vivere Naturae convenienter oportet.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 10, l. 12. (20 B. C.)

Our motto is Live according to nature. (Nempe propositum nostrum est secundum naturam vivere.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. v, sec. 4. (a. A. D. 64)

Far from the madding crowd's ignoble strife.

THOMAS GRAY, Elegy Written in a Country Churchyard, l. 73. (1751) "Far from the Madding Crowd" used by Thomas Hardy as the title of a novel. (1874)

I sought the simple life that Nature yields.

GEORGE CRABBE, The Village. Bk. i. (1783)

Remote from busy life's bewildered way.

CAMPBELL, Pleasures of Hope. Pt. ii, l. 91. (1799)

X—Life: Living upon Little

<sup>1</sup> Men live better upon little. (Vivitur exiguo melius.)

CLAUDIAN, In Rufinum. Bk. i, l. 215. (c. A. D. 395)

A little with quietness is God's own gift.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Peu. (1611) "A little with peace is a great blessing."—Ibid., Paiz.

A little with quiet is the only diet.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 329. (1640)

<sup>2</sup> We say often that a Man may live of a little; but, alas, of how much lesse may a Man die!

JOHN DONNE, Devotions. Sec. 7. (1624)

A man may live upon little, but he can't live upon nothing.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 295. (1855)

They live on nothing, for they've nothing to live on.

HENRY JAMES, Aspern Papers. Ch. 1. (1888)

<sup>3</sup> What things do mortals need, save two alone,
The fruits of Ceres and the cooling spring?

(ἐπεὶ τί δέι βροτοῖσι, πλὴν διειν μόνον, Δήμητρος ἀκτῆς, πώματός θ' ὑδρὸς ῥέου;) )

EURIPIDES, Fragments. No. 884, Nauck. (c. 440 B. C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 36F.

How little nature demands. Running water and bread are enough for mankind. (Discite, quam parvo liceat producere vitam | et quantum natura petat. . . . Satis est populus fluviusque Ceresque.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. iv, l. 377. (c. A. D. 60) The Germans say, "Wasser und Brod ist genug zum Leben" (Water and bread are enough for life).

Remember this,—that very little is needed to make a happy life. (τούτου μύμησο δέι, καὶ ἔτι ἐκείνου, ὅτι ἐν ὀλίγοις κεῖται τὸ εὐδαιμόνως βῶσαι.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. vii, sec. 67. (c. A. D. 174)

A little will suffice him who desires only what he actually needs.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Peninim (Choice of Pearls). No. 161. (c. 1050) The Germans say, "Man braucht zum Leben nur wenig" (One needs but little to live).

A book of Verses underneath the Bough,

A Jug of Wine, a Loaf of Bread—and Thou.

FITZGERALD, tr., The Rubáiyát. St. 12. (1859)

<sup>4</sup> Harsh, but a good nurse of young men.
(τρηχεῖ, ἀλλ' ἀγαθὴ κουροτρόφος.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. ix, l. 27. (c. 850 B. C.)

A hard life, but a healthy. (Aspera vita, sed salubris.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Ch. iii, cent. x, No. 27. (1523)

<sup>5</sup> He will always be a slave who does not know how to live upon a little. (Serviet aeternum, quia parvo nesciet uti.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 10, l. 41. (20 B. C.)

Let's live with that small pittance that we have;
Who covets more, is evermore a slave.

HERRICK, The Covetous Still Captives. (1648)

<sup>6</sup> What virtue, and of what great value, good friends, there is in living upon little. (Quae virtus et quanta, boni, sit vivere parvo.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 2, l. 1. (35 B. C.)

He lives happily upon little. (Vivitur parvo bene.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 16, l. 13. (23 B. C.)

Man's greatest riches is to live on a little with contented mind. (Divitiae grandes homini sunt vivere parvo | aequo animo.)

LUCRETIUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. v, l. 1118.

(c. 45 B. C.) The Italians say, "Poco e in pace, molto mi piace" (A little in peace pleases me much).

Live within your harvest. (Messe tenus propria vive.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 25. (c. A. D. 120)

He that is taught to live upon a little, owes more to his Father's Wisdom, than he that has a great deal left him, does to his Father's Care.

WILLIAM PENN, More Fruits of Solitude. No. 140. (1718)

XI—Life and Death

<sup>7</sup> Ordained of God to be the Judge of quick and dead. (κρίτης ζώντων καὶ νεκρῶν.)

New Testament: Acts, x, 42. (c. A. D. 65) The Vulgate is, "Iudex vivorum, et mortuorum."

I Peter, iv, 5, has, "Ready to judge the quick and the dead," and II Timothy, iv, 1, has, "Shall judge the quick and the dead."

Se the demende is cwicum & deadum.

KING AELFRED, tr., Gregory's Pastoral Care, xv, 96. (c. 897)

To demenn cwike & daede.

ORMIN, The Ormulum, l. 10557. (c. 1200)

For quik or deed.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Frankleyns Tale, l. 608. (c. 1388)

Quicke with the quicke, and dead with the dead. (Vivi con vivi, e morti con morti.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 34. (1578)

We must live by the quick and not by the dead.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, If You Knew Not Me. (1605) Quoted as "the old proverb."

Of all proverbes, hee cannot endure to heare that which sayes, We ought to live by the quick, and not by the dead.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Characters: A Sexton. (1614)

With . . . power to judge both quick and dead.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xii, l. 460. (1667)

Judge of quick and dead.

WILLIAM LAW, A Serious Call to a Devout Life, ii, 22. (1729)

The Quick or the Dead.

AMÉLIE RIVES. Title of novel. (1888)

<sup>8</sup> Death is rather to be chosen than a toilsome life. (ζῆσις πορρωτέρως θάνατος αλπερώτερος.)

AESCHYLUS, Fragments. Frag. 229, Smyth. (c. 458 B. C.) STOBÆUS, Anthology, iv, 53, 17.

Better death than life in bitterness. (τοῦ ζῆν δὲ λυπρῶς κρείσσον ἐστὶ καρθαίνειν.)

EURIPIDES, Daughters of Troy, l. 637. (c. 415 B. C.)

It is better to cease to live than to live in misery.
(κρείσσον τὸ μὴ ζῆν ἔσθιν, ἢ ζῆν ἀθλίως.)

SOPHOCLES. (c. B. C. 410) As quoted by STOBÆUS, Florilegium. 118, and by MONTAIGNE, i, 32.

1 Nobly to die were better than to save one's life. (καλῶς τεθνάναι κάλλιον ἂν μάλλον ἢ σῃσῶσθαι.)

AESCHYLUS (?), Fragments. Frag. 235, Smyth. (c. 458 B. C.)

2 Better to die once for all than to live in continual terror. (βέλτιον θανεῖν ἅπαξ ἢ διὰ βίον τρέμειν.)

AESOP, Fables. (c. 850 B. C.)

Better to die once for all than linger out one's days in misery. (κρείσσον γὰρ εἰσάπαξ θανεῖν ἢ τὰς ἀπάσας ἡμέρας πάσχειν κακῶς.)

AESCHYLUS, Prometheus Bound, l. 750. (c. 470 B. C.) It is better to die once for all than to be always expecting death. (βέλτιον ἔστιν ἅπαξ ἀποθανεῖν ἢ αἰεὶ προσδοκᾶν.)

JULIUS CAESAR, refusing the bodyguard his friends wished to provide. (c. 44 B. C.) See PLUTARCH, Lives: Caesar. Ch. 57, sec. 5.

When life is one long terror, death is best. (Ubi omnis vitæ metus est, mors est optima.)

PUBLIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 701. (c. 43 B. C.)

That life is better life, past fearing death, Than that which lives to fear.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, v, 1, 402. (1604)

3 As the line has it, "He who has been near death knows the worth of life."

BABER, The Baber-nama: Letter, Dec., 1526.

4 Let life rise out of death.

Book of the Dead. Ch. cliv, l. 12. (c. 4000 B. C.) Papyrus of Nu.

5 The long habit of living indisposeth us for dying.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Urn Burial. Ch. 5. (1658) The long habit of Living makes meer Men more hardly to part with Life.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, A Letter to a Friend. Par. 28. (1672)

Some no other cause for life can give But a dull habitude to live.

JOHN OLDHAM, To the Memory of Norwent. (a. 1683)

No particular motive for living, except the custom and habit of it.

THACKERAY, as quoted in Blackwood's Magazine, Jan., 1854.

Mr. Wopsle's great-aunt conquered a confirmed habit of living into which she had fallen.

DICKENS, Great Expectations. Ch. 16. (1861)

6 Life's way will vary, death is one for all. (Dispar vivendi ratio est, mors omnibus una.)

CATO (?), Collectio Monostichorum, l. 3. (c. 175 B. C.) See Minor Latin Poets, Loeb, p. 624.

Their death is blest whose life is without reproach. (Felices obeunt quorum sine crimine vita est.)

CATO (?), Disticha, iv, 46.

7

The dead to the grave and the living to the loaf. (El muerto a la sepultura y el vivo a la hogaza.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 19. (1605)

To the Grave with the Dead;

And let them that live, to the Bread.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6347. (1732)

You know the good old saw,—"Cloth must we wear, Eat beef and drink beer, Though the dead go to bier."

WALTER SCOTT, The Betrothed. Ch. 10. (1825)

The dead with the dead, the living to the loaf. (Les morts avec les morts, les vifs à la tourée.)

LE ROUX DE LINCY, Proverbs Français, ii, 333. (1859) A 15th century proverb.

8

Until death, it is all life. (Hasta la muerte todo es vida.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 59. (1615)

WHILE THERE'S LIFE THERE'S HOPE, see under HOPE.

9

Life has its distinctions, but in death we are all made equal.

CHUANG-TSZE, Philosophy. Ch. 5. (c. 400 B. C.) See also DEATH: DEATH THE LEVELER.

10

The whole life of philosophers is a preparation for death. (Tota philosophorum vita commentatio mortis est.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. i, ch. 30, sec. 74. (c. 45 B. C.) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, Essays, Bk. i, ch. 19: "Cicero dict que philosopher ce n'est aultre chose que s'apprester à la mort."

Life is nearer every day to death. (Vita mortis propior est quotidie.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. iv, fab. 25, l. 10. (c. 25 B. C.) The whole of life is nothing but a journey to death. (Tota vita nihil aliud quam ad mortem iter est.)

SENECA, Ad Polybium de Consolatione. Ch. 11, sec. 2. (c. A. D. 64.)

11

Until we know what life is, how can we know what death is?

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. xi, ch. 11. (c. 500 B. C.) Giles, tr.

12

Let's learn to live, for we must die alone.

GEORGE CRABBE, The Borough. Let. 10. (1810) Perhaps suggested by the Latin proverb, "Vive tibi, nam moriere tibi" (Live your own life, for you will die your own death).

13

Then, like a thankful guest, Rise cheerfully from life's abundant feast And with a quiet mind go take thy rest.

THOMAS CREECH, tr., De Rerum Natura. Bk. iii, l. 95. (1682)

Teach me to live that I may dread

The grave as little as my bed.

BISHOP THOMAS KEN, Evening Hymn. (a. 1697)

So live, that [thou mayest] approach thy grave
Like one who wraps the drapery of his couch
About him, and lies down to pleasant dreams.

W. C. BRYANT, Thanatopsis. (1817)

<sup>1</sup> Hereof am I sure, I shall live till I die.

THOMAS DEKKER, The Shoemakers Holiday.

Act iv, sc. 3. (1600)

We shall live til we dye, in despite of diet.

THOMAS MUFFET, Healths Improvement, p. 8. (1655)

The old country proverb, "Ah, well, we shall live till we die if the pigs don't eat us, and then we shall go acorning."

RICHARD JEFFERIES, Field and Hedgerow, p. 65. (1889)

<sup>2</sup> Wherefore I praised the dead which are already dead, more than the living which are yet alive. (Laudavi magis mortuos, quam viventes.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, iv, 2. (c. 250 B. C.)

<sup>3</sup> A living dog is better than a dead lion. (Melior est canis vivus leone mortuo.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, ix, 4. (c. 250 B. C.)

A proverb in many languages, all probably derived from the Hebrew original. Wyclif's rendering is, "Betere is a quyc dogge thanne a leoun dead."

Divine ashes are better than earthly meal.

HERRERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 686. (1640)

Better a living beggar than a dead emperor. (Mieux vaut goudja debout qu'empereur enterré.)

LA FONTAINE, La Matrone d'Ephèse. (1668)

I'd rather fight flies in a boarding house
Than fill Napoleon's grave.

O. HENRY, Chanson de Bohème (1894)

Better a live ass than a dead lion.

EDEN PHILLIPOTS, Human Boy's Diary. Term iii, 18 April. (1924)

Better a live beggar than a dead king.

H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs. No. 483. (1937)

A live trout is better than a dead whale.

SIEGFRIED SASSOON, Aliveness in Literature. In Sat. Review of Literature, 4 Jan., 1941.

A live wife is better than a dead mistress.

MELBA MARLETT, Death Has a Thousand Doors, p. 137. (1941) The Italians say, "Val più un asino vivo che un dottore morto" (A live ass is worth more than a dead doctor).

Better a live coward than a dead hero.

MARY MCCARTHY, The Company She Keeps, p. 259. (1942)

<sup>4</sup> We ought to remember the lyuyng. (Vivorum oportet meminisse.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. ii, No. 52. (1508)

Taverner, tr., fo. 11.

Woe must live by the living, not by the dead.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 83. (1576)

The richest life I know is to have lived among the living, as the saying is. (La plus riche vie, que je sache, à estre entre les vivants, come on dict.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 36. (1580)

We must live by the living, and not by the dead.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

Mem.—To think more of the living and less of the dead, for the dead have a world of their own.

THOMAS TYRES, Resolutions. (c. 1781)

The earth belongs to the living, not the dead.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xiii, p. 269. (c. 1800)

Let the dead care for the dead, the living for the living. (Ssü ti ku ssü ti, 'huo ti ku 'huo ti.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No 959. (1875)

<sup>5</sup> Death is but nothingness! Who prays to die is mad.

The worst of lives is better than the proudest death.

(κακὼς ζῆν κρείσσον ἢ καλῶς θανεῖν.)

EURIPIDES, Iphigeneia at Aulis, 1251. (c. 410 B. C.)

<sup>6</sup> Who knoweth if to live is to be dead,
And to be dead, to live?

(τίς δ' οἶδεν, εἰ τὸ ζῆν μὲν ἐστὶ καταθανεῖν, τὸ καταθανεῖν δὲ ζῆν;)

EURIPIDES, Polydus. Frag. (c. 420 B. C.) Quoted by PLATO, Gorgias, 492E, and by MONTAIGNE, Essays, bk. ii, ch. 12, his French being, "Si nous vivons, comme Euripides est en doute, 'si la vie que nous vivons est vie, ou si c'est ce que nous appellons mort qui soit vie.'"

Who knows if to live is but to die? . . .

If breath is bread and sleep a woolly lie?

(τίς οἶδεν εἰ τὸ ζῆν μὲν ἐστὶ καταθανεῖν;)

ARISTOPHANES, The Frogs, l. 1477. (405 B. C.)

Murray, tr. In l. 1082, Aristophanes says:

"Some opine that 'not to be living' is truly 'to live.'"

Life follows upon death. Death is the beginning of life. Who knows when the end is reached?

CHUANG-TSZE, Philosophy. Ch 5. (c. 400 B. C.)

Sleeping are men, and when they die, they wake

MOHAMMED, The Koran. (c. 625)

In some circumstances, to die is to live.

ARCHBISHOP JOHN TILLOTSON, Letter to Lady Russell, 21 Nov., 1685.

Man, foolish man! no more thy soul deceive,

To die is but the surest way to live.

WILLIAM BROOME, Death, l. 89. (c. 1725)

There are daily sounds to tell us that Life

Is dying, and Death is living.

THOMAS HOOD, Miss Kilmansegg: Her Last Will. (c. 1844)

<sup>7</sup> We begin not to live till we are fit to die.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5434. (1732)

<sup>8</sup> A useless life is an early death. (Ein unnütz Leben ist ein früher Tod.)

GOETHE, Iphigenia auf Tauris. Act i, sc. 2, l. 64. (1787)

<sup>9</sup> To be remembered after we are dead is but a poor recompense for being treated with contempt while we are living.

HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 429. (c. 1821)

1 Between the business of life and the day of death, a space ought to be interposed.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 43. (1640)

Peace and patience, and death with repentance.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 321.

After the Spanish proverb, "Paz y paciencia, y muerte con penitencia."

He that lives only, dies most.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 439.

Now all live as they would die.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 727.

He hath not lived, that lives not after death.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 872.

We know not who lives or dies.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 964.

2 A man would live in Italy (a place of pleasure) but he would choose to die in Spain, where they say the Catholic Religion is possessed with greatest strictness.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1045. (1650)

One should be able to eat in Canton, live in Soochow, and die in Hangchow.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 352.

(1938) A Chinese proverb. Canton has the best food, Soochow the most beautiful women, Hangchow the most ornate coffins.

3 All live things look bigger than dead ones.

ADRIAN JONES, Thoughts of an Old Sculptor. (1935)

4 Going forth is life, coming home is death. (Ch'u sheng, ju ssü.)

LAO-TSZE, Tao-tek-king (The Way of Virtue). Sec. 50. (c. 550 B.C.) Carus, tr.

A stranger into life I'm come,

Dying may be our going home.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 788. (1737)

5 Life is the gift of God, death the due of Nature.

JOHN LYLIV, Euphues (Arber), p. 183. (1579)

In life ther is nothing sweete, in death nothing sowre.

JOHN LYLIV, Euphues (Arber), p. 183.

6 Born in throes, 'tis fit that man should live in pains and die in pangs.

HERMAN MELVILLE, Moby Dick. Ch. 4. (1851)

Life springs from sorrow and calamity, and death from ease and pleasure.

MENCIUS, Discourses. Bk. vi, pt. ii, ch. 15, sec. 5. (c. 300 B.C.)

8 All the time you live, you steal it from death: it is at her charge. (Tout ce que vous vivez, vous le desrobez à la mort; c'est à ses depens.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 19. (1580) WE OWE DEATH A DEBT, see under DEATH.

Long life or short life is made all one by death. (Le long temps vivre, et le peu de temps vivre, est rendu tout un par la mort.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 19.

We may well want ground to live on, but never ground to die in. (Nous pouvons avoir faulte de terre pour y vivre; mais de terre pour y mourir.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 3.

To live is to serve, if the liberty to die be wanting. (Le vivre, c'est servir, si la liberté de mourir en est à dire.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 3.

9 He who should teach men to die, would teach them to live. (Qui apprendroit les hommes à mourir, leur apprendroit à vivre.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 19. (1580)

Teach them how to live

In Him; or, if they this deny,

For Him she'll teach them how to die.

RICHARD CRASHAW, Hymn to St. Theresa, l. 51. (1646)

There taught us how to live; and (oh, too high

The price for knowledge!) taught us how to die.

THOMAS TICKELL, To the Earl of Warwick, On the Death of Mr. Addison, l. 81. (1719)

Only those are fit to live who are not afraid to die.

GENERAL DOUGLAS MACARTHUR, Speech, to Filipino air force, 30 July, 1941. See CONSIDINE, MacArthur the Magnificent, p. 9.

10 Either a tranquil life, or a happy death. (ἢ ἤν ἀλύτως ἢ θάρεϊν εὐδαιμόνως.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 32. (1580) Quoting an ancient Greek saying. The French is, "Ou une vie tranquille, ou une mort heureuse."

It is "to live happily" and not, as Antisthenes declares, "to die happily," which makes human felicity. (C'est "le vivre heureusement," non, comme disoit Antisthenes, "le mourir heureusement," qui fait l'humaine félicité.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 2. (1595)

11 Live righteously, you shall die righteously. (Vive pius; moriere pius.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. iii, eleg. 9, l. 37. (c. 13 B.C.)

Soth hit is, in al thyng,

Of eoel lif comuth eoel eyndyng.

UNKNOWN, King Alisaunder, l. 753. (c. 1300)

He that liueth wele shal die wele.

EARL RIVERS, tr., Dictes and Sayenges of the Philosophers, fo. 47. (1477) Quoting Socrates.

He that leuyth well maye not dye amys.

RICHARD PYNSON, Kalendar of Shepherds, p. 169. (1506)

No one has died miserably that has lived well. (Nec misere quisquam, qui bene vixit, obit.)

ERASMUS, Colloquia: Apotheosis Capnionis. (1524)

The moste sure way to dye well is well to lyue.

RICHARD WHITFORD, Werke for Housholders, sig. G4. (1537)

Who lyueth wel, dyeth wel. (Chi ben vive, ben more.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 28. (1578)

Such a lyfe, such an end. (Qual vita, tal fine.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 33. The French say "Telle vie, telle fin," or "De bon vie bon fin"; while the Spanish form is, "Como se vive, se muere" (As one lives, one dies).

A good life makes a good death.
Book of Meery Riddles. Prov. 27. (1629)
 A good life will have a good end.
 THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 39. (1633) On
 p. 113. "A good life hath a good death."
 They die well that live well.
 JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 215. (1639)
 Such a life, such a death.
 JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 322.
 Let all live as they would die.
 GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)
 He that liveth wickedly can hardly die honestly.
 JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 16. (1670)
 An ill life, an ill end.
 JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 261. (1678)
 As a man lives so shall he die,
 As a tree falls so shall it lie.
 JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 296.
 He hath liv'd ill, that knows not how to die well.
 THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1890. (1732)
 As the life is, so is the end. (Qualis vita, finis ita.)
 R. C. TRENCH, Proverbs, p. 27. (1853)
 The name of death was never terrible
 To him that knew to live.
 R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Immortality. (1875)
 THE END CROWNS ALL, see under END.

1
 Lyfe fleeth away, and stayes not one houre,
 And death commeth after, journeying apace.
 (La vita fugge e non s'arresta un' ora,
 E la morte vien dietro a gran giornate.)
 PETRARCHA, In Morte di Madonna Laura. Sonnet
 vi. (1348) FLORIO, tr., Firste Fruites, fo. 43.

2
 Since we know we must die, why should we not live? (Cum sciamus nos morituros esse, quare non vivamus?)
 PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 72. (c. A. D. 60)

3
 Life is nearer every day to death. (Vita mortis propior est quotidie.)
 PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. iv, fab. 25.1.10. (c. 25 B. C.)
 The whole course of life is but a meditation of death.
 JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 181. (1579)
 Each moment of life is a step toward the grave.
 (Chaque instant de la vie est un pas vers la mort.)
 CRÉBILLON, Tite et Bérénice. Act i, sc. 5. (a.
 1762) See also DEATH: BIRTH AND DEATH.

4
 To live is Christ, and to die is gain. (τοὺς γὰρ τὸ ζῆν Χριστὸς καὶ τὸ ἀποθάνειν κέρδος.)
New Testament: Philippians, i, 21. (c. A. D. 60)
 The Vulgate is, "Mihi enim vivere Christus est, et mori lucrum."

5
 We hunt for a dead man among the living.
 (Hominem inter vivos quaeritamus mortuum.)
 PLAUTUS, Menaechmi, l. 240. (c. 200 B. C.)
 Why seek ye the living among the dead? (τί ζητεῖτε τὸν ζῶντα μετὰ τῶν νεκρῶν;)
New Testament: Luke, xxiv, 5. (c. A. D. 65)
 The Vulgate is, "Quid quaeritis viventem cum mortuis?"

6
 Well has he lived who has been able to die when he willed. (Bene vixit is qui potuit cum voluit mori.)
 PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 95. (c. 43 B. C.)
 He accuses life who strives after death. (Crimen relinquit vitae qui mortem appetit.)
 PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 120.
 While life is pleasant, the state of death is best.
 (Dum est vita grata, mortis conditio optima est.)
 PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 157. Meaning that the best time for death is while life is pleasant: i. e. before sorrows come, one might die, in Tacitus' words, felix opportunitate mortis.
 Nowhere do we men die better than where we have lived to our liking. (Nusquam melius morimur homines quam ubi libenter viximus.)
 PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 430.

7
 An honest death is preferable to a dishonest life. (Honestam mortem vitae turpi praefero.)
 PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 269. (c. 43 B. C.)
 An honorable death is better than a disgraceful life. (Honestas mors turpi vita potior.)
 TACITUS, Agricola. Sec. 33. (c. A. D. 98)
 It is better to die honorably than to live disgrace-fully.
 SADI, Gulistan. Ch. 3, Apol. 11. (c. 1258)
 Is not an honourable death to be preferred before an infamous life?
 GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 29. (1576)
 It is farre better to dye with honour, then to liue with shame.
 JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites. fo. 93. (1578)
 Better it were to dye with griefe, then lyue with shame.
 JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber).
 p. 425. (1580)
 It is better to die on your feet than to live on your knees.
 ERNEST HEMINGWAY, For Whom the Bell Tolls,
 p. 309. (1940) Quoting a Spanish proverb, used by "La Pasionaria" (Dolores Ibarruri), during a speech in Paris, 3 Sept., 1936. It has been attributed to Emiliano Zapata (See GUNTHER, Inside Latin America, p. 63), but is probably much older.

8
 Drag out an existence worse than death.
 (Morte graviorem vitam exigunt.)
 SALLUST, Bellum Jugurthinum. Ch. xiv, sec. 16.
 (c. 40 B. C.)

9
 They will not live, and do not know how to die. (Vivere nolunt mori nesciunt.)
 SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. iv, sec. 6. (c. A. D. 64)
 If anything forbids you to live nobly, nothing forbids you to die nobly. (Si quid te vetat bene vivere, bene mori non vetat.)
 SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xvii, sec. 6.

10
 There is no difference between life and death.
 (οὐδὲν τὸν θάνατον διαφέρει τοῦ ζῆν.)
 THALES, Maxim. (c. 600 B. C.) As quoted by DIOGENES LAERTIUS, bk. i, sec. 35, who adds,
 "Why then," said one, "do you not die?"

"Because," Thales answered, "there is no difference." Cited by BACON, Apophthegms. No. 221. (1625)

<sup>1</sup> Live your life, do your work, then take your hat.

H. D. THOREAU, A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers. (1849)

<sup>2</sup> Some come, some go; This life is so.

THOMAS TUSSEY, Five Hundreth Pointes of Good Husbandrie: August's Abstract. (1573)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6340. (1732)

Life doth passe, and death doth come. (La vita passa, e la morte viene.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 34. (1578)

Some laugh, while others mourn;

Some toil, while others pray;

One dies, and one is born:

So runs the world away.

SAMUEL WESLEY, Way of the World. (1685)

<sup>3</sup> All say, "How hard it is to die"—a strange complaint from people who have had to live. Pity is for the living, envy for the dead.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's Calendar. (1893)

<sup>4</sup> He [Mezentius] would even link dead bodies with the living, fitting hand to hand and face to face (grim torture!) and, in the oozy slime and poison of that dread embrace, thus slay them by a lingering death. (Mortua quin etiam iungebat corpora vivis, | componens manibusque manus atque oribus ora.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. viii, l. 485. (19 B.C.)

A piece of Mezentism in his joyning of the Dead and Living together.

THOMAS FULLER, The Appeal of Injured Innocence, iii, 81. (1659)

England . . . spared from the curse of the . . . Mezentian union with Italy, . . . developed its own common law.

WILLIAM STUBBS, Constitutional History of England, i, 6. (1874)

<sup>5</sup> Life is the tillage, and death is the harvest according.

WALT WHITMAN, As I Watch'd the Plowman Plowing. (1871)

<sup>6</sup> Half life is better than dying altogether.

UNKNOWN. Unpublished Eleventh Dynasty Letter at Metropolitan Art Museum, N. Y. (c. 2300 B.C.) Gunn, tr. Introduced by the words, "As it is said."

Rather would I on earth be serf to another Tiller of some poor plot, with scanty subsistence, Than be ruler and lord over all the dead who have perished.

(βουλομένην κ' ἐπαύρους ἐὼν θητεύμενον ἄλλω, ἀνδρὶ παρ' ἀκλήρω, ᾧ μὴ βίωτος πολλὸν εἴη, ἢ πᾶσιν νεκύεσσι καταφθιμένοιςιν ἀνᾶσσειν.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xi, l. 489. (c. 850 B.C.)

The reply of Achilles, when Odysseus told him that he should not grieve because he was dead. Quoted by PLATO, Republic, iii, 386D.

Better to live a slave, a captur'd man,
Who scatters rushes in a master's hall,
Than be a crown'd king here, and rule the dead.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Balder Dead. Pt. ii, l. 265. (1855)

No matter where, the wise love life more than death. (πανταχού ζῆν ἢδὲ μᾶλλον ἢ θανεῖν τοῖς σώφροσιν.)

EURIPIDES, Orestes, l. 1509. (c. 510 B.C.)

The weariest and most loathed wordly life . . .

Is a paradise To what we fear of death.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, iii, 1, 129. (1604)

Death stands ready all ills to cure;

But we'll never budge from out our place:

Than die, 'tis better to endure—

The motto of the human race!

(Le trépas vient tout guérir;

Mais ne bougeons d'où nous sommes:

Plutôt souffrir que mourir.

C'est la devise des hommes.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: La Mort et le Bucheron.

Bk. i, fab. 16. (1668)

Mere existence is so much better than nothing that one would rather exist even in pain than not exist.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 15 April, 1778.

LIGHT

See also DARKNESS

<sup>7</sup>

Heraclitus saith well, in one of his Aenigmaes, Dry light is ever the best. . . . The Light, that a man receiueith, by Counsell from Another, is drier and purer, than that which commeth from his owne Understanding.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Friendship. (1597)

The dry light of reason is the only illuminant which permits men to see clearly phenomena as they are.

SIDNEY LEE, Great Englishmen of the Sixteenth Century, p. 247. (1907)

<sup>8</sup>

Where no apple of the eye is light faileth.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), iii, 25. (c. 190 B.C.) Oesterley, tr.

<sup>9</sup>

Light is not good for syke folkes yēn.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde, Bk. iii, l. 1137. (c. 1380)

To a diseased eye the light is annoying. (À l'œil malade le lumière nuit.)

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Lumière. (1611)

The Italians say, "Ad occhio infermo nuoce la luce."

<sup>10</sup>

By-cause that he fer was from hir sighte,

This nye Nicholas stood in his lighte.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Miller's Tale, l. 209. (c. 1386)

How blindly ye stand in your owne light.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1546)

Heere ye may behold Gentlemen, how leaudly wit standeth in his owne light.

JOHN LYLE, Euphues (Arber), p. 46. (1579)

They [the wicked] stand in their owne light.

ARTHUR DENT, The Plaine Mans Pathway to Heaven, p. 222. (1601)

He standeth in his owne light.

THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 90. (1616)

Do not stand in your own light.

JONSON, A Tale of a Tub. Act ii, sc. 1. (1633)

Methinks you stand in your own light.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

He can't afford to stand in his own light.

DICKENS, Dombey and Son. Ch. 39. (1848)

1 Truly the light is sweet, and a pleasant thing it is for the eyes to behold the sun. (Dulce lumen, et delectabile est oculis videre solem.)
Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, xi, 7. (c. 250 B. C.)

2 God said, Let there be light: and there was light. (Dixitque Deus: Fiat lux. Et facta est lux.)

Old Testament: Genesis, i, 3. (c. 550 B. C.)

Let there be Light, said God, and forthwith Light Ethereal . . . Sprung from the Deep.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. vii, l. 243. (1667)

The first creature of God, in the workes of the Dayes, was the Light of the Sense, the last was the Light of Reason.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Truth. (1597)

God's first creature, which was light.

FRANCIS BACON, New Atlantis. Sec. 14. (1626)

Quoted by Ruskin, Crown of Wild Olive.
Lect. 4.

Light,—God's eldest daughter.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: Of Building. (1642)

Hail, holy light, offspring of Heav'n firstborn!

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iii, l. 1. (1667)

Light, the prime work of God.

MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 70. (1671)

3 Where the light is brightest, the shadows are darkest. (Wo viel Licht ist, ist starker Schatten.)

GOETHE, Götz von Berlichingen, i, 24. (1771)

Every light has its shadow.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 349. (1855)

Where light is, there is shadow.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 442. (1938) A Japanese proverb.

4 To a great light a great lanthorn.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

5 Father Zeus, deliver thou from the darkness the sons of the Achaeans, and make clear sky, and grant us to see with our eyes. In the light do thou e'en slay us, seeing such is thy good pleasure. (ἐν δὲ φάει καὶ ἄλῃσσαν, ἐπεὶ νύ τοι εὐαδεν οὕτως.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xvii, l. 645. (c. 850 B. C.) The prayer of Ajax.

Dispel this cloud, the light of Heav'n restore; Give me to see, and Ajax asks no more.

POPE, tr., Homer's Iliad, xvii, 729. (1715)

The prayer of Ajax was for light.

LONGFELLOW, The Goblet of Light. St. 9. (1841)

The prayer was "Light—more Light—while Time shall last."

TENNYSON, Inscription on the Window in Memory of Caxton. St. Margaret's Church, Westminster. Caxton had taken for his motto "Fiat Lux." "Mehr Licht!" (More light!) are usually quoted as Goethe's last words (1832), but what he really said was, "Macht doch den zweiten Fensterladen auch auf, damit mehr Licht herein komme" (Open the second shutter, so that more light can come in). Resembling the last words of O. Henry. See under DARKNESS.

6 Every light is not the sun.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 13. (1659)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 15. (1670)

7 And the light shineth in darkness; and the darkness comprehendeth it not. (καὶ τὸ φῶς ἐν τῇ σκοτίᾳ φαίνει, καὶ ἡ σκοτία αὐτὸ οὐ κατέλαβεν.)

New Testament: John, i, 5. (c. A. D. 95) The Vulgate is, "Et lux in tenebris lucet, et tenebrae eam non comprehenderunt."

The true Light, which lighteth every man that cometh into the world. (ἦν τὸ φῶς τὸ ἀληθινὸν ὃ φωτίζει πάντα ἄνθρωπον ἐρχόμενον εἰς τὸν κόσμον.)

New Testament: John, i, 9. (c. A. D. 95) The Vulgate is, "Erat lux vera, quae illuminat omnem hominem venientem in hunc mundum."

I am the light of the world. (ἐγὼ εἰμι τὸ φῶς τοῦ κόσμου.)

New Testament: John, viii, 12. (c. A. D. 70) The Vulgate is, "Lux mundi." Matthew, v, 14. has, "Ye are the light of the world."

Lead, Kindly Light, amid the encircling gloom. Lead Thou me on!

JOHN HENRY NEWMAN, The Pillar of the Cloud (1868)

8 Walk while ye have the light, lest darkness come upon you. (περιπατεῖτε ὥς τὸ φῶς ἔχετε, ἵνα μὴ σκοτία ὑμᾶς καταλάβῃ.)

New Testament: John, xii, 35. (c. A. D. 70) The Vulgate is, "Ambulate dum lucem habetis, ut non vos tenebrae comprehendant."

9 These are imperishable gains, Sure as the sun, medicinal as light, That hold great futures in their lusty reins. J. R. LOWELL, Commemoration Ode. (1865)

10 He's blind with too much light.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Great Duke of Florence. Act ii, sc. 1. (1627)

Blasted with excess of light.

THOMAS GRAY, Progress of Poesy, l. 101. (1754)

11 Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works. (οὕτως λαμψάτω τὸ φῶς ὑμῶν ἔμπροσθεν τῶν ἀνθρώπων, ὥπως ἴδωσιν ὑμῶν τὰ καλὰ ἔργα.)

New Testament: Matthew, v, 16. (c. A. D. 50)

The Vulgate is, "Sic luceat lux vestra coram hominibus ut videant opera vestra bona."

1 Out of light a little profit. (Ex luce lucellum.)

WILLIAM PITT, referring to the tax on windows.
(c. 1755) When, in 1871, the government proposed a tax on matches, Robert Lowe, Chancellor of the Exchequer, suggested that the phrase be used as a motto on the boxes.

2 The shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day. (Lux splendens, procredit et crescit usque ad perfectam diem.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, iv, 18. (c. 250 B.C.)
He was a burning and a shining light. (ἐκείνος ἦν ὁ λύχνος ὁ καίμενος καὶ φάινων.)

New Testament: John, v, 35. (c. A.D. 70) The Vulgate is, "Ille erat lucerna ardens, et lucens."

3 We must admit the derivation of certain words from their opposites, such as lucus [a grove], so called because, from the dense shade, there is very little light there. (Lucus, quia umbra opacus parum luceat.)

QUINTILIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae. Bk. i, ch. 6, sec. 34. (A.D. 80) Hence the proverb, "Lucus a non lucendo," a grove from not being full of light.

As lucus comes from a non lucendo.

SWIFT, Answer to Paulus, l. 115. (1728)

Ancient modes of derivation, . . .

As by the way of inuendo,

Lucus is made à non lucendo.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Ghost, ii, 257. (1762)
Having entirely banished the letter A from his first book, which was called Alpha (as Lucus à non Lucendo) because there was not an Alpha in it.

JOSEPH ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 59. (1711)
Lucus a non lucendo. It must be so because the opposite seems to be true; is it clear because of its very obscurity ('presumably on the principle of lucus a non lucendo,' an acerb reference to a disputed etymology).

ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés. (1941)

4 Pray stande out of my light and take not from me that that thou maiest not yeue me.

EARL RIVERS, tr., Dictes and Sayenges of the Philosophirs, fo. 36. (1477) Quoting Diogenes.
See under ALEXANDER THE GREAT.

5 He was not one to hide his light under a bushel.

JOHN RHODE, Signal for Death, p. 146. (1941)
See under CANDLE.

6 Put out the light, and then put out the light.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, v, 2, 6. (1605)

'Tis a justice and a noble one,

To put the light out of such base offenders.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Maid's Tragedy.

Act iv, sc. 1. (a. 1616)

Quench thou his light, Destruction dark!

WALTER SCOTT, Lady of the Lake, iii, 11. (1810)

7 It is as good to be in the dark as without light.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii. (1738)

8 That fierce light which beats upon a throne.

TENNYSON, Idylls of the King: Dedication, l. 26. (1870)

The fierce light that beats upon the thrown-down.

O. HENRY, The Country of Elusion. (1907)

The fierce light that beats upon the witness-box.

NGAIO MARSH, Death in Ecstasy, p. 318. (1941)

9 Lafy [Lafayette] said "he couldn't see it in those lamps."

ARTEMUS WARD, In Richmond. (1865)

10 The thing to do is to supply light and not heat.

WOODROW WILSON, Speech, Pittsburgh, 29 Jan., 1916.

11 Whose dwelling is the light of setting suns.

WORDSWORTH, Lines Composed a Few Miles Above Tintern Abbey, l. 97. (1798) Tennyson called this line "almost the grandest in the English language."

The light that never was, on sea or land.

WORDSWORTH, Elegiac Stanzas, l. 15. (1805)

LIGHTNESS

12 As it is written in the book of Ben Sira: I have weighed all things in the balance, and I have found nothing lighter than bran; but lighter than bran is the bridegroom who dwells in the house of his father-in-law, and lighter than the bridegroom is the guest who introduces another guest, and lighter than the guest is "he that giveth answer before he heareth."

Babylonian Talmud: Baba Bathra, fo. 98b.

Ben Zev's rendering of BEN SIRA, xxix, 3-33.

The closing phrase is a quotation from Proverbs, xviii, 13: "He that answereth a matter before he heareth it, it is folly and shame unto him."

What's lighter than a feather? Dust. Than dust? Wind. Than wind? Woman. Than woman? Nothing. (Quid pluma levius? Pulvis. Quid pulvere? Ventus. Quid vento? Mulier. Quid muliere? Nihil.)

WALTER DAVISON, Poetical Rhapsody. (1602)

Davison quotes the Latin as Incertis Auctoris.

My soul, what's lighter than a feather? Wind. Than wind? Fire. And what than fire? The mind. What's lighter than the mind? A thought. Than thought? This bubble world. What than this bubble? Nought.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems. Bk. i, emb. 4.

(1635) There are many other variations. See Notes and Queries, 11 Aug., 1866.

13 They made light of it, and went their ways. (οἱ δὲ ἀμειψάμενοι ἀπῆλθον.)

New Testament: Matthew, xxii, 5. (a. A.D. 65)

The Vulgate is, "Illi autem neglexerunt."

If he be stungen he maketh lite of it and shortly forgetteth it.

SIR THOMAS ELYOT, The Image of Gouvernance. Pt. i, ch. 13. (1531)

If it appear to be done by a sonne . . . then it is made light of.

BACON, Colours of Good and Evil. (1597)
Making light of what ought to be serious.

JANE AUSTEN, Emma. Bk. i, ch. 16. (1815)

1 Light as the wind. (Legiers con vens.)

UNKNOWN, Le Dit de le Nonnete, l. 3. (c. 1250)

MONTAIGLON, Recueil des Fabliaux, vi, 264.

Light as leef on linde [linden].

CHAUCER, The Clerkes Tale, l. 1155. (c. 1386)

Light as a feather.

EDWARD HALL, Chronicle, p. 474. (1548)

Now here, now there, as light as any feather.

ARTHUR GOLDING, tr., Ovid's Metamorphoses.
Bk. iv, l. 765. (1567)

Light as a feather, hanging will ne'er kill you.

SHIRLEY, The Wedding. Act ii, sc. 3. (1629)

I hope he will soon shake off the black dog, and come home as light as a feather.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letters, ii, 73. (1778)

Light as the Queen's groat.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 159. (1639)

Light as a fly.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 206. (1670)

LIGHTNING

See also Thunder

2 The lightning discovers objects which the lantern fails to reveal.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 369.
(1938) A Chinese proverb.

3 Where of is growen a Latin prouerbe, Cynea cantio [swan song], which among the common people is termed, a lightning before death.

COGAN, The Haven of Health, p. 135. (1584)

How oft when men are at the point of death
Have they been merry! which their keepers call
A lightning before death.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, v, 3, 90. (1595)

If it be a lightning before death, the best is, I am his heir.

RICHARD BROME, A Joviall Crew. Act v. (1641)

It's a lightning before death. . . . A little before they die, their understanding and memory return to them; as a candle just before it goes out gives a great blaze.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 76. (1670)

We were once in great Hopes of his Recovery . . . but this only proved a lightning before Death.

ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 517. (1712)

A proverbial phrase which refers to the resuscitation of the spirits which frequently occurs before dissolution.

J. O. HALLIWELL, Archaic Words. (1847)

4 When caught by the tempest, wherever it be,
If it lightens and thunders, beware of a tree.

MICHAEL DENHAM, Proverbs, p. 19. (1846) It is dangerous to take shelter under a tree during a thunderstorm.

Beware of an oak: it draws the stroke;

Avoid an ash: it counts the flash;

Creep under a thorn: it will save you from harm.

UNKNOWN, Old Rhyme.

5 Tin lightning. (δοτραπή ἐκ πνέλου.)

DIOGENIANUS, Adagia, iii, 7. (c. A. D. 125) A sheet of tin was used on the ancient stage to produce thunder, just as on the modern one. It is used, for example, in OFFENBACH's La Belle Hélène. See THUNDER: YOU STEAL MY THUNDER.

6 It shall be readie in less than a lightning.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, p. 49. (1591)

It must be done like lightning.

BEN JONSON, Every Man in His Humour. Act iv, sc. 5. (1598)

This Notion ran like Lightning thro' the City.

DANIEL DEFOE, A Journal of the Plague Year, p. 261. (1722)

As quick as lightning.

MRS. FRANCES SHERIDAN, Discovery. Act i, sc. 2. (a. 1766) See also under QUICKNESS.

7 According to the Proverb you love to stand farre from Jupiter, and lightning.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 198. (1574) Pettie, tr.

I loue to stande aloofe from Ioue and lyghtning.

JOHN LVLV, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 351. (1580)

8 'Tis the tops of the mountains that the lightning strikes.

HORACE, Odes, ii, 10, 11. See under GREATNESS.

9 The fire of God is fallen from heaven. (Ignis Dei cecidit e caelo.)

Old Testament: Job, i, 16. (c. 350 B. C.)

The ratling thunderbolt hath but his clap, the lightning but his flash.

JOHN LVLV, Euphues (Arber), p. 62. (1579)

10 Though the thunderbolts strike but one man, it is not one only whom they fill with terror. (Cum feriant unum, non unum fulmina terrent.)

OVID, Ex Ponto. Bk. iii, epis. 2, l. 9. (A. D. 13)

11 Be thou as lightning in the eyes of France.

SHAKESPEARE, King John, i, 24. (1596)

Jove's lightnings, the precursors

O' the dreadful thunder-claps.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, i, 2, 201. (1611)

Lightly before thunder, lightning.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 226. (1633)

There is lightning lightly before thunder.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 209. (1639)

12 Secure of thunder's crack or lightning flash.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus, ii, 1, 3. (1593)

How to Secure Houses, &c. from Lightning.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, Dec., 1753. The title of Franklin's famous directions for the use of lightning-rods, which have never been improved upon.

Lightning. they say, never strikes twice in the same place.

JONATHAN STAGGE, The Scarlet Circle, p. 232. (1943) A superstition many times disproved.

1 Never from a cloudless sky fell more lightnings. (Non alias caelo ceciderunt plura sereno | fulgura.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. i, l. 487. (29 B.C.) Arrestment, sudden really as a bolt out of the blue, has hit strange victims.

THOMAS CARLYLE, The French Revolution. Vol. iii, p. 347. (1837)

So from a clear sky falls the thunderbolt!

TENNYSON, Queen Mary. Act iv, sc. 2. (1875) Like a bolt from the blue came the news of the Jameson raid.

W. F. BUTLER, Autobiography. Ch. 21. (1911) Coming on her like a bolt from the blue.

J. J. CONNINGTON, Four Defences, p. 197. (1940)

LIKE

2 Who likes thee, like him; who keeps thee at a distance, keep him still farther off.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 642. (1817)

A variant is, "Who sold thee for a dinar, sell him for a hen's egg."

3 When a Man is not liked, whatever he doth is amiss.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5535. (1732)

4 I do not like you, Sabidius, nor can I say why; This only I can say: I do not like you. (Non amo te, Sabidi, nec possum dicere quare: hoc tantum possum dicere, non amo te.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. i, epig. 32. (A.D. 85)

I do not like you, Hylas;

I cannot tell the cause,

I know one thing only:

That is that I don't like you.

(Je ne vous aime pas, Hylas;

Je n'en saurais dire la cause,

Je sais seulement une chose:

C'est que ne vous aime pas.)

ROGER DE BUSSY-RABUTIN, Paraphrase of Martial. (c. 1660)

I love him not, but shew no reason can

Wherefore, but this, I do not love the man.

ROWLAND WATKYN, Flamma Sine Fumo: Antipathy. (c. 1662)

I do not love thee, Doctor Fell,

The reason why I cannot tell;

But this I know, and know full well:

I do not love thee, Doctor Fell.

THOMAS BROWN, Paraphrase of Martial. (c. 1683) Brown had been threatened with expulsion from Christ Church College, Oxford, by the Dean, Dr. John Fell, who promised forgiveness if he would paraphrase promptly Martial's 32nd epigram, which he did very cleverly as given above. See BROWN, Works. Vol. iv, p. 100. It has been frequently quoted, recently in Agatha Christie's Easy to Kill, p. 122. (1939) "Like" is often used instead of "love."

'I do not like thee, Dr. Fell; the reason why I cannot tell'—and perhaps indeed there is no reason.

CARLYLE, Latter Day Pamphlets: Parliaments (1850)

I love thee not, Nell, But why I can't tell.

THOMAS FORDE, Virtus Rediviva (c. 1650)

I love him not, but show no reason can

Wherefore, but this, I do not love the man.

ROWLAND WATKYN, Antipathy. (1662)

You are a good man, learned, prudent, but I do not breathe for you [do not like you]. (Vir bonus es, doctus, prudens, ast haud tibi spiro.)

COLERIDGE, Biographia Literaria. Ch. 12. (1817)

Quoted, but no source given.

5 Whom she likes, she likes; whom she dislikes, she dislikes. (Quem amat, amat; quem non amat, non amat.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 37. (c. A.D. 60)

Let 'em lump it if they don't like it.

JOHN NEAL, The Down-Easters. Bk. i, ch. 7. (1833)

I'm a-going to call you Boffin, for short. . . .

If you don't like it, it's open to you to lump it.

DICKENS, Our Mutual Friend. Pt. iv, ch. 3. (1864)

If Jones don't like it, he'll have to lump it.

MARK TWAIN, Life on the Mississippi. Ch. 6. (1874)

You can lump that hat if you don't like it.

MARK TWAIN, Tom Sawyer. Ch. 1. (1876)

If you don't like it, you must lump it.

COURTNEY, West Cornwall Words, p. 36. (1880)

If you don't like it you can lump it.

SHAW, Man and Superman. Act iii. (1903)

If he doesn't like it, he'll have to lump it.

GALSWORTHY, Escape. Pt. i, epis. 3. (1926)

6 The . . . closest trial question to any living creature is, "What do you like?" Tell me what you like, and I'll tell you what you are.

RUSKIN, Crown of Wild Olive. Ch. 2. (1866)

I don't know anything about art, but I know what I like.

GELETT BURGESS, Are You a Bromide? (1907)

I don't know anything about music, really. But I know what I like.

MAX BEERBOHM, Zuleika Dobson. Ch. 16. (1911)

In art I pull no highbrow stuff;

I know what I like, and that's enough.

W. W. WOOLCOTT, I am a 100% American. (1918)

He knows all about art, but he doesn't know what he likes.

JAMES THURBER, New Yorker, 4 Nov., 1939.

7 For those who like this war, it's just such a kind of war as they like.

ARTEMUS WARD (CHARLES FARRAR BROWNE), The Draft in Baldinsville. (1862)

I have never heard any of your lectures, but from what I can learn I should say that for people who like the kind of lectures you deliver, they are just the kind of lectures such people like.

ARTEMUS WARD, Letter of Recommendation. (c. 1863) Humorously ascribed by Ward to Abraham Lincoln.

Well, for those who like that sort of thing I should think that is just about the sort of thing they would like.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Remark, to Robert Dale Owen, the spiritualist, who had insisted on reading to him a long manuscript on spiritism, and then asked his opinion of it. (1863) See GROSS, Lincoln's Own Stories, p. 96. Quite possibly, Lincoln got it from Artemus Ward, or perhaps Ward got it from Lincoln.

Very nice sort of place, Oxford, for people that like that sort of place.

SHAW, Man and Superman. Act ii. (1903)

1 I like the cut of your Gib.

ARTEMUS WARD, The Prince of Wales. (1866)

2 Everyone to their liking, as the old woman said when she kissed her cow.

UNKNOWN, Everyone to Their Liking. (1810)

See also under TASTE.

LIKENESS

3 To bear the same yoke. (τὸν αὐτὸν ἔλκειν ζυγόν.)

ARISTAENETUS, Epistles, ii, 7. (c. A. D. 350)

You and I draw both in the same Yoke.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5840. (1732)

4 She's the exact image of the other. (ὡς συγγερῆς ὁ κύσθος αὐτῆς θατέρᾳ.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Acharnians, l. 789. (425 B. C.)

He's the very image of you. (Nimium tui similes.)

PLAUTUS, Truculentus, l. 507. (c. 186 B. C.)

So very like it was difficult to know one from t'other.

ELIZABETH GRIFFITH, Henry and Frances, i, 181. (1757)

5 These adages might haue bene founde true, suche saynt, suche shryne, suche bere, suche bottell.

JOHN BALE, The Actes of the Englysh Votaryes, ii, 105b. (1550)

Such saintes, such seruice.

THOMAS HOWELL, His Deuises, p. 74. (1581)

Sike [such] priest, sike offering.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 90. (c. 1595)

Like saint, like offering.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 46. (1639)

Such a saint, such an offering.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1106. (1640) The French say, "A tel saint, tel offrende," the Italians, "A tal santo, tal offerta."

6 Lyke lorde, lyke chaplayne; neyther barrell better berynge.

JOHN BALE, Kynge Johan, p. 73. (c. 1540)

7 Eggs are extremely like eggs and bees like bees. (Ova ovarum et apes apium simillimae.)

CICERO, Academica. Bk. ii, sec. 54. (c. 45 B. C.)

One egg is not so like another. (Non ovum tam simile ovo.)

QUINTILLIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae. Bk. v, sc. 11, sec. 30. (c. A. D. 80) Quoted as a proverb. Sometimes given, "Non tam ovum ovo simile." Cited in this form by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, v, 10.

Our houses . . . are so like one to another that ye can less discern an egg from an egg, as they say.

THOMAS BECON, Early Works, p. 90. (1542)

The Greekes, the Latines, and wee use for the most expresse examples of similitude, that of eggs. Some have nevertheless been found that knew markes of difference between eggs, and never took one for another.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 13. (1595) Florio, tr.

We are almost as like as eggs.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale, i, 2, 130. (1611)

Not eggs to eggs are liker.

EDMUND GAYTON, Don Quixot, p. 23. (1654)

Like as one egg to another.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii. (1738)

8 That ape, ugliest of beasts, is the very spit of me. (Simia quam similis turpissima bestia nobis.)

ENNIUS, Satires. Frag. 23, Loeb. (c. 180 B. C.)

Be-hold thy sone! it semeth crope out of thy mowith.

UNKNOWN, Tale of Beryn, l. 3232. (c. 1400)

Twoo girles, . . . the one as like an Owle, the other as like an Urchin, as if they had been spitte out of the mowthes of them.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Wonders Worth Hearing, p. 8/1. (1602)

Now look I as like the Dutchman as if I were spit out of his mouth.

WILLIAM HAUGHTON, English-Men for My Money. Act iv, sc. 1. (a. 1605)

As like to one as if spit out of his mouth.

JOHN DRYDEN, Sir Martin Mar-all. Act v, sc. 1.

(1668) CENTLIVRE, Stolen Heiress. Act iii, sc. 4. (1703)

She's as like her husband as if she were spit out of his mouth.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii. (1738)

A daughter . . . the very spit of the old captain.

KNAPP AND BALDWIN, Newgate Calendar, iii, 497/2. (1825)

You are the very spit of your father.

THEODORE HOOK, Gilbert Gurney, i, 202. (1836)

Spit. A double or counterpart. "He's the very spit of his brother."

PARISH AND SHAW, Dictionary of the Kentish Dialect, p. 158. (1887)

9 To make for the same crib. (τὴν αὐτὴν φάρην ζητεῖν.)

EUBULUS, Fragment. Frag. 17. (c. 375 B. C.)

A Latin form is, "Eiusdem farinae" (Of the same flour). The French say, "Ces sont gens de même farine."

All of a litter.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 43. (1709)

All of a spinning.

Folk-Lore Journal, vii, 294. (1889)

<sup>1</sup> He storms and sputters like any thing.

THOMAS FLATMAN, Heraclitus Ridens. No. 48. (1681)

I have been looking up and down for you like any thing.

CONGREVE, Love for Love. Act v, sc. 4. (1695)
They wept like anything to see
Such quantities of sand.

LEWIS CARROLL, Through the Looking-Glass: The Walrus and the Carpenter. (1872)

<sup>2</sup> Geese with Geese, and Women with Women.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1645. (1732)
The best Patch is off the same Cloth.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4417.

<sup>3</sup> As like his dad as he could stare.

JOHN GAY, What D'ye Call It, i, 1. (1714)

As like him as she could stare.

JANE AUSTEN, Sense and Sensibility. Ch. 13. (1796)

LIKE FATHER LIKE SON, see under FATHER.

<sup>4</sup> As like as fig to fig. (σῦκον ἐκδᾶσαι σῦκῳ.)

HERODES, Sententiae, vi, 60. (c. 250 B. C.) Quoted by CICERO, Ad Atticum, bk. iv, epis. 8, in the form σῦκῳ σῦκον ὁμοιον, and by DIOGENIANUS, Adagia, vii, 37, in the form ὁμοιότερος σῦκον (As like as two figs).

As like as two claps of thunder. (Lei t ung.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1069. (1875)

<sup>5</sup> As a lyke to compare as chalke and cheese.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 4. (1546)
See under CHALKE.

As like as a dock to a daisie. That is, very unlike.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 204. (1670)

As like as an apple to an oyster.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 206. (1670)
See under APPLE.

<sup>6</sup> A lid to match the kettle. (Patellae dignum operculum.)

ST. JEROME (HIERONYMUS). (c. A. D. 385) See Notes and Queries, xii, ii, p. 7.

A very mete couer for such a cuppe.

SIR THOMAS MORE, Confutation of Tyndale: Preface, sig. Bb1. (1532)

He shall gyue a lydde or couer worthy for . . . the lyttell panne.

JEHAN PALSGRAVE, Acolastus, sig. M2. (1540)

She was a rych woman, she had hir landes by the Shiriffes nose. He was a gentleman of a long nose. Such a cup, such a cruse.

HUGH LATIMER, Fifth Sermon before Edward VI (Arber), p. 142. (1549)

Lyke pot, lyke potlid.

LEWIS EVANS, Withals' Dictionary Revised, sig. G7. (1586)

Such pot, such pot-lid, like master like man.

COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Conuerble. (1611)

As the proverb saies, a lid worthy of such a kettle.

URQUHART, tr., Rabelais: Prologue. Bk. i. (1653)

Such a Pot must have such a Lid.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4276. (1732)
For a broken pot a mended lid.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 444. (1938) A Japanese proverb.

<sup>7</sup> That's for that, and butter's for fish. Spoken when a thing fits nicely what it was design'd for.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 336. (1721)
So much for that, and butter for fish.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

That's for that, as salt is for herrings . . . and Nan for Nicholas.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Pictures, p. 34. (1880)

<sup>8</sup> As lyke as one pease is to an other.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England: Epistle Dedicatory, p. 215. (1580)

It's as like . . . as two peas are to one another.

FRANCES BURNEY, Evelina. Ch. 21. (1778)

As like him in form as one pea's like another.

R. H. BARHAM, The Ingoldsby Legends: Brother Birchington. (a. 1845)

They are as like each other as two peas!

J. R. PLANCHÉ, Extravaganzas, iii, 139. (1846)

We both should be like as pea and pea.

BROWNING, James Lee's Wife. Pt. ix. (1865)

It looks as much like High Jack as one green pea looks like itself.

O. HENRY, He Also Serves. (1909)

[They] looked as much alike as peas from the same pod.

PHILIP PAXTON (S. A. HAMMETT), A Stray Yankee in Texas, p. 194. (1853)

As like unto him as one French pea is unto a petit pois.

O. HENRY, A Dinner at —. (1910)

You're as like as peas in a pod.

JACK LONDON, The Valley of the Moon, p. 343. (1913)

As like as two peas in a pod.

ROBERT E. SHERWOOD, There Shall Be No Night. Act i. (1940)

We're all alike as peas in a pod.

PERCIVAL WHITE, Design for Murder, p. 20. (1941)

<sup>9</sup> And as it were but a paire of sheeres to goe betweene their natures.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 46. (1579)
They match each other as if cut from the same piece of cloth.

Thou thyself art a wicked villain, despite of all grace.—Well, there went but a pair of shears between us.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, i, 2, 29. (1604)

One pair of shears sure cut out both your coats.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, The Roaring Girl. Act iii. sc. 3. (1611)

There went but a paire of sheeres between him and the pursuivant of hell, for they both delight in sinne.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Characters: An Apparator. (1626)

There went but a paire of sheeres between a Papist and a Protestant, and not a pinne to choose.

Star Chamber Cases (Camden), p. 98. (1632)
But a pair of shears between them.

ROWLEY, A Match at Midnight. Act ii. (1633)

1 Like hen, like chicken.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The City-Madame. Act i, sc. 1. (1632) Ibid., ii, 2, "Like bitch, like whelps."

Like mother, like child, they say.

FREDERICK MARRYAT, Jacob Faithful. Ch. 23. (1835) See also under MOTHER.

2 Such beef, such broth.

FRANCIS MERES, Palladis Tamia, fo. 218. (1598)
Like wood like arrows.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 113. (1633)

3 Intimate society between people radically dissimilar to one another is an idle dream. Unlikeness may attract, but it is likeness which retains.

J. S. MILL, Subjection of Women. Ch. 4. (1869)

4 Why am I like a railway engine? Because I've got a tender behind.

ALFRED JOHN MONSON, Remark, after sitting all day in the court at Edinburgh, Scotland, while on trial for the murder of Cecil Ham-brough, 12 Dec., 1893. See ROUGHHEAD, Murder and More Murder, p. 6. The joke is, of course, much older. It is probably contemporaneous with the first locomotive.

5 This is something-like!

SAMUEL PARKER, tr., Cicero's De Finibus, iv, 247. (1702)

"This looks something like, Sir," said she.

UNKNOWN, Geraldina, i, 176. (1798)

6 The viper does not bring forth a rope. (Colubra restem non parit.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 45. (c. A. D. 60) A proverbial phrase. Like produces like; the thorn does not produce grapes; you can't gather figs from thistles. The Germans say, "Ein Geier heckt keine Zeislein aus" (A hawk hatches no canary).

Men saye in a comyn langage, that "neuer noo wodewoll [wood-pecker] dyde brede a sper-hawke."

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., Blanchardyn and Eg-lantine, p. 173. (c. 1489)

The serpent brings forth nothing but a little serpent.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 599. (1817)
Like breeds like, they say.

TENNYSON, Walking to the Mail. (1842)

The crow does not roost with the phoenix.

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2281. (1875)

7 Who is able to like what differs from himself? (Quis potest probare diversa?)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 84. (c. A. D. 60)

Likeness causeth liking.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 27. (1639)

Everybody loves his own likeness.

T. SALDKELD, tr., Gracian's Complete Gentle-man, p. 79. (1730)

Likeness begets Love; yet proud Men hate one another.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3243. (1732)

8 Like purpose, like prooffe: like man, like master.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 18. (1576) A similar Latin Proverb, "Qualis avis, talis cantus; qualis vir, talis oratio" (Such bird, such song; such man, such speech).

9 Is it possible that I am like that? (μή ποῦ ἄρ' ἐγὼ τοιοῦτος;)

PLATO, the question which Plato asked himself whenever he observed faults or unseemly conduct in others. (c. 375 B. C.) Plutarch quotes this four times in his Moralia, 40D, 88E, 129D, 463E.

Is it possible that I may thoughtlessly do anything like that? (Numquid ego illi imprudens olim faciam simile?)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 4, l. 136. (35 B. C.)

10 You couldn't draw two drops of water from the same well more like each other. (Ex uno puteo similior numquam potis aqua aquai sumi.)

PLAUTUS, Miles Gloriosus, l. 551. (c. 200 B. C.) Neither water to water nor milk to milk is more like. (Neque aqua aquae nec lacte est lactis usquam similius.)

PLAUTUS, Menaechmi, l. 1089. (c. 200 B. C.) One drop of milk is no more like another than that I is like me. (Neque lac lactis magis est simile quam ille ego similest mei.)

PLAUTUS, Amphitruo, l. 601. (c. 200 B. C.)

As much alike as two drops of milk. (Tam similem, quam lacte lacti est.)

PLAUTUS, Miles Gloriosus, l. 240. (c. 200 B. C.) They are as like your own, as . . . milke to milke.

WILLIAM CHILLINGWORTH, The Religion of Protestants. Bk. 1, ch. 2, sec. 160. (1638)

It looks so like intemperance, as milk to milk.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Ductor Dubitantium, p. 417. (1660)

11 Of their own will the good gather to the tables of the good. (ἀρόγατοι δ' ἀγαθοὶ ἀγαθὸν ἐπὶ δαίτας λαοί.)

PLATO, Symposium. Sec. 174B. (c. 375 B. C.)

Quoted as a proverb, and by ZENOBIUS, ii, 19. It is the bad man whose like you will find most easily. (Nulli facilius quam malo invenies parem.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 440. (c. 43 B. C.) Bad delights to fuse with bad. (κακὸς κακῷ γὰρ συντέρηκεν ἰδορί.)

ATHENAEUS, Deipnosophistai. (c. A. D. 200)

12 As like as ninepence to nothing.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 206. (1670)

As like as four pence to a groat.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 286. (1678)
One is half a pound, and the other eight ounces.
DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 190. (1872)

1 They are so like that they are the worse for it.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 354. (1678)
They are so like that both are the worse for it.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4959. (1732)

2 Mar e Bran is e a brathair, If it be not Bran, it is Bran's brother.

WALTER SCOTT, Waverley. Ch. 45. (1814) Bran was the famous dog of Fingal.

3 These hands are not more like.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, i, 2, 212. (1600)

4 Very like a whale.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 2, 399. (1600)
"I was endeavouring to make peace," returned
Mr. French, with unblushing effrontery. "Mighty like a whale!" observed the commander, in a side whisper.

W. H. MAXWELL, The Fortunes of Hector
O'Halloran. Ch. 8. (1842)
Very like a whale, said of anything that is very improbable.

Slang Dictionary, p. 115. (1859)
5 When two do the same thing, often, as you may say, it may be harmless in one, and not harmless in the other. (Duo cum idem faciunt, saepè, ut possis dicere, | hoc licet impune facere huic, illi non licet.)

TERENCE, Adelphoe, l. 823. (c. 160 B.C.) Condensed into a proverb, "Duo cum faciunt idem, non est idem" (When two do the same thing, it is not the same thing).
Every like is not the same.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar, ii, 2, 128. (1599)
No like is the same; Similitude and Identitie are different things.

THOMAS ADAMS, II Peter, iii, 10. (1633)
Why wouldst not have her like me?—Because no like's the same.

WILLIAM ROWLEY, A Shoo-maker a Gentleman.
Act ii. (1638) A rendering of the Latin proverb, "Nihil simile est idem" (Nothing similar is the same).

6 Taught in the same school. (Eodem in ludo docti.)

TERENCE, Hecyra. (c. 160 B.C.) As cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, viii, 50. "Hatched in the same nest," or "Tarred with the same stick," as Scott put it. Henderson (p. 102) has another one, "He suffers from the same disease" (Eodem laborat morbo), or "Companions in misfortune."

You stick in the same mire. (In eodem luto haesitas.)

TERENCE, Phormio. (161 B.C.) As cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, iv, 99.

They are in the same boat. (In eadem es navi.)
CICERO, Ad Familiares. Bk. ii, epis. 5, sec. 1.
(53 B.C.) See under BOAT.

To be aground on the same rock. (Haerere in iisdem scopulis.)

HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 148. (1869) A similar one is "To be in the same hospital"
(In eodem valetudinario jacere).

One is as deep in the mud as the other in the mire.
H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches,
p. 498. (1940)

There's but a hair's-breadth between me and a madman. (λασὴ δὲ μὰς ποκα, θρή ἀνὰ μέσσον.)
THEOCRITUS, Idyls. No. xiv, l. 9. (c. 270 B.C.)

7 I hope at least, you and your good woman agree still.—Ay! ay! much of a muchness.

VANBRUGH AND CIBBER, The Provok'd Husband.
Act i. (1727)

I have nine [horses]—much of a muchness.
THEODORE HOOK, Jack Brag. Ch. 2. (1837)

Why they are all pretty much of a muchness.
CHARLES READE, It Is Never too Late to Mend.
Ch. 18. (1857)

Men's men: gentle or simple, they're much of a muchness.

GEORGE ELIOT, Daniel Deronda. Ch. 31. (1876)
Folks is folks all the world over—much of a muchness, I reckon, when you gits inside 'um, so to spake.

E. G. HAYDEN, Travels Round Our Village, p.
24. (1905)

We are all alike—on the inside.
MARK TWAIN, In Eruption, p. 46. (1906)

8 Let Attius be as Tettius. (Idem Atti, quod Tettio.)

VARRO, Testamentum. Frag. (c. 50 B.C.) The will said, "If one or more sons shall be born to me in ten months, let them be disinherited, if they are asses in music (δνοι λέπας); but if one be born to me in the eleventh month, according to ARISTOTLE, Hist. Anim., vii, 4, let Attius have the same rights under my will as Tettius." Proverbial for likeness. Attius and Tettius stand for any names, like
Smith and Jones in English.

9 The dainty thing would have a dainty bit.

WILLIAM WALKER, Paroemiologia, p. 29. (1672)
The dainty thing would have a dainty dish.

WILLIAM ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis, p.
418. (1681)

10 Like lips, like lettuce. (Similes habent labra lactucas.)

UNKNOWN. The proverb which made Marcus
Crassus, "the unlaughing one" (ἀγέλαστος), laugh the only time in his life, when he saw an ass eating thistles. (c. 105 B.C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, x, 71, and Moriae Encomium, sec. 68, in the form, "Inveniunt similes labra lactucas."

Marcus Crassus, who, according to Lucilius, laughed but once in his life. (Quem semel ait in vita risisse.)

CICERO, De Finibus. Bk. v, ch. 30, sec. 92. (c.
45 B.C.)

The proverb which, as Lucilius tells us, made Crassus laugh for the only time in his life: "The lips have lettuce like themselves when an ass eats thistles." (Similem habent labra lactucam asino cardus comedente.)

ST. JEROME (HIERONYMUS), Letters. No. vii, sec. 5. (A. D. 374)

No doubt the proverbe is true, such lippes, such lecture, such saintes such miracles.

ROBERT BARNES, Works (1573), p. 189/1. (c. 1540)
Suche carpenters, suche chips (quoth she) folke tell,

Suche lips, suche lettice, suche welcome suche farewell.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)
And as the wise man said, such letuce such lips.

ULPIAN FULWELL, Like Will to Like. (1568)
Like lips, like lettice, such as is their cause so are the rulers.

ABRAHAM FLEMING, Holinshed, iii, 1017. (1587)
Like lips, like lettice, as the man is so is his manners.

ROBERT GREENE, Works, iii, 60. (1587)
Laetitia! a fair omen, and I take it:

Let me have still such Lettice for my lips.

BEN JONSON, The New Inne. Act ii, sc. 2. (1631)
There's other lettuce For your coarse lips.

MASSINGER, The Guardian. Act ii, sc. 3. (1634)
Like lips like lettuce. Similes habent labra lactucas. A thistle is a salad fit for an ass's mouth: We use when we would signify that things happen to people which are suitable to them, or which they deserve: as when a dull scholar happens to a stupid or ignorant master, a froward wife to a peevish husband, &c. Dignum patellâ operculum. Like priest, like people; and on the contrary. These proverbs are always taken in the worse sense. Tal carne tal coltello. Like flesh, like knife.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 114. (1670)
Cited by Robertson, Fuller, Trench and others. The Italian is, "A tal libbra tal latuga," the German, "Wie das Maul, also der Salat."

A Thistle is a fat Salad for an Ass's Mouth.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 435. (1732)
About an ass's taste why need we fret us?

To lips like his a thistle is a lettuce.

WILLIAM EWART, Similem Habent Labra Lactucam. (a. 1869) Quoted by Thomas Moore in his Diary.

II—Likeness: Like to Like

<sup>1</sup> Thief knows thief, and wolf wolf. (ἔγνω δὲ φῶρ τε φῶρα, καὶ λύκος λύκον.)

ARISTOTLE, Eudemian Ethics. Bk. vii, ch. 1, sec. 5. (c. 340 B. C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, iii, 63, with the Latin, "Furem fur cognoscit, et lupum lupus."

<sup>2</sup> Why does the vulture go to the raven? Because they are fit companions.

Babylonian Talmud: Baba Kamma, fo. 92a.
The degenerate palm goes among the unfruitful reeds.

Babylonian Talmud: Baba Kamma, fo. 92b. (c. 450) A variant (Kiddushin, iii, 13) is, "We carry mud to mud, and gold to gold."

<sup>3</sup> Birds dwell with their kind. (Volatilia ad sibi similia conveniunt.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xxvii, 9. (c. 190 B. C.)

Byrds of a fether, best flye together.

GEORGE WHETSTONE, Promos and Cassandra, sig. C1. (1578)

Birdes of a feather will flocke together.

JOHN MINSHEU, Spanish Grammar, p. 83. (1599)

Birds of a feather and a kinde,

Will still together flocke.

ROWLANDS, Diogenes Lanthorne, l. 43. (1607)
As the proverb saith, Birds of a feather

Will always use to flock and feed together.

WITHER, Abuses Stript and Whipt, l. 72. (1613)
Birds of a feather will gather together.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy, iii, i, ii, 1. (1621) The Portuguese, however, point out that "Birds of prey do not flock together."

Fowls of a feather flock together.

SAMUEL RUTHERFORD, The Tryal and Triumph of Faith (1845), p. 60. (1645)

We say, "That birds of a feather will flock together." To be too intimate with sinners is to intimate that we are sinners.

THOMAS SECKER, Nonsuch Prof., ii, 93. (1660)
Men of a side Like birds of a feather Will flock together.

HENRY FIELDING, Author's Farce. Act iii. (1729)
Birds of a Feather will still flock together, whether they be either High-Flyers or Low-Flyers.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 75. (1709)
Birds of a feather, they say.

J. K. PAULDING, The Bucktails. Act iii, sc. 2. (1815)

Like seeks like, the brave like the brave—birds of a feather flock together.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 19. (1843)

It is literally true in the systematised roguery of London, that "birds of a feather flock together."

LORD LYTTON, Pelham. Ch. 79. (1828)

They are but birds of one feather.

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 3. (1850)

Birds of a feather may fight together.

TOLSTOY, War and Peace. Vol. i, pt. i, ch. 25. (1865) Dole, tr.

We are all in this together,

We are birdies of a feather.

KAUFMAN AND RYSKIND, Of Thee I Sing. Act ii, sc. 1. (1931)

<sup>4</sup> Every ewe to her like. (Cada oveja con su pareja.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 19, 53. (1615) The French is, "Chaque ovaile avec sa pareille."

<sup>5</sup> I trowe he hadde thilke text in minde,
That "alle thing, reperiing to his kinde,
Gladeth him-self"; thus seyn men, as I gesse.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Squires Tale, l. 599. (c. 1388)

Alle thyng in kynde desirith thyng i-like.

JOHN LYDGATE, Minor Poems, p. 55. (c. 1430)

1 Hedgehogs lodge among Thorns, because themselves are prickly.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2485. (1732)

2 As ever, the god is bringing like and like together. (ὡς αἰεὶ τὸν ὁμοῖον ἀγει θεὸς ὡς τὸν ὁμοῖον.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xvii, l. 218. (c. 850 B. C.)

The birth, or at least the first appearance in literature, of a proverb still widely quoted. It is cited by PLATO, Lysis, sec. 214A (c. 380 B. C.), by MENANDER, The Man from Sicyon, frag. 443K (c. 300 B. C.), and many others. The first phrase, ὡς αἰεὶ τὸν ὁμοῖον, is quoted as a proverb by ARISTOTLE, Rhetoric, i, 11, 25 (c. 330 B. C.), together with three similar ones, ἡλικὴ ἡλικὰ τέρπει (Youth will to youth), ἔγνω δὲ θῆρ θῆρα (Beast knows beast), and δει κολοῖς παρὰ κολοῖόν (Always jackdaw with jackdaw), which Freese, in the Loeb edition, renders by the familiar, "Birds of a feather flock together." Sometimes given as, δει κολοῖς παρὰ κολοῖῳ ἵζανει (A jackdaw is always found near a jackdaw). Cited by DIOGENIANUS and by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, ii, 23, with the Latin, "Semper graculus assidet graculo" (Jackdaw always perches by jackdaw), and a reference to Aristotle's Rhetoric as the source. Erasmus also cites the line from Homer and gives the Latin, "Semper similem ducit deus ad similem," which Taverner renders (fo. 9), "God alwaye draweth the lyke to the lyke."

Like seeks after like. (τὸ ὁμοῖον τοῦ ὁμοῖου ἐπείσθαι.)

EMPEDOCLES, Fragment. (c. 450 B. C.) As quoted by ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics, viii, 1, 6. Well says the old saw, "Like and like together strike." (ὁμοῖον ὁμοῖῳ δει πελάζει.)

PLATO, Symposium. Sec. 195B. (c. 380 B. C.)

Quoted also Laws, iv, 716C.

Like is dear to like. (τὸ ὁμοῖον τῷ ὁμοῖῳ φίλον.)

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. Bk. ix, ch. 3, sec. 3. (c. 335 B. C.)

Friendship with rascals is sister to rascality, and true is the saying "like to like." (τὸ ὁμοῖον πρὸς τὸ ὁμοῖον πορεύσθαι.)

THEOPHRASTUS, Characters. No. xxix, sec. 6. (319 B. C.)

Not false is the saying of Homer that God ever brings like to like. (δὲλ' αἰὼς Ὀμηρικὸς, αἰὲν ὁμοῖον ὡς θεός, οὐ ψεύδης.)

CALLIMACHUS, Aitia, l. 9. (c. 250 B. C.)

All flesh consorteth according to kind, and a man will cleave to his like. (πᾶσα σὰρξ κατὰ γένος συνάγεται, καὶ τῷ ὁμοῖῳ αὐτοῦ προσκολληθήσεται ἀνὴρ.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xiii, 16. (c. 190 B. C.) Quoted in the Babylonian Talmud: Baba Kamma, fo. 92b. Oesterley renders it, "All flesh loveth its kind, and every man his like." Verse 15 has, "Every beast loveth his like." The Vulgate of the two verses is, "Omne animal diligit simile sibi. . . . Omnis caro ad similem sibi conlungetur, et omnis homo simili sui sociabitur."

According to the old adage, "like with like most easily foregathers." (Pares autem vetere proverbio cum paribus facillime congregantur.)

CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. iii, sec. 7. (44 B. C.)

Cicero puts the proverb into the mouth of Cato. Quoted by QUINTILIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae, v, 11, 41.

It is the nature of like to delight in like. (εἴγε δὴ τὰ ὁμοῖα χαίρειν τοῖς ὁμοῖοις πέφυκεν.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: How to Study Poetry.

Sec. 30F. (c. A. D. 95)

Lyk to lyk accordis wele.

UNKNOWN, Scottish Legends of the Saints

(Petrus), i, 543. (c. 1375)

As for this proverbe doeth specify,

"Lyke will to lyke in eche company."

UNKNOWN, Proverbs of Good Counsel. (c. 1460)

Lyke will drawe to lyke.

SIR THOMAS MALORY, Morte Darthur, ix, xxxi. (c. 1480)

Like pleases like. (Aequalis aequalem delectat.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. ii, No. 20.

(1508) Erasmus cites two other forms, the rendering of Homer's line already noted and (No. 21), "Simile gaudet simile" (Like pleases like). He refers to all these as "ancient proverbs," and gives many examples of their use. TAVERNER, Translations from Erasmus, fo. 8, has the rendering, "The lyke delighteth in the lyke," and the comment, "Symyltude (as Aristotle sayethe) is the mother of loue."

For it is a prouerbe, and an olde sayd sawe, That in euery place lyke to lyke wyll drawe.

ALEXANDER BARCLAY, The Shyp of Follys, ii, 35. (1509)

Like will to like.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 4. (1546)

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, i, 104. (1574)

SCOTT, Peveril of the Peak. Ch. 14. (1823) etc., etc.

Lyke will to lyke, quoth the Devil to the Collier.

ULPIAN FULWELL, Lyke Will to Lyke. (1568)

FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 3239, turns this into a Wellerism, "Like will to Like, as the Devil said to the Collier." The Germans have the same proverb, "Gleich und Gleich gesellt sich gern, sprach der Teufel zum Köhler." (As the sayinge is) like, like best of their likes.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace: Minos and Pasiphae, p. 223. (1576) On p. 244 (Hartman, ed.) he has: "Like agree best with their like."

Like with like doth last wel. (Pari con pari, bene sta & dura.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 32. (1578) The Italians also say, "Ogni simile appetisce il suo simile" (Every man likes to associate with those who are like himself), or "Simili con simili vanno" (Like will with like); the French, "Qui se ressemble, s'assemble."

Doth not the sympathy of manners make the coniunction of mindes? Is it not a by word lyke will to lyke?

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 48. (1579)

The mightiest space in fortune nature brings To join like likes.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, i, 1, 241. (1602)

Like to like, as a scab'd horse to an old dyke.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 287. (1639)

Like will to like, each Creature loves his kinde;
Chaste words proceed still from a bashfull minde.

ROBERT HERRICK, Like Loves His Like. (1648)

Like to like, and Nan for Nicholas.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 15. (1670)

Like to like, ye ken—it's a proverb never fails.

SCOTT, Heart of Midlothian. Ch. 17. (1818)

<sup>1</sup>
The Nun of Sion and the Frier of Shean,
Went under the water to play the quean.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 21. (1659)

"A saying," comments Grose (Prov. Glos: Middlesex), "meant to express 'birds of a feather.' Although the river Thames runs between these two monasteries, there is a vulgar tradition that they had a subterranean communication."

<sup>2</sup>
Things that have a common quality quickly seek their kind. (ἅσα κοινοῦ τινος μετέχει, πρὸς τὸ ὁμογενὲς σπεύδει.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. ix, sec. 9.
(c. A. D. 174)

Eche thinge draweth to his semblable.

JOHN LYDGATE, The Churl and the Bird. St. 38.

(c. 1430) Evidently a rendering of the French proverb, "Chacun cherche son semblable" (Every one seeks his like). The French also say, "Chacun demande sa sorte" (Every one wants his kind).

For as saith a proverb notable,
Each thing seeketh his semblable.

SIR THOMAS WYATT, The Re-Cured Lover. (c. 1525)

<sup>3</sup>
The old proverb says, "Youth likes youth."
(ἡλικα γὰρ καὶ ὁ παλαιὸς λόγος τέρπειν τὸν ἡλικα.)

PLATO, Phaedrus. Sec. 240C. (385 B. C.) Often translated, "Birds of a feather flock together," by Fowler, for example, in the Loeb edition.

<sup>4</sup>
The cricket is dear to the cricket, and the ant to the ant. (τέττιξ μὲν τέττιγι φίλος, μύρμακι δὲ μύρμαξ.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. No. ix, l. 31. (c. 270 B. C.)

The partridge and the woodcock come together.
(συνήλθεν Ἀτταγὰς τε καὶ Νουμήνιος.)

TIMON OF PHILIUS, Silloi. Frag. (c. 250 B. C.)

As quoted by DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Timon, bk. ix, sec. 114. Diogenianus explains the proverb as referring to two notorious thieves, Attagas the Thessalian and Numenius the Corinthian. Or perhaps the birds partridge and woodcock may be meant, not any Mr. Partridge and Mr. Woodcock, as suggested by Hicks in the Loeb edition, who renders the phrase, "Birds of a feather flock together."

The Fox and the Ape . . . determined to seeke
Their fortunes farre abroad, lyeke with his lyeke.

SPENSER, Mother Hubbard's Tale, l. 48. (1591)

What's he? E'en a crow o' the same nest.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, iv, 3, 318. (1602) The Persians say, "A dove with a dove, a goose with a goose"; the Irish, "Each bird draws to its flock."

LILY

<sup>5</sup>

Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow;
they toil not, neither do they spin: And yet
I say unto you, That even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these.
(καταμάθετε τὰ κρίνα τοῦ ἀγροῦ πῶς αὐξάνουσιν· οὐ κοπιῶσιν οὐδὲ νήθουσιν· λέγω δὲ ὑμῖν ὅτι οὐδὲ Σολομὼν ἐν πάσῃ τῇ δόξῃ αὐτοῦ περιεβάλετο ὡς ἐν τούτων.)

New Testament: Matthew, vi, 28, 29. (c. A. D.

70) The Vulgate is, "Considerate lilia agri quomodo crescunt: non laborant, neque nent. Dico autem vobis, quoniam nec Salomon in omni gloria sua coopertus est sicut unum ex istis." Also Luke, xii, 27.

The lilly, lady of the flowing field . . .

Yet neither spinnes nor cards, ne cares nor fretts,
But to her mother Nature all her care she lets.

EDMUND SPENSER, The Faerie Queen. Bk. ii, canto vi, st. 16. (1590)

The Lillie and the Rose, that neither sow'd nor spun.

JOHN MILTON, Sonnets. No. xvii, l. 8. (c. 1655)

<sup>6</sup>
Lilies are whitest in a Blackamoor's Hand.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3244. (1732)

<sup>7</sup>
Lilies that fester smell far worse than weeds.
SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. xciv. (1609)

LIMB

<sup>8</sup>

This is what they mean when they talk about being out on the end of a limb. Or painted into a corner.

MARION HOLBROOK, Suitable for Framing, p. 57. (1941)

<sup>9</sup>

Ye schulen hebben lif & leomen [limb].

LAYAMON, Chronicle of Britain, l. 702. (c. 1205)

Als he louede leme or lif.

UNKNOWN, Havelok the Dane, l. 2555. (c. 1300)

[He] made great warriours quake both lim and bone.

THOMAS HUDSON, tr., Du Bartas Historie of Judith, v. 71. (1584)

Hee will . . . tear him limbe from limbe.

THOMAS NASHE, Lenten Stuffe. (1599)

They pulled them . . . limb from limb.

DEFOE, Robinson Crusoe. Pt. ii, ch. 3. (1719)

<sup>10</sup>

He is a limb of the law.

DUKE OF PORTLAND, Portland Papers, vi. 35. (1730)

There's another Limb of the Law.

F. GÉNARD, The School of Man, p. 149. (1753)

A limb of the law, who had hitherto taken us under his protection.

MALKIN, tr., Gil Blas. Pt. i, ch. 5. (1809)

Well said, my young limb of the law.

FOOTE, The Lame Lover. Act iii. (1770)

<sup>11</sup>

If Nellie's hoop be twice as wide
As her two pretty limbs can stride.

ALLAN RAMSAY, Scribblers Lash'd. (1721)

I'll show a limb with any of them.

J. S. KNOWLES, The Love-Chase. Act ii, sc. 1. (1837)

I am not so particular as some people are, for I know those who always say limb of a table, or limb of a piano-forte.

FREDERICK MARRYAT, A Diary in America. Ser. i, ii, 245. (1839)

A bit of the wing, Roxy, or the—under limb?

O. W. HOLMES, Elsie Venner. Ch. 7. (1860)

O, he's a limb, that has but a disease;
Mortal, to cut it off; to cure it, easy.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus, iii, 1, 296. (1607)

We say . . . "Cut not the bough that thou standest upon."

WILLIAM TINDALE, The Obedience of a Christen Man, p. 304. (1528)

Zaroen and Arphaxat that the deueles limes were.

UNKNOWN, Legends of the Saints, i, 78. (c.1290)

Many, that is, fendes & the fendes lymmys, rises agayns me.

RICHARD ROLLE OF HAMPOLE, The Psalter, iii, 1. (a. 1340)

Lym of Satanas, thi sire.

UNKNOWN, St. Mary Magdalen, 212. (c. 1350)

A lyme of the feende called the Pucelle.

Rolls of Parliament, v, 435. (1434)

A vyllayne, and lymme of ye deuell.

ROBERT BARNES, Works (1573), p.189. (a.1540)

I am naturally a devil's limb.

DAVID DICKSON, Job, x. (1660)

Limb, . . . sometimes 'tis a Term of Reproach.

DYCHE AND PARDON, Dictionary: Limb. (1735)

Now listen, you young limb.

DICKENS, Oliver Twist. Ch. 22. (1838)

See there! . . . Don't that show she's a limb?

H. B. STOWE, Uncle Tom's Cabin. Ch. 20. (1852)

He was what nurses call a "limb."

C. S. CALVERLEY, Verses and Translations, p. 7. (1862)

LINE

The line of least resistance was always the most difficult line in the long run.

PETER CHENEY, Dark Duet, p. 214. (1943)

Have you got anything in my line to-night?

DICKENS, Oliver Twist. Ch. 26. (1838)

Her jokes aren't in my line.

RUDYARD KIPLING, My Rival. (1886)

Bring your Line to the Wall, not the Wall to the Line.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1021. (1732)

With her a straight line was ever the shortest distance to something she wanted to know.

MARY LASSWELL, Suds in Your Eye, p.12. (1942)

She soon taught him that a curved line is the most attractive distance between two points

E. B. MARKS, They All Had Glamour, p. 21. (1944)

The strait of Malacca is under the line.

ROBERT PARKE, tr., Mendoza's Historie of China, p. 392. (1588) The equator is the line here indicated.

Where spices smoke beneath the burning Line.

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. iii, l. 70. (1728)

The naked negro, panting at the line.

GOLDSMITH, The Traveller, l. 69. (1764)

This bill is an attempt to reduce the country south of Mason and Dixon's line to a state of worse than Colonial bondage.

JOHN RANDOLPH OF ROANOKE, Speech, in Congress, 15 April, 1824, referring to the Missouri Compromise. Mason and Dixon's line was so-called from two English surveyors, Charles Mason and Jeremiah Dixon who, in 1763-67, surveyed the boundary between Pennsylvania and Maryland, to settle the disputes between the Penn family and Lord Baltimore. It lies in 39° 43' 26" north latitude, and as it separated the free state of Pennsylvania from the then slave states of Maryland and Virginia, it came to be regarded in the public mind as the line north of which, as extended across the continent, slavery would not be permitted.

I'll bet a quart of ink that this Southern parlor organ you've been running has never played a note that originated above Mason & Hamlin's line.

O. HENRY, The Rose of Dixie. (1909) Mason & Hamlin was the name of a celebrated firm of organ makers.

[The Russians] dashed on towards that thin red line tipped with steel.

W. H. RUSSELL, Letter from the Crimea, to the London Times, 25 Oct., 1854. Also in his British Expedition in the Crimea, p. 187. Notes and Queries, ser. viii, vol. vii, p. 191, published a letter from Russell claiming credit for authorship of "the thin red line."

Then it's Tommy this, an' Tommy that, an' "Tommy, 'ow's yer soul?"

But it's "Thin red line of 'eroes" when the drums begin to roll.

RUDYARD KIPLING, Tommy. (1900)

"It is hard lines for me," he said.

WALTER SCOTT, Redgauntlet. Ch. 3. (1824)

It will be "hard lines" upon him.

F. E. SMEDLEY, Frank Fairleigh. Ch. 3. (1850)

Gad, Sir, that was hard lines!

KINGSLEY, Two Years Ago, Bk. i, ch. 4. (1857)

Give him line, and scope,
Till that his passions, like a whale on ground,
Confound themselves with working.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, iv, 4, 39. (1598)

Giving them line enough to runne themselves out of breath.

JAMES MABBE, tr., Aleman's Gusman, ii, 124 (1622)

The King was willing to give Oates line enough, as he expressed it to me.

BISHOP GILBERT BURNET, History of His Own Time, i, 435. (a. 1715)

It's policy to give 'em line enough.

DICKENS, Hard Times. Bk. ii, ch. 8. (1854) See also under ROPE.

1
Lo, thou a spans length mad'st my living line.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, tr., The Psalms of David, xxxix, 3. (c. 1580) See also LIFE: A SPAN.

This fatall instrument

Was mark'd by heauen to cut his line of life.

ROBERT YARINGTON, Two Lamentable Tragedies. Act iii, sc. 2. (1601)

Though his line of life went soone about,

The life yet of his lines shall never out.

HUGH HOLLAND, Prefatory Verses, in SHAKESPEARE'S First Folio. (1623)

2
To make a white line upon a white stone. (οὐ μάλλον ἢ λευκῷ λίθῳ λευκὴ στάθμη.)

SOPHOCLES, Frag. 307, Nauck. (c. 425 B. C.) In its shorter form, λευκὴ στάθμη (alba linea), it is used by PLATO, Charm. 154B. A builder's chalked line leaves no mark on white substances, and the proverb means to make no distinction in a thing.

With a white line, as the saying goes, that is, with no effort to discriminate. ("Alba" ut dicitur, "linea," sine cura discriminis.)

AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticae: Praefatio. Sec. 11. (c. A. D. 150) In frequent use.

3
Through cunning with dible, rake, mattock, and spade,

By line and by leauell, trim garden is made.

THOMAS TUSSER, Fiue Hundreth Pointes of Good Husbandrie. Ch. 36. (1573)

Plantations . . . which are laid out by rule and line.

ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 414. (1712)

A poet does not work by square or line,

As smiths and joiners perfect a design.

COWPER, Conversation, p. 789. (1781)

4
It is difficult . . . to draw the line.

UNKNOWN, Trial of Fyshe Palmer, p. 42. (1793)

I attach but little value to rank or wealth, but the line must be drawn somewhere.

W. S. GILBERT, H.M.S. Pinafore. Act i. (1878)

That's carrying things a step too far,

I draw the line at that.

HARRY B. SMITH, We Draw the Line at That. (1884)

One must draw the line somewhere.

R. D. BLACKMORE, Springhaven. Ch. 18. (1887)

Low-bred upstarts must be kept in their places.

. . . The line must be drawn somewhere.

JOHN BEALBY, Daughter of the Fen. Ch. 19. (1896)

LINEN

5
It is at home, not in public, one washes one's dirty linen. (C'est en famille, ce n'est pas en publique, qu'on lave son linge sale.)

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Speech, to the French Legislative Assembly, on his return from Elba in 1815. The French proverb is, "Il faut laver son linge sale en famille."

LION

"See," exclaimed Voltaire, "what a quantity of his dirty linen the king sends me to wash."

MACAULAY, Essays: Frederick the Great. (1842) I do not like to trouble you with my private affairs; there is nothing, I think, so bad as washing one's dirty linen in public.

ANTHONY TROLLOPE, The Last Chronicle of Barset. Ch. 44. (1867)

Domestic troubles should not be exposed.

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 479. (1872)

Married people should remember the proverb about the home-washing of dirty linen.

E. J. HARDY, How to Be Happy Though Married. Ch. 1. (1886)

The amount of women in London who flirt with their husbands is perfectly scandalous. It looks so bad. It is simply washing one's clean linen in public.

OSCAR WILDE, The Importance of Being Earnest. Act i. (1895)

There's nothing to be gained by washing a lot of dirty linen in public.

PATRICIA WENTWORTH, In the Balance, p. 306. (1941)

He would rather die than have us wash all the family linen in public.

DOROTHY DISNEY, Crimson Friday, p. 221. (1943)

6
To wrap it up in clean linen. To deliver sordid or uncleanly matter in decent language.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 84. (1678)

LION

7
One, but that one a lion. (Ένα . . . ἀλλὰ λέοντα.)

AESOP, Fables: The Lioness and the Fox. (c. 570 B. C.) The Latin is, "Unum sed leonem."

A fox cast it in the teeth of a lioness, that she brought forth but one whelp at a time. "Very right," says the other, "but then that one is a lion."

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, tr., Aesop's Fables, cxxii, 138. (1692)

8
The lion's share. (μέρος λέοντι.)

AESOP, Fables: The Lion, the Ass, the Fox, and the Wolf. (c. 570 B. C.) The four animals go hunting in partnership, and pull down a stag, which the lion divides into four equal parts. But just as each is going to take his share, the lion says, "Hold; let no one presume to help himself until he has heard my claims. I seize upon the first quarter by virtue of my prerogative; the second is due to my superior courage; I cannot forgo the third on account of the necessities of my den; and if any one is disposed to dispute my right to the fourth, let him speak." From which it will be seen that the original meaning of "the lion's share" was not the greater part of anything, but all of it. As Aesop puts it, "εἰς μίαν μερίδα πάντα."

I carry off the chief share because I am called the Lion. (Ego primam tollo, nominio quia Leo.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. i, fab. 5. (c. 25 B. C.)

A leonine partnership. (Leonina societas.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. vii, No. 88. (1508) Where one has the lion's share.

To the lion belongs whatever his paw has seized.
BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 585. (1817)

<sup>1</sup>
The body of a dead lion even hares insult.
(νεκροῦ σώμα λέοντος ἐφινβρίζουσ λαγωοί.)

AFSOP, Fables. (c. 570 B.C.) See Greek Anthology, bk. xvi, epig. 4, "What Hector Would Say When Wounded by the Greeks: 'Strike my body now after my death, for the very hares insult the body of a dead lion.'" Cited by PONTANUS, Collectio Proverbiorum, p. 117, with the Latin, "Mortuo leoni vel lepores insultant." ERASMUS, Adagia, gives the proverb in a slightly different form, "Audet vel lepus exanimo insultare leoni" (Even a hare dares insult a dead lion). A similar Latin proverb is, "Vellere barbam leoni mortuo" (To pluck the beard of a dead lion). To pluck the beard was a gesture of contempt, as says HORACE, Satires, i, 3, 133, "Vellunt tibi barbam lascivi pueri" (Mischievous boys pluck at your beard). See under BEARD.

Do not pluck the beard of a dead lion. (Noli barbam vellere mortuo leoni.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. x, epig. 90. (A.D. 93) And of these, this saying rose, That the lion being dead, the verie Hares triumph over him.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 73. (1574) Pettie, tr. Cited as a proverb.

So hares may pull dead lions by the beard.

THOMAS KYD, Spanish Tragedy. Act i, sc. 2. (1592) Strike a man when he's dead? So hares may pull dead lions by the beards.

THOMAS NASHE, Works (Grosart), ii, 198. (1593) You are the hare of whom the proverb goes, Whose valour plucks dead lions by the beard.

SHAKESPEARE, King John, ii, 1, 137. (1596) Flies will tickle lions being dead.

JOHN MARSTON (?), Histrion-Mastrix. Act vi. (1610)

Do not, live hare, pluck the dead lion's beard.

THOMAS RANDOLPH, The Jealous Lovers. Act iv, sc. 3. (1632)

Even hares can pull the mane of a dead lion. (Al leon muerto hasta las liebres le repelan.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 54. (1647)

Even a Child may beat a Man that's bound.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1387. (1732) It is a base Thing to tear a dead Lion's Beard off.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2846.

Little Birds may pick at a dead Lion.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3250.

<sup>2</sup>
Painting a lion from the claw. (ἐξ ὀνυχος δὲ λέοντα γράφαις.)

ALCAEUS, Fragments. Frag. 66. (c. 595 B.C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia: On the Cessation of Oracles, 410C. See EDMONDS, Lyra Graeca, i, 361. Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, ix, 34, with the Latin, "Leonem ex unguibus aestimare." Erasmus says that the great sculptor, Phidias, from seeing the claw of a lion, was able to estimate its size. Hence this proverb. Another form is, ἐκ τῶν ὀνύχων τον λέοντα γινώσκειν (To judge of a lion by his claws), of which the Latin is, "Ex ungue leonem." See also HERCULES: EX PEDE HERCULEM.

Who hath not hard that the Lyon is known by hys clawes?

THOMAS LODGE, A Defence of Poetry, p. 3. (1579) A Lion is known by his paw.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia. p. 131. (1639) By the paw we may judge of the lion.

DANIEL ROGERS, Naaman, p. 158. (1642)

Many more stories might be told of him [Spyridion], but (to use the words of an ancient writer who has related some of them) 'from the claws you can make out the lion.'

DEAN A. P. STANLEY, Lectures on the History of the Eastern Church. Ch. 3. (1861)

<sup>3</sup>
'Tis best to rear no lion in the state,
But if there be one, better humor him.

(μάλιστα μὲν λέοντα μὴ 'ν πόλει τρέφειν, ἢν δ' ἐκτραφῇ τις, τοῖς τρόποις ὑπηρετεῖν.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Frogs, l. 1432. (405 B.C.) "Never rear a lion in the state" passed into a proverb.

Don't let a lion be your foe

If you propose to let him grow.

(Propose-vous d'avoir le lion pour ami,
Si vous voulez le laisser craître.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. xi, fab. 1. (1678)

Destroy the Lion, while he is yet but a Whelp.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1276. (1732) It is best to kill the lion while it is a cub.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk. Ch. 1. (1869)

<sup>4</sup>
A lion growls not in a den full of straw, but in a den full of meat . . .

Babylonian Talmud: Berachoth, fo. 32a. (c. 450) 'Tis not a basket of hay but a basket of flesh will make a lion roar.

JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 410. (1678)

<sup>5</sup>
Pray you accept

My will to do you service: I have heard

The mouse once saved the lion in his need.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Honest Man's Fortune. Act iii, sc. 1. (c. 1613)

As the fable telleth us . . . the mouse [may] befriend the lion.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy Warre. Bk. iii, ch. 8. (1639)

A Lion may come to be beholding to a Mouse.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 264. (1732)

A mouse may help a lion, as the fable says.

MARRYAT, Percival Keene. Ch. 17. (1842)

<sup>6</sup>
They must not be like the Joecaul, which provides food for the Lyon.

WILLIAM DE BRITAINNE, The Dutch Usurper, p. 33. (1672) The jackal was formerly supposed to go before the lion and hunt up the prey for the lion to kill.

If you will accept of my services as a sort of jackal or lion's provider.

WALTER SCOTT, Letter to Gifford, 25 Oct., 1808.

The poor jackals . . .
(As being the brave lion's keen providers).
LORD BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ix, st. 27. (1823)

1 As a leoun he his loking caste.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Knights Tale, l. 1313. (c. 1386)

He loketh as it were a grim leoun.

CHAUCER, The Nonne Preestes Tale, l. 359.

Lyk a wilde leoun fool-hardy.

CHAUCER, The Monk's Prologue, l. 28.

He looked as a wood leoun.

CHAUCER, The Wife of Bath's Prologue, l. 429.

And he up-stirte as dooth a wood leoun.

CHAUCER, The Wife of Bath's Prologue, l. 794.

The frere up stirte as doth a wood leoun.

CHAUCER, The Somnour's Tale, l. 444.

Ful lyke a fiers leoun.

CHAUCER, The Second Nonnes Tale, l. 198.

2 And in the feld he pleyde tho leoun.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde, Bk. i, l. 1074 (c. 1380)

He beane a leoun, bothe in word and dede.

CHAUCER, The Knightes Tale, l. 917. (c. 1386)

3 The present Lyon of the times . . . is Omy, the native of Otaheite.

MADAME D'ARBLAY, Early Diary, i, 311. (1774)

The King of Prussia is the only Royal Lion.

LADY GRANVILLE, Letters, i, 67. (1815)

The literary lion who likes to be petted.

LORD LYTTON, Alice. Bk. vi, ch. 1. (1838)

What is a lion? A lion is a man or woman one must have at one's parties.

THACKERAY, Contributions to Punch. Works (1886), xxiv, 251. (1850)

4 In the words of the Duce himself, it's better to be a lion for a day than a lamb for a hundred years.

ELIZABETH DELEHANTY, Arise from Sleep, p. 16. (1942)

5 The lion is not so furious as he is painted.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 64. (1633)

The lion is not so fierce as he is painted.

THOMAS FULLER, The History of the Holy Warre. Bk. v, ch. 30. (1639) Also The Holy State: Of Expecting Preferment. (1642)

The lion is not so fierce as they paint him.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 291. (1640) Quoted by SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 9 Aug., 1661. The Spaniards say, "No es tan bravo el leon como le pintan."

The lion (sure) is not so fierce or stout
As foolish men do paint or set him out.

ROWLAND WATKINS, Flamma Sine Fumo. (1662)
The lion's not half so fierce as he is painted.
Minuunt praesentia famam, is a true rule. Things are represented at a distance much to their advantage, beyond their just proportion and merit. Fame is a magnifying glass. Some say, "The devil's not half so black as he's painted." See under DEVIL.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 114. (1670)

6 There's no Security in the Lion's Paw, without a Miracle.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 267. (1709) The Arabs say, "When you ride a lion, beware of his claw."

7 He is a Lion in a good Cause.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1907. (1732)
He who killeth a Lion, when absent; feareth a Mouse, when present.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2395.

8 This country Francesco was no other but a meere nouice, and that so newly, that to vse the old prouerb, he had scarce seene the lions.

ROBERT GREENE, Works (Grosart), viii, 68.

(1590) The sights worth seeing, from the practice of taking visitors to see the lions which were kept in front of the entrance to the Tower of London. The French have a similar phrase, from the royal menagerie formerly kept in what is now the Rue des Lions, near the Hôtel de Sens, in Paris.

Those be the young men that never sawe the Lyons.

UNKNOWN, Maroccus Extaticus, p. 8. (1595)
After, one Master John Bull, . . . with divers of his friends, went to see the Lyons.

JOHN SMITH, True Travels. Ch. 18. (1629)

I took three lads . . . to show them . . . the lions, the tombs, Bedlam, and the other places which are entertainments to raw minds.

RICHARD STEELE, The Tatler. No. 30. (1709)

Not the right season of the year to show the lions.

MRS. COLLEY CIBBER, in Garrick Correspondence, i, 200. (1765)

To shew the lions and tombs, to point out the particular curiosities of any place.

FRANCIS GROSE, A Classical Dictionary of the Vulgar Tongue: Lion. (1785)

The rest of the day we spent in seeing the lions—and first the Cathedral.

THOMAS HOOD, Up the Rhine, p. 96. (1840)

He . . . has been in London too, and seeing all the lions under my escort.

DICKENS, Letters (1882), iii, 46. (1843)

9 She is as fierce as a lyon of Cotssolde.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

A Cotswold lion, i. e. a sheep; perhaps a pun on leyn (wool), for which the Cotswold Hills are noted.

Then will he look as fierce as a Cotssold lyon.

NICOLAS UDALL, Ralph Roister Doister. Act iv, sc. 6. (a. 1553)

As valiant as an Essex lion, i. e. a calf.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 307. (1678)

You look like a Lammermoor lyon [a sheep].

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 380. (1721)

10 Who nourisheth a lion must obey him.

BEN JONSON, Sejanus. Act iii, sc. 3. (1603)

11 Nothing so gentle as the princely Lyon, who saued his life, that helped his foot.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 379 (1580) A reference to the story of Androcles and the lion.

1 Against bulls Libyan lions rage, they do not bother butterflies. (In tauros Libyci ruunt leones, | non sunt papilionibus molesti.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xii, No. 61. (A. D. 103)
However a German proverb says, "Auch der Löwe muss sich vor der Mücke wehren" (Even a lion must defend itself against flies).
The Indian elephant cares not for a gnat. (Indus elephantis haud curat culicem.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, i, x, 66. (1508)

2 Why, do you suppose, I said, that I am so mad as to try to shave a lion? (οἷε γὰρ ἄν με, εἶπον, οὕτω μανῆναι, ὥστε ξυρεῖν ἐπιχειρεῖν λέοντα;)

PLATO, The Republic. Bk. i, sec. 341C. (c. 375 B. C.) A rare but obvious proverb. See ARISTIDES, Orat. Plat., ii, 143. The paroemiographers have "To prick the lion" (λέοντα νύσσειν).

Reason assured me
It was not safe to shave a lion's skin.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Great Duke of Florence. Act v. sc. 1. (1636)

3 To be found not a lion but an ape. (ἀντὶ λέοντος πίθηκον γίγνεσθαι.)

PLATO, Republic. Bk. ix, sec. 590B. (c. 375 B. C.)

4 There goes the lion up and down among the sheep. (οὗτος ὁ λέων ἐν τούτοις τοῖς προβάτοις ἀναστρέφεται.)

PLUTARCH, Lives: Cleomenes. Ch. 33, sec. 6. (C. A. D. 110) What the courtiers said of Cleomenes, of whom they were afraid. See also under WOLF.

A lion among sheep and a sheep among lions.

GEORGE PUTTENHAM, The Arte of English Poesie (Arber), p. 299. (1589)

5 Save me from the lion's mouth. (Salve me ex ore leonis.)

Old Testament: Psalms, xxii, 21. (c. 250 B. C.)

I was delivered out of the mouth of the lion. (ἐρύσθην ἐκ στόματος λέοντος.)

New Testament: II Timothy, iv, 17. (C. A. D.

63) The Vulgate is, "Liberatus sum de ore Leonis."

What doth hee else, but (as it were) put his finger into the Lion's mouth?

ARTHUR DENT, The Plaine Mans Path-way to Heaven, p. 62. (1601)

My hand is in the lion's mouth; I must agree with him.

UNKNOWN, Cornish Comedy. Act v. (1696)

He that hath his hand in the lion's mouth, must take it out as well as he can.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 171. (1721)

Better to die, than to run into the Lion's mouth.

JAMES CAVALIER, Memoirs of the Wars of the Cevennes, iv, 289. (1726)

If thy Hand be in a Lion's Mouth, get it out as fast as thou can'st.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2724. (1732)

"Our heads are in the lion's mouth," said Wamba, . . . "get them out how we can."

WALTER SCOTT, Ivanhoe. Ch. 19. (1819)

In the power of saying rude truth, sometimes in the lion's mouth, no men surpass them.

EMERSON, English Traits: Truth. (1856)

Don't stick your head in a lion's mouth.

A. B. CUNNINGHAM, The Bancock Murder Case, p. 68. (1942)

6 The slothful man saith, There is a lion in the way. (Dicit piger: Leo est in via.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxvi, 13. (c. 350 B. C.)

An imaginary obstacle.

The lion in the way that the sluggish and timorous politician thinks he sees.

JOHN MILTON, Of Reformation Touching Church Discipline, ii, 18. (1641)

There is a cowardice which we do not despise because it has nothing base or treacherous in its elements; it betrays itself, not you; . . . it is the absence of the romantic and the enterprising; it sees a lion in the way.

CHARLES LAMB, The South-Sea House. (1820)

You have always . . . lions in the path.

JOHN BRIGHT, Speech on Ireland, 1 April, 1868. I have been a sluggard and I ride apace, For now there is a lion in the way.

TENNYSON, The Holy Grail, l. 643. (1869)

7 There came a lion and took a lamb out of the flock: And I went after him and . . . caught him by the beard and slew him.

Old Testament: I Samuel, xvii, 34-35. (c. 700 B. C.)

Sooner wouldst thou beard The Lion in his rage.

SMOLLETT, The Regicide. Act ii, sc. 7. (1749)

And dar'st thou then

To beard the lion in his den,

The Douglas in his hall?

SCOTT, Marmion. Canto vi, st. 14. (1808)

Beard not a lion in his den, but fashion the secret pitfall.

M. F. TUPPER, Proverbial Philosophy: Of Indirect Influences. (1839)

Nothing less would satisfy her than to beard . . . the lion in his den, the arch-accuser, in the very court of judgment.

R. D. BLACKMORE, Perlycross. Ch. 22. (1894)

8 God shield us!—a lion among ladies is a most dreadful thing, for there is not a more fearful wild-fowl than your lion living.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream, iii, 1, 31. (1596)

9 It [is] not good to awake a sleeping lion.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Arcadia. Bk. iv (1893), p. 416. (1580)

To awake the sleeping lyon (say we).

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Esveiller. (1611)

As when we say proverbially to incense hornets, to move a stinking puddle, and to awake a sleeping lion.

SIR THOMAS URQUHART, tr., Rabelais. Bk. iii, ch. 14. (1693) The Latin proverb is, "Noli irritare leones." LET SLEEPING DOGS LIE, see under DOG.

1 I hope we shall not be as wise as the frogs to whom Jupiter gave the stork as their king. To trust expedients with such a king on the throne would be just as wise as if there were a lion in the lobby, and we should vote to let him in and chain him, instead of fastening the door to keep him out.

COLONEL SILIUS TITUS, Speech, on the Exclusion Bill, House of Commons, 7 Jan., 1680, opposing the limitation which Charles offered to impose upon a Catholic sovereign rather than pass the bill excluding his brother from the throne.

But Titus said, with his uncommon sense, When the Exclusion Bill was in suspense: "I hear a lion in the lobby roar; Say, Mr. Speaker, shall we shut the door And keep him there, or shall we let him in To try if we can turn him out again?"

JAMES BRAMSTON, Art of Politicks. (1729)

II—Lion: The Lion's Skin

2 A lion's skin upon a yellow silk. (ὄρων λεοντήν ἐπὶ κροκωτῇ κειμένην.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Frogs, l. 46. (405 B.C.) All the proverbs about the lion's skin derive from Aesop's fable of the ass which tried to conceal its identity by wearing a lion's skin, but was betrayed by its voice. To "don the lion's skin" means to assume strength, a proverb which Plato refers to in Cratylus, 411A. ERASMUS, Adagia, i, ii, gives the Latin as "Leonis exuvium super crocoton."

3 Il n'y eut jamais bon marché de peaux de lions, . . . a Lyons skinne was neuer bought good cheape.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Lion. (1611)

A Lion's skin is never cheap.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 58.

Cited by Ray and Fuller.

4 Where the lion's skin will not reach, it must be patched out with the fox's. (ὅπου γὰρ ἡ λεοντὴ μὴ ἐφικνεῖται, προσαπτέον ἐκεῖ τὴν ἀλωπεκὴν.)

LYSANDER, when told that war should not be waged by deceit. (c. 375 B.C.) See PLUTARCH, Lives: Lysander. Ch. 7, sec. 4. Quoted by MONTAIGNE, Essays, bk. i, ch. 5, with the French, "Où la peau du lyon ne peult suffire, il y fault coudre un loppin de celle du renard."

I like Lysander's counsel passing well; 'If that I cannot speed with lion's force, To clothe my complots in a fox's skin.'

ROBERT GREENE (?), Selimus, l. 1733. (1594)

If the Lion's skin cannot do it, the Fox's shall.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains Concerning Britain (1870), p. 326. (1605)

The Duke of Savoy . . . though he be valiant enough, yet he knows how to patch the lion's skin with a fox's tail.

JAMES HOWELL, Letters, 30 Nov., 1621.

And where the lion's hide is thin and scant, I'll firmly patch it with the fox's tail.

CHAPMAN, Alphonsus. Act i, sc. 1. (a. 1634)

Craft, where strength doth fail,

And piece the lion with the fox's tail!

JOHN WILSON, Andronicus Comnenius. Act iv, sc. 4. (1664)

If the lion's skin cannot, the foxes shall. Si leonina pellis non satis est, assuenda vulpina. [If the lion's skin isn't enough, sew on the fox's.] To attempt or compass that by craft, which we cannot obtain by force.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 184. (1670). When the Lyon's Skin alone would not serve turn, he knew how to make it out with that of the fox.

TYRRELL, History of England, ii, 87. (1700)

The lion's skin too short, you know . . .

Was lengthened by the fox's tail;

And art supplies, where strength may fail.

The Agreeable Companion, p. 182. (1745)

5 The man that once did sell the lion's skin, While the beast lived, was killed with hunting him.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, iv, 3, 93. (1599) See under SKIN.

6 Thou wear a lion's hide! doff it for shame, And hang a calf's-skin on those recreant limbs.

SHAKESPEARE, King John, iii, 1, 128. (1596)

Nor need the lion's skin conceal the ass.

SWIFT, To Mr. Congreve, l. 172. (1693)

7 Put the lion's skin on me. (ἐνδύετέ μοι τὴν λεοντήν.)

ZENOBIUS, Adagia, iii, 75. (c. A. D. 130) ERASMUS, Adagia, i, iii, 66, gives the Latin, "Induitis me leonis exuvium." Hercules wore one.

III—Lion and Fox

8 A very lion at home, a fox in battle. (ὄντες οἴκοι μὲν λέοντες, ἐν μάχῃ δ' ἀλώπεκες.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Peace, l. 1189. (421 B.C.)

The locus classicus of all proverbs about men who are lions at home and sheep or skulking foxes abroad.

Nowadays people are lions at home and foxes out of doors. (Nunc populus est domi leones. foras vulpes.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 44. (c. A. D. 60)

Is mouth is as a lion, is herte arn as a hare.

ROBERT OF GLOUCESTER, Metrical Romance, l. 9384. (1297)

Un ben theih lions in halle, and hares in the field.

UNKNOWN, Poem on the Times of Edward II, l. 252. (c. 1325) See Political Songs (Camden), p. 334.

Lions in the field and lambes in chambre.

THOMAS USK, The Testament of Love. (1388)

We say it is comely for a man to be a lambe in the house, and a lyon in the field.

GEORGE PUTTENHAM (?), The Arte of English Poesie, p. 299. (1589)

A lion in the field, a lamme in the town.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Works, i, 277. (1593)

1 Be not like a lion in thine house.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), iv, 30. (c. 190 B. C.). Oesterley, tr.

With-in thyn hous ne be thou no leoun.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Somnours Tale, l. 281. (c. 1388)

2 If the lion was advised by the fox, he would be cunning.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell. (1808)

The fox provides for himself, but God provides for the lion.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell. (1808)

3 Though lions to their enemies, they were lambs to their friends.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, The Infernal Marriage. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1853)

4 The Brains of a Fox will be of little Service, if you play with the Paw of a Lion.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4432. (1732)

5 Amiens was taken by the Fox, and retaken by the Lion.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1034. (1650)

6 He hath borne himself beyond the promise of his age, doing, in the figure of a lamb, the feats of a lion.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing, i, 1, 13. (1598)

LIP

7 When the lips are gone, the teeth feel cold.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. xli. (1938)
An historical Chinese proverb, often applied to the seizure of territories on the Chinese frontier.

Open lips make cold teeth.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 446. (1938) A popular version of a seventeenth century Chinese verse, "After speaking, lips are cold in the autumnal wind."

8 The hen (quoth she) the cocke (quoth he) iust (quoth she)

As Iermans lips.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 2. (1546)

He . . . shall see them agree like dogges and cates, and meete as lump as Germans lippes.

STEPHEN GOSSON, The Schoole of Abuse, p. 27. (1579)

As just as Iermans lips, spoken in derision.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 3. (1659)
A correspondent in Notes and Queries, ser. iv, vol. iii, p. 468 (1869), asks, "Is not this an allusion to the proverb respecting "German's lips, which came not together by nine mille"?"

9 Eyther they make a lyppe at it, or yelde with silence.

BISHOP STEPHEN GARDINER, A Declaration of True Articles, 46b. (1546) Make a lip, i. e. frame the lips to express vexation or merriment.

I will make a lip at the physician.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus, ii, 1, 127. (1607)

Was not that a speech to provoke Miss Grizzle herself? However, I only made up a saucy lip.

MADAME D'ARBLAY, Diary, 14 Sept., 1781.

10 He can yll pype, that lackth his vpper lyp.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)

A man cannot pipe without his upper lip.

RAPHAEL HOLINSHED, Chronicles of Scotland, ii, 464. (c. 1580)

Marry, a new collection, there's no music else, masters; he can ill pipe that wants his upper lip, money.

BEN JONSON, Metamorphos'd Gypsies. (1621)

He can ill pipe that wants his upper lip. Things cannot be done without necessary helps and instruments.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 131. (1670)

The piper plays ill that wants the nether jaw.

WALTER SCOTT, Ivanhoe. Ch. 32. (1819)

11 I am a man of unclean lips. (Vir pollutus labii ego sum.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, vi, 5. (c. 725 B. C.)

12 Button up your lip or you'll be getting yourself in trouble.

MANNING LONG, False Alarm, p. 156. (1943)

13 Lips are no part of the head, only made for a double-leaf door for the mouth.

JOHN LYLY, Midas. (1592)

Divers philosophers hold that the lips is parcel of the mouth.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor. i, 1, 236. (1601)

14 Love, how he melts! . . . Such marmalade lips.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Picture. Act i, sc. 1 (1629)

Sweet lips, . . .

Men touch them, and change in a trice

The lilies and languors of virtue

For the roses and raptures of vice.

A. C. SWINBURNE, Dolores. (1865)

Kissable lips and flirtable eyes still foul the good and fool the wise.

J. B. OPDYKE, Amor Vitaque: Omargrams. (1912)

15 What's the use o' boo-hoo-in? . . . Keep a stiff upper lip; no bones broke.

JOHN NEAL, The Down-Easters. Bk. i, ch. 2, p. 15. (1833)

She used to carry a stiff upper lip; make him and the broomstick well acquainted together.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), The Clock-maker. Ser. i, ch. 25. (1837)

Keep a stiff fin, then, and stem all the tides thou mayst meet.

H. D. THOREAU, A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers: Saturday. (1849)

"Good-by, Uncle Tom; keep a stiff upper lip," said George.

H. B. STOWE, Uncle Tom's Cabin. Ch. 10. (1852)

And though hard be the task,
"Keep a stiff upper lip."

PHOEBE CARY, Keep a Stiff Upper Lip. (c. 1854)

See also FREDERIC, Damnation of Theron Ware, p. 508. (1896) SHERWOOD, There Shall Be No Night. Act iii. (1940) HEYER, Envious Casca, p. 132. (1941) PENTECOST, I'll Sing at Your Funeral, p. 67. (1942) CROFTS, Double Tragedy, p. 254. (1943) etc., etc.

<sup>1</sup> My lips are sealed. I am bound to keep silence: [a cliché since] C. 20; esp. from late 1937, when Lord Baldwin said more than once, 'My lips are sealed.'

PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: Lips. (1941)

<sup>2</sup> They are as loose of their lips and as free of their flesh as may be.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, ii, 32. (1576)

Free of her lips, free of her hips.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 62. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6269. (1732)

<sup>3</sup> O, how ripe in show
Thy lips, those kissing cherries, tempting grow!

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream, iii, 2, 139. (1596)

Cherrie-Ripe, Ripe, Ripe, I cry,
Full and faire ones; come and buy.

ROBERT HERRICK, Cherrie-Ripe. (1648)

<sup>4</sup> To lip a wanton in a secure couch.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, iv, 1, 72. (1605)

Lip her, knave, lip her.

JOHN MARSTON, Eastward Hoe, Act i, sc. 1. (1605)

Lip me and listen.

D. G. ROSSETTI, Eden Bower. St. 19. (1871)

<sup>5</sup> Tusshe, thy lypes hange in thyne eye.

JOHN SKELTON, Magnyfycence, l. 1061. (1529)

Your lips hang in your light.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1546)

His lippes hang in his light.

FRANCIS BACON, Promus. No. 107. (c. 1594)

Some lasses lips hang in their light.

JOHN DAVIES, Scourge of Folly, p. 49. (1611)

A born fool; his lips hang in's light.

WILLIAM ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis, p. 621 (1681)

<sup>6</sup> Thy lips are like a thread of scarlet. (Sicut vitta coccinea, labia tua.)

Old Testament: Song of Solomon, iv, 3. (c. 900 B. C.)

His lippes rede as rose.

CHAUCEER, Canterbury Tales: Sir Thopas, l. 15. (c. 1386)

Her lippes Corall.

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, 79. (1574)

Her lips are roses over-wash'd with dew.

ROBERT GREENE, Eclogue. (a. 1592)

Their lips were four red roses on a stalk.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, iv, 3, 12. (1592)

My mistress' eyes are nothing like the sun,
Coral is far more red than her lips' red.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. cxxx. (1609)

When you describe a lovely Girl,

No Lips of Coral, Teeth of Pearl.

SWIFT, Apollo's Edict, l. 54. (1721)

Lips, however rosy, must be fed.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 444. (1855)

<sup>7</sup> Her lips were red, and one was thin,

Compar'd to that was next her chin,

Some bee had stung it newly.

SIR JOHN SUCKLING, A Ballad Upon a Wedding. St. 11. (a. 1642)

<sup>8</sup> The doors are not shut on their lips. (γλώσση θύραι οὐκ ἐκλείπεται.)

THEOGNIS, Elegies, l. 421. (c. 550 B. C.)

<sup>9</sup> Don't give me none of your lip.

MARK TWAIN, Huckleberry Finn. Ch. 5. (1884)

Says Sal to me, "None of your lip."

S. R. CROCKETT, Cleg Kelly. Ch. 20. (1895)

<sup>10</sup> The lips that touch liquor must never touch mine.

UNKNOWN, The Lips that Touch Liquor. First appeared in Standard Recitations, 1884.

<sup>11</sup> It is not good to scalde ones lyppes in other mens pottage.

UNKNOWN, Servingsmans Comfort, in HAZLITT, Inedited Tracts, p. 99. (1598) Not good to meddle in other people's business.

He busieth himself in other men's commonwealths: . . . he scalds his lips in every neighbour's pottage.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons (1861), iii, 502. (1629)

Scald not your lips in another man's pottage.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 56. (1670)

D'URFEY, Don Quixote. Pt. iii, act ii, sc. 2.

(1696) PALMER, Moral Essays on Proverbs, p. 355. (1710)

Don't burn your lips with another man's broth

UNKNOWN, Goody Two-Shoes, v, i. (1766)

If ye'll tak my advice, ye'll no sca'd your lips in other folks' kail.

JOHN GALT, The Entail. Bk. iii, ch. 24. (1823)

You are scalding your lips in other folks' kale.

SCOTT, St. Ronan's Well. Ch. 8. (1823)

LISTENING

<sup>12</sup> It is the rudeness of a man to hearken at the door.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus). xxi, 24. (c. 190 B. C.)

The wish to overhear is a vulgar wish. (Voler ciò udire è bassa voglia.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto xxx, l. 148. (c. 1300)

1 Were we as eloquent as angels, yet we should please some men, some women, and some children much more by listening, than by talking.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Pt. i, No. 13. (1820)

No siren did ever so charm the ear of the listener as the listening ear has charmed the soul of the siren.

SIR HENRY TAYLOR, The Statesman. (1836)

2 He listens to good purpose who takes note. (Bene ascolta chi la nota.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto xv, l. 99. (c. 1300)

A good recorder sets all in order.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 11. (1659) Cited by Ray and Fuller.

3 Lovers, travellers, and poets will give money to be heard.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1736.

4 He that listens after what People say of him, shall never have Peace.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2218. (1732)

5 The most difficult thing of all, to keep quiet and listen. (Rerum omnium difficilimas, tacere audireque.)

AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticae. Bk. i, ch. 9. (c. A. D. 150)

6 Were there no hearers, there would be no backbiters.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640) A variant is, "If there were no listeners there would be no liars." The French say, "Jamais ne seroit medisant s'il n'estoit nul escoutant" (There would never be an evil speaker if there were no listener).

7 Listeners never hear good of themselves.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 75. (1678) On p. 111, Ray gives another form, "Listeners hear no good of themselves."

'Tis an old saying, That List'ners never hear Well of Themselves.

ROGER L'ESTRANGE, Fables. No. 170. (1692)

Hearkeners, we say, seldom hear good of themselves.

MATTHEW HENRY, Ecclesiastes, vii. (1710)

The event justified the old observation, that listeners seldom hear good of themselves.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Clarissa. Ch. 5. (1748)

They say that hearkeners hear ill tales of themselves.

WALTER SCOTT, The Fortunes of Nigel. Ch. 33 (1822) The Scots also say, "Listen at a hole, and ye'll hear news o' yoursel." The Spanish form is, "Eschuchas al agujero, oirás de tú mal y del ajenó" (Listen at a keyhole, you will hear ill of yourself as well as of your neighbor).

"If I mistake not. . . your conversation refers to me."—"Very likely it does," replied the boatswain. "Listeners hear no good of themselves."

MARRYAT, Mr. Midshipman Easy. Ch. 17. (1836)

They say that listeners never hear any good of themselves.

DICKENS, Our Mutual Friend. Bk. ii, ch. 4. (1865)

8 To listen well is a second inheritance. (Bene audire alterum patrimonium est.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 96. (c. 43 B. C.)

Listens like a three years' child.

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Ancyent Marinere. Pt. i. (1798)

Who listens once will listen twice.

LORD BYRON, Mazeppa. St. 6. (1817)

In short, there never was a better hearer.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xiv, st. 37. (1824)

Give us grace to listen well.

JOHN KEBLE, The Christian Year: Palm Sunday. (1827)

It takes a great man to make a good listener.

SIR ARTHUR HELPS, Brevia. (c. 1870)

A good listener is not only popular everywhere, but after a while he knows something.

WILSON MIZNER, Epigram. (c. 1925)

LITERATURE

9 Literature is landscape on the desk, and a landscape is literature on the earth.

CHANG CH'AO, Yumengying. (c. 1650)

Literature is "The expression of a nation's mind in writing."

W. E. CHANNING, Remarks on American Literature. (1830)

Literature is the Thought of thinking Souls.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Essays: Memoirs of the Life of Scott. (a. 1857)

Literature in many of its branches is no other than the shadow of good talk.

R. L. STEVENSON, Memories and Portraits: Talk and Talkers. (1882)

10 Literature of a specially civilized nature, i. e. polite literature. (Literae politioris humanitatis.)

CICERO, De Oratore. Bk. ii, ch. 2, sec. 28. (55 B. C.) Usually quoted, "Literae humaniores."

Literature, like a gypsy, to be picturesque, should be a little ragged.

DOUGLAS JERROLD, Literary Men. (c. 1850)

11 One of the evils of our literature is that our learned men are without wit, and our witty men without learning. (Un des maux de notre littérature, c'est que nos savants ont peu d'esprit, et que nos hommes d'esprit ne sont pas savants.)

JOSEPH JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 258. (1810)

National literature begins with fables and ends with novels. (La littérature des peuples commence par les fables et finit par les romans.)

JOSEPH JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 383.

12 The study of literature is a necessity for boys and the delight of age, the sweet companion of our privacy, and the only branch of study which has more solid substance than display.

(Necessaria pueris, iucunda senibus, dulcis secretorum comes.)

QUINTILIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae. Bk. i, ch. 4, sec. 5. (c. A. D. 80)

<sup>1</sup> Literature was formerly an art and finance a trade: to-day it is the reverse.

JOSEPH ROUX, Méditations of a Parish Priest. Pt. i, No. 65. (c. 1870)

Literature flourishes best when it is half a trade and half an art.

DEAN W. R. INGE, The Victorian Age. (1922)

<sup>2</sup> I determined that literature should be my staff, but not my crutch, and that the profits of my literary labour . . . should not . . . become necessary to my ordinary expenses.

WALTER SCOTT, The Lay of the Last Minstrel: Introduction. (1830)

Literature is a very bad crutch, but a very good walking-stick.

CHARLES LAMB, Letter to Bernard Barton. (c. 1834)

I found that literature was a good staff but a bad crutch.

JOHN WILSON, Tales of the Borders, i, 199. (1835)

<sup>3</sup> Literature that has no power to heal. (Nihil sanitatibus litteris.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lix, sec. 15. (A. D. 64) Sometimes rendered "unhealthy literature."

Decayed literature makes the richest of all soils. H. D. THOREAU, Early Spring in Massachusetts, 16 March, 1852. After a day in the Cambridge library.

LITTLE

See also Great and Small; Trifles

<sup>4</sup> The investigation of everything should begin with its smallest parts. (ἐπεὶ δ' ἐν τοῖς ἐλαχίστοις πρῶτον ἕκαστον ζητητέον.)

ARISTOTLE, Politics. Bk. i, ch. 2, sec. 1. (c. 330 B. C.)

<sup>5</sup> A litell stane, as men sayen,
May ger weltir ane mekill wane.

JOHN BARBOUR, The Bruce. Bk. xi, l. 24. (1375)
A little stone overturns a great cart. A mouse will put the finishing touch to a castle wall.

HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 352. (1869)
From a little spark a great conflagration is often produced. (De parva scintilla magnum saepe excitatur incendium.)

HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 78. The shorter proverbial form is, "Ex scintilla incendium" (From a spark a fire).

A single spark can burn the whole quarter.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs, p. 78. (1817)

There are many English variants, "A small spark may make a great fire," "A little spark may raise an awful blaze," and so on. The French say, "Petit étincelle luit en ténèbres" (A little spark shines in the dark).

Little knocks rive great blocks.

ROBERT FORBY, The Vocabulary of East Anglia,

p. 430. (1814) The French say, "Les petits ruisseaux font les grandes rivières" (Little streams make big rivers), or "En petit champ croit bien bon blé" (In a little field may grow very good wheat); the West Africans, "Strand added to strand will bind a leopard"; the Hindus, "Many straws may bind an elephant."

Two Little Things, a Match and a Mouse,
Kindled the Fire that burned the Big House

GUITERMAN, A Poet's Proverbs, p. 84. (1924)

LITTLE STROKES FELL GREAT OAKS, see under OAK.

TALL OAKS FROM LITTLE ACORNS GROW, see under GREAT AND SMALL.

<sup>6</sup> Always the gods give small things to the small. (αἰεὶ τοῖς μικροῖς μικὰ δίδοσι θεοί.)

CALLIMACHUS, Fragments. Frag. 47, Loeb (c. 250 B. C.)

Little things affect little minds. (Parva leves capiunt animos.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. i, l. 159. (c. 1 B. C.)

DISRAELI, Sybil. Bk. iii, ch. 2. (1845)

Little things catch little minds.

LYLY, Sapho and Phao. Act ii, sc. 4. (1584)

Small things make base men proud.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, iv, 1, 106. (1590)

Little things are great to little man.

GOLDSMITH, The Traveller, l. 42. (1764) WILLIAM HONE, Table-Book. Col. 219. (1827)

Little things please little minds.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Pictures, p. 81. (1880)

<sup>7</sup> The book seith: "a litel thorn may prikke a greet king fol sore; and an hound wol holde the wilde boor."

CHAUCER, Tale of Melibeus. Sec. 31. (c. 1387)

It is not larger than a button, yet it annoys me.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 699. (1817)

Small wounds, if many, may be mortal.

F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 221. (1902)

The buzz of a mosquito can drown out the ocean's roar.

HENRY MILLER, The Cosmological Eye, p. 313. (1940)

<sup>8</sup> To come from little good to stark naught.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 83. (1639)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 178. (1670)

<sup>9</sup> Great weights hang on small wires.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 109 (1639)
Cited by Ray and Fuller.

Great businesses turn on a little pin.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 722. (1640)

Great engines turn on small pivots.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 366. (1855)

The massive gates of Circumstance
Are turned upon the smallest hinge.

UNKNOWN, Trifles. See Harper's Weekly, 30 May, 1863.

<sup>10</sup> Of a little take a little, of a mickle, mickle.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Petit. (1611)

That common saying of your little children: Of a little, a little; of much, nothing.

JAMES MABBE, tr., Celestina, p. 212. (1631)

- <sup>1</sup>
A little bird is content with a little nest.
THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 115. (1633)
For a little Bird, a little Nest.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 244. (1732)
The Germans say, "Kleine Voeglein, kleine Nestlein" (Little bird, little nest), or "Wie der Vogel, so das Nest" (As the bird is, so is the nest), or "Wie der Vogel, so das Ey" (As the bird is, so is the egg).
- <sup>2</sup>
Practise yourself in little things. (ἀπὸ τῶν μικροτάτων.)
EPICETUS, Discourses. Bk. iv, ch. 1, sec. 111. (c. A. D. 100)
By the little, is known the much.
UNKNOWN, Scholehouse of Woman, l. 846. (1541)
To a great mind, nothing is little.
CONAN DOYLE, A Study in Scarlet. Pt. i, ch. 6. (1887)
It has long been an axiom of mine that the little things are infinitely the most important.
CONAN DOYLE, A Case of Identity. (1892)
Nothing is little.
F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 146. (1902)
- <sup>3</sup>
A little man is a whole man as well as a great man. Neither men nor their lives are measured by the ell.
JOHN FLORIO, tr., Montaigne. Bk. i, ch. 19. (1603) The Latin proverb is, "Tota in minimis existit natura" (All nature exists in the very smallest things).
God doth not measure men by inches. People of small stature may have stout hearts.
KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 116. (1721)
Men are not to be measured by Inches.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3390. (1732)
Five feet four . . . did not come up to her notion. . . . I should have told her that pluck makes the man, and not the inches.
READE, Jack of All Trades. Ch. 8. (1858)
- <sup>4</sup>
A mere bag of shells, as my students say.
LESLIE FORD, Death Stops at a Tourist Camp, p. 111. (1936) A once-popular play on "bagatelle." The French say, "Vive la bagatelle" (Long live trifling).
- <sup>5</sup>
A Little of Everything, is Nothing in the Main.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 247. (1732)
- <sup>6</sup>
Many little leaks may sink a ship.
THOMAS FULLER, Holy State. Bk. i, ch. 8. (1642)
A small Leak will sink a great Ship.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 407. (1732)
Beware of little Expences: a little leak will sink a great ship.
FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1745.
The Germans say, "Kleine Loechlein machen das Schiff voll Wasser" (A little hole fills the ship with water).
- <sup>7</sup>
To a philosopher no circumstance, however trifling, is too minute.
OLIVER GOLDSMITH, The Citizen of the World. No. 30. (1760)

- There is nothing, Sir, too little for so little a creature as man. It is by studying little things that we attain the great art of having as little misery and as much happiness as possible.
SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, July, 1763.
- <sup>8</sup>
A little and good fills the trencher.
HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 507. (1640)
That little which is good fills the trencher.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 16. (1670)
Little things are good.
TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 215. (1666)
The French say, "Peu et bien," and there is a Greek proverb, "There is grace in small things." The Scots say, "Good gear goes in sma' book [bulk]," the English, "Good things are wrapped in small parcels."
We're just of a size; little and good, like a Welshman's cow.
KINGSLEY, Alton Locke. Ch. 27. (1850)
- <sup>9</sup>
Of a little thing, a little displeaseth.
HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 815. (1640)
That which sufficeth is not little.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 875.
- <sup>10</sup>
Little you are; for Womans sake be proud;
For my sake next, (though little) be not loud.
ROBERT HERRICK, Little and Loud. (1648)
- <sup>11</sup>
Where nothyng is, a little thyng dooth ease.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)
- <sup>12</sup>
Little things become a little man. (Parvum parva decent.)
HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 7. l. 44. (20 B. C.)
A narrow toga befits a sensible client. (Arta decet sanum comitem toga.)
HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 18. l. 30.
To a little pedlar a little sack. (A petit mercier petit panier.)
RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Mercier. (1611)
Cited by Ray and Fuller.
A little Saint best fits a little Shrine,
A little Prop best fits a little Vine,
As my small Cruse best fits my little Wine.
ROBERT HERRICK, A Ternarie of Littles. (1648)
The French say, "De petit enfant petit deuil" (For a little child a little mourning).
A little Barrel can give but little Meal.
A little Ship needs but a little Sail.
A little Stream will drive a light Mill.
A little String will tie up a little Bird.
A little Wood will heat a little Oven.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. Nos. 243-54 (1732)
Little packs become a little pedlar.
JOHN WOLCOT, The Middlesex Election. (1802)
- <sup>13</sup>
If you add only a little to a little and do this often, soon that little will become great. (εἰ γὰρ κεν καὶ σμικρὸν ἐπὶ σμικρῷ καταθεῖο | καὶ θαμὰ τοῦτ' ἔρδοις, τάχα κεν μέγα καὶ τὸ γένοιτο.)
HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 361. (c. 800 B. C.)
Quoted by PLATO, Cratylus, 428A; PLUTARCH, Moralia, 9E, 76C, 85E.

These little things come to a lot in a year. (τὰ μικρὰ ταῦτα πολλά ἐστί τοῦ ἐνιαυτοῦ.)

THEOPHRASTUS, Characters. No. 10, sec. 14. (319 B. C.)

By and bye from straws will grow a mighty heap. (Postmodo de stipula grandis acervus erit.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. 8, l. 90. (c. 13 B. C.)

Advising women to ask for little gifts from many persons. Marlowe renders it, "Within a while, great heaps grow of a tittle."

Out of many things a great heap will be formed. (De multis grandis acervus erit.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 424. (c. 1 B. C.)

Ovid is advising the lover to gather all his (Ovid's) precepts together, follow them, and he will surely be cured of his passion. From this line a proverb has been formed, "Adde parvum parvo, magnus acervus erit" (Add a little to a little and there will be a great heap).

Thus ofte, ase men seith of lutel wacseth muchel.

UNKNOWN, Ancren Riwe, 54. (c. 1200)

Little to little added much will grow:

The barn's store, grain by grain, is gathered so.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. viii, Maxim 60. (c. 1258)

Many smale maketh a grete.

ROBERT MANNING OF BRUNNE, Handlyng Synne, l. 2366. (1303)

The proverbe seith: that manye smale maken a greet.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Persones Tale, Sec. 21. (c. 1389)

Here some and there some, many small make a great.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

Many a little, by little and little maketh a mickle.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Works. Vol. ii, p. 311. (1593)

Oh, sir, many a small make a great.

JOHN MARSTON, Jacke Drum's Entertainment. Act i. (1600)

Many a little makes a mickle.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 328. (1605)

Many littles make a much. (Muchas pocos hacen un mucho.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1615)

Many a little, saith the proverb, make a mickle.

THOMAS FULLER, Church-History of Britain, vi, v. (1655) Cited by Ray, Franklin, Spurgeon, and many others.

Little and often fills the purse.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 112. (1678)

The Germans say, "Wenig und oft macht zuletzt viel" (Little and often make much at last); the Italians, "I guadagni mediocri empiono la borsa" (Moderate gains fill the purse).

Many littles mak a mickle. Ex granis fit acervus.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 254. (1721)

The correct Scottish form is, "Mony littles mak a muckle." The French say, "Un peu mis avec un peu, si la chose se répète, sera bientôt beaucoup."

1 A hundred pieces of wood go to make up one cart. (ἑκατὸν δὲ τε δοῦρα ἄμαρτυς.)

HEXION, Works and Days, l. 456. (c. 800 B. C.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, iv, iii, 88, gives the Latin as "Centum plaustrí trabes."

2 I pluck out the hairs from the horse's tail gradually one by one. (Caudaeque pilos ut equinae | paulatim vello et demo unum.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. i, l. 45. (c. 15 B. C.)

The lines passed into a proverb, "The hairs from a horse's tail must be plucked out one by one," which ERASMUS cites, Adagia, i, viii, 95, and Plutarch tells the story of its origin. Sertorius, a Roman general, finding that his soldiers were not pleased with his cautious mode of conducting a war, ordered two of his men, one young and lusty, the other old and feeble, to strip the tails of two horses. The younger man exhausted himself striving to pull the hairs out in a bunch; the older one, by pulling a few hairs at a time, soon had the tail stripped. "You see, my fellow soldiers," said Sertorius, "of how much more value deliberation is than strength."

A litill and a litill, the cat etith vp the bacon flicke.

RICHARD HILLS, Common-place Book, p. 130.

(a. 1500) HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

Link by link the armor is made. (Maille à maille est fait l'aubergeon.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. (1533) Quoted as a proverb.

The French also say, "Mot à mot on fait les gros livres" (Word by word big books are made). "Drop by drop fills the tub" is another variant.

By one and one spindles are made. (A vno a vno, si fanno li fusi.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 27. (1578)

Feather by feather birds build nests.

MIDDLETON AND ROWLEY, The Spanish Gipsie.

Act ii, sc. 1. (1623) The French say, "Petit à petit l'oiseau fait son nid." Another form is, "Feather by feather the goose is plucked." See under FEATHER.

3 Even by little things are great ends helped. (Parvis quoque rebus magna iuvant.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 1, l. 125. (20 B. C.)

From trifling causes great results arise. (Ex minimis initiis maxima.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, viii, 23. (1523)

Insects Have made the lion mad ere now.

BYRON, Marino Faliero. Act v, sc. 1. (1820)

4 For precept must be upon precept, precept upon precept; line upon line, line upon line; here a little, and there a little. (Modicum ibi, modicum ibi.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, xxviii, 10. (c. 725 B. C.)

Repeated in 13.

A little one shall become a thousand, and a small one a strong nation. (Minimus erit in mille, et parvulus in gentem fortissimam.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, lx, 22. (c. 725 B. C.)

5 Little by little one goes far. (Petit à petit on va bien loing.)

LE ROUX DE LINCY, Proverbes Français. Vol. ii, p. 370. Quoting a proverb of the 13th century.

Little by little goes far, but haste to a bad end.
(Poco a poco van lejos, y corriendo a mal lugar.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. i, p. 246. (1814)
A Spanish proverb. STEP BY STEP GOES FAR, see under STEP.

<sup>1</sup> Low trees haue their tops, smæl sparkes their heat, the Flye his splene, ye Ant hir gall.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber),
p. 316. (1580)

Habet musca suum splenum [the fly has its spleen]; and they must be little indeed that cannot do mischief.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies, iii, 41. (1662) See also under FLY.

No Viper so little, but hath its Venom.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3639. (1732)

<sup>2</sup> Every little helps, said the ant, adding its water to the sea in full midday. (Peu ayde, disçoit le formy, pissant en mer en plein midy.)

GABRIEL MEURIER, Trésor des Sentences. (1590)

Here—it's not much! but every little helps.

JOHN O'KEEFFE, Wild Oats. Act v, sc. 3. (1791)

That's a very old saying, that every little helps.
MARRYAT, Poor Jack. Ch. 13. (1840)

Every little helps, as the sow said when she snapped at a gnat.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk. Ch.
19. (1869) A Danish variant. Another is, "Every little helps," said Mr. Little, and took the six little Littles out to the woodpile."

Every little bit added to what you've got makes just a little bit more

W. A. AND L. M. DILLON. Title and refrain of popular song. (1907)

Every little bit helps, as the fella says.

RING LARDNER, The Golden Honeymoon. (1926)

Every little helps.

KAUFMAN AND RYSKIND, Of Thee I Sing Act
ii, sc. 1. (1931)

<sup>3</sup> Things which are trifling singly are helpful collectively (Quae non prosunt singula, multa iuvant.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 420. (c. 1 B. C.)

Ovid is advising the lover who wishes to get over his passion to keep all his mistress's little blemishes in mind. Quoted by RABELAIS,
Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 42.

<sup>4</sup> His overthrow heap'd happiness upon him;
For then, and not till then, he felt himself,
And found the blessedness of being little.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII, iv, 2, 64. (1612)

The low Stakes stand long.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4637. (1732)

<sup>5</sup> No bigger than an agate stone.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, i, 4, 55. (1592)

No bigger than a miller's thumb.

CHARLES COTTON, Burlesque upon Burlesque,
p. 163. (1675)

<sup>6</sup> Hereby I learned have, not to despise

What ever thing seemes small in common eyes.

EDMUND SPENSER, Visions of the Worlds Vanitie. St. 5. (1591)

<sup>7</sup> Vnto lyttle thynges is a certayne grace an-nexed.

RICHARD TAVERNER, Proverbs, fo. 50. (1539)

Little things are pretty. (χαῖρις βασιῶσιν ἀπηδεί.)

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 169. (1678)

Little things have their own charm. (Inest sua gratia parvis.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 176.

(1869) Henderson quotes also, "Willows are weak, yet they bind other wood," "Small rain lays great dust," "The greatest things are done by the help of small ones," "A lion may be beholden to a mouse." See under LION

<sup>8</sup> He's small potatoes and few in a hill.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches,
p. 498. (1940)

<sup>9</sup> A little with righteousness is better than much with unrighteousness.

Apocrypha: Tobit, xii, 8. (c. 200 B. C.)

A LITTLE WITH QUIET, see LIFE: LIVING ON LITTLE.

<sup>10</sup> It's the little things that smooths people's roads the most, down here below.

MARK TWAIN, Huckleberry Finn. Ch. 28. (1884)

Life is made up of little things.

VINCENT STUCKEY LEAN, Collectanea. Vol. iv,
p. 33. (1902)

<sup>11</sup> For who hath despised the day of small things? (Quis enim desepxit dies parvos?)

Old Testament: Zechariah, iv, 10. (c. 520 B. C.)

He that despiseth small things shall fall by little and little. (Qui spernit modica, paulatim decidet.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus),
xix, 1. (c. 190 B. C.)

These are small things, but it was by not despising those small things that your ancestors accomplished this very great thing. (Parva sunt haec; sed parva ista non contemnendo majores vestri maximam hanc rem fecerunt.)

LIVY, History. Bk. vi, sec. 41. (c. 10 B. C.)

Keep touch in small Things.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3120. (1732)

He that despiseth small things will perish by little and little.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Prudence.
(1841)

TOO LITTLE AND TOO LATE, see under LATE.

LIVER

<sup>12</sup> Thou hast no gall in thy liver. (χολήν γὰρ οὐκ ἔχεις ἐφ' ἥπατι.)

ARCHILOCHUS, Apothegm. (c. 650 B. C.) See

ATHENAUS, iii, 107F.

But I am pigeon-liver'd, and lack gall.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, ii, 2, 604. (1600)

Sure he is a pigeon, for he has no gall.

THOMAS DEKKER, The Honest Whore. Pt. i, act i, sc. 5. (1604)

It cannot be but I am pigeon-liver'd.

FRANK CASE, Do Not Disturb, p. 57. (1940)
The French say, "Avoir du sang de poulet; du sang de navet" (To have the blood of a chicken, or of a turnip).

1
I never Saw a man grown so yellow!

How's your liver?

LORD BYRON, Beppo. St. 92. (1818)

IS LIFE WORTH LIVING? IT DEPENDS UPON THE LIVER, see under LIFE.

2
Thinke ye me so whyte lyuerd (quote shee)
That I wyll be toung-tyed?

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)
How many cowards, . . .

Who, inward search'd, have livers white as milk.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, iii, 2, 83. (1597)

Milk-liver'd man

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, iv, 2, 50. (1605)

Milk-white in the liver, and soft in the head.

ARTEMUS WARD (CHARLES FARRAR BROWNE),
The Show is Confiscated. (1865)

LOAF

3
Set not your Loaf in till the Oven's hot.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4110. (1732)

4
There is a lad here, which hath five barley loaves, and two small fishes: but what are they among so many? . . . And Jesus took the loaves; and when he had given thanks, he distributed to the disciples, and the disciples to them that were set down; and likewise of the fishes as much as they would. (τέρε ἀπὸν κριθῶν καὶ δύο ὀψάρια.)

New Testament: John vi, 9-11. (c. A. D. 90) The Vulgate is, "Quinque panes ordeaceos. et duos pisces."

If it were not for the loaves and fishes, the trainee of Christ would bee lesse.

BISHOP JOSEPH HALL, A Recollection of Treasures, p. 954. (1614) Material benefits rather than spiritual blessings.

What pity 'tis, in this our goodly land, . . .

So ill divided are the loaves and fishes!

JOHN WOLCOT, Works (1795), ii, 59. (1789)

Their seducers have wished war . . . for the loaves and fishes which arise out of war expenses.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings, iv, 300. (1799)

Thou art one of those that follow the gospel for the loaves and for the fishes.

SCOTT, Old Mortality. Ch. 27. (1816)

"The loaves and fishes," once so high, Are gone.
LORD BYRON, Age of Bronze. Sec. 14. (1823)

They go to the church for the loaves, and then go over to the Baptist Chapel for the fishes.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Pictures, p. 122. (1880)

HALF A LOAF BETTER THAN NO BREAD, see under BREAD.

LOAFING

See also Indolence, Sloth

5
The more characteristic American hero in the earlier day, and the more beloved type at all times, was not the hustler but the whittler.

MARK SULLIVAN, Our Times. Vol. iii, p. 297. (1925)

6
The man who does not betake himself at once and desperately to sawing is called a loafer, though he may be knocking at the doors of heaven all the while.

H. D. THOREAU, Winter, 28 Dec., 1852.

7
I loafe and invite my soul,
I lean and loafe at my ease observing a spear of summer grass.

WALT WHITMAN, Song of Myself. Sec. 1. (1855)

I want to loaf and indict my soul, as Walt Whit-tier says.

O. HENRY, A Midsummer Masquerade. (1908)

Loaf and invite the soul.

HORACE GREGORY, Chorus for Survival. Pt. ii. (1935)

They will just loaf and invite their souls.

HELEN MCCLOY, The Deadly Truth, p. 7. (1941)

LOCK

8
For this prouerbe is euer newe
That stronge lockes maken trewe.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. v. (1390)

A bad Padlock invites a Picklock.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2. (1732)

9
Like the highlandman's gun, she wants stock, lock, and barrel, to put her into repair.

WALTER SCOTT, in LOCKHART, Life, v, 238.

(1817) Carlyle speaks of "The highlandman's pistol with its new lock, stock and barrel," and there is a similar idea in the description of "Wallenstein's Horse," in RICHARD DOYLE'S Brown, Jones, and Robinson (c. 1850): "The head, neck, legs, and part of the body have been repaired. All the rest is the real horse."

When a woman is a tramp there is nothing like her; but when she goes to the bad, she goes altogether, "stock, lock and barrel."

WHYTE-MELVILLE, Digby Grand. Ch. 24. (1853)

I sold out to you "lock, stock, and barrel."

O. HENRY, A Blackjack Bargainer. (1910)

I'd sooner be ruined, lock, stock, and barrel, than give my daughter to that man.

H. A. VACHELL, Quinney's. Bk. ii, ch. 23. (1914)

Body, Boots, and Britches.

HAROLD THOMPSON, title of book. (1939) Meaning "the whole thing."

10
He hire bi-lukth myd keye and loke.

UNKNOWN, The Owl and the Nightingale, l. 1557. (a. 1250)

Under lock and under keie Hath all the Tresor.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. v, l. 6621. (c. 1390)

Some are as sure as lock and key.

CLEMENT ROBINSON, A Handfull of Pleasant Delities (Arber), p. 42. (1584)

Keep close your women under lock and key.

DRYDEN, tr., Juvenal. Sat. vi, l. 464. (1693)

The great thing is to have me under lock and key.

R. L. STEVENSON, St. Ives. Ch. 12. (1894)

LOGIC

1

Logic is nothing more than a knowledge of words.

CHARLES LAMB, Letter to Thomas Manning, 1801.

Logic is logic. That's all I say.

O. W. HOLMES, The One-Hoss Shay. (1858)

Logic is neither a science nor an art, but a dodge.

BENJAMIN JOWETT (attr.), Remark. (c. 1870)

Logic is only the art of going wrong with confidence.

J. W. KRUTCH, The Modern Temper, p. 228. (1929)

2

The adamantine logic of dreamland.

J. R. LOWELL, Among My Books: Coleridge. (1870)

3

That wyse Harpocrates

Had your mouths stopped . . .

Whan ye logyke chopped.

JOHN SKELTON, A Replycacion, l. 118. (c. 1525)

To chop logic, to bandy logic, to argue.

She chopth logyke, to put me to my clargy.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1546)

You charge me . . . that I presume to chop logike with you . . . by answering your snappish Quid with a knappish Quo.

RICHARD STANYHURST, Description of Irelande, in HOLINSHED, vi, 49. (1577)

Harke how he chops Logicke with his Mother.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Knight of the Burning Pestle. Act i. (1611)

Bublings up of carnal reason against divine dispensations . . . which our English Proverb calls chopping Logick with God.

JOHN ARROWSMITH, Armilla Catechetica, p. 349. (1659)

Send him to chop logick in an University.

APHRA BEHN, City Heiress. Act i, sc. 1. (1682)

LONDON

4

The centre of a thousand trades.

WILLIAM COWPER, Hope, l. 246. (1781)

London is a roost for every bird.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Lothair. Ch. 11. (1870)

London is the clearing-house of the world.

JOSEPH CHAMBERLAIN, Speech, Guildhall, London, 19 Jan., 1904.

5

London, thou art of townes a per se.

WILLIAM DUNBAR, London, l. 1. (c. 1500)

London, thou art the flower of cities all!

Gemme of all joy, jasper of jocundite.

WILLIAM DUNBAR, London, l. 16.

Mery London, my most kyndly nurse,

That to me gave this life's first native source.

EDMUND SPENSER, Prothalamion, l. 128. (1595)

Oh, London is a fine town,

A very famous city,

Where all the streets are paved with gold,

And all the maidens pretty.

GEORGE COLMAN, JR., The Heir at Law. Act ii. (1797)

6

The Old Lady in Threadneedle Street in Danger.

JAMES GILLRAY, Title of caricature in Punch, 22 May, 1797, referring to the Bank of England, situated in Threadneedle Street, London, and which had suspended payments of cash to its depositors 26 Feb., 1797.

I trust you have not come about any fresh wrongs against the Old Lady of Threadneedle Street.

JAMES PAYN, Lost Sir Massingberd. Ch. 27. (1864)

A silver curl-paper that I myself took off the shining locks of the ever-beautiful old lady of Threadneedle Street.

DICKENS, Dr. Marigold. (1865) Referring to a banknote.

7

London has a great belly but no palate.

THOMAS HOBBS, Behemoth, p. 169. (1679)

The fire of London [1666] was a punishment for gluttony. For Ironmonger-lane was red-fire hot, Milk-street boiled over; it began in Pudding-lane, and ended at Pye-corner.

FRANCIS GROSE, Provincial Glossary, p. 206. (1787)

8

The city of London, though handsomer than Paris, is not so handsome as Philadelphia.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to John Page, 1786.

The finest thing in London is the Bobby;

Benignant information is his hobby.

GUTTERMAN, Lyric Baedeker: London. (1923)

9

When a man is tired of London he is tired of life; for there is in London all that life can afford.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 20 Sept., 1777.

The chief advantage of London is, that a man is always so near his burrow.

HUGO MEYNELL, Remark. See BOSWELL, Johnson, 1 April, 1779.

10

The noble spirit of the metropolis is the life-blood of the state, collected at the heart.

JUNIUS, Letters. No. 37. (1769)

11

London Lyckpeny.

JOHN LYDGATE, attr. Title. (c. 1440)

London lickpenny call ye it,—t'as lick'd me with a witness.

JOHN DAY, The Blind-Beggar of Bednal-Green. Act ii, sc. 2. (1600)

Do as you please, but you will find the old proverb true, London Lickpenny.

Harleian Miscellany (1747), i, 484. (1641)

"London Lick-penny." The countryman coming up hither, by his own experience, will easily expound the meaning thereof.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies: London, ii, 342.

1 We can be nowhere private except in the midst of London.

CHARLES LAMB, Letter to Thomas Manning, 1800.

2 God geue you good euen, which is the way to Poclinton, a pokeful of plumes.

BRIAN MELBANCKE, Philotimus, sig. 63. (1583)

Which way to London? a poke full of plumes.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 4. (1633)

CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 19. (1639)

As they say in English, How many miles to London, answer is made impertinently, a poke full of plums.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 100. (1666)

3 A Cockney . . . , applied only to one borne within the sound of Bow-bell, that is, within the City of London.

JOHN MINSHEU, Ductor in Linguas: Cockney. (1617)

"He was born within the sound of Bow-bell." This is perhaps the periphrasis of a Londoner at large. . . . It is called Bow-bell, because hanging in the steeple of Bow-church; and Bow-church because built upon bows or arches.

THOMAS FULLER, History of the Worthies of England: London (1840), ii, 344. (1662)

You were born within the sound of Bow bell, and don't care to stir so far from London.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

Born within the sound of Bow-bell, he rarely ventured out of it.

FRANCIS GROSE, The Olio, p. 24. (1793)

Any one born within the sound of Bow Bells is a "cockney," i.e. a Londoner pure and simple.

MUIRHEAD, Blue Guide to London, p. 351. (1918)

Both of us born within the sound of Bow Bells, as they say.

M. V. HEBERDEN, The Lobster Pick Murder, p. 30. (1941)

4 Londoner like, ask as much more as you will take.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 349. (1678)

5 When we had a king, and a chancellor, and a parliament—men o' our ain, we could aye peeble them wi' stanes when they werena gude bairns—But naebod's nails can reach the length o' Lunnon.

SCOTT, The Heart of Midlothian. Ch. 4. (1818)

Naebod's nails can reach the length of Lunnon. . . . This saying arose after the Union of the English and Scottish Parliaments.

A. CHEVIOT, Proverbs of Scotland, p. 258. (1896)

6 I hope to see London once ere I die.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, v, 3, 64. (1598)

7 There is a proverb, part of which is this, They say that Lincoln was and London is.

JOHN TAYLOR, THE WATER-POET, Merry-Wherry-Ferry-Voyage. (1622)

8 The worst place I know in the world for a good woman to grow better in.

JOHN VANBRUGH, A Journey to London. Act i, sc. 2. (a. 1726)

Hell is a city much like London.

SHELLEY, Peter Bell the Third. Pt. iii, l. 1. (1819)

What is to be the fate of that great wen [London] of all? The monster, called . . . "the metropolis of the empire?"

WILLIAM COBBETT, Rural Rides. (1821)

A stony-hearted step-mother.

THOMAS DE QUINCY, Confessions of an English Opium Eater. Pt. i. (1822) Referring to Oxford Street.

London, the great cesspool into which all the loungers of the Empire are irresistibly drained.

CONAN DOYLE, A Study in Scarlet. Ch. 1. (1887)

9 I proceeded to London, . . . Months passed away, and I was still a wanderer upon the streets of the modern Babylon.

WILSON, Tales of the Borders, i, 355. (1835)

London is a modern Babylon.

DISRAELI, Tancred. Bk. v, sc. 5. (1847)

London is the epitome of our times, and the Rome of today.

R. W. EMERSON, English Traits. Ch. 18. (1856)

London; a nation, not a city.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Lothair. Ch. 27. (1870)

II—London: London Bridge

10 London Bridge was made for wise men to go over, and fools to go under.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 249. (1639) A reference to the danger incurred in "shoot-ing" the arches of the old bridge, which had resulted in many drownings, among them that of Anne Killigrew (1685), to whom Dryden wrote a famous ode.

11 London bridge is broken down,

Dance o'er my lady lee.

J. O. HALLIWELL, Nursery Rhymes of England, p. 110.

12 If London Bridge had fewer eyes it would see better.

W. C. HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 246. (1869)

A reference to the numerous narrow openings for vessels.

13 When we danced The Building of London Bridge upon woolpacks.

UNKNOWN, London Chaunticleers, St. 8. (1659)

In HAZLITT, Old English Poetry, vi, 341.

There is a saying also that London-Bridge was built upon wool-packs.

JOHN AUBREY, The Natural History of Wiltshire, p. 98. (c. 1685)

The very common [saying] "that London Bridge was built upon wool-sacks," that is, the expense of the fabric . . . about the end of the 12th century, was defrayed by an impost . . . upon the wool brought to the metropolis.

JOHN BRADY, Clavis Calendaria, i, 194. (1812)

LONELINESS

See also Alone, Solitude

- <sup>1</sup> The surest sign of age is loneliness.
A. B. ALCOTT, Tablets. Ch. 1. (1868)
- <sup>2</sup> Loneliness is the first thing which God's eye nam'd not good.
JOHN MILTON, Tetrachordon. (1645)
Everything begins from loneliness.
JOHN ERSKINE, Adam and Eve. Ch. 1. (1927)
- <sup>3</sup> A poor lone woman.
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, ii, 1, 35. (1598)
I am a lone lorn creetur and everythink goes contrairy with me.
DICKENS, David Copperfield. Ch. 3. (1849)
We trusted an old lone creature.
OUIDA (LOUISE DE LA RAMÉE), Maremma, i, 248. (1882)
- <sup>4</sup> Why should I feel lonely? is not our planet in the Milky Way?
H. D. THOREAU, Walden: Solitude. (1854)
- <sup>5</sup> I wandered lonely as a cloud.
WORDSWORTH, I Wandered Lonely as a Cloud. (1804)
As lonely as Sunday.
MARK TWAIN, Connecticut Yankee, p. 10. (1889)
I was lonesomer than Crusoe's goat.
O. HENRY, The Hiding of Black Bill. (1909)
Lonely as a lighthouse.
RAYMOND CHANDLER, Farewell, My Lovely, p. 137. (1940)

LONG

- <sup>6</sup> To say longly or schorte, all that armes bare.
ROBERT MANNING OF BRUNNE, tr., Langtoft's Chronicle, p. 222. (c. 1330) "The short and the long" was more commonly used by early writers than the form which is usual now.
Howsoever it be, this is the short and the long.
RICHARD EDWARDS, Damon and Pithias. (1571)
In HAZLITT, Old Plays, iv, 47.
This is the short and the long, and the somme of all.
THOMAS NASHE, Death of Martin Mar-Prelate. (1589) Works (Grosart), i, 185
That is the breff and the long.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, iii, 2, 126. (1599)
There's the short and the long.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, ii, 1, 137. (1601)
The long and the short of a business; Summa rei.
WILLIAM ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis, p. 837. (1681)
This is the long and the short of it.
WILLIAM WALKER, Idiomatologia Anglo-Latina, p. 412. (1690)
That is, sir, the long and the short of the matter.
ADDISON, The Guardian. No. 108. (1713)
The long and the short of it.
DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 27. (1850)

SMEDLEY, Frank Fairlegh. Ch. 47. (1850)
TWAIN, Huckleberry Finn. Ch. 37. (1884)
SHAW, Man and Superman. Act iv. (1903)
Fanny's First Play. Act i. (1911) TAYLOR, Deadly Sunshade, p. 106. (1941) etc., etc.

The long and the short of it. The substance, the essence, the most important part or aspect of a thing. Applied jocularly to a tall and short person walking side by side.

PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés. (1941)

<sup>7</sup> Long and small, like a cat's elbow. A disparaging reflection upon slender people.

KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 238. (1921)

Long and slender, like a Cat's Elbow.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3268. (1732)

LOOK

<sup>8</sup> A loathsome mind is sometimes cloaked by a serene look. (Nonnumquam vultu tegitur mens taetra sereno.)

CATO (?), Collectio Monostichorum, l. 62. (c. 175 B. C.) See Minor Latin Poets, Loeb, p. 628.

<sup>9</sup> He lookes not, that still lookes not to himselfe.

RANDIE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Garder. (1611)

He looks not well to himself that looks not ever

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

<sup>10</sup> A man may be known by his look. (Ex visu cognoscitur vir.)

Aprocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, xix, 29. (c. 150 B. C.) See also under APPEARANCE.

<sup>11</sup> An honest good Look covereth many Faults.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 609. (1732)

Good looks are good cheap.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 34. (1639) See also under APPEARANCE.

<sup>12</sup> You must look where it is not, as well as where it is.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5964. (1732)

<sup>13</sup> Looks won't do ter split rails wid.

JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS, Uncle Remus: Plantation Proverbs. (1880)

<sup>14</sup> Some folks look up and ithers look down.

HENDERSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 137. (1832)

<sup>15</sup> A pitiful look asks enough.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 791. (1640)

<sup>16</sup> Then wold ye looke ouer me, with stomake swolne,

Like as the diuel lookt ouer Lincolne.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)

He looks as the devil over Lincoln.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England: Lincolnshire. (1662) "Lincoln Minster is one of the stateliest structures in Christendom. . . . The devil is supposed to have overlooked the church . . . with a torve and tetric [grim and forbidding] countenance, as maligning man's costly devotion." "Some fetch the original of this proverb from a stone picture of the devil, which doth (or lately did) over look Lincoln College. . . . Beholders have since applied those ugly looks to envious persons."—Ibid., Oxon.

She looked at me as the devil looked over Lincoln.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

<sup>1</sup> He knows not how to look at once before and after. (οὐδὲ τι οἶδε νοῆσαι ἄμα πρόσω καὶ ὀπίσω.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. i, l. 343. (c. 850 B.C.) The phrase is repeated iii, 109; xviii, 250, and elsewhere. An English form is, "Look before you, or you'll have to look behind you."

Sure, he that made us with such large discourse,
Looking before and after, gave us not
That capability and god-like reason
To fust in us unused.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iv, 4, 36. (1600)

He that looks not before finds himself behind.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

Cited by Ray and Bailey.

Shakespeare says, we are creatures that look before and after: the more surprising that we do not look round a little, and see what is passing under our very eyes.

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. i, ch. 1. (1833)

<sup>2</sup> Look behind thee and consider what thou wast.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 21. (1659)

<sup>3</sup> It is not right for one who has grasped the plough to look behind him. (Non expedit adprehensio aratro respicere post tergum.)

St. JEROME (HIERONYMUS), Epistles. Epis. xxii. (A. D. 384)

<sup>4</sup> And so imitate the waterman, which looketh one way, and roweth another.

BRIAN MELBANCKE, Philotimus, sig. P1. (1583)

He goes not the way he looks.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Characters: A Waterman. (1613)

Teach others to fast, and play the gluttons themselves; like watermen, that row one way and look another.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy: Democritus to the Reader. (1621)

She has but us'd you As watermen use their fares, for she look'd one way And row'd another.

THOMAS DEKKER, The Wonder of a Kingdome. Act v, sc. 2. (1636)

The clergy looking at London, but rowing to Rome.

THOMAS FULLER, Church-History of Britain. Bk. iii, ch. 4. (1655)

To row one way and look another.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 177. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5221. (1732)

My great-grandfather was a waterman, looking one way and rowing another; and I got most of my estate by the same occupation.

JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. i, p. 156. (1678) By-ends speaking.

Like rowers, we look one way—move another.

THOMAS D'URFEY, The Comical History of Don Quixote. Pt. ii, act iii, sc. 1. (1694)

One way they look, and another way they steer.
EDWARD YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. i, l. 73. (1728)

The opposers . . . bore a false face, looking one way and rowing another.

ROGER NORTH, Examen: Preface. (1740)

Bunsen . . . could not get inside the English mind. He did not know that some people go furthest and go fastest when they look one way and row the other.

J. A. FROUDE, Short Studies in Great Subjects, i, 155. (a. 1877)

<sup>5</sup> Why try to scare me with a look, and fondle me with praises? (Quid med obtutu terres, mulces laudibus?)

PACUVIUS. Frag. 27, Loeb. (c. 160 B.C.)

Don't with a look undo your words. (Nec vultu destrue dicta tuo.)

OVID, Artis Amatoria. Bk. ii, l. 312. (c. 1 B.C.)

<sup>6</sup> Look not too high lest a chip fall in your eye.

CLEMENT ROBINSON, A Handfull of Pleasant Delites, p. 39. (1584) See under AMBITION.

Look high, and fall low.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3272. (1732)

<sup>7</sup> They either look through the fingers, or else give thee a flap with a fox-tail, for a little money.

WILLIAM TINDALE, Exposition of St. Matthew, 127. (1532)

The people of the londe loke thorowe the fyngers upon that man which hath geuen his sede vnto Moloch.

MILES COVERDALE, tr., Bible: Leviticus, xx, 4. (1535) The King James Version has "hide their eyes."

If the kynge . . . shoulde loke through his fingers, and wyneke at it.

HUGH LATIMER, Fourth Sermon before Edward VI (Arber), p. 105. (1549)

The magistrates wincke at it, or els, as looking thorowe their fingers, they see it, and will not see it.

PHILIP STUBBES, The Anatomie of Abuses, p. 100. (1583)

Enough to make a modest woman look through her fingers.

JOHN WILSON, Belphegor. Act iii, sc. 1. (1691)

<sup>8</sup> Squyntied he was, and looked nyne wayes.

NICOLAS UDALL, tr., Erasmus' Apophthegms, p. 203. (1542)

Passion flies Squinting, and, as we say, Nine wayes at Thrice.

GEORGE DANIEL, Trinarchodia, p. 326. (1649)

Which commonly is squint-ey'd, and looks nine ways at once.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Remains, ii, 213. (a. 1680)

He looks ten ways at once.

JOHN CROWNE, City Politiques. Act i, sc. 1. (1688)

I'll make her look nine ways at once before I have done with her.

THOMAS D'URFEY, The Comical History of Don Quixote. Pt. iii, act iii, sc. 2. (1696)

He was born in the middle of the week, and looked baath ways for Sunday. A burlesque expression for a person who squints.

CARR, The Dialect of Craven, ii, 180. (1828)
He has . . . a bad squint, so that . . . he seemed to be looking two ways for Sunday.

ALEXANDER MACDONALD, Love, Law and Theology. Ch. 21. (1869)

<sup>1</sup> She looked her full forty-three years.

CHARLOTTE M. YONGE, Cameos. Ser. iv, ch. 17, p. 187. (1879)

He assuredly did not look his age.

LEONARD MERRICK, Violet Moses. Pt. ii, ch. 12, p. 134. (1891)

II—Looks: Varieties

<sup>2</sup> I looked awful, like somethin' the cat dragged in.

LOUIS ADAMIC, Girl on the Road. (1937)

Rosalie realized that for the family she was something the cat brought in.

RAYMOND POSTGATE, Verdict of Twelve, p. 112. (1940)

You look like something the cat dragged in.

ZEIDA POPKIN, No Crime for a Lady, p. 48. (1942) SALE, Passing Strange, p. 50. (1942)

<sup>3</sup> A Gorgon's look. (Γοργὸν βλέπειν.)

ÆLIAN, Historical Miscellanies. Bk. ii, ch. 44. (c. A. D. 200) It was the Gorgon's look which turned men to stone, and the popular belief in this legend led to the wide use of a Gorgon's head as a protective figure on walls and armor. Homer mentions this use of it.

Like a griffon looked he aboute.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales, The Knights Tale, l. 1275. (c. 1386)

One of those looks which are supposed to make your spine feel like a run in a stocking.

RAYMOND CHANDLER, Farewell, My Lovely, p. 100. (1940)

<sup>4</sup> He looked very blue upon it, valde perturbatus fuit.

ROBERT AINSWORTH, Latin Dictionary: Blue. (1783)

Even the knowing ones . . . look very pale and blue.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Correspondence With His Sister, p. 15. (1840)

<sup>5</sup> Looking daggers. (πυρρίχην βλέπων.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Birds, l. 1169. (414 B. C.)
See under DAGGER.

To look scourges. (σκούτη βλέπειν.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Wasps, l. 643. (422 B. C.)
The old lady looked carving knives at the delinquent.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 6. (1837)

<sup>6</sup> To look like mustard. (ὀρίγανον βλέπειν.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Frogs, l. 604. (405 B. C.) A sour or crabbed look, origanos being an acrid herb, with a piercing scent and biting taste.

Looking like vinegar. (βλέπων ὑπότρυμμα.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Ecclesiazusae, l. 291. (c.

393 B. C.) The Greek word is not vinegar, but the name of a dish of many ingredients, the taste of which was sharp and sour. FAVORINUS has συμαλαν βλέπειν (To look like an emetic, or like one about to vomit).

<sup>7</sup> The outlandish prince looks like a tooth-drawer.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Philaster. Act i, sc. 1. (1608)

He looks like a tooth-drawer; i. e., very thin and meager.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 83. (1678)

<sup>8</sup> There was not one living soul that vouchsaf'd him a kind look.

SIR JOHN CHARDIN, The Coronation of Solomon the Third. Ch. 3. (1686)

<sup>9</sup> Thou lokest as thou woldest finde an hare, For ever up-on the ground I see thee stare.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue to Sir Thopas, l. 6. (c. 1386)

<sup>10</sup> To look like the picture of ill luck.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 119. (1639)
RAY, English Proverbs, p. 206. (1670)

<sup>11</sup> Our English prouerbe: To looke like a Iewe (whereby is meant sometimes a weather beaten warp-faced fellow).

THOMAS CORYAT, Crudities, i, 372. (1611)

<sup>12</sup> He looks as big, as if he had eaten Bull-Beef.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 1970. (1732)

<sup>13</sup> Looking like a chicken pulled through a wire fence backwards.

MATTHEW HEAD, Smell of Money, p. 234. (1943)

<sup>14</sup> Ann Beth looked like the wrath of God.

MATTHEW HEAD, The Smell of Money, p. 113.
She looks like the wrath of God.

ANNE NASH, Said with Flowers, p. 22. (1943)

<sup>15</sup> He looks as if he had sold all and took nothing for it.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 13. (1659)

<sup>16</sup> The shepherd stooode as though hee had neither wonne nor lost.

THOMAS LODGE, Rosalynde, p. 120. (1590)

He looks as if he had neither won nor lost.

ROBERT GREENE, Frier Bacon. Sc. 13. (1594)

He looks as if he had neither won nor lost. He stands as if he were mop't, in a brown study.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 257. (1678)

What's the matter? You look as if you had neither won nor lost.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

<sup>17</sup> Look like the innocent flower, but be the serpent under it.

MARGARET MILLAR, The Weak-Eyed Bat, p. 170. (1942)

<sup>18</sup> He looks like a dog under a door.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 70. (1678)

To look like a dog that has lost his tail.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 206. (1678)

<sup>1</sup> To look as though he had suck't his dam through a hurdle.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 170. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1971. (1732)

She look't on me as a cow on a bastard calf.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 353. (1678)

To look like a cow at a bastard calf. i. e. to look coldly, suspiciously at one.

BURNE, Shropshire Folk-lore, p. 594. (1883)

<sup>2</sup> He may look as black as midnight at Martinmas.

WALTER SCOTT, Waverley. Ch. 48. (1814)

My brother-in-law . . . looked rather black upon me.

JANE AUSTEN, Mansfield Park. Bk.i, ch.6. (1814)

The crew will no longer regard my child with black looks.

EBENEZER ELLIOTT, Corn-Law Rhymes, 119. (1840)

Black as thunder looked King Padella.

THACKERAY, Rose and Ring. Ch. 15. (1855)

<sup>3</sup> He looks like a wooden image. (Hsiang yi ko mu ou jên.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1053. (1875)

<sup>4</sup> Piteous they will look, like drowned mice.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry VI, i, 2, 12. (1591)

To look like a drowned mouse.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 286. (1678)

<sup>5</sup> The Captain . . . ordered the man to look sharp.

RICHARD STEELE, The Spectator. No.132.(1711)

It is time for us then to look sharp, to observe every period.

RICHARD BENTLEY, Remarks on Freethinking.

Ch. 2. (1713)

I must, therefore, look sharp, and well consider every step I take.

BISHOP GEORGE BERKELEY, Alciphron. Ch. 6, sec. 1. (1732)

Kit . . . ordered . . . him to bring three dozen oysters, and to look sharp about it.

DICKENS, Old Curiosity Shop. Ch. 39. (1840)

<sup>6</sup> I'll soon be buying you a coat that will make that one look like thirty cents.

ROSEMARY TAYLOR, Chicken Every Sunday, p. 51. (1943)

<sup>7</sup> They . . . looked unutterable things.

THOMSON, Seasons: Summer, l. 1188. (1727)

<sup>8</sup> She looks like an old coach newly painted.

WYCHERLEY, The Plain-Dealer. Act ii.(c. 1674)

<sup>9</sup> Proud looks lose hearts, but courteous words win them.

UNKNOWN, The Country-mans New Commonwealth, p. 18. (1647)

A proud Look makes foul Work in a fine Face.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 367. (1732)

III—Look Before You Leap

10

You should not have gone down until you had considered how you were to get out. (οὐ πρότερον ἂν κατέβης, πρὶν ἢ τὴν ἀνοδὸν σκέψασθαι.)

AESOP, Fables: The Fox and the Goat (c. 570 B. C.)

The fox, unable to get out of the well, persuaded the goat to leap in also, and then, having climbed out over the goat's shoulders, left it to its fate, with the remark quoted above.

11

First loke and aftirward lepe;

Avyse the wellle, or thow speke.

FÖRSTER, ed., MS. Douce, 52. (c. 1350)

Look ere thou leap; whose literal sense is, "Do nothing suddenly or without advisement."

WILLIAM TINDALE, The Obedience of Christen Man, p. 304. (1528)

Ye may learne good cheape,

In wedding and al thing, to looke or ye leape.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 2. (1546)

Looke therefore ere thou leape.

ROGER BIESTON, The Bayle and Snare of Fortune, sig. B ij. (c. 1550)

Looke ere thou leape, see ere thou go,

It may be for thy profite so.

THOMAS TUSSER, Fiue Hundreth Pointes of Good Husbandrie: The Authour's Dialogue. Ch. 56. (1573)

Looke wel ere thou leape. (Guarda bene inanzi che tu salci.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 34. (1578)

In things of great importance, we commonly looke before we leape.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 198. (1579)

Thou shouldst have look'd before thou hadst leapt.

CHAPMAN AND JONSON, Eastward Hoe. Act v. sc. 1. (1605)

Look before you leap.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy

Pt. ii, sec. iii, memb. 7. (1621) PARKER, Excellent New Medley. (1643)

TUKE, Adventures of Five Hours. Act v, sc. 3. (1663)

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

MARRYAT, Mr. Midshipman Easy. Ch. 6

(1836) THOREAU, Winter, 23 Feb., 1857, etc

Try therefore before you trust; look before you leap.

JOHN TRAPP, Commentaries: I Peter (1646)

And look before you ere you leap.

For as you sow, ye are like to reap.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto ii, l. 503. (1664)

Look before you leap, for snakes among sweet flowers creep.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 113. (1678)

I love to look before I leap.

RICHARD STEELE, The Tender Husband. Act iii. sc. 2. (1705)

When you feel tempted to marry, . . . look twice before you leap.

CHARLOTTE BRONTË, Shirley. Ch. 9. (1849)

12

In every affair retire a step, and you have an advantage.

KANG-HSI, Sacred Edict. Sec. 1. (c. 400 B. C.)

Stop when you have begun, draw back a pace.
(Incepto parce referque pedem.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. i, l. 716. (c. 1 B. C.)
Always wise men go aback for to lepe the further.
J. D'ARRAS, Mesuline. Ch. 20. (c. 1500)

Better is it to runne backe agayne, than to runne forth amysse. (Satius est recurrere, quam currere male.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. ix, No. 32.
(1508) TAVERNER, tr., fo. 27. (1550)

They have gone back only that they may leap the better. (Ils se sont seulement reculez pour mieux saulter.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 38. (1580)
We must recoil a little, to the end we may leap the better.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1119 (1640)
We must not overlook the numerous examples which history furnishes in proof that, according to the French proverb, il faut reculer pour mieux sauter.

HARE, Guesses at Truth, i, 328. (1827)
He who would make a longer leap, draws himself back. (Wer einer grossen Sprung thun will, geht hinter sich.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes,
p. 348. (1856) A German proverb.

1
Luik quhair to licht [where to light], before thou loup.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERIE, The Cherrie and the Slae, xxiv, 20. (1597)

2
According to the common saying: He that lokeeth not before he leapeth, may chauce to stumble before he sleepeth.

WILLIAM PAINTER, The Pallace of Pleasure, iii,
53. (1567)

Hee that leapeth before hee looke, may hap to leape into the brooke.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 192. (1576)
Unless you leap before you look,
Your fate will be a trite one.

PHYLLIS MCGINLEY, Advice to a Tot About to Learn the Alphabet. (1940)

3
You've got to jump, and the longer you look,
the less you'll like it.

WHYTE-MELVILLE, Satan. Ch. 23. (1872)

LOOKER-ON

4
Lookers-on have eight eyes.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 440. (1938)
A Japanese proverb.

5
They say that men see farther in the affairs of others than in their own. (Aiunt homines plus in alieno negotio videre.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. cix, sec. 16. (a. A. D.
64)

To take Aduise of some few Friends is ever honourable: For Lookers on, many times, see more than Gamesters.

FRANCIS BACON, *Essays: Of Followers and
Friends*. (1597)

There is a true saying, that the spectator ofttimes sees more than the gamester.

JAMES HOWELL, Letters, 1 May, 1635.
We know lookers on more than the gamesters see.
RICHARD BROMZ, The Sparagus Garden: Epil.
(1640)

Standers-by see more than gamesters.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 206. (1678)

A stander-by, sir, sees more than a gamester.
VANBRUGH, The Mistake. Act i, sc. 1. (1706)

A stander-by may see more of the game than one that plays.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Clarissa. Ch. 7. (1748)
The old adage, that "lookers-on see most of the game."

F. E. SMEDLEY, Frank Fairleigh. Chs. 7, 9, 47.
(1850) PINERO, Mid-Channel. Act i. (1909)

"Lookers-on many times see more than gamesters" . . . has a parallel in an Irish proverb: He is a good hurler that's on the ditch."

ARCHBISHOP RICHARD WHATELY, Bacon's Essays Annotated, p. 495. (1856)

In love affairs . . . when the love is on one side
. . . it is the looker-on who sees most of the game.

JAMES PAYN, The Canon's Ward. Ch. 24. (1884)
No man can escape the eye of the Rubberer. . . .
They are optical gluttons, fattening on the misfortunes of their fellow beings.

O. HENRY, A Comedy in Rubber. (1908)
The more I see of life, the more I'm convinced that onlookers really do see most of the game.

J. B. PRIESTLEY, Old Dark House. Ch. 4. (1928)
The kiebitz is no song-bird. (Der Kiebitz ist kein Singvogel.)

A German proverb referring to a bird similar to the plover, and of a very inquisitive nature. Hence, "kibitzer."

6
Sitting like a Looker-on Of this worldes Stage.

EDMUND SPENSER, Sonnet to G. Harvey. (1586)

I all this while Stand but a looker-on.
MIDDLETON AND ROWLEY, The Spanish Gipsie.
Act v, sc. 3. (a. 1627)

7
I'll sit down, and be a stander by.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii. (1738)

LOOKING-GLASS, see Mirror

LOOSE

8
On the look-out for amusement—in modern parlance, "on the loose."

JAMES HANNAY, King Dobbs. Ch. 5. (1849)
Our friend prone to vices you never may see,
Though he goes on the Loose, or the Cut, or the Spree.

Punch (London), 9 July, 1859, p. 22/1.

9
She's loose i'th' hilts; grown a notorious strumpet.

JOHN WEBSTER, The Dutchesse of Malfy. Act
ii, sc. 5. (1614)

So in French cocu is taken for one whose wife is loose in the hilts.

JAMES HOWELL, Epistle Dedicatory to Cotgrave's Dictionary. (1650)

The shepherd thought her no better than she should be, a little loose in the hilts, and free of her hips.

PETER MOTTEUX, tr., Don Quixote. Pt. i, bk. iii, ch. 6. (1712)

1 Unnethe is nu eny man that can any craft
That he nis a party los in the haft.

UNKNOWN, Political Songs (Camden), p. 339. (c. 1325)

Alas! she was nat sur in the hafte.

UNKNOWN, Philip and Mary. (c. 1555)

He's a bit loose i' t' heft.

S. O. ADDY, Sheffield Glossary. (1888)

Lohse i' th' heft. That is, loose in the handle. A person of a wild, profligate or wasteful disposition.

PEACOCK, Manley Glossary, p. 329. (1889)

LORD

2 In the village of a lord don't build your nest.
(En un lugar de señorío, no hagas tu nido.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 279. (1856) A Spanish proverb. The French say, "Ne fais pas ton nid près d'un château" (Don't build your nest near a château). There is another Spanish form, "Sirve á señor, y sabrás que es dolor" (Serve a lord and you'll know what sorrow is).

3 Many lords, many laws.

THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 7. (1633)

NEW LORDS, NEW LAWS, see under KING.

4 Lord of human kind.

DRYDEN, Spanish Friar. Act ii, sc. 1. (1681)

Pride in their port, defiance in their eye,
I see the lords of humankind pass by.

GOLDSMITH, The Traveller, l. 327. (1764)

5 For they wyll say he swereth depe, swereth like a lorde.

SIR THOMAS ELYOT, The Image of Gouvernance. Bk. i, ch. 26. (1531) See under SWEARING.

Water thy wine and drink like a lord.

MIDDLETON AND ROWLEY, The Spanish Gipsie. Act iv, sc. 1. (1623) See under DRINKING.

The gentlemen are most of them very temperate, yet the Proverb goes, 'As drunk as a Lord.'

JOHN EVELYN, A Character of England, p. 48. (1651) See under DRUNKENNESS.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer lived like a lord.

SIR WILLIAM HARCOURT, Speech, 20 April, 1892. See under LIFE AND LIVING.

6 A Lord without Riches is a Soldier without Arms.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 258. (1732)
To be a lord, a papist, and poor, is the most enviable distinction of humanity.

HAZLITT, Commonplaces. No. 48. (c. 1821)

7 A nod from a Lord is a Breakfast for a Fool.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 338. (1732)

An insolent Lord is not a Gentleman.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 638.

8 He is a lord for a year and a day,
And she is a lady for ever and aye.

W. C. HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 164. (1869)

"This is said of the Lord Mayor of York and his spouse; the latter, it is suggested, never renounces at heart the fugitive dignity conferred on her husband for the year of his mayoralty."

9 Tys sayde, there is no good accorde,
Where every man would be a Lorde.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 6. (1546)
No good accord, where every Jack would be a lord.

FRANCIS BACON, Promus. No. 968. (c. 1594)
There's no accord where every man would be a lord.

THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 8. (1633)

10 [Women] might attain to a sagacity equal to that of the lords of the creation.

JOHN HOBART, in Letters to and from the Countess of Suffolk, ii, 207. (1744)

'Tis really a mighty silly thing for a lord of the creation to take up his residence in a boarding-house where there are pretty women.

AGNES MARIA BENNETT, The Beggar Girl. Bk ii, ch. 10. (1797)

The Lords of Creation men we call.

EMILY SHULDHAM, Lords of Creation. (c. 1850)

11 A lordis herte, a purs that peiseth [weigheth] lihte.

JOHN LYDGATE, Minor Poems (Percy), p. 160. (c. 1430)

A lordes stomake and a beggers pouche
Full ill accordeth.

ALEXANDER BARCLAY, Egloges, p. 39. (c. 1510)

The two vnmeete companions, a lordes heart, and a beggers purse.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Works, i, 207. (1592)

A lords heart and a beggars purse.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 5. (1659)

12 Lord of the Lord knows what.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

13 Euery man may not be a lorde.

RICHARD TAVERNER, Translation of Erasmus, fo. 55. (1550)

LORD, THE, see God

LOSS

See also Gain and Loss

14 I have lost my all. (τάμὰ διόλχεται.)

AESCHYLUS, Myrmidones. Frag. 62, Smyth. (c. 458 B.C.) Also ARISTOPHANES, Ecclesiazusae. l. 393.

All's lost, both labour and cost.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 153. (1639)

ALL IS LOST SAVE HONOR, see under HONOR.

15 Losers are always in the wrong.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 446. (1855)

<sup>1</sup>
To clear out the salt-cellar. (ἀλιὰν τρυπάν.)
CALLIMACHUS, Epigrams. No. 48, l. 1. (c. 250 B.C.) To lose everything. Proverbial also is ἀλλῶν δὲ φόρτος ἐνθεν ἤλθεν ἐνθ' ἔβη (The load of salt is gone where it came from), of the loss of what one never possessed.

Thus had he brought haddocke to paddocke.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 10. (1546)
To lose everything.

To lose both pot and water, as the proverbe is.
RICHARD HAKLUYT, Voyages, ii, ii, 53. (1599)

<sup>2</sup>
Never believe that lost which it is possible to retrieve. (Ne crede amissum, quicquid reparare licebit.)

CATO (?), Collectio Monostichorum, l. 75. (c. 175 B.C.) See Minor Latin Poets, Loeb, p. 628. He has not lost all who has one cast left.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 16. (1670).

<sup>3</sup>
Take no sorrow of the thing lost which may not be recovered.

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., Aesop, ii, 270. (1484)
For tint [lost] thing care not.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 32. (c. 1595)

<sup>4</sup>
As completely at a loss . . . as a Dutchman without his pipe, a Frenchman without his mistress, an Italian without his fiddle or an Englishman without his umbrella.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon, Pt. ii, No. 116.

<sup>5</sup>
The main lost, cast the by away.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, Idea. Sonnet lix. (1594)
The French say, "Après perdre perd on bien" (After losing one loses well).

<sup>6</sup>
They . . . snatch it all to themselves, grudging another the least morsel, thinking all is lost that goes besides their own lips.

DANIEL DYKE, Philemon, p. 108. (1633)
I warrant you think all is lost that goes beside your own mouth.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii. (1738)

<sup>7</sup>
He tint [lost] never a cow, that grate [wept] for a needle.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 44. (c. 1595) Cited by KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 149 (1721), with the explanation, "It is a token that a man had never a great loss, who is immoderately griev'd for a small one."

<sup>8</sup>
"We are lost!" the captain shouted,
As he staggered down the stair.

JAMES T. FIELDS, Ballad of the Tempest. (1849)

<sup>9</sup>
A wise Man's Loss is his Secret.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 477. (1732)
He loseth indeed, that loseth at last.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1975.
It signifies nothing to play well, if you lose.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3045.

<sup>10</sup>
Wealth lost, something lost;

Honor lost, much lost;

Courage lost, all lost.

(Gut verloren, etwas verloren;

Ehre verloren, viel verloren;

Mut verloren, alles verloren.)

GOETHE (c. 1785) A variant of the old German proverb, "Goed verloren, niet verloren; Moed verloren, veel verloren; Eer verloren, meer verloren; Ziel verloren, al verloren" (Money lost, nothing lost; courage lost, much lost; honor lost, more lost; soul lost, all lost). Another variation is, "When wealth is lost, nothing is lost; when health is lost, something is lost; when character is lost, all is lost."

<sup>11</sup>
Little losses amaze, great tame.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1611. (1640)

<sup>12</sup>
A gest as good lost as found.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)

As good such frendes were lost as found that helpeth not at neede.

ULPIAN FULWELL, Ars Adulandi, vii, 36. (1576)
You are better lost than found.

CLEMENT ROBINSON, A Handfull of Pleasant Delites, p. 14. (1584)

Such a wife is better loste than founde.

WHITNEY, Choice of Emblemes, p. 158. (1586)
He is gone to seek my young mistress, and I think she is better lost than found.

HENRY PORTER, The Two Angrie Women of Abington. Act iv. sc. 3. (1599)

As good lost as found.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 316. (1605)

I have one wild slip of a kinsman . . . but he is better lost than found.

WALTER SCOTT, Kenilworth. Ch. 1. (1821)

Sometimes the finding of a thing
More sorrow than the loss doth bring.

ELLEN T. FOWLER, Fuel of Fire. Ch. 14. (1901)

<sup>13</sup>
It is lost that is unsought.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

<sup>14</sup>
The cheerful loser is a winner.

ELBERT HUBBARD, 1001 Epigrams. (1911)

<sup>15</sup>
He that loses anything and gets wisdom by it is a gainer by the loss.

F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 200. (1902)

<sup>16</sup>
Such a misfortune has been known to many, a common kind, plucked at random out of Fortune's heap. (Casus multis hic cognitus ac iam | tritus et e medio fortunae ductus acervo.)

JUVENAL, Satires. No. xiii, l. 9. (A.D. 127)

Quoted by MONTAIGNE, ii, 16. Juvenal is referring to loss of money. Another Latin proverb is, "Damna minus consueta movent" (Losses to which we are accustomed affect us less).

It is madness, after losing all, to lose even your passage money. (Furor est post omnia, perdere naulum.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. viii, l. 97. (c. A.D. 120)

TO THROW ROPE AFTER BUCKET, see ROPE.

- 1
Better is a litel los Than a long sorwe.
WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman: Prologue, l. 388. (1362)
Better two seils [losses], than ane sorrow.
DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 22. (c. 1595) Cited by KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 66, with the comment, "Losses may be repaired, but sorrow will break the heart."
Better two Losses, than one Sorrow.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 936. (1732)
- 2
Things that are not at all, are never lost.
CHRISTOPHER MARLOWE, Hero and Leander. Sestiad i, l. 276. (a. 1593)
No man can lose what he never had.
WALTON, The Compleat Angler. Pt. i, ch. v. (1653)
- 3
When we have done our best, all's but put into a riven dish.
MIDDLETON AND DEKKER, The Roaring Girle. Act iv, sc. 2. (1611)
All's lost that's put in a riven dish. All is lost that is bestowed on an ungrateful person.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 137. (1670)
All's lost that is pour'd into a crack'd Dish.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 546. (1732)
- 4
You can't lose me, Charlie.
HARRY S. MILLER. Title and refrain of popular song. (1893)
You wouldn't be lost in the shuffle.
MANNING LONG, False Alarm, p. 74. (1943)
- 5
Verily a man of understanding hath lost nothing, if he yet have himself. (Certes, l'homme d'entendement n'a rien perdu, s'il a soy mesme.)
MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 38. (1580) In upholding this thesis, Montaigne quotes Stilphon who lost wife, children and all his possessions, and could yet say, "Thank God, I have lost nothing of my own."
I have lost all and found myself.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 198. (1639)
If I have lost the ring, yet the fingers are still here. (Se ben ho perso l' anello, ho pur anche le dita.)
R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 100. (1852) An Italian proverb. "In it is asserted the comparative indifference of that loss which reaches but to things external to us, so long as we ourselves remain."
- 6
Hit is an olde curtesye at the cardes perdy, to let the leser haue hys wordes.
SIR THOMAS MORE, The Debellacyon of Salem and Bizance. (1533) Works (1577), p. 1018.
Reason and custome (they say) afoords Alwaie to let the loosers haue their wordes.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 6. (1546)
But I can give the loser leave to chide, . . .
And well such losers may have leave to speak.
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, iii, 1, 182. (1590)
We'll give losers leave to talk.
THOMAS NASHE, Pierce Penilesse. (1592)

- Losers will have leave
To ease their stomachs with their bitter tongues.
SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus, iii, 1, 233. (1593) The Italians say, "A causa perduta parole assai" (Plenty of words when the cause is lost).
I can giue the loser leaue to speake.
UNKNOWN, First Part of the Contention betwixt Yorke and Lancaster, p. 36. (1594)
The wisest men have beene . . . pleased, that losers should have their words.
SIR EDWIN SANDYS, Europae Speculum, p. 123. (1599)
Giue losers leaue to prate.
SIR THOMAS HERBERT, Travels, p. 47. (1634)
Give losers leave to talk.
HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 604. (1640)
Give winners leave to laugh, and losers to speak, or else both will take leave to themselves.
THOMAS FULLER, Church-History of Britain. Bk. iv, ch. 1. (1655)
You've saved your money, and the loser may be allow'd the liberty of speaking.
JOHN WILSON, The Projectors. Act iv. (1665)
Give losing gamesters leave to talk. Suffer men who have losses and wrongs, to express their resentments.
KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 123. (1721)
We must give losers leave to talk, you know.
GEORGE COLMAN, SR., Man and Wife. Act iii. (1769)
The captain, who had lost, . . . was in the pouting mood not unusual to losers, and which, says the proverb, must be allowed to them.
WALTER SCOTT, The Heart of Midlothian. Ch. 48. (1818) "The loser pays" is another proverb about losers, as in the old French proverb, "C'est la coutume de Lorris, où le battu paye l'amende" (It is the custom of Lorris [Loiret] where the one who is beaten pays the fine).
- 7
You lose, and have no thanks in your loss. (Perdis, et in damno gratia nulla tuo.)
OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. i, l. 434. (c. 1 b. c.)
Lesser losses are wont to be of great advantage. (Esse solent magno damna minora bono.)
OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 672. (c. 1 b. c.)
- 8
Let nothing be lost, said our Saviour. But that is lost which is misused.
WILLIAM PENN, Some Fruits of Solitude. No. 70. (1693)
- 9
I've lost the kernel and kept the shell. (Nucleum amisi, retinui putamina.)
PLAUTUS, Captivi, l. 655. (c. 200 b. c.)
What's lost is lost. (Quod periit, periit.)
PLAUTUS, Cistellaria, l. 703. (c. 200 b. c.)
- 10
The loss that is not known is not a loss. (Dimissum quod nescitur non amittitur.)
PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 161. (c. 43 b. c.)
He that is robb'd, not wanting what is stol'n, Let him not know 't, and he's not robb'd at all.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello, iii, 3, 342. (1605)

What loss feels he that wot not what he loses?
BROOME, Merry Beggars. Act i, sc. 1. (a. 1745)

<sup>1</sup>
Loss pains the miser, not the wise man.
(Avarus damno potius quam sapiens dolet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 25. (c. 43 B. C.)
How pitiable it is to lose what few possess!
(Quam miserum est id quod pauci habent amittere!)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 574.
To lose what is not your own is not to lose but to give back. (Reddit non perdit cui quod alienum est perit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 642.
<sup>2</sup>
Better to close the shop in the morning than to sell the stock at a loss.
SADI, Bustan. Ch. ix, Apol. 2. (c. 1257)

<sup>3</sup>
No man can lose very much when but a dribble remains. (Nemo multum ex stilicidio potest perdere.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lxx, sec. 5. (a. A. D. 64)
He that hath litle to spende, hath not much to lose.

JOHN LVLV, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 243 (1580) The Italians say, "Guardati da chi non ha che perdere" (Beware of one who has nothing to lose). Goethe says, "Fürchterlich Ist einer der nichts zu verlieren hat" (Terrible is he who has nothing to lose).

<sup>4</sup>
There is no difference between grief for something lost and the fear of losing it. (In aequo est autem amissae rei miseratio et timor amittendae.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xcvi, sec. 6. (a. A. D. 64)

It is irrational and ignoble to renounce the acquisition of what we want for fear of losing it. (ἀτοπος δὲ καὶ ἀγεννὴς ὁ τῷ φόβῳ τῆς ἀποβολῆς τὴν κτήσιν ὧν χρὴ προΐμενος.)

PLUTARCH, Lives: Solon. Ch. 7, sec. 1. (c. A. D. 110)

<sup>5</sup>
It is not lost that comes at last.
THOMAS SHELTON, tr., Don Quixote. Pt. i, bk. iv, ch. 4. (1612)

It's never lost that comes at last.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 295. (1639)
Though long it be, yeares may repay the debt;
None loseth that, which he in time may get.

ROBERT HERRICK, Long Lookt for Comes at Last. (1648)

It is not lost, if it comes at last.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2999. (1732)

<sup>6</sup>
A man cannot have one losse, but more will folowe.

WILLIAM SPELMAN, A Dialogue Between Two Travellers, p. 3. (c. 1595) MISFORTUNES NEVER COME SINGLY, see under MISFORTUNE.

<sup>7</sup>
Loss is no shame.
EDMUND SPENSER, The Faerie Queene. Bk. ii, canto v, st. 15 (1590)

Loss embraces shame.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 605. (1640) The French say, "Qui perd, pèche" (Who loses, sins).

<sup>8</sup>
The loss was ours.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

<sup>9</sup>
Let that which is lost be for God.
R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 66. (1852) A Spanish proverb, based on the story of the man making his will and providing that if a certain cow, which had strayed and been long missing, should be found it should be for his children; if it was not found it should be for God.

NOT LOST BUT GONE BEFORE, see DEATH: EUPHEMISMS.

LOT, see Destiny

LOTHARIO

<sup>10</sup>
Is this that Haughty, Gallant, Gay Lothario?
NICHOLAS ROWE, The Fair Penitent. Act v, sc. 1. (1703)

The gay Lothario dresses for the fight.
UNKNOWN, The World. No. 202. (1756)

Both gay Lotharios.
MOORE, Intercepted Letters, viii, 31. (1812)
No woman could have been more flattered and courted by Lotharios and lady-killers than Lady Castleton had been.

LORD LYTTON, The Caxtons, xviii, 6. (1849)
A devil of a fellow—a regular Lothario.
W. S. GILBERT, Ruddigore. Act i. (1887)

A gay Lothario. A merry male heart-breaker or woman-chaser: [a cliché since] C. 19–20. From Rowe's play.

PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: Gay (1941)

LOUD

<sup>11</sup>
Loude as any thunder.
CHAUCER (?), The Hous of Fame. Bk. iii, l. 591. (c. 1383)

Loud as a horn.
JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 19. (1659) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 206. (1670)

<sup>12</sup>
Mixt with a learned lecture of ill language,
Louder than Tom o' Lincoln.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Woman's Prize. Act iii, sc. 4. (1639) The great cathedral bell.
As loud as Tom of Lincoln. . . . Tom of Lincoln may be called the Stentor (fifty lesser bells may be made out of him) of all in this county.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies (1840), ii, 267. (1662)
[She] is as loud as Tom of Lincoln.

SCOTT, The Heart of Midlothian. Ch. 30. (1818)

<sup>13</sup>
The shirts too "loud" in pattern.
THACKERAY, Pendennis. Ch. 39. (1849)
The girls were dreadfully loud in their dress.
JOHN STRANGE WINTER (MRS. ARTHUR STAN-NARD). Mrs. Bob, p. 118. (1889)

LOUSE

- <sup>1</sup>
Nits will be lice.
B. E., A New Dictionary of the Canting Crew, sig. H7. (1690)
Oliver Cromwell's coarse but descriptive proverb
... "Nits will be lice."
ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Curiosities of Literature. Ser. ii, i, 431. (1823)
- <sup>2</sup>
Am I to be troubled by that louse Pantilius?
(Men moveat cimex Pantilius?)
HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 10, l. 78.
- <sup>3</sup>
Up-tailes all, and a lowse for the hang-man.
BEN JONSON, Every Man in His Humour. Act i, sc. 3. (1598)
[They] care not a louse for me now.
THOMAS OTWAY, Friendship in Fashion. (1678)
I don't care a louse if I never see it again.
CHESTERFIELD, Letters (1792), ii, 219. (1749)
- <sup>4</sup>
I care not I, sir, not three skips of a louse.
BEN JONSON, A Tale of a Tub. Act ii, sc. 1. (1633)
And temper it with three leaps of a lowse.
Roxburghe Ballads, viii, 426. (a. 1674)
'Tis not that I value the money three skips of a louse.
SWIFT, Mrs. Harris's Petition. (1700)
- <sup>5</sup>
But yif a lous couthe lepe I con hit not i-leue Heo scholde wandre on that walk hit was so thred-bare.
WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. Text A, passus v, l. 112. (1362)
He hath made my gowne so bare that a lowse can get no holde on it.
PALSGRAVE, La Langue Françoise, p. 620. (1530)
Truth among clothyers hath lesse harborowe then the lowce upon a thrydbare cloth.
WILLIAM SPELMAN, A Dialogue between Two Travellers, p. 116. (c. 1595)
If a Louse miss its Footing on his Coat, 'twill be sure to break its Neck.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2661. (1732)
- <sup>6</sup>
I say, Mr. Gossett, have you got the spirit of a louse?
FREDERICK MARRYAT, Mr. Midshipman Easy. Ch. 12. (1836)
- <sup>7</sup>
He loueth her with suche a lewd lowsye loue, as the lewde lousy louer in lechery loueth himself.
SIR THOMAS MORE, Confutation of Tindale Works (1557), p. 463/2. (1532)
Base birth and lowsye lynage.
RICHARD GRAPTON, Chronicle, ii, 613. (1568)
Lowsie and not worth a straw.
THOMAS NASHE, Have With You to Saffron-Walden, p. 34. (1596)
The lousiest, lowest story.
R. L. STEVENSON, Catriona, p. 65. (1893)
- <sup>8</sup>
It is a familiar beast to man, and signifies love.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, i, 1, 20. (1601)

<sup>9</sup>
You may have an even hand to throw a louse in the fire.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)
A louse is a man's companion, but a flea is a dog's companion.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i.

LOVE

See also Beauty and Love; Eyes and Love; Friendship and Love; Woman and Love; Youth and Love

I—Now What Is Love?

<sup>10</sup>
When you're forty or so, you may look on love as a sort of captivating robber—who chatted so sweetly, as he plucked your destiny out of your pocket.

PHILIP BARRY, You and I. Act i. (1923)

<sup>11</sup>
Love, it is an hateful pees,
A free acquitaunce, without relees,
A trouthe, fret full of faldshede,
A sikernes, al set in drede.

CHAUCER, Romaunt of the Rose, l. 4703. (c. 1365)
Love is a torment of the mind,

A tempest everlasting;
And Jove hath made it of a kind
Not well, nor full nor fasting.

SAMUEL DANIEL, Love is a Sickness. (a. 1619)

<sup>12</sup>
Love is merely the exchange of two fantasies and the contact of two skins. (L'amour n'est que l'échange de deux fantasmes et le contact de deux épidermes.)

NICOLAS CHAMFORT, Maximes. (c. 1780)
Quoted by JOHN LODWICK, Running to Paradise, p. 144.

Love is a stupidity of two. (L'amour est une sottise faite à deux.)

NAPOLÉON BONAPARTE, Epigram. (c. 1810) See GUILLON, Napoléon, p. 299.

<sup>13</sup>
Love is a razor, cleansing being well us'd,
But fetcheth blood still being the least abus'd.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Bussy d'Ambois. Act iii. (1604)

<sup>14</sup>
The Stoics define love as the endeavor to form a friendship inspired by beauty. (Stoici amorem ipsum conatum amicitiae faciendae ex pulcritudinis specie definiunt.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. iv, ch. 34, sec. 72. (B.C. 45) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, i, 27, the French being, "L'amour est l'envie d'obtenir l'amitié d'une personne qui nous attire par sa beauté."

<sup>15</sup>
Love is a spaniel that prefers even punishment from one hand to caresses from another.
C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Vol. ii, No. 279. (1820)

<sup>16</sup>
Love's the noblest frailty of the mind.

DRYDEN, Indian Emperour. Act iii, sc. 2. (1665)

Love's but the frailty of the mind,
When 'tis not with ambition join'd.
CONGREVE, Way of World. Act iii, sc. 12. (1700)

1 Love is the blossom where there blows
Every thing that lives or grows.
GILES FLETCHER, Christ's Victory. (1610)

Love is the tyrant of the heart.
JOHN FORD, The Lover's Melancholy. Act iii,
sc. 3, l. 105. (1628)

Love is a sweet tyranny, because the lover endureth his torments willingly.
H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 446. (1855)

2 Love is a platform upon which all ranks meet.
W. S. GILBERT, H.M.S. Pinafore. Act ii. (1878)

3 Love and desire are the spirit's wings to great deeds. (Lust und Liebe sind die Fittige zu grossen Thaten.)
GOETHE, Iphigenia auf Tauris. Act ii, sc. i. (1787)

4 Love is a lock that linketh noble minds.
ROBERT GREENE, Alcida. (1588)

Ah, what is love? It is a pretty thing,
As sweet unto a shepherd as a king.
ROBERT GREENE, The Shepherd's Wife's Song.
(c. 1592)

What thing is love? . . .
It is a prick, it is a sting;
It is a pretty, pretty thing;
It is a fire, it is a coal,
Whose flame creeps in at every hole.
GEORGE PEELE, The Hunting of Cupid. (a. 1600)

What is love? 'tis nature's treasure,
'Tis the storehouse of her joys.
CHATTERTON, The Revenge. Act i, sc. 2. (1795)

5 Love is a leven, and a loving kisse
The Leven of a loving sweet-heart is.

ROBERT HERRICK, Leven. (1648)
Love is a circle that doth restlesse move
In the same sweet eternity of love.

ROBERT HERRICK, Love, What It Is.
Love is a Circle, and an Endlesse Sphere;
From good to good, revolving here, & there.
ROBERT HERRICK, Upon Love.

6 Love is a game in which both players always cheat.

E. W. HOWE, Country Town Sayings. (1911)

7 Loue is leche of lyf, and next owre lorde selue,
And also the graith gate that goth in-to heuene.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. Text B, passus i, l. 201. (1377)

8 Loue is a Poyson, and therefore by Poyson it must be mayntayned.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England (Ar-ber), p. 346. (1580)

Love is like a mushroom. No roots and deadly poison.

JEAN WEBB, No Match for Murder, p. 120. (1942)

9 Love is nothing else but a thirst to enjoy a desired object. (L'Amour n'est aultre chose que la soif de cette jouissance, en un subject desiré.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5. (1595)

To Socrates, love is an appetite of generation by the mediation of beauty. (Pour Socrate, l'amour est appetit de generation, par l'entremise de la beauté.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5. (1595)

10 Love is the occupation of the idle man, the distraction of the warrior, the peril of the sovereign. (L'amour est l'occupation de l'homme oisif, la distraction du guerrier, l'écueil du souverain.)

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Epigram. See GUILLON,
Napoléon, p. 299.

Love is the business of the idle, but the idleness of the busy.

LORD LYTTON, Rienzi. Ch. 4. (1835)

11 . . . love is the jewel that wins the world.
MOIRA O'NEILL, Beauty's Flower. (c. 1930)

12 Love is a kind of warfare. (Militiae species amor est.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. ii, l. 233. (c. 1 B. C.)
Love is a kind of warre; Hence, those who feare.
No cowards must his royall Ensignes beare.

ROBERT HERRICK, On Love. (1648)

13 Love is a kind of anxious fear. (Res est solliciti plena timoris amor.)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. i, l. 12. (c. 10 B. C.)

14 Love is the best instructor. (Amor magister est optimus.)

PLINY, Letters. Bk. iv, epis. 19. (c. A. D. 98)

15 Love worketh no ill to his neighbour; therefore love is the fulfilling of the law. (ἡ ἀγάπη τῷ πλησίον κακὸν οὐκ ἐργάζεται· πλήρωμα οὖν νόμου ἡ ἀγάπη.)

New Testament: Romans, xiii, 10. (c. A. D. 57)

The Vulgate is, "Dilectio proximi malum non operatur. Plenitudo ergo legis est dilectio."

16 Love is an egotism of two. (L'amour est un égoïsme à deux.)

ANTOINE DE SALLE, Epigram. (c. 1760)

17 Love is a familiar; Love is a devil: there is no evil angel but Love.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, i, 2, 177.

18 Love is the salt of life.

JOHN SHEFFIELD, Ode On Love. Canto v. (a.
1721)

19 Love is a pleasing but a various clime.

WILLIAM SHENSTONE, Elegy. No. 5. (a. 1763)

20 Love in its essence is spiritual fire.

SWEDENBORG, True Christian Religion. Sec. 31.
(1734)

21 Love is a thirst that is never slaked.

H. D. THOREAU, Early Spring in Massachusetts

<sup>1</sup>
All true love is grounded on esteem.
GEORGE VILLIERS, DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM, True Love. (a. 1687)
Wedded love is founded on esteem.
ELIJAH FENTON, Mariamne. (1723)

<sup>2</sup>
Love is a sour delight, a sugar'd grief,
A living death, an ever-dying life.
THOMAS WATSON, The Passionate Centurie of Loue. (1582)

Love is a smoke rais'd with the fume of sighs;
Being purged, a fire sparkling in lovers' eyes;
Being vex'd, a sea nourish'd with lovers' tears:
What is it else? a madness most discreet,
A choking gall and a preserving sweet.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, i, 1, 196. (1595)
Love is a fiend, a fire, a heaven, a hell,
Where pleasure, pain, and sad repentance dwell.
RICHARD BARNFIELD, The Shepherd's Content.
St. 38. (1595)

Love is all in fire, and yet is ever freezing;
Love is much in winning, yet is more in leessing:
Love is ever sick, and yet is never dying;
Love is ever true, and yet is ever lying.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, Blurt. Act ii, sc. 2. (1602)
Love is a flame to burn out human wills,
Love is a flame to set the will on fire,
Love is a flame to cheat men into mire. . . .
Love puts such bitter poison on Fate's arrow.

JOHN MASEFIELD, The Widow in the Bye Street. Pt. ii, st. 42. (1912)

<sup>3</sup>
Love is a transitive verb.
ANONYMOUS, Meditations in Wall Street, p. 85. (1940)

<sup>4</sup>
Now I know what love is. (Nunc scio quid sit Amor.)

VERGIL, Eclogues. Ecl. viii, l. 43. (37 B.C.)
You see what Loue is, begon with grieffe, continued with sorrowe, ended with death. A paine full of pleasure, a ioye replenished with misery, a Heauen, a Hell, a God, a Diuell.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 304. (1580)

II—Love: Apothegms

<sup>5</sup>
Two things only a man cannot hide: that he is drunk, and that he is in love.

ANTIPHANES, Fragment. (c. A.D. 336) See MEINEKE, Frag. Comicorum Graecorum, iii, 3. The Latin proverb is "Amor tussisque non celantur" (Love and a cough cannot be hid).

Luken luue at the end wil kith. [Concealed love in the end will show itself.]

UNKNOWN, Cursor Mundi, l. 4276. (c. 1300)
Foure thinge cannot be kept close, Loue, the cough, fyre and sorowe.

JAMES SANFORD, tr., Houres of Recreation, p. 196. (1572)

Sixe things can neuer hide them selues, A scabbe in a hande, a cough at a feaste, an awle in a bagge, a strumpette in a wyndowe, pouertye in pride, and wantonnes in lust.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 24. (1578)

Fire can-not be hydden in the flaxe with-out smoake nor Muske in the bosome with-out smell, nor loue in the breast with-out suspition.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 425. (1580)

There are four things cannot be hydden. 1 The cough. 2 Loue. 3 Anger. 4 And sorrow.

ROBERT GREENE, Works (Grosart), vii, 294. (1590)

A murderous guilt shows not itself more soon Than love that would be hid; love's night is noon.
SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, iii, 1, 159. (1599)

Age is like love, it cannot be hid.

THOMAS DEKKER, Old Fortunatus. Act ii, sc. 2. (1600)

Love and a cough cannot be hid.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Amour. (1611)
HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 52. (1640) etc., etc.

Love and a cough cannot be hid. . . . The French and Italians add to these two the itch.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 47. (1670)

Love, a cough, smoke, and money cannot long be concealed. (Amour, toux, fumée, et argent Ne se peuvent cacher longuement.)

LE ROUX DE LINCY, Proverbs Français. Vol. ii, p. 237. The French also say, "Amour, toux, et fumée En secret ne sont demurée" (Love, a cough, and smoke will not dwell in secret), and the Italians have the same proverb, "Amor, tosse, e fumo Malamente si nascondono." The Germans have love and a cough only, "Lieben und Husten lassen sich nicht verbergen." There are two Spanish forms, "Amores, dolores, dineros No pueden estar secretos" (Love, griefs, and dollars cannot be kept secret), and "El amor verdadero no sufre cosa encubierta" (True love endures no concealment). The Italians elaborate this idea, "Nè amor, nè tosse, nè rognà, nè pancia, no se po scondere" (Love, a cough, the itch, and the belly cannot be hid), the reference of course being to a pregnant belly. There are many English variants, "Love and a sneeze cannot be hid," "Nature and love cannot be concealed," "Love and poverty are hard to hide," and so on.

No disguise can long conceal love, where it really exists, nor counterfeit it, where it does not exist. (Il n'y a point de déguisement qui puisse longtemps cacher l'amour où il est, ni le feindre où il n'est pas.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 70. (1665)

Love and murder will out.

WILLIAM CONGREVE, The Double-Dealer. Act iv, sc. 2. (1694) See also under MURDER

Love and light cannot be hid.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 242. (1721)

Love, the Itch, and a Cough cannot be hid.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3298. (1732)
The French is, "Amour, la tousee, et la gale ne se peuvent celer."

Love, cough, and smoke, can't well be hid.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1737.

Love and a red nose cannot be hid.

THOMAS HOLCROFT, Duplicity Act II, sc. 1. (1781)

They say a big stomach and a love affair are two things that can't be hid.

ALLAN UPDEGRAFF, The Hills Look Down, p. 20. (1941)

Love and a cold cannot be hid.

PATRICIA WENTWORTH, The Chinese Shawl, p. 175. (1943)

1 Love can finde entrance, not only into an open Heart; but also into a Heart well fortified, if watch be not well kept.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Love. (1597)

Nuptiall love maketh Mankinde; Friendly love perfecteth it; but Wanton love Corrupteth, and Imbaseth it.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Love.

2 It is so sweet to be loved for one's self. (Il est si doux d'être aimé pour soi-même.)

BEAUMARCHAIS, Le Barbier de Seville. Act i, sc. 1. (1775)

I loved him for himself alone.

R.B.SHERIDAN, The Duenna. Act i, sc. 3. (1775)

Wilt not thou love me for myself alone?

MACAULAY, Lines Written 30 July, 1847.

3 That woman, whom I supposed devoted to me, loves another man: still another man loves her: a certain other woman is in love with me. Fie on all of us—and on the god of love!

BHARTRIHARI, Niti Sataka. No. 2. (c. 50 B.C.)

Her I would have who will not, and her who will, I would not. (Hanc volo, quae non vult; illam, quae vult, ego nolo.)

AUSONIUS, Epigrams. No. lvi. (c. A.D. 380)

4 I must love you and leave you.

J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 79. (1917)

Flotsam and leave 'em—that's me from now on.

DOROTHY PARKER, The Little Hours. (1926)

Love 'em and leave 'em smells of the vaudeville stage, and thus bespeaks a sophisticated origin.

ARCHER TAYLOR, The Proverb, p. 36. (1931)

His nickname ought to be "Love-'em-and-Leave-'em" Joe.

PETER CHENEY, Dark Dust, p. 51. (1943)

5 Wine and love constrained me; whereof the one dragged me, the other allowed me not to away with rashness. (ἀκρητος καὶ ἔρως μὴ ῥάγαν.)

CALLIMACHUS, Epigrams. No. xliii, l. 3. (c. 250 B.C.)

The two inexorable gods of wine and love urged on this side and on that. (Hac Amor hac Liber, durus uterque deus.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. i, no. 3, l. 14. (c. 26 B.C.)

"Liber," because it releases men from care.

With love and wine are strife and pleasure knit: Take to your heart the joy, the strife omit.

(Cum venere et baccho lis est et iuncta voluptas: quod lautum est animo complectere, sed fuge lites.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. iv, No. 30. (c. 175 B.C.)

It is Love and moderate wine coursing through my temples . . . that are my escorts. (Ergo Amor et modicum circa mea tempora vinum mecum est.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. i, no. 6, l. 37. (c. 13 B.C.)

6 Wel wot ye that love is free.

CHAUCER (?), tr., Romaunt of the Rose, l. 3431. (c. 1365)

Love is a thing as any spirit free.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Frankeleyns Tale, l. 39. (c. 1386)

What, verray fool, think wel that love is free.

CHAUCER, The Knights Tale, l. 748.

7 He was as ful of love and paramour As is the hyve ful of hony swete.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Cokes Tale, l. 8. (c. 1386)

His brest was hool, with-oute for to sene, But in his herte ay was the arwe kene.

CHAUCER, The Frankeleyns Tale, l. 383.

8 Qui bien aime a tard oublie. (Who loves well is slow to forget.)

CHAUCER (?), The Parlement of Foules, l. 679. (c. 1382) An old saying, probably the title or refrain of a French ballad.

Sound love is not soon forgotten.

G. F. NORTHEALL, Folk-Phrases of Four Counties, p. 23. (1894)

9 Though men drawe swerd his freend to slo. He may not hewe hir love atwo.

CHAUCER (?), Romaunt of the Rose, l. 5521. (c. 1365)

If you love me as I love you, No knife can cut our love in two.

UNKNOWN. Old rhyme.

If you love me as I love you, What knife can cut our love in two?

RUDYARD KIPLING, An Old Song. (1886)

10 To loven wel, and in a worthy place; Thee oughte not to clepe it hap, but grace.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. i, l. 895. (c. 1380)

11 The fyr of love, wher-fro god me blesse.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. i, l. 436. (c. 1380)

The hote fyr of love him brende.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde, i, 490.

Frye in the flames of love.

JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 57. (1579)

12 But al so cold in love, towards thee, Thy lady is, as frost in winter mone, And thou fordoon, as snow in fyr is sone.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. i, l. 523. (c. 1380)

13 Eek for to winne love in sondry ages, In sondry londes, sondry been usages.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. ii, l. 27. (c. 1380)

Both might and mallice, deceyte and treacherye, all periurye, any impietie may lawfully be committed in loue, which is lawlesse.

JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 93. (1579)

All stratagems
In love, and that the sharpest war, are lawful.
FLETCHER AND MASSINGER, The Lovers' Progress. Act v, sc. 2. (1623)
Advantages are lawful in love and war.
APHRA BEHN, The Emperor of the Moon. Act i, sc. 3. (1677)
Stratagems ever were allow'd of in love and war.
SUSANNAH CENTLIVRE, The Man's Bewitch'd. Act v, sc. 1. (1709)
All is fair in love and war.
F. E. SMEDLEY, Frank Fairleigh. Ch. 50. (1850)
FITCH, Captain Jinks. Act iii. (1901) FITZSIMMONS, Tied for Murder, p. 9. (1943) etc., etc. The French say, "En amour la ruse est de bonne guerre."
All's fair in love—an' war—an' politics.
GEORGE ADE, County Chairman. Act iii. (1903)
It's love in a manner of speaking, and it's certainly war. Everything dirty goes.
STALLINGS AND ANDERSON, What Price Glory? Act i, sc. 2. (1924)
1
How hard to please are those who love.
(Quam sint morosi, qui amant.)
CICERO, Ad Familiares. Bk. vii, epis. xv, sc. 1. (53 B. C.) Quoted as a proverb.
2
Love locks no cupboards.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 26. (1639)
And all for the love of the cubbard.
UNKNOWN, in Roxburghe Ballads, vi, 529. (c. 1665)
Cream-pot love. Such as young fellows pretend to dairy-maids, to get cream and other good things of them. Some say cupboard love.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 69. (1678)
A cupboard love is seldom true.
UNKNOWN, Poor Robin's Almanack, 1757.
See also FRIENDSHIP: POT FRIENDSHIP.
3
He loves me as the cat doth love mustard.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 235. (1639)
HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 2, has, "As the catt licks mustard."
To love it as a dog loves a whip.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 287. (1678)
I love Mr. Neverout as the devil loves holy water.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)
He loves her as the devil loves holy water.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii.
4
Can true love be anything but exacting? How can our sense of duty allow us to abstain from admonition?
CONFUCIUS, Analects. (c.500 B. C.) Giles, tr., p.66.
Held fast in the fetters of love. (Amore vinctumque adtines.)
PLAUTUS, Bacchides, l. 180. (190 B. C.)
Love he that will; it best likes me
To have my neck from Loves yoke free.
ROBERT HERRICK, Of Love. (1648)
Where there is much love, there are usually but few freedoms. (Donde hay mucho amor no suele haber demasiada desenvoltura.)
CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 65. (1615)

5
Love, that all gentle hearts so quickly know.
(Amor, che al cor gentil ratto s' apprende.)
DANTE, Inferno. Canto v, l. 100. (c. 1300)
With a look his herte wex a-fire.
CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. i, l. 229. (c. 1380)
She lovede Right fro the firste sighte.
CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde, ii, 668.
None ever lov'd, but at first sight they lov'd.
GEORGE CHAPMAN, The Blind Beggar of Alexandria. (1598)
Where both deliberate the love is slight:
Who euer lov'd that lov'd not at first sight?
CHRISTOPHER MARLOWE, Hero and Leander. Sestiad i, l. 176. (1598)
Dead shepherd, now I find thy saw of might,
"Who ever loved that loved not at first sight?"
SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, iii, 5, 82. (1600)
At the first sight They have changed eyes.
SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, i, 2, 440. (1611)
The Latin phrase is, "Primo intuitu" (At the first glance).
Love not at the first look.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 28. (1639)
I saw and loved.
EDWARD GIBBON, Memoirs. Vol. i, p. 106. (a.1704)
Looking liked, and liking loved.
SCOTT, Marmion. Canto v, Intro., l. 78. (1808)
I begin to believe in love at first sight.
J. K. PAULDING, Bucktails. Act v, sc. 1. (1815)
Sometimes love has been implanted by a single glance.
BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 311. (1817)
Israel Zangwill is credited with, "The only true love is love at first sight; second sight dispels it."
The unqualified desire of a man to buy clothes and build fires for a woman for a whole lifetime at first sight of her is not uncommon.
O. HENRY, Past One at Rooney's. (1910)
This time he felt it was love at first sight.
CROFTS, Circumstantial Evidence, p. 4. (1941)
Name for quick romance: blisskrieg.
WALTER WINCHELL, Syndicated Column. (1941)
6
Two of a trade ne'er love.
THOMAS DEKKER, The Honest Whore. Act ii, sc. 4. (1604) See under TRADE.
The shortest ladies love the longest men.
BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Love's Cure. Act iii, sc. 3. (a. 1616)
The fairest ladies like the blackest men.
BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Love's Cure, iii, 4.
BLACK MEN ARE PEARLS, see under BLACK.
7
All for Love, and the World Well Lost.
JOHN DRYDEN. Title of play on the same theme as SHAKESPEARE's Antony and Cleopatra. (1678)
All for Love, or the World well lost.
SWIFT, Robin and Harry, l. 20. (1729)
Did you ever hear of Captain Wattle?
He was all for love, and a little for the bottle.
DIBDIN, Captain Wattle and Miss Roe. (1790)
All for love and the world well lost.
H. C. BAILEY, The Bishop's Crime, p.292. (1941)

<sup>1</sup> All love is lost but upon God alone.

WILLIAM DUNBAR, The Merle and the Nightingale. (c. 1500)

Not God above gets all Men's Love.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6105. (1732)

<sup>2</sup> True love kythes [shows itself] in time of need.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 98. (c. 1595) Cited by KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 326, who adds the Latin, "Amicus certus in re incerta cernitur" (The true friend is discerned in adversity). See under FRIENDS AND ADVERSITY.

<sup>3</sup> Who loves me, follows me! (Qui m'aime me suivre!)

FRANÇOIS I OF FRANCE, at the battle of Marignano, 13 Sept., 1515.

Let him that loves me follow me. (Qui me ayme si me fuyue.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 33. (1534)

If the ensigns fail you, rally to my white plume: you will always find it in the path of honor and victory!

HENRY IV OF FRANCE, at the battle of Ivry, 14 March, 1590.

Press where you see my white plume shine, amidst the ranks of war,

And be your oriflamme to-day the helmet of Navarre!

T. B. MACAULAY, Ivry. (1842)

<sup>4</sup> I love you well, but touch not my Pocket.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2618. (1732)

Love and Envy make a Man pine.

Love and Madness judge of Things much alike.

Love and Pride stock Bedlam.

Love is worst rather to ascend than descend.

Love me more, and honour me less.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. Nos. 3280-93.

<sup>5</sup> There is more Pleasure in loving, than in being beloved.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4900. (1732)

However, the Germans say, "Liebe ohne Gegenliebe ist wie eine Frage ohne Antwort" (Love without return is like a question without an answer).

<sup>6</sup> Where there is much Love, there is much Mistake.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5685. (1732)

Where there is no Love, all are Faults.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5676. (1732)

<sup>7</sup> Put off for a year or twa this calf love.

JOHN GALT, The Entail. Ch. 14. (1823)

Calf-love was making a fool of this unfledged fellow.

R. D. BLACKMORE, Cripps the Carrier. Ch. 33. (1876) There is a proverb, "Calf love, half love; old love, cold love."

<sup>8</sup> Rather love by the ear than like by the eye.

ROBERT GREENE, The Mirror of Modestie (1584) Works, iii, 10.

Love filleth not the hand with pelf but the eye with pleasure.

ROBERT GREENE, Farewell to Follie. (1587)

Love beginneth in gold and endeth in beggary.

ROBERT GREENE, Never Too Late. (1590)

<sup>9</sup> Far worse it is To lose than never to have tasted bliss. (Che mai Non v'avere ò provate, ò possedute.)

GIAMBATTISTA GUARINI, Pastor Fido. (1590)

Say what you will, 'tis better to be left, than never to have been lov'd.

CONGREVE, Way of the World. Act ii, sc. 1. (1700) Better to love amiss than nothing to have loved.

GEORGE CRABBE, Tales: The Struggles of Conscience, l. 46. (1812)

It is best to love wisely, no doubt; but to love foolishly is better than not to be able to love at all.

THACKERAY, Pendennis. Ch. 6. (1849)

I hold it true, whate'er befall;

I feel it, when I sorrow most;

'Tis better to have loved and lost

Than never to have loved at all.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. xxvii, st. 4. (1850)

Love well who will, love wise who can,

But love, be loved.

JOAQUIN MILLER, Walker in Nicaragua. Chant iii, st. 8. (1871)

'Tis better to have loved and lost than never to have lost at all.

SAMUEL BUTLER, The Way of All Flesh. Ch. 77. (1901) Frequently printed "loved at all."

<sup>10</sup> At the gate which suspicion commeth in, love goeth out.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 23. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Love is sweetest seasoned with suspect.

GEORGE CLIFFORD, To Cynthia. (1597)

<sup>11</sup> And be as joyful as thou can;

Love hath no joye of sorrowful man.

GUILLAUME DE LORRIS, Roman de la Rose, (c. 1240) Chaucer (?), tr., l. 2287. (c. 1365)

Ay be as merry as he can,

For love ne'er delights in a sorrowful man.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 55. (1678)

<sup>12</sup> Thou shalt no whyl be in oo stat,

But whylom cold and whylom hat;

Now reed as rose, now yelow and fade.

Such sorowe, I trowe, thou never hade;

Cotidien, ne [yit] quarteyne [quartan ague]

It is nat so ful of peyne.

GUILLAUME DE LORRIS, Roman de la Rose, (c. 1240) Chaucer (?), tr., l. 2397. (c. 1365)

His hote love was cold and al y-queynt [quenched].

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Miller's Tale, l. 668. (c. 1386)

Hot loue is sone cold.

RICHARD WHITFORD, Werke for Housholders, sig. D7. (1537) Cited by Heywood, Lyly, Ray, Fuller, and many others. The Scots say, "Love ower het soon cools."

Where loue had apeered in him to hir alway
Hotte as a toaste, it grew cold as a kay.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 1. (1546)

Gay love, God save it: so soon hot, so soon cold.

NICOLAS UDALL, Roister Doister, iv, 8. (a. 1553)

Thys proverbe olde:

Hastye love is soone hot and soone cold.

UNKNOWN, Wyt and Science, l. 645. (c. 1570)

Such hot loue, such colde desire.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 80. (1579)

Loue that's soon'st hot, is euer soon'st cold.

GEORGE WITHER, Fidelia, l. 4. (1617)

Love in extreames can never long endure.

ROBERT HERRICK, A Caution. (1648)

The love that's too violent will not last long.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 163. (1721)

1
It is better to love two too many than one too few.

SIR JOHN HARINGTON, Epigrams. (c. 1612)

2
It is an ancient story Yet is it ever new. (Es ist eine alte Geschichte, Doch bleibt sie immer neu.)

HEINRICH HEINE, Lyrisches Intermezzo. (1827)

3
The prouerbe sayis "als gude luif cummis as gais." [As good love comes as goes.]

ROBERT HENRYSON, The Morall Fabillis of Esope. Fab. 3. (c. 1470)

4
Love is not found in the market.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 403. (1640)

There is no heat of affection but is joined with some idleness of brain, says the Spaniard.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1048

Love without end, hath no end, says the Spaniard.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1151.

5
An old said sawe, . . . "Wher is lytill love ther is lytill tryste."

RICHARD HILLS, Common-place Book, p. 17.
(c. 1530) "Little love, little trust" is the usual form.

6
They who love most are least set by.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 12. (1659)

Those, Mr. Belford, who most love, are least set by.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Clarissa, iv, 119. (1748)

7
Love endureth all things. (Caritas omnia sustinet.)

ST. JEROME (HIERONYMUS), Letters. Lett. vii,
sec. 4. (A. D. 374)

8
The shepherd in Virgil grew at last acquainted with Love, and found him a native of the rocks.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letter to Lord Chesterfield.
(7 Feb., 1755)

9
There is only one kind of love, but there are a thousand imitations. (Il n'y a que d'une sorte d'amour, mais il y en a mille différentes copies.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 74. (1665)

In the pursuit of women nothing plays a smaller part than love. (Ce qui se trouve le moins dans le galanterie, c'est de l'amour.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 402.

Of all violent passions love is the least unbecoming to women. (De toutes les passions violentes, celle qui sied le moins mal aux femmes, c'est l'amour.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 466.

10
It is not so difficult to avoid capture by the snares of love, as, after you are caught, to break through the strong knots of Venus.
(Validos Veneris perrumpere nodos.)

LUCRETIVS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. iv, l. 1148.
(c. 45 B. C.)

11
A wit without loue, is an Egge with-out salte.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 326. (1580)

Loue followeth a good wit, as the Shadowe doth the body.

LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 326.

12
Love does not brook neglect. (οὐδεὶς γὰρ ἀγαπῶν αὐτὸς ἀμελεῖθ' ἤδέως.)

MENANDER, Fragments. KOCK, iii, 213. (c. 300
B. C.) PLUTARCH, Moralia, 95D, 491C.

13
For loue hath no lake [lack].

JOHN MIRKUS, Mirk's Festival, p. 165. (c. 1400)

One shewth me openly in loue is no lacke.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 4. (1546)

LYLY, Mother Bombie, i, 3. (1592) CAMDEN,
Remains, p. 308. (1605) RAY, Proverbs, p.
117. (1670)

Where love is, there's no lack.

RICHARD BROME, Joviall Crew. Act iii. (1641)

Love has no lack, if the dame was ne'er so black.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 240. (1721)

14
Love is no longer love when it is without arrows and without fire. (Ce n'est plus amour, s'il est sans fleches et sans feu.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5. (1595)

15
There is no more love lost betwixt them then betwixt saylers and land souldiers.

THOMAS NASHE, Lenten Stufe. (1599) An ambiguous phrase, with two meanings, "their affection is mutual," and "they have no love for each other." Its modern use is always with the latter meaning.

There shall be no love lost, sir, I'll assure you.

BEN JONSON, Every Man Out of His Humour.
Act ii, sc. 1. (1599)

There's no great love lost 'twixt them and me,
We keepe asunder and so best agree.

TAYLOR, Traveller's Twelve-pence. (c. 1622)

Oh my sweete!

Sure there is no loue lost when you two meete.

ROBERT DAVENPORT, Works (1890), p. 327. (c.
1640)

No-love between these two was lost,

Each was to other kind.

UNKNOWN, The Children in the Wood. (c.
1650) See PERCY, Reliques, iiii, 172.

I love him well, and there's no love lost between us.

PETER MOTTEUX, tr., Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 33. (1706)

I have a friendship for you . . . and I can assure thee, child (said I), there is no love lost.

TOBIAS SMOLLETT, tr., Gil Blas (1797). Bk. iii, p. 233. (1749) The meaning here is especially clear because the French phrase is "que tu n'aimes pas un ingrat" (that you don't love an ingrate).

We grumble a little now and then, to be sure. But there's no love lost between us.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, She Stoops to Conquer. Act iv. (1773)

There was not a great deal of love lost between Will and his half-sister.

THACKERAY, The Virginians. Ch. 17. (1858) The modern usage.

Americans do not like these people and I believe there is no love lost on the other side.

WILLIAM DEAN HOWELLS, Venetian Life, p. 121. (1866)

With eyes becomingly cast down, look into your lap, and value each lover according to the gifts he brings. (Quantum quisque ferat, respiciendus erit.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. 8, l. 38. (c. 13 B.C.) Wanton love is fed on riches. (Divitiis alitur luxuriosus amor.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 746. (c. 1 B.C.) The chains of love are never so binding as when the links are made of gold.

ROYALL TYLER, The Contrast. Act ii. (1787) Alas! for the love that's linked with gold.

THOMAS HOOD, Miss Kilmansegg: Her Courtship. (c. 1845)

It's just as easy to love a wealthy man as a poor one. And it is a lot easier to marry him.

FRANK GRUBER, Simon Lash, p. 189. (1941)

Let a man who does not wish to become slothful, fall in love. (Qui nolet fieri desidiosus, amet.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. 9, l. 46. (c. 13 B.C.)

Reminiscent of this is Mr. Weller's advice on how to escape one of the consequences of slothfulness, namely, gout: "Marry a vidder, Sammy." See under GOUT.

Fat over-powerful love doth loathsome grow, As fulsome sweet-meats stomackes overthrow. (Pinguis amor nimiumque patens in taedia nobis | vertitur et, stomacho dulcis ut esca, nocet.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. ii, eleg. 19, l. 25. (c. 13 B.C.)

Quoted by MONTAIGNE, i, 42. The translation is Florio's.

A credulous thing is love. (Credula res amor est.)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. vi, l. 21. (c. 10 B.C.) Repeated in Metamorphoses, vii, 826.

We are easily duped by what we love. (On est aisément dupé par ce qu'on aime.)

MOLIÈRE, Le Tartuffe. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 82. (1664)

Majesty and love do not go well together, nor tarry long in the same dwelling. (Non bene conveniunt nec in una sede morantur | maiestas et amor.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. ii, l. 846. (A.D. 7) Love and lordship never keep company. (Amour et seigneurie ne se tiendront jamais compagnie.)

GUILLAUME DE LORRIS, Roman de la Rose, l. 8487. (c. 1240) The Italians say, "Amor e signoria non voglion compagnia."

O Cupide, out of alle charitee!

O regne, that wolt no felawe have with thee!

Ful sooth is seyed, that love ne lordshipe

Wol noght, his thankes, have no felaweshipe

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Knights Tale, l. 765. (c. 1386)

Love wol nat ben constreyned by maistrye;

Whan maistrye comth, the god of love anon

Beteth hise winges, and farewell! he is gon!

CHAUCER, The Frankeleyns Tale, l. 36.

Vnto purpos was saide ful yore agon,

How that loue nouthur hih lordshippe . . .

Nowther of hem wolde haue no felawshipe.

JOHN LYDGATE, Fall of Princes. Bk. vi, l. 221. (c. 1440)

Loue ne lordshypp wol no feloshypp. (Non bene cum lociis regna Venusque manent.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. vii. (1508)

TAVERNER, tr., fo. 65. (1550) Taverner adds: "The nature of man or woman is suche, that lyke as he or she can nat abyde any other to loue the same person that he or she loueth. So also he can not well indure in his herte, an other to be joyned with hym in imperie or gouernaunce."

Two things can suffer no equalitie, that is, Loue and principalitie. (Due cose non possono patir equalita, cive amor, & principalita.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 23. (1578) The proverb in slightly different form appears in FRANCESCO BERNIA, Orlando Innamorato (1541): "Che compagnia non vuole amor nè stato." FLORIO, fo. 33, gives still another form, "Ne amor, ne signoria, vuol compagnia," which he renders, "Neither love nor friendship wyl haue company." The Germans say, "Herrschaft und Liebschaft dulden keine Gemeinschaft" (Lordship and love do not permit fellowship).

Ne may love be compeld by maistry;

For soon as maistry comes, sweet Love anone Taketh his nimble winges, and soone away is gone.

EDMUND SPENSER, The Faery Queene. Bk. iii, canto i, st. 25. (1590) Evidently an echo of the lines from Chaucer given above.

Either algates [always] would be lord alone:

For love and lordship bide no paragone.

SPENSER, Mother Hubberds Tale, l. 1025. (1591) Love and lordship like no fellowship.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 27. (1639)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 46. (1670) Ray cites both Italian and French forms, with slight variations, and adds, "The meaning of our English proverb is, Lovers and Princes cannot endure rivals or partners." See also under RIVALRY.

Love, and ambition (I have heard men say) admit no fellowship.

RICHARD BROME, The Love-Sick Court. Act i, sc. 2. (1659)

Love and lordship like no marrows [partners].

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 242. (1721)
Love never desires a Partner.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3294. (1732)
Love and lordship never like fellowship.

NATHAN BAILEY, Dictionary: Love. (1736)
Love and Lordship hate companions.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1737.

1 He who protests overmuch to many, "I do not love," is in love. (Qui nimium multis, "non amo," dicit, amat.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 648. (c. 1 B.C.)
Not those that say nothing, but they that kicke oftenest against loue, are euer in loue.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 267. (1580)

2 Love despised has strength. (Contemptus amor vires habet.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 108. (c. A.D. 60)

3 By force of love I had wooed you, & were worthy to weare you.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 16. (1576)

4 Neither doth love learn of force the knots to knit, she serves but those which feelee sweet fancies fit.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 94. (1576)
Thou hast not love in a string, affection is not thy slaue.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 319. (1580)

I will not command love, for it cannot be enforced: let me entreat it.

LYLY, Endymion. Act v, sc. 3. (1591)

What is wedlock forced but a hell?

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry VI, v, 5, 62. (1597)

You must consider that Amor cogi non potest, love cannot be compelled.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. ii, mem. v, subs. 5. (1621)

Fann'd fire and forc'd love never did well yet. . . . Both flames burn brightest when they come freely.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 108. (1721)
There's an old byword, "Fanned fires and forced love ne'er did weel," and some people will maybe not crack quite so crouse by and by.

SUSAN FERRIER, The Inheritance. Ch. 34. (1824)

The Dutch say, "Gedwongen liefde vergaat haast" (Love that is forced does not last).

5 Love hath no respecte of persons.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 140. (1576)
Reminiscent of Acts, x, 34, "God is no respecter of persons." See under God.

6 Women may not first make love.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 154. (1576)

A Phrase now there is which belongeth to your Shoppe boorde, that is, to make loue.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 290. (1579)

In Roger Ascham's Scholemaster (1563), travellers returned from Italy are described as "the greatest makers of love" [Italian, far l'amore; French, faire l'amour]. Pettie evidently liked the phrase and helped to introduce it into English. Lyly gave it a helping hand three years later.

Demetrius . . . made love to Nedar's daughter.
SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream, i, 1, 107. (1596)

Oh, there's nothing in life like making love!

THOMAS HOOD, Poems (1846), i, 213. (a. 1845)
The Americans, like the English, probably make love worse than any other race.

WALT WHITMAN, An American Primer. (c. 1856)

7 Just as the wolf loves the lamb, so the lover adores his beloved. (ὡς λύκοι ἀρνὶ ἀγαπῶσ', ὡς παῖδα φιλοῦσιν ἐρασταί.)

PLATO, Phaedrus. Sec. 241D. (c. 385 B.C.)

Quoted as a proverb. Plato is arguing that the fondness of the lover is not a matter of good will but of appetite.

I love thee like pudding, if thou wert pie I'd eat thee.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 349. (1678)

I love you so that I could eat ye.

SAMUEL WESLEY, Maggots, p. 24. (1685)

I love him like pie; I rather the devil had him than I.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

8 Spice a dish with love and it pleases every palate. (Ubi amor condimentum inerit, cuius placitum escam.)

PLAUTUS, Casina, l. 221. (c. 200 B.C.)

In the cuisine of love there are flavors for all tastes.

JAMES HUNEKER, Painted Veils, p. 140. (1920)

9 To love is human; to be indulgent is human, too. (Humanum amare; humanum autem ignoscere.)

PLAUTUS, Mercator, l. 320. (c. 200 B.C.) To FORGIVE DIVINE, see under FORGIVENESS.

10 Worse than hatred is pretence of love. (Peior odio amoris simulatio.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Panegyricus. Sec. 85. (A.D. 100)

11 Love, like ivy, is clever in attaching itself to any support. (θεῖνός γάρ ἐστιν ὁ ἔρως ὥσπερ κίττος αὐτὸν ἐκ πάσης ἀναδῆσαι προφάσεως.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: On Listening to Lectures, 45A. (c. A.D. 95) THE CLINGING VINE, see under VINE.

12 Love that comes late oft claims a heavy toll. (Saepe venit magno faenore tardus Amor.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. i, eleg. vii, l. 26. (c. 26 B.C.)

Love is like the measles—all the worse when it comes late in life.

DOUGLAS JERROLD, Wit and Opinions, p. 6. (1850)

<sup>1</sup> Love will not yield to all the might of wealth. (Nescit Amor magnis cedere divitiis.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. i, eleg. xiv, l. 8. (c. 26 B. C.) "Because," Propertius adds, "when Cynthia lies with me by night or spends the day in kindly love, the waters of Pactolus bring their wealth beneath my roof, and the Red Sea's gems are gathered for my delight."

<sup>2</sup> While the Fates grant it, let us sate our eyes with love. (Dum nos fata sinunt, oculos satiemus amore.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. ii, eleg. 15. l. 23. (c. 24 B. C.)

While we may, let us love and be merry together. (Dum licet, inter nos laetetur amantes.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies, i, 19, 25.

Let love have his way. (Vincat amor.)

CLAUDIAN, Epigrams. No. 61, l. 8. (c. A. D. 400)

Love while you are able to love. (O lieb, so lang du lieben kannst.)

FERDINAND FREILIGRATH, Der Liebe Dauer. (1830)

EAT, DRINK AND BE MERRY, see under EATING.

<sup>3</sup> Love begins but does not end at will. (Amor animi arbitrio sumitur, non ponitur.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 5. (c. 43 B. C.)

A man has choice to begin love, but not to end it.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 294. (1855) "Choose your love and then love your choice" is another proverb.

To love is to choose. (Aimer c'est choisir.)

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest Pt. ix, No. 1. (c. 1870)

<sup>4</sup> Love cannot be wrested from one, but may slip away. (Amor extorqueri non pote, elabi potest.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 18. (c. 43 B. C.)

Love creepeth in by stealth, and by stealth slideth away.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 117. (1579)

<sup>5</sup> To love is the young man's joy, the old man's shame. (Amare iuveni fructus est, crimen seni.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 29. (c. 43 B. C.)

Love they say is in young Gentlemen, in clowns it is lust, in old men dotage, when it is in al menne madnesse.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 304. (1580) See also AGE AND LOVE.

<sup>6</sup> The wound of love is cured by the one who causes it. (Amoris vulnus idem sanat qui facit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 31. (c. 43 B. C.) The shorter Latin proverb is, "Amoris vulnus idem sanat" (Love cures every wound it makes).

There is none that can better heale your wound than he that made it.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 296. (1580)

<sup>7</sup> Love begets worry in the hour of leisure. (Amor otiosae causa est sollicitudinis.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 34. (c. 43 B. C.)

<sup>8</sup> Compliment, not command, makes love sweet. (Blanditis non imperio fit dulcis venus.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 69. (c. 43 B. C.)

O, flatter me, for love delights in praises.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona, ii, 4, 148. See also under WOOING.

Love delights in praise.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 446. (1855)

<sup>9</sup> In love, beauty counts for more than reputation. (In amore forma plus valet quam auctoritas.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 307. (c. 43 B. C.)

In love, an opportunity for suffering is often sought. (In amore saepe causa damni quaeritur.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 312. The meaning possibly is that lovers, in their folly, are continually devising things that do them harm instead of good.

In love folly is always sweet. (In venere semper dulcis est dementia.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 314.

If one can transfer love, one can put it aside (Qui pote transferre amorem pote deponere.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 586.

Rare should be that which you long hold dear. (Rarum esse oportet quod diu carum velis.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 630.

<sup>10</sup> Whatever anyone loves he commends to himself by praising it. (Quod quisque amat laudando commendat sibi.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 608. (c. 43 B. C.)

He who loves a thing is always talking about it.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 677. (1817)

<sup>11</sup> Love needs no teaching.

SIR WALTER RALEGH, Remains, p. 35. (a. 1618)

<sup>12</sup> Love asks faith, and faith asks firmness.

Love is the touchstone of Virtue.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 13. (1678)

<sup>13</sup> Love and pease-pottage will make their way. Because one breaks the belly, the other the heart.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 47. (1670)

You know the old proverb, that sad are the effects of love and pease porridge.

HEAD AND KIRKMAN, The English Rogue. Pt. iii, l. 176. (1671)

Love, and raw pease, are two ill things, the one breaks the heart, and the other bursts the belly.

KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 231. (1721)

Love and Pease will make a Man speak at both Ends.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3283. (1732)

Love and pease-porridge are two dangerous things; one breaks the heart, and the other the belly.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

- 1 She lives by love and lumps in corners.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 75. (1678)
Miss lives upon love.—Yes, upon love and lumps of the cupboard.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)
- 2 Luv has nae luck, be the dame e'er sae black.
JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 249. (1678)
LUCKY AT CARDS, UNLUCKY IN LOVE, see LUCK.
- 3 Nothing grows again more easily than love.
(Nihil enim facilius quam amor recrudescit.)
SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lxi, sec. 3. (a. a. d. 64)
Love, like Reputation, once fled, never returns.
APRHA BEHN, History of the Nun. (a. 1696)
Love, like Ulysses, is a wanderer, . . .
Unlike Ulysses, love is unreturning.
ROSSELLE M. MONTGOMERY, Counsel. (c. 1930)
- 4 His great love, sharp as his spur, hath help him
To his home before us.
SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, i, 6, 22. (1606)
He that hath love in his breast, hath spurs in his sides.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 428. (1640) An Italian proverb, "Chi ha l'amor nel petto, ha lo sprone a' financhi." It is cited by TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 120, who quotes a number of others, "Amor regge senza legge" (Love rules without law); "Amor regge il suo regno senza spada" (Love rules his kingdom without a sword); "Amor non conosce travaglio" (Love knows nothing of labor); "Di tutte le arti maestro è amore" (Love is the master of all arts).
He that hath Love in his Breast, hath Spurs at his Heels.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2160. (1732)
- 5 He was more than over shoes in love.
SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona, i, 1, 24. (1594)
Over head and ears in love.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738) See under HEAD.
- 6 I should have scratch'd out your unseeing eyes,
To make my master out of love with thee.
SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona, iv, 4, 210. (1594)
I am so out of love with life.
SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, iii, 1, 174. (1604)
What's the matter, that you are so out of love with the world?
DEFOE, Religious Courtship. Bk. i, ch. 1. (1722)
- 7 I'll confer at large
Of all that may concern thy love-affairs.
SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona, iii, 1, 254. (1594)
I think you are aware that you have got a love-affair on hand.
ANTHONY TROLLOPE, The Last Chronicle of Barset. Bk. i, ch. 25. (1867)

- 8 Were beauty under twenty locks kept fast,
Yet love breaks through and picks them all at last.
SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 575. (1593)
Stony limits cannot hold love out.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, ii, 2, 66. (1595)
Love Laughs at Locksmiths.
GEORGE COLMAN, JR. Title of comedy. (1803)
The French say, "L'amour force toutes les serrures" (Love forces all locks).
Dorothy [Vernon] was . . . kept almost a prisoner. . . . Love, however, laughs at locksmiths.
EDWARD WALFORD, Tales of Our Great Families, p. 261. (1877)
We know how Love treats locksmiths.
E. V. LUCAS, Advisory Ben. p. 4. (1923)
- 9 Love sought is good, but given unsought is better.
SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, iii, 1, 168. (1599)
- 10 Love will not be drawne, but must be ledde.
EDMUND SPENSER, Colin Clout, l. 129. (1591)
- 11 I suppose the Colonel was cross'd in his first love.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)
One always returns to one's first loves. (On revient toujours | A ses premières amours.)
CHARLES ÉTIENNE, La Joconde. Act iii, sc. 1. (1814)
Men always want to be a woman's first love. That is their clumsy vanity. We women have a more subtle instinct about things. What we like is to be a man's last romance.
OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance. Act ii. (1893)
First love is only a little foolishness and a lot of curiosity.
SHAW, John Bull's Other Island. Act iv. (1905)
Those whom we first love we seldom wed.
O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), No Story. (1909)
- 12 Love better is than Fame.
BAYARD TAYLOR, To J. L. G. (1860)
A caress is better than a career.
ELISABETH MARBURY, Interview on Careers for Women. (1930)
- 13 Those who love fashion their own dreams.
(Qui amant, ipsi sibi somnia fingunt.)
VERGIL, Eclagues. No. viii, l. 108. (37 B. C.)
- 14 Love is the same in everyone. (Amor omnibus idem.)
VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. iii, l. 244. (29 B. C.)
Seas have their source, and so have shallow springs;
And love is love in beggars and in kings.
SIR EDWARD DYER, The Lowest Trees Have Tops. (a. 1607)
- 15 Love stoops as fondly as he soars.
WORDSWORTH, On Seeing a Needle Case in the Form of a Harp. (c. 1825)
Such ever was love's way: to rise, it stoops.
ROBERT BROWNING, A Death in the Desert

1
Ne for feo, ne for nane mannes lufon.
[Neither for fee, nor for any man's love.]

UNKNOWN, Blicking Homilies, p. 43. (971)
Pur amy ne pur dener Ray ne dait esparnier.
[For love nor for pence, a King ought not to spare.]

WRIGHT, ed., Political Songs, p. 302. (c. 1310)
Neuer leue hem for loue ne for lacchyng of syluer.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. Text B, passus i, l. 101. (1377)

Then should not men eyther for loue or money haue pardons.

C. S., A Brieft Resolution of a Right Religion, p. 18. (1590)

Neither for loue nor money will they worke.

UNKNOWN, Pedlars Prophecie, l. 578. (1595)

If it were to be had For love or money.

THOMAS SHADWELL, The Royal Shepherdess: Prologue. (1669)

No more ghosts now for love or money.

SWIFT, Journal to Stella, 7 Aug., 1712.

There was no room to be had for love or money.

MARIA EDGEWORTH, Castle Rackrent, p. 13. (1801)

You shall never get that out of me for love or money.

BERNARD SHAW, Arms and the Man. Act ii. (1894) Also Pygmalion. Act i. (1912)

2
Love requires daring. (Amors demande hardiment.)

UNKNOWN, De Guillaume au Faucon, l. 271. (c. 1250) See MONTAIGLON, Recueil des Fabliaux, ii, 100.

Love requires Boldness, and scorns Bashfulness.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3296. (1732)

3
Kynde crepus ther hit may no go.

UNKNOWN, Douce MS (Förster, ed.), 52. (c. 1350)

I trow, kynde will crepe where it may not go.

UNKNOWN, The Towneley Mysteries: Second Shepherd Play, 591. (1460) Everyman, l. 316. (c. 1500)

Blood must krepo where it can not goo.

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., Renart the Foxe (Arber), p. 70. (1481)

Men saie, kinde will creepe where it maie not go.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

He . . . rode in poste to his kinsman . . . verefying the old proverbe kynne will crepe where it maie not go.

EDWARD HALL, Chronicle, fo. 190. (1548)

You know that love

Will creep in service where it cannot go.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona, iv, 2, 19. (1594)

Kindnesse will creep where it may not gang.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 70. (c. 1595)

CAMDEN, Remains, p. 327. (1605)

They say loue creepeth where it cannot go.

SAMUEL ROWLANDS, 'Tis Merrie When Gossips Meet, p. 20. (1602)

Love will creep where it cannot go.

UNKNOWN, Wily Beguiled, l. 2445. (c. 1625)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3301. (1732)

Thy thoughts are swift, although thy legs be slow;

True love will creep, not having strength to go.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblemes, iv, iii, 3. (1635)

Love will creep where it dare not go.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

Lean upon me, my dear, and creep: love will creep, they say, where it cannot go.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Sir Charles Grandison. Bk. ii, ch. 16. (1753)

Kindness creeps where it canna gang prettily expresses that where love can do little, it will do that little though it cannot do more.

DEAN EDWARD B. RAMSAY, Reminiscences, v, 203. (1857)

4
A fyre of sponys [shavings] and lowe of gromis

Full soun wol be att an ende.

UNKNOWN, Good Wyf Wold a Pylgrymage, l. 83. (c. 1460)

Love of lads, and fire of chats [chips], is soon in and soon out.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 46. (1670)

Lads' love's a busk of broom, hot awhile and soon done.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 46.

Lads' love is lassies' delight,

And if lads don't love, lassies will flite [scold].

CARR, Dialect of Craven, i, 273. (1828)

5
I love thee more than all the earth.

UNKNOWN, Laments of Isis and Nephthys, l. 26. (c. 700 B.C.) Dennis, tr.

Love for Jason thrilled her very soul. (ἔρωτι θυμὸν ἐκπλαγεῖσ' Ἰάσωνος.)

EURIPIDES, Medea, l. 8. (c. 431 B.C.) CICERO, Ad Herrenium, ii, 22, gives the Latin phrase, "Medea amore saevo saucia" (Medea wounded by savage love).

Thou wast my only one. (Tu mihi solus eras.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 464. (c. 1 B.C.)

My dearest and nearest. (Carissimi et familiarissimi mei.)

ST. AUGUSTINE, Epistles. Epis. cx, sec. 6. (A.D. 409)

He loueth hir better at the sole of the foote

Than euer he loued me at the hert roote.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

She loves the ground you tread on.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Scornful Lady. Act v, sc. 1. (c. 1612)

Whom I love better than my eyelashes. (Quien quiere más que a las pestañas de mis ojos.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 70. (1615)

Better than the apple of my eye.

I love his little finger more than thy whole body.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 15. (1659)

Every day I love you more, today more than yesterday and much less than tomorrow. (Car vois-tu chaque jour je t'aime davantage, Aujourd'hui plus que hier et bien moins que demain.)

ROSEMONDE GERARD, (MME. EDMOND ROSTAND), L'Éternelle Chanson. (c. 1920)

6
Tomorrow shall be love for the loveless, and for the lover tomorrow shall be love. (Cras amet qui nunquam amavit quique amavit cras amet.)

UNKNOWN, Pervigilium Veneris. l. 1, and refrain of each of the twenty-one succeeding stanzas. (c. A.D. 350) J. W. Mackail, tr. Pervigilium Veneris, The Eve of St. Venus, "the earliest known poem belonging in spirit to the Middle Ages," as Mr. Mackail calls it. Let those love now, who never lov'd before; Let those who always lov'd, now love the more.

THOMAS PARNELL, Pervigilium Veneris; ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy, iii, ii, 5, 5; ARTHUR MURPHY, Know Your Own Mind, iii, 1.

NO LOVE WITHOUT JEALOUSY, see under JEALOUSY. PITY IS AKIN TO LOVE, see under PITY.

III—Love: Its Cause

1 A sweet and innocent compliance is the cement of love.

HENRY G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 301. (1855)

Congruity is the mother of love.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 338.

2 There are many people who would never have been in love if they had never heard love spoken of. (Il y a des gens qui n'auraient jamais été amoureux, s'ils n'avaient jamais entendu parler de l'amour.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 136. (1665) "Talking of love is making it."

To love but little is in love an infallible means of being beloved. (N'aimer guère en amour est un moyen assuré pour être aimé.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Supprimées. No. 636.

3 Habit causes love. (Consuetudo concinnat amorem.)

LUCRETIUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. iv, l. 1283. (c. 45 B.C.)

By habit love enters the mind; by habit is love unlearn't. (Intrat amor mentes usu, dediscitur usu.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 503. (c. 1 B.C.)

4 There is one genuine love-philtre—considerate dealing. By this the woman is able to sway her man. (ἐν ἑστ' ἀληθὲς φίλτρον, ἐγγνώμων τρόπος, | τοῦτω κατακρατεῖν ἀνδρὸς εἰσθεν γυνή.)

MENANDER, Fragments. Frag. 646 K. (c. 300 B.C.)

5 Love must be fostered with soft words. (Dulcibus est verbis mollis alendus amor.)

OVID, Artis Amatoria. Bk. ii, l. 152. (c. 1 B.C.)

6 A wall between preserves love.

SAMUEL PALMER, Moral Essays on Proverbs. (1710)

7 I think love chiefly to be grounded upon the similitude of manners.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace: Icilius and Virginia, p. 103. (1576)

8 Love, like a tear, rises in the eye and falls upon the breast. (Amor ut lacrima ab oculo oritur in pectus cadit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 39. (c. 43 B.C.) The eyes start love: intimacy perfects it. (Oculi amorem incipiunt, consuetudo perficit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 497. From looking love is born to men. (ἐκ τοῦ εἰσορᾶν γὰρ γίγνεται ἀνθρώποις ἐρᾶν.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. ii, No. 79. (1508)

Erasmus gives the Latin, "Amor ex videndo nascitur mortalibus," and then the proverbial form, "Ex aspectu nascitur amor" (Loving comes from looking), of which the Greek is, ἐκ τοῦ ὁρᾶν γίγνεται τὸ ἐρᾶν.

Ye deadly poyson of love first enter'd in at my eies.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 221. (1576)

On p. 243 (Hartman ed.), this is varied to, "Love first entreth in at the eyes, and from thence discendeth to the hart."

She must needs fire some . . . according to the olde prouerbe, ex visu amor.

JOHN NORTHBROOKE, Dicing Reproved, p. 89.

(c. 1577) A similar Latin proverb is, "Ubi amor, ibi oculus" (Where love is, there the eye wanders).

Loue commeth in at the eye, not at the eare.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 279. (1580)

Loue breedeth by nothing sooner than lookes

LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 409.

To hear with eyes belongs to love's fine wit.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. xxiii. (1609)

Loving comes by looking.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 28. (1639)

9 A man falls in love just as he falls down stairs. It is an accident. . . . But when he runs in love it is as when he runs in debt; it is done knowingly and intentionally. . . . Both are common enough; and yet less so than what I shall call catching love.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, The Doctor. Ch. 53. (1812)

10 The less my hope the hotter my love. (Quanto minus spei est tanto magis amo.)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 1053. (161 B.C.)

IV—Love: Its Cure

11 Love's checked by hunger; failing that, by time;

And if you cannot wait, a running noose.

(Ἐρωτα παθεῖ λιμὸς, εἰ δὲ μή, χρόνος· ἐὰν δὲ τούτοις μὴ δύνῃ χρῆσθαι, βρόχος.)

CRATES, Epigram. (c. 325 B.C.) See DIOGENES

LAERTIUS, Crates, vi, 86. Cited in a longer form, in the Greek Anthology, bk. ix, epig. 497. Quoted by MONTAIGNE, Essays, bk. ii, ch. 12, "L'amour se guarissoit par le faim, sinon par le temps; et, à qui ces deux moyens ne plairoient, par la hart."

Time, not the mind, puts an end to love. (Amori finem tempus, non animus, facit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 42. (c. 43

B. C.) The French say, "L'amour fait passer le temps—le temps fait passer l'amour" (Love makes time pass; time makes love pass).

<sup>1</sup> In love, first cured is best cured. (En amour, celui qui est guéri le premier est toujours le mieux guéri.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 417. (1665) There are various cures for love, but none is infallible. (Il y a plusieurs remèdes qui guérissent de l'amour, mais il n'y en a point d'infaillible.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 459. Love and Tooth-ach have many cures, but none infallible, except Possession and Dispossession.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1751

<sup>2</sup> The best charme for Loue, to weare it out.

LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 347. (1580)

<sup>3</sup> Alas, wretched me, that love may not be cured by herbs! (Me miserum, quod amor non est medicabilis herbis!)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. v, l. 149. (c. 10 B. C.)

Ah me! love can not be cured by herbs. (Ei mihi! quod nullis amor est sanabilis herbis.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. i, l. 523. (A. D. 7)

Nae herb will cure love.

HENDERSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 40. (1832)

<sup>4</sup> Take away leisure and Cupid's bow is broken; (Otia si tollas, periere Cupidinis arcus.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 139. (c. 1 B. C.)

In love, the only victory is flight. (En amour, la seule victoire, c'est la fuite.)

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Epigram. (c. 1810) See GUILLON, Napoléon, p. 299.

<sup>5</sup> Go away, go far; compel your unwilling feet to run. Count not the days, nor be ever looking back at Rome; but flee. (Tempora nec numera, nec crebro respice Romam, sed fuge.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 213. (c. 1 B. C.)

Only they Conquer love, that run away.

THOMAS CAREW, Conquest by Flight. (a. 1639)

In Love's Wars, he who flyeth is Conqueror.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2819. (1732)

<sup>6</sup> There's no medicine for love, neither salve nor plaster. (οὐδὲν ποτὶν ἔρωτα πεφύκει φάρμακον ἄλλο | οὐτ' ἔχριστον.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. No. xi, l. 1. (c. 270 B. C.)

Theocritus uses a similar phrase in xiv, 52. Medicine cures all human ills: love alone loves no physician of its ill. (Omnes humanos sanat medicina dolores: | solus amor morbi non amat artificem.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. ii, eleg. i, l. 57. (c. 24 B. C.)

Love wol love, for nothing wil it wonde [cease].

CHAUCER, Legend of Good Women, l. 1187. (c. 1386)

O ye Gods, haue ye ordeyned for euery malady a medicine, for euery sore a salve, for euery paine a playster, leauing onely loue remedlesse?

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 61 (1579)

Where love's in the case, the doctor's an ass.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, tr., Quevedo's Visions, iii. (1667) Cited by RAY; DEFOE, Moll Flanders.

Love's a malady without a cure.

DRYDEN, Palamon and Arcite, ii, 110. (1700)

Love, the sole disease thou canst not cure.

POPE, Pastorals: Summer, l. 12. (1704)

V—Love: Its Power

<sup>7</sup> No cord nor cable can so forcibly draw, or hold so fast, as love can do with a twined thread.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt iii, sec. 2, mem. 1, subs. 2. (1621)

See also BEAUTY: DRAWS WITH A SINGLE HAIR

<sup>8</sup> The god of love, a! benedicite,

How mighty and how greet a lord is he!

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Knights Tale, l. 927. (c. 1386)

It hath and shal be evermore

That Love is maister where he will.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. i, l. 34.

(1390) The Italians say, "Di tutte le arti maestro è amore" (Of all the arts love is master).

Love is above King or Kaiser, lord or laws.

ROBERT GREENE, Works, ii, 122. (1583)

<sup>9</sup> Love that moves the sun and the other stars. (L' amor che move il sole e l' altre stelle.)

DANTE, Paradiso. Canto xxxiii, l. 145. (c. 1300) The last line of the Paradiso.

<sup>10</sup> Thus loue you see, can find a way
To make both men and maids obey.

THOMAS DELONEY, The Gentle Craft. Ch. 15. (c. 1597)

Love Will Find Out the Way.

THOMAS BAYLY. Title of play. (c. 1650)

Love and money will find or force a passage.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies, ii, 227. (1662)

Over the mountains, And over the waves, . . .

Love will find out the way.

UNKNOWN, Love Will Find Out the Way. In

PERCY, Reliques. Ser. iii, bk. iii, No. 3. Percy says the song is ancient, but gives no date

Love will find its way

Through paths where wolves would fear to prey
LORD BYRON, The Giaour, l. 1047. (1813)

<sup>11</sup> There's a saying, 'Love levels all ranks,' you know.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), Best-Seller. (1909)

The proverb is, "Love makes all men equal."

The Italians say, "Amor tutti eguaglia," the Spanish, "El amor iguala todas las cosas."

<sup>12</sup> Love rules his kingdom without a sword.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 543

(1640) TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 9.

(1666) The Italians say, "Amor regge il suo regno senza spada." The English have made a jingle of it, "Love rules without a sword; | Love binds without a cord."

What a pretty proverb that was, . . . "Love rules his kingdom without a sword."

MARIA EDGEWORTH, Helen. Ch. 6. (1834)

1 Love makes all hearts gentle.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 544. (1640)

Love makes a good eye squint.

Love makes one fit for any work.

Love and business teach eloquence.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. Nos. 545, 648, 706. Love hath made wise men become fooles, learned men ignorant, strong men weake. (Amor ha fatto diuentar homini savii, pazzi: homini dotti, ignoranti: homini forti, deboli.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 76. (1578) The French say, "L'amour apprend aux ânes à danser" (Love teaches asses to dance).

Love makes all men orators.

ROBERT GREENE, Works, ii, 57. (1583) Greene calls this a "saying more common than true."

Love makes people inventive. (L'amour rend inventif.)

MOLIÈRE, L'École des Maris. Act i, sc. 4, l. 31. (1661)

According unto the proverb, Love maketh a wit of a fool.

CHARLES DIBDIN, The Quaker. Act i, sc.8. (1777) Love makes the ugly beautiful. (El deseo hace hermoso lo feo.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 241. (1856) A Spanish proverb.

2 Love! love! when you get hold of us, one might as well say: Good-by prudence! (Amour! Amour! quand tu nous tiens, | on peut bien dire: Adieu prudence!)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: Le Lion Amoureux. Bk. iv, fab. 1. (1668) La Rochefoucauld agrees, for he says, "Prudence and love weren't made for each other: as love grows, prudence diminishes" (La prudence et l'amour ne sont point faits l'un pour l'autre: à mesure que l'amour croit, la prudence diminue).

Love, you ruined Troy (Amour, tu perdis Troie!)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: Les Deux Coqs. Bk. vii, fab. 13.

3 Love keeps the cold out better than a cloak.

LONGFELLOW, The Spanish Student. Act i, sc. 5, l. 52. (1840)

4 Than Love no greater force exists. ("Ἐρωτος οὐδὲν ἰσχύει πλέον.")

MENANDER, The Hero. Frag. 209K. (c. 300 B. C.) What bounds are there to love? (Quis enim modus adsit amor?)

VERGIL, Eclogues. Ecl. ii, l. 68. (37 B. C.)

Of what avail are vows or shrines to one wild with love? (Quid vota furem, quid delubra iuvant.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. iv, l. 65. (19 B. C.)

O tyrant Love, to what dost thou not drive the hearts of men! (Improbe Amor, quid non mortalis pectora cogis!)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. iv, l. 412.

No power is stronger than true love. (Nulla vis maior pietate vera est.)

SENECA, Thyestes, l. 549. (c. A. D. 60)

What does not love compel us to do? (Quid non cogit amor?)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. v, epig. 48. (c. A. D. 90)

Love can do all things. (Caritas omnia potest.)

ST. JEROME, Letters. Lett. i, sec. 2. (A. D. 370)

5 'Tis a little light, but can set the very sun afire. (βαῖα λαμπὰς εἴοσα τὸν ἄλιον αὐτὸν ἀναλθεῖ.)

MOSCHUS, Runaway Love, l. 23. (c. 150 B. C.)

6 Consider the force of love which maketh the weak strong.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 135. (1576)

7 Love makes a poet of the veriest boor. ("Ἐρως διδάσκει κἂν ἄμους ἢ τὸ πρῖν.")

SAPPHO. (c. 610 B. C.) A fragment quoted by PLUTARCH, Symposium, i, 5, 1. See EDMONDS, Lyra Graeca, i, 169.

Every one, you know, becomes a poet, "though alien to the Muse before," when Love gets hold of him. (πᾶς γοῦν ποιητῆς γίγνεται, "κἂν ἄμους ἢ τὸ πρῖν," οὐ ἂν "Ἐρως ἀψηται.)

PLATO, Symposium. Sec. 196E. (c. 380 B. C.) Oh, love will make a dog howl in rhyme.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Queen of Corinth. Act iv, sc. 1. (a. 1619)

8 Love rules the court, the camp, the grove, And men below, and saints above;

For love is heaven, and heaven is love.

WALTER SCOTT, The Lay of the Last Minstrel Canto iii, st. (1805)

9 O powerful love! that in some respects, makes a beast a man, in some other, a man a beast.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor. v, 5, 5. (1601)

10 Many waters cannot quench love, neither can the floods drown it. (Aquae multae non potuerunt extinguere charitatem. nec flumina obruent illam.)

Old Testament: Song of Solomon, viii, 7. (c. 900 B. C.)

Love's fire heats water, water cools not love.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. cliv. (1609)

11 Love, resistless in battle. ("Ἐρως ἀνίκατε μάχαν.")

SOPHOCLES, Antigone, l. 781. (c. 441 B. C.)

Love can turn past pain to bliss. (πόθος τοι καὶ κακῶν ἄρ' ἦν τις.)

SOPHOCLES, Oedipus at Colonus, l. 1699. (c. 408 B. C.) Storr, tr.

They are not wise who pit themselves 'gainst Love.

Love rules at will the gods—and also me.

("Ἐρωτι μὲν νυν θεοὺς ἀντανίσταται πύκτης ὅπως ἐς χεῖρας, οὐ καλῶς φρονεῖ.)

SOPHOCLES, Trachiniae, l. 441. (c. 409 B. C.)

12 Love conquered all: for what could Love not conquer? (Omnia vicit amor: quid enim non vinceret ille?)

VERGIL, Ciris, l. 437. (c. 50 B. C.)

Love conquers all. (Omnia vincit Amor.)

VERGIL, Eclogues. Ecl. x, l. 69. (37 B. C.)
Love conquers everything and will conquer everything as long as the centuries last. (Amor vaint tout et tout vaincra | Tant com cis siècles durerà.)

HENRI D'ANDELI, Le Lai d'Aristote, l. 296. (c. 1250) See MONTAIGLON, Recueil des Fabliaux, v, 262.

On which ther was first write a crowned A,
And after, Amor vincit omnia.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 161, (c. 1386)

Loue conquereth al. (Amor vince ogni cosa.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 33. (1578)

Love will conquer at the last.

TENNYSON, Locksley Hall Sixty Years After, l. 280. (1886)

<sup>1</sup>
'Tis love, love, that makes the world go round. (C'est l'amour, l'amour, qui fait le monde à la ronde.)

UNKNOWN, C'est l'Amour. (c. 1700) See Chansons Populaires de France, ii, 180. Perhaps an elaboration of the Latin proverb, "Amor mundum fecit" (Love made the world).

'Tis love, 'tis love, 'tis love, that makes the world go round.

DICKENS, Our Mutual Friend. Bk. iv, ch. 4. (1865)
'Tis love that makes the world go round, my baby.

JOAQUIN MILLER, The Danites. Act iii. (1877)

In for a penny, in for a pound—

It's Love that makes the world go round.

W. S. GILBERT, Iolanthe. Act ii. (1882)

Love that makes the hat go round.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), A Ruler of Men. (1906)

It's said that love makes the world go round—the announcement lacks verification. It's the wind from the dinner horn that does it.

O. HENRY, Cupid à la Carte. (1907)

'Tis love that makes the bit go round.

O. HENRY, The Man Higher Up. (1908) Referring to the bit used by a burglar in cracking a safe.

'Tis drink . . . that makes the world go round.

JAMES HURDIS, The Village Curate, l. 21. (1788)

VI—Love Knows No Laws

<sup>2</sup>
He that louyth is voyde of all reason.

ALEXANDER BARCLAY, Shyp of Folys, i, 81. (1509)

Love is without lawe, so it maketh the pacientes to bee as utterly voyde of reason.

BARNABY RICH, His Farewell to Militarie Profession, p. 191. (1581)

Though Love use Reason for his physician, he admits him not for his counsellor.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, ii, 1, 5. (1601)

Loue an unruly passion.

THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 121. (1616)

<sup>3</sup>
Though love is broken alday every lawe. (Amor promessa non cura nè fede.)

BOCCACCIO, Il Filostrato. Canto iv, st. 75. (c.

1350) CHAUCER, tr. Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. iv, l. 618. (c. 1380) The Italian proverb is, "Amor regge senza legge" (Love rules without law).

<sup>4</sup>
Who can give law to lovers? Love is a greater law to itself. (Quis legem det amantibus? Maior lex amor est sibi.)

BOËTHIUS, De Consolatione Philosophiae. Bk.

iii, meter 12, l. 47. (c. A. D. 520)

Wostow nat wel the olde clerkes sawe,
That "who shal yeve a lover any lawe?"

Love is a gretter lawe, by my pan,

Than may be yeve to any ertly man.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Knights Tale, l. 305 (c. 1386)

Ther-for this ys a full olde sawe:

Who may gyfe a louer lawe?

UNKNOWN, Partonope, l. 8710. (c. 1450)

What is he, I praye you, that is able to prescribe lawes to love?

BARNABY RICH, His Farewell to Militarie Profession, p. 131. (1581)

Love is lawlesse.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 27. (1639)

Know'st thou not, no Law is made for Love?

DRYDEN, Palamon and Arcite, i, 326. (1700)

<sup>5</sup>
Love knows nothing of order. (Amor ordinem nescit.)

ST. JEROME (HIERONYMOUS), Letter to Chromatius, Last sentence. (A. D. 374) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5.

Love's lawe is out of reule.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis, i, 13. (c. 1390)

He loves little who loves by rule. (Celuy ayme peu qui ayme à la mesure.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 28. (1580)

Love knows no mean or measure.

PHINEAS FLETCHER, Piscatory Eclogues. (1635)

<sup>6</sup>
As loue knoweth no lawes, so it regardeth no conditions.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 84. (1579)

Loue will regard no lawes.

LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 393.

Loue knoweth no lawes: Did not Iupiter transforme himselfe into the shape of Amphitrio to ambrace Alcmaena: Into the forme of a Swan to enjoy Leda: Into a Bull to beguile Io: Into a showre of golde to winne Danae?

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 93.

Zeus came as an eagle to god-like Ganymede, as a swan came he to the fair-haired mother of Helen. [Leda] So there is no comparison between the two things; one person likes one, another likes the other; I like both.

UNKNOWN, Greek Anthology. Bk. v, epig. 65. (c. A. D. 950)

Leda, sailing on the stream

To deceive the hopes of man,

Love accounting but a dream,

Doted on a silver swan;

Danaë, in a brazen tower,

Where no love was, lov'd a shower.

JOHN FLETCHER, Valentinian, Act ii, sc. 4. (1614)

Jupiter himself was turned into a satyr, a shepherd, a bull, a swan, a golden shower, and what not for love.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. ii, mem. i, subs. 1. (1621)

'Tis not allowed to Jove

To hold at once his Reason, and his Love.

SIR SAMUEL TUKE, The Adventures of Five Hours. Act iv, sc. 1. (1663)

1 Love is above lord or laws, above Prince or privilege, above friend or faith.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 219. (1576)

VII—Love: Its Loveliness

2 Love and joy are twins, or born of each other.

HAZLITT, Commonplaces. No. 62. (c. 1821)

3 Love is more than greate riches.

JOHN LYDGATE, Story of Thebes. Pt. iii. (1420)

No life is blessed that is not graced with love.

BEN JONSON, Every man Out of His Humour. Act iii, sc. 2. (1599)

To love and be beloved, this is the good,

Which for most sovereign all the world will prove.

SIR WILLIAM ALEXANDER, Aurora. Sonnet xlv. (1604)

To be beloved is above all bargains.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 633. (1640)

4 Take love away from life and you take away its pleasures. (Ôtez l'amour de la vie, | Vous en ôtez les plaisirs.)

MOLIÈRE, Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme. Dialogue between acts i and ii. (1670)

5 Love is always lovely. (Lepidumst amare semper.)

PLAUTUS, Cistellaria, l. 313. (c. 200 B.C.)

There's nothing half so sweet in life

As love's young dream.

THOMAS MOORE, Love's Young Dream. (c. 1820)

6 Your common saying, that you must as well love to live as live to love.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 101. (1576)

To live without love is a token of folly.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 271. (1580)

To live without loving is not really to live. (Vivre sans aimer n'est pas proprement vivre.)

MOLIÈRE, Princesse d'Élide. Act ii, sc. 1. (1664)

She who has never lov'd, has never liv'd.

JOHN GAY, The Captives. Act ii, sc. 2. (1724)

I have lived and loved. (Ich habe gelebt und geliebet.)

SCHILLER, Piccolomini. Act iii, sc. 7. (1799)

7 We are all old enough to know how good a thing is love. (Omnes iam norunt quam sit amare bonum.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. ii, eleg. 34, l. 24. (c. 24 B.C.)

But, mistress, know yourself: down on your knees,

And thank heaven, fasting, for a good man's love.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, iii, 5, 57. (1600)

8 This is the very ecstasy of love.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, ii, 1, 102. (1600)

Imparadis't in one another's arms.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 506. (1667)

Tangl'd in amorous nets.

MILTON, Paradise Regain'd, ii, 162. (1671)

VIII—Love: Its Misery

9 If love be good, from whences comth my wo?

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. i, l. 400. (c. 1380)

In love, ther is but litel reste.

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde, iv, 581.

Endeth than love in wo? Ye, or men lyeth!

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde, iv, 834.

10 Love is all disturbed and uneasy. (Amor omnis sollicitus atque anxius.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. ii, epis. 24. (59 B.C.)

Quoting a line from an unknown poet. Jeans happily translates it by Shakespeare's line, "It is to be all made of sighs and tears." (As You Like It, v, ii, 90.)

Love is a sweet torment.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 119. (1633)

Love is full of trouble.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 122.

11 To mortals how dread a curse is love! (βροτοῖς ἔρωτες ὡς κακὸν μέγα.)

EURIPIDES, Medea, l. 330. (c. 431 B.C.)

Ruthless Love, great bane, great curse to mankind. (σχήλι' Ἔρος, μέγα πῆμα, μέγα στύγος ἀνθρώποισιν.)

APOLLONIUS RHODIUS, Argonautica. Bk. iv, l. 445. (c. 225 B.C.)

12 In war, hunting and love, men for one pleasure a thousand griefs prove.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 230.

(1640) A rendering of the Spanish proverb, "Guerra, caza, y amores, Por un placer, mil dolores." The French form is, "De chiens, d'oiseaux, d'armes, d'amours, Pour un plaisir mille douleurs."

War, hunting and law, are as full of trouble as pleasure.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 21. (1678) On p. 240, Ray has, "Hunting, hawking and love, for one joy have a hundred griefs." The Scottish form is, "Hunting, hawking, paramours, for ane joy a thousand displeasures."

War, Hunting, and Love, have a thousand Troubles for their Pleasure.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5416. (1738)

13 The griping paine of love caused some graftes of greife to begin to growe in his heart.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 128. (1576)

14 How wretched is the man who loves! (Uti miser est homo qui amat!)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 616. (c. 200 B.C.)

Miserable is he who loves. (Miser est qui amat.)

PLAUTUS, Persa. l. 179. (c. 200 B.C.)

He who plunges into love is more lost than if he leapt from a rock. (Qui in amorem praecipitabit, | peius perit quasi saxo saliat.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus, l. 265. (c. 194 B.C.)

There are as many pangs in love as shells upon the shore. (Littore quot conchae, tot sunt in amore dolores.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. ii, l. 519. (c. 1 B.C.)
Great loue, great sorow. (Grand amore, gran dolore.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 30. (1578)

Love and sorrow twins were born.

THOMAS BLACKLOCK, The Graham. (1774)

1
I have loved not wisely. (Non sapienter amavi.)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. ii, l. 27. (c. 10 B.C.)

Then must you speak

Of one that loved not wisely but too well.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, v, 2, 343. (1605)

Sorry her lot who loves too well.

W. S. GILBERT, H.M.S. Pinafore. Act i. (1878)

He loves himself not wisely but too well.

H. C. BAILEY, Apprehensive Dog, p. 259. (1942)

2
Fortune oft proves adverse to the heedless lover. (Saepe imprudenti fortuna occurrit amanti.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. i, eleg. xx, l. 3. (c. 26 B.C.)
There is love for none except him whom fortune favors. (Diligitur nemo, nisi cui fortuna secunda est.)

OVID, Ex Ponto. Bk. ii, epis. 3, l. 23. (A. D. 13)

3
Ay me! for aught that I could ever read.

Could ever hear by tale or history,

The course of true love never did run smooth.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream, i, 1, 134. (1596)

The course of true love is not a railway.

DICKENS, Pickwell Papers. Ch. 8. (1836)

"The course of true love never did run smooth."
And the loves of Saunders Skelp and Jessy Miller were no exception to the rule.

MICHAEL SCOTT, The Cruise of the Midge. Ch. 11. (1836)

He . . . feels it to be a sort of duty to take care that the course of love shall not run altogether smooth.

TROLLOPE, The Golden Lion. Ch. 1. (1872)

The course of true love never ran

Quite easily since time began:

So said our wisest Englishman.

EILEEN FOWLER, Fuel of Fire. Ch. 8. (1901)

He reflected that the path of true love never had run smooth.

H. G. WELLS, You Can't Be too Careful, p. 135. (1942)

4
I am sick of love. (Amore languéo.)

Old Testament: Song of Solomon, ii, 5. (c. 900 B.C.) Repeated in v, 8.

5
There is no living in love without suffering. (Sine dolore non vivitur in amore.)

THOMAS A KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Bk. iii, ch. 5, sec. 7. (c. 1420)

IX—Love: Heaven or Hell

6
From loving girls, ye wise, refrain;
'Tis little pleasure, longer pain.

But love three females none the less,

Compassion, Wisdom, Friendliness.

For swelling breasts of lovely girls,

Trembling beneath their strings of pearls,

And hips with jingling girdles—well,

They do not help you much in hell.

BHARTRIHARI, Nili Sataka. No. 1. (c. 50 B.C.)

Ryder, tr.

O what a heaven is love! O what a hell!

THOMAS DEKKER, The Honest Whore. Pt. i,

act i, sc. 1. (1604)

7
O Love, all other pleasures
Are not worth thy pains.

(Amour, tout les autres plaisirs

Ne valent pas tes peines.)

CHARLES CHARLEVAL, Ballade. (a. 1693)

Pains of love be weaker far

Than all other pleasures are.

DRYDEN, Tyrannic Love. Act iv, sc. 1. (1669)

There is no pleasure like the pain

Of being loved, and loving.

W. M. PRAED, The Legend of the Haunted Tree.

(a. 1839)

All other pleasures are not worth its pains

EMERSON, Essays: Love. (1841)

8
[To love,] the sweetest and the bitterest thing. (ἡδιστον, ὦ παῖ, ταῦτόν ἀλγεινόν θ' ἄμα.)

EURIPIDES, Hippolytus, l. 347. (c. 428 B.C.)

For ever of love the sickness

Is meynd with swete and bitterness.

CHAUCER (?), tr., Romaunt of the Rose, l.

2295. (c. 1365)

The jolif wo.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. vi, l. 84.

(1390)

9
Loue is not vnylike the Figge tree, whose fruite is sweete, whose roote is more bitter then the clawe of a Bitter: or lyke the Apple in Persia, whose blossome sauoreth lyke Honny, whose budde is more sower then Gall.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 61 (1579)

Seeing therfore the very blossome of loue is sower, the budde cannot be sweete.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 109.

10
Though the beginning of loue bring delight, the ende bringeth destruction.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 108. (1579)

It [love] shall . . .

Find sweet beginning, but unsavoury end.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 1138. (1593)

Loue sweet in the beginning, but sowre in the ending.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 121. (1616)

11
Love cloyes if its pleasures torture not. (Saturatur amor nisi gaudia torquent.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. iv, No. 38. (c. A. D. 90)

Love is a sirrup; and who er'e we see
Sick and surcharg'd with this saccietie:
Shall by this pleasing trespass quickly prove,
Ther's loathsomeness e'en in the sweets of love.

ROBERT HERRICK, Love Is a Sirrup. (1648)

1 So sweet an evil is a sweetheart. (Usque adeo dulce puella malum est.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. ii, eleg. ix, l. 26. (c. 13 B. C.)

2 Love with both honey and gall is overflowing. (Amor et melle et felle est fecundissimus.)

PLAUTUS, Cistellaria, l. 69. (c. 200 B. C.)

She has more of aloes [bitterness] than of honey. (Plus aloes quam mellis habet.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 181. (c. A. D. 120)

Of honey and of gall in love there is store:

The honey is much, but the gall is more.

SPENSER, The Shepheardes Calender: March: Thomalin's Emblem. (1579)

The sweets of Love are mixt with tears.

ROBERT HERRICK, The Primrose. (1648)

3 In love, pain and pleasure are always at war. (In venere semper certat dolor et gaudium.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 306. (c. 43 B. C.)

GEORGE SAINTSBURY, Scrap Books, i, 185, quotes a mediæval Latin jingle based upon this proverb, beginning, "An amor dolor sit, | An dolor amor sit, | Utrumque nescio" (Whether love be pain, or pain be love, I do not know).

X—Love Begets Love

4 Love for love is skilful guerdonage.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde, Bk. ii. l. 392. (c. 1380)

Shew thou loue to win loue.

ALEXANDER BARCLAY, The Mirrour of Good Manners, p. 74. (c. 1510)

Love is the true price of love.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 542. (1640)

Love's the coin to market with for love.

J. S. KNOWLES, The Love-Chase. Act i, sc. 2. (1837)

Love can neither be bought or sold; its only price is love.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 446. (1855) On p. 446, "Love is the loadstone of love."

5 Love, which insists that love shall mutual be. (Amor che a nullo amato amar perdona.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto v, l. 103. (c. 1300)

6 Love them that loue thee. (Ama chi ti ama.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 27. (1578)

7 If I love you, what business is that of yours? (Wenn ich dich lieb habe, was geht's dich an?)

GOETHE, Wilhelm Meister. Bk. iv, ch. 9. (1686)

Hence [when a man cannot feel his right to a woman's beauty] arose the saying, "If I love you, what is that to you?" We say so because we feel that what we love is not in your will but above it.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Love. (1841)

8 And sure love craveth love, like asketh like. SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, tr., Orlando Furioso. Bk. xxviii, st. 80. (1591)

Love goes toward love, as schoolboys from their books,

But love from love, toward school with heavy looks.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, ii, 2, 156. (1595)

Love looks for love again.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 27. (1639)

Love begins with love. (L'amour commence par l'amour.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Ch. 4. (1688)

Love prays devoutly when it prays for love.

HOOD, Hero and Leander, l. 120. (a. 1845)

9 Let him love no one, and be beloved by none. (Nec amet quemquam, nec ametur ab ullo.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xii, l. 130. (c. A. D. 120)

That loveth nought, ne is not loved.

CHAUCER (?), Romaunt of the Rose, l. 5402 (c. 1365)

You will never be loved if you think only of yourself. (Amato non sarai, Se à te solo penserai.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 176. (1856) An Italian proverb.

10 The pleasure of love is in loving. (Le plaisir de l'amour est d'aimer.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 259. (1665)

11 If you would be loved where you are loving, then love them that love you. (στέργετε τῶν φιλέοντας, ἐν ᾗ ἦν φιλήτετε φιλήσθε.)

MOSCHUS, A Lesson to Lovers, l. 8. (c. 150 B. C.)

That you may be loved, be lovable. (Ut ameris, amabilis esto.)

OVID, Artis Amatoria. Bk. ii, l. 107. (c. 1 B. C.)

If you would be loved, love. (Si vis amari, ama.)

HECATON, Fragments. Frag. 27 Fowler. (c. A. D. 40) Quoted by SENECA, Ad Lucilium, ix, 6

That you may be loved, love. (Ut amaris, ama.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. vi, epig. 11. (c. A. D. 90) AUSTINUS, Epigrams. Epig. 22. (a. A. D. 370)

If you'd be belov'd, make yourself amiable. FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1744.

If you would be loved, love and be lovable.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1755

Love and be loved.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1756

12 Rather let me love than be in love.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, A Wife. St. 13. (a. 1613)

13 Confidence begets confidence, and love, love. (τὸ πιστεῦν δοκεῖν πιστεῦσθαι, καὶ τὸ φιλεῖν φιλεῖσθαι.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: Advice to a Bride, 143C. (c. A. D. 95) The Latin proverb is, "Amor gignit amorem" (Love begets love).

Love begets love, then never be

Unsoft to him who's smooth to thee.

ROBERT HERRICK, Love Looks for Love. (1648)

No man ever fully realized the truth of the saying that "Love makes love."

ROBERT S. HAWKER, Footprints of Former Men in Far Cornwall, p. 77. (1870)

<sup>1</sup> Love itself is love's chief nourishment. (Ipse alimenta sibi maxima praebebat amor.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. iii, eleg. xxi, l. 4. (c. 22 B.C.)

The desert of love is onely love again.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 17. (1576)

<sup>2</sup> All for love, and nothing for reward.

EDMUND SPENSER, The Faerie Queene. Bk. ii, canto viii, st. 2. (1590)

'Tis their maxim,—Love is love's reward.

DRYDEN, Palamon and Arcite, ii, 373. (1700)

The only present love demands is love.

JOHN GAY, The Espousal, l. 56. (a. 1732)

The devil take me, if I think anything but love to be the object of love.

HENRY FIELDING, Amelia. Bk. v, ch. 9. (1751)

<sup>3</sup> We love being in love, that's the truth on't.

THACKERAY, Henry Esmond. Bk.ii,ch.15.(1852)

<sup>4</sup> Pursue the willing heifer, not the shy one. (τὰν παρειῶσαν ἀμειγρὴ τί τὸν φεύγοντα διώκεις.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. No. xi, l. 75. (c. 270 B.C.)
"Love her who loves you."

He got as much love as he gave and more. (ἡ μὰν ἀντεφιλεῖτο πολὺ πλέον.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. No. xvii, l. 40. (c. 270 B.C.)

Theocritus is telling of Ptolemy and his wife, who was also his sister, and whom Ptolemy loved in two ways.

<sup>5</sup> Love is wont to be the loadstone of love.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 140. (1666)

Love is the Loadstone of Love.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3288. (1732)

<sup>6</sup> Loue for loue is euenest bought.

UNKNOWN, in Twenty-Six Poems (E.E.T.S.), p. 76. (c. 1420)

All things . . . be priced at a certaine rate, except Loue, which can not be pay'd but wyth loue.

EDWARD FENTON, Certaine Secrete Wonders of Nature, fo. 66. (1569)

Love is never pay'd but with pure love.

JAMES MABBE, tr., Celestina, p. 138. (1631)

What can pay love but love?

MARY MANLEY, Lost Lover. Act v, sc. 3. (1696)

XI—Love: True Love

<sup>7</sup> It's no matter what you do,

If your heart be only true:

And his heart was true to Poll.

F. C. BURNAND, His Heart Was True to Poll. (c. 1875)

I have been faithful to thee, Cynara! in my fashion.

ERNEST DOWSON, Non Sum Qualis Eram Bonae sub Regno Cynarae. (1896) The title is from HORACE, Odes, bk. i, 13, "I am not what I once was under the sway of the kindly Cynara." See under CHANGE.

<sup>8</sup> As for the lover, his soul dwells in the body of another. (τοῦ δ' ἐρώμετος τὴν ψυχὴν ἐν ἀλλοτρῷ σώματι ζῇ.)

MARCUS CATO, Apothegm. (c. 160 B.C.) See

PLUTARCH, Lives: Marcus Cato. Ch. 9, sec. 5. One will in two minds, one hart in two bodies, and two bodies in one flesh.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace: Admetus and Alcest, p. 146. (1576)

Two souls in one, two hearts into one heart.

JOSHUA SYLVESTER, tr., Devine Weekes and Workes. Wk. i, day 6, l. 1057. (1591)

One turf shall serve as pillow for us both;

One heart, one bed, two bosoms and one troth
SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream, ii, 2, 41. (1596)

Love is the spiritual coupling of two souls.

BEN JONSON, The New Inne. Act iii, sc. 2. (1629)

My heart, I fain would ask thee

What then is Love? Say on.

"Two souls with one thought only,

Two hearts that beat as one."

(Mein Herz, ich will dich fragen,

Was ist denn Liebe, sag?

"Zwei Seelen und ein Gedanke,

Zwei Herzen und ein Schlag.")

BARON ELIGIUS FRANZ JOSEPH MÜNCH-BELLINGHAUSEN, Der Sohn der Wildnis. (1842)

W. H. Charlton, tr. This was the translation preferred by the author, who wrote under the pseudonym of Friedrich Halm. But the one most familiar to Americans is that of Maria Anne Lovell, as used for the last lines of Ingomar the Barbarian, produced at Drury Lane, London, in 1851, and a favorite in the English and American theatre for nearly half a century: "Two souls with but a single thought, Two hearts that beat as one."

Two minds without a single thought.

PHILIP BARRY, You and I. Act ii. (1923)

<sup>9</sup> I will never desert Mr. Micawber.

DICKENS, David Copperfield. Ch. 12. (1849)

<sup>10</sup> According to the common saying, where love is there is faith.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iv, p. 201. (1574) Young, tr. The Italians say,

"Chi ama, crede" (Who loves, believes).

Let us now saie once againe, that wher ther is love, ther is faith.

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, iv, 203.

Love asks faith, and faith firmness.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 546. (1640)

Where true love is, there is little need of prim formality.

W. S. GILBERT, Ruddigore. Act i. (1887)

<sup>11</sup> Olde wise folke saie, loue me little, loue me long.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 2. (1546)

The olde Proverbe love me little and love me long.

EDWARD HALL, Chronicle, p. 444. (a. 1548)

Love me little, love me long,

Is the burden of my song.

UNKNOWN, Ballad: Love Me Little. (c. 1570)

Loue me little, and loue me long. (Ama mi poco, & ama mi longo.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 34. (1578) The Italians also say, "Ama mi poco, ma continua" (Love me little but continue). The French form is the same, "Aime-moi un peu, mais continue."

Loue me little, loue me long, let musicke rumble, Whilst I in thy inconvy [pretty] lap doe tumble.

CHRISTOPHER MARLOWE, The Jew of Malta, I. 1948. (c. 1592)

Loue moderately; long love doth so.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, II, 6, 14. (1595)

You say, to me-wards your affection's strong; Pray love me little, so you love me long.

Slowly goes farre: The meane is best: Desire Grown violent, do's either die, or tire.

ROBERT HERRICK, Hesperides: Love Me Little, Love Me Long. (1648)

My mother says, As he is slow he is sure; He will love me long, if he love me little.

RICHARD STEELE, The Spectator. No. 140. (1711)

Love me little, love me long. A dissuasive from shewing too much, and too sudden kindness.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 229. (1721)

CHARLES READE. Title of novel. (1859)

I care not for the stars that shine,

I dare not hope to e'er be thine,

I only know I love you,

Love me, and the world is mine.

DAVID REED, JR., Love Me and the World Is Mine. (1906)

<sup>1</sup> Of all my loves the last, for hereafter I shall glow with passion for no other woman. (Meorum | finis amorum, | non enim posthac alia calebo | femina.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode. 11, l. 31. (23 B.C.)

A thousand girls do not charm me; I am not inconstant in love. (Non mihi mille placent; non sum desultor amoris.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. 3, l. 15. (c. 13 B.C.)

<sup>2</sup> It is with true love as it is with ghosts; everyone talks of it, but few have seen it. (Il est du véritable amour comme de l'apparition des esprits: tout le monde en parle, mais peu de gens en ont vu.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 76. (1665)

There are two kinds of constancy in love: one results from ever finding fresh qualities to admire in the object of our love; the other results from taking a pride in our own loyalty. (Il y a deux sortes de constance en amour: l'un vient de ce que l'on trouve sans cesse dans la personne que l'on aime de nouveaux sujets d'aimer; et l'autre vient de ce que l'on se fait un honneur d'être constant.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 176.

<sup>3</sup> He who can say how much he loves, loves but little. (Chi po dir com' egli arde, è 'n picciol foco.)

FRANCESCO PETRARCA, Sonetti in Vita Madonna Laura. No. 170. (c. 1350)

Those that love best speak least.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace: Curiatius and Horatia, p. 168. (1576)

They love indeed who quake to say they love.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Astrophel and Stella. Sonnet liv. (a. 1586)

True love lacketh a tongue.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 392. (1580)

Love is not where it is most profest.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene, II, x, 31. (1590)

They love least that let men know their love

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona, I, 2, 32. (1594)

She never told her love,

But let concealment, like a worm i' the bud,

Feed on her damask cheek.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, II, 4, 113. (1599)

There's beggary in the love that can be reckoned.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, I, 1, 15. (1606)

Whom we love best, to them we can say least.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 47. (1670)

<sup>4</sup> Whither thou goest, I will go; and where thou lodgest, I will lodge: thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God. (Quocumque enim perrexeris, pergam: et ubi morata fueris, et ego pariter morabor. Populus tuus populus meus, et Deus tuus Deus meus.)

Old Testament: Ruth, I, 16. (c. 600 B.C.)

Through thick and thin she followed him.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. I, canto II, l. 370. (1663)

Thro' all the world she follow'd him.

TENNYSON, The Day-dream: The Departure (1842)

<sup>5</sup> My love to thee is sound sans crack or flaw. SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, V, 2, 415. (1595)

Love is not love

Which alters when it alteration finds,

Or bends with the remover to remove:

O, no! it is an ever-fixed mark

That looks on tempests and is never shaken;

It is a star to every wandering bark,

Whose worth's unknown, although his height be taken.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. cxvi. (1609) The Italians say, "Amor vero non diventa mai canuto" (True love never becomes gray), from which, there is an English derivative. "True love never grows old."

XII—Love: Light Love

<sup>6</sup> In the end every flower loses its perfume. (Al fin ogni fiore perde l'odore.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 191. (1836) An Italian proverb.

<sup>7</sup> Love cometh in at the window and goeth out at the door.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 327. (1605) The French say, "L'amour est une passion qui vient souvent sans savoir comment, et qui s'en van aussi de même" (Love is a passion which comes often one knows not how, and departs in the same way).

Love comes in at the windows, and goes out at the doors.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 13. (1678)
Love comes in at the Window, and flies out at the Door.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3285. (1732)

1 Then crown my joys, or cure my pain:
Give me more love, or more disdain.

THOMAS CAREW, Mediocrity in Love Rejected.
(a. 1639)

Would I were free from this restraint,
Or else had hopes to win her:

Would she could make of me a saint,
Or I of her a sinner.

WILLIAM CONGREVE, Pious Selinda. (c. 1700)

2 Fickle is he, and he has two wings, wherewith to fly away. (Et levis est, et habit geminas, quibus avolet, alas.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. ii, l. 19. (c. 1 B.C.)

Love has no gift so grateful as his wings.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto i, st. 82. (1812)

3 Faithless is love. (Perfidiosus est Amor.)

PLAUTUS, Cistellaria, l. 72. (c. 200 B.C.) The French say, "On n'aime plus comme on aimait jadis" (One doesn't love any more as one used to love). Love isn't what it used to be.

4 Perish the man who can love lightly. (A pereat, si quis lentus amare potest.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. i, eleg. vi, l. 12. (c. 26 B.C.)

Light loue will change.

RICHARD EDWARDS, *The Paradyse of Dainty
Devises*. (c. 1566)

Light loue is an affection great and vehement, and yet lasteth not long.

GEOFFREY FENTON, Golden Epistles, p. 321. (1575) Canst thou be so lyght of loue, as to change with curey wind?

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 69. (1579)

Love is like linen, often chang'd, the sweeter.

PHINEAS FLETCHER, Sicelides. Act iii, sc. 5. (1631)

5 All things change, and loves not least. (Omnia vertuntur, certe vertuntur amores.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. ii, eleg. viii, l. 7. (c. 24 B.C.)

This world is not for aye, nor 'tis not strange
That even our loves should with our fortunes change.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 2, 210. (1600)

6 To love at the door and leave at the hatch.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 258. (1678)

To love the Door, and leave the Hatch.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5200. (1732)

7 To say that you can love one person all your life is just like saying that one candle will continue burning as long as you live.

LEO TOLSTOY, Kreutzer Sonata. Ch. 2. (1890)

8 Those who are faithless know the pleasures of love; it is the faithful who know love's tragedies.

OSCAR WILDE, The Picture of Dorian Gray.
Ch. 1. (1891)

XIII—Love Is Blind

9 That which man seeth, loue maketh invisible:
And th'invisible one, causeth to be seene.
(Quel che l'huomo vede, amor gli fa invisibile:
Et l'invisibile fa veder amore.)

ARIOSTO, Orlando Furioso. Bk. i, st. 56. (1532)

FLORIO, tr., Firste Fruites, fo. 43.

10 And al be that men seyn that blind is he,
Al-gate me thoughte that he mighte see.

CHAUCER, The Legend of Good Women: Prologue, l. 237. (c. 1385)

Though Love is blind, yet 'tis not for want of Eyes.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5004. (1732)

The Italians say, "Amor è cieco ma vede da lontano" (Love is blind, but sees afar).

11 There never was fair prison nor love with foul face.

JOHN DAVIES, The Scourge of Folly, p. 46. (1611)
No love is foul, nor prison fair.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1120. (1640)

There are no ugly loves, nor handsome prisons.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1737

12 For Love can beauties spy
In what seem faults to every common eye.

JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. ii, l. 121. (1716)

Love sees no Faults.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3297. (1732)

13 When we love, it is the heart that judges.
(Quand on aime, c'est le cœur qui juge.)

JOSEPH JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 66. (1810)

14 The black girl is a nut-brown maid, the stringy and wooden is a gazelle, the dumb is modest, she is svelte when she is half-dead with consumption, and the swollen thing with great bubbies is Ceres herself with Iacchus at the breast. (Nigra melichrus est, . . . nervosa et lignea dorcas, . . . rhadine verost iam mortua tussi. | at tumida et mammosa Ceres est
ipsa ab Iaccho.)

LUCRETIUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. iv, l. 1160.
(c. 45 B.C.)

The lover

Sees Helen's beauty in a brow of Egypt.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream,
v, 1, 10. (1596)

Love looks through spectacles which make copper appear gold, riches poverty, and weak eyes distil pearls. (El amor mira con unos antojos, que hacen parecer oro al cobre, a la pobreza riqueza, y a las lagañas perlas.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 19. (1615)

If Jack's in love, he's no judge of Jill's beauty.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1748.

Whoever loves a frog thinks the frog Diana. (Quisquis amat ranam, ranam putat esse Dianam.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 377.

(1869) "He whose mistress squints, says she ogles," "Desire beautifies what is ugly,"

"Fancy passes beauty."

A lover's eye sees a Hsi-shih in his mistress.
(Ch'ing jên yen nei ch'u Hsi-shih.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1453. (1875) Hsi-shih was the beautiful concubine of the King of Wu.

The harelip is taken for a dimple.

D. E. MARVIN, Curiosities in Proverbs, p. 62. (1916) A Japanese proverb. S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 444, renders this, "In the eyes of the lover, pock-marks are dimples."

<sup>1</sup> The woman we love will always be in the right. (La femme qu'on aime aura toujours raison.)

ALFRED DE MUSSET, Idylle. (a. 1857)

<sup>2</sup> Love is blind as regards the beloved.
(τυφλοῦται γὰρ τὸ φιλοῦν περὶ τὸ φιλούμενον.)

PLATO, Laws, 731D. (c. 375 B.C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 48F, 90A, 92E, 1000A.

Love is blind. (Caeca amore est.)

PLAUTUS, Miles Gloriosus, l. 1260. (c. 200 B.C.)

Love is blind all day, and may nat see.

CHAUCEER, Canterbury Tales: The Marchantes Tale, l. 354. (c. 1388)

For Love is blinde and may nought se,

Forthy there may no certainte

Be sette upon his jugement.

GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. i, l. 47. (1390)

Love is blind.

UNKNOWN, Partenope, l. 10796. (c. 1490)

PAINTER, Pallace of Pleasure, ii, 43. (1566)

BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy, iii, ii, iv,

1. (1621) DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 17.

(1837) etc., etc. A proverb in all European languages: French, "L'amour et la fortune sont aveugles"; German, "Liebe ist blind, und macht blind"; Spanish, "Aficion ciega razon."

If you love her, you cannot see her. . . . Because love is blind.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona, ii, 1, 76. (1594)

They say that Love hath not an eye at all.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona, ii, 4, 96. (1594)

If love be blind, love cannot hit the mark.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, ii, 1, 33. (1595)

If love be blind, it best agrees with night.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, iii, 2, 9. (1595)

But love is blind, and lovers cannot see

The pretty follies that themselves commit.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, ii, 6, 36. (1597)

Never was owl more blind than a lover.

DINAH M. M. CRAIK, Magnus and Morna. (c. 1860)

Love is deaf as well as blind.

ELLIOTT PAUL, Mayhem in B-Flat, p. 34. (1940)

<sup>3</sup> Every one is blind when maddened by love.
(Scilicet insano nemo in amore videt.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. ii, eleg. 14, l. 18. (c. 26 B.C.)

<sup>4</sup> There's blind men in heaven, . . . heedless Cupid for one. (μυῖαθαί μ' ἄρχῃ τὸ . . . ἀλλὰ καὶ ἀφ' ὀφθαλμοῦ "Ἔρως.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. No. x, l. 19. (c. 270 B.C.)

XIV—Old Love and New Love

<sup>5</sup> 'Tis good to be off wi' the old love
Before you are on wi' the new.

RICHARD EDWARDS, Damon and Pithias. (c. 1566) In HAZLITT, Old Plays, iv, 447. Quoted by MARIA EDGEWORTH, Belinda. Ch. 10. (1801) SCOTT, The Bride of Lammermoor. Ch. 29. (1819) TROLLOPE, Barchester Towers. Ch. 27. (1857) etc., etc.

'Tis well to be merry and wise,

'Tis well to be honest and true;

'Tis well to be off with the old love,

Before you are on with the new.

C. R. MATURIN, Bertram: Motto. A play produced at Drury Lane Theatre, London, in 1816.

Don't throw away the old shoe until you have the new. (Man muss die alten Schuhe nicht wegwerfen, ehe man neue hat.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 346. (1856) A German proverb. RAY, English Proverbs, p. 233, notes a similar Scottish proverb, "Cast na out the auld water till the new come in." PALMER, Moral Essays on Proverbs, cites a slightly different form, "Don't throw away Dirty Water till you have got Clean."

It's well to be off with the Old Woman before you're on with the New.

BERNARD SHAW, The Philanderer. Act ii. (1893)

That proverb about being off with the old love is a very sound one.

E. V. LUCAS, Advisory Ben. Ch. 39. (1923)

<sup>6</sup> Cold Broth hot again, that loved I never;
Old Love renew'd again, that loved I ever.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6429. (1732)
The Germans say, "Alte Liebe rostet nicht"
(Old love does not rust).

His sermon was only "Cauld kail het again."

GEORGE MACDONALD, Alec Forbes. Ch. 56. (1865) The proverb is "Cauld kail [broth] het [hot] again is aye pat [pot] tasted." There is another, "Cold pudding settles one's love."

<sup>7</sup> I find as I grow older that I love those most whom I loved first.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to Mrs. John Bolling, 1787

<sup>8</sup> An old love pinches like a crab. (Antiquus amor cancer est.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 42. (c. A. D. 60)

<sup>9</sup> I loved her then, but now another love overhangs my heart. (Illam amabam olim, nunc iam alia cura impendet pectori.)

PLAUTUS, Epidicus, l. 135. (c. 200 B.C.)

All love is vanquished by a succeeding love. (Successore novo vincitur omnis amor.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 462. (c. 1 B.C.)

The new drives out the old. (Cura cura repulsa nova.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 484. (c. 1 B.C.)

And eek, as writ Zanzis, that was ful wys,
The newe love out chaceth ofte the olde.

(A come io uddi già sovente dire,

Il nuovo amor sempre caccia l'antico.)

BOCCACCIO, Il Filostrato. Canto iv, st. 49. (c.

1350) CHAUCER, tr., Troilus and Criseyde, iv, 414.

New loves forget the old. (Amours nouvelles Oublient les vieilles.)

GABRIEL MEURIER, Trésor des Sentences. (c. 1550)

One loue expelleth an other.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 116. (1579)

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 10. (1666)

Even as one heat another heat expels,
Or as one nail by strength drives out another,
So the remembrance of my former love
Is by a newer object quite forgotten.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona,
ii, 4, 192. (1594) See also under NAIL.

For one heat, all know, doth drive out another;
One passion doth expel another still.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Monsieur d'Olive. Act v,
sc. 1. (1606)

Diamonds cut diamonds; they who will prove
To thrive in cunning, must cure love with love.

JOHN FORD, The Lover's Melancholy. Act i,
sc. 3. (1628)

And love may be expelled by other love,
As poisons are by poisons.

DRYDEN, All for Love. Act iv, sc. 1. (1678)

In all cases of heart-ache, the application of another man's disappointment draws out the pain and allays the irritation.

LYTTON, The Lady of Lyons. Act i, sc. 2. (1838)

There is no remedy for love but to love more.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 25 July, 1839.

<sup>1</sup> Old love is litle worth when new is more prefard.

EDMUND SPENSER, The Faerie Queene. Bk. vi, canto ix, st. 40. (1590)

<sup>2</sup> A woman rarely discards one lover until she is sure of another.

ROYALL TYLER, The Contrast. Act i, sc. 1. (1787)

XV—Love and Poverty

<sup>3</sup> It hath beene an old maxime; that as poverty goes in at one doore, love goes out at the other.

RICHARD BRATHWAIT, The English Gentlewoman, p. 346. (1631)

When povertie comes in at doores, love leaps out at windowes.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 25. (1639)

When distrust enters in at the fore-gate, love goes out at the postern.

JAMES HOWELL, Letters. Bk. i, sec. 5, No. 20.
(1629) The Germans say, "Tritt der Kummer in's Haus, fliegt die Liebe zum Fenster hinaus" (When misfortune enters the house, love flies out).

When poverty comes in at the door, friendship flees out at the window.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 346. (1721)

When Poverty comes in at the Door, Love creeps out at the Window.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5565. (1732)
Love and poverty they say do not agree; but the love that flies out of the window at the sight of poverty deserves to have the door shut in his face.

CHARLES DIBDIN, JR., My Spouse and I. (c. 1810) Mind my words—when poverty comes in at the door, love jumps out at the window.

JOHN GALT, The Entail. Ch. 14. (1823)
When Mr. Wylie urged her to marry him . . .
she spoke out, . . . "I've seen poverty enough in my mother's house, it shan't come in at my door to drive love out of the window."

CHARLES READE, Foul Play. Ch. 1. (1869)

<sup>4</sup> Hereof men say a comyn proverbe in englond, that loue lasteth as longe as the money endureth.

WILLIAM CAXTON, The Game and Playe of the Chesse. Pt. iii, ch. 3. (1474)

Love is maintain'd by wealth; when all is spent,
Adversity then breeds the discontent.

ROBERT HERRICK, Adversity. (1648)

Nobody wants to kiss when they are hungry.

DOROTHY DIX, Syndicated Column. (1930) The French say, "Sans pain, sans vin, L'amour n'est rien" (Without bread and wine, love is nothing).

The voyage of love is all the sweeter for an outside stateroom and a seat at the captain's table.

ANONYMOUS, Meditations in Wall Street, p.
86. (1940)

<sup>5</sup> Love and a cottage! Eh, Fanny! Ah, give me indifference and a coach and six!

COLMAN AND GARRICK, The Clandestine Marriage. Act i, sc. 2. (1766)

Lady Clonbrony had not . . . the slightest notion how anybody . . . could prefer, to a good house and a proper establishment, what is called love in a cottage.

MARIA EDGEWORTH, The Absentee. Ch. 4. (1812)

Love in a hut, with water and a crust,
Is— Love, forgive us!—cinders, ashes, dust.

JOHN KEATS, Lamia. Pt. ii, l. 1. (1820)

They may talk of love in a cottage,

And bowers of trellised vine—

Of nature bewitchingly simple,
And milkmaids half divine, . . .

But give me a sly flirtation,

By the light of a chandelier—

With music to play in the pauses,

And nobody very near.

N. P. WILLIS, Love in a Cottage. (1829)

Love in a cottage, with a broken window to let in the rain, is not my idea of comfort.

ALEXANDER SMITH, Dreamthorp: On the Writing of Essays. (1863)

Love in a tub and the bottom will fall out.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches,
p. 483. (1940)

<sup>6</sup> In well-fed bodies love resides. (ἐν πλεγμαῖς κῦρσις.)

EURIPIDES, Fragments. No. 895, Nauck. (c.
440 B. C.) As quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia,
126C, who adds that this is not true.

When the barley is consumed from the pitcher, strife knocks and enters the house.

Babylonian Talmud: Baba Metzia, fol. 59a. (c. 450)

Love abideth not with want, for she is the companion of plenty.

SIR WALTER RALEGH, Instructions to His Son. Sec. ii. (1616)

Toom pokes [empty bellies] will strive.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 313. (1721)
"When a married couple are pinched with poverty they will be apt to jar." The French say, "Quand il n'y a pas de foin au râtelier, les cheveux se battent."

1 Of Soup and Love, the first is the best.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3699. (1732)

2 Love does much, but money does all.

ROBERT GREENE, Works (Grosart), iii, 61. (1587) COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Amour. (1611)

Love can do much, but money can do all. (Amour peut moult; argent peut tout.)

GRUTER, Florilegium, iii, 186. (1612) CORREAS, Vocabulary, p. 68 (c. 1627), gives the Spanish, "Amour faz molto, argen faz todo," but a later form is "Amor fa molt, argent fa tot." The Germans say, "Liebe kann viel, Geld kann Alles." The French have another proverb even more cynical, "L'amour fait rage, mais l'argent fait mariage" (Love makes passion, but money makes marriage).

Love can do much, but money can do more.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 9. (1666)

Love does much, but Money does more.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3286. (1732)

3 No longer foster, No longer lemman.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)

4 Loue lurkes as soone about a sheepcoate as a pallaice.

THOMAS LODGE, Rosalynde, l. 95. (1590)

Love bides in cottages as well as in courts.

COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Amourettes. (1611)

Love lives in cottages as well as in courts.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 16. (1670)

KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 236. (1721)

Love is as warm among cottagers as courtiers.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 248. (1678)

Love lives more in Cottages than Courts.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3290. (1732)

In the very smallest cot

There is room enough for a loving pair.

(Raum ist in der kleinsten Hütte Für ein glücklich liebend Paar.)

SCHILLER, Der Jüngling am Bache. St. 4. (a. 1805) There is a similar German apothegm, "Die Liebe macht zum Goldpalast die Hütte" (Love makes a palace of gold out of a cottage), sometimes attributed to Holtz.

5 A man in love and out of cash is in a sorry plight. (Qui amat, si eget, misera adficitur, ere, aerumna.)

PLAUTUS, Curculio, l. 142. (c. 200 B.C.)

The lover who first set out on Love's highways with an empty purse went in for harder labors than Hercules. (Qui amans egens ingressus est princeps in Amoris vias, | superavit aerumnis suis aerumnas Herculi.)

PLAUTUS, Persa, l. 1. (c. 200 B.C.)

6 By Hercules, that will be a true saying, "Without Ceres and Bacchus Venus is chilly. (Verbum hercle hoc verum erit, "sine Cerere et Libero friget Venus.")

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 732. (161 B.C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, iii, 97, and included by TAVERNER in his Translations from Erasmus. His rendering is, "Without meate and drynke the lust of the body is colde," and comments, paraphrasing Erasmus, "Ceres amonges the Panymys was taken for the Goddess of corne: Bacchus for the God of wyne, and Venus for the Goddess of loue." The Germans say, "Ohne Wein und Brod | Leidet Venus Noth" (Without wine and bread, Venus suffers want).

Truly with an empty belly no one is in shape for love. (Nam ventri inani non inest formarum amor.)

ATHENAEUS, Deipnosophistai. Bk. vi. (c. A.D. 200) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, iii, 97, with similar epigrams by other writers.

Distend the belly and you distend those things which hang from the belly. (Distento ventre, distenduntur ea, quae ventri adhaerent.)

SAINT JEROME (HIERONYMUS), commenting on the line from Terence. (c. A.D. 400) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, iii, 97.

The old proverb which saith, Venus takes cold when not accompanied with Ceres and Bacchus. (L'antique prouerbe: que Venus se morfond sans le compaignie de Ceres & Bacchus.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 31. (1545)

Rabelais is arguing that wine in moderation assists lovemaking, in excess hinders it. Or, as SHAKESPEARE put it, Macbeth, ii, 3, 31, "Lechery, sir, it [drink] provokes and unprovokes; it provokes the desire, but it takes away the performance."

I learned in school,

That love's desires and pleasures cool

Sans Ceres' wheat and Bacchus' vine.

GEORGE PEELE, The Famous Chronicle of King Edward the First. Act ii, l. 86. (1593)

XVI—Love and Fear

7 There is no fear in love; but perfect love casteth out fear. (φόβος οὐκ ἔστιν ἐν τῇ ἀγάπῃ. ἀλλ' ἡ τελεία ἀγάπη ἔξω βάλλει τὸν φόβον.)

New Testament: I John, iv, 18. (c. A.D. 95)

The Vulgate is, "Timor non est in charitate: sed perfecta charitas foras mittit timorem."

Perfect love casteth out fear.

SHAW, How He Lied to Her Husband. (1905)

8 Ever filled with anxious fear is love. (Res est solliciti plena timoris amor.)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. i, l. 12. (c. 10 B.C.) The Italians say, "Chi ama, teme" (Who loves, fears), and "Amor è di sospetti fabro" (Love is the maker of suspicions).

Love is thing ay ful of bisy drede.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. iv, l. 1644. (c. 1380)

This prouerbe that I lere [teach] . . .

Love goth neuer without fere.

ALEXANDER BARCLAY, The Castell of Labour, sig. D2. (1506)

We have this saying from the learned, That a marvellously fearful thing is love, and that true love is never without fear. (Comme disent les clerks, chose merueilleusement crainctive estre amour, & i'amaïs le bon amour ne estre sans craincte.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 18. (1545)

The Germans say, "Kleine Liebe ohne Furcht und Argwohn" (No love without fear and hate).

Fear is ever attendant on true and sincere love. (À la bonne & syncere amour est craincte perpetuellement annexée.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 3.

Fie, fie, fond love, thou art so full of fear.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 1021. (1593)

Love's a solicitous thing, and full of fears.

RICHARD FLECKNOE, Love's Dominion. Act ii, sc. 1. (1654)

1

I do not wish to be feared; I prefer to be loved. (Nolo ego metui: amari mavolo.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 835. (c. 200 B.C.)

2

Love cannot be mixed with fear. (Non potest amor cum timore misceri.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xvii, sec. 19. (c. A.D. 64)

XVII—Love and Hate

3

They that too deeply loved too deeply hate. (οἱ τοι πέρα στέρξαντες, οἱ δὲ καὶ πέρα μισοῦσιν.)

ARISTOTLE, Politics. Bk. vii, ch. 6, sec. 4. (c. 330 B.C.) Quoting a proverb of unknown authorship.

Love and hatred overstep the mark.

Babylonian Talmud: Sanhedrin, fo. 105a. (c. 450)

4

Love as if you would one day hate, and hate as if you would one day love. (φιλοῦσιν ὡς μισήσουσιν καὶ μισοῦσιν ὡς φιλήσουσιν.)

BIAS, Maxim. (c. 570 B.C.) As given by ARISTOTLE, Art of Rhetoric, ii, 13, 4. (c. 340 B.C.) This is also the form in which it is quoted by PHILO, De Virtutibus, 152. SOPHOCLES, Ajax, l. 679, has Ajax say, "For I have learnt, though late, this rule, to hate an enemy as one who may become a friend, and serve a friend as knowing that his friendship may not last." DEMOSTHENES, Aristophanes, sec. 122, also quotes both phrases, but emphasizes the danger of ill-considered acts of friendship. DIOGENES LAERTIUS, however, in his Life of Bias, i, 87, gives only the first clause: "Men should love their friends as if they would some day hate them" (φιλεῖν ὡς μισήσουσιν: τοὺς γὰρ πλείστους εἶναι κακοῦς), and this is the form which is best known, although there is another included in some of the old collections, δεῖ φιλεῖν ὥσπερ μισήσουσιν, μισεῖν δὲ ὥσπερ φιλήσουσιν (One should love as if one were going to hate, and hate as if one were going to love). It has usually been regarded merely as a caution against forming hasty intimacies, but CICERO, De Amicitia, xvi, 59, makes Scipio denounce it as abominable and unworthy of a sage. Bacon, Montaigne, La Bruyère, and many other writers have commented upon it. See also under FRIEND: FRIEND AND ENEMY.

So love as if you were possibly destined to hate; and in the same way, hate as if you might perhaps afterwards love. (Hac fini ames, tamquam forte fortuna et osurus; hac itidem tenus oderis, tamquam fortasse post amaturus.)

CHILON. (c. 550 B.C.) As quoted by AULUS GELLIUS, i, 3, 30. CICERO, De Amicitia, 59, attributes the saying to Bias, also one of the Seven Sages, as do Aristotle, Diogenes Laertius and Valerius Maximus.

Love as though you would one day hate; hate as though you would one day love. (Ama tanquam osurus; oderis tanquam amaturus.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. ii, cent. i, No. 72. (1508)

"One of the evils attendant upon publishing letters to and from our friends," Erasmus remarks, "is that occurrences may happen compelling us to change our opinions, and censure those whom we have commended, or commend those whom we have censured." He was speaking feelingly, because he himself, in the latter part of his life, was compelled to censure Ulric Hutton, a violent man whom earlier he had liberally commended. He cites examples of this or similar aphorisms used by ARISTOTLE, Rhetoric; SOPHOCLES, Ajax; EURIPIDES, Troades; CICERO, De Amicitia; DIOGENES LAERTIUS, AULUS GELLIUS, and others, many of them included here.

Love as if you should one day hate; hate as if you should one day love. (Ayez comme ayant quelque jour à le haïr; haïssez comme ayant à l'ayer.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 27. (1580) Quoting a precept which he ascribes to Chilo

That ancient precept of Bias, construed not to any point of perfidiousness, but only to caution and moderation, Et ama tanquam inimicus futurus, et odi tanquam amaturus.

FRANCIS BACON, Of the Advancement of Learning, ii, xxiii, 245. (1605)

Bias gave in precept, "Love as if you should hereafter hate; and hate as if you should hereafter love."

FRANCIS BACON, Apophthegms. No. 182. (1625)

We must love, as looking one day to hate.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1124. (1640)

Bind so you may unbind.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 980. (1732)

When you are angry with any one, consider that you may be reconciled; and when you are friends with any one, that you may some day be at enmity with him. (Quando estes en enojo, acuerdate que puedes venir a paz, y quando estes en paz, acuerdate que puedes venir a enojo.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs, i, 252. (1814)

1 He loves me for little, that hates me for nought.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 40. (c. 1595)

They loo me for little that hate me for nought.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 310. (1813)

2 Hatred is blind, as well as Love.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1805. (1732)

If you hate a Man, eat his Bread; if you love him, do the same.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2756.

• Men hate more steadily than they love.

JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 15 Sept., 1777.

It is as natural to hate as to love.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Essays: On Poetry. (1821)

3 Neither love nor hate forever. (No se ha de querer ni aborrecer para siempre.)

GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Max. 217. (1647)

4 As there is nothing more hurtfull then to bee hated, so is there nothing more helpfull then to bee loved.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 208. (1574) Pettie, tr.

5 If one judges love by its effects, it resembles hate more than affection. (Si on juge de l'amour par la plupart de ses effets, il ressemble plus à la haine qu'à l'amitié.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 72. (1665)

The more one loves a mistress, the more one is ready to hate her. (Plus on aime une maîtresse, et plus on est prêt de la hair.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 111. (1665)

6 Who love too much, hate in the like extreme.

POPE, tr., Odyssey. Bk xv, l. 79. (1725)

7 Love and hatred are . . . the great Lords and Masters, that divide the rest of the affections between them.

JOHN PRESTON, The Breast-Plate of Faith and Love, p. 8. (A. 1628)

8 Hatred stirreth up strifes: but love covereth all sins. (Odium suscitât rixas: et universa delicta operit charitas.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, x, 12. (c. 350 B.C.)

Hate pulls high things down, love lifts low things up. (Alta cadunt odiss, parva extolluntur amore.)

CATO (?), Collectio Monostichorum, l. 21. (c. 175 B.C.) See Minor Latin Poets, Loeb, p. 624.

9 You will hate the man you love, unless you admonish him aright. (Quem diligas, ni recte moneas, oderis.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 625. (c. 43 B.C.)

10 Better to live in chains with those we love than rove through gardens with those we hate.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. ii, Apologue 31. (c. 1258)

BETTER A DINNER OF HERBS, see under DINING.

11 In love there is no mistake, and every estrangement is well founded.

H. D. THOREAU, Winter, 8 Feb., 1857.

Those we love we can hate. To others we are indifferent.

H. D. THOREAU, Early Spring, 24 Feb., 1857.

12 Hatred is stronger than friendship, but weaker than love. (La haine est plus vive que l'amitié, moins que l'amour.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 178. (1746)

13 Hate follows love, as 'neath those sandal-trees The withered leaves the eager searcher sees.

UNKNOWN, Book of Songs (Shiking). Pt. ii,

Bk. iii. Moral Lessons. (c. 600 B.C.) Legge, tr.

Where is great love, from thence proceedeth great hate.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 85. (1574) Pettie, tr.

For as the best Wine doth make the sharpest vinegar, so the deepest loue turneth to the deadliest hate.

JOHN LYLIV, Euphues (Arber), p. 48. (1579)

The greatest Hate springs from the greatest Love.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4573. (1732)

XVIII—Love and Wisdom

14 It is impossible to love, and to be wise.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Love. (1597)

Quoted as a wise saying.

One cannot love and be wise.

RICHARD BRATHWAIT, The English Gentlewoman, p. 288. (1631)

No man at one time, can be wise, and love.

ROBERT HERRICK, To Silvia, to Wed. (1648)

He is bound by the proverb, 'Tis impossible to love and to be wise.

RICHARD FLECKNOE, Enigmaticall Characters, p. 134. (1658)

'Tis hard to be in love and to be wise.

NAT. LEE, Princess of Cleve. Act i, sc. 3. (1680)

Wisdom has nothing to do with love.

PHILIP BARRY, You and I. Act iii. (1923)

15 How long may subtle logic play its part In science and theology and art?

So long as no young fawn-eyed maiden's glance

Shall find its way to the logician's heart.

BHARTRIHARI, (c. 50 B.C.) Ryder, tr.

Learning and dignity, wisdom and manners,

Last till the god of love plants flaming banneis.

BHARTRIHARI. (c. 50 B.C.) Ryder, tr.

16 The first sigh of love is the last of wisdom. (Le premier soupir de l'amour Est le dernier de la sagesse.)

ANTOINE BRET, École Amoureuse. Sc. 7. (a. 1792) "Raisonnement sur l'amour c'est perdre la raison"

(To reason about love is to lose one's reason) is an epigram attributed to Bouffiers.

17 Who may been a fool, but-if he love?

CHAUCER, Knights Tale. l. 941. (c. 1386)

God preserve me from idiots and men in love, which is the same thing.

M. V. HEBERDEN, The Lobster Pick Murders, p. 165. (1941)

<sup>1</sup> Love and knowledge live not together.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Aimer. (1611)

Knowledge and love, altogether cotten not.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 7. (1666) This early use of "cotton," in the sense of agreeing or getting along together, is worth noting.

<sup>2</sup> No folly to being in love.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 27. (1659)

No folly to being in love, or where love's in the case, the Doctor is an Ass.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 50. (1768)

<sup>3</sup> As love increases, prudence diminishes. (A mesure que l'amour croît, la prudence diminue.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 546. (1665)

O tyrant love! when held by you,

We may to prudence bid adieu.

(Amour! amour! quand tu nous tiens

On peut bien dire, Adieu, prudence.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk iv, fab. 1. (1668)

<sup>4</sup> Love darkens counsel. (τὸ δ' ἐπ'αυ ἐπισκορεῖ.)

MENANDER, The Lady of Andros. Frag. 48K.

(c. 300 B.C.)

<sup>5</sup> Love draws me one way, reason another. (Aliudque cupido, mens aliud suadet.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. vii, l. 18. (A.D. 7)

To say the truth, reason and love keep little company together now-a-days.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream, iii, 1, 146. (1596)

It is not reason that governs love. (La raison n'est pas ce qui règle l'amour.)

MOLIERE, Le Misanthrope. Act i, sc. 1. l. 248. (1666)

<sup>6</sup> None so wise but love maketh them fooles.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 153. (1576)

<sup>7</sup> To love and be wise is scarcely granted to a god. (Amare et sapere vix deo conceditur.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 22. (c. 43 B.C.) A variation is, "Amare simul et sapere, ipsi Iovi non datur" (To love and to be wise at the same time is not given to Jove himself).

To be wise and eke to love,

Is graunted scarce to god above.

EDMUND SPENSER, The Shepheardes Calender: March: Willyes Embleme. (1579)

To be wise and love,

Exceeds man's might; that dwells with gods above.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, iii, 2, 163. (1601)

The proverb holds, that to be wise and love

Is hardly granted to the gods above.

JOHN DRYDEN, Palamon and Arcite. Bk. ii, l. 364. (1700)

<sup>8</sup> When you love you are not wise: when you are wise you do not love. (Cum ames non sapias aut cum sapias non ames.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 131. (c. 43 B.C.)

<sup>9</sup> Only a wise man knows how to love. (Solut sapiens scit amare.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxxi, sec. 12. (A.D. 64)

Oft the wise are fettered, where fools go free.

SAEMUND (?), Poetic Edda: Hovamol. St. 93. (c. 900)

Best wits are soonest caught by Cupid.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 258. (1576)

An unidentified epigram which Pettie uses several times.

How wise are they that are but fools in love!

JO. COOKE, How a Man May Choose a Good Wife. Act i, sc. 1. (c. 1610)

The wisest man the warl' e'er saw,

He dearly lov'd the lasses, O.

ROBERT BURNS, Green Grow the Rashes. (1786)

XIX—Love and Death

<sup>10</sup> With thee I fain would live, with thee I'd gladly die! (Tecum vivere amem, tecum obeam libens!)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 9, l. 24. (23 B.C.)

If euer I kill my selfe for loue, it shall be with a sigh, not with a sword.

LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 427. (1580)

He loves too much that dies for love. (C'est trop aimer quand on en meurt.)

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Mourir. (1611)

They love too much that die for love.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 16. (1670)

And for bonnie Annie Laurie

I'd lay me doun an' dee.

WILLIAM DOUGLAS, Annie Laurie. Anne or Anna Laurie was the youngest daughter of Sir Robert Laurie, or Lawrie, b. 1682.

I'd leave my happy home for you.

W. A. HEELAN. Title of popular song. (1899)

<sup>11</sup> O Dowglas, Dowglas, Tendir and brave.

SIR RICHARD HOWLAND, Buke of the Howlat. St. 31. (c. 1450) See PINKERTON, Scottish Poems, iii, 146.

As I lay my heart on your dead heart, Douglas. Douglas, Douglas, tender and true

DINAH M. M. CRAIK, Too Late. (c. 1860)

<sup>12</sup> Men have died from time to time and worms have eaten them, but not for love.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, iv, 1, 107. (1600)

For, heaven be thank'd, we live in such an age,

When no man dies for love, but on the stage.

DRYDEN, Epilogue: Mithridates. (a. 1700)

Few people die for love in these days.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

<sup>13</sup> Love is strong as death. (Fortis est ut mors dilectio.)

Old Testament: Song of Solomon, viii, 6. (c. 900 B.C.)

Love, strong as Death, the Poet led.

POPE, Ode for Music on St. Cecilia's Day. St. 4, l. 51. (1708)

Love can vanquish Death.

TENNYSON, A Dream of Fair Women, l. 269. (1832)

Love is greater than illusion, and as strong as death.

WALTER FERRIS, tr., Death Takes a Holiday (La Morte in Vacanze, by ALBERTO CASELLA). Act iii. (1930) The French say, "Amour et mort, Rien n'est plus fort" (Love and death, nothing is stronger).

LOVER

<sup>1</sup> Lover, beware your lover, might well be an old maxim.

MAXWELL ANDERSON, Elizabeth the Queen. Act i, sc. 2. (1930)

<sup>2</sup> Lovers ever run before the clock.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 447. (1855)

<sup>3</sup> Sapient, Solitary, Solicitous, and Secret—the four S's, which they say all true lovers should possess. (Sabio, Solo, Solicito, y Secreto—las cuatro SS. que dicen que han de tener los buenos enamorados.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 34. (1605)

Then Leonela gives the "lovers' alphabet": Agradecido (grateful); bueno (good), caballero (gallant), dadivoso (bountiful), enamorado (enamored), firme (firm), gallardo (gay), honrado (honorable), ilustre (illustrious), leal (faithful), mozo (young), noble (noble), onesto (honest), principal (distinguished), quantioso (versatile), rico (wealthy), and so on.

<sup>4</sup> A lover once will always love again. (οὐκ ἔστιν ἐραστὴς ὁστις οὐκ ἀει φιλεῖ.)

EURIPIDES, Daughters of Troy, l. 1051. (c. 415 B.C.) A. S. Way (Loeb) renders this line, "Lover is none but loveth evermore."

Who has loved most, he best can love again.

HAROLD THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 490. (1940)

<sup>5</sup> True lovers are shy, when people are by.

SAMUEL FOOTE, The Lame Lover. Act ii. (c. 1760)

<sup>6</sup> Lovers complain of their Hearts; but the distemper is in their Heads.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3302. (1732)

<sup>7</sup> A lover may sigh, but he must not puff.

O. HENRY, The Skylight Room. (1906)

<sup>8</sup> Louers liue by loue, ye as larkes liue by leekes.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)

All one we liue . . .

By loue as larks do liue by leekes.

THOMAS CHURCHYARD, A Pleasant Discourse of Court, sig. B4. (1596)

They bee some that do liue of loue,
Well yea, as larkes do of leekes.

JOHN WODROEPHE, The Spared Houres of a Souldier, p. 313. (1623)

Lovers live by love, as larks by leeks. This is I conceive in derision of such expressions as living by love.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 46. (1670)

You live on love as laverocks do on leeks. A jest upon them that eat little.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 367. (1721)

One of those sighing swains who, the proverb says—why, nobody has ever exactly ascertained—"live on love, as larks on leeks."

THEODORE HOOK, The Parson's Daughter. Vol. i, ch. 11. (1833)

<sup>9</sup> Listlessness and silence denote the lover. (Amantem languor et silentium arguit.)

HORACE, Epodes. No. xi, l. 9. (c. 20 B.C.)

Let every lover be pale; that is the color which suits him. (Palleat omnis amans: hic est color aptus amanti.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. i, l. 729. (c. 1 B.C.)

<sup>10</sup> The reason why lovers and their mistresses never tire of being together is because they are always talking of themselves. (Ce qui fait que les amants et les maîtresses ne s'ennuient point d'être ensemble, c'est qu'ils parlent toujours d'eux-mêmes.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 312. (1665)

When lovers love no longer, they find it very hard to part. (On a bien de la peine à rompre quand on ne s'aime plus.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 351

<sup>11</sup> His love is life to a lover. (Animast amica amanti.)

PLAUTUS, Bacchides, l. 193. (190 B.C.)

Find me a reasonable lover, and I'll give you his weight in gold. (Auro contra cedo modestum amatorem, a me aurem accipe.)

PLAUTUS, Curculio, l. 201. (c. 200 B.C.)

<sup>12</sup> A great lover of the ladies. (Magnus amator mulierum.)

PLAUTUS, Menaechmi, l. 268. (c. 200 B.C.)

Says he, "I am a handsome man, and I'm a gay deceiver.

GEORGE COLMAN, JR., Unfortunate Miss Bailey. (1812)

Lover, lunatic. (Amans amens.)

PLAUTUS, Mercator, l. 82. (c. 200 B.C.)

Of lunatics rather than of lovers. (Amentium. haud amantium.)

TERENCE, Andria, l. 218. (166 B.C.)

Lovers are madmen. (Amantes amentes sunt.)

HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, l. 18. (1869)

<sup>13</sup> Lovers, disdain your loves: then she who denied you yesterday will come to you today. (Contemnite, amantes!) sic hodie veniet, si qua negavit heri.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. ii, eleg. xiv, l. 19. (c. 24 B.C.) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, ii, 15.

If thou flee it [love], it shal flee thee;
Folowe it, and folowen shal it thee.

CHAUCER (?), Romaunt of the Rose, l. 4783.
(c. 1365)

Follow love, and it will flee thee, flee love and it will follow thee.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 32. (c.
1595) Cited by Ray, Fuller, and others.
Ray comments, "This was wont to be said of glory, Sequentem fugit, fugientem sequitur. Just like a shadow." See also under PLEASURE.

1 There is none would hurt a lover; lovers are sacred. (Nec tamen est quisquam, sacros qui laedat amantes.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. iii, eleg. xyl, l. 11. (c.
22 B. C.)

All mankind love a lover.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Love.
(1841) Usually quoted, "All the world loves a lover."

The best grafts in the world are built up on copy-book maxims and psalms and proverbs and Esau's fables. . . . Our peaceful little swindle was constructed on the old saying: "The whole push loves a lover."

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), A Tempered Wind.
(1908)

All the world loves a lover.

EUGENE O'NEILL, The Great God Brown: Prologue. (1926)

Everybody loves a lover.

KAUFMAN AND RYSKIND, Of Thee I Sing. Act i,
sc. 2. (1931)

2 The angry lover tells himself many a lie.
(Amans iratus multa mentitur sibi.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 13. (c. 43 B. C.)
A lover knows what he wants: what he should want is unseen. (Amans quid cupiat scit, quid sapiat non videt.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 15.
The lover dreams of his suspicions even when awake. (Amans quod suspicatur vigilans somniat.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 16.
A lover is like a torch—he blazes the more he is moved. (Amans ita ut fax agitando ardescit magis.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 38.

3 A pressing lover seldom wants success.
NICHOLAS ROWE, To the Inconstant: Epilogue.
l. 18. (a. 1718)

The adventurous lover is successful still.

POPE, Prologue for Mr. D'Urfey's Last Play.
(1727) See also under HEART: FAINT HEART
AND FAIR LADY.

4 It is as easy to count atomies as to resolve the propositions of a lover.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, iii, 2, 245. (1600)

5 Who can deceive a lover? (Quis fallere possit amantem?)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. iv, l. 296. (19 B. C.)

6 For what may we lovers not hope! (Quid non speremus amantes!)

VERGIL, Eclogues. No. viii, l. 26. (37 B. C.)

7 Frankie and Albert were lovers, O Lordy, how they could love.

Swore to be true to each other, true as the stars above;

He was her man, and he done her wrong.

UNKNOWN, Frankie and Albert. This is the original, or so-called St. Louis version, of this American classic, which relates the story of the shooting of Albert, or Allen, Britt, by Frankie Baker, at St. Louis, Mo., 15 Oct., 1899. Britt died in the City Hospital three days later. For an account of the tragedy see the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, 19 Oct., 1899; also JOHN HUSTON, Frankie and Johnny, as the song was later called. Huston states that there are more than two hundred versions.

II—Lovers' Perjuries

8 Oaths touching the matter of love do not draw down anger from the gods. (ἐπισπᾶσθαι τὴν ἀπὸ τῶν θεῶν ὀργὴν τοὺς γινόμενους ὀρκούς ὕπὲρ ἔρωτος.)

HESIOD, Aegimius. No. 3. (c. 800 B. C.) The account continues, "And thereafter Zeus ordained that an oath concerning the secret deeds of the Cyprian should be without penalty for men."

What they say is true—lovers' oaths enter not the ears of the immortals. (ἀλλὰ λέγουσιν ἀληθῆα τοὺς ἐν ἔρωτι | ὀρκούς μὴ δύρειν οὐατ' ἐς ἀθανάτων.)

CALLIMACHUS, Epigrams. No. xxvii, l. 3. (c. 250
B. C.)

9 Venus lends deaf ears to love's deceits. (Com-modat in lusus numina surda Venus.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. 8, l. 86. (c. 13 B. C.)

The queen of love,

As they hold constantly, does never punish,
But smile at, lovers' perjuries.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Great Duke of Florence. Act ii, sc. 3. (1627)

10 Jupiter from on high laughs at the perjuries of lovers. (Iuppiter ex alto periuria ridet amantum.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. i, l. 633. (c. 1 B. C.)

Jove laughs at lovers' perjuries, and bids the winds carry them away without fulfillment.
(Periuria ridet amantum Iuppiter et ventos inrita ferre iubet.)

TIBULLUS, Elegies. Bk. iii, eleg. 6, l. 49. (19 B. C.)

Do not the Gods, saye the Poets, laugh at the periurie of Lovers? and that Iupiter smyles at the crafte of Cupyd?

ROBERT GREENE, Mamillia, in Works (Grosart), ii, 92. (1580)

At lovers' perjuries, | They say, Jove laughs.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, ii, 2, 92. (1595)

Fool, not to know that love endures no tie,
And Jove but laughs at lovers' perjury.

DRYDEN, Palamon and Arcite. Bk. ii, l. 148.

(1700) The Germans say, "Der Himmel lacht des Meineids der Verliebten" (Heaven laughs at the perjuries of lovers).

<sup>1</sup> Lovers' solemn oaths are much like solemn hodge-podge. (Similest ius iurandum amantum quasi ius confusicium.)

PLAUTUS, Cistellaria, l. 473. (c. 200 B.C.)

A lover's oath involves no perjury. (Amantis ius iurandum poenam non habet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 37. (c. 43 B.C.)

Lovers' oaths, the sport of every lightest breeze.
(Lasciva volant levibus periuria ventis.)

CLAUDIAN, *Epithalamium De Nuptiis Honorii
Augusti*, l. 83. (A.D. 398)

A lover's oath is not liable for perjury.
(Ἀφροδίτης ὅρκος οὐκ ἐμπολιμύς.)

STOBAEUS, Florilegium, i, 28, 2. (c. 500)

Men in matters of love have as many ways to deceive as they have words to utter.

LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 299. (1580)

<sup>2</sup> Marriage vows As false as dicers' oaths.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 4, 44. (1600)

<sup>3</sup> Men's vows are women's traitors!

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline, iii, 4, 56. (1609)

When my love swears that she is made of truth,
I do believe her, though I know she lies.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. cxxxviii. (1609)

Also The Passionate Pilgrim, l. 1.

<sup>4</sup> The lecher's vows in ashes I record. (ὄρκους δὲ μοιχῶν εἰς τέφραν ἐγὼ γράφω.)

SOPHOCLES, Fragments. Frag. 694. (c. 425 B.C.)

Paraphrased by PLATO, Symposium, 183B:
"The vow of love-passion they say is no vow."

III—Lovers' Quarrels

<sup>5</sup> The dice of Love are madnesses and brawls.
(ἀστραγάλοι δ' Ἐρωτός εἰσιν μαῖαι τε καὶ κυνδοίμοι.)

ANACREON, Fragments. Frag. 47. (c. 500 B.C.)

Quoted by Scholiast on the Iliad, xxiii, 88.

See EDMONDS, Lyra Graeca, ii, 163.

<sup>6</sup> Little quarrels often prove
To be but new recruits of love.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. iii, canto i, l. 905. (1678)

Lovers' quarrels are soon adjusted.

APHRA BEHN, Emperor of the Moon. Act ii, sc.
1. (1687)

<sup>7</sup> He loves thee well that makes thee weep. (Ese te quiere bien que te hace llorar.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 20. (1605)

HE THAT LOVETH THEE CHASTENETH THEE, see under CHILD: SPARE THE ROD AND SPOIL THE CHILD.

<sup>8</sup> See how love follows anger. (Voilà comme l'amour succède à la colère.)

CORNILLE, Rodogune. Act iii, sc. 1. (1644)

<sup>9</sup> Love reproved more urgent grows.
(ρουθετούμενος ἔρως μᾶλλον πείθει.)

EURIPIDES, Steneboea. Frag. 665. (c. 440 B.C.)

Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 71A.

Mark how they fell out, and how they fell in.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 1. (1546)

As fayre weather cometh after a foule storme, so sweete tearmes succede sowre taunts.

LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 363. (1580)

By biting and scratching cats and dogs come together.

HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 18. (1869)

<sup>10</sup> A lovers' quarrel has but short-lived strength.
(ὀργή φιλοῦντων ὀλίγον λσχέει χρόνον.)

MENANDER, Fragments. Frag. 797K. (c. 300
B.C.) The Greek proverbial phrase is τῶν φιλοῦντων ὀργαί.

The quarrels of lovers are renewals of love.
(Amantium irae amoris integratio.)

TERENCE, Andria, l. 555. (166 B.C.) Andria was Terence's first comedy, and was wholly taken from the Greek of Menander. To this phrase he gave such a touch of genius that it has stood unchallenged for over two thousand years. It is cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, i, 89, and referred to by SAMUEL RICHARDSON,
Clarissa, iv, 48, "Old Terence has taken notice of that; and observes upon it, That lovers falling-out occasions lovers falling-in."
A shorter proverbial phrase is "Amor fit ira iucundior" (Quarrels make love pleasanter).
The Germans say, "Liebeszorn ist neuer Liebeszunder" (A lover's quarrel is new love-fire).

The variance of lovers (sayth Terence) is the renuynge of love.

ROBERT WHITINTON, Vulgaria, p. 39. (1520)

These small scoldings and petty contentions which burst from time to time between lovers are new refreshments and spurs of love. (Ces petites noi-settes, ces riottes, qui par certain temps sourdent entre les amans, sont nouveaulx refraischissemens, & aiguillons d'amour.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 12. (1545)

Then did she saie, Now have I found this pro-uerbe true to proue,
The falling out of faithful frends, renewing is of love.

RICHARD EDWARDS, *The Paradyse of Dainty
Deuises*. No. 42. (a. 1566)

Falling in after falling out may make them three.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus, iii, i, 112. (1601)

She would . . . pick quarrels upon no occasion.
because she would be reconciled to him again.
Amantium irae amoris redintegratio, . . . the falling out of lovers is the renewing of love.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy,
iii, ii, 3. (1621)

Love-quarrels oft in pleasing concord end.

MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 1008. (1671)

The falling out of lovers, you know.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

"The falling out of lovers," says he, . . . "is the renewal of love."

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Sir Charles Grandison,
iii, 18. (1753)

Lovers' quarrels that add a sweetness to those domestic joys.

DICKENS, Nicholas Nickleby. Ch. 10. (1839)

1 When a quarrel blows over, they are twice as fond of one another as they were before. (Bis tanto amici sunt inter se quam prius.)

PLAUTUS, Amphitryon, l. 943. (c. 200 B.C.)

No love is constant which cannot be provoked to quarrel. (Non est certa fides, quam non in iurgia vertas.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. iii, eleg. 8, l. 19. (c. 22 B.C.)

Where no quarrel comes, love unremembered slips away. (Ubi nulla simultas | incidit, admonitu liber aberrat amor.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 661. (c. 1 B.C.)

2 You must anger a lover if you wish him to love. (Cogas amantem irasci amare si velis.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 121. (c. 43 B.C.)

After much strife reconciliation becomes more beautiful. (Ex lite multa gratia fit formosior.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 191.

In love anger is always untruthful. (In amore semper mendax iracundia est.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 286.

3 The difference is wide that the sheets will not decide.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 131. (1678)

4 Love has in it all these evils: wrongs, jealousies, quarrels, reconcilements, war, then peace again. (Bellum, pax rursum.)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 61. (161 B.C.)

In love there are these evils: first war, and then peace. (In amore haec sunt mala: bellum, Pax rursum.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 3, l. 267. (35 B.C.)

LOYALTY, see Faithfulness

LUCK

See also Chance, Fortune

I—Luck: Good Luck

5 Hyperborean luck. (τύχης Ὑπερβορέου.)

AESCHYLUS, Libation-Bearers, l. 373. (458 B.C.)

Exceptionally good luck. In Agamemnon, l. 33, Aeschylus quotes another proverbial phrase for good luck, τρις ἑξ βαλοῦσης (Throwing three sixes), the highest throw at dice.

A heap of good things. (ἀγαθῶν σωρός.)

ARISTOPHANES, Plutus, l. 804. (388 B.C.)

Other Greek proverbial synonyms for good luck were: "A sea of good things" (ἀγαθῶν θάλασσα), ZENOBIUS, i, 9; "A swarm of good things" (ἀγαθῶν μυρμηκία), EUSTATHIUS, 194, 46; "A Thasos of luck" (Θάσσοι ἀγαθῶν), ZENOBIUS, iv, 34, because the island was very fertile; "The good things of the world" (τὰ τῆς γῆς ἀγαθά); "Good numbers of good things" (ἀγαθῶν ἀγαθίτες), by an unknown comic poet, No. 827 of Kock's edition.

6 The share of Hermes. (κοινὸς Ἑρμῆς.)

ARISTOTLE, Rhetoric, Bk. ii, ch. 24, sec. 2. (c. 330 B.C.) A proverbial expression meaning "halves." When anyone had a stroke of luck, such as finding a purse full of money in the street, his companion would cry κοινὸς Ἑρμῆς, and would expect to go halves in the find. Hermes was the god of luck and such a find was called ἑρμαῖον. Children still cry "halves" or "halvers" under similar circumstances.

This is the magic wand of Hermes. "Touch what you will," the saying goes, "and it will turn into gold." (τοῦτ' ἐστὶ τὸ τοῦ Ἑρμοῦ ῥαβδίον.)

EPICETUS, Discourses. Bk. iii, ch. 20, sec. 12. (c. A.D. 100)

7 Luck for the fools and chance for the ugly.

BERTHELSON, Dictionary: Luck. (1754)

8 Lucky men need no counsel.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 447. (1855)

9 If good lucke had been our good lord.

WILLIAM BULLEIN, A Dialogue Against the Feuer Pestilence, p. 101. (1564)

Luck is a Lord. . . . Hit or miss, Luck is all.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 272. (1709)

10 To have a run of good luck. (Correr el dado.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 20. (1605)

Literally "to run the die," i. e. dice. Cervantes quotes another proverb, "Todo es comenzar á ser venturoso" (To be lucky at the beginning is everything). However, as MICHAEL DRAYTON, Mooncalf (1753) points out, "Good luck never comes too late."

11 Better to have good fortune than to be a rich man's child.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 49. (1639)

Better be fortunate than rich.

UNKNOWN, New Foundling Hospital for Wit, iv, 128. (1784)

Better to be born lucky than rich.

MICHAEL DENHAM, Denham Tracts, i, 224.

(1846) The Germans say, "Wer Glück hat, führt die Braut heim" (The lucky man takes home the bride), a proverb said to have originated with an abduction in 871, meaning that luck is often the determining factor in success. "Glück macht Mut" (Luck makes courage) is another German proverb, cited by GOETHE.

12 Geve me good Fortune all men sayes, and throw me in the seas.

RICHARD EDWARDS, The Paradyse of Dainty Deuises. No. 27. (a. 1566)

Our old proverbe is, give me hap and cast me in the sea.

THOMAS CHURCHYARD, Churchyard's Charge, p. 28. (1580)

Here the proverb comes in and joins well, that, "Give a man luck, and cast him in the sea."

THOMAS SHELTON, tr., Don Quixote. Bk. ii. ch. 42. (1620)

Give a woman luck and throw her in the sea.
WILLIAM ROWLEY, A Woman Never Vext. Act i. (1632)

Give a man fortune and cast him into the sea.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 125. (1639)
Cited by KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 113, with the comment, "Spoken when a man is unexpectedly fortunate."

Give a Man Luck, and throw him into the Sea.
OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 271. (1709) "He'll not be drowned," says Dykes, "if the Proverb is true, but will be saved still, by one lucky Providence or another."
PLANCHÉ, Extravaganzas, i, 268, turns the proverb into a jingle, "Give a man but luck they say, sir, In the sea fling him you may, sir."

1
Lucky indeed is he who suffers no ill for one day. (Nimium boni est huic cui nihil est mali in diem.)

ENNIUS, Hecuba. Frag. 212, Loeb. (c. 180 B. C.)

2
He is like a cork. (Tanquam suber.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. iii, cent. vi, No. 26. (1508) Nothing will sink him.

His net caught fish, even when he was asleep. (ἡ εὐδοντας κύπτος αἰψοί.)

ERASMUS, Moriae Encomium. Sec. 111. (1511)
Of Timotheus, the luckiest of the Athenian generals.

Riches come to him sleeping.

BERTHELSON, Eng.-Danish Dictionary: Sleep. (1754)

Throw him into the river and he will rise with a fish in his mouth.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 123. (1817)

Of a good man whose luck seems never to desert him, the Arabs say, Throw him into the Nile, and he will come up with a fish in his mouth.

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 29. (1853)

A rose fell to the lot of the monkey.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 294. (1817)

He had luck he didn't deserve.

Like a cat, he always falls on his feet.

F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 168. (1902) See under CAT.

If he got stewed and fell in the gutter he'd catch a fish.

RING LARDNER, Horseshoes. (1926)

Some people would fall down a sewer and find a ring.

VAN WYCK MASON, The Bucharest Ballerina Murders, p. 24. (1940)

If he fell into a well, he'd come out with a gold watch and chain.

HAROLD W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 409. (1940)

3
Good Luck reaches farther than long Arms.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1717. (1732)

4
Good luck say: "Op'n yo' mouf en shet yo' eyes."

JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS, Uncle Remus: Plantation Proverbs. (1880)

5
Good luck is easier to win than to retain. (Fortunam citius reperias quam retineas.)

HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 134. (1869)
"Any fool may meet with luck, but only the wise man profits by it."

6
A fellow has got to be lucky. (Glück mus-der Mensch haben.)

ADOLF HITLER, Remark, 9 Nov., 1939, just after his escape by eleven minutes from the bombing of the Bürgerbräu Keller, at Munich.

7
Be firm! One constant element in luck
Is genuine solid old Teutonic pluck.

O. W. HOLMES, A Rhymed Lesson, l. 282. (1846)

8
At a lucky time. (Dextro tempore.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 1, l. 18. (35 B. C.)

9
A fortunate boor needs but be born.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 26. (1659)

A fortunate Man may be any where.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 114. (1732)

10
A lucky man is rarer than a white crow. (Felix ille tamen corvo quoque rarior albo.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vii, l. 202. (c. A. D. 120)

11
More by good luck than by good guiding.
Spoken when a thing ill managed falls out well.

KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 248. (1721)

Mazzini . . . made my hair stand on end with his projects. If he is not shot, or in an Austrian fortress within the month, it will be more by good luck than good guiding.

MRS. CARLYLE, Letter to Thomas Carlyle, 10 Aug., 1852.

12
It is an old proverb, "the more wicked, the more fortunate."

HUGH LATIMER, Sermons (P. S.), p. 280. (1550)

The more knave the better luck.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 333. (1605)

The verier knave the better lucke, say we

COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Escheoir. (1611)

The properer man, the worse luck.

JONSON, A Tale of a Tub. Act iii, sc. 4. (1633)

What says Pluck?—The worser knave, the better luck!

JOHN TATHAM, The Rump. Act iv, sc. 1. (1660)

The properer man (and so the honester) the worse luck.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 134. (1670)

The French say, "Aux bons mèche t-il" (For the good nothing doing).

Thieves and rogues have the best luck, if they do but escape hanging.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 136. (1678)

He's like Marten;

The more Knave, the better Fortune.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6332. (1732)

13
It was luck in the bag then.

JOHN LIGHTFOOT, Battle with Wasps Nest. (1649) A rare piece of good luck.

You have luck indeed; and luck in a bag.
SWIFT, Journal to Stella, 8 Sept., 1711.

1 Long was I, lady Lucke, your serving man.

SIR THOMAS MORE, Daisy the Dicer. (1534)

2 Good luck follows me like a dog.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), The Assessor of Success. (1907)

3 It's the way a man uses Luck that brings him eminence and makes us all pronounce him wise. (Proinde ut quisque Fortuna utitur, | ita praecllet atque exinde sapere eum omnes dicimus.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 679. (c. 195 B. C.)

Quoted by MONTAIGNE, iii, 8.

Many a stroke of luck has come to many a hopeless man. (Multa praeter spem scio multis bona evenisse.)

PLAUTUS, Rudens, l. 400. (c. 200 B. C.)

4 The man with luck enough gives ruin a wide berth. (Affatim aequa cui fortuna est inter-
(fium longe effugit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 45. (c. 43 B. C.)

Against the lucky even a god is powerless. (Contra felicem vix deus vires habet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 135.

The gods laugh, I think, when the lucky man makes his vow. (Deos ridere credo cum felix vovet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 169. If the reading is correct, it implies that the gods rejoice in their prospect of gain: the lucky man's vow is a sure debt.

Luck takes the step that no one sees. (Facit gradum Fortuna quem nemo videt.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 221.

It is very easy for the lucky man to do what his desires command. (Perfacile quod vota imperant felix facit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 525.

5 Good luck comes by cuffing.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 113. (1678)

The Spaniards say, "A puñadas entren las buenas hadas" (Good luck gets on by elbowing).

6 He hoists his sail before a fair wind. (Ch'ê ch'î p'êng lai tsou shun fêng.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 706. (1875) He enjoys good luck.

A ragged sail in a fair wind. (P ofan yü shün fêng.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 725. An unlucky fellow in luck's way.

7 As good luck would have it.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, iii, 5, 84. (1601)

8 It is not fit that while good luck is knocking at our door, we shut it.

THOMAS SHELTON, tr., Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1620) A shorter form is, "When good luck knocks, open the door."

8 Good luck comes with another morn. (τάχ' αἴριον ἔσσει' ἄμεινον.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. No. iv, l. 41. (c. 270 B. C.)

With a lucky man, all things are lucky. (ἐν δαβλίω δαβλία πάντα.)

THEOCRITUS, Idylls. No. xv, l. 24. (c. 270 B. C.)

The Latin is, "In beato omnia beata."

9 That weygh (as thou mayst se) a chippe of chance more than a pound of wit.

SIR THOMAS WYATT, Of the Courtier's Life. (c. 1530)

An ounce of luck excels a pound of wit. (Mieux vaut une once de fortune qu'un livre de sagesse.)

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Sagesse. (1611)

There is a Latin form, cited by HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 145, "Gutta fortunae prae dolio sapientiae" (A drop of luck is worth a barrel of wisdom).

10 Do you trust to luck, waiting for friends to settle on you like flies? (πότερον τῇ τύχῃ ἐπιτρέπεις, ἐάν τις σοι φίλος ὥστερ μύια πρόσπηται;)

XENOPHON, Memorabilia. Bk. iii, ch. 11, sec. 5. (c. 375 B. C.)

II—Luck: Bad Luck

11 Four things bring ill luck: ingratitude in good fortune, impatience in ill fortune, discontent with destiny, unwillingness to serve one's fellow men.

ABDULLAH AHSARI, Invocations. (c. 1075)

There is a Latin proverb which says, "Ubi mala fortuna, ibi mala fides" (Where there is bad luck, there is bad faith).

12 To be unlucky is poverty. (ἀπορία τὸ δυστυχεῖν.)

EURIPIDES, Ion, l. 971. (c. 419 B. C.)

13 It was his hard lucke & cursed chaunce.

ABRAHAM FLEMING, A Panoplie of Epistles, p. 39. (1576)

I have but lean luck.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors, iii, 2, 93. (1593)

[He] seemed to have the "devil's own luck."

NAT GOULD, The Double Event, p. 8. (1891)

14 He who is not Lucky, let him not go a-Fishing.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2392. (1732)

If your luck goes on at this Rate, you may very well hope to be hang'd.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2806.

The unsonsy [unlucky] fish aye gets the unsonsy bait.

HENDERSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 140. (1832)

15 Select the lucky and avoid the unlucky. Ill-luck is generally the penalty of folly, and there is no disease so contagious. (Conocer los afortunados para le eleccion y los desdichados para le fuga.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 31. (1647)

1 All the world is otemeale, and my poke left at home.

BRIAN MELBANCKE, Philotimus, sig. C3. (1583)

If it should rain porridge, he would want his dish.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 266. (1678)

What is he better for his wish,

When it rains porridge to want a dish.

Poor Robin's Almanack, May, 1692.

If it should rain Porridge, he'd want a Dish.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2687. (1732)

He looked like a feller who, when it rains mush, has got no spoon.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws.

Ch. 27. (1843)

When it rains porridge, hold up your dish.

SARAH O. JEWETT, Life of Nancy, p. 221. (1895)

2 A lefte hande lucke, this is yll lucke.

JEHAN PALSGRAVE, Acolastus, sig. X2. (1540)

Ill luck is good for something.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 326.

(1605) FULLER, Gnomologia, cites this form, and also an expanded one (No. 1389), "Even ill Luck it self is good for something in a wise Man's Hand."

As ill luck would have it.

THOMAS SHELTON, tr., Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 2. (1612)

What's worse than ill luck?

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 166. (1639)

WILKINS, Political Ballads, i, 5. (1641) WILSON, Projectors, ii, 1. (1664) etc., etc.

Ill luck is worse than found money.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 110. (1670)

Ill luck follows me like an intermittent fever.

J. K. PAULDING, The Bucktails. Act v, sc. 2. (1815)

When ill luck falls asleep, let nobody wake her.

HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 458. (1869)

3 He plucked a bad magpie. (Malam parram pilavit.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 43. (c. A. D. 60) He caught a Tartar; he had bad luck. The magpie was considered a bird of ill omen. HORACE, Odes, iii, 27, says, "May the wicked be guided by the omen of a screaming magpie."

Wherever the unlucky man goes he meets with disaster.

BHARTRIHARI, Niti Sataka. No. 90. (c. A. D. 100)

That man has the horse of Seius. (Ille homo habet equum Seianum.)

AULUS GELIUS, Noctes Atticae. Bk. iii, ch. 9.

(c. A. D. 150) Proverbial for bad luck. See under HORSE. Similarly, "Aurum Tolosanum" (The gold of Tolosa), for whoever touched a piece of it died an agonizing death.

As unlucky as a gladiator. (τῶν μονομαχοῦντων ἀθλιώτερος.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. (1508) Gladiators were unlucky because in each combat one of them had to fall.

Pour gold on him, he'll never thrive.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 220. (1639)

If I were to trade in winding-sheets, no one would die.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 590. (1817)

If I had been bred a hatter, little boys would have come into the world without heads.

LORD LYTTON, Money. Act ii, sc. 4. (1840)

4 Unlucky days. (ἀποφράδες ἡμέραι.)

PLATO, Laus. Sec. 800 D. (c. 375 B. C.)

My luck is gone. (ἔρρει τὰ ἐμὰ πράγματα.)

XENOPHON, Symposium. Bk. i, ch. 15. (c. 375 B. C.)

Luck's way is not my way. (πράσσομεν οὐχ ὡς λῶστα.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. Idyl xiv, l. 3. (c. 270 B. C.)

5 As good luck as had the cow that stuck herself with her own horn. As good luck as the lousy calf, that lived all winter and died in the summer.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 287. (1678)

Things . . . grew worse with me, who have had "as good luck as the cow that stuck herself with her own horn."

LORD LYTTON, Pelham. Ch. 55. (1828)

6 The Chevalier was . . . to use his own picturesque expression, "down on his luck."

THACKERAY, Pendennis. Ch. 61. (1849)

A clever rogue momentarily down on his luck.

C. M. DAVIES, Unorthodox London, p. 185. (1876)

7 Of the man to whom the most unlikely of calamities . . . befall, they say: He would fall on his back and break his nose.

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, i, 21. (1853)

"He who is born to misfortune falls on his back and fractures his nose" says a misanthropic humorist.

The Spectator (London), 18 May, 1912, p. 788

III—Luck Good and Bad

8 No man on earth is lucky in all things. (οὐ γάρ τις ἐπιχθονίων | πάντα γ' εὐδαίμων ἔφυ.)

BACCHYLIDES, For Hiero of Syracuse, l. 54 (476 B. C.)

God sends good luck and God sends bad.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 165 (1639)

9 If you are too fortunate, you will not know yourself. If you are too unfortunate, nobody will know you.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. Nos. 2733-34 (1732)

10 His owne chaunce no man knoweth But as Fortune it on him throweth.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. vi. (c. 1390) "You never know your luck."

If it be my luck, so; if not, happy man be his dole.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, iii, 4, 67. (1601)

11 If unlucky today, it will not be always so. (Non si male nunc, et olim sic erit.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, No. x, l. 17. (23 B. C.)

The Germans say, "Es wird schon wieder besser werden" (It will be better later on).

The worse luck now, the better another time.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 323. (1721)
Kelly says this is "spoken to hearten losing gamesters." Cited by FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4847. (1732)

Bad Luck often brings good Luck.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 834. (1732)

I hope we shall have better luck next time.

MRS. ANN RADCLIFFE, The Romance of the Forest. Ch. 15. (1791)

"Better luck next time, missus," replied I.

MARRYAT, Jacob Faithful. Ch. 2. (1834)

Let them adopt the maxim, "Better luck next time."

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Address, before the Wisconsin State Agricultural Society, Milwaukee, 30 Sept., 1859.

<sup>1</sup> Luck is a mighty queer thing. All you know about it for certain is that it's bound to change.

BRET HARTE, The Outcasts of Poker Flat. (1871)

"He has got his deserts," said Jaconda.

"Luck always changes."

OUIDA (LOUISE DE LA RAMÉE), Maremma. Bk. i, ch. 2. (1882)

You can take it as understood

That your luck changes only if it's good.

OGDEN NASH, Roulette Us Be Gay. (1935) The Germans say, "Je grösser das Glück, je näher die Tück" (The greater the luck, the nearer the treachery).

<sup>2</sup> He is lucky who has sowed and enjoyed the harvest thereof; he is unlucky who has died and left it behind.

SADI, Gulistan. (c. 1258) Cranmer-Byng, tr

<sup>3</sup> If luck comes, who comes not? If luck comes not, who comes? (Shih lai shui pu lai? shih pu lai shui lai?)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 701. (1875)

Out of luck, gold becomes iron; in luck, iron resembles gold. (Yun ch'ü chin ch'êng 't'ieh; shih lai 't'ieh ssü chin.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 710.

The lucky man meets a friend, the unlucky man a fair lady. (Shih lai fêng hao yu, yün ch'u yu chia jên.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 718

<sup>4</sup> Well, miss, you'll have a sad husband, you have such good luck at cards.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii. (1738)

The old proverb is verified in our case, unlucky in love, lucky at cards.

T. W. ROBERTSON, Play. Act iii, sc. 2. (1868)

The French say, "Qui est heureux au jeu, ne sera pas heureux en femme" (He who is lucky at cards will not be lucky with women). You know the proverb, 'Lucky in love, unlucky at cards.'

TOLSTOY, War and Peace. Vol. ii, p. i, ch. 14. (1865) Dole, tr.

Good luck in cards, bad luck in a husband (or wife).

COURTNEY, Folk-Lore Journal, v, 219. (1887)

One might almost think the old saying, "Lucky in life, unlucky in love," was true.

EDEN PHILLPOTTS, The Mother. Bk. ii, ch. 13. (1908)

I certainly believe in the saying, "Unlucky at cards, lucky in love."

RING LARDNER, Who Dealt? (1926)

"Lucky at cards, unlucky in love," he quoted.

PETER CHENEY, A Trap for Bellamy, p. 55. (1941)

<sup>5</sup> If thou must trade, let thy lot be with the lucky.

UNKNOWN, Alphabet of Ben Sira. (c. 1050)

Whether is be good or bad, lick the bone that has fallen to thy lot.

UNKNOWN, Alphabet of Ben Sira.

IV—Luck—Lucky Omens

<sup>6</sup> These messengers from Paradise are Mascots, my friends; happy the man to whom Heaven gives a Mascot.

(Ces envoyés du paradis, Sont des Mascottes, mes amis, Heureux celui que le ciel dote D'un Mascotte.)

DURU AND CHIVOT, La Mascotte. Act i. (1880)

Music by Edmond Audran.

<sup>7</sup> Dish yer rabbit foot'll gin you good luck.

JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS, Brother Rabbit and His Famous Foot. (1880)

<sup>8</sup> Nowe for good lucke, caste an olde shoe after mee.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 9. (1546)

And wheresoe'er thou move, good luck

Shall fling her old shoe after.

TENNYSON, Will Waterproof's Lyrical Monologue. St. 27. (1842)

<sup>9</sup> The third pays home, this prouerbe is to true.

JOHN HIGGINS, The Mirror for Magistrates. Pt. i; Q. Elstride, st. 23. (1575)

The third time pays for all.

A Warning for Faire Women. Act ii. (1599)

Primo, secundo, tertio, is a good play; and the old saying is, the third pays for all.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, v, 1, 40. (1600)

"This is the third strike I've seen," said she. . . .

"Well, third time pays for all."

MRS. GASKELL, North and South. Ch. 17. (1855)

The third time pays for all. Never despair.

J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 120. (1917)

<sup>10</sup> If that glass either break or fall,

Farewel the luck of Edenhall.

WILLIAM HUTCHINSON, The History of the County of Cumberland, i, 269. (1794) "An old painted drinking glass is preserved with great care [in the Musgrave family]. The legendary tale is, that the butler, going to draw water, surprised a company of fairies near the well: he seized the glass . . . they tried to recover it; but after an ineffectual struggle flew away," uttering the prophecy given above.

God prosper long from being broke
The Luck of Eden-hall.

DANIEL LYSONS, Magna Britannia: Cumberland. (1806)

The Luck of Roaring Camp.

BRET HARTE. Title of story. (1870)

When the Luck of the Vails is lost,
Fear not fire nor rain nor frost.

E. F. BENSON, Luck of the Vails, p. 16. (1901)

<sup>1</sup>
You'll have good luck to horseflesh, o' my life,
You ploughed so late with the vicar's wife.

BEN JONSON, The Metamorphos'd Gypsies.
(1621) In Works (1904), iii, 152.

He that would have good luck in horses must kiss
the Parsons wife.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 86. (1678)

Sir John: I have had devilish bad luck in horse-flesh of late.

Lord Smart: Why, sir John, you must kiss a parson's wife.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

<sup>2</sup>
Third time is charm. (Par foi, tierce foie droiz est.)

HUGUES PIAUCELE, D'Estormi, l. 452. (c. 1250)
See MONTAIGLON, Recueil des Fabliaux, i, 213.

The same idea is repeated in GUILLAUME LE NORMAND'S De la Male Honte, l. 126 (MONTAIGLON, iv, 44): "Tierce foïée, quar c'est droiz," and in a variant of HUGUES DE CAM-BRAY'S, La Male Honte, l. 19 (MONTAIGLON, v, 328): "La tierce fie, c'est le drois."

The third is a charm. Spoken to encourage those who have attempted a thing once and again to try a third time.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 331. (1721)

The third time's lucky.

ALEXANDER HISLOP, Proverbs of Scotland, p.
297. (1862)

<sup>3</sup>
In an uneven number heaven delights. (Numero deus impare gaudet.)

VERGIL, Eclogues. No. viii, l. 75. (37 B. C.) Repeated in Ciris, l. 373.

This is the third time; I hope good luck lies in odd numbers.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, v,
i, 2. (1601)

Of all the numbers arithmetically,
The number three is held for principlall.

UNKNOWN, The Times' Whistle. No. 18. (1616)

Initialled R. C., whose identity is unknown.
Methought there met the grand Cabal of Seven, (Odd numbers, some men say, do best please Heaven).

Dream of the Cabal, quoted in WHEATLEY,
Pepys, vii, 229n. (1672)

Number three is always fortunate.

TOBIAS SMOLLETT, Peregrine Pickle. (1751)

Quoted as "the well-known maxim." After the medieval Latin proverb, "Ternarius numerus est perfectissimus."

"Now, Rory, leave off, sir; you'll hug me no more;
That's eight times to-day that you've kissed me before."

"Then here goes another," says he, "to make sure,

For there's luck in odd numbers," says Rory O'More.

SAMUEL LOVER, Rory O'More or Good Omens.
(1826)

She was by no means averse to a third experiment in matrimony. . . . "There was luck in odd numbers."

JAMES PAYN, Thicker than Water. Ch. 1. (1883)
BORN WITH A CAUL, see under BIRTH.

LUCRE

<sup>4</sup>
Teaching things which they ought not for filthy lucre's sake. (διδάσκοντες ἃ μὴ δεῖ αἰσχροῦ κέρδους χάριν.)

New Testament: Titus, i, 11. c. A. D. 62) The Vulgate is, "Docentes quae non oportet, tur-pis lucri gratia." The phrase "filthy lucre" is repeated in 1 Timothy, iii, 3, and 8, the Greek being ἀφιλόργυρον and μὴ αἰσχροκερ-δεῖς, and the Latin, "Non cupidum" (Not avaricious), and "Non turpe lucrum sectantes."

Filthy lucre. (Obscaena pecunia.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 298. (c. A. D. 120)

I do not make that Judgment for the sake of filthy lucre.

JOSEPH ADDISON, The Tatler. No. 116. (1709)

I can catch my own without any appeal to "the Filthy."

R. D. BLACKMORE, Cripps, p. 225. (1877)

Great is the power of filthy lucre.

R. A. J. WALLING, *A Corpse by Any Other
Name*, p. 202. (1943)

LULU

<sup>5</sup>
That's lulu. It'll suit mama right down to the ground.

AUGUSTIN DALY, The Great Unknown, p. 13
(1889)

Mebbe you think I ain't got a lulu of a head on me this morning.

GEORGE ADE, Artie, p. 76. (1896)

She was a lulu.

O. HENRY, Cabbages and Kings, p. 301. (1904)

It was a lulu of a Society.

HERBERT QUICK, Yellowstone Nights, p. 221.
(1911)

LURCH

<sup>6</sup>
To run beside the Lydian chariot. (παρὰ τὸ Λύδιον ἄρμα θέειν.)

STOBAEUS, Florilegium. (c. A. D. 400) To be left in the lurch.

Lest he fail in his reckning . . . and so leave him self in the lurch.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Letter-Book, p. 163. (1576)

He . . . left both of them in the lurch.

THOMAS NASHE, *Have With You to Saffron-
Walden*, p. 119. (1596)

He leave him in the lurch, and shift for my selfe
RICHARD TARTTON, Jests, p. 37. (1611)

Here the Master in whom he trusted, happened to leave him in the lurch.

BROOKE, The Fool of Quality, lii, 240. (1768)

It will be an eternal shame if they leave the poor fellow in the lurch.

WALTER SCOTT, Familiar Letters, ii, 182. (1823)
She doesn't like to leave me in the lurch.

E. V. LUCAS, Advisory Ben, p. 234. (1923) A proverbial phrase supposed to be derived from a sixteenth century game resembling backgammon, in which to incur a "lurch" was to be on the road to defeat; so "to leave in the lurch" means to leave one in a position of difficulty without assistance.

LUST

<sup>1</sup>Ve men shal been as lewed as gees.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Marchantes Tale, l. 1031. (c. 1388)

Leudnes lacketh but occasyon. (Occasione duntaxat opus improbitate.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. ii, cent. i, No. 68. (1508) Taverner, tr., fo. 30. (1550)

Lewdness grows by Degrees, from a Wart to a Wen.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 31. (1709)

<sup>2</sup>Everything that lives is holy. . . . The lust of the goat is the glory of God.

WILLIAM BLAKE, The Marriage of Heaven and Hell. (1790)

<sup>3</sup>As rain breaks through an ill-thatched house, so lust breaks through an ill-trained mind.

DHAMMAPALA, Commentaries. Verse 13. (c.475) The most malignant of thy enemies is the lust that abides within thee.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. vii, Apologue 18. (c. 1258) Lust is a fire; from it thyself keep well, Nor kindle 'gainst thyself the flames of Hell.

SADI, Gulistan, viii, 31. Eastwick, tr. Luste is lorde of al: it hath ouercome Lodes, Learned men, Wise and eloquent: it hath vanquished the grestest knights that haue ben.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 71. (1578) Fonde lust, causeth drye bones, and lewd pastimes, naked purses.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 230. (1580)

Lust . . . is a short pleasure, bought with long pain, a honeyed poison, a gulf of shame, . . . the body's bane and the soul's perdition.

JOHN TAYLOR, The Unnatural Father. (1621) When the heart's full of lust, the mouth's full of leasings [falsehoods]. A reflection upon these damnable lies, enforc'd with horrid oaths, by which poor maids are deceiv'd.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 352. (1721) The new lust gives the lecher the new thrill.

JOHN MASEFIELD, The Widow in the Bye Street. (1912)

Lust is the oldest lion of them all.

MARJORIE SEIFFERT, An Italian Chest. (1925)

<sup>4</sup>A libertine Life is not a Life of Liberty.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 239. (1732)

<sup>5</sup>Thou deemest luste and love convertible.

THOMAS HOCCEVE, De Regimine Principum, l. 1563. (c. 1412)

Love comforteth, like sunshine after rain,
But lust's effect is tempest after sun.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 800. (1593)

<sup>6</sup>Good it were for thee to have dalliance in a woman's arms. (ἀγαθὸν δὲ γυναικί περ ἐν φιλότῃ | μισγεσθαι.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xxiv, l. 130. (c. 850 B.C.)

Sweet dalliance keepeth wrinkles long away;

Repentance follows them that have refused.

HENRY CONSTABLE, Sonnets to Diana. (c. 1592)

Himself the primrose path of dalliance treads.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, i, 3, 50. (1600)

In lust they burn,

Till Adam thus 'gan Eve to dalliance move.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ix, l. 1015. (1667)

<sup>7</sup>His lust is as young as his limbs are old.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 10. (1659)

<sup>8</sup>More lustful than jackasses. (ἀσελγέστεροι δὲ τῶν ὄνων.)

LUCIAN, Piscator. Sec. 34. (c. A. D. 180)

<sup>9</sup>Friar: Thou hast committed—

Barabas: Fornication? but that was in another Country:

And, besides, the Wench is dead.

MARLOWE, Jew of Malta. Act iv, sc. 2. (c. 1592)

<sup>10</sup>Dearly beloved, I beseech you, abstain from fleshly lusts. (ἀγαπητοί, παρακαλῶ . . . ἀπέχεσθαι τῶν σαρκικῶν ἐπιθυμιῶν.)

New Testament: I Peter, ii, 11. (c. A. D. 63)

The Vulgate is, "Charissimi, obsecro abstinere vos a carnalibus desideriiis."

For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world. (ἡ ἐπιθυμία τῆς σαρκὸς καὶ ἡ ἐπιθυμία τῶν ὀφθαλμῶν.)

New Testament: I John, ii, 16. (c. A. D. 95)

The Vulgate is, "Concupiscentia carnis est. et concupiscentia oculorum."

Fasting and gude bisines gers a man fle lustes of fless.

UNKNOWN, Cursor Mundi, l. 28749. (a. 1400)

The lusts and greeds of the Body scandalize the Soul; but it has to come to heel.

LOGAN PEARSALL SMITH, Afterthoughts. (1931)

<sup>11</sup>All women with the lamp away are the same (πάσα γυνή τοῦ λύχνου ἀρθέντος ἡ αὐτή ἐστι.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: Advice to a Bride, 144F (c. A. D. 95) Quoting what a woman once said to Philip of Macedon, when he was trying to force her against her will. Plutarch adds that this is well said as an answer to licentious men, but that the wedded wife ought not, especially when the light is out to be the same as ordinary women, but something very devoted and affectionate.

Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, iv, 77, with the Latin, "Sublata lucerna, nihil interest inter mulieres."

ALL WOMEN THE SAME IN THE DARK, see under DARKNESS.

1 There goes a saying, and 'twas shrewdly said,
Old fish at table, but young flesh in bed.

POPE, January and May, l. 101. (1709)

2 Can a man take fire in his bosom, and his clothes not be burned? (Numquid potest homo abscondere ignem in sinu suo, ut vestimenta illius non ardeant?)

Old Testament: Proverbs, vi, 27. (c. 350 B.C.)

3 To be carnally minded is death. (τὸ γὰρ φρόνημα τῆς σαρκὸς θάνατος.)

New Testament: Romans, viii, 6. (c. A.D. 57)

The Vulgate is, "Nam prudentia carnis, mors est."

4 A lecher's life. (βαρᾶλῖσθαι.)

THEANO, Letters. No. 1. (c. 550 B.C.)

Lesbian behavior. (ἐλεσβιάζειν.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Frogs, l. 1308. (450 B.C.)
Fit for the Lesbians. (λεσβίων ἄξια.)

ZENOBIUS, Adagia, iv, 92. (c. A.D. 130)

Corinthian behavior. (Κορινθιάζειν.)

ARISTOPHANES, Fragments. Fr. 133. (c. 400 B.C.)
Alley-cattling around.

KAUFMAN AND HART, The Man Who Came to Dinner. Act i. (1939)

5 Though Lust doe masque in ne'er so strange disguise,

She's oft found witty, but is never wise.

JOHN WEBSTER, The Dutchesse of Malfy. Act
ii, sc. 3. (1614)

LUTE

See also Orpheus

6 The music of the zither, the flute, and the lyre enervates the mind. (Enervant animos citharae, lotosque, lyraeque.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 753. (c. 1 B.C.)
He lumbryth on a lewed lewte.

JOHN SKELTON, Against a Comely Coistrown,
l. 29. (a. 1529)

The lascivious pleasing of a lute.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, i, 1, 13. (1592)

7 As sweet and musical

As bright Apollo's lute, strung with his hair.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, iv, 3. 342.
(1595)

Musical as is Apollo's lute.

MILTON, Comus, l. 478. (1634)

8 It is the little rift within the lute

That by and by will make the music mute.

TENNYSON, Merlin and Vivian, l. 388. (1870)

Such things as sometimes make a girl send back the engagement ring and other presents—'a rift within the loot,' the poetry man calls it.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), The Sphinx Apple.
(1907)

A rift within the lute. A hint of quarrels or trouble to come; a mark or sign of incompatibility.

PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: Rift. (1941)

LUXURY

9 Borne-along Artemon. (περιπόνηρος Ἀρτέμων.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Acharnians, l. 850. (425
B.C.) A proverbial saying, derived from an Artemon satirized by Anacreon as a rascal (πόνηρος), who, having become wealthy, was noted for his luxury and never moved except on a litter. See PLUTARCH, Pericles, ch. 27.

He who lies on a perfumed couch is no less dead than he who is dragged along by the executioner's hook. (Aeque qui in odoribus iacet, mortuus est quam qui rapitur unco.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxxii, sec. 3. (c.
A.D. 64)

Them as ha' never had a cushion don't miss it.

GEORGE ELIOT, Adam Bede. Ch. 40. (1859)

10 You're asking me for figs. (σὺ δὲ σὺκά μ' αἰτεῖς.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Wasps, l. 303. (422 B.C.)

Even if I had hare's and peacock's milk. I wouldn't eat it. (οὐδ' ἐλ γάλα λαγοῦ εἶχον καὶ ταῶς, κατ' ἥσθιον.)

ALEXIS, Fragment. (c. 1100)

11 Soft climates breed soft men; the same soil never produces both delicacies and heroes.
(φιλέειν γὰρ ἐκ τῶν μαλακῶν χώρων μαλακοὺς γίνεσθαι.)

CYRUS, to the Persians, when they suggested moving from their rugged land to a milder and more pleasant one. "Do so," said Cyrus,
"but if you do, prepare to be no longer rulers, but subjects, for luxury will undo you." (c. 540 B.C.) See HERODOTUS, History.
bk. ix, sec. 122.

Once upon a time the Milesians were brave.
(πάλαι ποτ' ἦσαν ἀλκιμοὶ Μιλήσιοι.)

ARISTOPHANES, Plutus, ll. 1002, 1075. (388 B.C.)

A proverb, originally a line of Anacreon's, applied to the Milesians after they had degenerated into luxury.

On the soft beds of luxury most kingdoms have expired.

EDWARD YOUNG, The Centaur. Letter ii. (1755)

Luxury is an enticing pleasure, a bastard mirth, which hath honey in her mouth, gall in her heart,
and a sting in her tail.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblemes: Bk. i, emb. 3.
(1635)

12 All their luxury was doing good.

SIR SAMUEL GARTH, Claremont. (1715)

Learn the luxury of doing good.

GOLDSMITH, The Traveller, l. 22. (1764)

She indulged herself . . . in all the luxury of tender grief.

FIELDING, Tom Jones. Bk. vii, ch. 5. (1749)

13 Persian elegance, my lad, I hate. (Persicos odi, puer, apparatus.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 38, l. 1. (23 B.C.)

I hate all your Frenchified fuss.

W. M. THACKERAY, Ad Ministram. (a. 1863)

14 No nation was ever hurt by luxury, for . . .
it can reach but to a very few.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 13 April, 1773.

<sup>1</sup> People have declaimed against luxury for two thousand years, in verse and in prose, and have always loved it. (On a déclamé contre le luxe depuis deux mille ans, en vers et en prose, et on l'a toujours aimé.)

VOLTAIRE, Dictionnaire Philosophique: Luxe. (1764)

The superfluous, a very necessary thing. (Le superflu, chose très nécessaire.)

VOLTAIRE, La Mondaine, l. 21. (c. 1765)

Give us the luxuries of life, and we will dispense with its necessities.

JOHN LOTHROP MOTLEY, Epigram. (c. 1855)
As quoted by HOLMES, The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 6. According to Frank Harris, this was a favorite with Oscar Wilde, who did not hesitate to use it in The Picture of Dorian Gray.

<sup>2</sup> Every degree of luxury hath some connection with evil.

JOHN WOOLMAN, Journal. Ch. 3. (1774)

M

MACHINERY

See also Tool

<sup>3</sup> To throw sand in the wheels, to cast obstruction in the way of an undertaking.

J. R. BARTLETT, Americanisms, p. 793. (1877)
I may not know anything about my own machinery, but I know how to stick a ramrod into the other fellow's.

SHAW, Heartbreak House. Act iii. (1913)
Don't throw a monkey-wrench into the machinery!

PHILANDER JOHNSON, Shooting Stars. See Everybody's Magazine, May, 1920.
Don't toss any more monkey-wrenches into the machinery.

E. S. GARDNER, The D.A. Goes to Trial, p. 185. (1940)

I never met anyone like you for trying to throw a spanner into the works.

GEORGETTE HEYER, Envious Casca, p. 286. (1941)
Only a mug tries to throw a spanner in the works.
PETER CHENEY, The Stars Are Dark, p. 57. (1943)

<sup>4</sup> The superior man is not a machine.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. ii, ch. 12. (c. 500 B.C.)
Man is a machine into which we put what we call food and produce what we call thought

R. G. INGERSOLL, The Gods. (1872)
The evil that machinery is doing is . . . that it makes men themselves machines also.

OSCAR WILDE, Press Interview, Omaha, Neb. (1882) See The Omaha Herald, 22 March
You're not a man, you're a machine.

SHAW, Arms and the Man. Act iii. (1901)

<sup>5</sup> Like a Machine which, when some god appears, We see descend upon our Theatres.

CHARLES COTTON, The Wonders of the Peake. (1681) THE GOD FROM THE MACHINE, see under GODS.

The Machinery, Madam, is a term invented by the Critics, to signify that part which the Deities, Angels or Daemons, are made to act in a poem.
POPE, The Rape of the Lock: Dedication. (1714)

<sup>6</sup> Things are in the saddle and ride mankind.

R. W. EMERSON, Ode. (1846)

Faith in machinery is our besetting danger.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Culture and Anarchy. Ch. 1. (1869)

The world is dying of machinery.

GEORGE MOORE, Confessions of a Young Man. Ch. 7. (1888)

Technology and the machine resurrected San Francisco while Pompeii still slept in her ashes.

SILAS BENT, Machine Made Man, p. 326. (1930)

MAD

<sup>7</sup> Mad as May-butter.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Noble Gentleman, Act i, sc. 2. (c. 1616) A reference to the proverb, "Butter goes mad twice a year." i. e. when very hard and when very soft. See under BUTTER.

<sup>8</sup> As mad as a tup [ram] in a halter.

CHARLOTTE BURNES, Shropshire Folk-Lore, p. 595. (1883) Notes and Queries, ser. ix, vol. viii, p. 501. (1901) "In Derbyshire there is no commoner saying to express anger shown by any one than to say that he or she was 'as mad as a tup.'"

<sup>9</sup> This somnour wood [mad] were as an hare.

CHAUCER, The Freres Tale, l. 29. (c. 1386)

There he rennyth wode as ony hare.

UNKNOWN, Partonope of Blois, l. 7934. (c. 1450)
And be as braynless as a Marshe hare.

COLVYN BLOWBOLS, Testament, l. 303. (c. 1500)

In HAZLITT, Early Popular Poetry, i, 105.

Thou mad March hare.

JOHN SKELTON, A Replycacion, l. 35. (1501)

As mad not as a march hare, but as a madde god.

SIR THOMAS MORE, The Supplycacion of Soulys. (1529)

Ye fret and fume, as mad as a marche hare.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

Cited by Ray and Fuller, and frequently quoted. See FIELDING, Tom Jones, bk. xii, ch. 7. (1749) SCOTT, Rob Roy, ch. 23. (1818) HALIBURTON, Wise Saws, ch. 8. (1843) DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit, ch. 46. (1850) WREN, Uniform of Glory, p. 39. (1941) etc., etc <sup>10</sup> Crazy as a loon.

O. HENRY, A Blackjack Bargainer. (1910)

He is crazy as a bedbug.

ERNEST HEMINGWAY, For Whom the Bell Tolls, p. 418. (1940) ARMSTRONG, Case of the Weird Sisters, p. 202. (1943)

He's as cuckoo as anything that was ever put in a clock.

KENT, Jason Burr's First Case, p. 107. (1941)

<sup>1</sup> The Colonel has got his mad up.

W. L. GOSS, The Soldier's Story of Captivity at Andersonville, p. 258. (1867)

That got my mad up too.

OCTAVE THANET (ALICE FRENCH), Otto the Knight. (1891)

When he gets his mad up, it's a case of get out from under.

LONDON, The Valley of the Moon, p. 106. (1913)

<sup>2</sup> Running about like mad.

HENRY MORE, An Antidote against Atheisme. Bk. iii, ch. 7. (1653)

A mad coachman, that drove like mad.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 13 June, 1663.

Forms, that jump'd and ran about like mad.

RICHARDSON, Pamela, iv, 118. (1742)

We . . . heard our fellows cheering like mad.

FORBES-MITCHELL, Reminiscences of the Great Mutiny, p. 101. (1893)

<sup>3</sup> It would make a man mad as a buck.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors, iii, 1, 72. (1593)

<sup>4</sup> By the Lord, this love is as mad as Ajax.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, iv, 3, 7. (1595)

And run as mad as Ajax.

CHAPMAN, Bussy d'Ambois. Act iii. (1607)

Love is as mad as Ajax.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3287. (1732)

<sup>5</sup> Mad as a hatter.

THACKERAY, Pendennis, Ch. 10. (1849)

He's a very good fellow, but as mad as a hatter.

THOMAS HUGHES, Tom Brown's School Days. Pt. ii, ch. 3. (1857)

A Mad Tea-Party.

LEWIS CARROLL (CHARLES LUTWIDGE DODGSON), Alice's Adventures in Wonderland. Ch. 7. Heading. At which the March Hare and the Hatter both figured.

Mad as a hatter.

BERNARD SHAW, Major Barbara. Act ii. (1905) Heartbreak House. Act i. (1913) etc., etc.

HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 192, says the phrase has no connection with makers of head-gear, but is a corruption of the French, "Il raisonne comme une huitre" (He reasons like an oyster). On the other hand, DR. ALICE HAMILTON, in Exploring the Dangerous Trades, states that the true origin of the phrase "Mad as a hatter" lies in the fact that mercury is used in the making of felt hats, and the poison resulting from its use over a period of years eventually causes the hat makers' muscles to jerk violently and involuntarily, from which the hatters' friends concluded that they were mad.

<sup>6</sup> I'm as mad as a wet hen.

P. G. WODEHOUSE, Money in the Bank, p. 148. (1942) Repeated on p. 199. MANNING LONG, False Alarm, p. 204. (1943)

<sup>7</sup> As madde as a weaver.

UNKNOWN, Everie Woman in Her Humour. Act i. (1609) In BULLEN, Old Plays, iv, 314.

MADNESS

See also Bedlam; Mind: The Mind Diseased; Sanity

<sup>8</sup> The prouerbe saith, that the most wilde are in least danger to be starke madde.

THOMAS ADAMS, Works, p. 498. (1630)

There's difference between staring and stark mad.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii. (1738)

<sup>9</sup> The different sorts of madness are innumerable. (Maniae infinitae sunt species.)

AVICENNA, Apothegm. (c. 1000) As quoted by RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. v, prologue. Avicenna was an Arabic physician, the author of many treatises on medicine, in which Rabelais was deeply interested.

<sup>10</sup> Lucid intervals and happy pauses.

FRANCIS BACON, History of King Henry VII. Sec. 3. (1622)

Some beams of wit on other souls may fall, Strike through and make a lucid interval.

DRYDEN, MacFlecknoe, l. 21. (1682)

Lucid Intervals.

E. S. MARTIN. Title of book of essays. (1900)

<sup>11</sup> Madness must necessarily have more followers than discretion. (Más acompañados y paniaguados debe tener la locura que la discreción.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 13. (1615)

<sup>12</sup> Wel neigh he wex out of his minde.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. v, l. 1442. (c. 1380)

Breeding sutch a bees nest in his braine.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 30. (1576)

His garret is full of rats.

O. HENRY, A Little Local Color. (1910)

He's off his chump, he is.

BERNARD SHAW, Pygmalion. Act ii. (1912)

I'm going clean off my chump.

SHAW, Heartbreak House. Act ii. (1913)

His father's sister had bats in the belfry.

EDEN PHILLPOTTS, Peacock House, p. 219. (1926) See under BAT.

Sounds like rats in the garret or bats in the belfry.

J. J. CONNINGTON, Four Defences, p. 158. (1940)

Anne would say you had bells in the belfry. Or campanophilia.

MICHAEL INNES, Comedy of Terrors, p. 164. (1940)

I've gone off my rocker.

ELLIOTT PAUL, Mayhem in B-Flat, p. 107. (1940)

MAGGOTS IN THE BRAIN, see MAGGOT.

<sup>1</sup> Queer street is full of lodgers just at present.
DICKENS, Our Mutual Friend. Bk.iii, ch.1. (1865)

<sup>2</sup> It is best to use an other mannes madnes.
(Optimum aliena insania frui.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. ii, cent. iii, No. 39.
(1508) TAVERNER, tr., fo. 34. (1550) Taverner explains: "We use, enjoye, or take the commoditie of other mennes madnes, when the thyng that other men do rasshelye or folyyshelye we applye to oure profytte, pleasure and commoditie."

<sup>3</sup> Once wood [mad] and aye the waur [worse].
DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 8. (c. 1595) Cited by KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 271 (1721), with the explanation, "They who have once been mad will seldom have their senses sound and well again."

Man's state implies a necessary curse:

When not himself, he's mad; when most himself, he's worse.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblemes. Bk. ii, emb. 14. (1635)

<sup>4</sup> Better mad with everybody than wise alone.
(Antes loco con todos que cuerdo á solas.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 133. (1647) Gracian adds that this is a political maxim.

<sup>5</sup> Zeus the counsellor hath utterly robbed him of his wits. (ἐκ γὰρ οἱ φρένας εἴλετο μητίετα Ζεὺς.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. ix, l. 377. (c. 850 B.C.)

The gods have made thee mad. (μάργην σε θεοὶ θέσαν.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xxiii, l. 11. (c. 850 B.C.)

'Tis easy for a God to steal a man's wits. (ρεῖα θεοὶ κλέπτουσιν ἀνθρώπων νόον.)

SIMONIDES, Victory-Songs. Frag. 53. (c. 475 B.C.) As cited by STOBAEUS, ii, 10.

Reckless madness from the gods. (εἰ<τ> οὐν ἀσάλῃς θεόθεν μανία.)

AESCHYLUS, Fragments. Frag. 179, Smyth. (c. 458 B.C.)

<sup>6</sup> Madman, distraught of wit, thou art beside thyself! (μαϊνόμενε, φρένας ἤλε, διέφθορας.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xv, l. 128. (c. 850 B.C.)

What madness has seized you? (Quae te dementia cepit?)

VERGIL, Eclogues. Ecl. vi, l. 47. (37 B.C.)

<sup>7</sup> A pleasant madness. (Amabilis insania.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 4, l. 5. (23 B.C.)

It is pleasant to go mad. (Insanire juvat.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 19, l. 18. (23 B.C.)

It is pleasant at times to play the madman. (Aliquando et insanire iucundum est.)

SENECA, De Tranquillitate Animi. Sec. 17 (c. A.D. 50) Quoted as a Greek saying.

<sup>8</sup> I teach that all men are mad. (Doceo insanire omnis.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 3, l. 81. (35 B.C.)

The Stoic maxim was "Insaniunt omnes praeter sapientem" (All are mad except the man who is wise).

It is a common calamity; we are all mad at some time or other. (Id commune malum; semel insanivimus omnes.)

BATTISTA MANTUANUS, Eclogues. Ecl. i. (c. 1500) BOSWELL, Life of Johnson, 30 March, 1783, relates that Johnson told him he had once offered a reward of ten guineas to anyone who could trace the source of this proverb. No one could, but Johnson himself many years afterwards met with it by chance in the works of Mantuanus.

Every man is mad, but in a different manner, and upon some particular objects.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Dialogues of the Dead, p. 267.

(a. 1721) Usually stated, "Every man is mad on some point."

Men are so necessarily mad, that not to be mad would make one a madman of another order of madness. (Les hommes sont si nécessairement fous, que ce serait être fou par un autre tour de folie que de ne être fou.)

BLAISE PASCAL, Pensées. Pt. ii, art. xvii, No 88. (c. 1660)

<sup>9</sup> He prepares to go mad with fixed rule and method. (Insanire paret certa ratione modoque.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 3, l. 271. (35 B.C.)

Though this be madness, yet there is method in 't.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, ii, 2, 208. (1600)

My friend, about whose madness I now saw, or fancied that I saw, certain indications of method.

EDGAR ALLAN POE, The Gold-Bug. (1843)

A fear of completely knocking up . . . induced me to preserve some little method in my madness.

F. E. SMEDLEY, Frank Fairleigh. Ch. 29. (1850)

I have usually found there was method in his madness.

CONAN DOYLE, The Reigate Puzzle. (1893)

He may be mad, but there's method in his madness. There nearly always is method in madness It's what drives men mad, being methodical

G. K. CHESTERTON, The Fad of the Fisherman (1922)

There was method even in that woman's madness

JAMES HILTON, Was It Murder? Ch. 14. (1932)

He interspersed his madness with plenty of method.

HOWIE, Murder for Christmas, p. 309. (1941)

<sup>10</sup> Sure he's melancholy mad. (οὐτοσὶ μελαγχολᾷ.)

MENANDER, Girl from Samos, l. 218. (c.300 B.C.)

Moon-struck madness.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xi, l. 487. (1667)

<sup>11</sup> Can it be that they are mad themselves, since they call me mad? (An illi perperam insanire me aiunt. ipsi insaniunt?)

PLAUTUS, Menaechmi, l. 962. (c. 200 B.C.)

Every madman thinks all other men mad. (Insanus omnis fuere credit ceteros.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No.332. (c.43 B.C.)

Among madmen you fear to be thought mad. (Insanos qui inter vereare insanus haberi.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. iii, l. 40. (35 B.C.)

He appears mad indeed but to a few, because the majority are infected with the same disease. (Nimirum insanus paucis videatur, eo quid | maxima pars hominum morbo iactatur eodem.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 3, l. 120.

With the mad it is necessary to be mad. (Necesse est cum insanientibus furere.)

PETRONIUS ARBITER, Satyricon. (c. A. D. 60)

The madness of one makes many mad. (Unius dementia dementes efficit multos.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 448.

(1869) "Fools go in throngs." Another Latin proverb is, "Furiosus furore suo punitur" (A madman is punished by his own madness).

<sup>1</sup> That he is mad, 'tis true; 'tis true 'tis pity; And pity 'tis 'tis true.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 97. (1600) I am but mad north-north-west: when the wind is southerly I know a hawk from a handsaw.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, ii, 2, 396.

They're only mad nor' nor'-west. They can tell a hawk from a handsaw, I promise you.

NGAIO MARSH, Death of a Peer, p. 173. (1940)

<sup>2</sup> My wits begin to turn.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, iii, 2, 67. (1605)

That way madness lies.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, iii, 4, 21. (1605)

<sup>3</sup> You will never run mad, niece; No. not till a hot January.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing, i, 1, 93. (1598)

You'll never be mad, you are of so many minds.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 118. (1670)

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

<sup>4</sup> This is very midsummer madness.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, iii, 4, 61. (1599) Midsummer madness. Extreme folly; the height of madness. . . . At the midsummer noon (luna), madness, it was formerly supposed, is prevalent.

ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés. (1941)

<sup>5</sup> Whom the gods intend to make miserable they lead to error. (τὸ κακὸν δοκεῖν ποτ' ἐσθλὸν | τῷδ' ἔμμεν ὅτω φρένας | θεὸς ἄγει πρὸς ἅπαν.)

SOPHOCLES, Antigone, l. 621. (c. 441 B.C.)

Whom God wishes to destroy, he first makes mad. (ὃν θεὸς θέλει ἀπόλεσαι, πρῶτ' ἀπόφρεναι.)

EURIPIDES, Fragments. (c. 425 B.C.) See

BARNES, Euripides, p. 515, l. 436. Also quoted in a note by BOSWELL, Life of Johnson, 30

March, 1783. "I once talked to him of some of the sayings which every body repeats, but nobody knows where to find, such as Quos

deus vult perdere, prius dementat," Boswell writes, and then in a note, adds that the line was found among the fragments of Euripides

by "Mr. John Pitts, late Rector of Great Brickhill, in Buckinghamshire." The familiar Latin phrase is "Quos [or quem] deus vult

perdere, prius dementat," or "Deus quos vult perdere, dementat prius" (Those—or he—whom God would ruin, he first deprives of reason), and as Boswell indicates, its origin is obscure, but probably derives from Euripides, though SMITH, Oxford Dictionary of Proverbs, p. 588/1, says it is after Sophocles. It is perhaps worth noting that PLUTARCH, Moralia: How to Study Poetry, has preserved the axiom, but as a fragment of Aeschylus. Whatever its source, few Latin maxims have been more widely quoted—so widely that only a few variants need be given here.

In dealing with the wicked, the gods first deprive them of their senses. (οἱ θεοὶ οὐδὲν πρότερον ποιοῦσιν ἢ τῶν πονηρῶν ἀνθρώπων τὴν διανοίαν παράγουσι.)

LYCURGUS, In Leocratem. Ch. 21, sec. 92. (c. 335 B.C.) Quoted as "from one of the old poets."

Fortune deprives of his wits the man whom she would ruin. (Stultum facit Fortuna quem vult perdere.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 671. (c. 43 B.C.) Whom God will punish, he will first take away the understanding.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 690. (1640) For those whom God to ruine has design'd, He fits for Fate, and first destroys their Mind.

DRYDEN, Hind and Panther, iii, 1093. (1687) God dement's him who is to be destroyed.

P. PERCIVAL, Tamil Proverbs. No. 432. (1842) Quem oderint dii, hunc pedagogem fecerunt ('Whom the gods hate, they make a teacher') is a derivative of the anonymous Quem Deus perdere vult, dementat prius ('Whom God wishes to destroy, he first drives mad'), a Christian version of Quem Iuppiter perdere vult, dementat prius (a maxim of obscure origin which may have been invented in Cambridge about 1640).

ARCHER TAYLOR, The Proverb, p. 20. (1931) Whom the gods destroy they first make unsuspecting.

HOWIE, Murder's So Permanent, p. 24. (1942)

MAGGOT

<sup>6</sup> Have you not maggots in your brains?

JOHN FLETCHER, Women Pleased. Act iii, sc. 4. (c. 1625) Whimsies, crotchets.

There's a strange Magot hath got into their Brain

JAMES HOWELL, Letters, ii, 328. (c. 1645)

He puts off . . . the maggots of his own brain for divine inspiration.

Harleian Miscellany, vii, 597. (1675)

Soon as a maggot crept into my head,

I caught a stump of pen and put it down.

JOHN WOLCOTT (PETER PINDAR), Pitt and His Statue. (1802)

For a' the nonsense maggots that ye whiles take into your head, ye are the maist wise and discreet o' a' our country gentles.

SCOTT, The Antiquary. Ch. 38. (1816)

She's got some maggot in her head about being loved for her own sake.

D. C. MURRAY, Tales, p. 255. (1898)

I shall do it when the magget [whim, fancy] bites. Je le ferai, quand il m'en prendra envie.

GUY MIEGE, French-English Dictionary: Magget. (1687)

Prithee, where bites the magot today, Trimmer?
SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, The Observer. No. 470. (1683)

So touchy when the maggot takes him.

EDWARD WARD, Works, iv, Verse 21. (1709)
A maggoty unsettled head.

JOHN NORRIS, A Collection of Miscellanies, p. 136. (1678) Full of whims and fancies.

The common saying that a whimsical person is maggoty . . . perhaps arose from the freaks the sheep have been observed to exhibit when infested by their bots.

KIRBY AND SPENCE, Entomology, i, 126. (1816)

MAGNANIMITY

1 Magnanimity in politics is not seldom the truest wisdom; and a great empire and little minds go ill together.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech on Conciliation with America, 22 March, 1775.

2 Of all virtues, magnanimity is the rarest. There are a hundred persons of merit for one who willingly acknowledges it in another.

HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 1. (c. 1821)
Magnanimity is often concealed under an appearance of shyness and even poverty of spirit.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 10.
3 Magnanimity affects to disdain all, in order to gain all. (La magnanimité méprise tout pour avoir tout.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 248. (1665)
Magnanimity is a noble effort on the part of pride, whereby man gains control of himself in order to gain control of all the world. (La Magnanimité est un noble effort de l'orgueil par lequel il rend l'homme maître de lui-même, pour le rendre maître de toutes choses.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 628.
Magnanimity is the quality of kings. (La magnanimité est l'esprit des rois.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 370. (1746)

MAGNIFICAT

4 The note is heere all out of place . . . and so, their note comes in like Magnificat at Matins.

LANCELOT ANDREWES, Sermon at Spital. (1588)
Chanter Magnificat à matines. To doe things disorderly, or use a thing unseasonably.

COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Magnificat. (1611)
To looke to heare a Magnificat at Mattens, or to seeke after the man in the Moone.

JAMES MABBE, tr., Guzman, ii, 75. (1622)
He . . . made a mock at the gods, would cause sing Magnificat at Matines.

SIR THOMAS URQUHART, tr., Rabelais. Bk. i, ch. 11. (1653)

5 Accomptyng to be in me no lyttell presumption, that I wylle in notynge other mens vices correct Magnificat.

SIR THOMAS ELYOT, Of the Knowledge which Maketh a Wise Man: Preface. (1533) To correct Magnificat is a proverbial phrase for unreasonable or presumptuous fault-finding, from the Latin magnificare, to magnify. The Magnificat is the hymn of the Virgin Mary in Luke i, 46-55, beginning, in the Vulgate, Magnificat anima mea Dominum (my soul doth magnify the Lord), used as a canticle at vespers.

Thou . . . takest vpon the to correct Magnificat.

JEHAN PALSGRAVE, Acolastus, sig. B3. (1540)

This is according to the old saying, to correct Magnificat.

PETER HEYLIN, Animadversions. (1659) In FULLER, The Appeal of Injured Innocence, 514.

To correct the Magnificat; Nodum in scirpo quaerere [To hunt for a knot in a bulrush].

WILLIAM ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis, p. 388. (1681) See under LABOR LOST.

'Tis the same case where subjects take upon them to correct Magnificat, and to prescribe to their superiors.

L'ESTRANGE, tr., Aesop, p. 283. (1694)

6 Suche . . . yt will take vpon them to bee doctours in those thynges in whiche theimselfes haue no skills at all, for whiche wee saie in Englyshe, to correcte Magnificat before he haue learned Te Deum.

NICOLAS UDALL, tr., Erasmus' Apophthegms, fo. 342 b. (1542) To attempt that for which one has no qualifications.

That correcteth Magnificat before he can sing Te Deum.

BRIAN MELBANCKE, Philotimus, sig. E1. (1583)

They would correct Magnificat, not knowing Quid significat.

THOMAS NASHE, Works (Grosart), i, 152. (1589)

MAGPIE

7 One [magpie] for sorrow: two for mirth: three for a wedding: four for a birth: five for silver: six for gold: seven for a secret, not to be told: eight for heaven: nine for hell: and ten for the devil's own sel.

MICHAEL DENHAM, Proverbs, p. 35. (1846)

One's sorrow, Two's good luck, Three's a wedding, Four's death.

DINSDALE, Teesdale Glossary, p. 95. (1849)

In Lancashire they say, "One for anger, Two for mirth, Three for a wedding, Four for a birth, Five for rich, Six for poor, Seven for a witch, I can tell you no more."

Lancashire Folk-Lore, p. 144. (1867) There are many other local variations.

I never see magpies myself without repeating the old rhyme: "One for sorrow, Two for mirth, Three for a death, Four for a birth, Five, you will shortly be in a great company."

A. C. BENSON, Along the Road, p. 162. (1913)

8 [He] mai perhaps fli at a pie, as ye proverb is, but he is most likli to catch a daw.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Letter-Book, p. 163. (1576)

MAHOMET

<sup>1</sup> You shall see a Bold Fellow, many times, doe Mahomets Miracle. Mahomet made the People beleieve, that he would call an Hill to him; And from the Top of it, offer up his Praiers, for the Observers of his Law. The People assembled; Mahomet cald the Hill to come to him, againe, and againe; And when the Hill stood still, he was never a whit abashed, but said: If the Hil wil not come to Mahomet, Mahomet wil go to the Hil.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Boldnesse. (1597)
If the mountain will not go to Mahomet, let Mahomet go to the mountain.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 117. (1678)
'Twas with us in the case of drink, which it was formerly between Mahomet and the mountain.

THOMAS BROWNE, Works (1760), iv, 259. (a. 1704)

If the Mountain will not come to Mahomet, Mahomet must go to the Mountain.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2707. (1732)
As the mountain will not come to Mahomet, why Mahomet shall go to the mountain; . . . as you cannot pay me a visit . . . next summer, . . . I shall spend three [weeks] among my friends in Ireland.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, Letter to D. Hodson, 27 Dec., 1757.

Neither Kitty nor I can change our habits, even for friendship . . . mountains cannot stir, . . . but Mahomet can come to the mountain as often as he likes.

LYTTON, The Caxtons. Bk. vi, ch. 4. (1849)

If Mahomet won't go to the mountain, the mountain must go to your lordship!

CLYDE FITCH, The Girl with the Green Eyes. Act iii. (1902)

If the mountain will not come to Mahomet, Mahomet must come to the mountain.

SHAW, The Doctor's Dilemma. Act iii. (1906)

<sup>2</sup> The parliament have hung the majesty of kingship in an airy imagination of royalty, between the privileges of both houses, like the tomb of Mahomet.

MILTON, Eikonoklastes. (1649) Prose Works (1904), i, 394. Legend has it that Mahomet's coffin is suspended in mid-air at Medina without any support, but kept in position by lodestones. The story probably arose from the rough drawings sold to visitors, which seem to indicate that it is in this position.

Sp'ritual men are too transcendent . . .

To hang, like Mah'met in the air,

Or St. Ignatius at his prayer.

BUTLER, Hudibras, iii, ii, 603. (1678)

The balance always would hang even,
Like Mah'met's tomb, 'twixt earth and Heaven.

PRIOR, Alma. Canto ii, l. 198. (1718)

Would not suffer the honest Bailie to remain suspended, like the coffin of Mahomet, between heaven and earth.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 30. (1818)

MAID

See also Girl, Virgin

<sup>3</sup> The cloistered maiden, who, her parents say, hates marriage talk even as perdition. (ἡ παῖς ἡ κατάκλειστος, | τὴν οἱ φασὶ τεκόντες | εὐναίου δαρισμοῦς | ἔχθρην ἴσον δέθρῳ.)

CALLIMACHUS, Fragments. Frag. 118 K. (c. 250 B. C.)

A maiden untouched. (Virgo intacta.)

CATULLUS, Odes. Ode 62. l. 45. (c. 57 B. C.)

<sup>4</sup> The virtuous maid and the broken leg must stay at home. (La mujer honrada, la pierna quebrada y en casa.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1615)

To be busy at something is a modest maid's holiday. (La doncella honesta, el hacer algo es su fiesta.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1615)

Truly a distaffe doth better become a maiden than a Lute.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 194. (1579)

<sup>5</sup> The darts of Love are blunted by the modesty of maidens. (En la vergüenza y recato de las doncellas se despuntan y embotan las amorosas saetas.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 58. (1615)

<sup>6</sup> Be she mayde, or widwe, or elles wyf.

CHAUCER, The Knightes Tale, l. 313. (c. 1386)

Maide, wydowe, or wyffe.

JOHN SKELTON, Phyllyp Sparowe, l. 53. (a. 1529)

Neither maid, widow, nor wife.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, v, 1, 178. (1604)

She is neither wife, widow, nor maid.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 90. (1678)

She is neither Maid, Wife, nor Widow.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4132. (1732)

<sup>7</sup> A maid and a virgin is not all one.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 152. (1639)

<sup>8</sup> A maid that giveth yeldeth.

COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Abandonner. (1611)

When once the young heart of a maiden is stolen. The maiden herself will steal after it soon.

THOMAS MOORE, III Omens (c. 1830)

<sup>9</sup> A maid oft seen, and a gown oft worn,
Are disesteem'd, and held in scorn.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Fille. (1611)

Cited by RAY, p. 17, and FULLER, No. 6393

<sup>10</sup> All are not maidens that wears bare hair.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 16. (c. 1595) It was once the custom for maidens to go bare headed.

A' are na maidens that wear bare hair.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 220. (1678)

All is not gold that glisters, nor maidens that wear their hair.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 4. (1721)

<sup>1</sup> Maidens should be meek while [until] they be married.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 76. (c. 1595)
Maidens should be mim [silent] till they're married, an' then they may burn kirks.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 250. (1678)

<sup>2</sup> All the maydes in Camberwell may daunce in an egge shell.

ABRAHAM FRAUNCE, The Lawiers Logick, fo. 27. (1588) A correspondent in Notes and Queries, ii, xi, 449, adds an unnecessary second verse, "For there are noe maydes in that well."

<sup>3</sup> Mop-ey'd [purblind] I am, as some have said, Because I've liv'd so long a Maid.

ROBERT HERRICK, Upon Himselfe. (1648)
You are mope-ey'd by living so long a maid.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 346. (1678)
You are moap ey'd with being so long a maid.
Spoken to those who overlook a thing before them.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 394. (1721)

<sup>4</sup> Bachelers wives and maides children be well taught.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 6. (1546)
See under CHILDREN

<sup>5</sup> As good a maid as her mother.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 11. (1659)
Who knows who's a good maid?
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 172. (1678)
She's a good maid, but for thought, word, and deed.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 258.
I dare say miss is a maid, in thought, word, and deed.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

<sup>6</sup> The worst store, a maid unbested.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 15. (1659)
Maidens withering on the stalk.

WORDSWORTH, Personal Talk. St. 1 (1806)

<sup>7</sup> Fair maidens wear no purses. Spoken when young women offer to pay their club in company, which the Scots never allow.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 109. (1721)

<sup>8</sup> Ye ne haue na more meryte in masse ne in houres

Than Malkyn of hire maydenhode that no man desireth.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. Text B, passus i, l. 181. (c. 1377) Malkin, a name for a wanton slattern; hours, services of the church.

Tyme . . . wol nat come agayn, withouten drede,

Namoore than wole Malkynes maydenhede.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Introduction to Man of Law's Prologue, l. 29. (c. 1386)

Tushe, there was no mo maydes but malkyn.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

There are . . . more maydes than Maulkin.

STEPHEN GOSSON, Schoole of Abuse, p. 37. (1579)
There be more maids than Mawkin, more men than Hodge, and more fools than Firk.

THOMAS DEKKER, The Shomaker's Holiday Act iii, sc. 1. (1600)

There's more maids than Maukins.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 334. (1605)
Well there are more Maides than Maudlin, that's my comfort.—Yes, and more men than Michael

FLETCHER, Woman's Prize. Act i, sc. 3. (a. 1625)
There are more maids than Maukin, and more men than Michael.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 172. (1678)
There are more mares in the wood than Grissell

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 172. (1678)
There are more Maids than Moggy, and more Men than Jockey.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4859. (1732)
The French say, "Il y a plus d'un âne à la foire qui s'appelle Martin" (There is more than one ass at the fair called Martin)

<sup>9</sup> Maiden! with the meek, brown eyes, . . .

Standing, with reluctant feet,

Where the brook and river meet,
Womanhood and childhood fleet!

H. W. LONGFELLOW, Maidenhood. (1841)
She stood, with reluctant feet, yet nearer the brook than to the river.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), The Indian Summer of Dry Valley Johnson. (1907)
I struggled with reluctant feet

Where dotage and abdomens meet.
OGDEN NASH, Lines to Be Scribbled on Somebody Else's Thirtieth Milestone (1933)

<sup>10</sup> Maidens commonly now a dayes are no sooner borne but they beginne to bride it.

JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 83. (1579)
Maidens, be they neuer so foolish, yet being faire they are commonly fortunate.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England, p. 279

<sup>11</sup> For hyt ys an old Englyshe sawe: "A mayde schuld be seen, but not herd."

J. MIRKUS, Mirk's Festial (E. E. T. S.), p. 230 (c. 1400) BECON, Catechism, p. 369. (1560)
A maiden hath no tongue but thought.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, iii, 2. 8 (1597)

Virgins should be seen more than they're heard.
THOMAS MIDDLETON, More Dissemblers Besides Women. Act iii, sc. 1. (1622)

Maidens should be mild and meek.
Swift to hear, and slow to speak.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 247. (1721)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6410. (1738)

Maids should be seen and not heard.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)
Little gells must be seen and not heard.

GEORGE ELIOT, Janet's Repentance. Ch. 8. (1858)
These [maxims] were the old-fashioned sort, such as—"Little girls should be seen and not heard."

WILLIAM DE MORGAN, Alice-for-Short. Ch. 9. (1907) See also under CHILD.

<sup>1</sup>
In the evenings of full moon, let her unloose her virgin-zone in love for that hero. (έν δ.χομηγίδεσσιν δὲ ἐσπέrais ἐρατὸν | λύοι κεν χαλινὸν
ὑφ' ἥρωϊ παρθενίας.)

PINDAR, Isthmian Odes. No. viii, l. 44. (c. 478
B.C.) The hero was Peleus, the girl Thetis, and the result of unloosening was Achilles.
A maid I came hither, and a woman I go home.
Maiden no more. (παρθένος ἔνθα βέβηκα, γυνή δ' εἰς οἶκον ἀφέρπω. | . . . οὐκέτι κόρα.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. Idyl. xxvii, l. 65. (c.270 B.C.)
She arrived a Penelope and departed a Helen.
(Coniuge Penelope venit, abit Helene.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. i, No. 62. (c. A. D. 85)
<sup>2</sup>
Mealy-mou'd maidens stand lang at the mill.
ALLAN RAMSAY, Scottish Proverbs. (1737)

<sup>3</sup>
A maid that laughs is half taken.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 16. (1670)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 269. (1732)

Every maid is undone.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 172. (1678)
There are never the fewer maids for her. Spoken of a woman that hath maiden children.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 258.
<sup>4</sup>
This maid was born old.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 77. (1678)
Quite young and all alive,
Like an old maid of forty-five.

HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 336. (1869)
OLD MAIDS LEAD APES IN HELL, see under APE.

<sup>5</sup>
Maids say nay and take it.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 118. (1670) See
under WOMAN: A WOMAN'S NO.

Maids want nothing but husbands, and when they have them they want everything.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 347. (1678)

<sup>6</sup>
When maidens sue, Men give like gods.
SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, i, 4, 80.
(1604)

When maidens sue, men live like gods.
H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 559. (1855)

<sup>7</sup>
Mr. Pickle himself . . . was a mere dragon among the chambermaids.

SMOLLETT, Peregrine Pickle. Ch. 82. (1751)

<sup>8</sup>
Tell me, pretty maiden, are there any more at home like you?

LESLIE STUART, Tell Me, Pretty Maiden. The beginning of the famous sextet from Floro-
dora, which opened in New York, October, 1900.

<sup>9</sup>
No maiden is more worthy of your choir.
(Dignior est vestro nulla puella choro.)

TIBULLUS, Elegies. Bk. iii, eleg. 8, l. 24. (19 B.C.)

A maid of grace and complete majesty.
SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, i, 1, 137.
(1595)

A maid yet rosed over with the virgin crimson of modesty.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, v, 2, 323. (1599)

An honest maid as ever broke bread.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, i,
4, 161. (1601) See also under HONESTY.

<sup>10</sup>
Whilst a tall Meg of Westminster is stooping, short wench sweeps the house.

GIOVANNI TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 108.
(1666)

While the tall maid is stooping, a short wench sweeps the house.

HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 468. (1869)

<sup>11</sup>
Glass and a maid are ever in danger.

GIOVANNI TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 304.
(1666)

Glasses and lasses are brittle ware.

CHEALES, Proverbial Folk-Lore, p. 4. (1875)

<sup>12</sup>
Good Mrs. Isbel hide me under your petticoats that the divel may not find me, they say he dares not peep under a maid's coat.

UNKNOWN, The Mistaken Husband. Act v, sc.
5. (1675) The proverb is, "The devil dares not peep under a maid's coat."

MAIDENHOOD, see VIRGIN.

MAJORITY AND MINORITY

<sup>13</sup>
Every new opinion, at its starting, is precisely a minority of one.

THOMAS CARLYLE, On Heroes and Hero-
Worship. Ch. 2. (1840)

All history is a record of the power of minorities and of minorities of one.

R. W. EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims:
Progress of Culture. (1875)

It is my habit to say what I think, though I may so show myself one of a very small minority, or even a minority of one.

HERBERT SPENCER, Autobiography. Vol. ii, ch.
53. (1894)

If a man is in a minority of one we lock him up.
JUSTICE O. W. HOLMES, Speech, in New York.
15 Feb., 1913.

<sup>14</sup>
Neither current events nor history show that the majority rules or ever did rule.

JEFFERSON DAVIS, Remark, to Jacquess and Golmore, 17 July, 1864.

<sup>15</sup>
A majority is always the best repartee.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Tancred. Bk. ii, ch. 14.
(1847)

<sup>16</sup>
The oppression of a majority is detestable and odious: the oppression of a minority is only by one degree less detestable and odious.

W. E. GLADSTONE, Speech, House of Commons,
1870, on Irish Land Bill.

The only tyrannies from which men, women and children are suffering in real life are the tyrannies of minorities.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Speech, New York City,
20 March, 1912.

The overweening influence of organized minorities.

OSCAR W. UNDERWOOD, Drifting Sands of Party
Politics, p. 6. (1928)

<sup>1</sup> We ought according to the saying of the Poet,
To follow the fewer sort, and not the common crue.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk i,
p. 26. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Shall we judge a country by the majority or by the minority? By the minority, surely.

EMERSON, *The Conduct of Life: Considerations
by the Way*. (1860)

The minority is always in the right the majority never has right on its side.

IBSEN, An Enemy of the People. Act iv. (1882)
Minority is no disproof.

LAURENCE HOUSMAN, Advocatus Diaboli. (1924)

<sup>2</sup> It is my principle that the will of the majority should always prevail.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to James Madison,
20 Dec., 1787.

I readily suppose my opinion wrong, when opposed by the majority.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to Madison. (1788)

<sup>3</sup> Measures of Right and Wrong are not always to be concluded from the consent of the Majority; for you see here, that Vice has by much the Majority of its side.

JOHN NORRIS, Practical Discourses, p. 102. (1691)
The opinion of the majority is not the final proof of what is right. (Nicht Stimmenmehrheit ist des Rechtes Probe.)

SCHILLER. (a. 1805) As quoted by H. D. SEDG-
WICK, In Praise of Gentlemen. Title page.

The majority, compose them how you will, are a herd, and not a very nice one.

HAZLITT, Bulls of Different Sorts. (1829)

A government in which the majority rule in all cases cannot be based on justice.

H. D. THOREAU, Civil Disobedience. (1849)

The fact disclosed by a survey of the past that majorities have been wrong, must not blind us to the complementary fact that majorities have usually not been entirely wrong.

HERBERT SPENCER, First Principles. Ch. 1, sec.
1. (1862)

The most dangerous foe to truth and freedom in our midst is the compact majority. Yes, the damned, compact, liberal majority.

IBSEN, An Enemy of the People. Act iv. (1882)

Rule is evil, and it is none the better for being majority rule.

B. R. TUCKER, Instead of a Book. (1893)

No one can expect a majority to be stirred by motives other than ignoble.

GEORGE NORMAN DOUGLAS, South Wind. Ch.
10. (1917)

<sup>4</sup> One, of God's side, is a majority.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, Speech on John Brown,
Harper's Ferry, Va., 1 Nov., 1859.

One, with God, is always a majority, but many a martyr has been burned at the stake while the votes were being counted.

THOMAS B. REED, Speech, House of Representatives, 1885

One with the law is a majority.

CALVIN COOLIDGE, Speech of Acceptance, 27
July, 1920.

<sup>5</sup> It is too easy to go over to the majority
(Facile transiatur ad plures.)

SENECA, Ad Luciliūm. Epis. vii, sec. 6. (c. A. D. 64)
We go with the crowd. (Populo nos damus.)

SENECA, Ad Luciliūm. Epis. xcix, sec. 17

"It's always best on these occasions to do what the mob does."—"But suppose there are two mobs?" suggested Mr. Snodgrass.—"Shout with the largest," replied Mr. Pickwick.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. xiii. (1837)

One must howl with the wolves. (Consonus esto lupis.)

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p.
94. (1852)

<sup>6</sup> There are more of you in Hades. (ὤντων γὰρ πλείονες εἰν' Αἴδη.)

TIMON, THE MISANTHROPE (c. 500 B. C.), when asked, after his death, which was the more hateful to him, darkness or light See CAL-
LIMACHUS, Epigrams, v.

A witch ascending from the greater number (ἡ γρᾶς ἀνεστῆκεν ἀπὸ τῶν πλείονων.)

ARISTOPHANES, Ecclesiazusae, l. 1073. (c. 393
B. C.) Suidas has "The greater number of the dead" (πλείονων τῶν νεκρῶν).

To join the great majority. (Ad plures penetrare.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus, l. 294. (c. 194 B. C.)

He went over to the majority. (Abiit ad plures.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 42. (c. A. D. 60)

Death joins us to the great majority.

EDWARD YOUNG, Revenge. Act iv, sc. 1. (1721)

'Tis long since Death had the majority.

ROBERT BLAIR, The Grave, l. 449. (1743)

Mirabeau's work, then, is done. He has gone over to the majority: Abiit ad plures.

CARLYLE, Essays: Mirabeau. (1839)

MAKE

<sup>7</sup> You're on the make, are you?

J. R. BROWNE, Adventures in the Apache Country, p. 508. (1869)

They're all on the make.

J. H. BEADLE, The Undeveloped West, p. 402
(1873)

You ain't on the make; you're fixed.

JOHN HAY, The Breadwinners, p. 150. (1883)

<sup>8</sup> Neptunus, that dothe bothe make & marre.

JOHN LYDGATE, Assembly of Gods, 556. (c. 1420)

Mynded to put al in hasards to make or marre

NICOLAS UDALL, tr., Erasmus' Apophthegms, fo.
267b. (1542)

He that maketh not, marreth not; who marreth amendeth. (Chi non fa, non falla. chi falla. s'amenda.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 28. (1578)

Nay, it makes nothing, sir.—If it mar nothing neither.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, iv, 3, 191
(1595)

It makes us or it mars us.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, v, 1, 4. (1605)

That Part of a Woman which either makes all, or marres all, I meane her Tongue.

JOHN DAY, Festivals, vii, 206. (1613).

MALICE

1 In charity to all, bearing no malice or ill-will to any human being.

J. Q. ADAMS, Letter to A. Bronson, 30 July, 1833. With malice toward none; with charity for all; with firmness in the right, as God gives us to see the right, let us strive on to finish the work we are in.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Second Inaugural Address, 4 March, 1865.

2 Malice seldom wants a mark to shoot at.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 448. (1855)

3 Malice is the crafty and covert planning of harm. (Est enim malitia versuta et fallax ratio nocendi.)

CICERO, De Natura Deorum. Bk. iii, ch. 30, sec. 75. (45 B.C.)

Malice: a blind mule kicking by guess.

JOSH BILLINGS (H. W. SHAW), Comical Lexicon. (1877)

4 Malice is mindful.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 196. (1639)

Cited by RAY, p. 118, and FULLER, No. 3329.

Malice is aye mindful. Spoken when people rip up old sores, and think, with resentment, upon old disobligations.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 249. (1721)

5 Tho' Malice may darken Truth, it cannot put it out.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5005. (1732)

6 Malice when she shoots draws her arrow to the head.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State. Bk. i, ch. 2. (1642)

7 Yet we know malice hath a strong memory.

THOMAS FULLER, A Pisgah-sight of Palestine. Bk. ii, ch. 3. (1650)

Malice hath a sharp Sight, and a strong Memory.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3328. (1732)

8 Man's life is a warfare against the malice of men. (Milicia es la vida del hombre contra la malicia del hombre.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 13. (1647)

9 Mallice findes manie faultes.

EDWARD HELLOWES, tr., Guevara's Familiar Epistles, p. 492. (1574)

Malice never spoke well.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 328. (1605)

Malice will always find bad motives for good actions.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to Madison, 1810.

10

I beare grutche or malyce agaynst a person, je porte malice.

JEHAN PALSGRAVE, La Langue Françoyse, p. 450. (1530)

The law I bear no malice for my death.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII, ii, 1, 62. (1613)

I never bear malice.

LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations. Works (1856), i, 15.

11

The malicious man ever eats his own heart. (Malivulus semper sua natura vescitur.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 378. (c. 43 B.C.) He who digs out malicious talk disturbs his own peace. (Qui malignos sermones inquit se ipse inquietat.)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. iii, sec. 11. (c. A.D. 54)

Malice sucks up the greater part of her own venom, and poisons herself. (La malice hume la pluspart de son propre venin, et s'en empoisonne.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 2. (1595)

Malice hurts itself most.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 197. (1639)

He that keeps Malice, harbours a Viper in his Breast.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2202. (1732)

Malice drinketh up the greatest Part of its own Poison.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3327. (1732)

12

The malicious mind has hidden teeth. (Malivulus animus abditos dentes habet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 382. (c. 43 B.C.) The malice of one soon becomes the ill word of all. (Malitia unius cito fit male dictum omnium.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 404.

To make her onset worse, malice pretends to be good. (Malitia ut peior veniat se simulat bonam.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 409. (c. 43 B.C.)

13

More malice than matter.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 352. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3458. (1732)

14

Speak of me as I am; nothing extenuate, Nor set down aught in malice.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, v, 2, 342. (1605)

Paint my character in true colours, "nought extenuating, nor setting down aught in malice."

F. E. SMEDLEY, Frank Fairleigh. Ch. 1 (1850)

15

Mikel malice was first in man

Bot neuer forwit sua mikel as than.

UNKNOWN, Cursor Mundi, l. 1555. (a. 1300)

All is the mynde of the man to malyce enclined UNKNOWN, Early English Alliterative Poems. B., 518. (c. 1310)

MAMMON

16

Thys wicked Mammon, . . . whyche is their God.

HUGH LATIMER, Letter to Henry VIII. (1530)

In FOXE, Book of Martyrs (1563), 1346/1.

Mammon the god of this world.

JOHN SCOTT, Observations on the State of the Poor, p. 49. (1773)

Poor souls! whose God is Mammon.

T. E. BROWN, Per Omnia Deus. (a. 1897)

<sup>1</sup> Make to yourselves friends of the mammon of unrighteousness. (ἐαυτοῖς ποιήσατε φίλους ἐκ τοῦ μαμωνᾶ τῆς ἀδικίας.)

New Testament: Luke, xvi, 9. (c. A. D. 65) The Vulgate is, "Facite vobis amicos de mammona iniquitatis."

The Mammon of unrighteousness. Wealth as a god, an idol. No longer apprehended as a quotation of . . . Luke, xvi, 9, where μαμωνᾶς is a transliteration of an Aramaic word for 'riches' or 'possessions, property.'

ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: Mammon. (1941) The word was taken by medieval writers as the proper name of the devil of covetousness, as evidenced by WYNKYN DE WORDE'S Ordynarye of Christen Men, ii, xi, 117 (1502), "A deuyll named Mammona made unto the couetous man .vi. commaundemants."

<sup>2</sup> Ye cannot serve God and mammon. (οὐ δύνασθε θεῷ δουλεῖν καὶ μαμωνᾷ.)

New Testament: Matthew, vi, 24; Luke, xvi, 13. (c. A. D. 70) The Vulgate is, "Non potestis Deo servire, et mammonae."

No person may serue god eternal, & also ye mammonde of iniquite, which is golde & syluer & other rychesse.

WYNKYN DE WORDE, tr., The Pilgrimage of Perfection, fo. 281B. (1526)

Those who set out to serve both God and Mammon soon discover that there is no God.

LOGAN PEARSALL SMITH, Afterthoughts. (1931)

<sup>3</sup> Mammon led them on,
Mammon, the least erected Spirit that fell
From heav'n.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 678. (1667)

MAN

See also Humanity

I—What Man Is

<sup>4</sup> Man is the merriest species of the creation; all above and below him are serious.

ADDISON, The Spectator, 15 Dec., 1711.

<sup>5</sup> Man is either a beast or a god. (ἢ θηρίον ἢ θεός.)

ARISTOTLE, Politics. Bk. i, ch. 1, sec. 1253a. (c. 330 B. C.)

What creature else

Conceives the circle, and then walks the square?
E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. vii, l. 1011. (1856)

Someone calls him a soul concealed in an animal.
CONAN DOYLE, The Sign of the Four. Ch. 10. (1890)

<sup>6</sup> Man's like a candle in a candlestick,
Made up of tallow, and a little wick.

JOHN BUNYAN, A Book for Boys and Girls. (1686)

<sup>7</sup> Man!—Thou pendulum betwixt a smile and tear.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 109. (1815)
Man is an embodied paradox, a bundle of contradictions.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Pt. i, No. 408.

<sup>8</sup> By nature men closely resemble each other; in practice they grow wide apart.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. xvii, ch. 2. (c. 500 B. C.)
Tho' all Men were made of one Metal, yet they were not cast all in the same Mould.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5003. (1732)

<sup>9</sup> We are made a spectacle unto the world, and to angels. (θεᾶτρον ἐγενήθημεν τῷ κόσμῳ καὶ ἀγγέλοις.)

New Testament: I Corinthians, iv, 9. (A. D. 57)
The Vulgate is, "Spectaculum facti sumus mundo, et Angelis."

But man, proud man, . . .

Plays such fantastic tricks before high heaven,
As make the angels weep.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, ii, 2, 117. (1604)

Man must make the angels laugh.

LAMB, Letter to Coleridge, 24 Oct., 1796.

[It] is enough to make the angels weep.

HENRY KINGSLEY, Geoffrey Hamlyn. Ch. 43. (1859)

Ye Gods! it is a sight to make the angels weep.

JOHN STRANGE WINTER (MRS. ARTHUR STAN-
NARD), Mrs. Bob. Ch. 12. (1889)

A man asleep is certainly a sight to make the angels weep.

O. HENRY, The Hiding of Black Bill. (1909)

<sup>10</sup> The first man is of the earth, earthy. (ὁ πρῶτος ἄνθρωπος ἐκ γῆς χοϊκός.)

New Testament: I Corinthians, xv, 47. (c. A. D. 60) The Vulgate is, "Primus homo de terra, terrenus."

As one sayde, wee are all made of durt.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 182. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Man is the slime of the dung-pit.

JOHN MARSTON, The Malcontent. Act iv. (1604)

Live dirt.

JOSH BILLINGS (H. W. SHAW), Comical Lexicon. (1877)

<sup>11</sup> Man is God's ape, and an ape is zany to a man, doing over those tricks (especially if they be knavish) which he sees done before him.

THOMAS DEKKER, The Seven Deadly Sins of London. Act v. (1606)

<sup>12</sup> It is too little to call Man a little World; Except God, Man is a diminutive to nothing.

JOHN DONNE, Devotions: Medicusque Vocatur. (1624)

<sup>13</sup> One definition of man is "an intelligence served by organs."

R. W. EMERSON, Works and Days. (1870)

1 Man is a little soul carrying around a corpse.
(ψυχάρδιον εἰ βασιτάζον νεκρόν.)

EPICTETUS, Fragments. Frag. 26. (c. A. D. 100)
Quoted by MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations
Bk. iv, sec. 41.

A little soul for a little bears up this corpse which is man.

A. C. SWINBURNE, Hymn to Proserpine. (1866)

2 Man's as the wind. (άνεμος άνθρωπος.)

EUPOLIS, Fragments. Frag. 78. (c. 425 B. C.)

3 Man resembles the fruit of the tree, which, though it escape injury during its growth, yet must decay at maturity.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Peninin
(Choice of Pearls). No. 509. (c. 1050)

4 Man is practis'd in disguise;
He cheats the most discerning eyes:
Who by that search shall wiser grow,
When we ourselves can never know?

JOHN GAY, Fables: Introduction, l. 29. (1727)

Though every prospect pleases,
And only man is vile.

REGINALD HEBER, From Greenland's Icy Mountains. (a. 1826)

There is only one grade of men; they are all contemptible.

E. W. HOWE, A Letter from Mr. Biggs. (c. 1930)

5 Man is Nature's sole mistake.

W. S. GILBERT, Princess Ida. Act i. (1884)

6 Man is a darkened being; he knows not whence he comes, nor whither he goes.

GOETHE, Conversations with Eckermann, 10
April, 1829.

7 Mankind are earthen jugs with spirits in them.

HAWTHORNE, American Note-Books, 1842.

Man is Heaven and earth in miniature.

H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs.
No. 253. (1937)

8 Man is naturally a savage, and emerges from barbarism by slow degrees.

HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 95. (c. 1821)

9 Man that is mortal and eateth the grain of Demeter. (ὁ θνητός τ' εἴη καὶ ἔδοι Δημήτερος ἀκτῆν.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xiii, l. 322. (c. 850 B. C.)

Demeter was the goddess of the corn and patroness of agriculture in general, identified by the Romans with Ceres.

Nothing feeble does earth nurture than man.
Of all things breathing and moving.

(οὐδὲν ἀκινδύντερον γαῖα τρέφει ἀνθρώποιον πάντων βῆσα τε γαῖαν ἐπι πτελεί τε καὶ ἔρπει.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xviii, l. 130. (c. 850 B. C.)

Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 104D. A similar Latin proverb is "E fungis nati homines" (Men born of mushrooms).

Man was created weak.

MOHAMMED, The Koran, iv, 29. (c. 622) Bell, tr.

10 Thrice she flitted from my arms, like unto a shadow or even a dream. (τρὶς δέ μοι ἐκ χειρῶν σκιῇ εἰκελον ἢ καὶ ὄνειρ | ἔπτατ'.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xi, l. 207. (c. 850 B. C.)

Man is but a dream of a shadow. (σκιᾶς ὄναρ ἀνθρώπου.)

PINDAR, Pythian Odes. No. viii, l. 95 (136) (446 B. C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 104B

Man is but breath and shadow, nothing more. (ἀνθρώπος ἐστὶ πνεῦμα καὶ σκιὰ μόνον.)

SOPHOCLES, Fragments. Frag. 13. (c. 410 B. C.)

We living men are but phantoms or unsubstantial shades. (οὐδὲν ὄντας ἄλλο πλὴν | εἰδωλ' ὅσοι περ ζῶμεν ἢ κούφην σκιάν.)

SOPHOCLES, Ajax, l. 126. (c. 409 B. C.)

We are dust and shadow. (Pulvis et umbra sumus.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 7, l. 16. (23 B. C.)

Fond man! the vision of a moment made!

Dream of a dream! and shadow of a shade!

YOUNG, Paraphrase of Job xxviii, l. 187. (1719)

11 We are but ciphers born to consume earth's fruits. (Nos numerus sumus et fruges consumere nati.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, No. ii, l. 27. (20 B. C.)

12 We are the clay, and thou [Lord] our potter. (Nos vero lutum: et fictor noster tu.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, lxiv, 8. (c. 725 B. C.)

13 Man, that is a worm, and the son of man which is a worm. (Quanto magis homo putredo, et filius hominis vermis.)

Old Testament: Job, xxv, 6. (c. 350 B. C.)

The hope of man is a worm and the son of man is a maggot.

Babylonian Talmud: Aboth, iv, 7. A paraphrase of BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), vii, 17: ὅτι ἐκδίκησις ἀσεβοῦς πῦρ καὶ σκώληξ.

14 Man is a fallen god who remembers the heavens.

ALPHONSE DE LAMARTINE, Méditations. Series ii. (1820)

A man is a god in ruins.

EMERSON, Nature, Addresses and Lectures: Prospects. (c. 1875) Quoted.

15 Man? I'll tell you what man is: he's the last actor on the changing scene of the world.

JOHN LODWICK, Running to Paradise, p. 156. (1943)

16 Man is sanguine by nature and eager for gain, quickly cast down when trouble befalleth, puffed up with pride when Fortune smileth.

MOHAMMED, The Koran, lxx, 19-21. (c. 622) Naish, tr.

Man is obstinate and stiff-necked and rebellious.

MOHAMMED, The Koran, xcvi, 6.

Man worketh his own perdition.

MOHAMMED, The Koran, ciii, 2.

<sup>1</sup> Man, as the old saying is, is a plant not earthly but heavenly.

PHILO, De Plantatione. Sec. 17. (c. A.D. 40)

Philo is paraphrasing PLATO, Timaeus, 90A:

"Seeing that we are not an earthly but a heavenly plant."

<sup>2</sup> The glory, jest, and riddle of the world!

POPE, An Essay on Man. Epis. ii, l. 18. (1732)

Man is a poor stick and a sad squirt.

CARL SANDBURG, Slabs of the Sunburnt West, p. 72. (1922)

<sup>3</sup> Man is the measure of all things. (πάντων χρημάτων μέτρον ἄνθρωπος.)

PROTAGORAS, Maxim. (c. 450 B.C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Protagoras. Bk. ix, ch. 8, sec. 51. "Protagoras began a work thus," says Laertius, "Man is the measure of all things, of things that are that they are, and of things that are not that they are not." Cited also by PHILO, De Posteritate Caini, 36, and De Somniis, ii, 193, as a saying of Pythagoras.

Protagoras says somewhere that man is "the measure of all things, of the existence of the things that are and the non-existence of things that are not." (πάντων χρημάτων μέτρον ἄνθρωπον εἶναι.)

PLATO, Theaetetus. Sec. 152A. (c. 390 B.C.)

Do you think this is true of the real things, that their reality is a separate one for each person, as Protagoras said with his doctrine that man is the measure of all things. (πάντων χρημάτων μέτρον εἶναι ἄνθρωπων)—that things are to me such as they seem to me, and to you such as they seem to you?

PLATO, Cratylus. Sec. 386A. (c. 375 B.C.) It is Socrates asks the question, and Hermogenes promptly answers that he thinks Protagoras was wrong, whereupon Socrates proceeds to tangle him up, after his usual fashion.

In our eyes God will be "the measure of all things" (θεὸς ἡμῖν πάντων χρημάτων μέτρον) in the highest degree—a degree much higher than any "man" they talk of.

PLATO, Laws. Bk. iv, sec. 716C. (c. 345 B.C.)

The old world . . . held that all things were created for man. . . . This philosophy was summed up in the phrase that man was the measure of all things.

A. C. BENSON, At Large, iv, 72. (1908)

It is the human standpoint towards life; . . . we may sum it up in a saying attributed to Pythagoras, ἄνθρωπος μέτρον πάντων—Man is the measure of all things.

R. W. LIVINGSTONE, Greek Genius, p. 111. (1924)

A man is measured as he measures others.

Babylonian Talmud: Sotah, fo. 8a. (c. 450) See also under STATURE.

<sup>4</sup> Man is Heaven's masterpiece.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems. Bk. ii, emb. 6. (1635)

Man is Creation's master-piece. But who says so?—Man!

GAVARNI (PAUL CHEVALIER), Apothegms. (c. 1850)

<sup>5</sup> When I beheld this I sighed, and said within myself, Surely man is a Broomstick!

SWIFT, A Meditation upon a Broomstick. (a. 1745)

<sup>6</sup> If man is a bubble, as the old proverb says, all the more so is an old man. (Quod, ut dicitur, si est homo bulla, eo magis senex.)

VARRO, De Re Rustica. Bk. i, ch. 1. (c. 35 B.C.)

How we puffed-up bladders strut about! . . . We are nothing but bubbles. (Utres inflati ambulamus. . . . Nos non pluris sumus quam bullae.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 42. (c. A.D. 60)

O man! . . . Blown like a bubble, kneaded like a paste.

MOHAMMED, The Koran, lxxxii, 8. (c. 622)

Man is a bubble. (πομφόλυξ ὁ ἄνθρωπος.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. ii, cent. iii, No. 48.

(1523) Erasmus gives the Latin, "Homo bulla," and comments, "A proverb to admonish us that nothing is more fragile, more fleeting, more empty than human life. So it is not unaptly compared to a bubble, which bursts and disappears almost as soon as it is born." He devotes nearly three pages to variations upon this theme, citing similar phrases from Homer, Menander, Euripides, Aeschylus, Sophocles, and others. Included by TAVERNER in his Translations from Erasmus, fo. 34. with the rendering, "Man is but a bubble, or bladder of the water," and the addition, "If ye require the englysh prouerbe it is this: To day a man to morrow none."

I call'd thee then . . .

A dream of what thou wert, a breath, a bubble.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, iv, 4, 88. (1592)

What's he . . .

Whose life's a bubble, and in length a span;

A concert still in discords? 'Tis a man.

WILLIAM BROWNE, Britannia's Pastorals. Bk. i. song 2, l. 192. (1613)

A man is a bubble (said the Greek proverb) . . . descending a love pluvio, from God and the dew of heaven, from a tear and a drop of rain

JEREMY TAYLOR, Holy Dying. Ch. i, sec. 1. (1651)

For what are men who grasp at praise sublime. But bubbles on the rapid stream of time?

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. ii, l. 285. (1728)

Like bubbles on the sea of matter borne,

They rise, they break, and to that sea return.

POPE, An Essay on Man. Epis. iii, l. 19. (1730)

The bubble winked at me, and said,

"You'll miss me, brother, when you're dead."

OLIVER HERFORD, Toast: The Bubble Winked. (c. 1900)

See also WORLD: A BUBBLE.

II—Man: An Animal

<sup>7</sup> Man is by nature a political animal. (πολιτικὸν ὁ ἄνθρωπος.)

ARISTOTLE, Politics. Bk. i, ch. 1, sec. 10. (c. 330

B.C.) The complete quotation is: "And why man is a political animal in a greater measure than any bee or any gregarious animal, is clear. For nature does nothing without purpose, and man alone of the animals possesses speech."

The only laughing animal is man.

WILLIAM WHITEHEAD, Essay on Ridicule, I. 2. (1743)

Man, an animal which makes bargains.

ADAM SMITH, The Wealth of Nations. (1776)

Alas we are ridiculous animals.

HORACE WALPOLE, Letter to Horace Mann, 14 May, 1777.

We are poor silly animals.

WALPOLE, Letter to Strafford, 6 Aug., 1784.

Man is a cooking animal. The beasts have memory, judgment and all the faculties and passions of our mind, in a certain degree; but no beast is a cook.

JAMES BOSWELL, Tour to the Hebrides. (1785)

Man is the only animal that laughs and weeps; for he is the only animal that is struck with the difference between what things are, and what they ought to be.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Lectures on the English Comic Writers. Lect. 1. (1818)

Man is a toad-eating animal.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Political Essays: Toad-Eaters and Tyrants. (1819)

Man is a gaming animal.

CHARLES LAMB, Essays of Elia: Mrs. Battle's Opinions on Whist. (1823)

Man is a make-believe animal—he is never so truly himself as when he is acting a part.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Notes of a Journey through France and Italy, p. 246. (1826)

Man is a tool-using animal.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. i, ch 5. (1833) See under TOOL.

Man is a sporting as well as a praying animal.

OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES, Letter, describing his visit to the Epsom races in 1834.

Man is a military animal,

Glories in gunpowder, and loves parade.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: A Metropolis. (1839)

Man has been defined as a talking animal.

M. D. CONWAY, The Earthward Pilgrimage. Ch. 13. (1870)

Man is the only animal that blushes. Or needs to.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's New Calendar. (1893)

Man is the only animal that esteems itself rich in proportion to the number and voracity of its parasites.

SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists. (1903)

Man is the only animal which spits.

DONALD A. LAIRD, There Is a Lot to Just Sitting or Standing. (Scientific American, Nov. 1928.)

Man is the only animal that eats when he is not hungry, drinks when he is not thirsty, and makes love at all seasons.

UNKNOWN, Bookman, April, 1932, p. 137

Man is an unoriginal animal.

CHRISTIE, Cards on the Table. Ch. 8. (1936)

1 A beast's spots are on the outside, a man's on the inside.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 350. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

2 Man is the most intelligent of animals . . . and the most silly. (συνετώτατον εἶναι τῶν ζῴων νομίζειν τὸν ἄνθρωπον . . . οὐδὲν ματαιότερον.)

DIOGENES, Apothegm. (c. 350 B. C.) The whole quotation is, "Diogenes used also to say that when he saw physicians, philosophers, and pilots at their work, he deemed man the most intelligent of animals; but when again he saw interpreters of dreams and diviners and those who attended to them, or those who were puffed up with conceit of wealth, he thought no animal more silly." See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Diogenes. Bk. vi, sec. 24.

Man is the highest of all animals, after whom are all animals.

Satapatha Brahmana, iii, viii, 4, 1.

Man is a noble Animal, splendid in ashes, and pompous in the grave.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Hydriotaphia. Ch. 5 (1658)

Man,—the aristocrat amongst the animals.

HEINE, Wit, Wisdom, and Pathos: Italy. (a. 1856)

3 The best Metal is Iron, the best Vegetable, Wheat; but the worst Animal is Man.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4415. (1732)

4 Men, my dear, are very queer animals—a mixture of horse-nervousness, ass-stubbornness and camel-malice.

T. H. HUXLEY, Letter to Mrs. W. K. Clifford, 10 Feb., 1895.

5 There is no animal in the world so treacherous as man. (Il n'est animal au monde traistre au prix de l'homme.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 12. (1580)

What is man

If his chief good, and market of his time,

Be but to sleep and feed? a beast, no more.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iv, 4, 33. (1600)

In brief, we are all monsters, that is a composition of Man and Beast.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i, sec. 55. (1643)

Men and beasts are all alike.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 350. (1938) A Chinese proverb, to dissuade people from killing animals.

6 Man is neither angel nor brute, and the unfortunate thing is that he who would act the angel acts the brute. (L'homme n'est ni ange, ni bête; et le malheur veut que qui veut faire l'ange fait la bête.)

BLAISE PASCAL, Pensées. Pt. i, art. 10. No. 13. (c. 1660)

7 Man is naked, unshod, unbedded, unarmed. (ἄνθρωπον γυμνόν τε καὶ ἀνυπόδητον καὶ ἀσπρωτὸν καὶ ἀσπλον.)

PLATO, Protagoras, 321C. (c. 389 B. C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 98D.

Walking animals are divided into biped and quadruped, then, since the human race falls into the same division with the feathered creatures and no others, we must again divide the biped class into featherless and feathered. (τῷ ψιλῷ καὶ τῷ πτεροφύει.)

PLATO, Politicus. Sec. 266E. (c. 375 B.C.) The Latin of Plato's definition is "Animal implume bipes" (A featherless biped animal).

Plato had defined man as an animal, biped and featherless, and was applauded. Diogenes plucked a fowl and brought it into the lecture-room with the words, "Here is Plato's man." (οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ Πλάτωνος ἄνθρωπος.) In consequence of which there was added to the definition, "having broad nails."

DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Diogenes. Sec. 40. (c. A.D. 230)

A Creature bipes et implumis.

SWIFT, The Beasts' Confession, l. 216. (1732) A note adds, "A Definition of Man, disapproved by all Logicians. Homo est animal bipes, implume, erecto vultu."

A Being, erect upon two legs.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 34. (1837)

1 Man is a reasoning animal. (Rationale animal est homo.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xli, sec. 8. (a.A.D. 64)

"The peculiar property of man," Seneca explains, "is soul, and reason brought to perfection in the soul."

Man is but a reed, the weakest thing in nature; but he is a thinking reed. (L'homme n'est qu'un roseau le plus faible de la nature; mais c'est un roseau pensant.)

BLAISE PASCAL, Pensées. Pt. i, art. iv, No. 6. (c. 1660)

Man is a rational animal who always loses his temper when he is called upon to act in accordance with the dictates of reason.

OSCAR WILDE, The Critic as Artist. (1891)

If there ever was a bigger lie, my dear Daddy, than any other, it is that man is a reasonable animal.

H. G. WELLS, Mr. Britling Sees It Through. Bk. ii, ch. 4. (1916)

III—Man: Apothegms

2 As man from man. (ἄνθρωπος ἀπ' ἀνθρώπου.)

AESCHYLUS, Libation-Bearers, l. 736. (458 B.C.)

3 A man's true nature can be seen when he is drinking, when his purse is appealed to, and when he is angry.

Babylonian Talmud: Arachin, fo. 65b. (c. 450)

By three things may a man be known: by his pocket (kls), by his cup (kōs), and by his temper (ka'as).

Babylonian Talmud: Erubin, fo. 65b. (c. 450)

4 The ox is proud when among cows, the lion when among beasts of prey, the eagle when among birds; but man is proud of being lord over all.

Babylonian Talmud: Chagigah, fo. 13b. (c. 450)

5 A Man's Nature runnes either to Herbes or Weeds; therefore let him seasonably Water the One, and Destroy the Other.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Nature in Men. (1597)

Virtuous and vicious ev'ry man must be, Few in th' extreme, but all in the degree.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. ii, l. 231. (1732)

Where soil is, men grow,

Whether to weeds or flowers.

JOHN KEATS, Endymion. Bk. ii, l. 159. (1818)

6 Precious is man to man.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Journal, 26 July, 1834.

7 There are better men to be found even than the best.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 350. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

To be a man is easy, to play the man is hard.

CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 368. Chinese.

8 Man is a name of honour for a king.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Bussy d'Ambois. Act iv, sc. 1. (1607)

It is great fortune to be born a man; let us not fritter away our lives meaninglessly.

KAIBARA EKKEN, Ten Kun (Ten Precepts). Bk. i. (1710) Ken Hoshino, tr. Quoted as a saying of Ganshi 'sui.

There are three happinesses: to receive life as a human being, to be born a man, to enjoy long life.

KAIBARA EKKEN, Ten Kun. Bk. i.

To be born a man, the soul of the universe, is indeed a blessing.

KAIBARA EKKEN, Ten Kun. Bk. ii.

9 Creature Was never lasse mannish in seminge.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. i, l. 283. (c. 1380)

Among ten men, nine are women.

D. E. MARVIN, Curiosities in Proverbs, p. 165. (1916) A Turkish proverb meaning that only one man in ten possesses manly qualities. The French say, "Les hommes sont rare" (Men are rare).

10 Now may I wear an hose upon myn heed.

CHAUCER, The Canterbury Tales: The Canon Yeoman's Tale, l. 171. (c. 1386)

A man's a man, an a have but a hose on his head.

HENRY PORTER, Two Angry Women of Abingdon, ii, 1. (1599) NASHE, Works, ii, 249. (1593) SHELTON, Quixote, ii, 65. (1620) COTTON, Scarronides, i. (1664) Cited by Ray and Fuller.

A man is a man still, if he hath but a hose on his head.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 255. (1709)

A man is a Man, tho' he have but a Hose upon his head.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 277. (1732) Some commentators think the meaning of this proverb is not clear, but it must mean that a man's a man, whatever his attire, even if his poverty compels him to wear a stocking for a cap.

A man's a man for a' that.

ROBERT BURNS, For A' That and A' That. (1795)

A man is a man, though he have never a cap to his crown.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 294. (1855)

1 A man unknown and new. (Homini ignoto et novo.)

CICERO, De Re Republica. Bk. i, sec. 1. (c. 54 B. C.) Referring to Marcus Cato. A "novus homo" was a man who was the first of his family to hold high office.

You have gained what not many "new men" have gained. (Homines novi.)

CICERO, Ad Familiares. Bk. v, epis. 18. (52 B. C.)

Cicero is addressing Titus Fadius Gallus, who was in exile at the time.

Most of the nobles were consumed with jealousy and thought the office [of consul] in a way prostituted if a "new man" (homo novus), however excellent, should obtain it.

SALLUST, Bellum Catilinae. Ch. 23, sec. 6. (c. 41 B. C.)

2 You'll needs be a man before your time.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 267. (1639)

3 A sadder and a wiser man
He rose the morrow morn.

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Rime of the Ancient Mariner. Concluding lines. (1798)

4 I like man, but not men.

R. W. EMERSON, Journal, March, 1846.

5 One hand can make but feeble fight. (μῆας γὰρ χεῖρὸς ἀσθενὴς μάχη.)

EURIPIDES, Children of Hercules, l. 274. (c. 430 B. C.)

One man, no man. (εἷς ἀνὴρ οὐδὲς ἀνὴρ.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. v, No. 40. (1523) Erasmus gives the Latin, "Unus vir, nullus vir," and adds, "Vir quidem unus, nullus est. The meaning is that nothing surpassingly outstanding is possible for one man, destitute of all help." He mentions Zenodotus as having cited the proverb. It is included by TAVERNER in his Translations from Erasmus, fo. 17, with the comment, "One man left alone and forsaken of all the reste, can do lytle good." The French say, "Un homme, nul homme."

The prouerbe saeth, one man is deemed none.

GEOFFREY WHITNEY, A Choice of Emblemes, p. 66. (1586)

We say that one is none, because he cannot be fewer than none, . . . less than one, . . . weaker than one.

HENRY SMITH, Sermons: A Preparative to Marriage. (a. 1591)

One and none is all one.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 16. (1678) Cited as a Spanish proverb.

One hand is no hand. That is, one hand, where there is no help, can dispatch but little work.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 270. (1721)

One man, no man . . . rests on that great truth upon which the deeper thinkers of antiquity laid so much stress—namely: that in the idea the state precedes the individual, man not being accidentally gregarious, but essentially social.

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs. Ch. 6. (1852)

6 A simple man, perhaps, but good ez gold and true ez steel;

He could whip his weight in wildcats, and you never heard him squeal.

EUGENE FIELD, Modjesky as Cameel. (1882)

7 One man is woorth a hundred, & a hundred is not worth one. (Vn homo val cento, e cento non vagliono vno.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 32. (1578)

8 A Man among Children will be long a Child, a Child among Men will be soon a Man.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 270. (1732)

A Man, like a Watch, is to be valued for his Goings.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 285.

Every Man hath his own Planet.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1426. The French say, "Chaque homme est un petit monde" (Every man is a little world).

9 So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them. (Et creavit Deus hominem ad imaginem suam: ad imaginem Dei creavit illum, masculum et feminam creavit eos.)

Old Testament: Genesis, i, 27. (c. 550 B. C.)

Thou hast made him a little lower than the angels. (Minuisti eum paulominus ab angelis.)

Old Testament: Psalms, viii, 5. (c. 350 B. C.)

God made him, and therefore let him pass for a man.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, i, 2, 60 (1597)

Each of us is as God made him, ay, and often worse. (Cada uno es como Dios le hizo, y aun peor muchas veces.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1615)

Man is God's image; but a poor man is Christ's stamp to boot.

HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 64. (a. 1633)

If Heaven creates a man, there must be some use for him.

H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs. No. 127. (1937)

10 In the inward man there are (as ye would say) three men, the liuing, the sensitue, and the reasonable.

ARTHUR GOLDING, tr., De Mornay's Christian Religion. Ch. 14. (1587)

The outer was forgotten in the inner man.

SIR GEORGE W. LE FEVRE, The Life of a Traveling Physician. Bk. i, ch. 5. (1843)

11 A big butter-and-egg man.

TEXAS GUINAN, introducing from the floor of her night-club in New York, one evening in 1924, a prodigally generous stranger, who refused to give his name, saying only that he was in the dairy produce business. The phrase became proverbial for a reckless spender or for the financial "angel" for theatrical and night-club gambles. It was used as the title of a comedy by George Kaufman. (1925) His butter-and-egg man came from Chilli-cothe, Ohio.

<sup>1</sup> If the Man Higher Up is ever found, take my assurance for it, he will be a large, pale man with blue wristlets showing under his cuffs.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), Man About Town. (1906) "The man higher up" was the man at the head of racketeering and other illegal activities, whom the police were always trying to get, and seldom did.

I get my orders from the man higher up.

O. HENRY, The Voice of the City. (1908) But Saturn wasn't all. He was only the man higher up.

O. HENRY, Phoebe. (1909)

<sup>2</sup> When you know one man you know 'em all.

O. HENRY, The Memento. (1908)

A woman need know but one man to understand all men; whereas a man may know all women and understand not one.

HELEN ROWLAND, The Sayings of Mrs. Solomon, p. 11. (1913)

<sup>3</sup> Omniae personae in tres partes divisae sunt. Namely: Barons, Troubadours, and Workers.

O. HENRY, The Last of the Troubadours. (1911)

<sup>4</sup> Though your pasture look barrenly and dull, Yet looke not on the meate, but looke on the man.

JOHN HEYWOOD, A Play of Love, l. 1229. (1534) Shew me not the meat, but shew me the man.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 84. (1639)

FULLER, A Pisgah-Sight of Palestine, ii, x, 201. (1650)

To measure the meat by the man.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 354. (1678)

Never shew me the meat, but shew me the man. If a man be fat, plump, and in good liking, I shall not ask what keeping he has had.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 259. (1721)

<sup>5</sup> As men of today are. (οἱοὶ νῦν βροτοὶ εἰσι.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. v, l. 304. (c. 850 B.C.) "Ut nunc sunt homines" says ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, viii, 59, and comments sadly upon the way in which times degenerate and men decay.

Such men as live in these degenerate days.

POPE, tr., The Iliad, v, 371. (1715)

<sup>6</sup> He is a better man than thou. (ἐπεὶ σέο φέρτερός ἐστι.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xvii, l. 168. (c. 850 B.C.) Several times repeated in both Iliad and Odyssey. In the latter (xviii, 234) is, "The stranger proved the better man" (βέλτε δ' ἢ γε φέρτερος ἦεν.)

A better man than I am. (Meliores quam ego.)

PLAUTUS, Curculio, l. 256. (c. 200 B.C.)

He is a better man than I am. (ὅς περ μου πολλὸν ἀμείνων.)

VARRO, De Re Rustica. Bk. ii, ch. 1. (c. 35 B.C.)

Quoting a Greek proverb.

Though I've belted you and flayed you,

By the livin' Gawd that made you,

You're a better man than I am, Gunga Din!

RUDYARD KIPLING, Gunga Din. (1892)

<sup>7</sup> May you all turn to earth and water. (ἀλλ' ὑμεῖς μὲν πάντες ὕδωρ καὶ γαῖα γένοισθε.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. vii, l. 99. (c. 850 B.C.) A proverbial curse. HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 61, tells how Pandora was moulded out of earth and water.

From oak tree or from rock. (ἀπὸ δρυὸς οὐδ' ἀπὸ πέτρης.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xxii, l. 126. (c. 850 B.C.) A proverbial phrase apparently from an old folk-tale dealing with the creation of mankind from trees and stones.

Thou art not sprung from an oak of ancient story, or from a rock. (οὐ γὰρ ἀπὸ δρυὸς ἔσσι παλαιφάτου οὐδ' ἀπὸ πέτρης.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xix, l. 163. (c. 850 B.C.)

I am not born, as Homer has it, of an oak or a rock. (τὸ τοῦ Ὀμήρου, οὐδ' ἐγὼ ἀπὸ δρυὸς οὐδ' ἀπὸ πέτρης πέφυκα.)

PLATO, Apology. Sec. 34D. (c. 399 B.C.) In The Republic, bk. viii, sec. 544D, Plato speaks again of "the proverbial oak or rock."

So out of stones mortal men were made, and they were called people. (ἐκ δὲ λίθων ἐγένοντο βροτοὶ λαοὶ δὲ καλεῖντο.)

HESIOD, Catalogues of Women. No. 82. (c. 750 B.C.) STRABO, vii, p. 322. There is a fancied resemblance between lâas (stone) and laós (people). The reference is to the stones which Deucalion and Pyrrha transformed into men and women after the flood.

Why all this about oak and stone? (ἀλλὰ τί ἡ μοι ταῦτα περὶ δρὺν ἢ περὶ πέτρην;)

HESIOD, Theogony, l. 35. (c. 750 B.C.) A proverbial saying meaning "why waste time on irrelevant subjects?"

<sup>8</sup> Self-taught am I. (αὐτοδίδακτος δ' εἰμὶ.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xxii, l. 347. (c. 850 B.C.)

Look what I started from! (ἐξ ὧν ὑπήρξε ταῦτα.)

IPHICRATES, an Athenian general who rose from the ranks to the supreme command of the army. (c. 392 B.C.) Quoted by ARISTOTLE, Art of Rhetoric, i, 7, 33.

Of course everybody likes and respects self-made men. It is a great deal better to be made in that way than not to be made at all.

O. W. HOLMES, The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 1. (1858)

A self-made man; who worships his creator.

JOHN BRIGHT, of Benjamin Disraeli. (c. 1860)

Our self-made men are the glory of our institutions.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, Speech, at Boston, 21 Dec., 1860.

The self-made man can never be the society equal of the society-made man.

HOWELLS, Quality of Mercy, p. 368. (1892)

[We regard] our self-made men as the noblest product of our democratic institutions.

MARY ANTIN, They Who Knock at Our Gates, p. 76. (1914)

1 When shall we look upon his like again?
(Quando ullum inveniet parem?)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 24, l. 8. (23 B.C.)

He was a man, take him for all in all,
I shall not look upon his like again.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, i, 2, 187. (1600)
When I am dead, you'll find it hard, Sais he,
To ever find another man Like me.
What makes you think, as I suppose You do,
I'll ever want another man Like you?

EUGENE F. WARE, He and She. (c. 1885)

2 A contentious man will never lack words.

JOHN JEWEL, A Defence of the Apology for the Church of England. (1567)

A noisy man is always in the right.

WILLIAM COWPER, Conversation, l. 114. (1781)

3 I hate mankind, for I think myself one of the best of them, and I know how bad I am.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Remark, to Mrs. Piozzi. (c. 1778) See PIOZZI, Johnsoniana.

I despise mankind in all its strata. (Ich verachtet die Menschheit in allen ihren Schichten.)

ALEXANDER VON HUMBOLDT, Conversation, with Arago, in 1812.

To think ill of mankind, and not wish ill to them.
is perhaps the highest wisdom and virtue.

HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 241. (c. 1821)

I WISH I LIKED THE HUMAN RACE, see under HUMANITY.

4 Man is dearer to the gods than he is to himself.
(Carior est illis homo quam sibi.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. x, l. 350. (c. A.D. 120)

5 A man of five, may be a fool of fifteen. A pregnant, pert, witty child, may prove but a heavy worthless man.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 10. (1721)

A man at five may be a fool at fifteen.

NATHAN BAILEY, Dictionary: Five. (1736)

A Man at sixteen will prove a Child at sixty.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 273. (1732)

6 Philip of Macedon had one every morning to call upon him to remember that he was a man.

DAVID LLOYD, Dying and Dead Men's Words,
p. 83. (1673)

Remember, thou art but a Man.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4014. (1732)

7 A street-corner fellow. (olos ek rripidov.)

LUCIAN, On the Writing of History. Ch. 16.
(c. A.D. 170)

The man in the street.

Midrash: Genesis Rabbah, fo. 41b. (c. 550)

Knowing as "the man in the street" (as we call him at Newmarket) always does, the greatest secrets of kings, and being the confidant of their most hidden thoughts.

CHARLES FULKE GREVILLE, Memoirs, 22 March, 1831.

The man in the street does not know a star in the sky.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Worship. (1860)
Hes the man in the street.

BERNARD SHAW, Fanny's First Play: Induction.
(1911) The ordinary run-of-the-town man;
perhaps just a loafer.

8 What manner of man is this? (tis apa odros estiv;)

New Testament: Luke, iv, 41. (a. A.D. 65) The Vulgate is, "Quis, putas, est iste?"

What kind o' man is he?—Why, of mankind.—
What manner of man?—Of very ill manner.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, i, 5, 162. (1599)

9 As I was going up the stair
I met a man who wasn't there.

He wasn't there again today.

I wish, I wish he'd stay away!

HUGH MEARNS, Antigonish. (1910) Suggested by a story of a haunted house in a town named Antigonish. First sung publicly in The Psyco-ed, a play written by Mearns.

The Little Man Who Wasn't (All) There.

UNKNOWN, Tales out of School. Referring to Harold Ickes. See Liberty, 18 May, 1940,
p. 30.

The little man who wasn't there.

STEWART STERLING, Five Alarm Funeral, p. 164.
(1942)

10 I haue red that in an olde smokie authour,
. . . and here I meane to insert . . . I haue seldome sene a long man wise, or a lowe man lowlie.

BRIAN MELBANCKE, Philotimus, sig. U3. (1583)
See also under CHARACTER.

11 Now you must be a man. (vun andra xph elvat.)

MENANDER, Girl from Samos, l. 137. (c. 300 B.C.)

Where there is no man, be thou the man.

Babylonian Talmud: Pirké Aboth, ii, 6. (c. 450)

Where there is a man, there do not thou shew thyself a man: . . . It becomes us not to inter-meddle in an office where there is already such good provision made that there is no need of our help.

JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 397. (1678)

12 He hain't been the same man since.

JOAQUIN MILLER, The Danites. Act i. (1877)

13 A strong silent man. Beloved of women novelists (Maud Diver, Elizabeth Page, Eleanor M. Hull et hoc genus omne): [a cliché] from
ca. 1905.

ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: Strong.
(1941)

14 I came to seek an honest man. (arabon andra hetein.)

PLATO, when asked by Dionysius what business he had in Sicily. (c. 367 B.C.) See PLUTARCH, Lives: Dion. Ch. 5, sec. 2. See also under HONESTY.

I am seeking a man. (ἀνθρώπων ζητῶ.)

DIOGENES, explaining why he was going about Athens in broad daylight with a lighted lamp in his hand. (c. 350 B. C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Diogenes. Bk. vi, sec. 41.

I am in search of a man. (Hominem quaero.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. iii, fab. 19, l. 9. (c. 25 B. C.)

A man! A man! My kingdom for a man!

JOHN MARSTON, The Scourge of Villainy. (1598)

<sup>1</sup> You man-about-town, you public pet! (Tu urbanus vero scurra, deliciae populi.)

PLAUTUS, Mostellaria, l. 15. (c. 220 B. C.) The proverb "Qui semel scurra, numquam pater familias" (Once a man-about-town, never a man of family) is evidently an early one, for scurra in this sense had become obsolete long before the time of Horace and Vergil.

I was a youth about Town when he undertook that expedition.

JAMES HOWELL, Letters (1650) ii, 94. (c. 1635) Miss Jenny Hamilton, a pretty girl about town.

LADY LUXBOROUGH, Letter to Shenstone, 28 Nov., 1749.

I'll show you forty very dull fellows about town.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, The Vicar of Wakefield. Ch. 20. (1766)

He was quite the man-about-town.

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 26. (1844) The most vicious sort of London man about town.

BERNARD SHAW, Mrs. Warren's Profession. Act ii. (1893)

What we used to call a man about town.

ELIZABETH DAILY, Murders in Volume 2, p. 113. (1941)

MAN OF THE WORLD, see under WORLD.

<sup>2</sup> Far better be the man you ought to be than the man you'd like to be. (Nimio satiatus, ut opus est ita esse, quam ut animo lubet.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus, l. 311. (c. 194 B. C.)

<sup>3</sup> What dwarfs men are. (Homunculi quanti sunt.)

PLAUTUS, Captivi: Prologue, l. 51. (c. 200 B. C.) What poor, poor things men are. (Ita sunt homines misere miseri.)

PLAUTUS, Cistellaria, l. 689. (c. 200 B. C.) O how contemptible a thing is man unless he can raise himself above humanity. (O quam contempta res est homo nisi supra humana se erexerit.)

SENECA, Naturales Quaestiones. Bk. i, Preface. (c. A. D. 62) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, bk. ii, ch. 12, with the comment, "Here is a bon mot and a useful desire, but equally absurd. For to make the handful bigger than the hand, the armful bigger than the arm, and to hope to stride further than the stretch of our legs, is impossible and monstrous."

Unless above himself he can Erect himself, how poor a thing is man.

SAMUEL DANIEL, To the Lady Margaret, Countess of Cumberland. St. 12. (a. 1611) Quoted by WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. iv, l. 330.

How weak and yet how vain a thing is man,
Mean what he will, endeavour what he can!

JOHN SHEFFIELD, DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM, An Essay on Satire. (c. 1685)

However we brave it out, we men are a little breed.

TENNYSON, Maud, l. 131. (1855)

<sup>4</sup> Than man nothing is more miserable—or more arrogant. (Nec quicquam miserius homine, aut superbius.)

PLINY THE ELDER, Naturalis Historia. Bk. ii, ch. 5, sec. 25. (A. D. 77)

Nothing is so haughty by nature as man. (οὐδὲν γὰρ οὕτω γαύρον ὡς ἄνθρωπος ἐστίν.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: To an Uneducated Ruler. Sec. 779D. (c. A. D. 95) Quoting from an unknown tragic poet.

Of all creatures, man is the most miserable and frail, and at the same time the most arrogant. (La plus calamiteuse et fragile de toutes les creatures, c'est l'homme, et quand la plus orgueilleuse.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 12. (1580) Quoting Pliny.

And, to conclude, I know myself a man—

Which is a proud and yet a wretched thing.

SIR JOHN DAVIES, Nosce Teipsum. (1599)

<sup>5</sup> A man of iron. (ὁ σιδάρεος ἐκείνος.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: On the Fortune of Alexander. Sec. 339E. (c. A. D. 95) The Doric form suggests quotation from some poem or drama.

<sup>6</sup> Man being in honour abideth not: he is like the beasts that perish. (Homo, cum in honore esset, non intellexit.)

Old Testament: Psalms, xlix, 12. (c. 250 B. C.) Nothing in life is certain for men, children of a day. (οὐδὲν γὰρ βέβαιον πικρὸν ἐφημετέροις.)

UNKNOWN, Epitaph on Cassandra. Greek Anthology. Bk. vii, epig. 327.

<sup>7</sup> A man for all hours. (Omnium horarum homo.)

QUINTILIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae. Bk. vi, ch. 3, sec. 111. (c. A. D. 80) Referring to Asinus Pollio, who had equal gifts for being grave or gay, and for adapting himself to any company. Such a man also was Aristippus, "Omnis Aristippum decuit color," whom everything became. AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticae, xii, 4, says that Quintus Ennius was such a man. Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, iii, 86.

<sup>8</sup> Men are like bees. They are worth a great deal less than their products.

JULES ROMAINS, Verdun, p. 186. (1940) Quoted as a favorite maxim of Maykosen.

<sup>9</sup> Manliness does not consist

In stopping others' voices with your fist.

SADI, Gulistan. ii. 43. {c. 1258}

<sup>10</sup> All sorts and conditions of men. (Cuiusque modi genus hominum.)

SALLUST, Bellum Catilinae. Ch. 39. (c. 41 B. C.)

Book of Common Prayer: Prayer for all Conditions of Men. (1548) Title of novel by Walter Besant. (1882)

1 A man after his own heart. (Virum iuxta cor suum.)

Old Testament: I Samuel, xiii, 14. (c. 600 B.C.)

And Nathan said to David: Thou art the man. (Dixit autem Nathan ad David: Tu es ille vir.)

Old Testament: II Samuel, xii, 7. (c. 600 B.C.)

I'm as much of a man as you are. (Tam ego homo sum quam tu.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 490. (c. 200 B.C.)

You are a man. (Vir es.)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 154. (161 B.C.)

A man every inch of him.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 247. (1639)

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 76. (1678)

HENLEY AND STEVENSON, Admiral Guinea.

Act i, sc. 2. (1892)

Thou'rt a man every inch of thee.

UNKNOWN, Terence Made English, p. 64. (1698)

Rake hell and skim the devil, you can't find such a man.

BERTHELSON, Eng.-Danish Dict.: Rake. (1754)

I am a man, and you are another.

BLACK HAWK, the Indian Chief, to Andrew

Jackson, at their first interview, April, 1833.

Render unto all men their due, but remember thou art also a man.

M. F. TUPPER, Proverbial Philosophy: Of Humility. (1838) See also under PHILANTHROPY.

2 I feel that I am a man of destiny. (Ich fühl's das ich der Mann des Schicksals bin.)

SCHILLER, Wallenstein's Tod. Act iii, sc. 15, 171. (1799)

3 Even men have childish and womanish natures. (Nam viris quoque puerilia ac muliebria ingenia sunt.)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. i, ch. 20, sec. 3. (c. A. D. 55)

Men are but children of a larger growth.

DRYDEN, All for Love. Act iv, sc. 1. (1678)

4 No man is more frail than another, nor more certain of the morrow. (Nemo altero fragilior est, nemo in crastinum sui certior.)

SENECA, Epistulae Morales. Epis. xci, sec. 17. (c. 64 A. D.) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, i, 19

5 Whomever thou shalt see wretched, know him man. (Quemcumque miserum videris, hominem scias.)

SENECA, Hercules Furens, l. 463. (A. D. 60)

Man, that is born of a woman, hath but a short time to live, and is full of misery.

Book of Common Prayer: Burial of the Dead. (1548)

The state of man: inconstancy, weariness, unrest. (Condition de l'homme: inconstance, ennui, inquiétude.)

PASCAL, Pensées. Pt. ii, No. 127. (c. 1660)

The lot of man: to suffer and to die.

POPE, tr., Odyssey. Bk. iii, l. 117. (1725)

Twins ev'n from birth are Misery and Man!

POPE, tr., Odyssey. Bk. vii, l. 263.

6 In that day's feats, . . .
He prov'd best man i' the field, and for his meed

Was brow-bound with the oak.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus, ii, 2, 99. (1607)

7 I am not in the roll of common men.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, iii, 1, 43. (1597)

Despair—thy name is written on

The roll of common men.

FITZ-GREENE HALLECK, Fanny. (1827)

It is time now to make certain that concern for the common man does not destroy the man who is not so common.

JOHN HANNA, in N.Y. Times, 29 Dec., 1942.

8 A proper man, as one shall see in a summer's day.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream, i, 2. (1596)

As fine a fat thriving child as you shall see in a summer's day.

HENRY FIELDING, Joseph Andrews. Bk. iv, ch. 15. (1742)

9 Are you good men and true?

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing, iii, 3, 1. (1598)

10 No man is altogether blameless or harmless. (πάμπαν δ' ἄμωτος οὐτὶς οὐδ' ἀκήριος.)

SIMONIDES, Fragments. (c. 650 B.C.) See STOBÆUS, Florilegium, 105, 7.

We all are men . . . few are angels.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII, v, 3, 10. (1612)

Men are not angels.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 80. (1639)

11 Hit a man your own size, you great big monster.

F. E. SMEDLEY, Frank Fairleigh. Ch. 33. (1850)

12 Many wonders there be, but naught more wondrous than man. (πολλὰ τὰ δεινὰ κούδὲν ἀνθρώπου δεινότερος πέλει.)

SOPHOCLES, Antigone, l. 332. (c. 441 B.C.)

I am fearfully and wonderfully made. (Terribiliter magnificatus es.)

Old Testament: Psalms, cxxxix, 14. (c. 250 B.C.)

This Being of mine, whatever it be, consists of a little flesh, a little breath, and the ruling Reason. (ὃ τί ποτε τοῦτό ἐμει. σαρκία ἐστὶ καὶ πνευμάτιον καὶ τὸ ἡγεμονικόν.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. ii, sec 2 (c. A. D. 174)

What a piece of work is a man! . . . And yet, to me, what is this quintessence of dust? man delights not me: no, nor woman neither.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, ii, 2, 316. (1600)

The piebald miscellany, man.

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. v, l. 190. (1847)

Or, as Christopher Morley put it, "An ingenious arrangement of portable plumbing."

What a piece of work is man! says the poet. But what a blunderer.

SHAW, Man and Superman. Act iii. (1903)

What an institution, what a revelation is a man! . . . It is a great encouragement that an honest man makes this world his abode.

H. D. THOREAU, Autumn, 1 Dec., 1856.

<sup>1</sup> The Forgotten Man works and votes—generally he prays—but his chief business in life is to pay.

WILLIAM GRAHAM SUMNER, The Forgotten Man. Title essay in The Forgotten Man and Other Essays, 1883.

The State cannot get a cent for any man without taking it from some other man, and this latter must be a man who has produced and saved it. The latter is the Forgotten Man.

W. G. SUMNER, What Social Classes Owe to Each Other. In other words, Mr. Sumner's "Forgotten Man" is the taxpayer.

These unhappy times call . . . for plans that put their faith once more in the forgotten man at the bottom of the economic pyramid.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT, Radio Address, 7 April, 1932. It will be noted that Mr. Roosevelt's "forgotten man" was the so-called "underprivileged man," a phrase coined at about the same time. He was, of course, the exact opposite of Mr. Sumner's industrious, provident, tax-paying citizen.

They have found the forgotten man. There's nine of him and one woman.

WILL ROGERS, when President Roosevelt announced his cabinet, March, 1933

<sup>2</sup> A nice man is a man of nasty ideas.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects. (1714) Of all created creatures man is the most detestable. . . . He is the only creature that has a nasty mind.

MARK TWAIN, The Character of Man. (c. 1900)

<sup>3</sup> Surpassing in strength; super-men. (Super vires.)

TACITUS, Germania. Sec. 43. (A. D. 98)

I teach you the Superman. Man is something which shall be surpassed. (Ich lehre euch den Übermenschen.)

NIETZSCHE, Also Sprach Zarathustra: Introduction. Sec. 3. (1883)

Nietzsche . . . raked up the Superman, who is as old as Prometheus.

BERNARD SHAW, Man and Superman. Act iii. (1903)

<sup>4</sup> As a man's made, so you should humor him. (Ut homost, ita morem geras.)

TERENCE, Adelphoe, l. 431. (160 B. C.)

<sup>5</sup> What a difference there is between man and man! (Vir viro quid praestat!)

TERENCE, Phormio. Act v, sc. 3, l. 790. (c. 163 B. C.) Plutarch says somewhere that he finds no such great difference between beast and beast as he finds between man and man. (Plutarque dict, en quelque lieu, qu'il ne trouve point si grande distance de beste à beste, comme il trouve d'homme à homme.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk i, ch. 42 (1580)

<sup>6</sup> A woman's man. (γυναικοφίλας.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. Idyl viii, l. 60. (c. 270 B. C.)

The context is, "Not I alone lie under ban; | Zeus himself is a woman's man."

Fitted for girls; a ladies' man. (Puellis nuper idoneus.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 26, l. 1. (23 B. C.)

Thou art a right woman's man.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii. (1738)

<sup>7</sup> 'Tis God's will that one man needs another. (ἄλλου δ' ἄλλον ἔθηκε θεὸς ἐπιτενέα φωτῶν.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls, Idyl xxv, l. 50. (c. 270 B. C.)

See also under ALONE.

<sup>8</sup> To put the right man in the right place. (τὸ προστάττειν ἕκαστα τοῖς ἐπιτελεῖσι πράττειν.)

XENOPHON, Memorabilia. Bk. iii, ch. 4, sec. 8 (c. 375 B. C.)

No duty the Executive has to perform is so trying as to put the right man in the right place.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. (c. 1800) As quoted by J. B. MCMASTER, History of the People of the United States. Vol. ii, p. 586.

I have always believed that success would be the inevitable result if the two services, the army and the navy, had fair play, and if we sent the right man to fill the right place.

SIR AUSTIN HENRY LAYARD, Speech, House of Commons, 15 Jan., 1855. See HANSARD, Parliamentary Debates. Ser. iii, vol. 138. p. 2077.

You are the right man in the right place.

AGATHA CHRISTIE, The Patriotic Murders, p. 236. (1941)

<sup>9</sup> Fear not, she saith unto her spouse,
A man or a mouse whether ye be.

UNKNOWN, Scholehouse of Women, l. 386. (c. 1541)

He was vtterly mynded to put al in basard to make or marre, & to be manne or mouse.

NICOLAS UDALL, tr., Erasmus' Apophthegms, fo. 267b. (1542)

What, old acquaintance, a man, or a mouse?

RICHARD TARTLTON, Newes Out of Purgatorie, p. 54. (1590)

I will make a man or a mouse on you.

JOHN FLETCHER, Love's Cure. Act ii, sc. 2. (c. 1622)

To-day a man, to-morrow a mouse.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 84. (1678)

The French say, "Aujourd'hui roi, demain rien" (Today a king, tomorrow nothing)

You're a man among the geese, when the gander's away.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 177. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5842. (1732)

He'll be a man among the geese when the gander is gone.

B. E., A New Dictionary of the Canting Crew, sig. F3. (1690)

Don't thou know that a man mun be either a man or a mouse?

TENNYSON, Northern Farmer: New Style. (1869)

SO MANY MEN SO MANY MINDS, see under OPINION.

IV—Man a Wolf to Man

<sup>1</sup> In the evening, when we drink together, we are men, but when daylight comes, we arise wild beasts, preying upon each other. (ἄνθρωποι δαίτης, ὅτε πίνομεν· ἦν δὲ γένηται | ὄρθρος, ἐπ' ἀλλήλους θήρες ἐγυφόμεθα.)

AUTOMEDON OF CYZICUS, Epigram. (c. A. D. 100?) Greek Anthology. Bk. xi, epig. 46

<sup>2</sup> What is man's greatest bane? His brother man alone. (Pernicies homini quae maxima? Solus homo alter.)

BIAS, Apothegm. (c. 600 B. C.) See AUSONIUS, Septem Sapientum Sententiae, l. 2.

It is from his fellow-man that man's everyday danger comes. . . . Man delights to ruin man. (Ab homine homini cotidianum periculum. . . . Homini perdere hominem libet.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. ciii, sec. 2. (c. A. D. 64) Man is to man, the sorest, surest ill.

EDWARD YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Nt. iii, l. 217. (1742) The Germans say, "Ein Mensch ist des andern Plage" (One man is another's plague)

<sup>3</sup> When fear of brutish beasts disturbs your mind,
Know what you most should dread is human-kind.

(Cum tibi praeponas animalia bruta timore, unum hominem scito tibi praecipue esse timendum.)

CATO (?), Disticha, Bk. iv, No. 11. (c. 175 B. C.) As men ben cruel to hem-self and wikke.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. ii, l. 458. (c. 1380)

There is no beast in the world so much to be feared by man, as man. (Qu'il n'y a point de beste au monde tant à craindre à l'homme que l'homme.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 19. (1580) Quoting Alexander the Great.

Man's that savage beast, whose mind,
From reason to self-love declin'd,
Delights to prey upon his kind.

SIR JOHN DENHAM, Friendship and Single Life (c. 1650)

Of all beasts the man-beast is the worst:
To others, and himself, the cruellest foe.

RICHARD BAXTER, Hypocrisy. (c. 1680)

<sup>4</sup> In the whole animal kingdom I recollect no family but man, steadily and systematically employed in the destruction of itself.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to Madison. (1797) Man, biologically considered, . . . is the most formidable of all the beasts of prey, and, indeed, the only one that preys systematically on its own species.

WILLIAM JAMES, Memories and Studies, p. 301. (1911)

<sup>5</sup> There is more amity among serpents than among men. (Serpentum maior concordia.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xv, l. 159 (c. A. D. 120)

<sup>6</sup> God acteth not unjustly toward men; it is men who are unjust to one another.

MOHAMMED, The Koran, x, 44. (c. 622)

<sup>7</sup> Man is a wolf to man, not a man. (Lupus est homo homini, non homo.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 495. (c. 200 B. C.)

Man is a wolf to man. (ἄνθρωπος ἀνθρώπου λύκος.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. i, No. 70. (1523)

Erasmus gives the usual Latin form, "Homo homini lupus," and adds that "this is a proverb which warns us not to trust unknown men, but to fear them as we fear a wolf."

Cited by GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, i, 44. (1574) NORTHBROOKE, Against Dicing, p. 57 (1577) and many others.

We are (by our owne censures) iudged wolues one to another.

SIR EDWARD DYER, Writings (Grosart), p. 90 (1585)

The old proverb was . . . that a man is a beast to a man.

JOHN FORD, A Line of Life. (Shakes. Society), p. 50. (1620)

The greatest enemy to man is man, who, by the devil's instigation, is . . . a wolf, a devil to himself and others.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy Pt. i, sec. i, mem. 1, subs. 1. (1621)

It is my desire, that . . . the people . . . give no longer occasion to the proverb, "Homo homini lupus."

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England, iii, 547. (1662)

'Tis enmity that makes one man a wolf to another.

JOHN DUNTON, Athenian Sports, p. 251. (1707)

"Homo homini Lupus," said Plautus. . . . This is the comment in which the historical relations of man to man have been . . . condensed.

J. E. T. ROGERS, The Economic Interpretation of History. Vol. ii, ch. 16. (1888)

<sup>8</sup> Beasts are gentle toward each other and refrain from tearing their own kind, while men glut themselves with rending one another. (Inter se placidae sunt morsuque similitum abstinent, hi mutua laceratione satiantur.)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. ii, ch. 8, sec. 3. (c. A. D. 55) Wild beasts do not injure beasts spotted like themselves. (Parcit cognatis maculis similis fera.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xv, l. 159. (c. A. D. 120)

"When did the stronger lion ever take the life of the weaker?" Juvenal continues. "In what wood did a boar ever breathe his last under the tusks of a boar bigger than himself? The fierce tigress of India dwells in perpetual peace with her fellow; bears live in harmony with bears." And then he goes on to describe how man forges deadly weapons with which to kill his brother man.

<sup>9</sup> Timon will to the woods; where he shall find
The unkindest beast more kinder than mankind.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens, iv, 1, 35. (1608)

<sup>1</sup> No greater shame to man than inhumanity.
EDMUND SPENSER, The Faerie Queene. Bk. vi, canto i, st. 26. (1595)

Inhumanity is caught from man,
From smiling man.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Nt. v, l. 158. (1742)
And Man, whose heav'n-erected face
The smiles of love adorn—

Man's inhumanity to man
Makes countless thousands mourn.
BURNS, Man Was Made to Mourn. St. 7. (1788)

<sup>2</sup> Man to man is a god if he knows his job.
(Homo homini deus est si suum officium sciat.)

CAECILIUS STATIUS, Fragments. Frag. 257,
Loeb. (c. 175 B.C.)

Man is a god to man. (ἄνθρωπος ἀνθρώπων δαίμονιον.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. i, No. 69. (1523)
Erasmus gives the Latin, "Homo homini deus," and devotes more than a page to a discussion of the proverb, with many citations from various writers.

The olde Greke prouerbe . . . that a man, to a man shall sometyme be a God.

EDWARD HALL, Chronicle, p. 324 (1548)
Man is a God to man.

LEWIS WAGER, Marie Magdalene, sig.C3. (1566)
It is a match whereto may well be applied the common saying, homo homini aut Deus aut Lu-
pus, Man unto man is either a God or a Wolf

JOHN FLORIO, tr., Montaigne. Bk. iii, ch.5. (1603)
Thou hast led me . . . to my eternal ruin.
Woman to man Is either a god or a wolf.

JOHN WEBSTER, The White Diuel. Act iv. sc. 2.
(1612)

Man is a god or a devil to his neighbour.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 137. (1639)
The philosopher said—Man to man is a God and a wolf.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Remains (1795), ii, 378. (a.
1670)

<sup>3</sup> And much it grieved my heart to think
What Man has made of Man.

WORDSWORTH, Lines Written in Early Spring.
(1798)

V—Man: The Proper Study of Mankind

<sup>4</sup> Many are the stars of heaven whose names men know not: so man knows not man.

AHIKAR, Teachings. Col. viii, l. 116. (c. 550 B.C.)

<sup>5</sup> He studied from the life,
And in the original perused mankind.

JOHN ARMSTRONG, *The Art of Preserving
Health*. Bk. iv, l. 231. (1744)

My favourite, I might say my only study, is man.
GEORGE BORROW, The Bible in Spain. Ch 5.
(1843)

<sup>6</sup> To know a man is not to know his face, but to know his heart.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p.358. (1938)
A Chinese proverb.

<sup>7</sup> The proper Science and Subject for Man's Contemplation is Man himself. (La vraie science et le vrai étude de l'homme c'est l'homme.)

PIERRE CHARRON, Traité de la Sagesse. Bk i,
ch. 1. (1601)

Know then thyself, presume not God to scan;
The proper study of mankind is Man.

POPE, An Essay on Man. Epis. ii, l. 1. (1732)
The proper study of mankind is man. A translation from the French of Pierre Charron.

PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés. (1941)

<sup>8</sup> The Master said: "I will not grieve that men do not know me; I will grieve that I do not know men."

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. i, ch. 16. (c. 500 B.C.)
Know your fellow men.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. xii, ch. 22. His definition of wisdom.

<sup>9</sup> Men and melons are hard to know.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1733.
Let all Men know thee, but no man know thee thoroughly: Men freely ford that see the shallows

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1743.
If a man is worth knowing at all, he is worth knowing well.

ALEXANDER SMITH, Dreamthorp: On the Writing of Essays. (1863)

<sup>10</sup> It is easier to know mankind in general than man individually. (Il est plus aisé de connaître l'homme en général, que de connaître un homme en particulier.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 436. (1665)

<sup>11</sup> To study, men are more profitable than bookes.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Newes from Any Whence: Answers to the Court Newes
(1613)

It is more necessary to study men than books (Il est plus nécessaire d'étudier les hommes que les livres.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 550. (1665)

<sup>12</sup> There is no Theme more plentiful to scan
Than is the glorious goodly Frame of Man.

JOSHUA SYLVESTER, tr., Devine Weekes and Workes. Week i, day 6, l. 421. (1591)

Man is man's A, B, C. There's none that can Read God aright unless he first spell man.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Hieroglyphics of the Life of Man. (a. 1644)

VI—Man and Woman

<sup>13</sup> Better than men are women hardened. (Melius quam viri callent mulieres.)

ACCIIUS, Aegisthus. Frag. 10, Loeb. (c. 140 B.C.)

<sup>14</sup> Say-much be the man's name, the woman's Glad-of-all. (Πολλυλέγων ἄνδρ' ἀδελ, γυναίκε δὲ Πασιχάρη.)

ALCMAN, Maiden-Songs. Frag. 27. (c. 630 B.C.)

Quoted by ARISTIDES, On Rhetoric, ii, 40, who adds, "by which is meant 'let the man speak and the woman be content with whatsoever she shall hear.'" See EDMONDS, Lyra Graeca, i, 73.

<sup>1</sup> God has given more understanding to a woman than to a man.

Babylonian Talmud: Niddah, fo. 48. (c. 450) Woman's instinct is often truer than man's reasoning.

CHEALES, Proverbial Folk-Lore, p. 11. (1875) A man thinks he knows, but a woman knows better.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 383. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

<sup>2</sup> The glory of a woman is her beauty, of a man his strength. (μορφά θηλυτέραισι πέλει καλόν, ἀνέρι δ' ἀλκά.)

BION, After Their Kind. Frag. 17. (c. 120 B.C.) We should regard loveliness as the attribute of woman, and dignity as the attribute of man. (Venustatem muliebrem ducere debemus, dignitatem virilem.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 36, sec. 130. (c. 45 B.C.)

<sup>3</sup> A clever man will build a city, a clever woman will lay it low.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. xlii. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

A hundred men can make an encampment, but it takes a woman to make a home.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 383. (1938) A Chinese proverb. The English proverb is, "Men make houses, women make homes."

<sup>4</sup> The man is not of the woman; but the woman of the man. Neither was the man created for the woman; but the woman for the man. (οὐ γάρ ἐστιν ἀνὴρ ἐκ γυναίκος, ἀλλὰ γυνὴ ἐξ ἀνδρός.)

New Testament: 1 Corinthians, xi, 8-9. (A.D. 57) The Vulgate is, "Non enim vir ex muliere est, sed mulier ex viro."

As Christ is the head over man, so man is the head over woman.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 25. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Men, more divine, the masters of all these,
Lords of the wide world and wild watery seas, . . .

Are masters to their females, and their lords.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors, ii, 1, 20. (1593)

For contemplation he and valour form'd,
For softness she, and sweet attractive grace:
He for God only, she for God in him.

MILTON, Paradise Lost, Bk. iv, l. 297. (1667)

Let husbands govern, gentle wives obey.

COLLEY CIBBER, The Provok'd Husband. Act v, sc. 2. (1728)

Man for the field and woman for the hearth;
Man for the sword, and for the needle she;
Man with the head, and woman with the heart;

Man to command, and woman to obey;
All else confusion.

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. v, l. 437. (1847)

Man is the head, but woman turns it.

CHEALES, Proverbial Folk-Lore, p. 12. (1875)

The man's the head, and the woman's the neck, and the neck turns the head.

Folk-Lore. Vol. xxiv, p. 76. (1913)

<sup>5</sup> Were there no women, men might live like gods.

THOMAS DEKKER, II The Honest Whore. Act iii, sc. 1. (1630)

<sup>6</sup> One man among a thousand have I found; but a woman among all those have I not found. (Virum de mille unum reperi, mulierem ex omnibus non inveni.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, vii, 28. (c. 900 B.C.)

O Salomon, wys, richest of riches, . . .

Thus preiseth he yet the bountee of man:

"Amonges a thousand men yet fond I oon,
But of wommen all fond I noon."

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Marchantes Tale, l. 998. (c. 1388)

<sup>7</sup> Women have a less accurate measure of time than men. There is a clock in Adam: none in Eve.

R. W. EMERSON, Journal, 8 Feb., 1836

<sup>8</sup> A man of straw is more worth than a woman of gold. (Un homme de paille vaut une femme d'or.)

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, p. 173. (1591) Idolatry not so the sex, but hold

A man of straw more than a wife of gold.

SAMUEL DANIEL, Hymen's Triumph. (1615)

To skirmish with a man of straw of his own making.

THOMAS GATAKER, Transubstantiation, p. 92. (1624) An imaginary adversary.

A man of straw is worth a woman of gold.

JAMES HOWELL, Familiar Letters. Bk. ii, No. 4. (1647) Cited by Ray and Fielding.

They say a man of straw is worth a woman of gold, but I cannot swallow it.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk. Ch. 17. (1869)

<sup>9</sup> The Italian by-word, the woman is the fire, the man is the roasted meat, in commeth the deuil, and he playeth the cooke.

WILLIAM FULBECKE, The Pandects of the Law of Nations, p. 78. (1602)

A woman is flax, a man is fire, the devil comes and blows the bellows.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 75. (1666) The Spanish form is, "El hombre es el fuego; la muger, la estopa; Viene el diablo, y sopla" (Man is the fire, woman the tow; then comes the devil and blows). The French have the same proverb, "L'homme est de feu, la femme d'étaupe; le diable vient qui souffle." The Scots put it in a jingle, "When the man's fire, and the wife's tow, In comes the deil and blows it in a lowe [blaze]." Or, as Francis Quarles puts it. "When two agree in their desire, One sparke will set them both on fire." Man and woman, fire and chaff. (Homo et mulier, ignis et palea.)

HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 154. (1869)

The tow and tinder of which men and women are proverbially composed, only wait a chance spark, a rising breeze, to become a bonfire.

WHYTE-MELVILLE, Uncle John. Ch. 6. (1874)

1 Women's Jars breed men's wars.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: The Wise Statesman. (1642)

2 Men get Wealth, and Women keep it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3394. (1732)

After the Italian proverb, "Gli uomini fanno la roba, e le donne la conservano." There are many variations. The French say, "Les femmes peuvent tout, parcequ'elles gouvernent les personnes qui gouvernent tout" (Women can accomplish everything, because they govern the persons who govern everything), or, more briefly, "Men rule the world, but women rule men." Another French aphorism is attributed to Guibert, "Les hommes font les lois, les femmes font les mœurs" (Men make laws, women make manners)

3 Man, Woman, and Devil, are the three Degrees of Comparison.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3335. (1732)

4 Women grown bad, are worse than Men; because the Corruption of the best turns worst.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5807. (1732) The current . . . proverb, that "a bad woman is much worse than a bad man," owes its force to the fact that women . . . fall deeper, because they fall . . . from a higher level.

HENRY P. LIDDON, Sermons on the Old Testament, p. 159. (1893)

Rarely is a woman wicked, but when she is she surpasses the man.

CESARE LOMBROSO, The Female Criminal. (c. 1900) Quoted as an old Italian proverb See KOBLER, Some Like It Gory, p. 33.

5 To cheat a man is nothing; but the woman must have fine parts, indeed, who cheats a woman.

JOHN GAY, Beggar's Opera. Act ii, sc. 4. (1728)

6 Male and female created he them. (Masculum et feminam creavit eos.)

Old Testament: Genesis, i, 27. (c. 550 B. C.)

Virtue attir'd in woman see, . . .

And forget the Hee and Shee.

JOHN DONNE, The Undertaking. (a. 1631)

For Joan all Gaul was divided into two parts, male and female.

MARGARET MILLAR, The Weak-Eyed Bat, p. 4. (1942)

7 It has been said that any man may have any woman.

HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 426. (c. 1821)

Man is the hunter; woman is the game.

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. v, l. 147. (1847)

The whole world is strewn with snares, traps, gins and pitfalls for the capture of men by woman.

BERNARD SHAW, Man and Superman: Epistle Dedicatory. (1903)

If a woman doesn't chase a man a little she doesn't love him.

E. W. HOWE, Sinner Sermons. (1926)

8 It is because of men that women dislike each other. (Les hommes sont cause que les femmes ne s'aiment point.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères: Des Femmes (1688)

9 Men may have rounded Seraglio Point: they have not yet doubled Cape Turk.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Diana of the Crossways Ch. 1. (1885) In Christian nations, at least, man has passed the stage of keeping harems, but still refuses to treat woman as an equal 10 For wanton women lascivious men are made; in like manner lascivious men for wanton women.

MOHAMMED, The Koran, xxiv, 26. (c. 622)

The two sexes mutually corrupt and improve each other.

MARY WOLLSTONECRAFT, A Vindication of the Rights of Women. Ch. 8. (1792)

11 Doth not God say it is good for man not to touche a woman, and if thou bee unmarried remayne so?

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 68. (1576) Also p. 242 (Hartman, ed.).

12 They [women] are made of the purified metall of man, whereas man was made of ye grosse earth.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 262. (1576)

Men were made of clay, but woman was made of man.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

WHAT ARE LITTLE BOYS MADE OF, see under BOY.

13 A woman is only a lesser man. (ἀσθενέστερος γυνή ἀνδρός.)

PLATO, The Republic. Bk. iv, ch. 5, sec. 455E. (c. 275 B. C.) "Do you know," Plato asks,

"of anything practised by mankind in which the masculine sex does not surpass the female?" And he goes on to say that even in the watching of pancakes and the boiling pot, that is as cooks, man excels. George Eliot had perhaps read this before she wrote in Adam Bede, ch. 21, "I tell you there isn't a thing under the sun that needs to be done at all but what a man can do better than a woman."

Woman is the lesser man, and all thy passions, match'd with mine,

Are as moonlight unto sunlight, and as water unto wine.

TENNYSON, Locksley Hall, l. 151. (1842)

1 For story and experience tell us,
That man grows old and woman jealous;
Both would their little ends secure:
He sighs for freedom, she for power.
His wishes tend abroad to roam,
And hers, to domineer at home.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Alma. Canto ii, l. 65. (a.1721)
Men some to bus'ness, some to pleasure take;
But ev'ry woman is at heart a rake.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. ii, l. 215. (1735)

2 Men are more eloquent than women made,
But women are more powerful to persuade.

THOMAS RANDOLPH, Amyntas. (1638)

3 Men fear a slip of their pen, women a slip of their morals. (Nan p'a shu pi, nü p'a shu shên.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No.
1954. (1875)

4 A woman is a solitary, helpless creature without a man.

THOMAS SHADWELL, A True Widow. Act ii.
(1679)

5 Men have marble, women waxen, minds.

SHAKESPEARE, Rape of Lucrece, l. 1240. (1594)

Woman are wiser than men because they know less and understand more.

JAMES STEPHENS, Crock of Gold. Ch. 2. (1912)

6 Humanity is the virtue of a woman, generosity of a man.

ADAM SMITH, The Theory of Moral Sentiments. Ch. 4. (1759)

Man gets and forgets; woman gives and forgives.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches,
p. 483. (1940)

Man, in carving his future, usually finds a woman the mallet behind his chisel.

ARTHUR STRINGER, The Devastator, p. 115. (1944)

7 That no man is a match for a woman till he's married is an axiom that most Benedicts will subscribe to.

R. S. SURTEES, Handley Cross. Ch. 57. (1854)

8 I like men who have a future, and women who have a past.

OSCAR WILDE, The Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch.

15. (1891) The Arabs say, "If a man has sworn to injure you, you may sleep at night;
if a woman, keep awake"; "A man's age commands veneration; a woman's demands tact"; "The difference between a man and a woman is that a man looks forward, and a woman remembers"; and "There is one thing common to both man and woman:
both exist exclusively for the happiness of the man."

Women have a much better time than men in this world; there are far more things forbidden to them.

WILDE, Woman of No Importance. Act ii. (1893)

MANNER

9 One must not have too hasty a manner. (οὐ χρὴ πῶδωκε τὸν τρόπον λίαν φορεῖν.)

AESCHYLUS (?), *Fragment*s. Frag. 255, Smyth.
(c. 458 B. C.) STOBAEUS, Anthology, iii, 4, 16.

10 In everything the manner is fully as important as the matter.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 19 Nov., 1750.

11 "What sort of a doctor is he?" "Well, I don't know much about his ability, but he's got a very good bedside manner."

GEORGE DU MAURIER, Legend under drawing in Punch, 15 March, 1884.

I've a beautiful bedside manner.

NGAIO MARSH, A Man Lay Dead, p. 145. (1942)

12 A cold manner never covered a warm heart.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws.
Ch. 1. (1843)

13 According as men are, suit your manner. (Ut homines sunt, ita morem geras.)

PLAUTUS, Mostellaria. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 37. (c.
220 B. C.)

Suit your manner to the man. (Ut homo est, ita morem geras.)

TERENCE, Adelphoe. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 78. (160 B. C.)

14 I am native here | And to the manner born.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, i, 4, 16. (1600)

[He ordered dinner] with the calm deliberation of one who was to the menu born.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), The Venturers.
(1910)

Key was to the manor born.

E. H. BIERSTADT, Enter Murderers, p. 152.
(1937) A frequent misquotation.

15 Soth in speche, in maner mild.

UNKNOWN, Cursor Mundi, l. 24078. (a. 1300)

Lady Froth: I vow Mellefont's a pretty gentleman, but methinks he wants a manner.

Cynthia: A manner! What's that, madam?

Lady Froth: Some distinguishing quality . . . something of his own that should look a little je-ne-sais-quoi-ish.

CONGREVE, Double-Dealer. Act ii, sc. 1. (1694)

MANNERS

See also Behavior, Breeding, Courtesy,
Politeness

16 Such easy greatness, such a graceful port,
So turn'd and finish'd for the camp or court!
ADDISON, The Campaign, l. 417. (1705)

The mildest manners, and the gentlest heart.

POPE, tr., The Iliad. Bk. xvii, l. 756. (1715)

The mildest manners with the bravest mind.

POPE, tr., The Iliad. Bk. xxiv, l. 963.

17 By Manners I do not mean Morals, but Behaviour and Good-Breeding.

ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 119. (1711)

They teach the morals of a whore and the manners of a dancing-master.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, of Lord Chesterfield's Letters. (1754) See BOSWELL, Life (Glover), i, 170.

An earl's daughter, . . . of the best manners, and of the worst morals.

LYTTON, A Strange Story. Bk. i, ch. 7. (1862)

Manners before morals.

OSCAR WILDE, Lady Windermere's Fan. Act iv. (1892)

As good habits are said to be better than good principles, so, perhaps, good manners are better than good habits.

O. HENRY, The Trimmed Lamp. (1907)

Manners breed morals.

GEORGE BAGBY, Red Is for Killing, p. 125. (1941)

People say that if your manners are really good, your morals are good too.

ELIZABETH DALY, The House Without the Door, p. 148. (1942)

1 Manners are made at home.

MAX BRAND, Dr. Kildare's Search, p. 22. (1943)

Like many of the cheaper cuts of humanity, she didn't realize that manners began in the same place as charity.

CHRISTOPHER HALE, Murder in Tow, p. 164. (1943)

2 Bad habits corrupt good manners.

BHARTRIHARI, Niti Sataka. No. 42. (c. A. D. 100)

EVIL COMMUNICATIONS CORRUPT GOOD MANNERS, see under COMPANY.

Manners are corrupted more easily than they are reformed. (Les mœurs se gâtent plus facilement qu'elles ne se redressent.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 436. (1746)

3 After you is manners.

RICHARD BROME, Queen and Concubine. Act iii, sc. 7. (a. 1652)

After you is good manners. Spoken when our betters offer to serve us first.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 42. (1721)

O! madam; after you is good manners.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

Stop, friend! after me is manners.

JOHN O'KEEFE, Czar Peter. Act iii, sc. 2. (1789)

4 Office changes manners. (Oficios mudan las costumbres.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1615)

Honors change manners. (Hones mutant mores.)

POLYDOR VERGIL, Adagia. No. 202. (c. 1525)
See also HONORS.

Lordships changes manners.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 72. (c. 1595) Cited by KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 237, with the comment, "When people grow rich, and powerful, they grow proud."

5 You know good manners, but you use but a few.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 2. (1639)

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 185. (1670)

You have good Manners, but never carry them about you.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5919. (1732)

6 Manners are the happy ways of doing things. . . . Manners have been somewhat cynically defined to be a contrivance of wise men to keep fools at a distance.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Behavior. (1860)

Good manners are made up of petty sacrifices.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Social Aims. (1875)

7 Manners old and new. (Mores veteresque novosque.)

ENNIVS, Annals. Bk. vii, frag. 227, Loeb. (c. 180 B. C.)

8 I fear I am too unmanner'd, far too rude.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Faithful Shepherdess. Act ii, sc. 1. (1610)

He knew scholars to be an unmannered species.

GEORGE MEREDITH, The Egoist. Ch. 19. (1879)

9 Ill Manners produce good Laws.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3075. (1732)
See also under LAW.

10 Infants' manners are moulded more by the example of Parents, than by stars at their nativities.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1058. (1650)

11 Better be unmannerly than troublesome.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 5. (1659) Cited by RAY, p. 153, and FULLER, No. 880.

Unmannerly a little, is better than troublesome a great deal.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5404. (1732)

Better unkind than troublesome.

NATHAN BAILEY, Dictionary: Unkind. (1736)

12 What better school for manners than the company of virtuous women?

DAVID HUME, Essays: The Rise of Arts and Sciences. (1741)

13 Without sincerity, manners are mere apish bowing and scraping.

KANG-HSI, Sacred Edict. Sec. 15. (c. 300 B. C.)

14 Doth not the sympathy of manners make the conjunction of minds?

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 48. (1579)

15 I have often seen men unmannerly by too much manners. (J'ay vu souvent des hommes incivils par trop de civilité.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 13. (1580)

He that has more manners than he ought, is more a fool than he thought.

THOMAS D'URFEY, The Comical History of Don Quixote. Pt. ii, act i, sc. 2. (1694)

I have always found that what are called the best of manners are the worst.

H. D. THOREAU, Autumn, 4 Oct., 1859.

1 Everyone's manners make his fortune. (Mores cuique sui fingunt fortunam.)

CORNELIUS NEPOS, De Viris Illustribus: Atticus. Ch. 14. (c. 40 B. C.)

Manners often make fortunes.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 17. (1670)

2 Nor is it my wish to find fault with individuals, but truly to set forth the very life and manners of mankind. (Neque enim notare singulos mens est mihi, | verum ipsam vitam et mores hominum ostendere.)

PHÆDRUS, Fables. Bk. iii, Prologue, l. 49. (c. 25 B. C.)

The manners of every age should be observed by you. (Aetatis cuiusque notandi sunt tibi mores.)

HORACE, De Arte Poetica, l. 156. (c. 20 B. C.)

3 Different times, different manners. (ἄλλοτ' ἄλλοια φρόνει.)

PINDAR, Hymns. Frag. 43, Sandys. (c. 480 B. C.)

A proverb in many languages. The French say, "Autres temps, autres mœurs," the Italians, "Altri tempi, altri costumi," or "Altri tempi, altre cure" (Other times, other cares); the Portuguese, "Mudado o tempo, mudado o conselho" (As time changes, counsel changes); the Danes, "Anden Tid giver andet Folk" (Different times, different folk).

Other times, other ways.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 51. (1576)

4 Evil manners will, like watered grass, grow up very quickly. (Mores mali, | quasi herba inrigua succrevire uberrime.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus, l. 30. (c. 194 B. C.)

How many things become wrong and corrupt through the evil manners of the age. (Quam multa iniusta ac prava fiunt moribus.)

TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos, l. 839. (163 B. C.)

What were once vices are now the manners of the day. (Quae fuerant vitia mores sunt.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xxxix, sec. 6. (a. A. D. 64)

No manners at all—no more breeding than a bum-bailey.

WILLIAM CONGREVE, The Way of the World. Act i, sc. 6. (1700)

The mainners o' a' nations are equally bad.

JOHN WILSON, Noctes Ambrosianae. No. 39. (1825)

5 I have seen the outward appearance of the city, but I have observed the manners of men too little. (Urbis speciem vidi, hominum mores perspexi parum.)

PLAUTUS, Persa, l. 550. (c. 200 B. C.)

I have known the manners of men. (Novi ego hominum mores.)

PLAUTUS, Truculentus. Act i, sc. 2. (c. 186 B. C.)

Who saw the manners of many men and their cities. (Qui mores hominum multorum videt et urbes.)

HORACE, De Arte Poetica, l. 142. (c. 20 B. C.)

6 Not everywhere is the same act suitable. (Non ubique idem decorum est.)

QUINTILIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae. Bk. v, ch. x, sec. 40. (c. A. D. 80) Not everywhere is convention the same.

Things which are unbecoming are unsafe. (Intuta quae indecora.)

TACITUS, Histories. Bk. i, sec. 33. (c. A. D. 109)

7 Never too late is the way to good manners. (Sera numquam est ad bonos mores via.)

SENECA, Agamemnon, l. 242. (c. A. D. 60)

Let him mend his manners.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 76. (1678)

Few are qualified to shine in company, but it is in most men's power to be agreeable.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects. (1714)

8 You put me to forget a lady's manners, By being so verbal.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline, ii, 3, 110. (1609)

Her manners had not that repose

Which stamps the caste of Vere de Vere.

TENNYSON, Lady Clara Vere de Vere. (1842)

9 True is, that whilome that good poet sayd, The gentle minde by gentle deeds is knowne: For a man by nothing is so well bewrayd As by his manners.

EDMUND SPENSER, The Faerie Queene. Bk. vi, canto iii, st. 1. (1590)

Gentle bloud will gentle manners breed.

SPENSER, The Faerie Queene, vi, iii, 2. (1590)

See also under GENTLEMAN.

10 Pray where's your manners?

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

Manners is a fine thing, truly.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

Neverout: Tace is Latin for candle.

Miss: Is that manners, to show your learning before ladies?

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii.

11 What a generation! (Hocine saeculum!)

TERENCE, Adelphoe, l. 304. (160 B. C.)

What a life! what morals! (Hancine vitam, hoscine mores!)

TERENCE, Adelphoe, l. 758. (160 B. C.)

What times! what manners! (O tempora! O mores!)

CICERO, In Catilinam. No. i, ch. 1, sec. 2. (63 B. C.)

"O manners! O times!" cried Tully once when Catiline was planning his sacrilegious crime. (O mores! o tempora!)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. ix, No. 70. (A. D. 93)

O tempora, O mores, O Montreal!

OGDEN NASH, The Baffled Hermit. (1933)

12 Men are polished, through act and speech. Each by each,

As pebbles are smoothed on the rolling beach.

J. T. TROWBRIDGE, A Home Idyl. (a. 1903)

POLISHED TO THE NAIL (Ad unguem), see under NAIL: FINGERNAIL.

- 1
Maner mayks man.
UNKNOWN, Douce MS, 52, Förster, ed. (c.1350)
Manners makyth man.
WILLIAM OF WYKEHAM, Motto, on New College, Oxford, founded by him in 1380.
Fuer maner and clothyng makyth man.
UNKNOWN, Proverbs of Wisdom (Zupitza). (c. 1460)
In halle, in chambur, ore where thou gon,
Nurtur and good maners maketh man.
UNKNOWN, Babees Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 14. (c. 1460)
An olde prouerbe . . . Sayth that good lyfe and maners maketh man.
ALEXANDER BARCLAY, Shyp of Folys, p. 118. (1509)
Good maners and conynge maken a man.
HENRY BRADSHAW, The Life of St. Werburge of Chester (E. E. T. S.), p. 131. (1513)
For thers an old saying: . . .
Be he borne in barne or hall,
Tis maners makes the man and all.
UNKNOWN, London Prodigal. Act i, sc. 2. (1605)
Manners make a man, quoth William of Wickham.
JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 16. (1659)
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3334. (1738)
"Manners make a man" quoth William Wickham. This generally was his motto, inscribed frequently on the places of his founding.
THOMAS FULLER, Worthies, ii, 5. (1662)
Meat feeds, cloth cleeds [clothes], but manners make the man. Good meat and fine clothes, without good breeding, are but poor recommendations.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 246. (1721)
Manners and money make a gentleman.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3333. (1732)
The difference is, that in the days of old, Men made the manners; manners now make men.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xv, st. 26. (1824)
Manners makyth man—and all that bilge.
GILBERT FRANKAU, Air Ministry, Room 28, p. 108. (1942)

II—Manners: Table Manners

- 2
Leave off first for manners' sake; and be not unsatiable, lest thou offend. When thou sittest among many, reach not thine hand out first of all. (Cessa prior causa disciplinae.)
BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xxxi, 17. (c. 190 B. C.) An English variant is, "Leave something for manners."
3
Meat is good, but mense [good manners] is better.
D. FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 76. (c.1595)
Meat is much, but manners is more.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 93. (1639)
4
The man who bites his bread, or eats peas with a knife, I look upon as a lost creature.
W. S. GILBERT, Ruddigore. Act i. (1887)

- 5
Put your napkin upon your lap, covering your knees. It is out of date, and now looked upon as a vulgar habit, to put your napkin up over your breast.
C. B. HARTLEY, The Gentlemen's Book of Etiquette. Ch. 3. (1873)
The napkin in the collar. (La serviette au cou.)
Motto of Les Amis d'Escoffier. (1936)
6
More for my mates then for maners sake,
We had bread and drinke.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)
7
Gather up the fragments that remain, that nothing be lost. (συναγάγετε τὰ περισσεύσαντα κλάσματα, ἵνα μὴ τι ἀπόληται.)
New Testament: John, vi, 12. (c. A. D. 70)
He that keeps nor crust nor crum,
Weary of all, shall want some.
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, i, 4, 216. (1605)
8
Manners in eating count for something. (Est quiddam gestus edendi.)
OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. iii, l. 755. (c. 1 B. C.)
9
At table it becomes no one to be bashful. (Verecundari neminem apud mensam decet.)
PLAUTUS, Trinummus, l. 478. (c. 194 B. C.)
10
Eat slowly; only men in rags
And gluttons old in sin
Mistake themselves for carpet-bags
And tumble victuals in.
SIR WALTER RALEGH, Stans Puer ad Mensam. (a. 1618)

MARCH

- 11
After we had stolen some few days march upon them.
COLLEY CIBBER, Apology for His Life, i, 143. (1740)
She yesterday wanted to steal a march of poor Liddy.
SMOLLETT, Humphry Clinker, 6 May, 1771.
We must be off early tomorrow, while these good people are in bed, and steal a long march upon them.
MARRYAT, Peter Simple. Ch. 23. (1834)
He stole a march on his nurses, and . . . walked out.
CHARLES READE, It is Never too Late to Mend. Ch. 22. (1856)
We'll steal a march on him this time.
F. ANSTEY (T. A. GUTHRIE), The Tinted Venus, p. 100. (1885)

II—March: The Month

- 12
It is usual among us . . . to ascribe unto March certain borrowed days from April.
SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Pseudoxia Epidemica. Bk. vi, ch. 4. (1646)
April borrows three days of March, and they are ill.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 41. (1670)

March borrows of April
Three days, and they are ill;
April returns them back again
Three days, and they are rain.

The British Apollo. Vol. iii, No. 18. (1710)

March borrowed of Averil
Three days, and they were ill.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 252. (1721)

"It is alleg'd," Kelly explains, "that the first three days of April are commonly rough and intemperate, like March, and these we call the borrowing days."

March borrowed from April

Three days, and they were ill:

The first o' them was wind and weet;

The second o' them was snaw and sleet;

The third o' them was sic a freeze,

It froze the birds' nebs to the trees.

ROBERT CHAMBERS, Popular Rhymes of Scotland, p. 368. (1847) There are many other variations.

March borrowed a cloak from his father and pawned it after three days.

R. L. GALES, Old-World Essays, p. 250. (1921)

1
March winds and April showers
Bring forth May flowers.

F. T. ELWORTHY, West Somerset Word-Book,

p. 461. (1886) INWARDS, Weather Lore, p. 20.

(1893) The French say, "Mars ventoux annonce un bon mai" (A windy March forecasts a fine May), a saying which is used also in the sense that a violent war [Mars] precludes a prosperous peace.

2
Menallo: I would chuse March, for I would come in like a Lion.

Tony: But You'd go out like a Lamb, when you went to hanging.

JOHN FLETCHER, A Wife for a Month. Act ii, sc. 1. (1624)

Like the moneth of March, which entreth like a Lion, but goeth out like a Lamb.

JAMES HOWELL, Dodona's Grove, p. 10. (1640)

March hack ham [black ram]

Comes in like a lion, goes out like a lamb.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 41. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6473. (1732) INWARDS, Weather Lore, p. 19.

Then came my Lord Shaftesbury, like the month of March, as they say, "in like a lion, and out like a lamb."

NORTH, Lives of the Norths, i, 259. (1740)

Peter . . . had the sense to feel that . . . he had better be civil. Like March, having come in like a lion, he purposed to go out like a lamb.

CHARLOTTE BRONTË, Shirley. Ch. 15. (1849)

And March, having come in like a lion . . . go out like a lamb.

F. E. SMEDLEY, Frank Fairleigh. Ch. 7. (1850)

March comes in with an adder's head, and goes out with a peacock's tail.

R. L. GALES, Old-World Essays. p. 250. (1921)

3
March, search; April, try;
May will prove if you live or die.

RICHARD INWARDS, Weather Lore, p. 20. (1893)

There are innumerable English weather sayings about March of only local interest. Inwards gives the most complete list.

4
March in Janiveer, Janiveer in March I fear.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 43. (1678)

5
March many weathers.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 44. (1678)

March many-Weathers rain'd and blow'd,
But March Grass never did good.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6475. (1732)

6
March wind and May sun make clothes white and maids dun.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 44. (1678)

MARE

7
The mare is not to be valued according to its housing and ornaments in front.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 587. (1817)

8
I can jump yet, or tread a measure.—Like a Millers Mare.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Little French Lawyer. Act iv, sc. 1. (1620) Clumsily.

I'll make him jostle like the miller's mare, and stand like the dun cow, till thou may'st milk him.

THOMAS KILLIGREW, The Parson's Wedding. Act ii, sc. 6. (1663)

9
It is no vntrue prouerbe: She that taketh the pedlers mare must be fayne to haue the pedler himself also at the last.

MILES COVERDALE, The Christen State of Matrymonye, sig. G2. (1541)

10
And auld shanks-naig wad tire, I dread,
To pace to Berwick.

ROBERT FERGUSON, Poems, p. 333. (1773)

I'd rather . . . ride on Shanks's Mare.

SAMUEL BISHOP, Poetical Works, i, 204. (a. 1795)

I found shanksnaigie . . . the only way of moving by which I could get out to dinner.

SCOTT, Familiar Letters, 11 Feb., 1823.

I'll start for Carnarvon on Shanks's pony.

THEODORE WATTS-DUNTON, Aylwin. Bk. xii, ch. 3. (1898)

We git around on shank's mare.

J. S. PENNELL, Rome Hanks, p. 185. (1944)

11
This peece of land . . . is called the land of the two-legged mare.

ULPIAN FULWELL, Like Will to Like, sig. C4. (1568) The Gallows.

To leap from low Pillory up the Mare.

Roxburghe Ballads, v, 600. (1685)

For the Mare-with-three-legs, boys, I care not a rap.

AINSWORTH, Rookwood. Vol. iii, ch. 5. (1834)

12
What mine olde mare woulde haue a new crouper,

And now mine olde hat must haue a new band.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 1. (1546)

Gylle my olde mare must haue a newe crupper.

THOMAS LUPTON, All for Money, sig. E1. (1578)
The old mare would have a new crupper.

JOHN DAVIES, The Scourge of Folly. Prov. 185. (1611)

Old mares lust after new cruppers.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 2/1. (1659) RAY, Proverbs, p. 19. (1670)

<sup>1</sup> This biteth the mare by the thumbe, as they sey.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 6. (1546)

<sup>2</sup> Here were we fallen in a greate question of the law, whether the grey mare may be the better horse or not.

SIR THOMAS MORE, A Dialoge Concerning Heresyes. Bk. ii, ch. 5. (1528) Whether the wife rules the husband.

She is . . . bent to force you perfors

To know, that the grey mare is the better hors.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1546)
The white mare is the better horse.

ANDREW BOORDE, Breviary of Healtie. (1547)
Break her betimes, and bring her under by force,
Or else the grey mare will be the better horse.

UNKNOWN, The Marriage of Witte and Science.
Act ii, sc. 1. (c. 1570)

My sister and brother (I place them so, becaus
I thinke the gray meare is the best horse).

CHARLES I OF ENGLAND, Letter. (1626) See EL-LIS, Original Letters, iii, 249.

Suffer the Gray-mare sometimes to be the better Horse.

JAMES HOWELL, Letters. Vol. i, sec. 4, letter 9.
(5 Feb., 1625)

She began to tyrannize over my master, . . . and soon prov'd, as the Saying is, The grey Mare to be the better Horse.

WILLIAM R. CHETWOOD, The Adventures of Captain Robert Boyle, p. 2. (1726)

The vulgar proverb, that the grey mare is the better horse, originated, I suspect, in the preference generally given to the grey mares of Flanders over the finest coach horses of England.

MACAULAY, History of England. Bk. i, ch. 3, note. This theory is invalidated by the fact that the proverb dates back at least to 1528.
For an amusing story regarding it see F. S.
COZZENS, Sayings, p. 50.

<sup>3</sup> Nor stare in a mans face, as if he had spied a mares nest.

ROBERT PETERSON, tr., Galateo. Pt. iii. (1576)
To laughe at a horse nest, and whine too like a boy.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Works, i, a. 6. (1582)
Why dost thou laugh? What mare's nest hast thou found?

JOHN FLETCHER, Bonduca. Act v, sc. 2. (a. 1619)
To find a mare's nest. To make an illusory discovery.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 56. (1678)
An old wife's saw, . . . He has found a mare's nest and laughs at the eggs.

THOMAS D'URFEY, Tales Tragical and Comical,
p. 216. (1704)

You have found a horse nest. Spoken to them who laugh without cause.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 385. (1721)
You have found a Colt's Nest, and laugh at the Eggs.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5917. (1732)
What! you have found a mare's nest, and laugh at the eggs?

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

Tierney was ashamed of himself to be taken in such a mare's nest.

J. W. CROKER, Croker Papers, 1 Feb., 1857

This is mare's nesting, Bell.

H. C. BAILEY, Meet Mr. Fortune, p. 202. (1942)

<sup>4</sup> There are more mares in the wood than Grisell.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 173. (1678)

I'll not go before my mare to market.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 259.

<sup>5</sup> The heidismen hes 'cor mundum' in thair mouth,

Bot nevir with mynd to gif the man his meir.

ANDREW SCOTT, Poems, i, 142. (1562)

The man shall have his mare again,

And all shall be well.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream,
iii, 2, 463. (1596) BROME, Damoiselle. Act
iv, sc. 2. (1653)

Why, the man has his mare again, and all's well.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Chances. Act iii, sc. 5.
(1647)

All is well, and the man hath his mare again.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 259. (1678)

Then all shall be set right, and the man shall have his mare again.

DRYDEN, Love Triumphant. Act iii, sc. 2. (1694)

I am pleased with a porter's decision upon . . . a virtuous woman's marrying a second husband, while her first was yet living. Honest Sampson
. . . solves it very judiciously by the old proverb, that if his first master be still living, The man must have his mare again.

JOSEPH ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 481. (1712)

<sup>6</sup> Let us see who that dare Shoe the mockish mare.

JOHN SKELTON, Colin Clout, l. 180. (a. 1529)

Ride who wil, shod is the Mare.

UNKNOWN, Scolehouse of Women, l. 572. (1541)

He rides the wild mare with the boys.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, ii, 4, 268. (1598)

To unshoe the asse; we say, to ride the wild mare. (Desferrer l'asne.)

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Asne. (1611)

<sup>7</sup> Nowe then goo we hens, away the mare!

JOHN SKELTON, Magnyfycence, l. 1342. (c.
1520)

[They] drink till they stare

And bring themselves bare

With "Now away the mare!"

And let us slay care.

JOHN SKELTON, Elinor Rumming, l. 107. (a.
1529)

Of no man he had no care,
But sung, hey howe, awaye the mare.

UNKNOWN, The Frere and the Boy, l. 49. (c. 1550) See HAZLITT, Early Popular Poetry, iii, 62. Hazlitt says "Away the mare" was a very popular tune.

Heigh ho, away the mare,
Let us set aside all care.

THOMAS RAVENSCROFT, Melismata. No.6. (1611)

1
Whose mare is dead, that you are thus melancholy?

UNKNOWN, Maroccus Extaticus, p. 5. (1595)

Whose mare's dead? What's the matter?

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, ii, 1, 47. (1598)

Whose mare's dead now?

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

MARINES

2
Let Apella, the Jew, believe it, not I. (Credat Iudaeus Apella, non ego.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 5, l. 100. (35 B.C.)

Fairclough says that the Roman Jews were regarded as peculiarly credulous and superstitious. The phrase had long been a proverb.

Go and teach it outside.

Babylonian Talmud: Erubin, fo. 9a. (c. 450)

Also Joma, fo. 43b.

Believe it, Judas. (Créalo Judas!)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 70. (1615)

3
I'm a Jolly—'Er Majesty's Jolly—soldier an' sailor too!

RUDYARD KIPLING, Soldier and Sailor Too. (1903)

I feel already as if the leathernecks had landed.

KATHLEEN KNIGHT, Rendezvous with the Past, p. 18. (1940)

4
I'm Captain Jinks of the Horse Marines,
I often live beyond my means;

I sport young ladies in their teens,

To cut a swell in the army.

WILLIAM LINGARD, Captain Jinks of the Horse Marines. (1869) Sometimes attributed to T. Maclagen.

5
"Her husband said so." "He may tell that to the marines, but the sailors will not believe it."

JOHN MOORE, The Post-Captain, v, 25. (1810)
Right—that will do for the marines.

LORD BYRON, The Island. Canto ii, st. 21. (1823)

In a note, Byron adds, "That will do for the marines, but the sailors won't believe it" is an old saying.

Tell that to the marines—the sailors won't believe it.

WALTER SCOTT, Redgauntlet. Ch. 13. (1824)

Quoted as an old saying.

"Tell that to the marines, Major," replied the valet. "That cock won't fight with me."

THACKERAY, Pendennis. Ch. 68. (1850)

Talk thus to the marines, but not to me who have seen these things.

GENERAL WILLIAM TECUMSEH SHERMAN, Letter to General J. B. Hood, 10 Sept., 1864.

Is that a story to tell to such a man as me! You may tell it to the marines!

ANTHONY TROLLOPE, The Small House at Allington. Ch. 41. (1864) See also MARK TWAIN, Man that Corrupted Hadleyburg, p. 34. (1898) CONRAD, End of the Tether. Sec. 14. (1902) FEUCHTWANGER, Paris Gazette, p. 685. (1940) COLE, Toper's End, p. 113. (1942) etc., etc. Parodied for a season as "Tell it to the Danes," when Dr. F. A. Cook's story of his discovery of the North Pole was accepted by the Danish Academy. (1908)

From the very nature of their calling, no class of our subjects can have so wide a knowledge of seas and lands as the officers and men of our loyal Marine Regiment. Henceforward ere ever we cast doubts upon a tale that lacketh likelihood, we will first tell it to the Marines.

W. P. DRURY, The Tadpole of an Archangel, The Petrified Eye, and Other Naval Stories: Preface. (1904) This purports to be from the Diary of Samuel Pepys, as having been said to Pepys by King Charles II, in 1664, but when a search disclosed that the Diary contained no such entry, Drury admitted that it was "a leg-pull of my youth, of which I have grown a little ashamed." Letter to Brig.-Gen. George Richards, U.S. Marine Corps. See N.Y. Sun, 4 Feb., 1931.

MARK

6
Don't overrun the olives. (ἐκτὸς οἶσαι τῶν ἐλαίων.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Frogs, l. 995. (405 B.C.) A row of olives was planted across the end of the Hippodrome to mark the goal.

I'm leaping over the trenches. (ὑπὲρ τὰ ἐσκαμμένα ἄλλεσθαι.)

PLATO, Cratylus. Sec. 413A. (c. 385 B.C.) A trench was the limit of the leap for the pentathletes.

Flee not beyond your hut, as the proverb says. (Ita fugias ne praeter casam, quod aiunt.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 768. (161 B.C.)

The end is in view; I seem almost to have reached the mark.

COWPER, Letter to Mrs. King, 1 Aug., 1789.

7
Wide quote Bolton when his bolt flew backward.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes: To the Reader. (1591) HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 20. (1659)

Wide of the mark.

Wide o' the bow-hand! i' faith, your hand is out. SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, iv, 1, 135. (1595)

Y're wide o' the bow-hand still, brother.

DEKKER, The Honest Whore. Pt. i, act i. (1604)

I take thee to be an honest good fellow.—Wide of the bow-hand still: Corbulo is no such man.

JOHN WEBSTER, Appius and Virginia. Act iii, sc. 4. (1654)

It cannot, I believe, be far wide from the mark. SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 23 Sept., 1666.

Wide quoth Wilson.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 84. (1678)

Fair and far off. Wide of the mark.

B.E., A New Dictionary of the Canting Crew, sig. E3. (1690) See also under SHOOTING.

<sup>1</sup> A good Marksman may miss.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 163. (1732)

<sup>2</sup> Take heed of a person marked.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

Take care of a man whom God hath set a mark on.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 311. (1721)

Distrust those that are marked by the Creator.
Lady's Pictorial, 21 Nov., 1914, p. 713.

<sup>3</sup> Not one promised to make such a mark in society.

O. W. HOLMES, The Guardian Angel. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1867)

Those little verses . . . have made their mark.

MISS BRADDON, Dead Sea Fruit. Bk. ii, ch. 9. (1868)

It may safely be predicted that they will make their mark in the world.

F. F. MOORE, I Forbid the Banns, p. 7. (1893)

<sup>4</sup> [His] mind was not yet up to the mark.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Autobiography. Writings (1892), i, 15. (1821)

There wouldn't be much excuse for me if I weren't up to the mark.

W. E. NORRIS, The Rogue. Ch. 9. (1888)

<sup>5</sup> He hits the mark. (ἐπιτυγχάνει τι.)

MENANDER, The Girl Who Gets Her Hair Cut, l. 252. (c. 300 B. C.)

Now, be myn trowthe, ye hytte the pyinne.

Coventry Mysteries (Shaks. Soc.), p. 138. (c. 1450)

Thou hyttest the nayle upon the head.

UNKNOWN, Proper Dyaloge (1863), p. 15. (1530) See under NAIL.

Indeede she had hit the needle in that deuise.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Arcadia (1622), p. 305. (1580)

For kings are clouts that every man shoots at,
Our crown the pin that thousands seek to cleave.

MARLOWE, Tamburlane. Pt. i, act ii, sc. 4. (1586)

Then will she get the upshoot by cleaving the pin.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, iv, 1. 138. (1595)

The very pin of his heart cleft with the blind bow-boy's butt-shaft.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, ii, 4, 15. (1595)

The fairest mark is easiest hit.

BUTLER, Hudibras, Pt. ii, canto 1, l. 664. (1663)

TO MISS THE MARK, see under MISS.

<sup>6</sup> God save the mark!

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, i, 3, 56. (1597)

Mind thine own aim, and God speed the mark!

R. W. EMERSON, To J. W. (1867)

<sup>7</sup> A fellow of no mark, nor likelihood.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, iii, 2, 45. (1597)

A learned clerk, a man of mark.

LONGFELLOW, Tales of a Wayside Inn: King Olaf, ix, 2. (1860)

A rascal of more than ordinary mark.

THACKERAY, The Four Georges. Ch. 1. (1861)

No such man of mark, and meet

With his betters to compete!

ROBERT BROWNING, Hervé Riel. (1871)

<sup>8</sup> Both one and the other were besides the marke.

SIR THOMAS STAFFORD, Pacata Hibernia. Bk. i, ch. 5. (1633)

Gilbert's efforts to amuse her often fell short of the mark.

G. J. WHYTE-MELVILLE, Good for Nothing, i, 146. (1861)

MARKET

<sup>9</sup> We have brought

Our eggs and muskadine to a faire market.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Cupid's Revenge.

Act i, sc. 1. (1613) Our schemes have failed.

You have brought your hogs to a fine market.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Bonduca. Act v, sc. 2. (a. 1616)

The schoolmaster . . . brought his eggs to a bad market.

B. H. MALKIN, tr., Gil Blas. Bk. ii, ch. 9, sec. 7. (1809)

<sup>10</sup> No grass grows in the market-place.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 461. (1855)

<sup>11</sup> Nothing is to be bought in the market without a penny.

THOMAS BROWN, Works, i, 293. (a. 1704)

<sup>12</sup> The market of debauch is always open.

JOHN LEWIS BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs No. 329. (1817)

<sup>13</sup> Forsake not the market for [because of] the toll.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870) p. 322 (1605) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 119. (1670)

<sup>14</sup> Three women make a market.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, ii, 240 (1574) See under WOMAN.

<sup>15</sup> Men know (quoth I) I haue herd now and then,

How the market goth by the market men.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

If thou wilt know a godly man, . . . mark report, because as the market goes, so they say the market-men will talk.

HENRY SMITH, Sermons (1866), i, 11. (a. 1591)

You may know by the market folks how the market goes.

FRANCIS BACON, Promus. No. 642. (c. 1594)

DAY, Blind Beggar. Act iv, sc. 3. (1600) Cited by Ray and Fuller.

<sup>16</sup> A silverless man goes fast through the market

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 10. (1721)

A moneyless Man goes fast thro' the Market.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 330. (1732)

1 Well, sir, if your market may be made no where els, home again.

THOMAS LODGE, Rosalynde, p. 104. (1590)
Quack's thread is fairly spun; Quack may go home again, his market's done.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Virgin Widow. Act i. (1649)
"In her coach," said I; "upon my word, she had made her market then; I suppose she made hay while the sun shone."

DEFOE, Roxana, in Works (1903), xiii, 143. (1724)
My markt's made, ye may lick a whup-shaft. The saucy reply of a maid already betrothed, to a would-be wooer.

HISLOP, Proverbs of Scotland, p. 230. (1862)

2 A man must sell his ware after the rates of the market.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 32. (1670) See also under WARE.

As the Market goes, Wives must sell.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 734. (1732)
You must sell, as Markets go.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5969.

3 No man makes haste to the market where there's nothing to be bought but blows.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 119. (1670)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3651. (1732)

He that cannot abide a bad market, deserves not a good one.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 173. (1678)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2058. (1732)

4 I run before my horse to market.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, i, 1, 160. (1592) I count the gain before the bargain is made.

5 You know how to make your market, or avail yourself of the market. (Scisti uti foro.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 79. (161 B.C.) A proverbial phrase.

6 You bring your Corne to a wrong market.

JOHN WITHALS, Dictionary, p. 584. (1616)

You bring your hogs to a wrong market.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 7. (1639)

You're peddling your fish in the wrong market.

DASHIELL HAMMETT, The Thin Man. Ch. 8. (1934)

MARRIAGE

See also Bride, Celibacy, Honeymoon, Wooing and Wedding

7 Marriage appointed by fate 'twixt man and woman

Is mightier than an oath, and Justice is its guardian.

(ἐνθ' ἂν ἀνδρὶ καὶ γυναικὶ μύστος ὅρκου ὅτι μείζων τῇ δικῇ φρουρουμένη.)

AESCHYLUS, Eumenides, l. 217. (458 B.C.)

The first bond of society is marriage. (Prima societas in ipso coniugio est.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 17, sec. 54. (a. 45 B.C.)

Marriage is a ful gret sacrament.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Marchantes Tale, l. 74. (c. 1388)

It's an experiment frequently tried.

W. S. GILBERT, The Gondoliers. Act ii. (1889)

8 Cut not a new furrow. (μὴ τέμνε νέαν ὄλοκα.)

ARISTOTLE, Politics. Bk. vii, ch. 14, sec. 4. (c. 330 B.C.) Quoting an oracle given to the people of Troezen (c. 500 B.C.), because many were dying owing to their custom of the women marrying young.

The pretty girls in Utah mostly marry Young.

ARTEMUS WARD, The Mormons. (1868)

The old English proverb which says, Early wed, early dead.

Notes and Queries. Ser. viii, vol. viii, p. 516. (1895)

9 A woman is more desirous to be married than a man desires to marry.

Babylonian Talmud: Jebamoth, fo. 113a. (c. 450)

A woman of sixty, like a girl of six; runs at the sound of wedding music.

Babylonian Talmud: Mo'ed Katan, fo. 9b. (c. 450)

A woman is more content to have one measure of food and be married than to have ten measures of food and be single.

Babylonian Talmud: Sotah, fo. 20a. (c. 450)

Her pulse beats matrimony.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 265. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2492. (1732)

The best thing a woman can do is to marry. It appears to me that even quarrels with one's husband are preferable to the ennui of a solitary existence.

ELIZABETH PATTERSON BONAPARTE, Letter to Lady Charles Morgan, 11 Aug., 1817. Elizabeth Patterson had married Jerome Bonaparte in 1803, and he deserted her two years later.

I have always thought that every woman should marry, and no man.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Lothair. Ch. 30. (1870)

Marriage is of so much use to a woman . . . that, whether she marry well or ill, she can hardly miss some benefit.

R. L. STEVENSON, Virginibus Puerisque. Pt. i. (1874)

It is a woman's business to get married as soon as possible, and a man's to keep unmarried as long as he can.

SHAW, Man and Superman. Act ii. (1903)

A woman's business is marriage.

SHAW, Heartbreak House. Act ii. (1913)

Men in single state should tarry,

While women, I suggest, should marry.

SAMUEL HOFFENSTEIN, Advice on Marriage. (1928)

10 A man should first build a house, then plant a vineyard, and then marry.

Babylonian Talmud: Sotah, fo. 44a. (c. 450)

Before thou marry, get thy habitation ready.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 144. (1666)

Before you marry, be sure of a house wherein to tarry.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 17. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6396. (1732) Ray cites another form, "Be sure before you marry, of a house wherein to tarry."

<sup>1</sup> Do not marry. (οὐ γαμητέον ἄρα.)

BIAS. Advice to a man who asked whether he should marry or lead a single life. "You are sure to marry a woman either beautiful or ugly," Bias answered: "if beautiful, you will share her with others; if ugly she will be a punishment. Therefore do not marry." Bias was one of the wise men of Greece, c. 566 B. C.

I advise you, "Do not marry." (παραινῶ μὴ γαμεῖν.)

MENANDER, The Flute Girl. Frag. 65 K. (c. 300 B. C.) Advise none to marry or go to war.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 238. (1640) Though thou canst not forbear to love, forbear to link.

SIR WALTER RALEGH, Instructions to His Son. Sec. 2. (1616)

Advice to persons about to marry.—'Don't.'

HENRY MAYHEW, in (London) Punch. Vol. viii, p. 1. (1845) Mayhew was one of the three co-editors under whose direction Punch was started, and the attribution is by SPIELMAN, History of Punch.

<sup>2</sup> He who is about to marry should consider how it is with his neighbours.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 400. (1855) When one is wise, two are happy.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 563

<sup>3</sup> For the begetting of lawful children I give to thee my daughter. (παῖδω ἐπ' ἀρότῳ γνησίῳ | δίδωμι σοὺ γὰρ τὴν ἐμαυτοῦ θυγατέρα.)

MENANDER, Fragments. Frag. 720 K. (c. 300 B. C.) The regular marriage formula, cited by other writers, usually as a side remark, as we might say, "For better or for worse." See LUCIAN, Timon, sec. 17.

To have and to hold from this day forward, for better for worse, for richer for poorer, in sickness and in health, to love and to cherish, till death us do part.

Book of Common Prayer: Solemnization of Matrimony. (1549)

With this ring I thee wed, with my body I thee worship, and with all my worldly goods I thee endow.

Book of Common Prayer: Solemnization of Matrimony. In America, the second clause is omitted.

<sup>4</sup> For one who marries in the bird market, the divorce will be as quick as one can say "good-night."

J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 656. (1817) The women of the bird market, reputed to be unchaste.

<sup>5</sup> Every man plays the fool once in his life, but to marry is playing the fool all one's life long.

WILLIAM CONGREVE, The Old Batchelour. Act iii, sc. 10. (1693)

<sup>6</sup> For a young man not yet, for an old man never at all. (τοὺς μὲν νέους μὴδέπω, τοὺς δὲ πρεσβυτέρους μὴδεπώποτε.)

DIOGENES, when asked the proper time to marry. (c. 350 B. C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Diogenes. Sec. 54. The axiom has also been attributed to Thales.

To one demanding when best season were to wed a wife: For a young man (quoth he [Diogenes]), it is to soone, and for an olde man ouerlate.

NICOLAS UDALL, tr., Erasmus' Apophthegms, p. 139. (1564)

Thales, one of the Greek sages, when young, and desired by his mother to marry, replied, "it was not yet time"; when he had come to full age, "that it was no longer time."

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 8. (1580)

He was reputed one of the wise men that made answer to the question when a man should marry?

"A young man not yet, an elder man not at all."

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Marriage and Single Life. (1597) Apophthegms. No. 220.

It's good to marry late or never.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 329. (1639)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 47. (1670)

<sup>7</sup> Marriage must be a relation either of sympathy or of conquest.

GEORGE ELIOT, Romola. Bk. iii, ch. 48. (1863)

Every couple is not a pair.

CHEALES, Proverbial Folk-Lore, p. 37. (1875)

<sup>8</sup> A poor Wedding is a Prologue to Misery.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 359. (1732)

He has a great Fancy to Marriage, that goes to the Devil for a Wife.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1856.

She that marries ill, never wants something to say for it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4144.

<sup>9</sup> Marriage is honourable in all, and the bed undefiled. (τίμιος ὁ γάμος ἐν πάσιν καὶ ἡ κοίτη ἀμίαντος.)

New Testament: Hebrews, xiii, 4. (c. A. D. 60)

The Vulgate is, "Honorable connubium in omnibus, et thorus immaculatus."

The Apostle S. Paule in the thirteenth chapter of his Epistle to the Hebrews, calleth Matrimonie honourable among all men, and the bed undefiled.

THOMAS WILSON, Arte of Rhetorique, p. 42. (1553)

Marriage and the bed undefiled are honourable.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 68. (1576)

That honourable estate of Matrimony, which was sanctified in Paradise, allowed of the Patriarches, hallowed of the olde Prophets, and commended of al persons.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 86. (1579)

Is not marriage honourable?

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing, iii, 4, 30. (1598)

Conjoin'd In the state of honourable marriage.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing, v, 4, 30. (1598)

Marriage is honourable.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Crossing of Proverbs. (1616)

Marriage is honourable, but housekeeping's a shrew.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 48. (1670)

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

A variant is, "Marriage is easy, but house-keeping is hard." The Germans say, "Heirathen ist leicht, Haushalten ist schwer"; the Portuguese, "Casar, casar, soa bem e sabe mal" (Marriage, it sounds well but tastes ill). Marriage is honourable, but House-keeping chargeable.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3371. (1738)

1 Be careful to marry a woman who lives near to you. (τὴν δὲ μάλιστα γαμεῖν, ἢ τις σέθεν ἐγγύθι valei.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 700. (c. 800 B.C.)

Better wed over the mixon than over the moor, . . . that is, hard by or at home, mixon being that heap of compost which lieth in the yards of good husbands.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies: Cheshire, i, 266.

(1662) A Cheshire proverb. Cited by SCOTT,

Heart of Midlothian. Ch. 31. (1818) D'IS-

RAELL, Curiosities of Literature: The Philosophy of Proverbs. (1823) HARDY, Far from the Madding Crowd. Ch. 22. (1874) etc., etc.

He that goes far to marry will either deceive or be deceived.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1735

2 Ye know well it is, as telth vs this olde tale, Meete that a man be at his owne brydale.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 6. (1546)

Me thinks it is good reason, that I should bee at mine owne brideall.

JOHN LYLly, Euphues (Arber), p. 85. (1579)

It is meet that every man be at his own bridal.

THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 230. (1633)

3 Mariyng or marryng [marrying or marring] daie.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 8. (1546)

Had I not beene wicht, my wedding to flee, The termes that longe to wedding had warnde mee.

First, wooyng for woing, banna for bannyng, The banes for thy bane, and then this thus scannyng, Mariyng marring.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

A young man married is a man that's marr'd.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, ii, 3, 315. (1606)

You are upon a treaty of marriage. . . . A work of such consequence that it may make you or mar you.

JAMES HOWELL, Letters, 5 Feb., 1625.

Who marries, either makes himself or mars himself.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 143. (1666)

It [marriage] makes or mars a man, as the saying is.

MARRYAT, The Poacher. Ch. 28. (1841)

4 Who wedth or he be wise shall die or he thriue.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 8. (1546)

He that weds before he's wise shall die before he thrive.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 335. (1605)

Who weds ere he be wise, shall die ere he thrive.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 42. (1678)

5 Nothing is greater or better than this, that man and wife dwell together in accord. (οὐ μὲν γὰρ τοῦ γε κρείσσον καὶ ἀρειον, ἢ ὅθ' ὁμοφρονέοντε νοήμασιν οἶκον ἔχοντων | ἀνὴρ ἡδὲ γυνή.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. vi, l. 182. (c. 850 B.C.)

When wives and children and their sires are one, 'Tis like the harp and lute in unison.

UNKNOWN, Book of Songs (Shiking). (c. 600 B.C.) See KU HUNG MING, Conduct of Life, p. 28.

6 Who marries does well, who marries not does better.

JAMES HOWELL, Letters, ii, 666. (1647) TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 143. (1666)

7 Honest men use to marry, but wise men not

JAMES HOWELL, Letters, ii, 666. (1647)

Honest men marry soon, wise men not at all.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 17. (1670)

A pure proverb that says, Honest men marry quickly, but wise men not at all.

THOMAS D'URFEY, The Comical History of Don Quixote. Pt. iii, act iii, sc. 2. (1696)

8 I smile to think how like a lottery These weddings are.

BEN JONSON, A Tale of a Tub. Act i, sc. 1. (1633)

Marriage should prove no lottery to thee, when the hand of Providence chooseth for thee.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State Bk iii, ch 22. (1642)

Tho' marriage be a lottery in which there are a wondrous many blanks, yet there is one inestimable lot in which the only heaven on earth is written.

JOHN VANBRUGH, The Provok'd Wife. Act v sc. 4. (1697)

The maxim is current, that "marriage is a lottery." It may be so if we abjure the teachings of prudence.

SAMUEL SMILES, Thrift, p. 252. (1875)

Marriage is a lottery, but you can't tear up your ticket if you lose.

F. M. KNOWLES, A Cheerful Year Book (1906)

Madame de Rieux is credited with another variation, "Marriage is a lottery in which men stake their liberty and women their happiness."

9 There are good marriages, but no delightful ones. (Il y a de bons mariages, mais il n'y en a point de délicieux.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 113. (1665)

Quoted by BERNARD SHAW, Candida. Act i

10 Marriage by its best title is a monopoly.

CHARLES LAMB, A Bachelor's Complaint of the Behaviour of Married People. (1822)

1 Marriage halves our griefs, doubles our joys, and quadruples our expenses.

VINCENT LEAN, Collectanea, iv, 44. (1902)

2 I was about to cross legs with legs. (Cruribus crura diallaxon.)

LUCILIUS, Satires. Bk. viii, frag. 334, Loeb. (c. 123 B. C.)

In house to kepe householde, whan folks wyll needis wed,

Mo thyngs belong, than foure bare legs in a bed.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 8. (1546)

Quoted by MORLEY, Kitty Foyle, p. 15. (1939)

Four thousand pound! that's better

Than sounds the proverb, Four bare legs in a bed.

BEN JONSON, New Inne. Act v, sc. 5. (1631)

Long e'er four bare legs heat in a bed.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 234. (1721)

Consider, Mr. Neverout, four bare legs in a bed: and you are a younger brother.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

A sort of penny wedding it will prove, where all men contribute to the young folks' maintenance, that they may not have just four bare legs in a bed together.

SCOTT, The Fortunes of Nigel. Ch. 37. (1822)

Now-a-days it's no the fashion for bare legs to come thegither—the wife maun hae something to put in the pot as well as the man.

JOHN GALT, The Entail. Ch. 7. (1823)

3 They which shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world, . . . neither marry, nor are given in marriage. (οὐτε γαμοῦσιν οὐτε γαμίζονται.)

New Testament: Luke, xx, 35. (c. A. D. 65) The Vulgate is, "Neque nubent, neque ducent uxores."

What they do in heaven we are ignorant of; but what they do not we are told expressly, that they neither marry nor are given in marriage.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects. (1714)

4 To rise betimes, and to marry young, are what no man ever repents of doing.

MARTIN LUTHER, Table-Talk: Marriage. (a. 1546) "Frühe Hochzeit, lange Liebe" (Early marriage, long love), is a German proverb

5 In mariage as market folkes tel me, the husband should haue two eies, and the wife but one.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 284. (1580)

Keep your eyes wide open before marriage, half shut afterwards.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1738

6 The ende of fishing is catching, not anglyng; of birding, taking, not whistling: of loue, wedding, not wooing. Other-wise it is no better then hanging.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 396. (1580)

I had as leaue be buried as married, wishing rather to haue no beautie and dye a chast virgin then no ioy and liue a cursed wife.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 408.

7 Marriage is but a ceremoniall toy.

MARLOWE, Doctor Faustus, l. 583. (c. 1592)

Marriage is nothing but a civil contract.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Marriage. (a. 1654)

Marriage has no natural relation to love. Marriage belongs to society; it is a social contract.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table-Talk, p. 450. (a. 1834)

8 What therefore God hath joined together, let not man put asunder. (ὃ οὖν ὁ θεὸς συνέζευξεν ἄνθρωπος μὴ χωρίστω.)

New Testament: Matthew, xix, 6. (c. A. D. 70)

The Vulgate is, "Quod ergo Deus coniunxit, homo non separet."

Under this window in stormy weather
I marry this man and woman together,
Let none but Him who rules the thunder
Put this man and woman asunder.

SWIFT, Marriage Service from His Chamber Window. (a. 1745)

When the two have been united, no man may separate them. (I'an jên 'ho pu k'o pan jên k'ai.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No 2214. (1875)

What God hath joined together no man shall ever put asunder: God will take care of that.

BERNARD SHAW, Getting Married. (1908)

9 He married off a daughter, giving her, as he said himself, for a trial marriage of thirty days. (ἐπὶ περὶ ὁδοῦ τριάκονθ' ἡμέρας.)

MENANDER, The Girl Twins Frag. 118K. (c. 300 B. C.)

A marriage that is no marriage. (γάμος ἄγαμος.)

MENANDER, Monostikoi. No. 91. (c. 300 B. C.)

10 Marriages are made in heaven.

Midrash: Genesis Rabbah, 68. (c. 550)

True it is that marriages be don in heauen and performed in earth.

WILLIAM PAINTER, The Palace of Pleasure, iii. 24. (1567)

Mariages are made in heauen, though consumated in yearth.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England: Euphues Glasse for Europe (Arber), p. 471 (1580) From the French proverb, "Les mariages se font au ciel, et se consomment sur la terre." The French also say, "Les mariages sont écrits [written] dans le ciel"; the Italians, "Nozze e magistrato dal cielo è destinato" (Marriages and magistracy are arranged by heaven). The French have a proverb the reverse of this, "Au mariage et à la mort, Le diable fait son effort" (In marriage and in death, the devil contrives to have his part).

Marriage is destinie, made in heauen.

JOHN LYLY, Mother Bombie. (1594)

Matches are made in heaven.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy.

Pt. iii, sec. ii, mem. v, subs. 5. (1621) SWIFT, Bons Mots de Stella, relates one of Stella's quips: "She called to her servants to know what ill smell was in the kitchen; they answered, they were making matches: Well, said she, I have heard matches were made in heaven, but by the brimstone one would think they were made in hell." See also DICKENS, Nicholas Nickleby. Ch. 47. (1839) All marriages are made in heaven.

GEORGE FARQUHAR, Love and a Bottle. Act v, sc. 1. (1699)

If marriages are made in heaven, some had few friends there.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 183. (1721) They say, marriages are made in heaven; but I doubt, when she was married, she had no friend there.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

Marriages make themselves in the skies. (Les mariages se font dans les cieux.)

TOLSTOY, War and Peace, i, iii, 3. (1865)

Marriages are recorded and settled in heaven. (Yin yüan 'tien chu ting.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 187. (1872)

More matches are arranged by Satan than are ever made in heaven.

F.C.DAVIS, Graveyard Never Closes, p. 49. (1941)

He thinks marriages are made in hell and simmer on earth.

VAN SILLER, Good Night, Ladies, p. 94. (1943)

1 There are two kinds of marriages—where the husband quotes the wife, or where the wife quotes the husband.

CLIFFORD ODETS, Rocket to the Moon. Act i. (1938)

2 Bot put your hand, by hazard in the creill;
Zit men hes mater whatvpon to muse,
For they must drau ene adder or ane eill.

ALEX MONTGOMERIE, The Poet Reasons. (a.1610)

Put your hand to the creel, and take out either an adder or an eel.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 278. (1721)

Marriage is a creel, where ye maun catch, as the auld byword runs, an adder or an eel.

JOHN GALT, The Entail. Ch. 25. (1823)

3 Thys common prouerbe, he that marrieth late marrieth euill.

THOMAS NASHE, Works (Grosart), i, 17. (1589)

He that marries late, marries ill.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 862. (1640)

Who marries late marries amiss.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 143. (1666)

4 The girl who lies on a lawful bed knows no fear. (Nil metuit licito fusa puella toro.)

PETRONIUS, Fragments. Frag. 22, Loeb. (c. A. D. 60)

Reverend and honourable matrimony,
Mother of lawful sweets, unshamed mornings,
Dangerless pleasures!

THOMAS MIDDLETON, The Phoenix. Act ii. (1607)

The sacred rights and lefts of mattermony.

O. HENRY, The Marquis and Miss Sally. (1903)

5 Marriage is a daungerous thinge, and daintely to be dealt with all.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace: Alexius, p. 257. (1576)

Marriage is something special. I guess you have to deserve it.

CLIFFORD ODETS, Golden Boy. Act ii, sc. 3. (1937)

6 I'll marry anyone you like on one condition: her wedding tomorrow and her wake the day after. (Quae cras veniat, perendie foras feratur.)

PLAUTUS, Aulularia, l. 156. (c. 210 B. C.)

7 If I'm at home, my thoughts are outside; if I'm outside, my thoughts are at home. (Si domi sum, foris est animus, sin foris sum, animus domist.)

PLAUTUS, Mercator, l. 588. (c. 200 B. C.)

It [marriage] may be compared to a cage: the birds without despair to get in, and those within despair to get out. (Il en advient ce qui se veoid aux cages: les oyseaux qui en sont dehors, desesperent d'y entrer: et d'un pareil soing en sortir, ceulx qui sont au dedans.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5. (1595) There is a similar Arabic proverb, "Wedlock is like a place besieged; those within wish to get out, those without wish to get in."

Wedlock, indeed, hath oft compared been To public feasts, where meet a public rout, Where they that are without would fain go in. And they that are within would fain go out.

SIR JOHN DAVIES, The Married State. (1612)

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734.

'Tis just like a summer bird-cage in a garden, the birds that are without, despair to get in, and the birds that are within despaire and are in a consumption for feare they shall never get out.

JOHN WEBSTER, The White Divil. Act i, sc. 2. (1612)

Is not marriage an open question, when it is alleged, from the beginning of the world, that such as are in the institution wish to get out, and such as are out wish to get in?

R. W. EMERSON, Representative Men: Montaigne. (1850)

I'd rather be outside a-looking in than on the inside a-looking out.

TED SNYDER. Title of popular song. (1906)

It's only the fellow on the outside who can tell a snail how his shell looks.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Book of Epigrams. (c. 1911)

You can be on the outside looking in, or on the inside cashing in.

MARCO PAGE, Fast Company, p. 65. (1938)

8 Mind, not body, makes lasting wedlock. (Perenne coniugium animus, non corpus facit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 529. (c. 43 B. C.)

The wedlock of minds will be greater than that of bodies. (Magis erit animorum quam corporum coniugium.)

ERASMUS, Colloquia: Procus and Puebla. (1524)

Let me not to the marriage of true minds
Admit impediments.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. cxvi. (1609)

1 It's time to yoke when the cart comes to the caples [horses]. That is, It's time to marry when the woman wooes the man.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 48. (1670)

2 An ye wad gi's a bit land,
Wee'd buckle us e'en the gither.

ALLAN RAMSAY, ed., The Tea-Table Miscellany,
i, 28. (1724)

Our friend the licentiate . . . will buckle you handsomely.

SMOLLETT, tr., Don Quixote, ii, 50 (1755)

Soon they loed, and soon were buckled.

HECTOR MACNEILL, Will and Jean. (1796)

Shall we be spliced?

J.K. PAULDING, The Bucktails. Act iii, sc. 2. (1815)
Alfred and I . . . never meant to be spliced in the humdrum way of other people.

CHARLOTTE BRONTË, Villette. Ch. 42. (1853)

If you mean gettin' hitched, I'm in!

ARTEMUS WARD (C. F. BROWNE), The Show-man's Courtship. (1862)

She can eat out of my skillet the rest of her life.

O. HENRY, An Adjustment of Nature. (1906)

3 Ther was axed of the sayd Hermes, why he maried him not? He ansuerd, he that can not swymme in the see alone, howe shulde he lere another in his necke swimming.

EARL RIVERS, tr., Dictes and Sayenges of the Philosophirs, fo. 17. (1477)

All one, but their meat goes two ways.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 78. (1678)

Her meat and his meat cannot be cooked together in the same pot.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 583. (1817)

4 It does not much signify whom one marries, as one is sure to find next morning that it is some one else.

SAMUEL ROGERS, Table-Talk. (a. 1855)

Maidens! why should you worry in choosing whom you should marry?

Choose whom you may, you will find you have got somebody else.

JOHN HAY, Distiches. No. 10. (1871)

5 A maid marries to please her parents; a widow to please herself. (Yu chia ts ung chin; tsai chia yu shên.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No.
1441. (1875)

Scabbed heads get flowery boughs. (La li t'ao hua chih.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2206.
Ugly men get pretty wives.

Marriage has no enmities which can survive a happy night. (Fu ch'i wu ko yeh chih ch'ou.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2221.

6 Marriage is good for nothing but to make friends fall out.

SHADWELL, The Sullen Lovers. Act ii. (1668)

When a man marries, . . .

His best friends hear no more of him.

SHELLEY, Letter to Maria Gisborne, l. 236. (1820)

When a man's friend marries, all is over between them.

GUY DE MAUPASSANT, The Log. (c. 1888)

7 If thou wilt needs marry, marry a fool; for wise men know well enough what monsters you make of them.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 1, 142. (1600)

It is better to marry a quiet fool than a witty scold.

UNKNOWN, Politeuphuia, p. 227. (1669)

'Tis my maxim, he's a fool that marries; but he's a greater that does not marry a fool.

WILLIAM WYCHERLEY, The Country-Wife. Act
i, sc. 1. l. 502. (1675)

8 Here you may see Benedick the married man.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing, i, 1.
263. (1598)

Wish the veteran joy of his entrance into the band of Benedicts.

WALTER SCOTT. See LOCKHART, Life, vi, 313.
(1821)

I am the happy benedict.

O. HENRY, Blind Man's Holiday. (1910)

9 She's not well married that lives married long;
But she's best married that dies married young.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, iv, 5, 77. (1595)

10 I have thrust myself into this maze,

Haply to wive and thrive as best I may.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, i, 2.
55. (1594)

So he thriv'd That he is promis'd to be wiv'd.

SHAKESPEARE, Pericles, v, 2, 9. (1608)

First thrive and then wive.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 230. (1639)

11 When one is young, one marries out of mere curiosity, just to see what it's like.

BERNARD SHAW, The Philanderer. Act i. (1893)

Men marry because they are tired; women because they are curious. Both are disappointed

OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance

Act iii. (1895)

12 If you always say no, you'll never be married

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738) The French have the same proverb, "Dites toujours nenni, vous ne serez jamais mariée."

The match is half made; the spark is willing, but the miss is not.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i.

Why don't you marry and settle?

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i.

She's either married or worse.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i.

A married woman has nothing of her own but her wedding-ring and her hair-lace.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii.

1 Wedded persons may thus passe ouer their lyues quietly . . . if the husbände become deafe and the wyfe blynde.

RICHARD TAVERNER, The Garden of Wysdom, ii, 4. (1539)

There neuer shal be chiding in that house where the man is blynd and the wife deafe.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 26. (1578)

A good marriage would be between a blind wife and a deaf husband. (Un bon mariage se dressoit d'une femme aveugle, avecques un mary sourd.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 5. (1595)

A husband must be deaf, and his wife blind, to have quietness.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale: Wife. (1666)

The most happy marriage I can picture . . . would be the union of a deaf man to a blind woman.

S. T. COLERIDGE, in ALLSOP, Recollections of Coleridge. (1836)

2 Better to sit up all night than to go to bed with a dragon.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Holy Living, p. 213. (1650)

3 Who marries him will keep the apron to her eye.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 483. (1940)

4 Who intends to have a good month, let him to the bath; a good year, let him marry; a good week, let him kill a hog; who will be happy alwaies, let him turn priest. [i. e. never marry].

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 15.1. (1666)

If you would live well for a week, kill a hog; if you would live well for a month, marry; if you would live well all your life, turn priest.

SAMUEL PEGGE, Anonymiana, Cent. ii, 19. (1809)

5 Marriage is the only adventure open to the cowardly.

VOLTAIRE, Pensées d'un Philosophe. (a. 1778)

"Marriage is the only adventure open to a coward," a certain man says. He made a mistake; you have to be a hero to face the pains and disappointments.

CLIFFORD ODETS, Rocket to the Moon. Act iii. (1938)

6 'Tis said that one wedding produces another.

UNKNOWN. Roxburghe Ballads (B.S.), iii. 54. (c. 1640)

One wedding, the Proverb says, begets another.

JOHN GAY, The Wife of Bath, i, 1. (1713)

7 It is sayde full ryfe [often],

A man may not wyfe And also thryfe,
And all in a yere.

UNKNOWN, Towneley Plays: The Shepherd's Play. Sc. 1. (c. 1410)

It is harde to wiue and thryue both in a yere.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

Cited by Camden, Ray, and others.

It is too much we dailie heare,

To wiue and thriue both in a yere.

THOMAS TUSSER, Fiue Hundreth Pointes of Good Husbandrie. (1573)

In one yere to marie and to thriue it be hard.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 470. (1580)

They say, in wiving and thriving, a man should take counsel of all the world, lest he light upon a curse while he seeks for a blessing.

HENRY SMITH, Sermons (1866), i, 9. (c. 1591)

Cited by RAY, English Proverbs, p. 354.

A man cannot wive and thrive in a year. For courting, marriage, and their appurtenance, occasions an expense that one year cannot retrieve.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 49. (1721)

You can't expect to wive and thrive in the same year.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

8 He had no inclination for a Broomstick-marriage.

UNKNOWN, Westminster Magazine, ii, 16.

(1774) A broomstick marriage was a quasi-marriage ceremony in which bride and groom jumped over a broomstick.

They were married over a broomstick.

MACAULAY, Miscellaneous Writings, i, 95. (1824)

9 Truly some men there bee
That live alway in greate horreur,

And saye it goeth by destinie
To hang or wed: bothe hath one houre.

UNKNOWN, The Schole-house of Women. (c. 1541)

Weddyng is desteny

And hangyng likewise, saith the prouerbe.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 3. (1546)

Bot now consider the olde prouerbe to be true yt saith: that marriage is destinie.

EDWARD HALL, Chronicle (1809), p. 264. (1548)

Marriages are guided by destiny.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 94. (1576)

Mariages and magistrate, be destinies of heauen. (Noze e Magistrato, sono del ciel destinato.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 33. (1578)

Wedding and hanging goes by destiny.

THOMAS DEKKER, The Shomakers Holiday Act iv, sc. 3. (1599)

The ancient saying is no heresy,

Hanging and wiving goes by destiny.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, ii, 9. 82. (1597)

Many a good hanging prevents a bad marriage.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, i, 5, 20. (1599)

Your marriage comes by destiny.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, i, 3, 66. (1602)

O curse of marriage . . . Yet . . .

'Tis destiny unshunnable, like death.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, iii, 3, 275. (1605)

I spake to him of Garlic, he answered Asparagus: consulted him of marriage, he tells me of hanging, as if they went by one and the same destiny.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Imperitens. (1636)

Give me your hand, there is no remedy,
Marriage is ever made by destiny.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, All Fools. Act v, sc.1. (1605)
Marriage and hanging go by destiny.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, A Wife for a Month.
Act ii, sc. 1. (1624) SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738) etc., etc.

II—Marriage: Its Joys

1 Boweth your nekke under that blisful yok
Of soverayntee, noght of servyse,
Which that men clepeth spousaille or wedlok.
CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Clerkes Tale,
l. 57. (c. 1388)

Who coude telle, but he had wedded be,
The joye, the ese, and the prosperitee—
That is bitwixe an housbonde and his wyf?
CHAUCER, The Frankeleyns Tale, l. 75.

"Non other lyf," seyde he, "is worth a bene;
For wedlock is so esy and so clene,
That in this world it is a paradys."

CHAUCER, The Marchantes Tale, l. 19.

The lusty lyf, the vertuous quiete,
That is in mariage hony-swete.

CHAUCER, The Marchantes Tale, l. 151.

The married lyfe is the only lyfe.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 258. (1576)

2 I do not . . . pretend to have discovered that life has anything more to be desired than a prudent and virtuous marriage.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 21 Dec., 1762.

3 And ever thynk wel on this prouerb trewe, . . .
That the first yere wedlokk is called pleye.
The second dreye, and the third yere deye.

JOHN LYDGATE, Minor Poems, p. 45. (c. 1430)
One year of joy, another of comfort, and all the rest of content. A marriage wish.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 63. (1678)
One Year of Joy, another of Comfort, the rest of Content, make the married Life happy.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3806. (1732)

4 As your wedding ring wears, your cares will wear away.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 344. (1678)
As your Wedding Ring wears,
You'll wear off your Cares.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6146. (1732)

III—Marriage: Its Woes

5 They stood before the altar and supplied
The fire themselves in which their fat was fried.

AMBROSE BIERCE, Devil's Dictionary, p. 23. (1906)

6 A paradise in which a hog feeds.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 195. (1817)
Said of a beautiful woman with an ugly husband.

7 We wedded men live in sorwe and care.

CHAUCER, *Canterbury Tales: The Merchant's
Prologue*, l. 16. (c. 1388)

Oh! how many torments lie in the small circle of a wedding-ring!

CIBBER, Double Gallant. Act i, sc. 2. (c. 1700)
The wictim o' connubiality.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 20. (1837)

8 We enter into the bonds of it, like those of matrimony; . . . and take it for better or worse.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Essays (1904), i, 7. (1668)
Colonel, you must take it for better for worse, as a man takes his wife.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

It is he who has broken the bond of marriage —not I. I only break its bondage.

OSCAR WILDE, Lady Windermere's Fan. Act ii.
(1892) "A vinculo matrimonii" (From the bond of matrimony), is a Latin proverbial phrase.

9 An ill marriage is a spring of ill fortune.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 229. (1633)

Better be half hang'd, than ill wed.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 42. (1678)

10 Penance and Matrimony are the same.

RICHARD DUKE, *To a Roman Catholic Friend
upon Marriage*. (a. 1711)

Matrimony is something that the bachelor misses and the widower escapes.

F. M. KNOWLES, A Cheerful Year Book. (1906)

Matrimony is not a word, but a sentence.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches,
p. 483. (1940)

11 Better hand louse [loose] nor bound to an ill baikine [tethering stake].

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 20. (c. 1595)

'Tis a kind of bilboes to be married.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Wild Goose-Chase. Act
i, sc. 2. (1621)

A married man turns his staff into a stake.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 368
(1640) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 17 (1670) has, "The married man must turn his staff into a stake."

But marriage is a fetter, is a snare,

A hell, no lady so polite can bear.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Satire vi, l. 65. (1728)
Once you are married, there is nothing left for you, not even suicide, but to be good.

R. L. STEVENSON, Virginibus Puerisque. Pt i
(1874)

Well-married, a man is winged—ill-matched, he is shackled.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Proverbs from Plymouth Pulpit, p. 93. (1887)

Marriage is a noose often endured around the neck, but seldom endured around the feet.

ANONYMOUS, Meditations in Wall Street, p.
86. (1940)

12 Needles and pins, needles and pins,
When a man marries his trouble begins.

J. O. HALLIWELL, The Nursery Rhymes of England, p. 122. (1843)

Needles and pins, needles and pins,
When a girl marries her trouble begins.

RICHARD SHATTUCK, The Snark Was a Boojum, p. 245. (1941)

1 We can't seem to live with the men who want to sit at home with us, and the men we want to live with can't sit at home with us, and there's no peace to be found either way.

MABEL DODGE LUHAN, Movers and Shakers, p. 233. (1936)

Marriage is a battlefield and not a bed of roses.
P. G. WODEHOUSE, Uncle Fred in the Springtime, p. 238. (1939) Quoted from an unindicated source.

2 We might knit that knot with our tongues, that we shall neuer vndoe with our teeth.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England: Euphues Glasse for Europe (Arber), p. 468. (1580)

To get married is to tie a knot with the tongue that you cannot undo with your teeth.

E. M. WRIGHT, Rustic Speech, p. 272.

3 Marriage, if one will face the truth, is an evil, but a necessary evil. (τὸ γαμεῖν, ἐάν τις τὴν ἀλήθειαν σκοπῇ, | κακὸν μὲν ἐστίν, ἀλλ' ἀναγκαῖον κακόν.)

MENANDER, Fragments. Frag. 651K. (c.300 B. C.)

It is better to marry than to burn. (κρεῖττον γὰρ ἐστὶν γαμεῖν ἢ πυροῦσθαι.)

New Testament: I Corinthians, vii, 9. (A. D. 57) The Vulgate is, "Melius est enim nubere, quam uri." TERTULLIAN, Ad Uxorem (c. A. D. 205), comments, "It is better to marry only because it is worse to burn. It is still better neither to marry nor to burn."

For thanne th' apostle seith, that I am free
To wedde, a godd's half, wher it lyketh me.
He seith that to be wedded is no sinne;
Bet is to be wedded than to brinne.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Wife of Bath's Prologue, l. 49. (c. 1388)

But yit, lest thou do worse, tak a wyf;
Bet it is to wedde, than brenne in worse wyse.

CHAUCER (?), Lenvoy de Chaucer a Bukton, l. 17. (c. 1396)

To marry is phisic against incontinence.

MARTIN LUTHER, Table-Talk. No. 726. (a.1546)

Who marries well does well, who marries not does better.

JAMES HOWELL, Familiar Letters, ii, 666. (1647)

4 Marriage, a market which has nothing free but the entrance. (Mariage, un marché qui n'a que l'entrée libre.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 27. (1580) "Entrée libre" is used as a sign before thousands of business places in France, and Montaigne is perhaps playing upon this.

I don't think matrimony consistent with the liberty of the subject.

GEORGE FARQUHAR, The Twin Rivals. Act. v, sc. 3. (a. 1707)

5 Wedlock is a padlock.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 56. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6261. (1732)

Thus in the East they are extremely strict,
And wedlock and a padlock mean the same.

LORD BYRON, Don Juan. Canto v, st. 158. (1821)

Omitted by the publisher from the first edition, but replaced in later editions when Byron protested in a fury, "I will not permit any human being to take such liberties with my writings."

Wedlock is a padlock, and therefore is not to be lightly entered upon.

A. B. CHEALES, Proverbial Folk-Lore, p. 39. (1875)

The trouble with wedlock is, there's not enough wed and too much lock.

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, Kitty Foyle, p. 311. (1939)

6 Marriage is worse than cross I win, pile you lose.

THOMAS SHADWELL, Epsom Wells. (1672) Cross and pile: heads and tails.

7 A world-without-end bargain.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, v, 2, 799. (1595)

Wedlock's a lane where there is no turning.

DINAH M. M. CRAIK, Magnus and Morna. Sc. 3. (c. 1860)

8 The reason why so few marriages are happy is because young ladies spend their time in making nets, not in making cages.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects. (1714)

9 Marriage is all woe. (γάμοι πλήθουσιν ἀνίας.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. No. xxvii, l. 25. (c. 270 B. C.)

Marriage state, woeful state. (Ehstand, Wehstand.)

ABRAHAM A SANCTA CLARA, Epigram. (c. 1675)

He was Court preacher in Vienna, and the phrase quickly passed into a proverb.

IV—Marriage in Haste

10 Make haste in buying land, but not in taking a wife.

Babylonian Talmud: Jebamoth, fo. 63a. (c. 450)

JOHN RAY includes this in his Adagia Hebraica, p. 403 (1678) with the rendering, "Make haste when you are purchasing a field; but when you are to marry a wife, be slow."

Be not hastie to marry, it is better to haue one plough going, then two cradells: and more profit to haue a barne filled then a hedde.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 229. (1580)

It's better to have two ploughs going than one cradle.

EDWARD WARD, Female Policy, p. 82. (1716)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 905. (1732)

11 All firie hast to wed, it soone rebateth.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 2. (1546)

Haste in wedding som man thinkth his owne auayle,

Whan haste proueth a rod made for his own tale.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 2. (1546)

When men will needis mary,

I see now, how wisdome and haste maie varie.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 13. (1546)

1
Whichever you do you will repent it. (ὁ ἄν αὐτῶν ποιήσης, μεταγνώση.)

SOCRATES, when asked whether or not a man should marry. (c. 400 B.C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Socrates. Sec. 33.

He who would marry is on the road to repentance. (γάμεν δς ἐθέλει, εἰς μετάνοιαν ἔρχεται.)

PHILEMON, Fragments. Frag. 105. (c. 300 B.C.)

Nobody marries who doesn't repent of it.

(Nus ne se marie qui ne s'en repentē.)

UNKNOWN, La Chastelaine de Saint Gille, l. 53. (c. 1250) MONTAIGLON, Recueil des Fabliaux, i, 137.

Leaste in making hastie choise, leasure for repentaunce shuld folow.

PAINTER, Palace of Pleasure, i, 115. (1566)

Bargains made in speed are commonly repented at leasure.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, ii, 61. (1576)

Hasty marriage seldom proveth well.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI, iv, 1, 18. (1591)

She was afrayde to match in haste least shee might repent at leysure.

ROBERT GREENE, Works (Grosart), xi, 86. (1592)

Marry too soon, and you'll repent too late.

THOMAS RANDOLPH, The Jealous Lovers. Act v, sc. 2. (1632)

Marriage leapeth up upon the saddle, and repentaunce upon the crupper.

NICHOLAS LING, ed., Politeuphuia, p. 35. (1597)

FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 3372 (1732), with "soon after" before "repentance."

Marry in haste and repent at leasure.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 47. (1670) Ray takes this from the Italian, "Chi si marita in fretta, stenta adagio," or "Chi erra in fretta, a bell' agio si penta." A proverb in many languages. The French say, "Qui se marie à la hâte, se repent à loisir"; the Germans, "Heirathen in Eile, bereut man mit Weile"; the Spaniards, "Antes qui té cases, Mira lo que haces"; the Dutch, "Haast getrouwd, lang berouwd." So frequently used in English that only variants need be noted

In hasty recklessness men often marry,

And afterwards repent it all their lives.

(Par un prompt désespoir souvent on se marie, Qu'on s'en repent après tout le temps de sa vie.)

MOLIÈRE, Les Femmes Savantes. Act v, sc. 4, l. 89. (1672)

And sure all marriage in repentance ends.

DRYDEN, Don Sebastian: Epilogue. (1690)

Grief often treads upon the heels of pleasure,

Marry'd in haste, we oft repent at leasure;

Some by experience find these words misplaced.

Marry'd at leasure, they repent in haste.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734.

They "repent at leasure who marry at random."

R. H. BARHAM, The Ingoldsby Legends: Aunt Fanny. (1842)

My mother says men are deceivers,

And never, I know, will consent;

She says girls in a hurry to marry,

At leasure repent.

SAMUEL LOVER, Ask and Have. (c. 1842)

She had married in haste, and repented, not at leasure, but with equal rapidity.

JAMES PAYN, Thicker than Water. Ch. 31. (1883)

Marry in haste, repent in the suburbs.

UNKNOWN, Poor Richard Jr.'s Almanack. (1906)

V—Marriage and Love

2
Servant in love, and lord in mariage.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Frankeleyns Tale, l. 65. (c. 1386)

They dream in courtship, but in wedlock wake.

POPE, Wife of Bath's Prologue, l. 103. (1714)

Marriage is a feast where the grace is sometimes better than the dinner.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Vol. ii, No. 47 (1820)

3
They that marry where they do not love, will love where they do not marry.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State. Bk. i, ch. 6. (1642)

Where there's marriage without love, there will be love without marriage.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734.

There can be only one end to marriage without love, and that is love without marriage.

CHURTON COLLINS, Aphorisms. (c. 1905)

4
They that mary for love, shall lead their life in sorrow.

RICHARD HYRDE, tr., Instruction of a Christen Woman, sig. N ij. (1540) A rendering of the Spanish proverb, "Quien se casa por amores, Ha de vivir con dolores."

Fonde weddingy, for loue, as good onely to flee.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. ii. (1546)

All who marry for love either beat their wives or run away from them.

LOUIS N. PARKER, Disraeli. Act i. (1911)

A love-match is generally a failure and a money-match is always a mistake.

GEORGE NORMAN DOUGLAS, South Wind. Ch. 11. (1917)

Marriage is the Keeley cure for love's intoxication.

HELEN ROWLAND, Love Letters of a Cynic. (c. 1920)

5
If you are honestly devoted to one woman, then bow your head and submit your neck to the yoke. (Si tibi simplicitas uxoria, deditus uni | est animus, summitte caput cervice parata | ferre iugum.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 206. (c. A. D. 120)

Ther as myn herte is set, ther wol I wywe.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Clerkes Tale, l. 116. (c. 1388)

Never Marry but for Love; but see that thou lov'st what is lovely.

WILLIAM PENN, Some Fruits of Solitude. No. 79. (1693)

<sup>1</sup> Marriage is three parts love and seven parts forgiveness of sins.

LANGDON MITCHELL, The New York Idea. Act ii. (1906)

<sup>2</sup> Love is often a fruit of marriage. (L'amour est souvent un fruit de mariage.)

MOLIÈRE, Sganarelle. Sc. i, l. 54. (1660)

Marrying to increase love is like gaming to become rich; you only lose what little stock you had before.

WILLIAM WYCHERLEY, The Country Wife. Act iv. (1675)

O this Devilish thirst of Gold, which shall cause many to Marry where they do not fansie, relying upon the Sunday-Penny's Proverb, Marry first and love will come afterwards.

Poor Robin's Almanack, Jan., 1699.

The old family maxim, that "if she marries first, love will come after."

EUSTACE BUDGELL, Spectator. No. 605. (1714)

Then you wont trust to the good old Maxim—"Marry first, and Love will follow."

HANNAH COWLEY, The Belle's Stratagem. Act iii, sc. 1. (1780)

<sup>3</sup> A wyse man ought to beware howe he weddeth a fayre woman, for euery man wil desire to haue her loue.

EARL RIVERS, tr., Dictes and Sayenges of the Philosophirs, fo. 26. (1477)

Such as marie but to a faire face, tie themselues oft to a foule bargain.

ROBERT GREENE, Never too Late. (1590) Works (Grosart), viii, 36. FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 87 (1732) has, "A fair Face, and a foul Bargain."

I see no marriages fail sooner than such as are concluded for beauty's sake.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5. (1595)

Some ladies are too beauteous to be wed,
For where's the man that's worthy of their bed?

EDWARD YOUNG, Love and Fame. Satire vi, l. 83. (1728) Quoted by FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1746.

You cannot pluck roses without fear of thorns,
Nor enjoy a fair wife without danger of horns.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734.

If you marry a beautiful woman, you marry trouble.

GEORGE HERZOG, Jabo Proverbs, p. 180. (1936)
An American variant is, "To marry a woman for her beauty is like buying a house for its coat of paint."

<sup>4</sup> He who marries for love, in the night-time hath pleasure, in the day-time sorrow.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 10. (1666)

Who marrieth for love without money hath good nights and sorry days.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 17. (1670)

Who marrieth for Love without Money, hath merry Nights and sorry Days.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5710. (1732)

An instance in which Fuller found the right word.

VI—Marriage for Money

<sup>5</sup> Whoever marries a woman for her money will have disreputable children.

Babylonian Talmud: Kiddushin, fo. 70a. (c. 450)

<sup>6</sup> His body bartered for the dower's sake. (πεπραμένον τὸ σῶμα τῆς φερνῆς ἔχων.)

EURIPIDES, Phaëthon. Frag. 775, Nauck. (c. 410 B.C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia: Whether Vice Causes Unhappiness. Sec. 498A.

I sold myself for a dowry. (Dote imperium vendidi.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 87. (c. 200 B.C.) Doubtless adapted from the fragment from the Phaëthon of Euripides. A similar Latin proverb is, "Dotem accepi, imperium peridi" (I accepted a dowry and lost an empire).

It is a common saying, That where entereth in the riche dowrye, there goeth out the free libertye.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 7. (1574) Pettie, tr.

He that marries for wealth, sells his liberty.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 785.

(1640) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 17. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2238. (1732) A variant is, "Who wives for a dower resigns his own power." See also DOWRY.

<sup>7</sup> How can hir purs for profite be delitefull,
Whose person and properties be thus spitefull?

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

A foule olde riche widowe, whether wed would ye,

Or a yonge fayre mayde, beyng poore as ye be?

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 11.

Old Women's Gold is not ugly.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2730. (1732)

I had rather marry a woman I loved in her smock than widow Prim if she had her weight in gold

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

<sup>8</sup> Matrimony, quasi matter of money.

BEN JONSON, The Magnetick Lady. Act iv, sc 3. (1632)

Too often matrimony is a mere matter of money

KENNICK AND BICKNELL, You Naughty, Naughty Man. (1866)

<sup>9</sup> His old brass will buy you a new pan. An encouragement to a young woman to marry an old wealthy man: because his riches will get her a new husband, when he shall die.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 163. (1721)

The Dutch say, on the other hand, "Who weds a sot to get his cot, Will lose the cot and keep the sot."

Her beauty was sold for an old man's gold—
She's a bird in a gilded cage.

ARTHUR J. LAMB, A Bird in a Gilded Cage.

(1900) Music by HARRY VON TILZER.

She would have to go on being a girl in a golden cage.

GEORGETTE HEYER, No Wind of Blame. p. 75. (1935)

<sup>1</sup>
O thrice ill-starred is he who marries when he is poor! (ὦ τρισκακοδαίμων, ὅστις ὦν πένης γαμεῖ.)

MENANDER, Plocius. Frag. 404K. (c. 300 B.C.) Where nought is to wed with, wise men flee the clog.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 335. (1605) He that is needy when he is married, shall be rich when he is buried.

THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 229. (1633)

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 48. (1670) He that is needy, when he is married, shall scarce be rich, when he is buried.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2183. (1732)

<sup>2</sup>
You'd marry a midden for muck.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 202. (1678)

To marry a mixen for the sake of the muck To marry an undesirable person for money.

CHARLOTTE S. BURNE, Shropshire Folk-Lore, p. 597. (1883)

<sup>3</sup>
I prefer a man without money to money without a man. (ζητεῖν ἄνδρα χρημάτων δέουμον μάλλον ἢ χρήματα ἀνδρός.)

THEMISTOCLES, when, of two suitors for his daughter's hand, he chose the likely man in preference to the rich one. (c. 490 B.C.) See PLUTARCH, Lives: Themistocles. Ch. 18. CICERO, De Officiis, ii, 20, 71, renders it, "Ego vero malo virum, qui pecunia egeat, quam pecuniam, quae viro."

It wasn't to money you married me, but to a man. (Non tu me argento dedisti nuptum, sed viro.)

PLAUTUS, Stichus, l. 134. (c. 200 B.C.)

Is the counsayle of Themistocles altogether rejected, who willet men rather to marry their daughters to a man that wanteth mony, then to mony yt wanteth a man to use it?

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace: Icilius and Virginia, p. 107. (1576)

Be married to a man rather than mony.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace: Icilius and Virginia, p. 125

<sup>4</sup>
Moni mon for londe, Whyeth to shonde, quoth Hendyng.

Proverbs of Hendyng, in Reliquiae Antiquae (1841) i, 115. (c. 1320)

Marry not an old crony, or a fool, for money.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. ii, sec. iii, mem. 7. (1621)

For a little land, take a fool by the hand.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 99. (1639)

Many a one for land takes a fool by the hand.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 56. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6263. (1732) The French phrase is, of course "Mariage de conveance" (A marriage for monetary considerations)

<sup>5</sup>
Marry for money, and starve for love.

UNKNOWN, Poor Richard Jr.'s Almanac, p. 29. (1906)

VII—Marriage: Keep Your Own Rank

<sup>6</sup>
Like blood, like goods, and like age,
Make the happiest marriage.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 28. (1639)

ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis, p. 266.

(1681) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6184.

(1732) The Germans say, "Gleiches Blut, gleiches Gut, und gleiche Jahre, Machen die besten Heirathspaare."

Like blood, like gold, and like age.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 483. (1940)

<sup>7</sup>
No bride for me of folk too high for me. (οὐκ ἐξ ἐμαυτοῦ μειζόνων γαμεῖν θέλω.)

EURIPIDES, Rhesus, l. 168. (c. 450 B.C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, viii, 1.

By a prouerbe aunycient, "A lout to wedde a ladye is an inconuenient."

HENRY BRADSHAW, The Life of Saint Werburge of Chester, p. 43. (1513)

For any man to match above his rank

Is but to sell his liberty.

MASSINGER AND DEKKER, The Virgin Martir. Act i, sc. 1. (1622)

Go down the ladder when thou marriest a wife; go up when thou choosest a friend.

JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 400. (1678)

Marry above your match, and you get a master.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 252. (1721)

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1740.

If a man marries a queen, it oughtn't to make him a two-spot.

O. HENRY, Hearts and Crosses. (1907)

<sup>8</sup>
Let like mate with like; the ill-matched never agree. (Par pari iugator coniunx; quidquid inpar, dissidet.)

SOLON, Aphorism. (c. 575 B.C.) Quoted by AU-SONIUS, Septem Sapientum Sententiae, l. 30.

Let like meet and mate with like. (Ut coeat par iungaturque pari.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 5, l. 25. 20 B.C.)

If you would be wedded fitly, wed your equal. (Siqua voles apte nubere, nube pari.)

OWID, Heroides. Epis. ix, l. 32. (c. 10 B.C.)

Let everyone marry an equal. (Casadla con su igual.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1615)

Marry with your match. (Si vis nubere, nube pari.)

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 230. (1639)

Only equals should mate.

O. HENRY, Blind Man's Holiday. (1910)

<sup>9</sup>
Keep your own rank. (τὴν κατὰ σαυτὸν ἔλα.)

PITTACUS, when asked whether it was better to marry a woman of one's own rank, or one of a higher station. (c. 700 B.C.) The story as told by CALLIMACHUS, Epigrams. No. 1, is that a stranger once approached Pittacus, one of the Seven Sages, and said, "Reverend Father, two marriages invite me. One lady is my equal in wealth and blood: the other is above my station. Which should I lead to the altar?" Pittacus told him to go watch some boys who were spinning tops and listen to what they were saying. The boys were crying to each other, "Keep your own rank," or "Keep your own place," and the phrase passed into a proverb. Suidas says it was attributed to the Pythian oracle.

Sage, in sooth, was he who first pondered this truth in his mind and with his tongue gave it utterance—that to marry in one's own degree is far the best. (τὸ κηδεῖσθαι καθ' ἑαυτὸν ἀριστεύει μακρῶ.)

AESCHYLUS, Prometheus Bound, l. 890. (c. 470 B.C.)

Keep to your own side. (ἔλαυρε τὸν σαυτοῦ δρόμον.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Clouds, l. 25. (423 B.C.) A variation of the proverb attributed to Pit-tacus.

Mary thy lyke. (Aequalem tibi uxorem quaere.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. viii, No. 1. (1508) Taverner, tr. (1550)

Shinny on your own side.

O. HENRY, A Little Local Color. (1910)

Stick to your class.

AGATHA CHRISTIE, The Tuesday Club Murders. Ch. 13. (1933)

1
In our country we say, There's no match like that made between the pear and the cheese. (Encores dict on en nostre pays de vache, qu'il ne feut oncques ter mariage, qu'est de la poyre & du fromaige.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 9. (1548)

2
When doorways match and houses pair,
A marriage may be settled there.
(Mên tang 'hu tui, liang hsia ch'eng hun p'ei.)
WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2176. (1875)

VIII—Marriage: January and May

3
That she, this mayden, which that Maius highte, . . .

Shal wedded be unto this Ianuarie.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Marchantes Tale, l. 449. (c. 1386) In l. 642, Chaucer writes, "Thilke day That Ianuarie hath wedded fresshe May."

For it ne fit not vnto fresshe May Forto be coupled to colde Januari.

JOHN LYDGATE, Temple of Glas, p. 7. (c. 1400)
When I loked apon her husband with his white hedde and horye berde I judged Janiary and May to be copled together.

WILLIAM SPELMAN, A Dialogue Between Two Travellers, p. 94. (c. 1580)

In fayth doth frozen Ianus double face,
Such fauour finde, to match with pleasant Maye.

THOMAS HOWELL, Deuises, i, ij. (1581)

Is not this a prettie world? Ianuary and May make a match?

UNKNOWN, Wit of a Woman. Sc. 11. (1604)

You doe wrong to Time, enforcing May to embrace December.

THOMAS DEKKER, The Seuen Deadly Sinnes of London, p. 44. (1606)

Yonder goes cold December match'd with May.

SAMUEL ROWLANDS, A Paire of Spy-Knaves, p. 7. (c. 1620)

Lustfull he was, at forty needs must wed,
Old January will have May in bed.

Musarum Deliciae (Hotten), i, 103. (1656)

When asthmatic January weds buxom May.

ROBERT BUCHANAN, The Coming Terror, p. 167. (1891)

When my hair has all turned gray,

Will you kiss me then and say,

That you love me in December as you do in May?

JAMES J. WALKER, Will you Love Me in December as You Do in May? (1905)

4
Men sholde wedden after hir estaat,
For youthe and elde is often at debaat.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Miller's Tale, l. 43. (c. 1386)

5
He's put a new tip on an old plough. (ιστοβοῇ γέροντι νέαν ποτίβαλλε κορώνην.)

EUSEBIUS, Chronicle, quoting an oracle, referring to an old man marrying a young wife. (c. 325)

A young maid married to an old man is like a new house thatched with old straw.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 11. (1659)

An old man who weds a buxom young maiden, biddeth fair to become a freeman of Buckingham. . . . The fabricator of this proverb, by a freeman of Buckingham, meant a cuckold.

FRANCIS GROSE, A Provincial Glossary: Bucks, p. 152. (1787)

A young woman married to an old man must behave like an old woman.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 305. (1855)

6
As Venus and Saturne are at continual warre the one with the other, so the old coupled with the yong, never agree together.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 5. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Saturn and Venus this year in conjunction! what says the almanac to that?

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, ii, 4, 289. (1598)

The Prince's comment when he sees Falstaff making advances to Doll Tearsheet.

7
An old wise man's shadow is better than a young buzzard's sword.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 95. (1640)

Better have an old Man to humour, than a young Rake to break your Heart.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 903. (1732)

8
Many yeres sens my mother saide to me
Her elders would saie: it is better to be An olde mans darling than a yong mans war-lyng.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

A "warling" is one who is despised or disliked. SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

I see by my neighbours, it is better being an olde mans darling than a young mans worldling.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Works, ii, 12. (1602)

Better an old man's darling, than a young man's wonderling, say the Scots, warling, say the English.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 74. (1721)
Better be an old man's darling,
Than become a young man's slave.

J. R. PLANCHÉ, Extravaganzas, v, 206. (1842)
The majority of girls would rather be a young man's slave than an old man's darling.

E. J. HARDY, How to Be Happy Though Married. Ch. 5. (1886)

1
Ever the young wife betrayeth the old husband, and she that had thee not in thy flower, will despise thee in thy fall.

SIR WALTER RALEGH, Instructions to His Son. Sec. ii. (1616)

Old men, when they marry young women, are said to make much of death.

RICHARDSON, Clarissa, iv, 121. (1748)

An old man marrying a young girl is like buying a book for some one else to read.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 484. (1940)

2
It is better for a young woman to have her side pierced with an arrow than to have an old husband.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. vi, Apol. 2. (c. 1258)

They asked an old man why he did not marry. He replied, "I don't care for old women." "Then marry a young one," they said. "Nay," he rejoined, "when I who am old do not like old women, how is it possible for a young woman to like me, an old man?"

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. vi, Apologue 8.

Colonel Atwit: He's devilish old, and she's very young.

Lady Answerall: Why, they call that a match of the world's making.

Miss Notable: What if he had been young and she old?

Neverout: Why, miss, that would have been a match of the devil's making; but when both are young, that's a match of God's making.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

3
For every marriage then is best in tune,
When that the wife is May, the husband June.

ROWLAND WATKINS, To the Most Courteous and Fair Gentlewoman, Mrs. Ellinor Williams. (c. 1662)

IX—Marriage: Re-Marriage

4
Do not cook in the pot thy friend has used.

Babylonian Talmud: Pesachim, fo. 112b. (c. 450) Don't marry a divorced woman while her husband is alive.

Good women will not drink the tea of two families.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 384. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

5
Frequent re-marriage gives room for scandal. (Habent locum maledicti crebrae nuptiae.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 260. (c. 43 B. C.)

The woman who marries many is disliked by many. (Mulier quae multis nubit multis non placet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 381.

Marriage is a very good thing, but I think it's a mistake to make a habit of it.

MAUGHAM, The Mixture as Before, p. 66. (1940)

6
In second husband let me be accurst!

None wed the second but who killed the first.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 2, 189. (1600)

7
The second wife always sits on the right knee.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 484. (1940)

There's no help for misfortune but to marry again
THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 490

X—Marriage: Omens

8
Monday for wealth, Tuesday for health,
Wednesday the best day of all:

Thursday for crosses, Friday for losses,
Saturday no luck at all.

JOHN BRAND, Popular Antiquities. (1777)

Marry Monday, marry for wealth;

Marry Tuesday, marry for health;

Marry Wednesday, the best day of all.

Marry Thursday, marry for crosses;

Marry Friday, marry for losses;

Marry Saturday, no luck at all.

J. O. HALLIWELL, Nursery Rhymes of England. (1842) "Rice for good luck, and bauchles [old shoes] for bonnie bairns" is a Scottish proverb, referring to the custom of throwing rice and old shoes at weddings.

9
They that marry in green,
Their sorrow is soon seen.

ROBERT CHAMBERS, Popular Rhymes of Scotland, p. 341. (1847) "Green has been connected by superstition with calamity and sorrow." It is also the color of jealousy, and when a girl marries before her elder sisters it is said, "She has given them green stockings."

10
If you give weight to proverbs, it's bad luck to marry in May, so the common people say (Si te proverbial tangunt, | mense malum Mai nubere volgas ait.)

OVID, Fasti. Bk. v, l. 489. (c. A. D. 8) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, iv, 9, who gives the Latin form of the proverb as "Mense Maio nubunt malae." Ovid's lines have been expanded into a jingle, "Proverbs teach and common people say It's ill to marry in the month of May." The usual English form is, "Marry in May, Repent alway," or "Marry in May you'll rue it for aye." The Germans say, "Im Mai gehen Huren und Buben zur Kirche" (In May whores and rascals go to church).

The proverb saies . . . Of all the moneths 'tis worst to wed in May.

UNKNOWN, Poor Robin's Almanack: May (1675)

[We] were married on the 29th of April on account of the dread that we had of being married in May, for it is said, "Of marriages in May, The bairns die of a decay."

JOHN GALT, Annals of the Parish. Ch. 6. (1821) Mrs. Talbot, in this month, in spite of Ovid's declaration, that "the girls were good for nought who wed in May," was to be married.

FREDERICK CHAMIER, Tom Bowling. Ch. 57. (1841) Ovid's verse is sometimes given the reading, "Mense malas Maio nubere" (May is the month to marry bad wives).

From marriages in May, All bairns die and decay.

MICHAEL DENHAM, Proverbs, p. 48. (1846) May birds are aye cheeping. This refers to the common superstition against marrying in . . . May, the children of which marriages are said to 'die of decay.'

HISLOP, The Proverbs of Scotland, p. 223. (1862) The ancient proverb still lives on the lips of the people of Scotland and the Borders—Marry in May, Rue for aye.

WILLIAM HENDERSON, Notes on the Folk-Lore of the Northern Counties, p. 34. (1866) To wed in May is to wed poverty.

T. S. THISTLETON-DYER, English Folk-Lore, p. 257. (1878)

Children born in the month of May require great care in bringing up. for 'May chickens come cheeping.'

S. O. ADDY, Household Tales, p. 116. (1895)

Married in May will soon decay.

J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 93 (1917)

1 You've picked an unlucky day for changing your name. (Ne hodie malo cum auspicio nomen commutaveris.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 373. (c. 200 B.C.)

To change the name and not the letter

Is a change for the worse and not for the better.

CHAMBERS, Book of Days. Vol. i, p. 723. (1863)

2 Who marries between the sickle and the scythe will never thrive.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 352. (1678)

They that wive Between sickle and scythe Shall never thrive.

JOHN GLYDE, JR., A Norfolk Garland, p. 16. (1872)

3 If you marry in Lent you will live to repent.

UNKNOWN, Notes and Queries. Ser. i, vol. ii, p. 259. (1850)

The double fees of Lent, and the ill-luck supposed to follow a couple united during the penitential forty days.

MRS. LINNAEUS BANKS, Manchester Man. Ch. 18. (1876)

MARTYR

4 The noble army of martyrs.

Book of Common Prayer: Te Deum. (c. 1548)

5 And, if thou deye a martir, go to hevене.

CHAUCEUR (?), Troilus. Bk. iv, l. 623. (c. 1380)

He that dies a martyr proves that he is not a knave, but by no means that he is not a fool.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Vol. i, No. 410. (1820)

6 I came from martyrdom into this peace. (E venni dal martiro a questa pace.)

DANTE, Paradiso. Canto xv, l. 148. (c. 1300)

Quoted by LONGFELLOW, President Garfield, last line.

7 It is the truth of the doctrine which makes the martyr. (C'est la vérité de la doctrine qui fait le martyre!)

GUSTAVE FLAUBERT, La Tentation de Saint-Antoine. Pt. iii. (1874)

8 He that bringeth himself into needless danger, is the devil's martyr.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy War. Bk. ii, ch.

29. (1639) Referred to as "the unhappy Dutch proverb."

Who perisheth in needless danger is the devil's martyr.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 18. (1678)

Then that other fine saying, He who perishes in needless danger, is the Devil's martyr.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Clarissa, iv, 121. (1748)

9 There's no religion so irrational but can boast its martyrs.

JOSEPH GLANVILLE, The Vanity of Dogmatizing. Ch. 14. (1661)

No Religion, but can boast of its Martyrs.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3721. (1732)

10 Give credence to that Proverbe, That it is better to bee a Martyr than a Confessour.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iv, p. 197. (1574) Young, tr.

It is better to be a Confessour, than a Martyr. (Meglio è esser confessore, che martire.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 32. (1578)

11 The more ye mow us down, the more quickly we grow; the blood of Christians is fresh seed. (Plures effimur quotiens metimur a vobis; semen est sanguis Christianorum.)

TERTULLIAN, Apologeticus. Ch. 50. (A.D. 197)

The seed, the fattening of the Church was the blood of her slain martyrs.

SAMUEL PURCHAS, His Pilgrim, i, 168 (1625)

The blood of martyrs seedes the church.

THOMAS ADAMS, Works, p. 205. (1630)

Of all shires in England, Staffordshire was the largest sown with "the seed of the church." I mean, "the blood of primitive martyrs."

THOMAS FULLER, The Church-History of Britain. Bk. i, ch. 4. (1655)

The blood of martyrs is the seed of Christians. (Sanguis martyrum semen Christianorum.)

BEYERLINCK, Magnum Theatrum Vitae Humanorum. (1665)

The ancient churches and the best, By their own martyrs blood increas'd.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Remains (1759), i, 135. (1680)

The Inquisition has even from its own point of view proved generally a failure. The blood of martyrs is the seed of the church.

LORD AVEBURY, The Pleasures of Life. Bk. ii, ch. 11. (1887)

<sup>1</sup> The saying that hath gone current through all Antiquity, That it is not the suffering but the cause which makes a Martyr, will hold good still.

SAMUEL TORSELL, The Hypocrite Discovered. Pt. i, ch. 12. (1644)

It is neither the pain, nor the place, but only the cause, makes a martyr.

THOMAS FULLER, The Church-History of Britain. Bk. x, ch. 4. (1655)

It is the cause, not the death, that makes the martyr.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE. (c. 1818) As quoted by O'MEARA, Napoleon in Exile.

MASHER

<sup>2</sup> Black-eyed beauties . . . mashing men for many generations with shafts shot sideways.

C. G. LELAND, The Gypsies, p. 108. (1882)
Sunday-school this afternoon. Two "mashers" in the class.

ISABELLA M. RITTENHOUSE, Maud, p.95.(1882)
An aunt . . . got mashed on a Chicago drummer.

G. W. PECK, Peck's Bad Boy, p. 99. (1883)
There is no young, fair masher strutting up and down.

BILL NYE (EDGAR WILSON), Baled Hay, p. 211. (1884)

It [mash] must have been derived from the gypsy mash (masher-ava), to allure, to entice.

BARÈRE AND LELAND, English Gypsies and Their Language, ii, 44/1. (1889)

I see you still have a béguin for him. You still have a mash on him.

ETHEL VANCE, Reprisal, p. 280. (1942)

MASTER

See also Servant

<sup>3</sup> The light of the house I deem to be the presence of its master. (δύμα γὰρ δόμων νομίζω δεσπότου παρουσίαν.)

AESCHYLUS, The Persians, l. 169. (472 B. C.)

The Master absent, and the house dead.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 939. (1640)

<sup>4</sup> The master should bring honor to his house, not the house to its master. (Nec domo dominus, sed domino domus honestanda est.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk.i, ch.39, sec.139. (c.45 B. C.)

<sup>5</sup> In mastery there is bondage, in bondage there is mastery. (Fit in dominatu servitus, in servitute dominatus.)

CICERO, Pro Rege Deiotaro. Ch. 11, sec. 30. (45 B. C.)

Maisterie mawes the meadows down.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 76. (c. 1595)

The Captain . . . keeps a high hand ower the country, . . . and maistry, ye ken, mawes the meadows down.

SCOTT, Heart of Midlothian. Ch. 45. (1818)

<sup>6</sup> Master within his own doores. Everyone rules in his own house.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Maison: Mais tre. (1611) Everyone is, or should be, master in his own house. A MAN'S HOUSE HIS CASTLE. see under HOUSE.

One master in an house is enough.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 218. (1639)

<sup>7</sup> Mony man serves a thanklesse master.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 78. (c. 1595)

<sup>8</sup> Better master one, than engage with ten.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 916. (1732)

<sup>9</sup> Masters should be sometimes blind, and sometimes deaf.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3376. (1732)

<sup>10</sup> In every art it is good to have a master.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 621. (1640)

None is born Master.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 656 (1640)

From the Italian, "Nessuno nasce maestro."

No man is his craft's master the first day.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 120. (1678)

<sup>11</sup> Every man may not syt in the chayre.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 12. (1546)

We cannot all be masters.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, i, 1, 43. (1605)

Where every nab is master, the world goes to wrack.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 218. (1639)

All men can't be first. All Men can't be masters
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. Nos. 536, 537 (1732)

If I am master, and you are master, who will drive the asses?

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 71. (1852) Quoting an Arabic proverb, and adding, "The Gallegan proverb, 'You a lady, I a lady, who shall drive the hogs a-field?' (Vos doña, yo doña, quien botara á porca fora?) is only a variation of this."

You a lady and I a lady, who will put the sow out.

D. E. MARVIN, Antiquities in Proverbs, p. 311 (1922) Marvin cites many variants, among them, "I an esquire and you an esquire, who will harness the horses?" "I a queen and you a queen, who is to fetch the water?" "I stubborn and you stubborn, who is to carry the load?" "You a gentleman and I a gentleman who will milk the cow?" The Hindus say. "If all get into the palanquin, who will be the bearers?"

<sup>12</sup> Hard are the rebukes of masters. (χαλεπαὶ δὲ τ' ἀνάκτων εἶσιν ὀμολαί.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xvii, l. 189. (c. 850 B. C.)

<sup>13</sup> Had Zimri peace, who slew his master? (Numquid pax potest esse Zambri, qui interfecit dominum suum?)

Old Testament: II Kings, ix, 31. (c. 700 B. C.)

<sup>1</sup> No man can serve two masters. (οὐδεὶς δύναται δυοῖς κυρίοις δουλέειν.)

New Testament: Matthew, vi, 24. (c. A. D. 50)

The Vulgate is, "Nemo potest duobus dominis servire." Wyclif's rendering (1389) is, "No one may serue to two lordis."

Expect not wages from Omar, O son, when thou workest in the house of Zaid.

SADI, Bustan. Ch. 5, Apol. 10. (c. 1257)

No man may wel serve tweie lordes.

UNKNOWN. WRIGHT, Political Songs, p. 325. (c. 1330)

No man may wel serue two maistres for that one corrupeth that other.

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., Jason, p. 57. (c. 1477)

You cannot have your will . . . and Christ too; no man can serve two masters.

DANIEL ROGERS, Naaman, p. 166. (1642)

We cannot serve two masters with a single heart.

THOMAS FORDE, Lusus Fortunae: Epistle. (1649)

That was a wise saying of the famous Marquis Pescara to the Papal Legate, that it was impossible for men to serve Mars and Christ at the same time.

J. R. LOWELL, The Biglow Papers. Ser. i, No. 1. Note. (1848)

If you to serve two masters try,

To one or other you'll have to lie.

(Quien a dos señores ha de servir, Al uno ha de mentir.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbs, p. 280. (1856) A Spanish proverb, cited also by TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 124. The impossibility of serving well two masters is noted in the proverbial literature of nearly every country. The French say, "Personne ne peut obier à deux maîtres à la fois"; the Turks, "He who hesitates between two mosques, returns without prayer"; the Spaniards, "He who serves two masters must neglect one of them." The Italians also say, "Chi non vuol servir ad un sol signore, a molti ha da servire" (He that will not serve one master, will have to serve many).

He cheats both who tries to serve two masters. (Deficit ambobus, qui vult servire duobus.)

HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 80. (1869)

Men cannot serve two masters.

BERNARD SHAW, Saint Joan. Act iv. (1924)
"Masters two will not do."

<sup>2</sup>

The master is the one slave of the household. (εἰς ἑστὶ δούλος οἰκίας ὁ δεσπότης.)

MENANDER, Fragments. Frag. 760K. (c. 300 B. C.) See also SERVANT AND MASTER.

Within us, and from a diseased liver, masters spring up. (Intus et in iecore aegro nascuntur domini.)

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. v, l. 129. (c. A. D. 58)

<sup>3</sup>

Whatever a master does is right, no matter how wrong. (Indigna digna habenda sunt, erus quae facit.)

PLAUTUS, Captivi, l. 200. (c. 200 B. C.) "Iurare in verba magistri" (To swear by the words of a master) to argue in favor of a thing because "the master said so," was a reference to the pupils of Pythagoras, and to "Magister dixit" (The master has said it), or the familiar "Ipse dixit" (He himself has said it), one of their maxims.

<sup>4</sup>

One is half master when one's superior entertains. (Dominari ex parte est cum superior supplicat.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 172. (c. 43 B. C.)

<sup>5</sup>

Everything has its master. (Wu ko yu chu.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 14. (1875)

<sup>6</sup>

No man is good enough to be another man's master.

BERNARD SHAW, Major Barbara. Act iii. (1905)

<sup>7</sup>

I believe it will be absolutely necessary that you should prevail on our future masters to learn their letters.

ROBERT LOWE, VISCOUNT SHERBROOKE. Speech, House of Commons, 15 July 1867, on the passing of the Reform Bill. Popularized as "We must educate our masters."

<sup>8</sup>

Stick to the plaster, and you'll become a master.

TOlstoy, War and Peace. Vol. ii, pt. i, ch. 2. (1865) Dole, tr.

<sup>9</sup>

"Many masters," quoth the toad to the harrow when every tine turned her over.

UNKNOWN, Fecunda Ratis. (c. 1075)

Ower mony maisters, as the paddock said to the harrow, when every tooth gae her a tig.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 27. (1818)

A MASTER SHOULD FIRST MASTER HIMSELF, see under SELF-CONTROL.

II—Master: Like Master, Like Man

See also Servant and Master

<sup>10</sup>

If the abbot sings well, the novice is not far behind him. (Si bien canta el abad, no le va en zaga el monacillo.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 25. (1615)

The French have the same proverb, "Si l'abbé chante bien, le novice se mettra vite à l'unisson" (If the abbot sings well, the novice soon puts himself in harmony), or "Le moine répond comme l'abbé chante" (The monk responds as the abbot sings), of which the Spanish equivalent is, "Como canta el abad, responde el monacillo."

Such as the abbot is, such is the monk.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale. (1666)

To a bad chaplain a bad sacristan. (A mal chapelain, mal sacristan.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbs, p. 231. (1856) A Spanish proverb. The French say, "Tel chapelain, tel sacristan."

When the abbot has dice in his pocket the convent will play.

J. L. MOTLEY, The Rise of the Dutch Republic. Ch. 1. (1860) Quoted as a Dutch proverb.

- <sup>1</sup> An ill master makes bad scholars.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 238. (1639)
- <sup>2</sup> As the common saying is, while the mistress plaieth, the mayd strayeth.
STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii,
p. 41. (1574) Pettie, tr.
Hackney mistress, hackney maid.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 217. (1639)
RAY, p. 99; FULLER, No. 1780.
- <sup>3</sup> Better speak to the master than the man.
WILLIAM GURNALL, *The Christian in Compleat
Armour*, p. 498. (1661)
- <sup>4</sup> As with the servant, so with his master; as with the maid, so with her mistress. (Sicut servus, sic dominus eius: sicut ancilla, sic domina eius.)
Old Testament: Isaiah, xxiv, 2. (c. 725 B.C.)
The Latin proverb, "Like mistress, like maid" is usually given in the form, "Qualis hera, tales pedisaeque."
As the master is, so the servant. (Plane qualis dominus, talis et servus.)
PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 58. (c. A.D. 60)
Such capetein, such retenue.
JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. iii. l.
2421. (c. 1390)
Like lorde, like chapelain.
JOHN BAYLE, Kynge Johan. (c. 1546)
Lyke men lyke maister, according to the prouerbe.
NICOLAS UDALL, tr., Erasmus' Paraphrase upon the Newe Testament: Luke, xxiii. (1548)
The old proverbe is true, . . . "such a master, such a servant."
JOHN STRYPE, Ecclesiastical Memorials. Bk. iii,
ch. 23. (1554)
Like master, like man.
ULPIAN FULWELL, Like Will to Like. (1568) In HAZLITT, Old Plays, iii, 330. A proverb in many languages. The Italians say (as quoted by FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 34), "Tal patrone, tal servitore"; the French, "A tel seigneur, tels serviteurs"; the Germans, "Wie der Herr, so der Diener," or "Wie der Herr, so der Knecht; wie die Frau, so die Magd";
the Spaniards, "Qual el señor, tal el criado," and so on. In English it has been so widely used that only a few variants need be noted.
Such maister, such man, and such mistris such mayde,
Such husband and huswife, such houses arrayed.
THOMAS TUSSER, Fiue Hundreth Pointes of Good Husbandrie: April's Abstract. (1573)
Such Mistris, such Nan, such Maister, such Man.
THOMAS TUSSER, April's Abstract.
If the proverbe be true, That like man like maister, and that a fishe beginneth first to smell at the head, there is no doubt, but the faultes of our servantes will be layed upon us.
STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii,
p. 102. (1574) Pettie, tr.
Such master, such servant. (Tel maltre, tel valet.)
M. CIMBER, of the Bibliothèque Royale. See
MEURIER, Trésor des Sentences. (1607)

- My name is Trimtram, forsooth; look, what my master does, I used to do the like.
MIDDLETON AND ROWLEY, A Faire Quarrell. Act
ii, sc. 2. (1617)
Trim, tram, hang master, hang man!
MIDDLETON AND ROWLEY, The Spanish Gypsy.
Act iv, sc. 3. (1653)
Trimm tramm, like master like man.
JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 13. (1659)
This master of mine . . . is a bedlam, . . . and I am the greater coxcomb of the two, . . . if the proverb be true that says, "like master, like man."
THOMAS SHELTON, tr., Don Quixote. Bk. ii, ch
10. (1620)
'Tis an old saying, Like master, like man; why not as well, Like mistress, like maid?
GEORGE FARQUEAR, Love and a Bottle. Act i.
sc. 1. (1699)
She called me d——d nigger, and say like massa like man.
MARRYAT, The King's Own. Ch. 19. (1830)
They say, "Like master, like man"; and I may add, "Like lady, like maid." Lady Hercules was fine, but her maid was still finer.
FREDERICK MARRYAT, Poor Jack. Ch. 1. (1840)
What the master is, that will the men be, without overmuch taking thought on his part.
MRS. GASKELL, North and South. Ch. 15. (1855)
- <sup>5</sup> Dogs, according to the old adage, become like their mistresses. (κύνες κατὰ τὴν παροιμίαν οἷαινερ αἱ δέσποιναι γίγνονται.)
PLATO, The Republic. Bk. viii, sec. 563C. (c.
375 B.C.) The figurative meaning of the proverb is, "As the mistress is, so will the servants be," or "As the ruler is, so appear the subjects."
As the mistress, so is the dog. (οἷαινερ ἡ δέσποινα.
τοῖα καὶ κύων.)
CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. v, epis. 11. (55 B.C.)
The Spanish form is, "Qual el dueño, tal el perro" (As the master, so the dog).

III—Master: The Eye of the Master

- <sup>6</sup> Continual vigilance, rigorous method, what we call "the eye of the master," work wonders.
CARLYLE, Past and Present. Bk. ii, ch. 10. (1843)
- <sup>7</sup> The forehead is better than the hindhead.
(Frons occipitio prior est.)
CATO THE CENSOR, De Agricultura. Ch. 4. (c.
170 B.C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, ii, 19, who calls it "that celebrated ancient agricultural adage," its meaning being that, on a farm especially, the work is better done before the master's face than behind his back.
The master's countenance produces more than the back of his head. (Frons domini plus prodest quam occipitium.)
PLINY, Naturalis Historia. Bk. xviii, ch. 5, sec.
6. (c. A.D. 77)
- <sup>8</sup> He who sleeps over his shop brings four eyes into the business.
S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 384.
(1938) A Chinese proverb.

The master's eye is the second spring.

CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 519. Egyptian.

<sup>1</sup> The eyes and footsteps of the master are things most salutary to the land. (Oculos et vestigia domini, res agro saluberrimas.)

LUCIUS JUNIUS COLUMELLA, De Re Rustica. Bk. iv, sec. 18. (c. A. D. 65)

The master's eye is the best fertilizer, as the saying is. (Maiores fertilissimum in agro oculum domini, esse dixerunt.)

PLINY THE ELDER, Naturalis Historia. Bk. xviii, sec. 84. (c. A. D. 77)

The steppe of the husbando [farmer] maketh a fatte donghyll.

R. WHITFORD, Werke for Householdiers, sig. F5. (1537)

The dust that falls from the master's shoes is the best compost to manure ground.

THOMAS FULLER, Holy State. Bk. i, ch. 7. (1642)

The best Compost for the Lands

Is the wise Masters Feet, and Hands.

ROBERT HERRICK, The Country Life. (1648)

The master's footsteps fatten the soyle.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 10. (1659)

The masters footsteps fatten the field.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 206. (1666)

The Spanish form is, "El pie del dueño, es-tierco para la heredad" (The foot of the master manures the field).

The master's foot is the best foulzie.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 308. (1721)

No dung like the master's foot.

MARGERY SHARP, The Stone of Chastity, p. 273. (1940)

<sup>2</sup> The Eye of a Master will do more Work than both his Hands.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1744. Repeated in 1755. The Germans say, "Das Auge des Herrn schafft mehr als seine beiden Hände."

She was wont to say, "The eye of a master does more work than both his hands," accordingly in house or warehouse her active supervision kept other hands from idling.

ISABELLA BANKS, Manchester Man. Ch. 14. (1876)

<sup>3</sup> Not to oversee Workmen, is to leave them your Purse open.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3685. (1732)

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1751. The Spanish form is, "Obreros a no ver, dineros a perder" (Workmen not watched, money lost).

<sup>4</sup> One eye of the master's sees more than ten of the servants.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 689.

(1640) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 17. (1670)

One Eye of the Master's, sees more than Ten of the Man's.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3749. (1732)

The Italians say, "Più vede un occhio del padrone che quattro del servitore."

<sup>5</sup> The master sees better than any one else in his own affairs. (Dominum videre plurimum in rebus suis.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. ii, fable 8. (c. 25 B. C.) Phaedrus says, There is nothing, for seeing, like the eye of the master. As for me, I would add also the eye of the lover. (Phèdre dit: . . . Il n'est, pour voir, que l'œil du maître. Quant à moi, j'y mettrois encor l'œil de l'amant.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: L'œil du Maître. Bk. iv, fab. 21. (1668)

The master, as the tale declares,

Looks sharpest in his own affairs.

SMART, Phaedrus' Fables, ii, 8. (1765)

<sup>6</sup> I like the answer which is attributed to the Persian. The king, you know, had happened on a good horse, and wanted to fatten him as speedily as possible. So he asked one who was reputed clever with horses what is the quickest way of fattening a horse. "The master's eye," replied the man. (δτι δεσπότου ὀφθαλμός.)

XENOPHON, Oeconomicus. Ch. xii, sec. 20. (c. 375 B. C.) Quoted by ARISTOTLE (?), Oeconomica, i, vi, 3. (c. 300 B. C.)

I take care of myself, but a worthless slave takes care of the horse. (Ego me curo, equum nihili servos.)

SABINUS MASURIUS, Memoriali. Bk. vii. (c. 2 B. C.) The reply of a plump man riding on a thin horse, when asked why he was better cared for than his mount. See AULUS GELIUS, Noctes Atticae, iv, 20. Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, ii, 19, who tells the story in the third person, with the Latin, "Ipse se paceret, equum curaret servuus."

There is point as well as wit in the remark of the groom who said that nothing makes the horse so fat as the king's eye. (οὐδέν οὕτω πιαίνει τὸν ἵππον ὡς βασιλέως ὀφθαλμός.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: The Education of Children. Sec. 9D. (c. A. D. 95)

The eye of the maister [maketh] a fatte horse

RICHARD WHITFORD, Werke for Householdiers. sig. F5. (1537)

A fellow asked a philosopher, . . . "How is a horse made fat?" The philosopher made answer, "With his master's eye," . . . meaning that the master should . . . take heed to the horse-keeper, that the horse might be well fed.

HUGH LATIMER, Fifth Sermon on the Lord's Prayer (Parker Soc.), p. 394. (1552)

Thereupon it is sayde, That the eye of the mayster fatteth the Horse: Touching whiche purpose, a Philosopher being askte whiche was the waye to make Lande bring good store of Corne: aunswered, For the mayster to walke often aboute it.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 108. (1574) Pettie, tr.

The eye of the maister fatteneth the horse. (L'occhio del patron, ingrassa il cavallo.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 31. (1578) The French say, "L'œil du maître engraisse le cheval"; the Germans, "Des Herrn Auge macht das Pferd fett"; the Spaniards, "El ojo del amo engorda el caballo."

It is the eye of the master that fatteth the horse, and the loue of the woeman, that maketh the man.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 104 (1579)
That notable saying of the horse-keeper—nothing did so fatte the horse as the eye of the king.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 144.
The proverbe is, The masters eye feeds the horse.

RICHARD BRATHWAIT, Whimzies, p. 69. (1631)
The master's eye fattens the horse, and his foot the ground.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 488. (1640)
The Master's Eye makes the Horse fat.

DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 281. (1709)

MATCH

1 The Hero in the Paradise Lost is . . . by no means a match for his enemies.

ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 297. (1712)
I fancy myself . . . more than a match for all that can happen.

GOLDSMITH, Citizen of the World. Let. 7. (1762)
[Cromwell] was more than a match . . . for his foes.

J. R. GREEN, A Short History of the English People. Ch. 7, sec. 1. (1874)

2 I knowe not his matche lyuyng.

SIR THOMAS MALORY, Le Morte Darthur, ii, v, 81. (1485)

I don't believe there is his match anywhere.

MRS. GASKELL, Wives and Daughters. Vol. i, Ch. 21. (1866)

3 A match quoth Hatch, when he got his wife by the breech.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 216. (1670)

A match quoth Jack, when he kist his dame.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 76. (1678)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 321. (1732)

4 The schrewe fond his macche.

UNKNOWN, The Miracle of St. James, in Early English Poetry (1862), p. 59. (c. 1305)

He fond his mecche.

ROBERT MANNING OF BRUNNE, The Story of England, l. 13563. (c. 1330)

His mache coulede he no where finde.

UNKNOWN, The Knight of Curtesy (Ritson), p. 352. (c. 1475)

Goo feche sire Launcelot or sir Tristram and there shalle ye fynde your match.

SIR THOMAS MALORY, Le Morte Darthur Bk. x, ch. 54. (1485)

How now . . . have you met with your match?

ROBERT GREENE, Frier Bacon. Sc. 9. (1594)

Hannibal . . . met with his match, and was subdued at last.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. i, sec. ii, mem. iii, subs. 10. (1621)

Well, Mr. Fainall, you have met with your match.

WILLIAM CONGREVE, The Way of the World. Act iii, sc. 7. (1700)

MATCHES ARE MADE IN HEAVEN, see under MARRIAGE.

MAY

5 May had peynted with his softe shoures
This gardin ful of leves and of floures.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Frankeleyns Tale, l. 179 (c. 1388)

Welcome May with his flowers.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, fo. 55. (1620)

WELCOME AS FLOWERS IN MAY, see under WELCOME.

6 May, that moder is of monthes glade.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. ii, l. 50. (c. 1380)

And May was com, the monyth of gladnes.

LYDGATE, Troy Book. Bk. i, l. 1293. (1412)

May, of myrthfull monethis quene.

WILLIAM DUNBAR, Golden Targe, l. 82. (1508)

It might be the merry moneth of May.

JOHN GRANGE, Golden Aphroditis, sig. K4. (1577)

Is not thilke the mery moneth of May?

EDMUND SPENSER, The Shepheardes Calendar: May, l. 1. (1579)

As it fell upon a Day,

In the merrie Month of May.

RICHARD BARNFIELD, Ode. (1598)

Observance to the month of merry May.

DRYDEN, Palamon and Arcite, ii, 44. (1700)

All the year is merry May!

W. S. GILBERT, The Gondoliers. Act i. (1889)

7 Do not leave off your coat till May. (Hasta Mayo no te quites el sayo.)

CORREAS, Vocabulario, p. 490. (c. 1627) An English jingle runs, "Who doffs his coat on a winter's day, Will gladly put it on in May."

Leave not off a Clout, Till May be out.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6193. (1732)

Cast ne'er a clout till May be out.

ANDREW HENDERSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 154. (1832)

If you would the doctor pay,

Leave your flannels off in May.

F. T. ELWORTHY, The West Somerset Word-Book, p. 467. (1886) A North country variation is, "If you bade [bathe] in May You'll soon lig [lie] in clay."

Till May be out leave not off a clout: or, Change not a clout Till May be out.

RICHARD INWARDS, Weather Lore, p. 26. (1893)

8 Blear-ey'd, like a May kitten.

JOHN DRYDEN, Amphitryon. Act iii. (1690)

May chets [children, kittens] bad luck begets.

ROBERT HUNT, Popular Romances of the West of England, p. 430. (1865)

A certain unluckiness is held all England over to attend a May kitten as well as a May baby

WILLIAM HENDERSON, The Folk-Lore of the Northern Counties of England, p. 115. (1879)

9 He has a hard heart who does not love in May. (Moult a dur cuer qui en Mai n'aime.)

GUILLAUME DE LORRIS, Roman de la Rose. (c. 1250)

Love, whose month is ever May.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, iv, 3, 103. (1595)

The Marchioness of S— said . . . that though she could promise to be chaste in every month besides, she could not engage for herself in May.
EUSTACE BLUDGELL, Spectator, 29 April, 1712.
Of temper amorous as the first of May.

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. i, l. 2. (1847)

<sup>1</sup>
In the wonderfully beautiful month of May.
(Im wunderschönen Monat Mai.)

HEINRICH HEINE, Lyrische Intermezzo, i. (1823)
The word May is a perfumed word. It is an illuminated initial. It means youth, love, song.

H. W. LONGFELLOW, Journal, 1 May, 1861.

<sup>2</sup>
The month of May is called a "trying" month, to persons long ailing with critical complaints. It is common to say, "Ah, he'll never get up May-hill!" or, "If he can climb over May-hill he'll do."

WILLIAM HONE, Every-day Book, i, 652. (1825)
He'll never climb May-hill.

MICHAEL DENHAM, Proverbs, p. 43. (1846)
"He won't climb up May Hill," that is, he will not live through the cold spring.

J. R. WISE, The New Forest. Ch. 16. (1863)

<sup>3</sup>
A hot May makes a fat churchyard.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 11. (1659)

A snowstorm in May is worth a load of hay.

RICHARD INWARDS, Weather Lore, p. 27. (1893)

See Inwards for other weather proverbs.

McCOY

<sup>4</sup>
Get a load of this. It's the real McCoy.

BELLA AND SAMUEL SPEWACK, Boy Meets Girl.

Act ii, sc. 3. (1935) The real thing, the truth.
The real McKay.

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, Kitty Foyle, p. 27. (1939)

That anonymous tip was certainly the McCoy.

H. S. KEELER, The Sharkskin Book, p. 12. (1941)
It was It, the real thing, the McCoy.

WILLIAM IRISH, Phantom Lady, p. 94. (1942)

It's a very serious thing this time. The real McCoy.
HUGH ADDIS, Night Over the Wood, p. 157. (1943)

She recognized the guttural tones . . . as the real McCoy, straight, so to speak, from the horse's mouth.

J. S. STRANGE, Look Your Last, p. 132. (1943)

MEAL

<sup>5</sup>
To leave the meal and take the bran.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 5. (1639)

<sup>6</sup>
Many a meal is lost for want of meat.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1740

<sup>7</sup>
Oft said the wise man, whom I erst did bery:
Better are meales many, than one to mery.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

BACON, Promus. No. 494. (c. 1594) RAY,
Proverbs, p. 40. (1678)

<sup>8</sup>
A handful of meal in a barrel, and a little oil in a cruse. (Nisi quantum pugillus capere potest farinae in hydria, et paululum olei in lecytho.)

Old Testament: I Kings, xvii, 12. (c. 600 B. C.)
The barrel of meal wasted not, neither did the cruse of oil fail. (Hydria farinae non defecit, et lecythus olei non est imminutus.)

Old Testament: I Kings, xvii, 16. (c. 600 B. C.)
The smallest grain of meal would suit my necessity better [than this pearl]. (Le moindre grain de mil Seroit bien mieux mon affaire.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. i, fab. 20. (1664)

<sup>9</sup>
None but fools and fiddlers sing at their meat.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 9. (1813)
Only fools and fiddlers sing at meals.

Folk-Lore Journal, vii, 293. (1889)

<sup>10</sup>
Unquiet meals make ill digestions.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors, v, 1, 74. (1593)

It is good to bee merry at meate, or meales.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 66. (1633) RAY,
English Proverbs, p. 18. (1670)

MEAN, GOLDEN, see Moderation

MEANING

<sup>11</sup>
I know your meaning by your winking.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 64. (1639)

You may know his meaning by his gaping.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 21. (1659)

They might have known their meaning by their mumping.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, tr., Quevedo's Visions, p. 112. (1667)

One may know your meaning by your gaping

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 186. (1670)

I know your meaning by your mumping. I know by your motions and gestures what you would be at.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 183. (1721)

<sup>12</sup>
Worthy audience, we pray you, take things as they are meant.

RICHARD EDWARDS, Damon and Pithias: Prologue. (1571)

<sup>13</sup>
Every little movement has a meaning all its own.

HARBACH AND HOSCHNA. The song hit of Madame Sherry, 1909.

<sup>14</sup>
Understande the drift of these devises.

BARNABY RICH (?), Introduction to Pettie's Petite Pallace. (1576)

Perceuing the drift of the olde Foxe hir father

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 87. (1579)

I will tell you my drift.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado about Nothing, ii. 1, 406. (1598)

O, understand my drift.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, ii, 2, 251. (1601)

We know your drift.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus, iii, 3, 114. (1607)

Do you catch my smoke?

O. HENRY, A Little Local Color. (1910)

1
He means well.

BERNARD SHAW, Mrs. Warren's Profession. Act ii. (1893) See also under INTENTION.

She says what she means and means what she says.

E. S. GARDNER, The D.A. Cooks a Goose, p. 9. (1942)

MEANNESS

2
Meanness is the parent of Insolence.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1752.

Prodigality has a sister Meanness, his fixed antagonist heart-fellow.

M. F. TUPPER, Proverbial Philosophy: Of Wealth. (1839)

3
We are meaner than flies: flies have their virtues. (Minoris quam muscae sumus, muscae tamen aliquam virtutem habent.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 42. (c. A. D. 60)

I never felt so mean in all my life.

FREDERICK MARRYAT, Diary in America, ii, 35. (1839)

As mean as Job's turkey.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 25. (1843)

He feels as mean, too, as a rooster in a thunder shower.

ELBRIDGE D. PAIGE, Dow's Short Patent Sermons, i, 7. (c. 1849)

Like most other people, I often feel mean, and act accordingly.

MARK TWAIN, Sketches New and Old, p. 303. (1867)

4
If parts allure thee, think how Bacon shined,
The wisest, brightest, meanest of mankind

POPE, Essay on Man, iv, 282. (1734)

The meanest and basest fellow in the kingdom.

JUNIUS, Letters. No. 49. (1771)

MEANS

See also End: Means and End

5
Certainly it is the nature of extreme self-lovers, as they will set an house on fire, and it were but to roast their egges.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Wisdom. (1612)

They . . . would set their neighbour's house on fire, and it were but to roast their own egges.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons (1861), ii, 259. (1629)

These are the people that set their neighbours' houses on fire to roast their own egges.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, tr., Aesop, p. 375. (1692)

He set my House afire, only to roast his Egges.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2018. (1732)

Pray don't burn down my House to roast your Egges.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1751.

6
For my peck of malt set the kiln on fire.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 254. (1639)

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 164 (1666)

Our proverb seems to mean, "I mustn't be hasty—I am not such a fool as to burn the kiln down to get my paltry peck."

BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 58. (1917)

7
Why use an ox-knife to kill a fowl?

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. xvii, ch. 4. (c. 500 B. C.) Giles translates it "pole-axe."

Using an ox to hunt a hare. (τῷ βοὶ τὸν λαγῶ κυνηγεῖν.)

PLUTARCH, Apothegms. (c. A. D. 100) As quoted by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, ii, 64, with the Latin, "Bove leporum venari."

He takes a spear to kill a fly.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 75. (1678)

He builds cages fit for oxen, to keep birds in.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 352. (1678)

Never take a stone to break an egg, when you can do it with the back of your knife.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 266. (1721)

FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 4097, has, "Send not for a Hatchet to break open an Egg with." RAMSAY, Scottish Proverbs, has, "Ne'er tak a fore-hammer to break an egg, when ye can do it wi' a pen knife."

Never take the tawse [whip], when a word will do the turn.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 266. (1721)

Take not a Musket to kill a Butterfly.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4312. (1732)

BUTTERFLY ON THE WHEEL, see under BUTTERFLY.

He builds a palace and ruins a city.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 770. (1817)

Ne'er draw your dirk when a dunt [blow] will do

HENDERSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 51. (1832)

What! knocking down an iron door to obtain a bran cake?

PERCIVAL, Tamil Proverbs, No. 1047. (1842)

Don't use a cannon to shoot a sparrow.

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 192. (1872)

Don't use a balista of thirty thousand catties to kill a mouse.

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 482.

He fells a tree to catch a blackbird. (K an tao shu cho pa ko.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 629. (1875)

A waste of pomp and ammunition to kill a bug with a battery of artillery.

MARK TWAIN, Tom Sawyer. Ch. 22. (1876)

What's the use of wasting dynamite when insect powder will do?

SENATOR CARTER GLASS, of a political opponent. at a Democratic caucus in 1913.

Digging up a mountain to catch a rat.

D. E. MARVIN, Curiosities in Proverbs, p. 166

(1916) The French say, "Tonner sur les choux" (To thunder on the cabbages).

Do not remove a fly from your friend's forehead with a hatchet.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 360. (1938)

A Chinese proverb.

8
Use the means, and God will give the blessing

THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 109. (1633)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 17. (1670)

Use the Means, and trust to God for the Blessing

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5413. (1732)

1 Most of the great results of history are brought about by discreditable means.

R. W. EMERSON, The Conduct of Life: Considerations by the Way. (1860)

2 How can you win a great cause by small efforts? (σικροῖσι γὰρ τὰ μεγάλα πῶς ἔλοι τις ἂν | πόνουςιν;)

EURIPIDES, Orestes, l. 694. (c. 410 B. C.)

Lang or ye cut Balkland wood with a pen knife.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 74. (c. (1595) FULLER, Worthies, ii, 544. (1662) KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 241, with the comment, "Spoken when people set about a work without proper tools."

It's a good rule never to send a mouse to catch a skunk or a pollywog to tackle a whale.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Remark, to D. D. Porter. (c. 1861)

3 Him you cannot control by fair means, you must restrain by foul. (Quem bono tenere non potueris, contineas malo.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 605. (c. 43 B. C.)

Foul is fair when it guards against danger. (Bona turpitudine est quae periculum vindicat.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 89.

By good means and bad. (Per fas et nefas.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 323.

(1869) "By fair means or foul," "By hook or crook," "Either by might or sleight."

END JUSTIFIES MEANS, see under END.

MEASURE

4 Her corn stands not long for the sellers sake, and she crosses the proverb, for shee measures it out by anothers bushell.

SALTONSTALL, Picturae Loquentes, sig. F1. (1631)

We shall know nothing but what is measur'd to us by their bushell.

MILTON, Areopagitica (Arber), p. 72. (1644)

You measure every ones corn by your own bushell.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 186. (1670)

Pray do not measure my corn with your bushell.

JOHN GAY, The Wife of Bath. Act i. (1713)

You measure my corn by your bushell.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

"You measure me a peck out of your own bushell"; you judge of my disposition by your own.

CARR, Dialect of Craven, i, 58. (1828)

The student of history must avoid that error which the proverb calls measuring other people's corn by one's own bushell.

E. B. TYLOR, Anthropology, p. 410. (1881)

5 Mesure youre selfe by youre owne fote.

RICHARD TAVERNER, tr., Erasmus' Apophthegms, fo. 60. (1539)

Did not Gyges cut Candaules a coat by hys owne measure?

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 63. (1579)

They measure conscience by their owne yard.

JOHN LYLY (?), Pappe with an Halchet: To the Reader. (1589)

He measures another man's foot by his own last.

RICHARD BERNARD, tr., Terence, p. 70. (1598)

You measure every one by your own yard.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 12. (1659)

To measure his cloth by another's yard.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 260. (1678)

To measure your neighbour's cloth by your own yard.

CHARLOTTE S. BURNE, Shropshire Folk-Lore, p. 597. (1883)

6 That mesure louethe, and skille, ofte hath his wille.

UNKNOWN, How the Good Wiif Taughte Hir Doughtir, l. 55. (c. 1460)

MEASURE IN ALL THINGS, see under MODERATION.

MEASURE FOR MEASURE, see under RETRIBUTION.

MEASURES

7 I have opposed measures, not men.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letter, 6 March, 1742;

EARL OF SHELburne, Letter, 11 July, 1765.

Measures, not men, have always been my mark.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, The Good-Natured Man.

Act ii, sc. 1. (1768)

Measures, and not men, is the common cant of affected moderation: a base counterfeit language, fabricated by knaves, and made current among fools.

JUNIUS, Letters. Let. xxvi, note. (1769)

Of this stamp is the cant of "Not men, but measures"; a sort of charm by which many people get loose from every honourable engagement.

EDMUND BURKE, Thoughts on the Cause of the Present Discontents. (1770)

Away with the cant of "Measures, not men!"—the idle supposition that it is the harness and not the horses that draw the chariot along.

GEORGE CANNING, Speech, against the Adding-ton Ministry, 1801.

It is necessary that I should qualify the doctrine of its being not men, but measures, that I am determined to support. In a monarchy is it the duty of parliament to look at the men as well as at the measures.

LORD BROUGHAM, Speech, House of Commons. Nov., 1830.

It used to be an applauded political maxim. "Measures, not men." I venture to denounce the soundness of this maxim, and to propose "Men, not measures." . . . Better a hundred times an honest administration of an erroneous policy than a corrupt administration of a good one.

E. J. PHELPS, Address, at dinner N.Y. Chamber of Commerce, 19 Nov., 1889.

MEAT

See also Beef, Flesh, Food

8 Multa fercula, multos morbos,—Many dishes, many diseases.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons (1861), ii, 28. (1629)

Much meat much malady.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 98. (1639)

Cited by RAY, Proverbs, p. 120, and FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 3483.

Queen Elizabeth . . . knew, that much meat, much malady.

JOHN TRAPP, Mellificium Theologicum, p. 614. (1647) See also under GLUTTONY.

1 Here is a table, here is the meat, and here is a knife, but we have no mouth wherewith to eat.

Babylonian Talmud: Kiddushin, fo. 46b. (c. 450) Man is too stupid to benefit from the good things offered him.

2 Every meat doth the throat eat, yet is one meat better than another.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xxxvi, 18. (c. 190 B. C.) Oesterley, tr.

3 You cannot fare well but you must cry roast meat.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 336. (1605)

Cannot you fare well, but you must cry roast meat?

BEAUMONT and FLETCHER, The Scornful Lady.

Act v, sc. 1. (c. 1612) WYCHERLEY, Gentleman Dancing-Master. Act i, sc. 2. (1673)

You can't fare well, but you must cry roast-meat. Sasse bonne farine sans trompe ni buccine. Bolt thy fine meal, and eat good paste, without report or trumpet's blast. They that are thirsty drink silently.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 88. (1670)

The foolish beast, not able to fare well but he must cry roast meat.

CHARLES LAMB, Essays of Elia: Christ's Hospital. (1820)

To cry roast meat. (1) to make known one's good luck. (2) to boast of women's favours.

G. F. NORTHALL, Folk Phrases, p. 27. (1894)

4 You are in your roast meat when others are in their sod.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 115. (1639)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 176. (1670)

You are in the Roast-meat, while we are in the Sod.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5849 (1732)

5 When meat is in anger is out.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 178. (1639)

Never be ashamed to eat your meat.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 269. Cited by RAY, English Proverbs, p. 57 (1670), with the comment, "Some there are who are very troublesome at table, expecting to be often invited to eat."

6 Some people have food, but no appetite; others have appetite, but no food; I have both. The Lord be praised!

OLIVER CROMWELL, attr., Grace. (a. 1650)

Some have meat but cannot eat;

Some could eat but have no meat;

We have meat and can all eat;

Blest, therefore, be God for our meat.

UNKNOWN, The Selkirk Grace. (c. 1650)

Some hae meat and canna eat,

And some wad eat that want it;

But we hae meat and we can eat,
And sae the Lord be thankit.

ROBERT BURNS, The Selkirk Grace. (c. 1787)

7 If the meat is done to tatters, look for it in the gravy. (Jou lan liao tsai kuo li.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 676. (1872)

8 Meat and masse never hindred no man.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 78. (c. 1595)

Meat and mattens hinder no man's journey.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 273. (1639)

Cited by RAY, English Proverbs, p. 120 (1670) with the explanation, "In other words, prayers and provender."

Meat and Mattins hinder not a Journey.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3382. (1732)

What the deevil are ye in sic a hurry for? Meat and mass never hindered wark.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 19. (1818)

Meat and mass never hindered the work of a good Christian man.

SCOTT, Quentin Durward. Ch. 11. (1823)

Meal and matins minish no way.

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 21. (1853)

I beg to remind you of an old musty saw, that meat and mass never hindered man.

R. L. STEVENSON, Catriona. Ch. 19. (1893) See also under PRAYER: PRAYERS AND PROVENDER

9 It ys meate and drinke to this childe to plae

JOHN FRITH, A Boke Answering unto Mr Mores Letter, sig. Ej. (1533)

Sutch matter . . . as would be meat and drink to M. Proctor.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Letter-Book, p. 51. (1573)

It was meat and drink to me.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, v, 1, 11. (1600)

Even fasting itself is meat and drink to him. whilst others behold it.

THOMAS FULLER, The Profane State: The Hypocrite. (1642)

To find its meaning is my meat and drink.

ROBERT BROWNING, Fra Lippo Lippi, l. 315. (1855)

Meat and drink; esp., (something) is meat and drink to (someone), is a source of much enjoyment to him. (Meat, i. e., food.)

PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés (1941)

10 The fynest meates and dringes that can be made by art,

In sickly folkes too nourishment of sickness doo convert.

ARTHUR GOLDING, tr., Metamorphoses: Preface (1565)

[Sinorix] freely fed his eyes on that meat which converted rather to nourishment of sickness, than to wholesome humours of health.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 15. (1576)

11 That meate is unpleasant in taste, which smelleth of the smoake.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 101. (1574) Pettie, tr.

1 Meat fried 'fo' day won't las' twel night.
JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS, Uncle Remus: Plantation Proverbs. (1880)

2 Those studies and practizes, that carrie, as they saye, meate in their mouth.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Works (Grosart), i, 92. (1580)

"To carry meat in the mouth" means to bring in money, to be a source of profit.

The oldest lecher was as welcom as the youngest louter, so he brogt meate in his mouth.

ROBERT GREENE, A Disputation Between a Hee and a Shee Conny-catcher. Works (Grosart), x, 269. (1592)

A gentleman of so pleasing and ridiculous a carriage, as, euen standing, carries meat in the mouth.

BEN JONSON, Cynthia's Revels. Act v, sc. 4. (1599)

It brings meat i' the mouth.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 43. (1639)

To bring meat in its mouth.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 186. (1670)

3 Strong meat belongeth to them that are of full age. (τελειων δὲ ἔστιν ἡ στερεὰ τροφή.)

New Testament: Hebrews, v, 14. (c. A. D. 90)

The Vulgate is, "Perfectorum autem est solidus cibus."

His style! . . . Strong meat, too tough for babes.

CARLYLE, Miscellanies: Mirabeau. (1837)

4 Sweete meate will haue sowre sawce.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 8. (1546)

See under SWEET AND SOUR.

5 The greatestest crabs be not all the best meate.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

All meates to be eaten, and all maides to be wed.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 2.

A peece of a kyd is woorth two of a cat.

Who the diuell will chaunge a rabet for a rat?

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7.

Tripe's good meat if it be well wiped.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 50. (1678)

6 The wholesomest meat is at another man's cost.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 19. (1659)

RAY, Proverbs, p. 1. (1670)

It is good Beef that costs nothing.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2935. (1732)

7 All things meate in the mouth.

THOMAS LODGE, An Alarum Against Usurers, p. 46. (1584)

All meat pleaseth not all mouths.

WILLIAM ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis, p. 597. (1681)

All Meat is not the same in every Man's Mouth.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 535. (1732)

ONE MAN'S MEAT ANOTHER MAN'S POISON, see under POISON.

8 Meat is the thing, if you want to be fat. (Carne opus est, si satur esse velis.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xiii, epig. 2. (c. A. D. 85)

9 I am no dish for the village. (Non ego sum pollucta pago.)

PLAUTUS, Rudens, l. 424. (c. 200 B. C.)

Lais an harlot of Corinth, . . . so dere & costely that she was no morsell for mowers.

NICOLAS UDALL, tr., Erasmus' Apophthegms, p. 342. (1542)

Away, you mouldy rogue, away! I am meat for your master.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, ii, 4, 134. (1598)

It is not for your mowing.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 101. (1616)

I am no meat for his mowing [mouthing], nor yours neither.

WILLIAM HAUGHTON, English-Men for My Money. Act ii, sc. 1. (1616)

No meat for mowers.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 72. (1639)

Let my doxy rest in peace, she's meat for thy master.

THOMAS OTWAY, The Souldier's Fortune. Act ii, sc. 1. (1681)

Colonel: Let's kiss and be friends. Miss: Hands off! that's meat for your master.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738) Repeated in Dial. iii.

My lady is meat for no pretenders.

FIELDING, Tom Jones. Bk. xi, ch. 8. (1749)

That you can't have, for it's meat for your masters.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, Westward Ho! Ch. 8. (1855)

He was wholly unsuspecting of her design, imagining her to be meat for his masters.

JAMES PAYN, Halves. Ch. 1. (1876)

Come along—you're my meat now.

MARK TWAIN, Innocents at Home. Ch. 3. (1882)

10 Quick at meat, quick at work. Slow at meat, slow at work.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, pp. 127, 256.

(1678) The Germans say, "Hurtig zur Ambiss, hurtig zum Arbeit."

11 He loves roast meat well that licks the spit.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 137. (1670)

If they are fond of roast beef, they must needs suck the spit.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Pictures, p. 73. (1880)

12 Poor Bill Brent! them Spaniards made meat of him.

G. F. RUXTON, Life in the Far West, p. 4. (a. 1848)

13 Meat was made for mouths.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act i, sc. 1, l. 211. (1607)

Miserable distribution of Mankind, where one halfe lackes meat, and the other stomacke.

JOHN DONNE, Devotions: Actio Laesa. (1624)

The Italians say, "Chi ha denti, non ha pane; e chi ha pane, non ha denti" (He who has teeth has no bread; he that has bread has no teeth).

NO MOUTH WITHOUT MEAT, see under MOUTH.

<sup>1</sup> His motto was, "Meat first, and spoon vittles to top off on."

MARK TWAIN, Huckleberry Finn. Ch. 21. (1884)

<sup>2</sup> Wel is set the mete thu etes.

UNKNOWN, Havelok the Dane, l. 907. (c. 1300)

Well is bestowed the meat he eats.

A man is not sure of his meat till it is in his mouth.

UNKNOWN, The Great Frost, p. 14. (1684)

Cited as an old proverb. MANY A SLIP, see under SLIP.

Meat must be had, but work may stay.

Poor Robin's Almanack, sig. C8. (1687) Cited as an "ancient proverb."

If 'twasn't for meat and good drink the women might gnaw the sheete.

UNKNOWN, Terence Made English, p. 96. (1698)

Cited as "the old saying."

MEDAL

<sup>3</sup> Every medal has its reverse. (Ogni medaglia ha il suo rovescio.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, sc. 11. (1595)

Quoting an Italian proverb. The French is, "Chaque médaille a son revers." Florio, in his translation of Montaigne, renders it, "Each outside hath its inside."

It is a comfort that the medal has two sides. There is much vice and misery in the world I know; but more virtue and happiness, I believe.

JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xii, p. 379. (c. 1800)

Happily, there is a reverse to the medal.

CHARLES LEVER, Jack Hinton. Ch. 2. (1842)

That there is a rude reverse to the East African medal . . . cannot be disputed.

WINSTON CHURCHILL, African Journal. Ch. 3. (1908)

<sup>4</sup> A leather medal his reward should be,

A leather medal and an LL.D.

UNKNOWN, Harvardiana, iii, 147.

MEDDLER

<sup>5</sup> Putting a sickle into a neighbor's corn. (τάλλοτριον ἀμῶν θέρος.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Knights, l. 392. (424 B. C.)

Not presuming to put my sickle in another man's corn.

NICHOLAS YONGE, Musica Transalpina: Epistle Dedicatory. (1588)

Did thrust (as now) in others' corn his sickle.

JOSHUA SYLVESTER, tr., Devine Weekes and Workes. Wk. ii, day 2. (c. 1591)

<sup>6</sup> A river which waters the distance, but leaves the vicinity unwatered. (ποταμός τὰ πόρρω ποτίζων, τὰ δ' ἔγγιον καταλείπει.)

DIOGENIANUS, Adagia. (c. A. D. 125) As cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, i, 43, who gives the Latin, "Fluvius quae procul absunt irrigat," and explains that the proverb applies to people who concern themselves with the affairs of other people and neglect their own.

Neither eyes, nor handes in other mens writings or purses. (Ne occhi in lettera, ni mani in tasca d'altrui.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 33. (1578)

Meddle with what you have to do.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 18. (1639)

Not the least of life's rules is to let things alone. (Ni es la peor regla del vivir el dejar estar.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 121. (1647)

In ecche mannes bote would he haue an ore.

NICOLAS UDALL, tr., Erasmus' Apophthegms, ii, 180. (1542) See under OAR.

A busie-body hath his hand in every dish.

COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Aliboron. (1611)

A FINGER IN EVERY PIE, see under FINGER

<sup>7</sup> To meddle in too many things is not a safe course in life. (τὸ πολλὰ πράσσειν οὐκ ἐν ἀσφαλείῃ βίον.)

EURIPIDES, Hippolytus, l. 785. (c. 428 B. C.)

He that meddeth with strife not belonging unto him is like one that taketh a dog by the eares.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: The Wise Statesman. (1642)

<sup>8</sup> Little intrometting maks good freinds.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 71. (c. 1595)

Little intermeddling makes fair parting.

KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 233. (1721)

<sup>9</sup> Medlers are the Devil's Body-Lice; they fetch Blood from those that feed them.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3385. (1732)

<sup>10</sup> It is not enough for a careful man not to meddle with others, he must see that they do not meddle with him. (No basta para atento no ser entremetido, mas es menester procurar que no le entremetan.)

GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 33. (1647)

<sup>11</sup> Stirring something that should not be stirred (κινήσονται τι τῶν ἀκινήτων.)

HERODOTUS, History. Bk. vi, ch. 134. (c. 445 B. C.)

<sup>12</sup> To fight only for Helen. (οἶους ἀμφ' Ἑλένη μάχεσθαι.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. iii, l. 91. (c. 850 B. C.) From which the Latin proverb, "Don't go to war on another's business" (Ne depugnes in alieno negotio), as cited by ERASMUS, Adagia iii, viii, 75. The folly of meddling in the affairs of other people is pointed out in several Greek proverbs: Plutarch's "Setting foot in another's dance" (ἐν ἀλλοτρίῳ χορῷ ποδὰ τίθεσθαι), which ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, ii, 51. Latins, "In alieno choro pedem ponere"; and Socrates' "Things above us are no concern of ours" (τὰ ὑπὲρ ἡμῶς οὐδὲν πρὸς ἡμῶς), which ERASMUS, Adagia, i, vi, 69, puts very simply, "Quae supra nos, nihil ad nos." DIOGENIANUS, Adagia, vii, 9, sums it up, "It's not my affair, thank goodness" (οὐκ ἐστ' ἐμὸν τὸ πράγμα, πολλὰ γαίρετω), which ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, x, 4, Latins, "Non est meum negocium, multum valeat."

1 Burn not thy fingers to snuff another man's candle.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs. (1659)

2 Nay, he will not meddle with his match.

BEN JONSON, Every Man in His Humour. Act iii, sc. 2. (1598)

We meddle not with our match, when we strive with our Maker.

BISHOP JOSEPH HALL, Contemplations. Bk. vi, ch. 2. (1612)

Meddle with your match. Spoken by people of age, when young people jest upon them too wantonly: or by weak people, when insulted by the more strong and robust.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 246. (1721)

You are too severe; you would not meddle with your match.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii. (1738)

3 He who meddles with quarrels, gets the red-ding stroke.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 159. (1721)

A redder is one who interferes in a quarrel and attempts to settle it.

He that meddles with toolies [quarrels] comes in for the redding streak.

ALLAN RAMSAY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 45. (1737)

The redder gets aye the worst lick in the fray

WALTER SCOTT, Old Mortality. Ch. 4. (1816)

The Earl of Crawford was mortally wounded—'got the redder's stroke'—in an attempt to stop the fighting.

LANG, History of Scotland, i, 325. (1900)

4 A race [of busybodies] hurtful to itself and most hateful to all others. (Sibi molesta, et aliis odiosissima.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. ii, fab. 5, l. 3. (c. 25 B. C.)

5 Every fool will be meddling. (Omnes autem stulti miscentur.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xx, 3. (c. 250 B. C.)

See under FOOL.

Ye medle of al thyng, ye moot shoo the goos.

THOMAS HOCCEVE, Minor Poems, p. 13. (c. 1410) See under GOOSE.

6 In vain you told her not to touch,
Her trick of meddling grew so much.

ANN AND JANE TAYLOR, Meddlesome Matty. (1805) From which "Meddlesome Matty" passed into the language.

A kind of international Meddlesome Matty. Times (London). 17 Aug., 1927, p. 11/5. Referring to the League of Nations.

7 I will neither make [interfere] nor medle with her.

UNKNOWN, Child-Marriages in the Diocese of Chester, p. 123. (1564)

In speech you neither meddle nor make with him.

THOMAS NASHE, Works, iv, 151. (1593)

The less you meddle or make . . . the more is for your honesty.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado about Nothing, iii, 3,

55. (1598) See also Merry Wives of Windsor, i, 4, 114; Troilus and Cressida, i, 1, 14; i, 1, 85; PEPYS, Diary, 7 Nov. 1661; BRONTË, Shirley. Ch. 21, etc., etc.

Quoth the young Cock, I'll neither meddle nor make. When he saw the old cock's neck wrung off, for taking part with the master, and the old hen's, for taking part with the dame.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 68. (1678)

I will neither meddle nor make, said Bill Heaps, when he spilled the buttermilk.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 260. (1678)

8 What, are you his spokesman? meddle with your old showes.

UNKNOWN, Misogonus. Act ii, sc. 5. (1577)

Meddle with your old shoes.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 186. (1670)

Meddle with your old shoes; Tuâ quod nihil refert, ne cures (Don't meddle with what doesn't concern you).

ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis, 877. (1681)

9 Lytyll medlyng makythe mych rest.

UNKNOWN, Prouerbis of Wysdom, p. 128. (c. 1450)

To meddle little for me it is beste,
For of little medlyng cometh great reste.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 2. (1546)

In lytle medlynge lyeth greate ease.

RICHARD TAVERNER, tr., Erasmus' Apophthegms, fo. 57. (1550)

Of little medling cometh great ease.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 9. (1659)

D'URFEX, Quixote. Pt. i, act ii, sc. 2. (1694)

MEDICINE

See also Disease, Doctors, Remedy

10 Aristotle him selfe sayeth, that medicines be no meate to lyue withall.

ROGER ASCHAM, Toxophilus, p. 50. (1545)

Medicines be not meat to live by.

UNKNOWN, Politeuphuia, p. 175. (1669)

11 The Lord hath created medicines out of the earth . . . with such doth he heal men. (Κύριος ἐκτίσεν ἐκ γῆς φάρμακα.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xxxviii, 4, 7. (c. 190 B. C.) Quoted Midrash Rabbah, Genesis viii; Midr. Yalkut, Job, sec. 501.

Why should a man die who has sage in his garden? (Cur moriatur homo, cui salvia crescit in horto?)

UNKNOWN, Regimen Sanitatis Salerni, l. 177. (c. 1100) THOMAS COGAN, in his Haven of Health (1596), says, "Of all the garden herbs, none is of greater virtue than sage."

Where is that precious herbe Panace which cureth all diseases? Or that herbe Nepenthes that procureth all delights.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 425. (1580)

O, mickle is the powerful grace that lies

In herbs, plants, stones, and their true qualities.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, ii, 3, 15. (1595)

Learn from the beasts the physic of the field.

POPE, An Essay on Man. Epis. iii, l. 174. (1732)

1 Medicine: A stone flung down the Bowery to kill a dog in Broadway.

AMBROSE BIERCE, The Devil's Dictionary. (1906)

2 According with kitchen phisicke: whiche kitchen, I assure thee, is a good Poticaries shop.

WILLIAM BULLEIN, Bulwarke of Defence against all Sicknesse, p. 48. (1562)

Good kitchen-physick is the best.

Roxburghe Ballads (B.S.), vii, 238. (c. 1670)

Kitchen physic is the best physic.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

3 We must bear with the medicine because it is useful.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 742. (1817)

4 Medicine is my invention, said Apollo: and what was Apollo but the Devil?

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. ii, sec. iv, mem. 1, subs. 1. (1621)

5 God who sends the wound sends the medicine. (Dios que dá la llaga, dá la medicina.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 19. (1615)

A SALVE FOR EVERY SORE, see under SALVE.

6 Far-wel, phisyk: go ber the man to chirche.

CHAUCEER, Canterbury Tales: The Knights Tale, l. 1902. (c. 1386)

If physic do not work, prepare for the kirk.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 189. (1768)

7 Because all the sick do not recover does not prove that there is no art of medicine. (Ne aegri quidem quia non omnes convalescunt idcirco ars nulla medicina est.)

CICERO, De Natura Deorum. Bk. ii, ch. 4, sec. 12. (45 B. C.)

No med'cine, though it often cure,

Can always balk the tomb.

COWPER, The Yearly Bill of Mortality. (1787)

8 When taken To be well shaken.

GEORGE COLMAN THE YOUNGER, Newcastle Apothecary. (a. 1836)

9 Good medicine always tastes bitter.

CONFUCIUS, Aphorisms. (c. 500 B. C.) See TEHYI HSIEH, Confucius Said It First, p. 87.

Of has a bitter medicine brought help to the languishing. (Saepe tulit lassus sucus amarus opem.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. iii, eleg. 11, l. 8. (c. 13 B. C.) A bitter potion strengthens us. (Succo renovemur amaro.)

OVID, Artis Amatoria. Bk. iii, l. 583. (c. 1 B. C.) The medicine, the more bitter it is, the more better it is in working.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), l. 114. (1579) 'Tis a physic That's bitter to sweet end.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, iv, 6, 8. (1604)

10 "He snubbed me," . . . explained Miss De Voe, smiling slightly at the thought of treating Peter to a dose of his own medicine.

PAUL LEICESTER FORD, The Honorable Peter Stirling, p. 150. (1896)

It was only fair for them to get a taste of their own medicine.

VIRGINIA PERDUE, The Singing Clock. Ch. 8. (1941)

11 By opposites opposites are cured. (τὰ ἐναντία τῶν ἐναντιῶν ἐστὶν ἴψματα.)

HIPPOCRATES, De Flatibus. Bk. i, sec. 570. (c. 400 B. C.)

In diseases, less [of everything]. (In morbis minus.)

FRANCIS BACON, quoting a maxim of Hippocrates, which he calls "a good, profound aphorism." See under DISEASE.

A little food taken again and again

Will enable the sick new health to attain.

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1599. (1875)

12 Many a drug that was good and many a bad one. (φάρμακα πολλὰ μὲν ἐσθλὰ μειγμένα πολλὰ δὲ λυγρά.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. iv, l. 230. (c. 850 B. C.)

Homer is speaking of Polydama, the wife of Thon, the Egyptian. He adds that in Egypt every man is a physician.

The same medicine will both harm and cure me (Res eadem vulnus opemque feret.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. ii, l. 20. (c. A. D. 9)

Medicine sometimes injures, sometime restores health. (Eripit interdum, modo dat medicina salutem.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. ii, l. 269.

Some medicyne is for Peter that is not good for Poule.

LANFRANC, Science of Ciruegie. (c. 1400)

The worst about medicine is that one kind makes another necessary.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Philistine, xxvii, 61. (1906)

13 You cannot find a medicine for life once a man is dead. (οὐκ ἔστιν ἀποφθιμένως ζωᾷ ἐν φάρμακον εὖρεῖν.)

IBYCUS. Frag. 28. (c. 535 B. C.) Quoted by CHRYSIPPUS, Negatives, 14. See EDMONDS, Lyra Graeca, ii, 99. Cited by Quintilian, who gives the Latin, "Medicina mortuorum sera est" (Medicine for the dead is too late)

AFTER DEATH THE DOCTOR, see under DOCTOR

NO MEDICINE AGAINST DEATH, see under REMEDY

14 The art of medicine is a question of timeliness. (Temporis ars medicina fere est.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 131. (c. 1 B. C.)

15 Trying to expel wine with wine and headache with headache. (ὡς οἶνῳ δὴ τὸν οἶνον κραιπάλην δὲ τὴν κραιπάλην.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: On Keeping Well, 127F. (c. A. D. 80) Plutarch may have had in mind the proverb found in POLLUX, ix, 120 (Kock, iii, 500), "Driving out nail with nail and peg with peg." Slightly different versions may be found in LEUTSCH AND SCHNEIDWIN, ii, 116, 171. See also under NAIL.

Pierced by Achilles lance must be healed by his spear.

ROBERT GREENE, Orpharion. Works, xii, 9. (1589) See under ACHILLES.

Like cures like. (Similia similibus curantur.)

SAMUEL CHRISTIAN FRIEDRICH HAHNEMANN, Motto, for the homoeopathic school of medicine which he founded, c. 1796. He attributed it to Hippocrates, quoting, "By similar things disease is produced, and by similar things administered to the sick, they are healed of their diseases," a paraphrase of Hippocrates' περί τούτων τῶν κατ' ἀνθρώπων.

On the homoeopathic principle of "like cures like," a cigar was the best preventative against smoke.

CUTHBERT BEDE, Verdant Green. Ch. 8. (1853)

Nothing hinders a cure so much as frequent change of medicine. (Nihil aequè sanitatem impedit quam remedium crebra mutatio.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. ii, sec. 3. (c. A. D. 64) Many medicines, few cures.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734.

It is part of the cure to wish to be cured. (Pars sanitatis velle sanari fuit.)

SENECA, Hippolytus, l. 249. (c. A. D. 60)

Our remedies oft in ourselves do lie,
Which we ascribe to heaven.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, i, 1, 231. (1602)

Where the medicine is foul, healing is loathsome. (Ubi turpis est medicina, sanari piget.)

SENECA, Oedipus, l. 517. (c. A. D. 60)

I find the medicine worse than the malady.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Lovers' Progress, Act iii, sc. 2.

REMEDY WORSE THAN DISEASE, see under REMEDY.

A medicine . . . able to breathe life into a stone.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, ii, l. 76. (1600)

Out, loathed medicine! hated potion, hence!

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream, iii, 2, 264. (1596)

Throw physic to the dogs; I'll none of it.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, v, 3, 47. (1606)

He shuns Apothecary's Shops;

And hates to cram the Sick with Slops.

SWIFT, The Beasts' Confession, l. 133. (1732)

The more he fancieth his metson, the better it shall proue with him.

THOMAS STAPLETON, A Fortresse of the Faith, fo. 110b. (1565)

There are sure to be two prescriptions diametrically opposite. Stuff a cold and starve a cold are but two ways.

H. D. THOREAU, A Week on the Concord and

Merrimack Rivers: Wednesday. (1849) He adds, "Nothing more strikingly betrays the credulity of mankind than medicine."

If medicine do not raise a disturbance in the patient, it will not cure his disease.

UNKNOWN, Book of History. (c. 1000 B. C.)
Quoted by MENCIVS, iii, i, 1.

I took my medicine like a man.

UNKNOWN, Congressional Record, 7 Jan., 1896, p. 512/1.

Let them take their medicine like men.

W. H. SMITH, The Promoters, p. 224. (1904)
He'll have to take his medicine.

IONE SHRIBER, A Body for Bill, p. 43. (1942)

Who lives by medicine lives miserably. (Qui medicæ vivit misere vivit.)

UNKNOWN, A Medieval Latin proverb.

He that liveth by physicke liveth miserably.

THOMAS COGAN, The Haven of Health: Epistle Dedicatory. (1588) Quoted as "a common saying." See under HEALTH.

He takes physic before he is sick.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 283. (1639)

MEDIOCRITY

Who, like the hindmost chariot wheels, art curst,

Still to be near, but ne'er to reach the first

DRYDEN, tr., Persius. Sat. v, l. 98. (1693)

Who shines in the second rank is eclipsed in the first. (Qui brille au second rang, s'éclipse au premier.)

VOLTAIRE, La Henriade. Canto i, l. 31. (1716)

There's no such hell on earth as that of the man who knows himself doomed to mediocrity in the work he loves.

PHILIP BARRY, You and I. Act i. (1923)

This world is a republic of the mediocrities.

CARLYLE, Letter to Emerson, 13 May, 1853

The universal subjugator, the commonplace. (Was uns alle bändigt, das Gemeine.)

GOETHE, Taschenbuch für Damen auf das Jahr 1806.

Mediocrity obtains more with application than superiority without it. (Más consigue una medianía con aplicación que una superioridad sin ella.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Órdculo Manual. Maxim 18. (1647)

The common Opinion that Virtue consisteth in Mediocrity and Vice in Extrems.

THOMAS HOBBS, De Corpore Politico, p. 41. (1650)

Mediocre minds generally condemn everything which passes their understanding. (Les esprits médiocres condamnent d'ordinaire tout ce qui passe leur portée.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 375. (1665)

<sup>1</sup> The golden mediocrity, the meane estate is to be desired.

SIR THOMAS MORE, tr., The Lyfe of Jhon Picus. (c. 1510)

Was ever Riches gotten by your Golden Mediocrities?

ABRAHAM COWLEY, A Vision Concerning . . . Cromwell the Wicked. (1661)

<sup>2</sup> Of all the orders in the State, I find the middle rank flourishes with a more enduring prosperity. (τῶν γὰρ ἂμ πόλιν εὐπλοκῶν τὰ μέσα μακροτέρῳ | διαβῶ τεθαλότα.)

PINDAR, Pythian Odes. No. xi, l. 52. (474 B.C.) Mediocrity is safest. (In medio spatio mediocritia firma locantur.)

SIR NICHOLAS BACON, Aphorism. (c. 1570) As quoted by Chief-Justice Sir John Popham, in sentencing Sir Walter Raleigh in 1618.

<sup>3</sup> Mediocrity adds two to two and gets only four. ANONYMOUS, Meditations in Wall Street, p. 22. (1940)

MEDITATION

See also Thought

<sup>4</sup> Meditation is a mirror which reveals to you your virtues and your vices.

ATTAR, Tadhkirat Al-Awlika. (c. 1200)

He that contemplates hath a day without night. HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 603. (1640)

<sup>5</sup> And the imperial votaress passed on, In maiden meditation, fancy-free.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream, ii, 1, 163. (1596)

MEDUSA

<sup>6</sup> So . . . wrought the grisly aspect Of terrible Medusa, . . .

When wandering through the woods she frown'd to stone

Their savage tenants.

JOHN ARMSTRONG, Imitations of Shakespeare. (1726)

When I introduced theological topics, . . . my "Medusa's head" petrified the company.

LESLIE STEPIEN, Letter. (1900) See MAITLAND, Life, ix, 150.

The fresh young face will become the Medusa's head.

SIR FREDERICK TREVES, The Cradle of the Deep, iii, 14. (1908)

MEEKNESS

<sup>7</sup> Meekness takes injuries like pills, not chewing, but swallowing them down.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt. iii, sec. 12. (1682)

<sup>8</sup> As meke as ever was any lamb.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Second Nonnes Tale, l. 199. (c. 1389)

As a lamb she sitteth meke and stille.

CHAUCER, The Clerkes Tale, l. 482. The French say, "C'est bien le brebis du bon Dieu."

As meke as is a mayde.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 69.

Lyk a maiden meke for to see.

CHAUCER, The Milleres Tale, l. 16.

In tym of pes, mek as a maid was he.

HENRY THE MINSTREL, Schir William Wallace. Bk. ix, l. 1937. (c. 1470)

I really am the meekest of men since Moses.

LORD BYRON, Letter to Thomas Moore, 8 March, 1822. See under MOSES.

Lucy is just as meek as a mouse.

OGDEN NASH, Lucy Lake. (1933)

<sup>9</sup> He who loves life must practice meekness.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Peninim (Choice of Pearls). No. 501. (c. 1050)

<sup>10</sup> The meek shall inherit the earth. (Mansueti autem hereditabunt terram.)

Old Testament: Psalms, xxxvii, 11. (c. 250 B.C.)

Blessed are the meek: for they shall inherit the earth. (μακάριοι οἱ πραεῖς, οἳ αὐτοὶ κληρονομήσουσι τὴν γῆν.)

New Testament: Matthew, v, 5. (c. A.D. 50)

The Vulgate is, "Beati mites: quoniam ipsi possidebunt terram." The French translate the line, "Heureux les débonnaires."

Blessed are the Meek for they shall inherit the Dearth.

J. B. OPDYKE, Amor Vitaque: Omargrams. (1912)

The meek shall disinherit the earth.

HORACE GREGORY, Chorus for Survival. Pt. xiii. (1935)

MEETING

See also Parting

<sup>11</sup> If e'er we meet hereafter, we shall meet

In happier climes, and on a safer shore.

ADDISON, Cato. Act iv, sc. 4. (1712)

Farewell, brother, till we meet in the sweet by-and-by.

SHAW, Androcles and the Lion. Act ii. (1912)

<sup>12</sup> A hasty meeting, a hasty parting.

NATHAN BAILEY, Dictionary: Woo. (1736)

<sup>13</sup> Mr. Winkle, I presume?

DICKENS, The Pickwick Papers. Ch. 2. (1837)

This is General Lee, I presume?

The spokesman of a woman's committee of welcome, to Gen. R. E. Lee, when he entered Maryland at the head of his army, 25 June, 1863.

Doctor Livingstone, I presume?

HENRY M. STANLEY to David Livingstone, when he found the latter in the heart of the African jungle, 10 Nov., 1871. See New York Herald, 2 July, 1872.

<sup>14</sup> How are you? How goes it? (Quid agis? Quid fit?)

PLAUTUS, Mercator, l. 283. (c. 200 B.C.)

In whatever place you meet me, Postumus, you cry out immediately, and your first words are, "How do you do?" (Quid agis?)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. ii, ep. 67. (A.D. 85)

<sup>1</sup> I pray you know me when we meet again.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, iv, 1, 419. (1597)

When shall we three meet again?

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, i, 1, 1. (1606)

<sup>2</sup> Why should we not meet, not always as dyspeptics, but sometimes as eueptics?

H. D. THOREAU, Autumn, 10 Nov., 1851.

<sup>3</sup> A petre powle good daye & wele imett.

UNKNOWN, The Play of the Sacrament, l. 237. (c. 1460)

What, wanton, wanton, nowe well ymet!

JOHN SKELTON, Magnyfycence, l. 461. (1526)

Well met, well met, Master Antipholus.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors, iv, 3, 45. (1593)

You are happily met.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, iv, 4, 19. (1596)

MELANCHOLY

See also Dumps, Sorrow

<sup>4</sup> Black bile. (Atra bili.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. iii, ch. v, sec. 11. (45 B.C.) Cicero is defining the Greek μελαγχολία, and says that it is as if the mind were influenced by "black bile."

Malencoly is bred of trowbled draft of blode and hath his name of melon that is black and calor that is humour, so is said as it were a blak humour.

JOHN DE TREVISA, tr., De Proprietatibus Rerum. Bk. iv, ch. 9. (1398)

Melancholy, supposed to proceed from a Redundance of black Bile.

JOHN QUINCY, Lexicon Phisico-Medicum. (1722) Melancholy is a kind of demon that haunts our island, and often conveys herself to us in an easterly wind.

ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 387. (1711)

<sup>5</sup> A sweet melancholie my sences keepes.

WILLIAM DRUMMOND, When as She Smiles. (1614)

O sweetest Melancholy!

JOHN FLETCHER, The Nice Valour. Act iii, sc. 3. (c. 1620) Written probably in conjunction with Thomas Middleton. This song has also been attributed to Dr. William Strode, and appears in his play The Floating Island. (1636)

Naught so sweet as melancholy.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy: The Author's Abstract. (1621)

Hail thou Goddess, sage and holy,

Hail divinest Melancholy.

MILTON, Il Penseroso, l. 12. (1632)

Wrapt in a pleasing fit of Melancholy.

MILTON, Comus. l. 546. (1634)

Melancholy is the pleasure of being sad. (La mélancolie c'est le bonheur d'être triste.)

VICTOR HUGO, Les Travailleurs de la Mer. Pt. iii, bk. i, ch. 1. (1866)

<sup>6</sup> He's a Fool, that is not melancholy once a Day.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2434. (1732)

<sup>7</sup> Melancholy mark'd him for her own.

THOMAS GRAY, Elegy Written in a Country Church-yard: The Epitaph. (1750)

<sup>8</sup> The melancholike, which have their wit so breeched, that they cannot discern sweete from sowre.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 19. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Melancholie followeth unreasonable and superfluous appetites.

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, iv, 165.

<sup>9</sup> I am as melancholy as a cat.

JOHN LYLY, Midas. Act v, sc. 2. (1592)

I am as melancholy as a gib cat.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, i, 2, 83. (1597)

Yonder he lies, and as melancholy as a cat in a church-steeple, expecting my return.

THOMAS D'URFEY, The Comical History of Don Quixote. Pt. ii, act i, sc. 1. (1694)

As melancholy as a gib cat; as melancholy as a he-cat who has been catterwauling, whence they always return scratched, hungry, and out of spirits.

FRANCIS GROSE, A Classical Dictionary of the Vulgar Tongue: Gib Cat. (1785)

As melancholy as a collier's horse.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 10. (1659)

As melancholy as a dog.

NASHE, Unfortunate Traveller, p. 16. (1594)

I am as melancholy . . . as the drone of a Lincolnshire bagpipe.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, i, 2, 85. (1597)

Lincolnshire bells and bag-pipes . . . are proverbially spoken of.

FYNES MORYSON, Itinerary, iii, 1. (1617)

As melancholy as a sick monkey.

MARRYAT, Mr. Midshipman Easy. Ch. 21. (1836)

As melancholy as a sick parrot.

APHRA BEHN, False Count. Bk. i, ch. 2. (1682)

As melancholy as an unbraced drum.

SUSANNAH CENTLIVRE, The Wonder. Act ii, sc. 1. (1714)

As dismal as a hearse.

MARK TWAIN, Tom Sawyer. Ch. 12. (1876)

MEMORY

See also Remembrance

<sup>10</sup> She that looks with the mind. (φρασιδορκον.)

ALCMAN, Fragments. Frag. 124. (c. 630 B.C.)

So Alcman calls memory, "for we view the past with the eye of the intellect." See EDMONDS, Lyra Graeca, i, 115.

Memory is the treasury of all things and their guardian. (Memoria est thesaurus omnium rerum et custos.)

CICERO, De Oratore. Bk. i, sc. 5. (55 B.C.)

Memory is for us the hearing of deeds to which we are deaf and the seeing of things to which we are blind. (ἡ δὲ μνήμη καὶ κωφῶν πραγμάτων ἀκοή καὶ τυφλῶν ὄψις ἡμῖν ἐστίν.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: Obsolescence of Oracles. Sec. 432B. (c. A. D. 95)

The memorie called the treasure of the minde.

WILSON, Arte of Rhetorique, p. 209. (1560)

They fayned in theer olde fables, memory to be the mother of perfection.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 145. (1579)

Memory, the warder of the brain.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, i, 7, 65. (1605)

Memory . . . is the treasure-house of the mind.

FULLER, The Holy State: Memory. (1642)

Method is the mother of memory.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies, p. 166. (a. 1661)

Storehouse of the mind, garner of facts and fancies.

M. F. TUPPER, Proverbial Philosophy: Of Memory, l. 1. (1838)

Memory is a woman. If I don't run after her, she will come of her own accord.

A. E. W. MASON, The House of the Arrow. Ch. 2. (1924)

Memory is the one paradise out of which we cannot be driven. (Les souvenirs sont le seul paradis duquel on ne peut pas nous chasser.)

SACHA GUITRY, Les Souvenirs. (1935)

<sup>1</sup> The palest ink is better than the most retentive memory.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 365. (1938) A Chinese proverb. A similar one, cited on p. 369, is, "A clever memory is not equal to a clumsy brush."

<sup>2</sup> Remember the prouerbe, Eate well of the cresses.

JOHN GRANGE, The Golden Aphroditis, sig. F3. (1577) Cress was supposed to help the memory.

<sup>3</sup> A good Memory is the best Monument.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: Of Tombs. (1642)

A good memory is often as ready a friend as a sharp wit.

DISRAELI, Vivian Grey. Bk. i, ch. 3. (1826)

<sup>4</sup> A man of a great memory without learning, hath a rock [distaff] and a spindle, and no staff to spin.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum No. 1083. (1650)

<sup>5</sup> Seynte Gregory . . . calle the Constantyne a man of goode memory.

RANULF HIGDEN, Polychronicon (Rolls), v, 139. (a. 1364)

The most famous Prince of blessed memorie.

Rolls of Parliament, vi, 288/2. (1485)

Our late Sovereigne, of most deare sacred and ever-glorious memorie.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 3. (1605)

His late Majesty of glorious memory.

LORD BRUDNELI, Buckleuch MSS., i, 313. (1660)

<sup>6</sup> The true art of memory is the art of attention

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Idler. No. 74. (1758)

Attention is the stuff that memory is made of.

LOWELL, Biglow Papers. Ser. ii, No. 9. (1862)

<sup>7</sup> Memory, of all the powers of the mind, is the most delicate and frail.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Memoria. (1636)

<sup>8</sup> Experience teaches that a good memory is usually joined to a weak judgment. (Il se veoid par experience, . . . que les memoires excellentes se joignent volontiers aux jugements debiles.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 9. (1580)

I should haue a verie good wit, for I haue but a bad memorie.

THOMAS MORLEY, An Introduction to Musicke, p. 5. (1597)

Everyone complains of his lack of memory, but nobody of his want of judgment. (Tout le monde se plaint de sa memoire, et personne ne se plaint de son jugement.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 89. (1669)

Good memories have ill judgments.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 119. (1721)

The French say, "Beaucoup de memoire, et peu de jugement" (Plenty of memory and little judgment).

A great memory does not make a philosopher, any more than a dictionary can be called a grammar

JOHN HENRY NEWMAN, Knowledge in Relation to Culture. (1852)

<sup>9</sup> O sweet essence, how good I should say were your former contents, when the remains of them smell so delicious! (O suavis anima, quale in te dicam bonum | ante hac fuisse; tales cum sint reliquiae!)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. iii, fab. 1, l. 5. (c. 25 B. C.) The ass is speaking to the wine-jar.

The jar will long retain the fragrance of what it was steeped in when new. (Quo semel est imbuta recens, servabit odorem | testa diu.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 2, l. 69. (20 B. C.)

Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, iv, 20, and included by TAVERNER, Translations from Erasmus, fo. 37 (1550) with the rendering, "A vessell wyl kepe longe the savour wherewith it is fyrste seasoned."

We are by nature most tenacious of childish impressions, just as the flavor first absorbed by vessels when new persists, and the color imparted by dyes to the virgin whiteness of wool is indelible. (Sapor, quo nova imbuas, durat.)

QUINTILIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae Bk. i, ch. i, sec. 5. (c. A. D. 80)

But fyll an erthen pot first with yll lycoure And euer after it shall smell somewhat soure.

ALEXANDER BARCLAY, Shyp of Folyes, i, 47. (1509)

Where children are brought up in wickedness, they will be wicked all their lives after.

"The earthen pot will long savour of that liquor that is first put into it."

HUGH LATIMER, Seventh Sermon before Edward VI (1552)

The vessel will conserve the tast Of lycour very long, With which it was first seasoned.

JOHN NORTHBROOKE, Against Dicing. (c. 1577)
It is pretely sayd of Horace, a newe vessel will long time sauour of that liquor that is first powred into it, and the infant will euer smel of the nurses manners hauing tasted of hir milke.

JOHN LVLV, Euphues (Arber), p. 129. (1579)
The cask gives of that it has in it.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, p. 141. (1591)
Vessels ever retain a flavour of their first liquor.

RALEGH, History of World. Bk. i, ch. 1. (1614)

With what the maiden vessel
Is season'd first—you understand the proverb.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Custom of the Country. Act i, sc. 1. (a. 1615)

I am not versed in my maternal tongue so exactly as I should be. . . . Yet the old British is not so driven out . . . (for the cask savours still of the liquor it first took in).

JAMES HOWELL, Letters, 17 Sept., 1645.

A butt gives such a scent as it hath.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 29. (1666)

The pouch will always smell of the herring.

WILLIAM KING, tr., Naudé's Political Considerations upon Refin'd Politics, iii, 109. (1711)

Every Tub smells of the Wine it holds.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1473. (1732)
The new cask takes its odour from the first wine that it receives.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Pt. ii, No. 203. (1820)

You may break, you may shatter the vase, if you will,

But the scent of the roses will hang round it still.

THOMAS MOORE, Farewell! But Whenever You Welcome the Hour. (c. 1830)

1 Remarkable memory, yours! (Memor es probe!)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 343. (c. 200 B.C.)

Your memory is of the best. (Memoria es optima.)

PLAUTUS, Miles Gloriosus, l. 49. (c. 200 B.C.)

2 Other times other memories. (Verterunt sese memoriae.)

PLAUTUS, Truculentus, l. 221. (c. 186 B.C.)

3 Memory: what wonders it performs in preserving and guarding the past.

PLUTARCH, Moralia: Obsolescence of Oracles. Sec. 432B. (c. A.D. 90)

Oft in the stilly night,

Ere Slumber's chain has bound me,

Fond Memory brings the light

Of other days around me.

THOMAS MOORE, Light of Other Days. (a. 1851)

Memory, a pensive Ruth, went gleanng the silent fields of childhood.

CURTIS, Howadji in Syria: Ave Maria. (1851)

4 The memory of man is apt to slip. (Memoria hominum est labilis.)

PONTANUS, Collectio Proverbiorum, p. 111. (1778) Another Latin proverb is, "Memoria minuitur nisi eam exerceas" (Memory will weaken unless you give it exercise).

My memory was never loaded with anything but blank cartridges.

MARK TWAIN, Life on the Mississippi. Ch. 6. (1874)

5 I have ever since retained them in the budget of my memory. (Les ay retenu en la gibbiefere de ma memoire.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 13. (1534)

6 Of Hamlet . . . The memory be green.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, i, 2, 2. (1600)

Long keep his memory green in our souls.

MOORE, Oh, Breathe Not His Name. (c. 1830)

Lord, keep my memory green.

DICKENS, The Haunted Man. Ch. 3. (1848)

7 Yea, from the table of my memory.

I'll wipe away all trivial fond records.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, i, 5, 98. (1600)

8 Left behind as a memory for us. (Nobis meminisse relictum.)

STATIUS, Silvae. Bk. ii, l. 55. (c. A.D. 80)

Nothing now is left But a majestic memory.

LONGFELLOW, Three Friends of Mine, l. 10. (1874)

9 My memory in this needs no refreshing.

SIR SAMUEL TUKE, The Adventures of Five Hours. Act i. (1663)

These occurrences are as vividly present to me as if they had happened yesterday. (Ces événements me sont aussi présents que s'ils s'étaient accomplis hier.)

ANATOLE FRANCE, Le Procureur de Judée (1892)

10 Tom. Saffold, of happy Memory.

UNKNOWN, Humours of the Town, p.69.(1693)

Dony of Happy Memory.

THOMAS BROWN, tr., Fresney's Amusements, p. 84. (1700)

II—Memory and Forgetfulness

See also Forgetfulness

11 Remembrances embellish life but forgetfulness alone makes it possible. (Les souvenirs embellissent la vie, l'oubli seul la rend possible.)

ENRICO CIALDINI, Written in an Album. (a. 1892)

12 We have all forgot more than we remember.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5442. (1732)

13 A retentive memory is a good thing, but the ability to forget is the true token of greatness.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Epigrams. (1900)

14 Better a little well kept, than a great deal forgotten.

HUGH LATIMER, Fifth Sermon Before King Edward. (1552)

<sup>1</sup> Memory and Oblivion, all hail! Memory for good things, Oblivion for evil. (Μνήμη καὶ Ἀθήνη, μέγα χαίρειον· ἡ μὲν ἐπ' ἔργοις | Μνήμη τοῖς ἀγαθοῖς, ἡ δ', ἐπὶ λενυγαλίοις.)

MACEDONIUS THE CONSUL, Epigram. (c. A. D. 350) See Greek Anthology. Bk. x, epig. 67.

<sup>2</sup> Nothing so deeply imprints anything in our memory as the desire to forget it. (Il ne rien qui imprime si vivement quelque chose en nostre souvenance, que le desir de l'oublier.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 12. (1580)

<sup>3</sup> Forgetfulness, rather; for I remember even those things which I would not, and can not forget what I would. (Oblivionis, mallem; nam meminisse etiam quae nolo, oblivisci non possum quae volo.)

THEMISTOCLES, when Simonides offered to teach him the art of memory. (c. 450 B. C.) See CICERO, De Finibus, ii, 32, 104. Also quoted by MONTAIGNE, ii, 12.

MEND

See also Amendment, Reformation

<sup>4</sup> All extremities must end or mend.

SAMUEL DANIEL, Queen's Arcadia, iv, 4. (1605)
Either mend or end.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 223. (1639)
Like the bairns o' Falkirk, they'll end ere they mend.

HISLOP, Proverbs of Scotland, p. 212. (1862)

<sup>5</sup> Some doe mend, when they cannot appaire [grow worse].

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 43. (1633)
He may mend but not grow worse.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 7. (1659)

<sup>6</sup> If euery man mende one, all shall be mended.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Three Hundred Epigrams. No. 1. (1562)

Let vs endeaouour euery one to amend one, and we shall all soon be amended.

JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 142. (1579)
Ilk man mend ane, and all will be mendit.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 64. (c. 1595)
If every one would mend one, all would be amended.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 20. (1670)

See also RICHARDSON, Pamela, ii, 4. (1740)
D'ARBLAY, Diary, iii, 477. (1793) etc.

If every man would mend a man
Then all mankind were mended.

EDWARD FITZGERALD, Polonius. Sec. 91. (1852)

<sup>7</sup> Good hearts admit of amendment. (ἀκεσταὶ τοὶ φρένες ἐσθλῶν.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xiii, l. 115. (c. 850 B. C.)
It is never too late to tread the path to honesty. (Sera numquam est ad bonos mores via.)

SENECA, Agamemnon, l. 242. (A. D. 60)
Neuer too Late.

ROBERT GREENE. Title of play. (1590)

Amends may never come too late.

ROBERT GREENE, Mamillia. Act v, sc. 5. (1594)
It is never over late to mend.

JAMES HOWELL, Letters, 9 Nov., 1645.
You never will mend till it is too late.

THEODORE HOOK, Jack Bragg. Ch. 1. (1837)
It Is Never too Late to Mend.

CHARLES READE. Title of novel. (1856)

<sup>8</sup> He mendeth as the fletcher [arrow-maker] dothe his bolte.

PALSGRAVE, La Langue Françoise, 634. (1530)
Then wolde ye mend, as the fletcher mends his bolte,

Or as sowre ale mendth in summer.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)
The worlde amendes like sower ale in sommer.

WILLIAM BULLEIN, Dialogue, p. 77. (1564)
They lost none of their old faults, and got many new, mending in this hot country as sour ale in summer.

THOMAS FULLER, Holy War. Bk. v, ch. 16. (1639)
I find you mend like sour ale in summer.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii. (1738)

'A mend like sour ale in summer—that is, gets worse and worse.

EDWARD MOOR, Suffolk Words, p. 377. (1823)

<sup>9</sup> The best time to mend your ways is the present.

Sutra-Kritanga Sutra, i, ii, 3, 19. (c. 400 B. C.)
He that resolves to mend hereafter, resolves to mend now.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1745.

MERCHANT

<sup>10</sup> He that wyll at all aduentures vse the seas knowinge no more what is to be done in a tempest than in a caulme, shall soone becommme a marchaunt of eele skinnes.

ROGER ASCHAM, Toxophilus, p. 151. (1545) A merchant of eel-skins, of refuse, of nothing.

He maketh his marts with marchantis likely,

To bryng a shylling to ix. pence quickly.

If he holde on a while, as he begins,

We shall see him proue a marchaunt of eele skins. A marchaunt without either money or ware.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)
Fisher: Who knows but I In tyme may proove a noble marchant? Clown: Yes, of eele skinnes.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, Captives. Act iv, sc. 1. (1624)
Then am I a merchant, not of eels-skins, but lambskins.

ANTHONY BREWER, The Love-Sick King. Act ii. (1655)

A merchant without either money or ware.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 7. (1659)
He is not a merchant bare,

That hath money-worth or ware.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 17. (1670)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6240. (1732)

He is not a merchant bare, That hath either money, worth, or ware. A good merchant may want ready money.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 171. (1721)

- 1
The marchant loses when he gaines not.
RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Gaigner. (1611)
A Merchant that gains not, loseth.
HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 50. (1640)
He that loseth is Merchant, as well as he that gains.
HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 520. The French say, "Il n'est pas marchand qui toujours gagne" (He is not a merchant who always gains).
As gude merchant tines [loses] as wins.
JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 229. (1678)
A good Merchant may meet with a Misfortune.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 164. (1732)
- 2
A Merchant's Happiness hangs upon Chance, Winds and Waves.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 323. (1732)
- 3
Who so that knew, what wolde be dere,
Should neede be a marchant but one yeere.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 1. (1546)
Quha wist quhat wald be cheip or deir,
Sould neid to traffique but a yeir.
MONTGOMERIE, The Cherrie and Slae. (1597)
We say, he that did know what would be deare, might grow full rich within a yeare.
COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Adventure. (1611)
He that could know what would be dear, Need be a merchant but one year. Such a merchant was the Philosopher Thales, . . . he foreseeing a future dearth of olives, the year following, bought up at easie rates all that kind of fruit then in men's hands.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 78. (1670)
If a Man but knew what would be dear,
He need be a Merchant, but only one Year.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6077. (1732)
The Japanese say, "He who can see three days ahead may be rich for three thousand years."
- 4
Who hath taken this counsel against Tyre, the crowning city, whose merchants are princes, whose traffickers are the honourable of the earth? (Cuius negotiatores principes, institores eius inclyti terrae?)
Old Testament: Isaiah, xxiii, 8. (c. 900 B. C.)
Strike, louder strike, th' ennobling strings
To those whose Merchant Sons were Kings.
WILLIAM COLLINS, Ode to Liberty, l. 42. (1747)
Referring to the Venetians.
- 5
Merchants love nobody.
THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to John Langdon. (1785)
Merchants are the least virtuous citizens and possess the least of the amor patriae.
JEFFERSON, Letter to M. de Meunier. (1786)
Merchants have no country.
JEFFERSON, Letter to H. G. Spafford. (1814)
- 6
If you would be a merchant fine, beware of old horse, herring, and wine. Old horse will die, herrings stink, and wine sour.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 192. (1721)

- 7
In vain the state where merchants gild the top.
JOHN MARSTON, What You Will. Act i. (1607)
- 8
A wise Marchant neuer aduentureth all his goodes in one ship.
SIR THOMAS MORE, in RICHARD GRAFTON, Chronicle of the Affayres of England, ii, 776. (1513) See also under PRUDENCE.
- 9
Is it not a common prouerbe amongst vs when any man hath cosend or gone beyond vs, to say, Hee hath playde the merchant with us?
THOMAS NASHE, Works, iv, 240. (1593)
Either a merchant or a theefe.
RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Larron. (1611)
I doubt, sir, he will play the merchant with us
WILLIAM ROWLEY, A New Wonder. Act iv (1632)
- 10
A merchant of great traffic through the world.
SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, i, 1, 12. (1594)
Traffic's thy god; and thy god confound thee!
SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens, i, 1, 246. (1608)
- MERCY
- 11
Pray for mercy even to the last clod of earth [thrown upon the grave].
Babylonian Talmud: Berachoth, fo. 8a. (c. A. D. 350)
Though a sharp sword be laid to thy throat, still pray to God for mercy.
Babylonian Talmud: Berachoth, fo. 10a. (c. A. D. 350)
The mercy of God [may be found] between the bridge and the stream. (Misericordia Domini inter pontem et fontem.)
ST. AUGUSTINE, of a man falling into a river. (c. A. D. 397) A paraphrase of the Latin proverb "Inter pontem et fontem; inter gladium et iugulum" (Between the bridge and the stream; between the sword and the throat).
Betwixt the stirrup and the ground
Mercy I asked, mercy I found.
WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains Concerning Britain: Epitaphs (1870), p. 420. (1605) An epitaph for a man falling from his horse and breaking his neck.
Between the stirrup and the ground,
I mercy asked, I mercy found.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, misquoting Camden. See BOSWELL, Life, 28 April, 1783.
Betwixt the Bridge and the Brook, the Knife and the Throat, the mercy of God may appeare.
WILLIAM HINDE, The Holy Life and Happy Death of John Bruen. Ch. 34. (1641)
- 12
Mercy is seasonable in the time of affliction, as clouds of rain in the time of drought.
BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xxx, 20. (c. 190 B. C.)
- 13
Clemency is the ornament of princes.
BHARTIRHARI, Niti Sataka. No. 82. (c. A. D. 100)

- 1 Here may men seen that mercy passeth right.
CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. iii, l. 1282.
(c. 1380)
For gentil mercy oghte to passen right.
CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Knights Tale, l. 2231. (c. 1386)
Mercy bothe right and lawe passeth.
THOMAS USK, The Testament of Love, iii, i, 137. (1387)
Mercy is better than justice. (La clémence vaut mieux que la justice.)
VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 167. (1746)
- 2 Put on therefore . . . bowels of mercies, kindness, humbleness of mind, meekness, long-suffering. (ἐνδύσαθε οὖν . . . σπλάγχνα οἰκτιρμοῦ.)
New Testament: Colossians, iii, 12. (c. A. D. 59)
The Vulgate phrase is, "Viscera misericordiae."
Open thy bowels of compassion.
CONGREVE, Mourning Bride. Act iv, sc. 7. (1697)
- 3 In whom mercye lacketh . . . in hym all other vertues be drowned.
SIR THOMAS ELYOT, The Gouernour. Bk. ii, ch. 7. (1531)
- 4 Who standeth in the water vp to the chyn, he is very obstinate, if for mercy he do not cry.
JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 28. (1578)
More by lenitie, then by force. (Piu per dolceza, che per forza.)
JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 33.
- 5 Severity is often Clemency, Clemency Severity.
FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1752.
- 6 Aske mercy and hafe it.
RICHARD ROLLE OF HAMPOLE, English Prose Treatises, p. 43. (c. 1340)
- 7 As you are stout be merciful.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 39. (1721)
Colonel, as you are stout, be merciful. [To colonel offering, in jest, to draw his sword.]
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)
But, Clare, as you are strong be merciful.
D. C. MURRAY, Way of the World. Ch. 19. (1884)
- 8 And the publican, standing afar off, would not lift up so much as his eyes unto heaven, but smote upon his breast, saying, God be merciful to me a sinner. (ὁ θεός, ἰλάσθητι μοι τῷ ἁμαρτωλῷ.)
New Testament: Luke, xviii, 13. (c. A. D. 65)
The Vulgate is, "Deus propitius esto mihi peccatori."
- 9 Blessed are the merciful: for they shall obtain mercy. (μακάριοι οἱ ἐλεήμονες, ὅτι αὐτοὶ ἐλεηθήσονται.)
New Testament: Matthew, v, 7. (c. A. D. 50)
The Vulgate is, "Beati misericordes: quoniam ipsi misericordiam consequentur."

- Mercy of mercy needs mot aryse.
WILLIAM LONGLAND, Piers Plowman. Text C, passus xii, l. 233. (1362)
Who-so wyll haue mercy must be mercyable; . . . Who is without mercy of mercy shall mys.
HENRY BRADSHAW, The Life of Saint Werburge of Chester. Bk. i, l. 2752. (1513)
Who will not mercie unto others shew,
How can he mercie ever hope to have?
EDMUND SPENSER, The Faerie Queene. Bk. vi, canto i, st. 42. (1590)
Mercy to him that shows it, is the rule
And righteous limitation of its act,
By which Heav'n moves in pard'ning guilty man.
COWPER, The Task. Bk. vi, l. 595. (1784)
Mercy is for the merciful.
LORD BYRON, Lines on Hearing Lady Byron Was Ill. (1816)
- 10 I kry you mercy, I kylled your cussheyn.
JEHAN PALSgrave, La Langue Françoise, p. 501. (1530) Perhaps a garbling of the expression "missed the cushion" or mark in archery.
I cry you mercy, 'tis but quid for quo.
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry VI, v, 3, 109. (1591)
Half: On thy conscience tell me what 'tis a clock?
Silena: I cry you mercy, I have killed your cushion.
JOHN LYLY, Mother Bombie. Act iv, sc. 2. (1594)
Accius: You need not be so lusty, you are not so honest.
Silena: I cry you mercy, I took you for a joynd stool.
LYLY, Mother Bombie, iv, 2. (1594) Proverbial for an unfortunate apology or a pert reply.
Cry you mercy, I took you for a joint-stool.
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, iii, 6, 55. (1605) JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 186. (1670)
Cry you mercy killed my cat.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 281. (1639)
RAY, English Proverbs, p. 68. (1670)
- 11 Mercy is better than vengeance. (συγγνώμη τιμωρίας κρείσσων.)
PITTACUS, Maxim. (c. 675 B. C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pittacus. Bk. i, sec. 76.
- 12 The merciful man doeth good to his own soul (Benefacit animae suae vir misericors.)
Old Testament: Proverbs, xi, 17. (c. 350 B. C.)
- 13 Have mercy upon me, O God. (Miserere mei Deus.)
Old Testament: Psalms, li, 1. (c. 250 B. C.)
Mercy and truth are met together; righteousness and peace have kissed each other. (Misericordia et veritas obviaverunt sibi: iustitia et pax osculatae sunt.)
Old Testament: Psalms, lxxxv, 10. (c. 250 B. C.)
- 14 A merciful man is not stupid; a stupid man cannot show mercy. (Lao jên pu shih ch'ih 'han; ch'ih 'han pu 'hui jao jên.)
WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1399. (1875)

<sup>1</sup> Mercy often gives death instead of life.
(Mortem misericors saepe pro vita dabit.)
SENECA, Troades, l. 329. (c. A. D. 60)

<sup>2</sup> Mercy but murders, pardoning those that kill.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, iii, 1, 202.
(1595) See under JUSTICE AND MERCY.

The quality of mercy is not strain'd;
It droppeth as the gentle rain from heaven
Upon the place beneath: it is twice blest;
It blesseth him that gives and him that takes:
'Tis mightiest in the mightiest: it becomes
The throned monarch better than his crown;
His sceptre shows the force of temporal power,
The attribute to awe and majesty,
Wherein doth sit the dread and fear of kings;
But mercy is above this sceptred sway;
It is enthroned in the hearts of kings,
It is an attribute to God himself;
And earthly power doth then show likest God's
When mercy seasons justice.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, iv, 1,
184. (1597)

MERIT

See also Deserving, Worth

<sup>3</sup> Merit, like oil, must come to the top.

JEREMIAH CURTIN, tr., With Fire and Sword.
Ch. 8. (1890)

<sup>4</sup> Stay here, and make a merit of your Love.

DRYDEN AND LEE, The Duke of Guise. Act iv,
sc. 3. (1682)

You might have made a merit of your theft.

DRYDEN, King Arianur. Act ii. (1691)

He made a merit of it to himself.

CHARLES READE, The Cloister and the Hearth.
Ch. 80. (1860)

<sup>5</sup> Of Boasting more than of a Bomb afraid,
Merit should be as modest as a Maid.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1750.

Great Merit is coy, as well as great Pride.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1752.

<sup>6</sup> It is a mark of exceptional merit, when the most envious feel constrained to admire it.
(La marque d'un mérite extraordinaire est de voir que ceux qui l'envient le plus sont con-traints de le louer.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 95. (1665)
Merit is the gift of nature, but fortune provides occasions for its display. (La nature fait le mérite, et la fortune le met en œuvre.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 153. (1665)
There are people who disgust with merit, and other who please with faults. (Il y a des gens dégoûtants avec du mérite, et d'autres qui plaisent avec des défauts.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes, No. 155.
Our merit wins the esteem of honest men, and our lucky star that of the public. (Notre mérite nous attire l'estime des honnêtes gens, et notre étoile celle du public.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 165.

The world more often rewards the appearance of merit than merit itself. (Le monde récompense plus souvent les apparences du mérite que le mérite même.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 166.

There is merit without distinction, but there is no distinction without some merit. (Il y a du mérite sans élévation, mais il n'y a point d'éleva-tion sans quelque mérite.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 400.

Distinction is to merit what dress is to good looks. (L'élévation est au mérite ce que la parure est aux belles personnes.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 401.

However prone the world may be to judge men ill, it overlooks real merit still less often than it rewards its counterfeit. (Quelque disposition qu'ait le monde à mal juger, il fait encore plus souvent grâce au faux mérite, qu'il ne fait injustice au véritable.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 455

<sup>7</sup> Beauties in vain their pretty eyes may roll;
Charms strike the sight, but merit wins the soul.

ALEXANDER POPE, The Rape of the Lock. Canto
v, l. 34. (1714)

<sup>8</sup> The sufficiency of my merit, is to know that my merit is not sufficient.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems. Bk. ii, emb. 1.
(1635) Quoted by Quarles as a saying of St.
Augustine.

<sup>9</sup> The force of his own merit makes his way.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII, i, 1, 64. (1612)

Merit and good-breeding will make their way anywhere.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 9 Oct., 1747.

<sup>10</sup> A young man who enjoyed the appellation simply of "a man of much merit." (Un homme de beaucoup de mérite.)

TOLSTOY, War and Peace. Vol. ii, pt. ii, ch. 6.
(1865) Dole, tr.

MERRIMENT

See also Gaiety, Mirth

<sup>11</sup> After wo, I rede us to be merie.

CHAUCER, *Canterbury Tales: The Knightes
Tale*, l. 2210, (c. 1386)

Merry is only a mask of sad.

R. W. EMERSON, Waldeinsamkeit. (1858)

<sup>12</sup> A merry fellow was never yet a respectable man.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 20 Aug., 1749

<sup>13</sup> The more the merrier. (Quam plurima mittas)
CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. i, epis. 8. (67 B. C.)

The mo the meryer; the fewer, the better fare.
JEHAN PALSGRAVE, Lesclaircissement de la Langue Françoisse, 885. (1530) This is the full form and the first known appearance in English of the saying, which has been ascribed to King James I. (c. 1423)

Haue among you blynd harpers (sayde I)
The mo the merier, we all daie here and see.
Ye, but the fewer the better fare (said hee).
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)
Come nere, on Goddes halfe, the mo knaves the merier.

UNKNOWN, Respublica. Act iii, sc. 5. (1553)
The mo the merrier is a proverbe eke.

GEORGE GASCOIGNE, Roses. (1570)
The more company the merrier.

UNKNOWN, The Marriage of Witte and Science. Act iii, sc. 2. (c. 1570)

The company is . . . all the patriarchs, prophets, saints. . . . Here, the more the merrier, yea, and the better cheer too.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons (1862), i, 244. (1629)
The more the merrier; the fewer the better cheer.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 115. (1678)
See also SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii.

(1738) PAULDING, The Bucktails. Act v, sc. 2.
(1815) DICKENS, Barnaby Rudge. Ch. 59.

(1841) KINGSLEY, Westward Ho! Ch. 24.
(1855) etc., etc.

More and merrier: less and better fare.

J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 95. (1917)

1 Mery it is whan knaues done mete.

UNKNOWN, Cock Lorells Bote, p. 14. (c. 1520)
Ther's a Kooke cal'd 'Tis merry when Knaues meete. And ther's a Ballad, 'Tis merry when Malt-men meete: and besides, ther's an old Prouerbe, The more the merrier.

SAMUEL ROWLANDS, 'Tis Merrie When Gossips Meet. (1602) See also under KNAVE.

It's merry when friends meet.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 26. (1639)
'Tis merry when gentle folkes meete.

ANTHONY BREWER, Countrie Girl, sig.H3. (1647)
IT'S MERRY IN HALL WHEN BEARDS WAG ALL, see under BEARD.

2 Is any merry? let him sing psalms. (εὐθυμεῖ τις: ψαλλέτω.)

New Testament: James, v, 13. (A. D. 44) The Vulgate is, "Aequo animo est? psallat."

3 Be merry, man, and tak not sair in mind

The wavering of this wretchit warld of sorrow.

WILLIAM DUNBAR, No Treasure Without Gladness. (c. 1510)

Be merry, but with modestie.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 39. (1570)
Repeated on p. 154, with the addition, "be sober, but not too sullen."

Be as merry as you may be, for time may so turne that once again you may be.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 97.
Aye be as merry as be can, for love ne'er delights in a sorrowful man.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 55. (1678)
Be always as merry as ever you can;

For no man delights in a sorrowful Man.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6402. (1732)

"Let us be merry," said Mr. Pecksniff.
DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 5. (1844)

4 I've taken my fun where I found it.
RUDYARD KIPLING, The Ladies. (1892)

5 Be merry if you are wise. (Ride si sapis.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. ii, epig. 41. (A. D. 85)

Whan hasty witlesse mirth is mated weele,

Good to be mery and wise, they thinke and feele.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 2. (1546)

Therefore an other sayd sawe doth men aduise
That they be together both mery and wise.

NICOLAS UDALL, Ralph Roister Doister Act i, sc. 1. (1553)

Tis good to be mery and wyse:

How shall fooles folow that aduise?

HEYWOOD, Proverbs and Epigrams. (1562)

It is good, they say, to be merry and wise.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Works, ii, 247. (1593)

'Tis good to be mery and wise.

CHAPMAN, Eastward Hoe. Act i, sc. 1. (1605)

Come, come, George, let's be merry and wise.

BEAUMONT and FLETCHER, The Knight of the Burning Pestle. Act ii, sc. 1. (1611)

You are merry, sir; be wise too.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, A Whipp, p. 21. (1662)

The proverb says, "Be merry and be wise."

DAVENANT, Man's the Master: Prologue. (1668)

He knew how to be merry and wise.

ABRAHAM TUCKER, The Light of Nature Pursued, ii, 337. (1768)

Old times have bequeathed us a precept, to be merry and wise, but who has been able to observe it?

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letters, ii, 114. (1779)

It's guid to be merry and wise.

ROBERT BURNS, Here's a Health to Them That's Awa. (c. 1786)

There is a proverb which talks about being merry and wise.

DICKENS, The Old Curiosity Shop. Ch. 7. (1841)

EAT, DRINK AND BE MERRY, see under EATING

6 Let us rehearse the old proverb: 'Three merry men, and three merry men, And three merry men be we; I in the wood, and thou on the ground, And Jack sleeps in the tree.'

GEORGE PEELE, The Old Wives Tale. Sc. 1 (1595) The refrain of an old ballad.

I am three merry men, and three merry men!

BEAUMONT and FLETCHER, The Knight of the Burning Pestle. Act ii, sc. 8. (1613)

Three merry boys, and three merry boys,

And three merry boys are we.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Bloody Brother. Act iii. sc. 2. (c. 1620)

7 Merry meet, merry part.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 175. (1678)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3410. (1732)

8 There is hardly such a thing as being merry. but at another's Expence.

NICHOLAS ROWE, The Fair Penitent: Dedication. (1703)

9 To be merry best becomes you: for, out of question, you were born in a merry hour.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing, ii. 1. 346. (1598)

Faith I was never on a merrier pin.
ROBERT DAVENPORT, A New Trick to Cheat the Divell. Act i, sc. 2. (1639)

1
Live a short life and a merry one.
SWIFT, Directions to Servants: The Footman. (a. 1745) See under LIFE.

2
It is hard to feign merriment when the heart is sad, or to force a false smile to the lips. (Difficile est tristi fingere mente iocum, | nec bene mendaci risus componitur ore.)
TIBULLUS, Elegies. Bk. iii, eleg. vi, l. 34. (c. 10 B. C.)
All are not merry that seem mirthful.
ROBERT SOUTHEY, The Doctor. Ch. 71. (1812)

3
Lengor liueth a glad mon then a sori.
UNKNOWN. In Vernon MS (E.E.T.S.), p. 347. (c. 1340)

As long leuyth a mery man as a sory.
UNKNOWN. Douce MS (Förster), 52. (c. 1350)
As long lyuth the mery man (they say)
As doth the sory man, and longer by a day.
NICOLAS UDALL, Ralph Roister Doister Act i, sc. 1. (c. 1550)

Mirth is the onelie instrument to prolong mannes life.
STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk iv, p. 166. (1574) Young, tr.

As long liveth a merry man as a sad.
WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 302. (1605)
Lives not a merry-man longer than a sad?
UNKNOWN, The Tinker of Turvey. (1630)
As long lives the merry Heart as the sad.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 711. (1732)
A MERRY HEART GOES ALL THE WAY; A MERRY HEART MAKETH A CHEERFUL COUNTENANCE, see under HEART.

II—Merriment: Proverbial Comparisons

4
All went merry as a marriage bell.
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 21. (1812)
All went as merry as a marriage-bell.
F. E. SMEDLEY, Frank Fairleigh. Ch. 6. (1850)
All went merry as a carriage bell, as Lord Byrun sez.

ARTEMUS WARD (C. F. BROWNE), Celebration in Honor of the Atlantic Cable. (1859)
As merry as an alimony bell.
O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), Strictly Business. (1910)

5
I'll be As merry as a Pismire.
WILLIAM CARTWRIGHT, The Ordinary. Act iii, sc. 4. (c. 1634)

6
Gaillard he was as goldfinch in the shawe.
CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Cokes Tale, l. 3, (c. 1386)

7
And forth she gooth, as iolif as a pye.
CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Shipmannes Tale, l. 209. (c. 1386)
And she for hir parte, made vs cheere heauen bye.
The fyrst parte of dyner mery as a pye.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 3. (1546)

Home went Lysetta, as merry as a pye.
TARLTON, News out of Purgatorie, p. 68. (1590)
He be as merrie as a pie.

THOMAS DEKKER, The Shoemaker's Holiday. Act v, sc. 5. (1600)
Hele lafe and be as merry as a mag-pie.
ROWLEY, When You Can See Me. sig. C3. (1613)

8
And hoom he gooth, mery as a papejay.
CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Shipmannes Tale, l. 369. (c. 1386)
Singeth, ful merier than the papejay,
"Yow love I best, and shal, and other noon."
CHAUCER, The Marchantes Tale, l. 1078.

9
As merry as mice in malt.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 185. (1639)
HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 3. (1659)
Some families are as merry as mice in malt on very small wages.
C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk. Ch. 16. (1869)

10
A merry grigge, a iocande frende.
THOMAS DRANT, tr., Horace: Satires. Bk. i, sat. 3. (1566) A grig is a small eel, and it is sometimes supposed that this is what is referred to, but the phrase is more probably a corruption of "a merry Greek." See below.

A merry grig, and a true toper.
CHARLES COTTON, Burlesque upon Burlesque, p. 195. (1675)
They drank till they all were as merry as grigs.
THOMAS BROWN, Works (1760), ii, 188. (a. 1704)

We were merry as grigs in time past.
JOHN GAY, Wife of Bath. Act v, sc. 3. (1713)
She . . . merry as a grig is grown.
JOHN GAY, New Similes. (1720)
I grew as merry as a grig.
OLIVER GOLDSMITH, Essays (Globe), vi, 304. (1760) See also SALA, Twice Round the Clock, 3 p.m. (1859) BLACKMORE, Stringhaven. Ch. 39. (1887) WALLING, Corpse with the Eerie Eye, p. 12. (1942), etc., etc.

11
Merry as a lark.
P. G. HAMERTON, The Intellectual Life. Bk. i, ch. 5. (1873)

12
So playde these twayne, as mery as three chippis.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs Pt. i, ch. 7. (1546)

13
Nowe mery as a cricket.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)
As merry as crickets, my lads.
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, ii, 4, 101. (1597)
Send them home as merry as crickets.
SIR THOMAS URQUHART, tr., Rabelais. Bk. i, ch. 29. (1653)

As merry as a cricket.
JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 3. (1659)
O'KEEFFE, The Farmer. Act i, sc. 2. (1787)
MARRYAT, Peter Simple. Ch. 1. (1834) KINGSLEY, Two Years Ago. Ch. 4. (1857) etc., etc.
Healthy, happy, . . . lively as crickets.
WALPOLE, Green Mirror. Bk. i, ch. 1. (1918)

- 1
Mery we were as cup and can could holde,
Eche one with eche other homely and bolde.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 3. (1546)
The merye man, with cupp and cann.
UNKNOWN, Misogonus. Act ii, sc. 2. (1577)
As mery as pot and can.
SAMUEL ROWLANDS, Martin Mark-all, p. 49.
(1610) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 287. (1678)
- 2
As mery as tinkers.
JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 3. (1659)
- 3
As mery as fourty beggars.
JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 11. (1659)
Both were . . . as mery as beggars.
EDWARD WARD, The London Spy, p. 264. (1700)
We should live together as mery as beggars.
SWIFT, The Drapier Letters. Lett. iv. (1724)
- 4
The bishop of Man liveth here at ease, and as mery as Pope Joan.
BISHOP JAMES PILKINGTON, Letter. (1564)
- 5
Merry as boyhood.
SAEMUND (?), Poetic Edda: Hymiskvitha. St.
2. (c. 900)
- 6
As mery as minnows.
SCOTT, Fortunes of Nigel. Ch. 25. (1822)
- 7
I should be as mery as the day is long.
SHAKESPEARE, King John, iv, 1, 18. (1596)
Much Ado About Nothing, ii, 1, 52. (1598)
Even as mery as the day is long.
MABBE, tr., Celestina (T.T.), p. 54. (1631)
Mathew Merygreeke [one of the characters]
NICOLAS UDALL, Ralph Roister Doister. Act i, sc. 1. (c. 1551)
Hee is a mad Greeke, no less than a mery.
BEN JONSON, CORYAT, Crudities, i, 17. (1611)
We know the modern proverb, of a mery Greeke.
THOMAS FULLER, Church-History of Britain.
Bk. ii, sec. 3. (1655)
Merry as Greeks, and drunk as Lords.
CHARLES COTTON, Scarronides. Bk. iv. (1670)
Make me as mery as a Greeke.
New Foundling Hospital for Wit, iii, 176. (1784)
- 8
I wyll make as mery as a kynge.
UNKNOWN, Enterlude of Youth. In BANG, Materialien, B. 12, p. 8. (c. 1554)
This Smith leads a life as mery as a king.
PEELE, The Old Wiues Tale, sig. A3. (1595)
Be as mery as a king.
HOLYDAY, Technogamia. Act iii, sc. 5. (1618)
- 9
With joviall blades I'm as mery as the maids.
UNKNOWN, Roxburghe Ballads, i, 448. (c. 1630)
We will be as mery as the maids.
MARCHANT, Praise of Ale, p. 249. (c. 1650)
At Madam Wanton's, where we were as mery as the maids.
JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress. (1877)
Pt. ii, p. 210. (1684)
We will . . . have old Cobs the fiddler, and be as mery as the maids.
WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 9. (1818)

MESSENGER

- 10
In the mouth of a messenger a crooked message may be made straight. (ἐν ἀγγέλῳ γὰρ κυπτὸς ὁρθοῦται λόγος.)
AESCHYLUS, Libation-Bearers, l. 773. (458 B. C.)
A proverbial saying, meaning that a messenger may change a message as he pleases.
- 11
Messengers should neither be headed nor hanged.
DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 76. (c.
1595) Cited by KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p.
246, with the comment, "An excuse for carrying an ungrateful message." The Latin is.
"Legatur nec violatur, nec laeditur."
Though the senders be ten thousand times wrong, it is not the fault of the messenger. (Ch'ien ts'o wan ts'o, lai jên pu ts'o.)
SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 423. (1875)
- 12
Stay till the lame messenger come, if you will know the truth of the thing.
HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 333. (1640)
The lame Post brings the truest News.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4620. (1732)
- 13
How good a thing is a discreet messenger.
(ἐσθλὸν καὶ τὸ τέτυκται, ὅτ' ἀγγέλως αἴσιμα εἶδη.)
HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xv, l. 207. (c. 850 B. C.) PIN-
DAR, Pythian Odes, iv, 278, paraphrases this,
"A discreet messenger brings highest honor to every business," the only passage where Pindar quotes from Homer by name.
- 14
It is not book learning young men need, but a stiffening of the vertebrae which will cause them to be loyal to a trust, to act promptly, concentrate their energies, do a thing—"carry a message to Garcia."
ELBERT HUBBARD, A Message to Garcia. First printed in The Philistine, March, 1900. The man who carried the message to Garcia was Lieut. Andrew S. Rowan, of the Bureau of Military Intelligence. It was delivered 1 May 1898.
There goes the message to Garcia.
KENT, Jason Burr's First Case, p. 137. (1941)
- 15
The messenger of good news is always an object of benevolence.
SYDNEY SMITH, Sketches of Moral Philosophy
Lecture 22. (1804)
- 16
You love to be a messenger of ill news.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)
- 17
For-thi men sais on messenger
That lengs lang to bring answare,
He mai be cald, with right resun,
An of messagers corbun.
UNKNOWN, Cursor Mundi, l. 1892. (c. 1300)
You are a corby messenger. Taken from the raven sent out of the ark; apply'd to them who being sent an errand do not return with their answer
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 385. (1721)

METAL, METTLE

(They were originally the same word)

<sup>1</sup> He is metal of the baser sort. (ἐοικε δ' εἶναι τοῦ πολεμοῦ κόμματος.)

ARISTOPHANES, Plutus, l. 862. (c. 380 B. C.) A proverbial phrase, quoted by PHILO, De Somniis, i, 123.

Defoe wrought no base metal into the fine gold of his mother tongue.

The Athenaeum, 8 Oct., 1887, p. 461/3. The "noble metals" are gold and silver, all others are "base."

<sup>2</sup> She shewes the metall she is made of.

DANIEL ROGERS, Naaman the Syrian: To the Reader. (1642)

To try the spirit of man, of what mettle they are made of.

ROGERS, Naaman the Syrian, p. 19.

Thou ken'st not the mettle that women are made of.

SCOTT, The Fair Maid of Perth. Ch. 3. (1828)

<sup>3</sup> Here's metal more attractive.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 2, 116. (1600)

Here's metal more attractive, as the fellow says in the play.

F. E. SMEDLEY, Frank Fairleigh. Ch. 41. (1850)

<sup>4</sup> A Corinthian, a lad of mettle.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, ii, 4, 13. (1597)

Let there be some more test made of my metal,
Before so noble and so great a figure
Be stamped upon it.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, i, 1, 49. (1604)

<sup>5</sup> No big-bon'd men. . . .

But metal, Marcus, steel to the very back.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus, iv, 3, 47. (1593)

He's metal to the back. A metaphor taken from knives and swords.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 76. (1678)

The girl is mettle to the back.

CHARLES COFFEY, Boarding-School. Sc. 5. (1733)

A notable fellow of his inches, and metal to the back.

THOMAS BROWN, The Saints in an Uproar. (1687) Agreeable Companion, p. 105. (1745)

She has a great deal of wit; and, egad, as the saying is, mettle to the back.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. (1738)

<sup>6</sup> When you have done a fault . . . behave yourself as if you were the injured person; this will immediately put your Master or Lady off their mettle.

SWIFT, Directions to Servants. Sec. 2. (c. 1745)
Everybody here are upon their mettle.

SIR HENRY ELLIS, Original Letters. Ser. ii, vol. iv, p. 374. (1756)

Even the common passions . . . will put him up to his mettle.

MASON WEEMS, Life of Washington, i, 6. (1800)

It puts us on our mettle, too, to see our old enemies the French taking the work with us.

LEVER, Davenport Dunn. Ch. 13. (1859)

His . . . sarcasm set me on my mettle.

J. C. SNAITH, Mistress Marvin. Ch. 42. (1895)

<sup>7</sup> It would grieve a man, indeed, to see zeal misplaced, like mettle in a blind horse.

SAMUEL WARD, Sermons (1862), p. 76. (1636)

Metal is dangerous in a blind horse.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 18. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3411. (1732)

Too much mettle is dangerous in a blind horse.

THOMAS D'URFEY, The Comical History of Don Quixote. Pt. iii, act i. (1696)

Metal is dangerous in a blind horse. And so is bigotry, and blind zeal, in an ignorant fellow.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 244. (1721)

Mettle is kittle in a blind horse.

HENDERSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 83. (1832)

METHOD

<sup>8</sup> You know my methods, Watson.

CONAN DOYLE, The Crooked Man. (1893) Repeated frequently, with variations, throughout the stories. For example, "My dear fellow, you know my methods."—The Stockbroker's Clerk. "You know my methods in such cases, Watson."—The Musgrave Ritual

METHOD IN MADNESS, see under MADNESS.

<sup>9</sup> By different methods different men excel,
But where is he who can do all things well?

CHARLES CHURCHILL, Epistle to William Hogarth, l. 573. (a. 1764)

MIDNIGHT

<sup>10</sup> It was vespers there, but here the noon of night. (Vespero là, e qui mezza notte era.)

DANTE, Purgatorio. Canto xv, l. 6. (c. 1300)

Midnight reared on the mid-noctial line.

BARNABE BARNES, Parthenophil. Sonnet 23. (1593)

The dreadful dead of dark midnight.

SHAKESPEARE, Rape of Lucrece, l. 1625. (1594)

In the dead vast and middle of the night.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, i, 2, 198. (1600)

'Tis now dead midnight.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, iv, 2, 67. (1604)

As yet 'tis midnight deep.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Winter, l. 202. (1726)

That hour, o' night's black arch the keystone.

ROBERT BURNS, Tam o' Shanter. (1791)

<sup>11</sup> It came to pass at midnight that the man was afraid. (Et ecce, nocte iam media expavit homo.)

Old Testament: Ruth, iii, 8. (c. 600 B. C.)

<sup>12</sup> 'Tis now the very witching time of night,
When churchyards yawn and hell itself breathes out

Contagion to this world.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 2, 406. (1600)

'Tis the witching hour of night.

JOHN KEATS, A Prophecy, l. 1. (1818)

<sup>1</sup> The iron tongue of midnight hath told twelve.
SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream,
v, 1, 370. (1596)

We have heard the chimes at midnight, Master
Shallow.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, iii, 2, 228. (1598)

Let's mock the midnight bell.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, iii, 13,
185. (1606)

MIGHT

<sup>2</sup> May Might and Right, with Zeus as third, lend thee their aid! (Κράτος τε καὶ Δίκη σὺν τῷ τρίτῳ | πάντων μεγίστῳ Ζηνὶ συγγενοῖτό σοι.)

AESCHYLUS, The Libation-Bearers, l. 245. (458
B. C.) Zeus, as third, because three is the mystical effectual number. Some editors give μοι as the last word instead of σοι: "Lend me thy aid." Eumenides, l. 759, has, "That third God, the all-ordaining one, the Saviour" (τοῦ πάντα κραίνοντος τρίτου σωτήρος).
Agamemnon, l. 1297, has, "God, the saviour of the dead" (Διὸς νεκρῶν σωτήρος).

<sup>3</sup> Either by might or by sleight.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 127. (1639)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 186. (1670)

If I cannot do by might, I'll do by slight. If I dare not attack my enemy openly, I'll do him an injury in a private, and clandestine way.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 179. (1721)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6293. (1732)

<sup>4</sup> Might

That makes a Title, where there is no Right.

SAMUEL DANIEL, The Civile Warres. Bk. ii, st.
36. (1609)

Might and right govern everything in this world; might till right is ready. (C'est la force et le droit qui règlent toutes choses dans le monde; la force, en attendant le droit.)

JOSEPH JOUBERT, Pensées. Ch. 15, No. 2. (1810)

Where might enters right departs. (Do fuerza viene, el derecho se pierde.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes,
p. 249. (1856) A Spanish proverb.

Where might is right, right has no might. (Wo Gewalt Recht hat, da hat Recht kein Gewalt.)

CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 318.

Might and Right are always fighting.

In our youth it seems exciting.

Right is always nearly winning.

Might can hardly keep from grinning.

CLARENCE DAY, Might and Right. (a. 1935)

<sup>5</sup> Might shall be their right. . . . Right will be in might and reverence will cease to be.
(χειροδίκαι· δίκη δ' ἐν χειρὶ, καὶ αἰδῶς οὐκ ἔσται.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 189. (c. 800 B. C.)

Right beats Might when she comes at length to the end of the race. (Δίκη δ' ὑπὲρ ᾽Τῆπος ἴσχει | ἐς τέλος ἐξελεύσασα.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 217.

Where might and right are yoke-fellows, what pair is stronger? (ὅπου γὰρ ἰσχυὲς συζυγοῦσι καὶ δίκη, | πόλα ξυνωρίς τήσδε καρτερωτέρα;)

AESCHYLUS, Fragment. No. 209. Smyth. (c. 458
B. C.) SCHOLIAST on Iliad, ii, 542.

<sup>6</sup> Useless is the dolphin's might upon dry ground.
(κακὴ γὰρ ἡ δελφίνος ἐν χέρσῳ βία.)

ION, Apothegm. (c. 450 B. C.) As quoted by PLUTARCH; Lives: Demosthenes. Ch. 3, sec. 2.

<sup>7</sup> The reason of the strongest is always the best.
(La raison du plus fort est toujours la meil-leure.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: Le Loup et l'Agneau. Bk.

i, fab. 10. (1668) In another fable, La Fontaine says, "The wolf is never wrong except when it is not the strongest" (Le loup n'a tort que quand il n'est pas le plus fort). One of the oldest fables, used by Aesop, Phaedrus,

Babrius, Romulus, Ugobardus, and many others. The fable, it will be remembered, is that of the wolf and the lamb drinking from the same stream, the wolf higher up than the lamb. "You're roiling my water!" barks the wolf. "But that can't be," the lamb protests, "since I'm drinking lower down than you are." "Anyway, I know you cursed and slandered me over a year ago," says the wolf

"But I wasn't born then," the lamb protests.

"Then it was your brother." "But I haven't any brother." "Well it was some one of your name," and without more ado, the wolf seized the lamb and carried it off. Another very amusing medieval fable of wolf and lamb runs as follows: A wolf, gravely ill, vowed that he would abstain forever from meat if he were cured. Restored to health, he encounters a lamb. "Good day, my lovely salmon," he said. "But I am not a salmon," the lamb protested. The wolf looked at him appraisingly. "What's that you say?" he demanded. "To my eyes, you are a true salmon," and he devoured the lamb. "So," Ugobardus moralizes, "when crime wishes to attack innocence, it can always find a pretext for doing so" (Sic nocet innocuo nocuus, causamque nocendi | invenit). Napoleon

Bonaparte discussed this fable one evening at Saint Helena with the members of his entourage, (Journal of Saint Hélène, July, 1816) and expressed the opinion that to make it complete the wolf should have choked himself to death while eating the lamb. Referred to by SCOTT, The Monastery, ch. 37.

<sup>8</sup>

These were in this bataille of mest migt &

mayn.

ROBERT OF GLOUCESTER, Metrical Chronicle,

218. (1297)

Toward Winchester he com with myght and

mayn.

ROBERT MANNING OF BRUNNE, Langtoft's

Chronicle, p. 56. (c. 1330)

The Deuill set vppon him with all might and maine.

THOMAS VAUTROLIER, tr., Luther's Commen- tary on Galatians, p. 80. (1577)

He grasped the mane with both his hands,
And eke with all his might.

WILLIAM COWPER, John Gilpin's Ride. (1782)

1 I affirm that might is right, justice the interest of the stronger. (φημι γὰρ ἐγὼ τὸ δίκαιον οὐκ ἄλλο τι ἢ τὸ τοῦ κρείττονος συμφέρον.)

PLATO, The Republic. Bk. i, ch. 12, sec. 338C.
(c. 375 B.C.)

Right is overcome by might. (Vi verum vincitur.)

PLAUTUS, Amphitruo, l. 591. (c. 200 B.C.)

He can do the most who is the strongest. (Plus potest qui plus valet.)

PLAUTUS, Truculentus, l. 812. (c. 186 B.C.)

Nixon translates this, "The stronger arm, the upper hand." The Germans say, "Der Stär-kere schiebt den Schwächeren in Sack" (The strongest shoves the weakest into the sack).

Right gives way to force, and justice lies conquered beneath the aggressive sword. (Cedit viribus aequum, | victaque pugnaci iura sub ense iacent.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. v, No. vii, l. 47. (c. A. D. 10)

Might was the measure of right. (Mensuraque iuris Vis erat.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. i, l. 175. (c. A. D. 60)

Right is in might. (Ius est in armis.)

SENECA, Hercules Furens, l. 253. (c. A. D. 60)

For wher that such on is of myht,

His wil schal stonde in stede of riht.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. v, l. 2021.
(c. 1390)

We see many tymes, might ouercometh right.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)
Might overcomes right.

ROBERT GREENE, Works (Grosart), x, 60. (1591)

CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 172. (1639) etc., etc.

O God, that right should thus overcome might!
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, v, 4, 27. (1598)

It is an old country proverb that Might overcomes Right: a weak title that wears a strong sword commonly prevails against a strong title that wears but a weak one.

SIR WALTER RALEGH, Prerogative of Parliaments. (1616) Quoted by TUVIL, Vade Me-cum, p. 182. (1638)

Might too often overcomes right.

JOHN TRUSLER, Proverbs Exemplified, p. 78.
(1790)

This is the age of iron, in which might has overcome right.

MARRYAT, Mr. Midshipman Easy. Ch. 6. (1836)

The Rob Roy rule that might makes right.

R. W. EMERSON, Journals, 1866.

Where might is, the right is:

Long purses make strong swords.

Let weakness learn meekness:

God save the House of Lords.

SWINBURNE, A Word for the Country. St. 1.
(c. 1880)

He clearly enunciates 'Might is right'—one of the few strings he played through life.

JOHN NICHOL, Carlyle, p. 77. (1892) The Germans say, "Ein Handvoll Gewalt ist besser als ein Sackvoll Recht" (A handful of might is better than a sackful of right), or "Der Stärkste hat Recht" (The strongest has right), or "Gewalt geht vor dem Recht" (Might goes before right). The Spanish form is, "No hay tal razon como la del baston"

(There is no argument like that of the stick).

2 Earth's might decays, the might of men decays. (φθίνει μὲν ἰσχυρὸς γῆς, φθίνει δὲ σώματος.)

SOPHOCLES, Oedipus at Colonus, l. 610. (c. 408
B.C.)

3 But let the free-winged angel Truth their guarded passes scale,

To teach that right is more than might, and justice more than mail!

J. G. WHITTIER, Brown of Ossawatimie. (1859)

Let us have faith that right makes might, and in that faith let us to the end dare to do our duty as we understand it.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Address, Cooper Institute,
N.Y., 27 Feb., 1860. Concluding sentence.

The English proverb is "Might is not always right." The French say, "Force n'est pas droit" (Might is not right), the Germans,
"Recht geht vor Macht" (Right goes before might).

MILDNESS

See also Gentleness

4 A temper as mild as milk.

THOMAS HARDY, Far from the Madding Crowd.
Ch. 4. (1874)

Sounds as mild as a milkmaid.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), Phoebe. (1909)

She looks as placid as milk.

CHRISTOPHER HALE, Exit Screaming, p. 43.
(1942)

5 He is as lough as a lomb.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman, Text A, passus vi, l. 43. (c. 1362)

Stille as a lamb, most meek off his visage.

JOHN LYDGATE, tr., Fall of Princes. Bk. i, l. 6934.
(1440)

I shall make hym as styll as a lambe or euer I haue done with hym.

ROBERT WHITINTON, Vulgaria, p. 99. (1520)

I can make hym as mylde as a lambe.

PAISGRAVE, La Langue Françoise, 626. (1530)

In peace was never gentle lamb more mild.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, ii, 1, 175. (1595)

As gentle (or mild) as a lamb.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 206. (1670)

From a tygress she became as mild as a lamb.

ALEMAN, Guzman, ii, 62. (1707) STEVENSON,
Treasure Island. Ch. 13. (1883)

6 Milder than the silent sea, more dulcet than a zephyr. (Leniorem quam mutum est mare, | liquidiusculusque quam ventus est favonius.)

PLAUTUS, Miles Gloriosus, l. 664. (c. 200 B.C.)

Milder than olive oil. (Oleo tranquilliores.)

PLAUTUS, Poenulus, l. 1235. (c. 194 B.C.)

As mild as goosemilk.

MARK TWAIN, Huckleberry Finn. Ch. 34. (1884)

1 Sylvia's like autumn ripe, yet mild as May.
POPE, Pastorals: Spring, l. 81. (1704)

2 Fair is my love, but not so fair as fickle,
Mild as a dove, but neither true nor trusty.
SHAKESPEARE (?), The Passionate Pilgrim. Sec. 7. (1599)

3 Dress quiet, sir: draw it mild.
THACKERAY, Ravenswing. Ch. 3. (1837)
A pint of double X, and please to draw it mild.
R. H. BARIHAM, Ingoldsby Legends: Misadventures at Margate. (1842)
Draw me a pot of beer, mother, and, mother, draw it mild!
W. E. AYTOUN, The Biter Bit. (c. 1850)
Our ladies faithfully promised to "draw it as mild" as possible; but when they made their appearance in most splendid array, I felt rather uncertain as to what the consequences might have been if they had drawn it strong.
G. A. SALA, in Daily Telegraph (London), 6 April, 1864.

MILE

4 Whosoever shall compel thee to go a mile, go with him twain. (καὶ ὅστις σε ἀγγαρεύσει μίλιον ἔν, ὕπαγε μετ' αὐτοῦ δύο.)

New Testament: Matthew, v, 41. (c. A. D. 50)
The Vulgate is, "Quicumque te angariaverit mille passus, vade cum illo et alia duo." The Rabbis had a similar proverb, "If thy neighbor call thee an ass, put a packsaddle on thy back." Cited by TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 60, with the comment, "Do not, that is, withdraw thyself from wrong, but rather go forward to meet it."

5 Coo.: Where be your tooles? Nic.: Within a mile of an oake, sir.

HENRY PORTER, The Two Angry Women of Abington. Sc. 11. (1599)
Where's your mistress?—Within a mile of an oak, dear madam, I'll warrant you.

APHRA BEHN, Sir Patient Fancy. Act iii, sc. 1. (1678)
Your worship can tell within a mile of an oak where he is.

THOMAS D'URFEY, The Comical History of Don Quixote. Pt. iii, act v, sc. 1. (1696)

6 All the contrey was of him covered the length of a walshe myle.

UNKNOWN, Merlin. Ch. 15, p. 247. (c. 1450) A long and tedious mile.

Like a Welch mile, long and narrow.

FRANCIS GROSE, A Classical Dictionary of the Vulgar Tongue: Welch Mile. (1785) There are similar proverbial sayings about the Irish mile, which is about a mile and a quarter.

These are Robin Hode's miles, as the prouerbe is.
WILLIAM CUNNINGHAM, The Cosmographical Glasse, p. 57. (1559) A mile of several times the recognized length.

A MISS AS GOOD AS A MILE, see under MISS.

MILK

7 Suffolk milk. Three times skimm'd sky-blue.
ROBERT BLOOMFIELD, in Suffolk Garland, p. 374. (1818)

Things are seldom what they seem.
Skim milk masquerades as cream.
W. S. GILBERT, H.M.S. Pinafore. Act ii. (1878)
What a lamentable example you are of skim milk masquerading as cream.
R. A. J. WALLING, The Spider and the Fly, p. 39. (1940) See also under SEEMING.

8 The milk and water they have thrown upon the first [canto].

LORD BYRON, Letter to Murray, 1 Feb., 1819.
Referring to Don Juan.

All their pretty milk-and-water ways.
BYRON, Don Juan, Canto viii, st. 90. (1823)

My rascals are no milk-and-water rascals.

THACKERAY, Vanity Fair. Ch. 8. (1848)

A mere milk-and-water family visitor.

J. E. COOKE, Virginia Comedians, i, 179. (1854)

This gentleman is more milk and watery with you than I'll be.

DICKENS, Our Mutual Friend. Bk. iv, ch. 3. (1865)

A milk-and-water damsel of the real Dickensian ideal.

J. H. FRISWELL, Modern Men of Letters, i, 14 (1870)

It was the milk and water policy of the government that encouraged the southern people to act the way they did.

C. C. ANDREWS, Recollections, p. 206. (1907)

MILK AND HONEY, see under LAND.

9 The thyrd [doctrine] is that thow take no sorowe of the thynges lost whiche may not be recovered.

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., Aesope (Jacobs), ii, 270. (1484)

No weeping for shed milk.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 40. (1659)
RAY, English Proverbs, p. 269. (1678)

Sir, there is no crying for shed milk, that which is past cannot be recall'd.

ANDREW YARRANTON, England's Improvement. Pt. ii, p. 107. (1681)

'Tis a folly to cry for spilt milk.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

Well, my dear, said I, it is needless crying over shed milk.

UNKNOWN, True Anti-Pamela, p. 131. (1741)

He would say, like a wise man, "There's no use in crying over spilled milk."

JAMES PAYN, The Canon's Ward. Ch. 15. (1884)
Of the scores of examples which might be given of the use of this cliché only a few will be noted.

It's no use to cry over what's done and can't be helped.

MARK TWAIN, A Connecticut Yankee, p. 404 (1889)

She was one of those women who do not believe in crying over spilled milk.

J. S. FLETCHER, The Diamonds. Ch. 28. (1923)

It's no good crying over spilt milk, because all the forces of the universe were bent on spilling it.

W. S. MAUGHAM, Of Human Bondage, p. 343. (1915)

Gospel of Spilt Milk.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, The Great Adventure. Chapter heading. (1918)

Try to keep from crying after the milk has been so terribly spilt.

JONATHAN STAGG, Turn of the Table, p. 223. (1940)

It's no good crying over spilt milk.

H. G. WELLS, You Can't Be too Careful, p. 177. (1942)

Nay, 'tis no use crying for spilt milk.

S. V. BENÉT, Western Star, p. 94. (1943)

1 Wash thy milke off thy liver (say we).

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Souhait. (1611)
Purge yourself of cowardice. See also under COWARDICE.

If you would live for ever, you must wash milk from your liver.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 36. (1670)
FULLER, No. 6073. See also under WINE.

2 My clype, my vnspaynit gyane,
With moderis milk git in your mychane.

WILLIAM DUNBAR, Poems, lxxv, 37. (c. 1510)

The earth squeezes the poor wretch so hard, that his Mothers milk comes running out at his nose.

ARCHIBALD LOVELL, tr., Travels into the Levant, i, 40. (1687)

His auditor had sucked in such doctrines with his mother's milk.

G. P. R. JAMES, The Convict, ii, 50. (1847)

3 Nothing turns sourer than milk. i. e. A mild, good-humoured man is most determined, when he is thoroughly provoked.

ROBERT FORBY, The Vocabulary of East Anglia, p. 428. (1830)

4 This theyr painful purgatorye . . . hath of longe time but decaued the people and mylked them from theyr monye.

JOHN FRITH, A Disputacion of Purgatorye: To the Reader. (c. 1526)

I took nothing in hand the whole day but milking news from her (a rather rural metaphor).

JANE CARLYLE, Early Letters, p. 190. (1831)

Tooth is milking his client.

EDGAR SALTUS, Madam Sapphira, p. 204. (1893)

5 That fell out which is in the common proverb, sc. Wilst the one milks the Ram, the other holds under the Sieve.

JOHN HALES, Several Tracts, p. 40. (a. 1656)
"To milk the ram, or the bull," to engage in an enterprise doomed to failure.

6 Mylke . . . is white And lieth not in the dike,
But all men know it good meate;
Inke is all blacke And hath an ill smacke,
No man will it drink or eat.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1546)

7 As the proverb goeth, looke to drinke there or else now where a good draught of hens milk.

PHILEMON HOLLAND, tr., Pliny: Epistle to Ves-pasian. (1601)

8 Hast thou the gold? . . . Did the cow give down her milk freely?

MARLOWE, The Jew of Malta, l. 1818. (c. 1592)
Consent to be "milked."

They shall not give down than milk for your comfort.

JOHN PRESTON, The Breast-plate of Faith and Love. Ch. 7. (a. 1628) Yield the expected assistance or profit.

I must flatter him and stroke him too, he will give no milk else.

SHACKERLEY MARMION, The Antiquary. (1641)

9 Milk on wine is poison, wine on milk is welcome. (Lait sur vin est venin, Vin sur lait est souhait.)

GABRIEL MEURIER, Trésor des Sentences. (c. 1525) The English jingle is, "Milk before wine, I wish 't were mine; Milk taken after is poison's daughter." RAY, Proverbs, p. 36 (1678), cites the French and adds, "This is an idle old saw, for which I can see no reason, but rather the contrary."

Milk says to wine, Welcome, friend.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 186. (1640)

10 Milk is food for babes, but for grown men wheaten bread. (νηπίοις μὲν ἐστὶ γάλα τροφή, τέλειοις δὲ τὰ ἐκ πυρῶν πέμματα.)

PHILO, De Agricultura, Sec. 9. (c. A. D. 40)

Ye . . . are become such as have need of milk, and not of strong meat. For every one that useth milk is unskillful in the word of righteousness: for he is a babe. (γάλακτος, οὐ στερεᾶς τροφῆς.)

New Testament: Hebrews, v, 12-13. (c. A. D.

90) The Vulgate is, "Facti estis quibus lacte opus sit, non solido cibo."

11 Their milk sod [boiled] over.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 354. (1678)

His Milk boiled over.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2510. (1732)

12 Yet do I fear thy nature;
It is too full o' the milk of human kindness
To catch the nearest way.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. i, 5, 17. (1606)

With the sweet milk of human kindness blest.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, Epistle to William Hogarth, l. 57. (1762)

The thunder of your words has soured the milk of human kindness in my breast.

SHERIDAN, The Rivals. Act iii, sc. 4. (1775)

These gentle historians . . . dip their pens in nothing but the milk of human kindness.

EDMUND BURKE, Letter to a Noble Lord. (1796)

To rankling poison hast thou turned in me the milk of human kindness. (In gährend Drachengift hast du Die Milch der frommen Denkert mir verwandelt.)

SCHILLER, Wilhelm Tell. Act iv, sc. 3. (1804)

What's come of my milk of human kindness? It turns into curds and whey when I think of him.

DICKENS, Nicholas Nickleby. Ch. 38. (1839)
Inspired by the milk-and-water of human kindness.

THACKERAY, Critical Reviews. Works (1886), xxiii, 208. (1844)

Bishop Wilberforce . . . after meeting with a brother Bishop . . . said he had often heard of the milk of human kindness, but never hitherto had he met the cow.

E. M. SNEYD-KYNNERSLEY, H. M. I. Ch. 9. (1908)

A veritable widow's cruse, brimming with the milk of human kindness.

A. R. HILLIARD, Justice Be Damned, p. 13. (1941)
He doesn't strike me as a man overflowing with the milk of human kindness.

R. A. J. WALLING, The Corpse with the Eerie Eye, p. 10. (1942) The French call it, "Le lait de la tendresse humaine."

<sup>1</sup> It is cheaper to buy milk than keep the cow.
BERNARD SHAW, Pen Portraits and Reviews: Samuel Butler. (1932) Quoted as an old proverb.

<sup>2</sup> That's all the milk in the cocoanut.
R. A. J. WALLING, A Corpse by Any Other Name, p. 82. (1943)

MILL

<sup>3</sup> We've all passed through that mill.
ROLF BOLDREWOOD (T. A. BROWNE), A Colonial Reformer, p. 147. (1890)

To put through the mill. To compel a person to learn by experience. From grain that is milled.

PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: Put. (1941)

<sup>4</sup> Ye had as lief go to mill as to mass.
WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 336. (1605)
You had rather go to Mill than to Mass.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5909. (1732)

<sup>5</sup> The water that is past cannot make the mill goe.

THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 151. (1633)
The mill cannot grind with water that's past.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 159. (1640) From the Spanish, "Con agua pasada no muele molino." The French say, "Le moulin ne moult pas avec l'eau coulée en bas."

Delay breeds danger. It is best grinding at the mill before the water is past.

PETER MOTTEUX, tr., Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 71. (1712) An interpolation by Motteux.

Oh seize the instant time; you never will With waters once passed by impel the mill.

R. C. TRENCH, Poems: Proverbs, xix, 303. (1865)
And a proverb haunts my mind

As a spell is cast,
"The mill cannot grind
With the water that is passed."

SARAH DOUDNEY, The Lesson of the Water-mill. (c. 1890)

<sup>6</sup> There is no lykelihooode that those thinges will bring gryst to the mill.

ARTHUR GOLDING, tr., Calvin on Deuteronomy, cxxiii, 755. (1583)

Lewis the eleventh . . . could well tell how to play his game, and draw water to his owne Mill.

JAMES HOWELL, The Preheminence of Parliament, p. 10. (1644)

The Invention of bringing more water to the Popes Mill.

WILLIAM HUGHES, The Man of Sin. Bk. ii, ch. 8. (1677)

Let them go on, it brings grist to our mill.
SAMUEL FOOTE, The Lame Lover. Act i. (1770)
Sermons to thy mill bring grist.

LORD BYRON, To Murray, 25 March, 1818.
Meantime the fools bring grist to my mill, so let them live out their day.

DICKENS, Nicholas Nickleby. Ch. 34. (1838)
Some people make fat, some blood, and some bile; and whatever they take is a sort of grist to the mill.

GEORGE ELIOT, Middlemarch. Ch. 10. (1872)

<sup>7</sup> The same water that drives the mill, decayeth it.

STEPHEN GOSSON, The Schoole of Abuse. (1579)
As good Water goes by the Mill, as drives it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 691. (1732)

<sup>8</sup> The Mill gets by going.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 127. (1640)
"The mill gains by going, and not by standing still," he said, and added, . . . "But it is always a mistake to grind another's wheat for nothing."

H. S. MERRIMAN, In Kedar's Tents. Ch. 30 (1897) A rendering of the Spanish proverb, "Andando gana la hazeña, que no estándose queda."

<sup>9</sup> The mill that is always going grinds coarse and fine.

P. W. JOYCE, English as We Speak It, p. 115. (1910)

<sup>10</sup> Mills and women ever want something.

GEORGE PETTIE, tr., Civile Conversation, fo. 137 (1586)

Mills and wives ever want.
HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

Mills and wives are ever wanting.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 18. (1670)

Wives and mills are aye wanting. It requires much to keep a mill useful, a wife fine.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 249. (1721)

<sup>11</sup> The mills of the gods grind slowly, but they grind small. (ὁψέ θεῶν ἀλέουσι μύλοι, ἀλέουσι δὲ λεπρῶ.)

SEXTUS EMPIRICUS, Against Mathematicians, i. 287. (c. A. D. 190) Quoting an unknown poet.

See GAISFORD, Paroemiologia Graeca, p. 164: Proverbiae Cod. Coisl., No. 396. Cited by

TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 128
God's Mill grinds slow, but sure.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 749. (1640)

Though the mills of God grind slowly, yet they grind exceeding small;

Though with patience he stands waiting, with exactness grinds he all.

FRIEDRICH VON LOGAU, Singedichte. (c. 1840)

LONGFELLOW, tr., Poetic Aphorisms: Retribution. The German proverb is, "Gottes Mühle geht langsam, aber sie mahlt fein" (God's mill goes slowly, but it grinds fine). Frequently quoted, for example by SHAW, Captain Brassbound's Conversion, Act i. (1899) BEEDING, Twelve Disguises, p. 2. (1942)

God's mills grind slow, But they grind woe.

W. R. ALGER, Poetry of the Orient: Delayed Retribution. (1856)

1 Mercenary lawyers . . . only keep life in the law so long as there is money in the purse, and when the golden stream ceaseth the mill stands still.

SAMUEL WARD, Sermons (1862), p. 128. (1636) The mill stands that wants water.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 33. (1659) Mills will not grind, if you give them not Water.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3414. (1732) The mill cannot grind without water. (ὁ μύλος χωρίς νερόν δεν ἀλέθει.)

ALEXANDROS NEGRIS, Modern Greek Proverbs, p. 93. (1831)

2 I'd much rather eat the meal than turn the mill. (Nimioque edo lubentius molitum, quam molitum praehibeo.)

PLAUTUS, Menaechmi, l. 979. (c. 200 B. C.)

3 They may garlycke pyll Cary sackes to the myll.

JOHN SKELTON, Why Come Ye Nat to Courte?, l. 107. (1522) To add argument to argument.

To the next, more sacks to the mill.

THOMAS NASHE, Pasquil's Apologie. (1590)

MILLER

4 Wel coude he stelen corn and tollen thries, And yet he hadde a thombe of gold, pardee.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 563. (c. 1386) Referring to the miller. "Tollen thries," i.e. take his toll three times. The "golden thumb" is an old jibe, referring to a merchant—any merchant—keeping his thumb on the scales when weighing anything.

A myller dusty poll than dyde come,

A Ioly felowe with a golden thome.

UNKNOWN, Cock Lorells Bote. (c. 1520)

I haue say that euery trew mylner that tollythe treflye hath a gyldeyn thombe.

UNKNOWN, A Hundred Mery Tales. No. xii, p. 22. (1526)

When millers toll not with a golden thumb.

GEORGE GASCOIGNE, Steele Glas, l. 79. (1576)

Every honest miller hath a golden thumb.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 354. (1678) Ray says that the miller's reply was, "None but a cuckold could see it," or "True, but it takes a thief to see it."

Honest Millers have golden Thumbs.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2531. (1732) That which the miller had amassed by means of his proverbial golden thumb.

WALTER SCOTT, The Monastery. Ch. 13. (1820) The miller—the prosperous fellow with the golden thumb.

DOUGLAS JERROLD, The Chronicles of Clovenook, p. 94. (1846)

5 Millers takes ay the best multar [toll] with their own hand.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 78. (c. 1595) The miller got never better moulter than he took with his own hands.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 313. (1721)

6 Dout ye nat the mylners wyll be no losers.

JOHN FITZHERBERT, The Boke of Surueyng, p. 10. (1523)

Millers are the last to die of famine.

F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 144. (1902) The inference being that as the corn is ground, a good part of it finds its way into the miller's bins. The Italians say, "He who manages other people's wealth never goes supperless to bed."

7 Euery one draw water to thyr Myl. (Tutti tirano | [tira] l'acqua al suo molino.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 33. (1578) The French say, "Amener eau au moulin," or, "Tirer eau en son moulin." The Arabs, "Every one rakes the embers to his own cake."

Euery miller is ready to conuey the water to his owne mill.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Works, ii, 181. (1593)

Every man wishes the water to his own mylne.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 30. (c. 1595)

Every miller draws water to his own mill.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 121. (1670)

8 Muche water goeth by the myll, that the miller knowth not of.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546) Much water runeth by the myl, that the miller knowes not of. (Assai aqua corre per il Molino, che il Molinaro non ne sà.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 34. (1578)

Muche water passeth besides the mill that the milner seeth not.

BRIAN MELBANCKE, Philotimus, sig. E3. (1583)

More water glideth by the mill

Than wots the miller of.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus, ii, 1, 85. (1593) Meikle water runs while the millar sleeps.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 76. (c. 1595)

The miller sees not all the water that goeth by his mill.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. iiii, mem. 4, subs. 1. (1621)

Much water goes by the mill, the miller knows not of.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 121. (1670)

Much water slides past the mill that Hob Miller never wots of.

SCOTT, The Betrothed. Ch. 27. (1825)

The miller sees not every wave that flows past.
(Non omnem molitor, quae fluit unda, videt.)

HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 278. (1869)

1 Put a miller, a tailor, and a weaver into one bag, and shake them; the first that comes out will be a thief.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 8. (1659)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 217. (1670)

Many a miller, many a thief.

UNKNOWN, Vinegar and Mustard, p. 19. (1673)

See HINDLEY, Old Book-Collector's Miscellany. Ch. 3. The Germans say, "Der Müller ist fromm, der Haare auf den Zähnen hat" (The miller is honest who has hair on his teeth); the Spaniards, "Cien sastres, cien molineros, y cien texederos son trecentos ladrones" (A hundred tailors, a hundred millers, and a hundred weavers are three hundred thieves). The Germans also say, "Müller und Bäcker stehlen nicht, man bringt's ihnen" (Millers and bakers do not steal; people bring it to them).

2 He . . . is turn'd
The church's miller, grinds the catholic grist
With every wind.

BEN JONSON, The Staple of Newes. Act iii. sc. 2. (1625)

Collonel Goring serving first the one side and then the other, did like a good Miller that knows how to grind which way so ever the Wind sits.

SELDEN, Table-Talk (Arber), p. 32. (a. 1684)

His Mill will go with all Winds.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2511. (1732)

Like a Miller, he can set to every Wind.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3224.

3 As wight [active] as a webster's westcoat, that every morning takes a thief by the neck.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 34. (1721)

As stout as a Miller's Waistcoat, that takes a Thief by the Neck every Day.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 731. (1732)

'The miller tolling with the golden thumb,' has been often the object of malicious insinuations; and of him the Germans have a proverb: What is bolder than a miller's neckcloth, which takes a thief by the throat every morning?

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 68. (1852) Bebel gives the Latin, "Nihil esse audacius indusio molitoris, cum omni tempore matutino furem collo apprehendat."

4 To what use serves the clapper in the mil. if the miller be deafe?

MABBE, tr., Celestina (T.T.), p. 244. (1631)

In vain is the mill-clack, if the Miller his hearing lack.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 330. (1640)

In vain does the mill clack, if the miller his hearing lack.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 121. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6388. (1732)

5 The miller gryndes more mens corne than one.

THOMAS NASHE, Have With You to Saffron-Walden: To the Reader. (1596)

6 A miller is never dry.

G. F. NORTHALL, Folk-Phrases of Four Counties, p. 6. (1894) He never waits to be thirsty before drinking.

7 He took two grindings out of one sack. (Tiroit d'un sac deux moustures.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. (1534) A French provincial proverb.

It is good to be sure, toll it again, quoth the miller.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 91. (1678)

"It will not be the worse of another bolting," said the miller; "it is always best to be sure, as I say when I chance to take multure [toll] twice from the same meal-sack."

SCOTT, The Monastery. Ch. 37. (1820)

8 To put out the miller's eye.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 343. (1678)

If after . . . 'putting out the miller's eye' by too much water, you add flour to make it stiff.

COPLEY, Housekeeper's Guide, x, 233. (1834)

"You've put the miller's eye out." A general phrase when any liquid is too much diluted with an excess of water.

BAKER, Northamptonshire Glossary. (1854)

9 Too much water drowns the miller, and we spare it in our malt as we would in our mill-dam.

SCOTT, Peveril of the Peak. Ch. 21. (1823)

MILLSTONE

10 The lower stone can do no good without the hyer.

WILLIAM HORMAN, Vulgaria, fo. 153. (1519)

The lower mill-stone grinds as well as the upper.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 172. (1678)

The lower Mill-stone grinds as much as the higher.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4638. (1732)

11 I was between the mill-stones, as one crushed.

WILLIAM SEWEL, History of the Quakers. Bk i, ch. 4. (a. 1720)

It is the millstone they hang round our necks

RITA (ELIZA VON BOOTH), Vivienne. Bk. iv, ch 4. (1877)

12 Your eyes drop mill-stones, when fools' eyes fall tears.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, i, 3, 354. (1592)

Queen Hecuba laughed until that her eyes ran o'er.—With mill-stones.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, i, 2, 158 (1601)

Mens eyes must mil-stones drop, when fooles shed teares.

UNKNOWN, Caesar and Pompey. Act ii, sc. 4 (1607)

13 He who shuns the millstone shuns the meal.
(ὁ φεύγων μύλον ἀφίτα φεύγει.)

UNKNOWN. A Greek proverb. (c. 100 B. C.)

MINCE

- <sup>1</sup> Thy honesty and love doth mince this matter.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello, ii, 3, 247. (1605)
Speak to me home, mince not the general tongue.
SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, i, 2, 109.
(1606)
[They] would either excuse or mince the matter.
JOSEPH HALL, Cases of Conscience, p. 160.
(1649)
Why should he longer mince the Matter?
SWIFT, The Beasts' Confession, l. 95. (1732)
"Well, Tom," said he, "don't mince the matter."
SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Pamela, ii, 82. (1741)

MIND

See also Brain, Thought

I—Mind: What It Is

- <sup>2</sup> Mind: A mysterious form of matter secreted by the brain.
AMBROSE BIERCE, Devil's Dictionary. (1906)
<sup>3</sup> Each man's mind is himself. (Mens cuiusque is est quisque.)
CICERO, De Re Publica. Bk. vi, ch. 24, sec. 26.
(c. 54 B.C.) Motto used by Samuel Pepys.
However Cicero says elsewhere, "Qualis sit animus, ipse animus nescit" (The mind itself does not know what the mind is).
The mind is the man.
BACON, In Praise of Knowledge. Sec. 1. (c.1620)
What's a man but his mind?
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 16. (1639)
The mind of every man is the man: the spirit of the miser, the mind of the drunkard . . . they are more precious to them than life itself!
DANIEL ROGERS, Naaman the Syrian, p. 163.
(1642)
Mind is the master-power that molds and makes, And man is mind.
JAMES LANE ALLEN, Morning and Evening Thoughts. (c. 1910)
<sup>4</sup> The most perfect mind is a dry light. (Lumen siccum optima anima.)
HERACLEITUS, Apothegm. (c.500 B.C.) As quoted by Francis Bacon.
The mind, that ocean where each kind Does straight its own resemblance find; Yet it creates, transcending these, Far other worlds, and other seas; Annihilating all that's made To a green thought in a green shade.
ANDREW MARVELL, The Garden. (a. 1678)
<sup>5</sup> The intellect in every one of us is God. (ὁ νοῦς γὰρ ἡμῶν ἐστὶν ἐν ἐκάστῳ θεός.)
MENANDER, Fragments. Frag. 762K. (c. 300 B.C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Platonic Questions. Sec. 1.
God is Mind, and God is infinite; hence all is Mind.
MARY BAKER EDDY, Science and Health, p. 492, l. 25. (1875)

<sup>6</sup> Mind is the fountain of words and speech its outlet. (πηγὴ γὰρ λόγων διάνοια καὶ στόμιον αὐτῆς λόγος.)

PHILO, Quod Deterius Potiori Insidiari Soleat. Sec. 40. (c. A.D. 40)

<sup>7</sup> The mind is the soul's eye, not its source of power: that lies in the heart. (L'esprit est l'œil de l'âme, non sa force: sa force est dans le cœur.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 149. (1746)

The mind is the atmosphere of the soul. (L'esprit est atmosphère de l'âme.)

JOSEPH JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 40. (1810)

II—Mind: Apothegms

<sup>8</sup> Who may read with ease the mind of another? (τίς ποκα ῥά ἄλλω νόον ἀνδρὸς ἐνλοποι;) )

ALCMAN, Fragments. Frag. 55. (c. 630 B.C.) See EDMONDS, Lyra Graeca, i, 87.

<sup>9</sup> A man's felicity consists not in the outward and visible blessings of fortune, but in the inward and unseen perfection and riches of the mind. (τὰ ἐντὸς ἐκάστου καὶ οὐκ οἰκεία.)

ANACHARSIS, Apothegm. (c. 550 B.C.) See PLUTARCH, Septem Sapientium Convivium. Ch. 12. The English proverb is, "It is the riches of the mind only that make a man rich and happy."

<sup>10</sup> Where there's much mind there's little fortune. (Ubi mens plurima, ibi minima fortuna.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. i, p. 76. (1814)

<sup>11</sup> The march of the human mind is slow.

BURKE, Conciliation with America. (1775)

The guidance of our mind is of more importance than its progress. (La direction de notre esprit est plus importante que son progrès.)

JOSEPH JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 266. (1810)

The human mind always makes progress, but it is a progress in spirals. (L'esprit humain fait progrès toujours, mais c'est progrès en spirale.)

MADAME DE STAËL, Apothegm. (a. 1817)

<sup>12</sup> Dame Nature doubtless has designed A man the monarch of his mind.

JOHN BYROM, Careless Content. (a. 1763)

No man can master his own mind.

DAVID GARRICK, Correspondence, i, 171. (1764)
Quoted as "the old saying."

<sup>13</sup> He found a sort of food for the soul in cultivating his mind. (Animi cultus ille erat ei quasi quidam humanitatis cibus.)

CICERO, De Finibus. Bk.v, ch.19, sec.54. (c.45 B.C.)

I, thus neglecting worldly ends, and dedicated To closeness and the bettering of my mind.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, i, 2, 89. (1611)

<sup>14</sup> Not of sound mind. (Non compos mentis.)

CICERO, In Pisonem. Ch. 20, sec. 48. (55 B.C.)
See also under MADNESS.

The diseases of the mind are more dangerous and more numerous than those of the body. (Morbi perniciosiores pluresque sunt animi quam corporis.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. iii, ch. 3, sec. 5. (45 B.C.)

In sickness the mind reflects upon itself. (In morbo recolligit se animus.)

PLINY THE ELDER, Naturalis Historia. Bk. vii. (A.D. 77)

Canst thou not minister to a mind diseased?

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, v, 3, 40. (1606)

Nature, too unkind,

That made no med'cine for a troubled mind!

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Philaster. Act iii, sc. 1. (1611)

Nothing is at last sacred but the integrity of your own mind.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Self-Reliance. (1841)

Only mind has sight and hearing; all things else are deaf and blind. (vous ὄρη καὶ νοῦς ἀκοίει, τὰλλα κωφὰ καὶ τυφλά.)

EPICHRMUS, Fragments. Frag. 249, Kaibel; Diels, i, 123. (c. 550 B.C.) Frequently quoted, thrice by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 98C, and 336B, and 961A.

It is the mind which both sees and hears, and not those parts of us which serve as windows to the mind. (Animus et videre et audire, non eas partes quae quasi fenestrae sint animi.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. i, sec. 20. (c. 45 B.C.)

She hath a moneths minde vnto Phylosarchus. GEORGE GASCOIGNE, The Glasse of Government. Act ii, sc. 5. (1575) An eager desire or strong inclination for.

I see you have a month's mind to them.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona, i, 2, 136. (1594)

He thaws like Chaucer's frosty Ianuere, And sets a Months minde vpon smyling May.

BISHOP JOSEPH HALL, Virgidemiarum. Bk. iv, sat. 4, sig. D1. (1598)

He hath a moneths mind here to mistresse Francess.

UNKNOWN, The London Prodigal. Act i, sc. 2. (1605) Shakespeare Apocrypha.

To have a moneths mind to a thing. In ancient wills, we often find mention of a moneths mind. . . . The meaning was, because the party deceased, used to appoint a second lesser funeral solemnity for remembrance of him.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 186. (1670) When people earnestly desire a thing, they frequently say, they have a month's mind to it

FRANCIS PECK, Desiderata Curiosa, p. 229. (1732) To have a month's mind to anything. This alludes to the pre-Reformation practice of repeating one or more masses at the end of a month after death for the repose of a departed soul.

E. M. WRIGHT, Rustic Speech, p. 282. (1913)

A princely mind will undo a private family.

LORD HALIFAX, Maxims. (1693) Works, p. 27.

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 364. (1732)

Haue often him byfore your myndes ye.

THOMAS HOCCEVE, De Regimine Principum, l. 2895. (c. 1412)

To comprehend that in minde which they cannot see with eye.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 48. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Methinks I see my father . . . In my mind's eye. SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, i, 2, 184. (1600)

Little minds are wounded too much by little things; great minds see all, and are not even hurt. (Les petits esprits sont trop blessés des petites choses; les grands esprits les voient toutes, et n'en sont point blessés.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 357. (1665)

Great minds are easy in prosperity and quiet in adversity.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 366. (1855)

Little minds, like weak liquors, are soonest soured.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 444.

One-story intellects.

O. W. HOLMES, The Poet at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 2. (1872)

Little minds are interested in the extraordinary; great minds in the commonplace.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Epigrams. (1900) An unknown writer adds, "Great minds discuss ideas, average minds discuss events, small minds discuss people."

To be bored by essentials is characteristic of small minds.

R. U. JOHNSON, Poems of Fifty Years: Preface. (1931)

The mind is trained by knowledge.

KHATI I, KING OF EGYPT, Teaching. No. ix. (c. 2500 B.C.) Budge, tr.

Clothed, and in his right mind. (ἡματισμένον καὶ σωφρονοῦντα.)

New Testament: Luke, viii, 35. (c. A.D. 65)

Also Mark, v, 15. The Vulgate is, "Vestitum. ac sana mente."

Where the minde is past hope, the face is past shame.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 341. (1580)

Rubbe out the wrinkles of the minde, and be not curious about the weams in the face.

LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 463.

Anxious minds quake with both hope and fear. (Sollicitae mentes speque metuque pavent.)

OVID, Fasti. Bk. iii, l. 361. (c. A.D. 8)

A sick mind cannot endure harshness. (Mensque pati durum sustinet agra nihil.)

OVID, Ex Ponto. Bk. i, epis. 5, l. 18. (A.D. 13)

We must spare the mind which has received a grievous wound. (Parcendum est animo miserabile vulnus habenti.)

OVID, Ex Ponto. Bk. i, epis. 5, l. 23.

1 A mind undaunted by death. (Mens interrita leti.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. x, l. 616. (A. D. 7)
The mind alone cannot be exiled. (Mente tamen, quae solo loco non exulat.)

OVID, Ex Ponto. Bk. iv, epis. 9, l. 41. (A. D. 13)
The Latin proverb is, "Mens invicta manet"
(The mind remains unconquered).

2 I am of dyverse myndes, je me varie.

JEHAN PALSGRAVE, La Langue Françoise, p. 428. (1530)

You are of so many minds, you'll never be married.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 374. (1721)
You'll never be mad, you are of so many minds.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

I was in twenty minds whether to take her first.
ROBERT PALTOCK, The Life of Peter Wilkins
Bk. i, ch. 21. (1751)

I was in twenty minds at once.

DICKENS, David Copperfield. Ch. 25. (1850)
Jack [Cade] . . . was in two minds about fighting or accepting a pardon.

DICKENS, Child's History of England, ii, 171. (1853)

SO MANY MEN, SO MANY MINDS, see under OPINION.

3 And I maye catch hym ones, I shall tell hym more of my mynde.

JEHAN PALSGRAVE, La Langue Françoise, p. 478/2. (1530)

Your betters have endur'd me say my mind.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, iv, 3, 75. (1594)

Give me leave To speak my mind.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, ii, 7, 59. (1600)

I don't see why a man is not to speak his mind.
FRANCES BURNEY, Cecilia. Ch. 10. (1782)

I let them know my mind.

JAMES BERESFORD, The Miseries of Human Life, vii, 77. (1806)

4 It shall coste me a fall, but I wyll have my mynde.

JEHAN PALSGRAVE, La Langue Françoise, p. 499/1. (1530) I will get what I want.

And she as women wont will haue her minde.
FRANCIS ROUS, Thule, sig. N2. (1598)

5 I have a mynde to one, I have a favour to hym.

JEHAN PALSGRAVE, La Langue Françoise, p. 580/1. (1530)

He'll meet a man . . . that has a mind to him.
BEN JONSON, The Devil Is an Ass. Act i, sc. 2. (1616)

The blacksmith said to me the other day that his prentice had no mind to his trade.

GEORGE ELIOT, Daniel Deronda. Ch. 58. (1876)

6 Be ye all of one mind. (πάντες διόφρονες.)

New Testament: I Peter, iii, 8. (c. A. D. 63)
The Vulgate is, "Omnes unanimēs."

Would we wer both of one minde.

JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 62. (1579)

I would we were all of one mind, and one mind good.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline, v, 4, 212. (1609)

7 When once I have made up my mind, the thing is fixed with a ten-inch nail. (Quod semel destinavi, clavo tabulari fixum est.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 75. (c. A. D. 60)

He . . . had wisely made up his mind to what could no longer be avoided.

MACAULAY, History of England. Vol. i, ch. i, p. 107. (1849)

We had all quietly made up our minds.

R. L. STEVENSON, Treasure Island. Bk. iv, ch. 17. (1883)

8 Each man has his own peculiar cast of mind. (Sua cuique quum sit animi cogitatio.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables: Bk. v, Prologue, l. 7. (c. 25 B. C.)

Each mind has its own method.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Intellect. (1841)

9 Trust not a mind in pain. (Animo dolenti nihil oportet credere.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 27. (c. 43 B. C.)

10 A sage will rule his mind, a fool will be its slave. (Animo imperabit sapiens, stultus serviet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 40. (c. 43 B. C.)
Restrain your mind. (Compesce mentem.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 16. l. 22. (23 B. C.)

Rule your mind, which, if it is not your servant, is your master. (Animum rege; qui nisi paret imperat.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 2, l. 62. (20 B. C.)

11 Straining breaks the bow, relaxation the mind. (Arcum intensio frangit, animum remisso.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 53. (c. 43 B. C.)

To relax the mind is to lose it. (Remittere animum quasi amittere est.)

MUSONIUS, Apothegm. (c. A. D. 50) See AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticae. Bk. xviii, ch. 2.

The minde being voyde of exercise, the man is voyde of honestie.

JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 111. (1579)

Is it not true which Seneca reporteth, that as too much bending breaketh the bowe, so too much remission spoyleth the minde?

JOHN LYL, Euphues, p. 112.

The mind is like a bow, the stronger for being unbent.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Otium. (1636)

Strength of mind is Exercise, not Rest.

POPE, An Essay on Man. Epis. ii, l. 104. (1732)

12 The steadfast mind admits no variable opinion. (Gravis animus dubiam non habet sententiam.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 232. (c. 43 B. C.)

You are already love's firm votary,

And cannot soon revolt and change your mind.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona, iii, 2, 59. (1594)

I have lived to change my mind.

JOHN ALLEN, in DUNCOMBE, Letters by Eminent Hands, i, 214. (1719)

A man will never change his mind if he has no mind to change.

TRENCH, Lessons in Proverbs. Ch. 3. (1852)

<sup>1</sup> A noble mind brooks not the lashes of the tongue. (Ingenuus animus non fert vocis verbera.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 322. (c. 43 B. C.)

A narrow mind has a broad tongue.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Penim (Choice of Pearls). No. 320. (c. 1050) Ascher, tr.

<sup>2</sup> Our minds, like our stomachs, are whetted by change of food. (Mens mutatione recreabitur, sicut in cibis, quorum diversitate reficitur stomachus.)

QUINTILIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae. Bk. i, ch. 12, sec. 5. (c. A. D. 80)

The mind is but a barren soil . . . unless it be continually fertilized and enriched with foreign matter.

JOSHUA REYNOLDS, Discourses. Lect. 6. (1774)

<sup>3</sup> It was lucky for us that we did not follow the nuptial procession (which we had more than half a mind to do).

LEITCH RITCHIE, Wanderings by the Loire, p. 26. (1833)

She had half a mind to reply.

LORD LYTTON, My Novel. Bk. x, ch. 3. (1853)

My Brother and I had all the mind in the world to laugh.

CARLYLE, Frederick the Great. Bk. vi, ch. 2. (1858)

He had little mind to be a martyr.

J. E. T. ROGERS, Historical Gleanings. Ser. ii, p. 102. (1870)

He had no mind to be a mere conqueror.

FREEMAN, Norman Conquest. Vol. iv, ch. 17. (1871)

I have a great mynd to be a lecherous man.

JOHN BALE, Kyng Johan, p. 12. (c. 1550)

This gentleman has a great mind to learn to dance.

CHAPMAN AND SHIRLEY, The Ball. Act iii, sc. 1. (1632)

They had half a mind to refuse me a passage.

GEORGE SHELVOCKE, A Voyage Around the World, p. 462. (1726)

<sup>4</sup> Let every man be fully persuaded in his own mind. (ἐκαστος ἐν τῷ ἰδίῳ νοτὶ πληροφοροῦσθω.)

New Testament: Romans, xiv, 5. (c. A. D. 57)

The Vulgate is, "Unusquisque in suo sensu abundet."

<sup>5</sup> You could almost see the dirt flying behind the paws of his mind.

CHARLES SAXBY, Death in the Sun, p. 150. (1940)

<sup>6</sup> A mind enlightened is like heaven; a mind in darkness is like hell. (Hsin li kuang ming shih t'ien t'ang; hsin li 'hei an shih ti yü.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1511. (1875) An ancient proverb.

The mind is its own place, and in it self Can make a Heav'n of Hell, a Hell of Heav'n.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 254. (1667)

<sup>7</sup> A noble mind is free to all men; according to this test we may all gain distinction. (Bona mens omnibus patet, omnes ad hoc sumus nobiles.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xlv, sec. 2. (c. A. D.

64) The Germans say, "Edel macht das Gemüth, nicht das Geblüt" (The mind ennobles, not the blood). See also under ANCESTRY.

The mind is free, whate'er afflict the man.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, The Barons' Wars. Bk. v, st. 36. (1596)

So far as man thinks he is free.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate. (1860)

<sup>8</sup> We should toughen our minds. (Indurandus est animus.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. li, sec. 5. (c. A. D. 64)

<sup>9</sup> A great mind becomes a great fortune. (Magnam fortunam magnus animus decet.)

SENECA, De Clementia. Bk. i, sec. 5. (c. A. D. 54)

The mind that would be happy, must be great. EDWARD YOUNG, Night Thoughts, Nt. ix, l. 1378. (1745)

<sup>10</sup> It is easy to train the mind while it is still tender. (Facile est enim teneros adhuc animos componere.)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. ii, ch. 18, sec. 2. (c. A. D. 55)

Mind your till, and till your mind.

C. H. SPURGEON, Salt-Cellars. (1885)

<sup>11</sup> A good mind possesses a kingdom. (Mens regnum bona possidet.)

SENECA, Thyestes, l. 380. (c. A. D. 60)

My Minde to Me a Kingdome Is.

SIR EDWARD DYER. Title of poem. (1588)

I am no gentleman born, I must confess; but my mind to me a kingdom is.

BEN JONSON, The Case is Altered. Act i, sc. 1.

(1609) Quoted also by JONSON, Every Man Out of His Humour; i, 1.

My mind is a kingdom to me, there's danger in being too great.

Roxburghe Ballads (B.S.), vii, 520. (1775)

"My mind to me a kingdom is" applies alike to the peasant as to the monarch.

SAMUEL SMILES, Character, p. 371. (1871)

<sup>12</sup> Sweet husband, be not of that mind.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, v, 2, 107. (1595)

I don't doubt you'll be of my mind.

MARY WORTLEY MONTAGU, Letter to Pope, 1 April, 1717.

<sup>13</sup> Let Gryll be Gryll, and have his hoggish minde.

EDMUND SPENSER, The Faerie Queene. Bk. ii, canto xii, st. 87. (1590) Gryll, or Grillus, was one of the companions of Ulysses, and was changed into a hog by the enchantments of Circe.

<sup>1</sup> You don't know your own mind.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)
[He] could not be supposed to know his own mind.

SCOTT, St. Roman's Well. Ch. 12. (1824)
Simple folk that knew not their own minds.

TENNYSON, Enoch Arden, l. 476. (1864)

Hurried in mind, like Pomeroy's cat.

QUILLER-COUCH, Troy Town. Ch. 13. (1888)

<sup>2</sup> Bad mind, bad heart. (Mala mens, malus animus.)

TERENCE, Andria, l. 165. (166 B. C.) See also under HEART AND HEAD.

Mala mens, malus animus: an evil disposition breedeth an evil suspicion.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 236. (1576)

<sup>3</sup> The swiftest thing is mind, for it speeds everywhere. (τάχιστον νοῦς διὰ παντὸς γὰρ τρέχει.)

THALES, Apothegm. (c. 600 B. C.) See DIOGENES

LAERTIUS, Thales. Bk. i, sec. 35.

What thing was the most swiftest in the world? Mans minde, because in a moment of time it discurres all things.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iv, p. 173. (1574) Young, tr.

The swiftest thing that is, I beleeeue it be the mynd of man, for in a moment he runneth al the world about.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 37. (1578)

<sup>4</sup> Now hither, now thither, he turns his wavering mind. (Animum nunc huc celerem, nunc dividit illuc.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. iv, l. 285. (19 B. C.)

His mind remains unshaken. (Mens immota manet.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. iv, l. 449. (19 B. C.)

<sup>5</sup> The guilty joys of the mind. (Et mala mentis gaudia.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. vi, l. 278. (19 B. C.)

All things can corrupt perverted minds. (Omnia perversas possunt corrumpere mentes.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. ii, l. 301. (c. A. D. 9)

<sup>6</sup> Mind moves matter. (Mens agitat molem.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. vi, l. 727. (19 B. C.)

All the choir of heaven and furniture of earth—in a word, all those bodies which compose the mighty frame of the world—have not any subsistence without a mind.

BISHOP GEORGE BERKELEY, The Principles of Human Knowledge. (1710)

Mind and Matter.

BISHOP BERKELEY. Title of dissertation. (c. 1710)

'Tis not the Matter, but the Mind.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5105. (1732)

The immateriality of mind, and . . . the unconsciousness of matter.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Rasselas. Ch. 48. (1759)

What is mind? No matter. What is matter? Never mind.

THOMAS HEWITT KEY, Epigram. Published in Punch, vol. xxix, p. 19. (1855)

<sup>7</sup> I have a single-track mind.

WOODROW WILSON, Speech, National Press Club, Washington. (c. 1917)

Paula has a one-track mind and no manners.

GEORGETTE HEYER, Envious Casca, p. 20. (1941)

I think I always had a single-track mind.

AGATHA CHRISTIE, Murder in Retrospect, p. 102. (1942)

MIND: ABSENCE OF, see under ABSENCE. PRESENCE OF, see under PRESENCE.

III—Mind: The Mind Content

<sup>8</sup> A minde content both crowne and kingdome is.

ROBERT GREENE, Farewell to Follie. (1587)

The quiet minde is richer than a crowne.

ROBERT GREENE, Farewell to Follie. (1587)

<sup>9</sup> That best of blessings, a contented mind. (Aequum animum.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 18, l. 112. (20 B. C.)

<sup>10</sup> It is great riches to a man to live sparingly with a quiet mind. (Divitiae grandes homini sunt, vivere parce aequo animo.)

LUCRETIUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. v, l. 1117 (c. 45 B. C.)

It is the mind which maketh mirth, . . . yea the contented minde is the only riches.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 212. (1576)

We say, a contented minde is a great treasure; or is worth all.

COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Contenter. (1611)

A contented mind is a continual feast.

WILLIAM ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis, 381. (1681)

<sup>11</sup> An undisturbed mind is the best sauce for affliction. (Animus aequos optimum est aerumnae condimentum.)

PLAUTUS, Rudens, l. 402. (c. 200 B. C.)

A mind conscious of its own rectitude (Mens sibi conscia recti.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. i, l. 604. (19 B. C.)

By a tranquil mind I mean nothing else than a mind well-ordered. (τὴν δὲ εὐμάριαν οὐδὲν ἄλλο λέγω ἢ εὐκοσμίαν.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. iv, sec. 3 (c. A. D. 174)

<sup>12</sup> The noblest mind the best contentment has.

EDMUND SPENSER, The Faerie Queene. Bk. i, canto i, st. 35. (1590)

IV—Mind and Body

<sup>13</sup> Old is he in mind, but his body is in its prime (γέροντα τὸν νοῦν, σάρκα δ' ἡβώσαν φύει.)

AESCHYLUS, The Seven Against Thebes, l. 622. (467 B. C.)

An old mind in a young body. See also AGE AND YOUTH.

<sup>14</sup> The mind, the bright, quicksilver mind, has but one purpose, to defend the body and ward off death.

MAXWELL ANDERSON, Key Largo. Act II. (1939)

<sup>1</sup> If you are ruled by mind you are a king; if by body, a slave. (Tu si animo regeris, rex es; si corpore, servus.)

CATO (?), Collectio Monostichorum, l. 7. (c.175 B. C.) See Minor Latin Poets, Loeb, p. 624.

We employ the mind to rule, the body to serve. (Animi imperio, corporis servitio magis utimur.)

<sup>2</sup> SALLUST, Bellum Catilinae. Ch.1, sec.2. (c.41 B. C.)
When the best minds grow sluggish, sloth consumes the body. (Cum animus languet, consumit inertia corpus.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. iii, No. 5. (c. 175 B. C.)
There are lazy minds as well as lazy bodies.

<sup>3</sup> FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1740, 1751.
Greater than strength of body is strength of mind. (Corporis exsuperat vires prudentia mentis.)

COLUMBANUS, Carmen Monostichon, l. 1. (c. A. D. 600)

<sup>4</sup> A strong body makes the mind strong.
THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to Peter Carr. (1785)
A soft body makes for a soft mind.
P. A. TAYLOR, Six Iron Spiders, p. 225. (1942)

<sup>5</sup> With mind and body, as with man and wife, it often happens that the stronger vessel is ruled by the weaker.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Vol. i, No. 405. (1820)
We often see the body survive the mind in one man, and the mind survive the body in another. Why do they not agree to die together?

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Vol. ii, No. 62.

<sup>6</sup> As hidden flames by force kept downe are most ardent, so these corrupt humours, covertly lurking, with more force consume and destroy the faire pallace of your minde.

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, i, 18. (1574)
Now my soul's palace is become a prison.
SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI, ii, 1, 74. (1591)

<sup>7</sup> To have health of body, it is necessarie to have contentment of minde.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk i, p. 18. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Menne suppose, that there is alway a light mind, lodged in a gorgeous body.

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 36

<sup>8</sup> The disposition of the mynd followeth the complexion of the body.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk iii, p. 47. (1574) Pettie, tr.

The disposition of the minde followeth the constitution of the body.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 93. (1576)
The disposition of the minde, foloweth the composition of the body.

JOHN LYLly, Euphues (Arber), p. 67. (1579)
Variations on a neo-Platonic idea elaborated by Plutarch, Seneca, Erasmus, and others

Our minde is heavy in our bodies affliction.

JOHN DONNE, Paradoxes, p. 24. (a. 1631)

<sup>9</sup> Our Galen sayth, The disquiet of the minde breedeth the disease of the bodye: and that he hath cured many diseases by bringing the pulses into good temper, and by quieting the minde.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 113. (1574) George Pettie, tr.

My pulse, as yours, doth temperately keep time. And makes as healthful music.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 4, 140. (1600)

<sup>10</sup> There is an unseemly exposure of the mind, as well as of the body.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Sketches, p. 165. (a. 1830)

<sup>11</sup> Unsound minds, like unsound bodies, if you feed, you poison.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1074. (1650)

<sup>12</sup> A sound mind in a manly body. (φρένες ἐσθλαὶ σώμασιν ἀνδρῶν.)

HOMER, when Hesiod asked him what was the best thing of all. (c. 850 B. C.) See ALCIDAMUS (?), Contest of Homer and Hesiod. Sec. 320

A sound mind in a sound body is a thing to be prayed for. (Orandum est ut sit mens sana in corpore sano.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. x, l. 356. (c. A. D. 120)
A sound mind in a sound body, is a short but full description of a happy state in this world He that has these two, has little more to wish for; and he that wants either of them, will be little the better for anything else.

JOHN LOCKE, Some Thoughts Concerning Education. (1693)

A sound mind in a sound body is the perfection of human bliss.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, tr., Aesop's Fables (1738), p. 337. (1692)

A sane mind is generally the effect of a sane body
HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 284. (1823)

Mens sana in corpore sano is a foolish saying. The sound body is a product of the sound mind.

BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists. (1903)

Open bowels and an open mind.

LORD BERNERS, The Camel. Ch. 1. (c. 1930)
Paraphrasing "Mens sana."

<sup>13</sup> He who is sick in mind shows the mark of it on his body. (Animo qui aegrotat corpore hunc signum dare.)

LUCILIUS, Satires. Bk. xxvi, frag. 678, Loeb (c. 131 B. C.)

The contagion of a sick mind affects the body (Vitiant artus aegrae contagia mentis.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. iii, eleg. 8, l. 25. (c. A. D. 9)
A feeble body enfeebles the mind. (Un corps débile affaiblit l'âme.)

ROUSSEAU, Émile. Ch. 1. (1762) The Germans say, "Krankes Fleisch, krankes Geist" (Sickly body, sickly soul).

It sildome falleth out, that a good mind is lodged in a mishapen body.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 8. (1574)

1 The mind is born with the body, matures with it, and grows old with it. (Praeterea gigni pariter cum corpore et una crescere sentimus pariterque senescere mentem.)

LUCRETII, De Rerum Natura. Bk. iii, l. 445. (c. B. C. 45) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, ii, 12.

2 Without any discomfort of mind or body. (Sine offensa corporis animique.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 131. (c. A. D. 60)

3 Nothyng breedeth bane to the body sooner than trouble of minde.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 128. (1576)

It is the justice of God commonly, to supply the debilitye of the body, with the might of the mind.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 266.

4 Pain of mind is worse than pain of body. (Dolor animi gravior est quam corporis.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 166. (c. 43 B. C.)

5 The body may be healed, but not the mind. (I tē shên i pu tē hsin.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1497. (1875)

If the mind be calm, the body will keep cool. (Hsin ting tzu jan liang.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2494.

6 'Tis the mind that makes the body rich.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, iv, 3, 174. (1594)

Our bodies are our gardens, to the which our wills are gardeners.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, i, 3, 323. (1605)

7 One must cultivate vigor of body to maintain vigor of mind. (Il faut entretenir le vigueur de corps, pour conserver celle de l'esprit.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 79. (1746)

One can render the mind more active and supple, the same as the body; it is only necessary to exercise the one as we exercise the other. (On peut rendre l'esprit plus vif et plus souple, de même que le corps; il n'y a pour cela qu'à exercer l'un, comme on exerce l'autre.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 633.

8 Mighty minds laboring within a stunted body. (Ingentes animos angusto in corpore versant.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. iv, l. 83. (29 B. C.)

MINERVA

9 Nothing is proper that is against the will of Minerva, as the saying is—that is, if it is in direct opposition to one's natural bent or genius. (Nihil decet invita Minerva, ut aiunt.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. xxxi, sec. 110. (c. 45 B. C.) Miller (Loeb) translates "invita Minerva," which means literally "Minerva unwilling," as "Going against the grain."

Not without the blessing of Minerva. (Non invita Minerva.)

CICERO, Ad Familiares. Bk. xii. epis. xxv. (43 B. C.)

You will say nothing and do nothing against Minerva's will. (Tu nihil invita dices faciesve Minerva.)

HORACE, De Arte Poetica, l. 385. (c. 20 B. C.)

It is not possible well to goe forward in any thing, Invita Minerva, nature not consenting thereto.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 249. (1576)

That which he doth by long meditation rather than by suddaine inspiration . . . (and as they are wont to say) in spite of Nature or Minerua.

GEORGE PUTTENHAM, The Arte of English Poesie. Bk. iii, ch. 25. (1589)

In spight (as the common saying is) of Minerva.

FRANCIS JUNIUS, The Painting of the Ancients, p. 333. (1638)

THE SOW TEACHING MINERVA, see under Sow.

MINORITY, see Majority

MINUTE, see Moment

MIRACLE

10

One must not rely on miracles.

Babylonian Talmud: Pesachim, fol. 64b. (c. 450)

Miracles do not happen.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Literature and Dogma: Preface. (1883)

Miracles . . . dont happen nowadays.

BERNARD SHAW, Saint Joan. Act i. (1924)

11

One miracle is just as easy to believe as another.

W. J. BRYAN, at Scopes Trial, 21 July, 1925.

12

Miracle comes to the miraculous, not to the arithmetician.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Worship. (1860)

The French say, "Pour qui ne les croit pas il n'est pas de prodiges" (To him who does not believe in them, there are no miracles); the Spaniards, "A los bobos se les aperece le Madre de Dios" (The Mother of God appears to fools). An English form is, "Miracles are to those who believe in them."

To attempt to convert a man by miracles is a profanation of the soul.

EMERSON, Nature, Addresses and Lectures: Address. (c. 1875)

13

Miracles are the swaddling-clothes of infant churches.

THOMAS FULLER, Church-History of Britain. Vol. ii, p. 239. (1655)

A Miracle is a Work which exceeds all the known Powers of Nature.

BISHOP GILBERT BURNET, Exposition of the Thirty-Nine Articles, iv, 62. (1699)

Miracle is the darling child of faith. (Das Wunder ist des Glaubens liebstes Kind.)

GOETHE, Faust. Pt. i, sc. 1. (1806)

Miracles are not the proofs, but the necessary results, of revelation.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Omniana. (1812)

Miracles are the children of mendacity.

R. G. INCERSOLL, Speech, New York, 25 April, 1881.

Miracles are propitious accidents.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Introduction to the Ethics of Spinoza. (1916)

A miracle is an impossible thing that is nevertheless possible.

SHAW, Back to Methusaleh. Act i. (1921)

A miracle is an event which creates faith.

BERNARD SHAW, St. Joan. Act. ii. (1923)

1 So the Miracle be wrought, what Matter if the Devil did it?

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4200. (1732)

2 The miracles prove the power which God has over hearts by that which he exercises over bodies. (Les miracles prouvent le pouvoir que Dieu a sur les cœurs par celui qu'il exerce sur les corps.)

PASCAL, Pensées. Pt. ii, art. xvi, sec. 10. (c. 1660)

3 It must be so; for miracles are ceased.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, i, 1, 67. (1599)

They say miracles are past.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, ii, 3, 1. (1602)

The age of miracles is over.

CLARE BOOTHE, Europe in the Spring, p. 46. (1940)

Fully prepared to subscribe to the belief that the day of miracles was not past.

P. C. WREN, The Uniform of Glory, p. 57. (1941)

The age of miracles past? The age of miracles is forever here.

THOMAS CARLYLE, On Heroes and Hero Worship. Ch. 4. (1840)

The most incredible thing about miracles is that they happen.

G. K. CHESTERTON, The Innocence of Father Brown: The Blue Cross. (1911)

4 Men talke about Bible miracles because there is no miracle in their lives. Cease to gnaw that crust. There is ripe fruit over your head.

H. D. THOREAU, Summer, 9 June, 1850

5 He is curious to a miracle.

JOHN TRAPP, Commentary: Genesis, xxxi, 27. (1643)

Everything becomes you to a miracle.

DRYDEN, Assignment. Act i, sc. 1. (1672)

Nelly . . . was soon busily engaged in her task, and accomplishing it to a miracle.

DICKENS, Old Curiosity Shop. Ch. 16. (1840)

I understand my part to a miracle.

STEVENSON, New Arabian Nights, p. 94. (1882)

MIRE

6 You've got your feet out of the mire. (Extra lulum pedes habes.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. ii, No. 81. (1523)

That is, you've been fortunate in getting out of a difficulty.

7 I sink in deep mire, where there is no standing. (Infixus sum in limo profundus.)

Old Testament: Psalms, lxi. 2. (c. 250 B. C.)

You're stuck in the mire. (In luto haesitas.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 780. (161 B. C.)

Dun is in the myre.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Manciple's Prologue, l. 5. (c. 1386)

Synne . . . bryngith his doere into the same myre that he eschewith.

JOHN WYCLIF, Works (1880), p. 286. (c. 1380)

And of his Slouth he dremeth ofte

How that he sticketh in the Myr.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. ii, l. 93 (1390)

Honest water, which ne'er left man i' th' mire.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens, i, 2, 60. (1608)

See also under MUD.

8 Can't probe mire 'thout getting sullied.

JOHN SPAIN, Death is Like That, p. 204. (1943)

See also under PITCH.

MIRROR

9 The devil's behind the glass.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 502. (1855)

10 She never asks the mirror what she is like (Nec rogare | qualis sit solet aes imaginisum.)

CATULLUS, Odes. Ode xli, l. 7. (c. 57 B. C.)

11 Thus gan he make a mirour of his minde, In which he saugh al hoolly hir figure.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde Bk. i.

l. 365. (c. 1380)

Fleeting images that fill The mirror of the mind

COWPER, The Task, ii, 291. (1784)

12 A broken Glass can't be hurt.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 28. (1732)

The fallen blossom never returns to the branch: the shattered mirror never again reflects.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 440 (1938) A Chinese proverb.

13 What your glass tells you, will not be told by Counsel.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 257 (1640) Similarly, "Your looking-glass will tell you what none of your friends will."

BEST MIRROR AN OLD FREIND, see under FRIEND

14 The more women look in their glass, the less they look in their house.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 252 (1640)

The more women look in their glasses, the less they look to their houses.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 50. (1670)

The more Women look into their Glass, the less they look into their Hearts.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4669. (1732)

15 Beauty breeds arrogance. It is Corinna's fair face makes her harsh with me. Pride grows, forsooth from the reflection in the mirror. (Dat iacies animos . . . scilicet a specul. sumuntur imagine fastus.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. ii, eleg. 17, l. 9. (c. 13 B. C.)

<sup>1</sup> 'Tis not her glass, but you, that flatters her.
SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, iii, 5, 54. (1600)

<sup>2</sup> To hold, as 'twere, the mirror up to nature.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 2, 26. (1600) The purpose or end of acting. SAMUEL JOHNSON, in The Rambler, No. 156, calls the stage "the mirrour of life."

Who teach the mind its proper face to scan,
And hold the faithful mirror up to man.

ROBERT LLOYD, The Actor, l. 265. (1760)
Such books serve to hold the mirror up to time.
GARDINER AND MULLINGER, Studies in English History. Vol. 1, ch. 9. (1881)

<sup>3</sup> There was never yet fair woman but she made mouths in a glass.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, iii, 2, 36. (1605)

<sup>4</sup> Fair is my love . . . and yet, as glass is, brittle.

SHAKESPEARE (?), The Passionate Pilgrim, p. 87. (1599)

The saying . . . that "The first handsome woman . . . was made of Venice glass" . . . implies beauty, but brittleness withal.

JAMES HOWELL, Letters, 1 June, 1621.

Glass and a maid are ever in danger.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 304. (1666)

Glasses and lasses are bruckle ware.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 113. (1721)

MIRTH

See also Gaiety, Merriment

<sup>5</sup> I have always preferred Cheerfulness to Mirth. The latter I consider as an Act, the former as a Habit of the Mind. Mirth is short and transient, Cheerfulness fixed and permanent.

ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 381. (1712)

<sup>6</sup> An ounce of mirth is worth a pound of sorrow.

RICHARD BAXTER, Self-Denial. (c. 1680) See also JOY and SORROW.

<sup>7</sup> Mirth makes the banquet sweet.

CHAPMAN, Blind Beggar of Alexandria. (1598)

<sup>8</sup> He can of murthe, and eek of jolitee
Nat but ynough.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Canon's Yeoman's Prologue, l. 47. (c. 1389)

Ful fair was Mirthe, ful long and high,
A fairer man I never sigh.

CHAUCER, Romaunt of the Rose, l. 817. (c. 1365)

These delights, if thou canst give,
Mirth with thee, I mean to live.

MILTON, L'Allegro, l. 152. (1632)

Grey-beard mirth.

GOLDSMITH, Deserted Village, l. 222. (1770)

<sup>9</sup> In the time of Mirth, take heed.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2829. (1732)

Mustard is good Sauce, but Mirth is better.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3494.

<sup>10</sup> Life without mirth is a lamp without oil.
WALTER SCOTT, The Pirate. Ch. 22. (1822)

<sup>11</sup> Mirth cannot move a soul in agony.
SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, v, 2, 867. (1595)

<sup>12</sup> With mirth and laughter let old wrinkles come.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, i, 1, 80. (1597)

Be large in mirth.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, iii, 4, 11. (1606)

Let's be red with mirth.

SHAKESPEARE, The Winter's Tale. iv, 4, 54. (1610)

<sup>13</sup> I was born to speak all mirth, and no matter.
SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado about Nothing, ii. 1, 343. (1598)

<sup>14</sup> Mirth prolongeth life, and causeth health.

NICOLAS UDALL, Ralph Roister Doister: Prologue. (a. 1553)

And frame your mind to mirth and merriment,
Which bars a thousand harms and lengthens life.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew: Induction. Sc. 2, l. 137. (1594) "Mirth is God's medicine," O. W. Holmes declared. "Everybody ought to bathe in it."

MISCHIEF

<sup>15</sup> General mischiefs depend upon general causes.
HENRY T. BUCKLE, History of Civilization in England. Vol. iii, ch. 2, p. 47. (a. 1862)

<sup>16</sup> They are mynded to do me some myscheffe.

MILES COVERDALE, tr., Psalms, lv, 3. (1535)

If thou follow me, do not believe

But I shall do thee mischief in the wood.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream, ii, 1, 237. (1596)

<sup>17</sup> He that worketh mischief, it shall fall upon him, and he shall not know whence it cometh. (Facienti nequissimum consilium, super ipsum devolvetur, et non agnoscet unde adveniat illi.)

Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, xxvii, 27. (c. 190 B. C.)

He that mischief hatcheth, mischief catcheth.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 324 (1605) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6348. (1732) See also under RETRIBUTION.

<sup>18</sup> The mother of mischief is na mair nor a midge wing.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 98. (c. 1595)

The mother o' a' mischief is nae mair nor a gnat wing.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 260. (1678) "The mother of mischief," says an old proverb, "is no bigger than a midge's wing."

MARIA EDGEWORTH, The Parent's Assistant: Barring Out (1903), p. 307. (1796)

<sup>19</sup> He that is dispos'd for Mischief, will never want Occasion.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2174. (1732)

He'll find Money for Mischief, when he can find none for Corn.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2425.

Mirth and Mischief are two things.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3415.

Now go chafe the wax, with a myschyfe.

JOHN HEYWOOD, John Tib and Sir John, l. 481. (1533)

Commest drunken home with a mischief.

UNKNOWN, Scholehouse of Women, l. 278. (1541)

Get the hence theefe with a wanion.

WILLIAM WAGER, The Longer Thou Liuest, the More Foole Thou Art, sig. G2. (c. 1568)

"With a mischief," "With a wanion," "With a vengeance," "With a witness," are all proverbial expletive phrases, without definite meaning.

What the mischiefe is this?

CLAUDIUS HOLLYBAND, Campo di Fior, p. 283. (1583)

In the name of mischiefe what did you meane?

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Wit Without Money.

Act v, sc. 2. (a. 1616)

This . . . played the mischief with one of his love affairs.

IRVING, Salmagundi (1824), p. 125. (1807)

[He] was playing the mischief with him.

ANTHONY TROLLOPE, The Last Chronicle of Barset. Bk. ii, ch. 12. (1867)

Where the mischief have you been?

KIPLING, Gunga Din. (1892)

He is like the devil, always in mischief.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 13. (1659)

Like Goodyer's pig, never well but when he is doing mischief.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 209. (1670)

He causes enmity between the bear and his fodder.

J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs, p. 759. (1817) He is a mischief-maker.

O, my good Mischiefe! art thou come?

BEN JONSON, Every Man Out of His Humour.

Act v, sc. 5. (1599)

Ah mischief! how you look now.

SUSANNA CENTLIVRE, The Busie Body. Act iv, sc. 4. (1708)

A vexatious or ill-deedie person; as "Ye're a perfect mischief."

JOHN JAMIESON, An Etymological Dictionary of the Scottish Language: Mischief. (1808)

The more mischief the better sport.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 337. (1721)

Kelly calls this "A common, but wicked and foolish saying." SMOLLETT, Gil Blas, i, 136. (1750)

SCOTT, The Black Dwarf, Ch. 12. (1816)

When informed . . . that a scaffold had fallen near the place of execution, by which many persons were killed, . . . he only remarked, "The mair mischief, the better sport."

LORD LOVAT, in CHAMBERS, History of the Rebellion in Scotland. Vol. ii, ch. 12, p. 265. (1747)

Of two mischiefs the least is to be chosen.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 338. (1580)
See under EVIL.

Yet must I commit an inconuenience to preuent a mischief.

BRIAN MELBANCKE, Philotimus, sig. Z1. (1583)

So in many priuate cases, better an inconuenience then a mischief.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Works, i, 284. (1593)

Better once a mischief than ever an inconvenience.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 199. (1639)

Better admit a mischiefe than an inconvenience.

ROGERS, Matrimonial Honour, p. 117. (1642)

Redeem a perpetual inconvenience, although by a present mischief, (as the proverb saith) pulling down a bad chimney with some cost, rather than enduring a perpetual smoky house.

ROGERS, Naaman the Syrian. Ch. 9. (1642)

Better a mischief, then an inconvenience. That is, better a present mischief that is soon over, then a constant grief and disturbance.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 121. (1670)

Better once a mischief, then always inconvenience.

WILLIAM ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis, p. 252. (1681)

Littleton's rule, better a mischief than an inconvenience, sounds oddly, but hath this very meaning.

ROGER NORTH, Examen, p. 330. (1740)

Mischiefe is well saide to haue swift wings.

JOHN MELTON, A Six-Folde Politician, p. 13. (1609)

It is as sport to a fool to do mischief. (Quasi per risum stultus operatur scelus.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, x, 23. (c. 350 B.C.)

The common bye word of the common people seemeth to be grounded vpon good experience, which is: This fellow hath sucked mischiefe euen from the teate of his nurse.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 130. (1579)

Mischief, thou art afoot.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar, iii, 2, 265. (1599)

This is miching mallecho; it means mischief

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 2, 149. (1600)

There is mischief brewing.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Pamela, i, 82. (1741)

To mourn a mischief that is past and gone, Is the next way to draw new mischief on.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, i, 3, 204. (1605)

One mischiefe on an other's neck.

NICOLAS UDALL, Flowers Out of Terence, fo. 103. (1533)

A mischeefe neuer comes alone.

BARTHOLOMEW YONG, tr., Diana, p. 47. See under MISFORTUNE.

Though mischiefe and misery do come by pounds, and go away by ounces: yet a pound of sorrow will not pay an ounce of debt.

LEONARD WRIGHT, Display of Dutie, p. 29. (1589)

Mischiefs come by the pound but go away by ounces.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia. p. 165. (1639)
Mischiefs come by the pound and go away by the ounce.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 121. (1670)
Mischief comes by the Pound, and goes away by the Ounce.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3417. (1732)
See also under MISFORTUNE.

NO MISCHIEF BUT A WOMAN IN IT, see WOMAN:
CHERCHER LA FEMME.

MISER

See also Avarice, Covetousness, Greed

1 He that withholdeth from himself gathereth for another; a stranger will enjoy his goods.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xiv, 4. (c. 190 B. C.) Oesterley, tr.

He that hoardeth up Money, taketh Pains for other Men.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2165. (1732)
Misers are very good people; they amass wealth for those who wish their death.

STANISLAUS LESZCZYNSKI, Œuvres du Philosophe Bienfaisant. (1763)

The miser, like the dog in the kitchen, turns the spit for another. (L'avare, comme le chien de cuisine, tourne la broche pour autrui.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 371. (1856) The French also say, "On ne sait pour qui on amasse" (A man cannot tell for whom he is hoarding).

2 He has not acquired a fortune; the fortune has acquired him. (ὅς οὗτος τὴν οὐσίαν κέρηται, ἀλλ' ἡ οὐσία τοῦτον.)

BION, of a wealthy miser. (c. 250 B. C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Bion. Bk. iv, sec. 50. In the same section, Laertius cites another saying of Bion's, "Misers take care of property as if it belongs to them, but derive no more benefit from it than if it belonged to another."

He doesn't possess his gold; his gold possesses him. (Ne possédoit pas l'or; mais l'or le possédoit.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. iv, fab. 20. (1668)

3 The devils mouth is tearm'd a misers purse.

JOHN BODENHAM, Belvedere, p. 128. (1600)

A covetous mans purse is called the divels mouth.

NICHOLAS LING, Politeuphuia, p. 288. (1669)

The devil always tips at the biggest ruck.

J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 113. (1917)

4 He who distributes bran in alms, for him it is written in the Book of Destiny that a gust of wind will overturn him upon the sérat.

J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 655. (1817) The sérat is the narrow bridge by which Moslems pass over the precipice of Hell towards the avenues of Paradise.

Just alone can fill the eye of man.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 666. Man continues covetous till he is laid in the dust.

If you can't eat at his wedding, eat at his funeral.
BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 668. (1817)
Gain from a stingy person in any way possible.

5 You've got it buried. (γῆ κρύψας ἔχεις.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. iii, cent. iv, No. 21. (1523) The Latin, "Terra defossam habes."

Also referring to a miser's store is the proverbial phrase τυφλὸν πλοῦτον (Blind wealth).

The Devil lies brooding in a Miser's Chest.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4484. (1732)

6 Nature laughs at a miser.

HENRY GEORGE, Progress and Poverty. Bk. ii, ch. 4. (1879)

7 The miserable man maketh a penny of a farthing, and the liberal of a farthing sixpence.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 213. (1640)

8 The guest of the miser will never require medicine.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Penanim (Choice of Pearls). No. 580. (c. 1050) Because he will never over-eat.

Rank misers now do sparing shun, . . .

And dogs thence with whole shoulders run.

GEORGE WITHER, A Christmas Carol. (1622)

Dogs run away with whole shoulders. Not of mutton, but their own, spoken in derision of a miser's house.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 172. (1670)

Nothing can be compared to the banquet of a miser.

PERCIVAL, Tamil Proverbs, No. 1325. (1842)

9 That benchwhistler (quoth I) is a pinchpeny. As free of gyft, as a poore man of his eie.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

Ye will follow him long or 5s. fall from him.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 117. (c. 1595)

You may follow him long, ere a Shilling drop from him.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5944. (1732)

10 The miser acquires, yet fears to use his gains. (Quærit et inventis miser abstinet ac timet uti.)

HORACE, De Arte Poetica, l. 170. (c. 20 B. C.)

The miser is ever in want. (Semper avarus eget.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 2, l. 56. (20 B. C.)

The Germans say, "Der Geizige ist immer arm" (The miser is always poor).

A beggar in the midst of mighty wealth. (Magnas inter opes inops.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode. xvi, l. 28. (23 B. C.)

Poor in the midst of their riches. (In divitiis inopes.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxiv, sec. 4. (c. A. D.

64) Seneca calls this the most serious kind of destitution. Quoted by MONTAIGNE, Essays, i, 40, the French being, "L'indigence au sein des richesses est la plus à plaindre."

Not worth a prayer is the fool who spent his life in hoarding, and never spent the hoard.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. viii, Maxim 1. (c. 1258)
The miser lives a beggar's life. (L'avare vit en gueux.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. iv, fab. 20. (1668)

1
No man is born a miser, because no man was born to possession. Every man is born cupidus—desirous of getting; but not avarus—desirous of keeping.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 25 April, 1778.

2
It is sheer madness to live in want in order to be wealthy when you die. (Sit manifesta phrenesis, | ut locuples moriaris, egentis vivere fato.)

JUVENAL, Satires. No. xiv, l. 136. (c. A. D. 120)
A mere madness, to live like a wretch, and die rich.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. i, sec. ii, mem. 3, subs. 12. (1621)

Some men choose to be miserable that they may be rich.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Holy Living. Ch. 4, sec. 8. (1650)

It would make a man scratch where it doth not itch, to see a man live poor to die rich.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 296. (1678)
To famish in Plenty, and live poorly to dye Rich, were a multiplying improvement in Madness, and use upon use in Folly.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt. i, sec. 7. (1682)

3
If he bind the poke, she'll sit down on it.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 219.

"Spoken when a niggardly man is married to a more niggardly woman. The Scots call a niggardly man a blind poke."

4
The unsunn'd heaps Of miser's treasure.

JOHN MILTON, Comus, l. 398. (1634)
The beautiful eyes of my money-box!
He speaks of it as a lover of his mistress.
(Les beaux yeux de ma cassette!)

Il parle d'elle comme un amant d'une maîtresse.)

MOLIÈRE, L'Avare. Act v, sc. 3. (1668)
Sweet to the miser are his glittering heaps.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 124. (1818)

A pumice stone isn't harder to squeeze anything out of than that old chap. (Pumex non aequè est aridus atque hic est senex.)

PLAUTUS, Aulularia, l. 296. (c. 210 B. C.) "You can't squeeze water from a pumice stone." see under IMPOSSIBILITY.

His money comes from him like drops of blood.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 90. (1678)

Niggardly rich men, whose money comes from them like drops of blood.

JOHN BUNYAN, The Jerusalem Sinner Saved. (1688)

6
He sells his life for gold. (Auro vitam vendat.)

PLAUTUS, Bacchides. Frag. (190 B. C.)

The misers wealth doth hurt his health.

UNKNOWN, Misogonus. Act ii, sc. 2. (c. 1570)
The rust of the miser's riches wasteth his soul as a canker.

M. F. TUPPER, Proverbial Philosophy: Of Compensation. (1839)

7
Living a cockle's life. (κοχλίου βίος.)

PLUTARCH. Citing a Greek proverb noted by Erasmus. Shut up in a shell. The Greeks had many proverbial phrases for parsimonious persons: "Fig-branch-eaters" (κραδοφάγοι); "Acorn-eaters" (βαλανηφάγοι); "Livers on lees" (τρυγόβιοι).

8
Swathe not thy heart in thy hoard.

PTAH-HOTEP, Instruction. No. 30. (c. 3550 B. C.)
Prisse Papyrus. Gunn, tr.

9
The miser himself is the cause of his misery. (Avarus ipse miseriae causa est suae.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 14. (c. 43 B. C.)

The miser may be your easy prey, when you are not a miser too. (Avarum facile capias ubi non sis item.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 21.
A miser except when he dies, does nothing right (Avarus nisi cum moritur nihil recte facit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 23. Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iv, v, 6, with the comment, "They are like swine, which are never good till they come to the knife."

What ill could you wish a miser save long life? (Avaro quid mali optes nisi: "vivat diu!")

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 26. FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1738, gave this a polish, "Wish a miser long life, and you wish him no good."

For the miser his own nature is bitter punishment. (Avaro acerba poena natura est sua.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 46.
To the miser life is not life but drawn-out death (Avaro non est vita sed mors longior.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 47.
The miser never lacks a reason for refusing (Negandi causa avaro numquam deficit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 431.

10
By griping all he would hold fast nothing (Trop embrassoyt & peu estraingnoyt.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 11. (1534)
As the proverb is, He that grips too much, holds fast but little. (Qui trop embrasse peu estrainct.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 46.

11
When the miser is buried his silver is disinterred.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. vii, Apol. 19. (c. 1258)
That which the wretch [miser] doth spare the waster spends.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionarie of the French and English Tongues: Despendre. (1611)

If a man is a miser, he will certainly have a prodigal son.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 369 (1938) A Chinese proverb.

<sup>1</sup>
To keep the hand in the pocket. (ὕπὸ κόλπῳ χεῖρας.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. No. xvi, l. 15. (c. 270 B. C.)

Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, x, 32, with the Latin, "In sinu manum habere." Theocritus is saying that love of money rules the world, and that every man keeps his hand in his pocket, guarding his silver. The pocket was a fold in the bosom of the toga.

This is gout in the hand. (Haec cheragra est.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. i, epig. 98. (c. A. D. 85)

Gout in the feet is podagra.

So harde is your hande set on your halfpenny,
That my reasonyng your reason setteth nought
by.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 6. (1546)

Nothing enters in a close hand.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 80. (c. 1595)

Close as a fist.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 494. (1940) Some variations are, "Tight as bark to a tree," "Tight as wax." The Germans say, "Er stammt nicht aus Schenkendorf, sondern aus Greifswald," which may be rendered, "He does not come from Giversville, but from Grasper's Grove." With one place name as a model, a second is invented for the sake of contrast. A Dutch jingle runs, "Hij is van de familie Jan Van Kleef; | Liever van de heb dan van de geef" (He is of the family of Jack Closefist; rather for having than for giving).

She was tight as the paper on the wall.

MIGNON FRERHART, Escape the Night, p. 66. (1944)

<sup>2</sup>
Manne of all creatures moste miser.

NICOLAS UDALL, tr., Erasmus' Apophthegms, 108b. (1542) It should be noted that the original meaning of miser was wretched, unfortunate, from the Latin miser.

<sup>3</sup>
Money to the miser is a torment, to the wise poor a blessing. (Argent à l'avare est supplice, | Au sage pauvre est benefice.)

UNKNOWN, Proverbes Communs. (c. 1550) LE ROUX DE LINCY, Proverbes Français, ii, 111, gives another version, "Argent sert au pauvre de bñefice, | Et à l'avare de grant supplice."

II—Misers' Characteristics

<sup>4</sup>
He'd put to sea in a sieve for money. (κέρδους ἐκατὶ κἄν ἐπὶ δίπλῳ πλέοι.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Peace, l. 690. (421 B. C.)

Literally δίπλῳ is a wicker mat or hurdle.

He would steal sand from a deserted shore. (Ille potest vacuo furari litore harenas.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. ii, eleg. 19, l. 45. (c. 13 B. C.)

Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iv, ii, 39, who gives the proverbial form, "Furari littoris harenas" (To steal sand from the sea-shore).

He was always ready to pick a halfpenny out of the dirt with his teeth. (Paratus fuit quadrantem de stercore mordicus tollere.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 43. (c. A. D. 60)

He'd reach out his hand if he were dying. (ὀπείχει τὴν χεῖρα ἀποθνήσκων.)

DIOGENIANUS, Adagia. (c. A. D. 125)

He shaves right to the quick. (Radit usque ad cutem.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. iii, cent. iii, No. 34.

(1523) He makes the barber shave him to the quick so that it may be longer before he needs him again. Another Latin proverb is, "Ad mensuram aquam bibit" (He drinks even water by measure).

<sup>5</sup>
Not a single grain of mustard seed falls from his hands.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 596. (1817)

In his house even the mouse is muzzled.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 772. (1817)

So that it cannot eat anything.

<sup>6</sup>
He was such a couetous miser, that he would haue fleade a louse to saue the skin of it.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, p. 117. (1591)

He would have flayed a louse for her skin, he was so couetous.

JOHN WODROEPHE, The Spared Houres of a Souldier, p. 285. (1623)

He'd skin a louse, and send the hide and fat to market.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 323. (1678)

He would skin a flint.

BERTHELSON, Eng.-Danish Dictionary: Skin (1754) See under SKIN.

Flaying of a flea for the hide and tallow.

WALTER SCOTT, The Abbot. Ch. 19. (1820)

You would skin a flea for its hide and tallow.

FREDERICK CHAMIER, Saucy Arethusa. Ch. 21 (1837)

He'd drive a louse a mile for the skin and tallow of 'em.

HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 198. (1869)

Thrifty! Man, she'd skin a flea for its hide.

B. DUFFY, The Coiner, p. 7. (1916)

<sup>7</sup>
He wad rake hell for a bodle [one-sixth of a penny].

HENDERSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 2. (1832)

<sup>8</sup>
She will not part with the paryng of hir nayles.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

Such penny fathers and pinch-fistes, that will not part with the parings of their nails.

THOMAS DELONEY, The Gentle Craft. Pt. ii, ch. 1. (1597)

She will not part with anything, no not so much as the parings of her nails.

JAMES MABBE, Celestina, p. 212. (1631)

He will not part with the paring of his nails.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 37. (1639)

He'll not lose the pairing of his nails.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 184. (1670)

<sup>9</sup>
He will not give his bone to the dog.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 154. (1721)

<sup>10</sup>
Cummin. (κύμινον.)

MENANDER, Fragments. Frag. 363. (c. 300 B. C.)

Used of a miser, though "cummin-splitter" is more common.

A cummin-splitter. (κυμινοπλάτης.)

POSIDIPPUS, Chor., i, 12. (c. 290 B.C.) The cummin is a plant like fennel, with a small seed. A "cummin-splitter" was a skinflint. ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, i, v, gives the Latin, "Cumini sector."

You'll cut your finger, niggard, splitting caraway. (μὴ πῖτάμης τὰν χεῖρα καταπλῶν τὸ κύμινον.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. No. x, l. 54. (c. 270 B.C.) To halve a fig. (σὺκα μέριζε.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. v, No. 38. (c. A.D. 90) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, i, 6, who gives the Latin, "Ficos dividere."

Persons who would cut a fig into parts, or as we say, "who would flay a flint." Ficos dividere. "He will dress an egg and give the broth to the poor."

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs Chiefly Taken from the Adagia of Erasmus. Vol. i, p. 248. (1814) Antoninus Pius, for his desire to search to the least differences, was called Cumini sector, the Carver of cumine seed.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State. Bk. ii, ch. 4 (1642)

1 He was . . . Aberdeen-awa like, and looking at two sides of a halfpenny.

D. M. MOIR, Mansie Wauch. Ch. 20. (1824)

[He] always looked at two sides of a penny.

CHARLES READE, The Cloister and the Hearth Ch. 36. (1861)

She looks twice at both sides of a halfpenny before she will let him go.

CHARLES READE, Hard Cash. Ch. 12. (1863)

2 As vsurers do God knowes,
Who cannot spare the dropping of their nose.

WILLIAM PAINTER, The Palace of Pleasure, iii. 299. (1567)

He will not lose the droppings of his nose.

HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 12/1. (1659)

3 He serves the poor with a thump on the back with a stone.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 90. (1678)

4 He'll dress an egg and give the offal to the poor.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 90. (1678)

To brew in a bottle and bake in a bag.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 91.

Blow out the marrow and throw the bone to the dogs.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 343.

He will swallow an egg and give away the shell in alms.

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 66 (1853)

5 He makes money with his teeth, by keeping them idle.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Pictures. Ch. 16. (1869)

6 You'd take a worm from a blind hen's mouth.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 500. (1940)

MISERY

See also Suffering, Woe

7 Not to be born is better than to be born to misery. (τὸ μὴ γενέσθαι ὃ ἐστὶν ἢ πεφύκῃαι | κρείσσον κακῶς πάσχωρα.)

AESCHYLUS, Fragments. No. 229, Smyth. (c. 458 B.C.) STOBÆUS, Anthology, iv, 53, 17

It is more than punishment to let one live in misery. (Plus est quam poena sinere miserum vivere.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 502.

8 To have a stomach and lack meat, to have meat and lack a stomach, to lie in bed and cannot rest, are great miseries.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 333. (1605)

SOME HAVE MEAT AND CANNOT EAT, see MEAT It is misery enough to have once been happy.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 166. (1639)

9 We are of all men most miserable. (ἐλπεινότεροι πάντων ἀνθρώπων ἐσμέν.)

New Testament: I Corinthians, xv, 19. The Vulgate is, "Miserabiliores sumus omnibus hominibus."

He is the miserablest creature in the world.

SWIFT, Letters (1768), iv, i. (1696)

Go and be miserable.

GOLDSMITH, Vicar of Wakefield. Ch. 17. (1766)

It seemed as if I had misery enough in my one heart to sink the city.

STOWE, Uncle Tom's Cabin. Ch. 34. (1852)

10 Misfortunes bring men together. (Conciliant homines mala.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. ii, cent. i, No. 71. (1523)

Misery acquaints a man with strange bed-fellows

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, ii, 2, 40. (1611)

The misfortunes of men bring them together. (Les malheurs des hommes les rapprochent.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 662. (1746)

The old proverb, that adversity brings a man acquainted with strange bed-fellows.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 42. (1837)

Literature, like misery, makes men acquainted with strange bed-fellows.

LOCKHART, Life of Scott. Ch. 12. (1837)

Increasing troubles make strange bedfellows.

DEAN A. H. STANLEY, Lectures on the History of the Eastern Church. Ch. 5. (1861)

11 He bearith his misery best that hydeth it most.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Marginalia, p. 95. (c. 1590)

He bears Misery best, that hides it most.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1810. (1732)

12 As men saie, misery maie be mother,

Where one beggar is dryuen to beg of an other.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 10. (1546)

13 Nothing is more miserable than man,

Of all upon the earth that breathes and creeps (οὐ μὲν γὰρ τί ποῦ ἐστὶν διζυρώτερον ἀνδρὸς πάντων ὄσα τε γαῖαν ἐπὶ πτελεῖ τε καὶ ἔρπει.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xvii, l. 446. (c. 850 B.C.)

Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 496B, 500B

The misery of man is great upon him. (Multa hominis afflictio.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, viii, 6. (c. 200 B. C.)
Life and Misery began together.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3207. (1732)

Misery is but the shadow of happiness. Happiness is but the cloak of misery.

LAO-TSZE, Tão-teh-king (The Way of Virtue).
Maxim 58. (c. 550 B. C.)

Let us embrace, and from this very moment
Vow an eternal misery together.

THOMAS OTWAY, The Orphan. Act iv, sc. 2.
(1680) Omitted in later editions.

The most miserable fortune is safe, for it has no fear of anything worse. (Fortuna miserrima tuta est, | nam timor eventus deterioris abest.)

OVID, Ex Ponto. Bk. ii, No. ii, l. 31. (A. D. 13)

He only is miserable who knows himself to be miserable. (C'est être misérable que de se connaître misérable.)

BLAISE PASCAL, Pensées. Pt. i, art. 4, No. 3. (c.
1660)

A MAN IS AS MISERABLE AS HE THINKS HE IS, see
under THOUGHT: THINKING MAKES IT SO

It is easy to laugh at misery. (Facile est mise-rum inridere.)

PLAUTUS, Curculio, l. 240. (c. 200 B. C.)

In misery even life is an insult. (In miseria vita etiam contumelia est.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 283. (c. 43 B. C.)
Over the miserable wrong easily gets power. (In misero facile fit potens inuria.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 315.

Sharp misery had worn him to the bones.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, v, l. 41. (1595)

Only those who have known misery can share
it. (τοῖς γὰρ ἐμπείροις βροτῶν | μόνοις ὁλόν τε συνταλαιπωρεῖν τάδε.)

SOPHOCLES, Oedipus at Colonus, l. 1135. (c. 408
B. C.)

II—Misery Loves Company

Men seyn, "to wrecche is consolacioun
To have an-other felawe in his payne."

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde, Bk. i, l.
708. (c. 1380)

For unto shrewes joye it is and ese
To have hir felawes in payne and disese;
Thus was I ones lerned of a clerk.

CHAUCER, Chanouns Yemannes Tale, l. 746. (c.
1386)

Whether one member suffer, all the members suffer with it. (εἴτε πάσχει ἓν μέλος, συνπάσχει πάντα τὰ μέλη.)

New Testament: I Corinthians, xii, 26 (c. A. D.
60) The Vulgate is, "Si quid patitur unum membrum, compatiuntur omnia membra."

What one member suffers is mitigated if the other members suffer with it. (Minus fit quod patitur unum membrum, si compatiuntur alia membra.)

ST. AUGUSTINE, Epistles. Epis. xcix, sec. 2. (A. D.
409)

A common shipwreck is a source of consolation to all. (κοινὸν ναυφράγιον τοῖς πᾶσι παραμύθιον.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. iv, cent. iii, No. 9.
(1523) An old Greek proverb which Erasmus puts into Latin, "Commune naufragium omnibus solatium."

Company in Distress | Make the Sorrow less.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6283. (1732)
Sweet is it to the wretched to have companions in their misery. (Dulce est miseris socios habuisse doloris.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs, ii, 194. (1814) The Spanish form is, "Mal de muchos, consuelo de tontos" (The misery of the many consoles the fools).

Two in distress | Make sorrow less.

BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 548. (1855)

I dislike to perish alone, I yearn to have you perish with me. (Perire solus nolo, te cupio perire mecum.)

PLAUTUS, Epidicus, l. 77. (c. 200 B. C.)

'Tis sweet to drag others down when thou art perishing. (Trahere, cum pereas, libet.)

SENECA, Medea, l. 428. (c. A. D. 60)

A crowd of fellow sufferers is a kind of comfort in misery. (Solacii genus est turba miserorum.)

SENECA, Ad Marciam de Consolatione. Ch. 12.
sec. 5. (c. A. D. 54)

It is a comfort to the miserable to have companions in woe. (Solamen miseris socios habuisse doloris.)

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Valle Liliorum. Ch. 16.
(c. 1450) An old proverb, quoted by many writers.

In misery it is great comfort to have a companion.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 96. (1579)

The common saying, to have companions in misery serves to make it lighter. (Que comúnmente se dice, que el tener compañeros en los trabajos suele servir de alivio en ellos.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 13. (1615)

It's good to have company in trouble. Solamen
miseris socios habuisse doloris.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 5. (1670)

'Tis a comfort to have companions in misery.

ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis, p. 348.
(1681)

They say misery loves company.

J. K. PAULDING, The Bucktails. Act i, sc. 2. (1815)

If misery loves company, misery has company enough.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 1 Sept., 1851.

As the saying goes, misery certainly does enjoy the society of accomplices.

O. HENRY, The Day We Celebrate. (1911)

<sup>1</sup> Misery helps misery. (δυσμόρου γε δύσμορα.)
SOPHOCLES, Oedipus at Colonus, l. 1109. (c. 408 B. C.)

Misery is consoled by others' misery. (Quisque miser casu alterius solatia sumit.)

CATO (?), Collectio Monostichorum, l. 63. (c. 175 B. C.) See Minor Latin Poets, Loeb, p. 628.

<sup>2</sup> There was in this very sharing of their misery with many some alleviation. (ἡ ἰσομοιρία τῶν κακῶν ἔχουσα τινα ὥμως τὸ μετὰ πολλῶν κούφισιν.)

THUCYDIDES, History. Bk. vii, ch. 75, sec. 6. (c. 400 B. C.)

MISFORTUNE

<sup>3</sup> No man shall pass his whole life free from misfortune. (οὐτις μερόπων ἀσινῆς βίον | διὰ παντὸς ἀπήμον ἀμείψει.)

AESCHYLUS, Libation-Bearers, l. 1018. (458 B. C.)
Mortals needs must endure misfortune when sent by Heaven. (ὅμοι δ' ἀνάγκη πημονὰς βροτοῖς φέρει | θεῶν διδόντων.)

AESCHYLUS, Persians, l. 293. (472 B. C.)

Misfortunes appointed unto human life must, we know, befall mankind. (ἀνθρώπεια δ' ἄν τοι πῆματ' ἄν τύχοι βροτοῖς.)

AESCHYLUS, Persians, l. 706. (472 B. C.)

Misfortune wanders impartially abroad and alights on all in turn. (ταῦτά τοι πλανωμένη | πρὸς ἄλλοτ' ἄλλον πημονή προσζάει.)

AESCHYLUS, Prometheus Bound, l. 277. (c. 470 B. C.)

From heaven-sent misfortunes there is no escape. (θεῶν διδόντων οὐκ ἄν ἐκφύγοις κακά.)

AESCHYLUS, Seven Against Thebes, l. 719. (467 B. C.)

The misfortunes of mankind are of varied plumage. (αἰόλ' ἀνθρώπων κακά.)

AESCHYLUS, Suppliants, l. 328. (c. 485 B. C.)

No mortal hath escaped misfortune's taint. (οὐδεὶς δὲ θνητῶν ταῖς τύχαις ἀκήρατος.)

EURIPIDES, Hercules Furens, l. 1314. (c. 420 B. C.)

There is none misfortune cannot reach. (κακῶν γὰρ δυσάλωτος οὐδεὶς.)

SOPHOCLES, Oedipus at Colonus, l. 1722. (c. 408 B. C.)

There is no man that does not suffer misfortune. (ἐφ' ὃν μὲν οὐδεὶς ὅστις οὐ ποιεῖ βροτῶν.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: To Apollonius, 110F. (c. A. D. 95) Quoting from an unknown comic poet. KOCK, Com. Att. Frag., iii, 429.

Misfortune comes to all men and most women. S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 369. (1938)

A Chinese proverb.

<sup>4</sup> My own misfortune is enough. (ἄλις ἐγὼ δυστυχῶν.)

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. Bk. ix, ch. 11, sec. 5. (c. 335 B. C.) Quoted as a proverb. Aristotle is arguing that we should share good fortune with our friends, but keep our misfortunes to ourselves.

<sup>5</sup> The constant man does not lose his courage in misfortune. A torch may point toward the ground, but its flame will still soar upwards.

BHARTRIHARI, Niti Sataka. No. 106. (c. A. D. 100)

Little minds are tamed and subdued by misfortune, but great minds rise above it.

WASHINGTON IRVING, The Sketch Book: Philip of Pokanoket. (1819)

<sup>6</sup> He who cannot bear misfortune is truly unfortunate. (ἀτυχῆ εἶναι τὸν ἀτυχίαν μὴ φέροντα.)

BIAS, Apothegm. (c. 570 B. C.) See DIOGENES

LAERTIUS, Bias. Bk. i, sec. 86. Because misfortune is the lot of every one.

Not every man is able to endure misfortune patiently. (Haut quisquam potis est tolerare acritudinem.)

ACCIIUS, Neoptolemus. Frag. 473, Loeb. (c. 140 B. C.)

Nothing is a greater misfortune than not being able to bear misfortune. (Nullum est malum maius quam non posse ferre malum.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs, Vol. i, p. 8. (1814)

<sup>7</sup> No witness near: we'll easier bear our misfortunes. (Tolle mali testes: levius mala nostra feremus.)

CATO (?), Collectio Monostichorum, l. 35. (c. 175 B. C.) See Minor Latin Poets, Loeb, p. 626.

Most of our misfortunes are more supportable than the comments of our friends upon them.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Pt. i, No. 517. (1820)

<sup>8</sup> Misfortune is not that which can be avoided, but that which cannot.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 369. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

<sup>9</sup> Let the fault or misfortune be what and whence it will.

EDWARD H. CLARENDON, The History of the Rebellion and Civil Wars in England. Bk. i, sec. 71. (1647)

You'll find it his misfortune, not his fault.

ADDISON, tr., Ovid's Metamorphoses. Bk. iii: Cadmus, ad fin. (1717)

That's his misfortune and not his fault.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws Ch. 1. (1843)

The overabundance of leisure . . . is often a misfortune rather than a fault.

SIR BENJAMIN BRODIE, Psychological Inquiries. Vol. ii, ch. 3, p. 83. (1862)

<sup>10</sup> By speaking of our misfortunes we often relieve them. (À raconter ses maux souvent on les soulage.)

CORNEILLE, Polyeucte. Act i, sc. 3. (1640)

<sup>11</sup> Misfortunes issue where diseases enter—at the mouth.

KAIBARA EKKEN, Ten Kun (Ten Precepts): On Speech. (1710) Quoted as an old saying, and Ekken adds: "The man who is careful what he says avoids misfortune, even as he who is careful what he eats and drinks is free from sickness." BROWN, Wisdom of the Chinese, p. 78, quotes the proverb as from Mencius

1 Misfortunes come of themselves. (Mala ultro adsunt.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, Chil. iv, cent. ii, No. 62. (1523) They do not have to be sought.

2 Misfortune is friendless. (ἄφιλον τὸ δυστυχές.) EURIPIDES, Hercules Furens, l. 561. (c. 420 B. C.)

See also PROSPERITY AND ADVERSITY.

Even the strong are broken by misfortunes. (καὶ τοὺς σθένοντας γὰρ καθαιροῦσιν τύχαι.)

EURIPIDES, Hercules Furens, l. 1396. (c. 430 B. C.)

O, the misfortunes of mortal men! the cruel diseases they endure! (ὦ κακὰ θνητῶν στυγεραὶ τε νόσοι.)

EURIPIDES, Hippolytus, l. 176. (c. 428 B. C.)

3 Submissively must mortals bear misfortune. (κούφως φέρειν χρὴ θνητὸν ὄντα συμφοράς.)

EURIPIDES, Medea, l. 1018. (c. 431 B. C.)

All human misfortunes have to be put up with. (Omnia humana tolerabilia ducenda.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum, Bk. xii, epis. 11. (46 B. C.)

Man bears misfortune without complaint—and so it pains him the more.

FRANZ SCHUBERT, Diary, 16 June, 1816.

4 Misfortunes, when asleep, are not to be awaken'd.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia, Nos. 3421, 3422.

(1732) The Spanish form is, "Quando la mala ventura se duerme, nadie la despierte."

5 One man's misfortune is another man's luck, for one cannot be lucky without many being unlucky. (Es desventura para unos la que suele ser ventura para otros.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 163. (1647)

6 Misfortunes to which we are accustomed affect us less deeply. (Damna minus consueta movent.)

HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 74. (c. 400) "Eels grow used to skinning."

In time the rod

Becomes more mock'd than fear'd.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, i, iii, 26. (1604)

7 How ready mortals are to blame the gods. It is from us, they say, that misfortunes come, but they of themselves, through their own blind folly, have sorrows beyond what is ordained. (ὅλον δὴ νῦ θεοὺς βροτοὶ αἰτιῶνται.)

HOMER, Odyssey, Bk. i, l. 32. (c. 850 B. C.)

To many men their own counsels are the cause of their misfortunes. (πολλοῖς ἀνθρώποις τὰ ἴδια βουλευμάτα κακῶν αἷτια γίγνεται.)

ÆSOP, Fables: The Woman and the Servants. (c. 570 B. C.) A woman was in the habit of rousing her servants at first cock-crow, so the servants killed the cock, but without the cock to guide her, the woman roused them even earlier

Men bring their misfortunes on themselves. (ἀνθρώπους αὐθαίρετα πῆματ' ἔχοντας.)

CHRYSIPPUS, On Providence, Frag. 32. (c. 240 B. C.) Quoting a Pythagorean maxim. See AULUS GELLIUS, vii, 2.

8 Quickly do men grow old in misfortune. (αἰψα γὰρ ἐν κακότητι βροτοὶ καταγῆράσκουσιν.)

HOMER, Odyssey, Bk. xix, l. 360. (c. 850 B. C.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 93. (c. 800 B. C.)

They that grieve age in a day. (οἱ δὲ ποθεῦντες ἐν ἡματι γῆράσκουσιν.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls, No. xii, l. 2. (c. 270 B. C.)

Misfortunes hasten age. (Mala senium accelerant.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, x, 62. (1523)

9 The misfortunes hardest to bear are those which never come.

J. R. LOWELL, Democracy. Address at Birmingham, 6 Oct., 1884.

10 In misfortune to use a good spirit helps. (In re mala animo si bono utare, adiuvat.)

PLAUTUS, Captivi, l. 202. (c. 200 B. C.) "It helps to take bad things well." Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, iv, 68.

A good spirit in misfortune makes the misfortune less. (Bonus animus in mala re dimidiumst mali.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 452. (c. 195 B. C.) The Germans say, "Ein gut Gemüth in bösen Sachen, Kann's um die Hälfte leichter machen" (A good spirit in misfortune can lessen it by half).

A tranquil mind is the best seasoning for misfortune. (Animus aequos optimum est aerumnæ condimentum.)

PLAUTUS, Rudens, l. 402. (c. 200 B. C.)

One help in misfortune is to endure and submit to necessity. (Unum est levamentum malorum ingentium, pati et necessitatibus suis obsequi.)

SENECA, De Ira, Bk. iii, sec. 16. (c. A. D. 54)

What is greater or braver than to beat down misfortune? (Quid enim maius aut fortius quam malam fortunam retundere?)

SENECA, De Clementia, Bk. i, ch. 5, sec. 3. (c. A. D. 55)

There is no misfortune but to bear it nobly is good fortune. (οὐχ ὅτι τοῦτο ἀτίχημα, ἀλλὰ τὸ φέρειν αὐτὸ γενναίως εὐτύχημα.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations, Bk. iv, sec. 49. (c. A. D. 174)

If a great man struggling with misfortunes is a noble object, a little man that despises them is no contemptible one.

WILLIAM COWPER, Letter to Clotworthy Rowley, 2 Sept., 1762.

11 The known misfortune is the best. (Nota mala res optumast.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus, l. 63. (c. 194 B. C.)

An euill thyng knownen is best. (Nota res mala, optima.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, Chil. ii, cent. ix, No. 85. (1523) Taverner, tr., fo. 47. (1550) Taverner adds: "It is good keepyng of a shrew that a man knoweth. For whan one is ones accustomed to a shrewe or any other incommo-dity, what so euer it be, it is no grefe." The Germans say, "Ein böses Weib ist nicht mehr böse, sobald man sie kennt" (A bad woman is no longer bad when one knows her).

Misfortunes, as they come, prepare to undergo:
What we've foreseen deals us a lighter blow.

(Prospice qui veniant casus hos esse ferendos: nam levius laedit, quicquid praevidimus ante.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. ii, No. 24. (c. 175 B. C.)

Misfortunes half-seen do torture all the more.
(Dubia plus torquent mala.)

SENECA, Agamemnon, l. 420. (c. A. D. 60)

1 The misfortune of many is death for the good man. (Multorum calamitate vir moritur bonus.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 397. (c. 43 B. C.)
For the unfortunate it is always best to do nothing. (Nihil agere semper infelici est optimum.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 422.
Misfortune seldom hurts steadfastness. (Nocere casus non solet constantiae.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 450.
To be chided in misfortune is harder than misfortune's self. (Obiurgari in calamitate gravius est quam calamitas.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 486.
After misfortune, remembrance is another misfortune. (Post calamitatem memoria alia est calamitas.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 545. See also under REMEMBRANCE.

It is stupid to grumble about misfortune when the fault is your own. (Stultum est queri de adversis, ubi culpa est tua.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 667.

2 How often from misfortune the fount of blessings flows! (O, quam saepe malis generatur origo bonorum!)

RUTILIUS NAMATIUS, De Reditu Suo. Bk. i,
l. 491. (c. A. D. 416)

Misfortune, were its only use
The claims of folly to reduce,
And bring men down to sober reason,
Would be a blessing in its season.
(Quand le malheur ne seroit bon
Qu'à mettre un sot à la raison,
Toujours seroit-ce à juste cause
Qu'on le dit bon à quelque chose.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: Le Mulet Se Vantant de sa Généalogie. Bk. vi, fab. 7. (1668)

Misfortunes make us wise.

Misfortunes tell us what Fortune is.

FULLER, Gnomologia. Nos. 3419, 3420. (1732)

All misfortune is only a stepping stone to fortune.
H. D. THOREAU, Winter, 20 Jan., 1841.

3 In the midst of misfortunes, a headlong course should be taken. (Rapienda rebus in malis praeceps via est.)

SENECA, Agamemnon, l. 154. (c. A. D. 60)
Quoted by MONTAIGNE, ii, 17, with the French, "Dans le malheur, choisissons les résolutions téméraires." DESPERATE DISEASE,
DESPERATE REMEDY, see under DISEASE.

4 In silence let misfortunes pass. (Tacita sic abeant mala.)

SENECA, Hercules Furens, l. 1186. (c. A. D. 60)
To bear misfortune is a light thing, to endure it to the end is a heavy thing. (Leve est miseriae ferre, perferre est grave.)

SENECA, Thyestes, l. 307. (c. A. D. 60)

5 One writ with me in sour misfortune's book.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, v, 3, 82. (1595)

I am that he, that unfortunate he.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, iii, 2, 417. (1600)

6 There is no misfortune that a man must not expect. (οὐκ ἔστιν κακὸν ἀνεπιδόκητον ἀνθρώποις.)

SIMONIDES, Dirges. Frag. 33. (c. 475 B. C.)

Quoted by THEOPHILUS OF ANTIOCH, To Au-tolycus, ii, 37.

Misfortune will soon knock at my door. (Haud multum a me aberit infortunium.)

TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos, l. 668. (163
B. C.)

7 If we were all to bring our misfortunes into a common store, so that each person should receive an equal share in the distribution, the majority would be glad to take up their own and depart. (εἰ συνεισενέγκαιμεν εἰς τὸ κοινὸν τὰς ἀτυχίας, ὥστε διελεῖσθαι τὸ ἴσον ἕκαστον, ἀσμένως ἂν τοὺς πλείους τὰς αὐτῶν λαβόντας ἀπελθεῖν.)

SOCRATES. (c. 400 B. C.), as quoted by PLU-
TARCH, Moralia, 106B. However, HERODOTUS
(vii, 152) asserts that it is not original with Socrates, and VALERIUS MAXIMUS (vii, 2, ext.
2) attributes it to Solon (c. 600 B. C.), as does Montaigne.

Solon said, that should a man heape up in one masse all evils, together, there is none, that would not rather chuse to carry back with him such evils as he alreadie hath, then come to a lawfull division with other men of that chaos of evils and take his allotted share of them.

JOHN FLORIO, tr., Montaigne's Essays. Bk. iii,
ch. 9. (1603)

If, as Socrates said, All men in the world should come and bring their grievances together, of body, mind, fortune, . . . and lay them on a heap to be equally divided, wouldst thou share alike and take thy portion? or be as thou art?

Without question thou wouldst be as thou art

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy
Pt. ii, sec. 3, mem. 1, subs. 1. (1621)

Whate'er 's desired, knowledge, fame, or pelf,

Not one will change his neighbour with himself

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1736

8 To those who fly misfortune all winds are fair. (δὲλ καλὸς πλοῦς ἕσθ'. δταν φεύγῃς κακὰ.)

SOPHOCLES, Philoctetes, l. 641. (c. 409 B. C.)

9 The Unfortunate are still i' th' wrong.
SIR SAMUEL TUKE, *The Adventures of Five
Hours*. Act iv, sc. 1. (1663)

II—Misfortunes of Others

<sup>1</sup> The unfortunate are comforted by the misfortunes of others. (οἱ δυστυχούμενοι, ἐξ ἑτέρων χεῖρονά πασχόντων παραμυθούνται.)

AESOP, Fables: The Hares and the Frogs. (c. 570 B.C.) Aesop's fable of The Tunny Fish and the Dolphin has a similar moral. The dolphin, chasing the tunny fish, was about to seize it, when a wave and the speed of their flight carried them high upon a sand bank, where, as they both lay exhausted, the tunny fish turned to the dolphin and said, "I don't mind dying now, for I see that he who is the cause of my death is about to share the same fate."

We must not expect anyone to weep for long over another's misfortunes. (Nec speremus fore ut aliena quisquam diu ploret.)

QUINTILIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae. Bk. vi, ch. i, sec. 29. (c. A. D. 80)

People are generally calm at the misfortunes of others.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, She Stoops to Conquer. Act iii. (1773)

The burden is light on the shoulders of another. TRENCH, Lessons in Proverbs, p. 92. (1852)

<sup>2</sup> Pleasant it is, when over a great sea the winds trouble the waters, to gaze from shore upon another's great tribulation. (Suave, mari magno turbantibus aequora ventis, | e terra magnum alterius spectare laborem.)

Lucretius, De Rerum Natura. Bk. ii, l. 1. (c. 45 B.C.) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, Essays, iii. 1.

<sup>3</sup> Alas, how easy it is, though sorrow has touched us all, to speak brave words in another's grief! (Ei mihi, quam facile est, quamvis hic contigit omnes, | alterius luctu fortia verba loqui.)

OVID, Consolatio ad Liviam, l. 9. (9 B.C.)

Every one can master a grief but he that has it. SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing, iii, 2, 29. (1598)

<sup>4</sup> It is good to observe what to avoid in another's misfortune. (Bonum est fugienda adspicere in alieno malo.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 60. (c. 43 B.C.) Let others' shipwrecks be your beacons.

F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 214. (1902) See also under EXAMPLE.

<sup>5</sup> Make not another's misfortune your joy. (Malum ne alienum feceris tuum gaudium.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 421. (c. 43 B.C.)

<sup>6</sup> Better deal with one's own misfortunes than with another's. (Sua satius est mala quam aliena tractare.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. cxviii, sec. 2. (c. A. D. 64) The Germans say, "Man kehre erst vor seiner eigenen Thüre, ehe man eine fremde geht" (A man should sweep before his own door before he goes to another's).

<sup>7</sup> Is it credible, is it conceivable, that any man should be so black-hearted as to gloat over misfortunes and buy his own happiness at the cost of another's misery? (Hocine credibile aut memorabile, | tanta vecordia innata quouquam ut siet | ut malis gaudeant atque ex incommotis | alterius sua ut comparent comoda?)

TERENCE, Andria, l. 625. (166 B.C.)

In the midst of compassion, we inwardly feel a sort of bitter-sweet pricking of malicious delight in seeing others suffer. (Au milieu de la compassion, nous sentons au dedans je ne sais quelle aigredouce poincte de volupté maligne à veoir souffrir altruy.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 1. (1595)

I am convinced that we have a degree of delight, and that no small one, in the real misfortunes and pains of others.

EDMUND BURKE, On the Sublime and Beautiful. Pt. i, sec. 14. (1756)

Ah yet, we cannot be kind to each other here for an hour;

We whisper and hint, and chuckle, and grin at a brother's shame.

TENNYSON, Maud. Pt. i, sec. 4, st. 5. (1855)

A person seldom falls sick, but the bystanders are animated with a faint hope that he will die.

R. W. EMERSON, The Conduct of Life: Considerations by the Way. (1860)

<sup>8</sup> What each feared for himself they bore with patience, when turned to the ruin of another man. (Quae sibi quisque timebat, | unius in miseri exitium conversa tulere.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. ii, l. 130. (19 B.C.)

We all have sufficient strength to bear other people's misfortunes. (Nous avons tous assez de force pour supporter les maux d'autrui.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 19. (1665)

I never knew any man who could not bear another's misfortunes perfectly like a Christian.

POPE, Thoughts on Various Subjects. (1706)

To bear other people's afflictions, every one has courage enough and to spare.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1740

The World is full of fools and faint hearts; and yet every one has courage enough to bear the misfortunes, and wisdom enough to manage the Affairs of his neighbour.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1743.

One can stand others' pains even for three years. S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 443.

(1938) A Japanese proverb. The Arabs say, "When another man suffers, a piece of wood suffers." The Italians, "The comforter's head never aches."

III—Misfortunes Never Come Singly

<sup>9</sup> As the old proverb says, "The trestle follows the plank." (Ut in vetere proverbio est "sequitur vara vibiam.")

AUSONIUS, Technopaegnon, iv, 1. (c. A. D. 390) That is, one evil is followed by another.

One misfortune calls up another. (Un mal llama á otro.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 28. (1605)
The Italians say, "Un malo tira l'altro," the French, "Un mal attire l'autre."

One misfortune bears another on the crupper. (Ein Unglück das and're bringt auf dem Rück.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbs, p. 319. (1856) The Germans also say, "Nie kommt das Unglück ohne seine Gefolge" (Misfortune never comes without his retinue), a proverb used by Heine.

<sup>1</sup> 'Tis a good ill that comes alone. (Bien vengas mal, si vienes solo.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 55. (1615)
Shelton, tr. FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5059. (1732) The Italians say, "Benedetto è quel male che vien solo."

Welcome, mischief, if thou comest alone.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 141. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5471. (1732)

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1749.

A variant of, "Welcome, misfortune, if thou comest alone."

<sup>2</sup> While one surge of ills yet drowns my soul,
High rolls astern another from thy words.
(ἑκαὶ ἓν γὰρ ἄρτι κύμ' ὑπέαντλῶν φρενί, πρῶμνηθεν αἶρει μ' ἄλλο σὼν λόγων ὕπο.)

EURIPIDES, Ion, l. 927. (c. 419 B. C.)

Of an ill, comes many.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 84. (c. 1595)

<sup>3</sup> Misfortune is piled upon misfortune. (πῆμ' ἐπὶ πῆματι κέτται.)
HERODOTUS, History. Bk. i, ch. 27. (c. 445 B. C.)
One misfortune after another. (Aliud ex alio malum.)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 987. (161 B. C.)

Misfortune follows misfortune. (Malis mala succedunt.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, ix, 97. (1508)

Upon every misfortune another misfortune.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 493. (1817)

The Germans say, "Ein unglück tritt dem andern auf den Fersen" (One misfortune treads on another's heels); the Dutch, "One misfortune always carries another on its back."

<sup>4</sup> One misfortune is generally followed closely by another. (Fere fit malum malo aptissimum.)

LIVY, History. Bk. i, sec. 46. (c. 10 B. C.)

Men tellen, in olde mone [remembrance],
The quod [misfortune] commth nowher alone.

UNKNOWN, Kyng Alisaunder, l. 1281. (c. 1300)

For efter won euylle comythe mony mo.

UNKNOWN, Partonope of Blois, l. 5542. (c. 1490)

Wyse men sayth . . .

That one myshap fortuneth neuer alone.

BARCLAY, The Shyp of Folsys, ii, 231. (1509)

Misfortune never comes alone. (Malheur ne vient iamais seul.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. ii, ch. 33. (1532)

Misfortunes seldome come alone.

JAMES MABBE, tr., Guzman de Alfarache. Bk. i, ch. 3. (1622) Lamb includes this saying in his Popular Fallacies. No. 13. (1826)

Never despise a misfortune however small, for they never come alone. (No despreciar el mal por poco, que nunca viene uno solo.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 254. (1647) "Do not wake misfortune when she sleeps," Gracian adds.

Ill fortune seldom comes alone.

DRYDEN, Cymon and Iphigenia, l. 392. (1700)

Misfortunes never come single.

JOSEPH ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 7. (1711)

Addison seems to have been the first to put the saying in nearly its modern form, "Misfortunes never come singly." Too frequently used thereafter to require citation.

Hardships sindle [seldom] come single.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 143. (1721)

One misfortune never comes alone.

FIELDING, Jonathan Wilde. Bk. i, ch. 8. (1743)

Misfortune never comes alone. (Nulla calamitas sola.)

PONTANUS, Collectio Proverbiorum, p. 138.

(1778) Another Latin form is, "Fortuna obsesse nulli contenta est semel" (Misfortune is not contented to come alone). See also under Woe.

<sup>5</sup> A man cannot have one losse, but more will folowe.

WILLIAM SPELMAN, A Dialoge Between Two Travellers, p. 3. (c. 1595)

<sup>6</sup> One myschiefe on an other's necke.

NICOLAS UDALL, Flowers Out of Terence, fo 103. (1533)

Other straung mischiefs . . . one in the necke of another.

GEOFFREY FENTON, Bandello, i, 232. (1567)

One vice on the neck of another.

Roxburghe Ballads (P.S.), i, 370. (c. 1640)

My misfortunes come one upo' th' neck of an other.

UNKNOWN, Terence Made English, p. 30. (1694)

My misfortunes come so upon the neck of one another.

UNKNOWN, tr., Aleman's Guzman, i, 80. (1708)

"One bad job alus falls on th' neck of another," is a common saying when misfortunes follow each other quickly.

PEACOCK, Manley Glossary, p. 367. (1889)

MISS

<sup>7</sup> A Miss-nancy is an effeminate man.

CARR, The Dialect of Craven: Nancy. (1824)

I think a dash of femininity in a man is good; but I hate a 'Miss Nancy.'

MRS. LYNN LINTON, in The Speaker, 20 July, 1901, p. 453.

<sup>8</sup> An hair's breadth fixed by a divine finger, shall prove as effectual a separation from danger as a mile's distance.

THOMAS FULLER, History of Cambridge, p. 37. (1655)

He was very near being a poet—but a miss is as good as a mile, and he always fell short of the mark.

WALTER SCOTT, Journal, 3 Dec., 1825.

A miss is as good as a mile.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 27. (1843)

A little too late is much too late, and a miss is as good as a mile.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk. Ch. 7. (1869)

A narrow shave; but a miss is as good as a mile.

BERNARD SHAW, Arms and the Man. Act i.

(1894) "A miss is as good as a mile" is a condensation of the older proverb, "An inch of a miss is as good (or bad) as a mile of a miss."

1

May my pistols miss fire.

JOHN GAY, The Beggar's Opera. Act i, sc. 13. (1727)

Never knew any of them miss fire before.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 7. (1837)

That's how a man's brightest ideas sometimes miss fire.

JERROLD, Men of Character, ii, 166. (1838)

She missed fire—Uncle Fountain, like most Englishmen, could take in a pun by the ear, but wit only by the eye.

CHARLES READE, Love Me Little, Love Me Long. Ch. 1. (1859)

2

As good is an inch As an ell.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)

An inch in a miss is as good as an ell.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains Concerning Britaine, p. 319. (1605) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 109. (1670) SCOTT, Heart of Midlothian. Ch. 43. (1818)

An inch in a miss is as bad as an ell.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 7. (1659)

An inch of a miss is as good as a span.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 35. (1721)

An Inch in missing is as bad as an Ell.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 635. (1732)

3

If I mysse nat my marke, he is a busy felowe.

JEHAN PALSGRAVE, La Langue Françoise, p. 638. (1530)

I . . . oft have shot at them,

Howe'er unfortunate I miss'd my aim.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry VI, i, 4, 4. (1591)

Penelope had a company of suitors, yet all missed of their aim.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. ii, mem. vi, subs. 5. (1621)

To misse of his marke.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 1. (1639)

Ills of every shape and every name,

Transformed to blessings, miss their cruel aim.

WILLIAM COWPER, Epistle to a Protestant Lady. (a. 1800)

Time has a quiver full of purposes

Which miss not of their aim.

JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL, An Ode for the Fourth of July. Sec. 3. (1876)

4

And whan he weneth to syt,

Yet maye he mysse the quysshon.

JOHN SKELTON, Colin Clout, l. 998. (c. 1525)

"To miss the cushion," to miss the mark, to err.

No doubt he did miss the cushion in many things.

HUGH LATIMER, Works (P.S.), ii, 366. (1533)

He was elected Archbishop of St. David's, but at Rome he was outbid, by him that had more money, and missed the Cushin.

MEREDITH HANMER, Chronicles of Ireland, p. 168. (1571)

Truely Euphues you haue mist the cushion.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 95. (1579)

He hath missed the cushen and sitteth bare.

SAMUEL HIERON, A Defence of the Ministers, etc., ii, 157. (1608)

Hitler has missed the bus.

NEVILLE CHAMBERLAIN, PRIME MINISTER OF ENGLAND, Speech, London, 4 April, 1940, commenting on Hitler's invasion of Norway.

It began to look as though I had not only blotted a copybook but that I had missed the bus.

FRANCIS BEEDING, The Twelve Disguises, p. 83. (1942)

HIT OR MISS, see under HIT.

MISTAKE

See also Error

5

I can pardon everybody's mistakes except my own. (συγγνώμην δίδοναι πᾶσι τοῖς ἀμαρτάνουσι πλην αὐτοῦ.)

MARCUS CATO, Apothegm. (c. 160 B.C.) See PLUTARCH, Lives: Marcus Cato. Ch. 8, sec. 9.

6

Do not be ashamed of mistakes—and so make them crimes.

CONFUCIUS, Book of History. Ch. 4. (c. 500 B.C.)

The man who makes no mistakes does not usually make anything.

BISHOP W. C. MAGEE, Sermon, Peterborough, 1868.

The one and only serious mistake is to be afraid of making mistakes.

C. A. SMART, Wild Geese, p. 54. (1941)

7

It's a man's mistakes which make him lovable. (Die Irrtümer des Menschen machen ihn eigentlich liebenswürdig.)

GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa. (1819)

There's many a mistake made on purpose.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 17. (1843)

8

You are all out of it and into the straw.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 389. (1721)

You are quite mistaken.

It was, I am convinced, two other guys, in another place, a long time ago.

SPENCER BAYNE, Murder Recalls Van Kill, p. 167. (1939)

Sorry. You're all wet.

LEE THAYER, Persons Unknown, p. 74. (1941)

1 To avoid all mistakes in the conduct of great enterprise is beyond man's powers. (τὸ μὲν ἀμαρτεῖν μηδὲν ἐν πράγμασι μεγάλοις μείζον ἢ κατ' ἀνθρώπων ἐστι.)

MINUCIUS, to his soldiers, after his defeat by Hannibal. (209 B.C.) "But when a mistake has once been made," Minucius continued, "to use his reverses as lessons for the future is the part of a brave and sensible man." See PLUTARCH, Lives: Fabius Maximus. Ch. 13, sec. 1.

Mistakes beset life everywhere. (Erat error in omni.)

GRATTIUS, Cynegetica (The Chase), l. 4. (c. A.D. 4)

Mistakes are often the best teachers. ~
J. A. FROUDE, Short Studies on Great Subjects: Education. (c. 1860)

Every one makes mistakes—thats why pencils have erasers.

ALICE TILTON, Dead Ernest, p. 56. (1944)

2 He is the real thing and no mistake.

LADY SYDNEY MORGAN, Autobiography, p. 15. (1818)

A regular bang-up chap, and no mistake.

THACKERAY, Ravenswing. Ch. 1. (1837)

It's a magnificent Roman camp, and no mistake.

THOMAS HUGHES, Tom Brown's School Days. Bk. i, ch. 1. (1857)

He is a real, genuine, no-mistake Osiris.

O. W. HOLMES, The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 12. (1858)

3 Men's lives consist mostly of their making the same mistake over and over again.

SIEGFRIED TREBITSCH, Frau Gitta's Sühne. Act iii. (1920) Shaw, tr.

4 No one wishes to be pitied for his mistakes. (Personne ne veut être plaint de ses erreurs.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 35. (1746)

MISTRESS

5 The mistris eye makes the capon fatt.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Works (Grosart), ii, e 8. (1616)

The mistress's eye feeds the capon.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia Anglo-Latina, p. 163. (1639)

EYE OF THE MASTER, see under MASTER.

6 All is well when the mistress smiles.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 17. (1659)

7 She that is a maysteresse

Must haue a seruaut hyr to-beye.

JOHN LYDGATE, tr., Pilgrimage of the Life of Man, l. 3786. (1426)

Too low a mistress for so high a servant.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona, ii, 4, 106. (1594)

8 If thou make a woman to be ashamed, wanton of heart, one known by her townsfolk to be falsely placed, be kind unto her for a space, send her not away, give her to eat.

ΠΑΛΗ-ΗΟΤΕΡ, Instruction. No. 37. (c. 2550 B.C.) Prisse Papyrus. Gunn, tr.

Be sure of this, that how many mistresses soever thou hast, so many enemies thou shalt purchase to thyself. For there never was any such affection which ended not in hatred or disdain.

SIR WALTER RALEGH, Instructions to His Son Sec. ii. (1616)

Every man believes that mistresses are unfaithful, . . . but he excepts his own.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letter to Joseph Baretti, 21 Dec., 1762. See BOSWELL, Life.

9 Hackney mistress, hackney maid.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 99. (1670)

LIKE MISTRESS, LIKE MAID, see under MASTER. LIKE MASTER LIKE MAN.

10 While you say I am mistresse of your life I am not mistresse of mine owne.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Arcadia (1590), iii, 254. (a. 1586)

You are your own mistress.

MRS. ANN RADCLIFFE, The Mysteries of Udolpho. Ch. 39 (1794)

11 To get at the mistress begin with a tip to the maid. (Ancillas primum ad domina qui adfectant viam.)

TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos. l. 301. (163 B.C.)

He should neuer leaue the Mistresse to court the maid.

HENRY PEACHAM, The Gentlemen Exercise: To the Reader. (1612)

He is a fool that kisseth the maid when he may kiss the mistress.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 15/2. (1659)

If you can kiss the mistress, never kiss the maid

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 111. (1670)

To kiss with the maid when the mistress is kind A gentleman ought to be loth, sir.

WILLIAM HONE, Every-Day Book, ii, 377. (1742)

I have been sworn at Highgate, Mrs. Lettice, and never take the maid instead of the mistress

GEORGE COLMAN, SR., Man and Wife Act iii sc. 2. (1769)

He has been sworn at Highgate . . . where the landlord of the Horns . . . used to swear passengers . . . they would not kiss the maid when they could kiss the mistress; nor drink small beer when they could get strong.

FRANCIS GROSE, A Provincial Glossary: Middlesex, p. 209. (1787) A long account of the origin of the phrase is given by WILLIAM HONE, Every-Day Book, ii, 79-87

12 He that makes his Mistresse a goldfinch, may perhaps finde her a wagtaile.

UNKNOWN, The Country-mans New Commonwealth, p. 8. (1647)

Mak your wife a goospink and she'll turn out a waterwagtail.

ANDREW HENDERSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 61. (1832)

MISUNDERSTANDING

<sup>1</sup> Misunderstanding brings lies to town.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 2. (1639)

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 121. (1670)

MOTTEUX, tr., Don Quixote. Pt. i, bk. iii, ch.

11. (1712) THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3424. (1732)

<sup>2</sup> Misunderstandings are best prevented by pen and ink.

WILLIAM HONE, The Year Book of Daily Recreation, col. 1416. (1831)

MITTEN

<sup>3</sup> They will not be caught without mittains.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 16. (1659)

To handle without mittins.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 216. (1678) To treat without mercy, roughly.

He handled the Reverend Fathers without Mittens.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, tr., Erasmus' Colloquies (1711), p. 178. (1699)

<sup>4</sup> I cast him here my Mitten vpon the quarrell.

THOMAS NASHE, Martins Months Minde, sig. G4. (1589) See also GAUNTLET.

<sup>5</sup> Young gentlemen who have got the mitten . . . always sythe.

JOHN NEAL, Peter Noddy, p. 14. (1844) "To get the mitten," to be rejected as a lover or suitor. The Germans say, "Einen Korb bekommen" (To get the basket), supposedly an allusion to the medieval story of how Vergil was left suspended in a basket by the lady to whom he was paying court. The Spanish form is, "Dar una calabaza" (To give him a calabash). Related phrases are, "To give him his walking-papers," the Dutch, "Iemand zijn paspoort geven," and the French, "Faire promener."

[He'll] be going to write what'll never be written Till the Muse, ere he thinks of it, gives him the mitten.

J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 936. (1848) She will think I've given him the mitten.

D. G. MITCHELL, The Lorgnette, i, 176. (1850)

There is a young lady I have set my heart on; though whether she is a-goin' to give me hern, or give me the mitten, I ain't quite satisfied.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Nature and Human Nature, p. 90. (1855)

Some said that Susan had given her young man the mitten, meaning thereby that she had signified that his services as a suitor were dispensed with.

O. W. HOLMES, The Guardian Angel. Ch. 33. (1867)

Young men were in mortal fear of "the mitten."

EGGLESTON, Hoosier Schoolmaster, p. 51. (1871)

When she mittened him, it almost took his life.

MARY J. HOLMES, Madeline, p. 114. (1881)

She . . . jus' led the fellers on . . . and then gave them the mitten.

C. F. PIGEON, Stephen Holton, p. 120. (1902)

MOB

See also Crowd, Herd, Multitude

<sup>6</sup> A terrible thing is a mob, when it has villains to lead it. (δεινὸν οἱ πολλοί, παυροῦρους δὲ τὰν ἔχουσι προστάτας.)

EURIPIDES, Orestes, l. 772. (c. 410 B.C.)

How should the mob, which cannot form true judgments,

Be able rightly to direct the state?

(ἄλλως τε πῶς ἂν μὴ διορθέων λόγους ὁρθῶς δύναιτ' ἂν δῆμος εὐθύνειν πόλιν;)

EURIPIDES, Suppliants, l. 417. (c. 421 B.C.)

Mobs will never do to govern states or command armies.

JOHN ADAMS, Letter to Benjamin Hitchborn, 27 Jan., 1787.

<sup>7</sup> Against the wild-fire of the mob there is no defence.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 306. (1855)

Neither intelligence nor culture can prevent a mob from acting as a mob.

THOMAS B. REED, Address, at Bowdoin College, 25 July, 1902.

<sup>8</sup> It is an easy and vulgar thing to please the mob, . . . but to improve them is a work fraught with difficulty, and teeming with danger.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Bk. i, No. 453. (1820)

<sup>9</sup> Many heads go to make the mob, and in each of them are eyes full of malice and a scandal-mongering tongue. (Tiene el vulgo muchas cabezas, y así muchos ojos para la malicia y muchas lenguas para el descrédito.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 86. (1647)

The Mob has many Heads, but no Brains.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4653. (1732)

A Mob's a Monster; Heads enough, but no Brains.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1747.

MANY-HEADED MULTITUDE, see under MULTITUDE.

<sup>10</sup> The clamor of the mob. (Popularis strepitus.)

HORACE, De Arte Poetica, l. 81. (c. 20 B.C.)

<sup>11</sup> The mob of changeable citizens. (Mobilium turba Quiritium.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 1, l. 7. (23 B.C.)

I may note the Rabble first changed their Title, and were called the Mob in the Assemblies of this [the King's Head] Club. It was their Beast of Burthen, and called first mobile vulgus, but fell naturally into the Contraction of one Syllable.

ROGER NORTH, Examens. Bk. iii, ch. 7, p. 574. (a. 1734)

Abbreviations exquisitely refined; As Pozz for Positively, Mobb for Mobile.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation: Introduction. (1738)

<sup>12</sup> Curb the mob; the man with nothing to lose rebels naturally.

KHATI I, KING OF EGYPT, Teaching. No. 6. (c. 2500 B.C.) Budge, tr.

Disdain the unhallowed mob. (Prophanum vulgus.)

ERASMUS, Moriae Encomium. Sec. 85. (1511)

<sup>1</sup> To act without understanding—that is the way of the mob.

MENCIUS, Discourses. Bk. vii. pt. i. ch. 5. (c. 300 B. C.)
The vulgar mob is the wiser, because it is only as wise as it need be. (Plus sapit vulgus, quia tantum, quantum opus est, sapit.)

LACTANTIUS, Institutiones Divinae, iii, 5. (c. A. D. 300) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, ii, xvii.

<sup>2</sup> You can talk a mob into anything.

JOHN RUSKIN, Sesame and Lilies. Ch. 1. (1865)
The nose of a mob is its imagination. By this, at any time, it can be quietly led.

E. A. POE, Marginalia. (c. 1846)

<sup>3</sup> What, shall the mob dictate my policy? (πόλις γὰρ ἡμῖν ἀπὲ χρητὰς ῥάσσειν ἐρεῖ;)

SOPHOCLES, Antigone, l. 734. (c. 441 B. C.)

Our supreme governors, the mob.

HORACE WALPOLE, Letter to Sir Horace Mann, 7 Sept., 1743.

<sup>4</sup> The mass never comes up to the standard of its best member, but on the contrary degrades itself to a level with the lowest.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 14 March, 1838.
A mob is man voluntarily descending to the nature of the beast . . . a society of bodies voluntarily bereaving themselves of reason.

EMERSON, Essays: Compensation. (1841)

MOCKERY

See also Ridicule

<sup>5</sup> Follow the Philosopher, who as it was told him that certein mocked him, answered: it may be they mocke at mee, but I am not mocked.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 73. (1574) Pettie, tr.

It is a perilous thing to mock and scoffe at others, and, as the saying is, To anger a waspe.

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, ii, 162.

As the Proverbe is, Hee that mocketh the lame, must take heede that hee him selfe goe upright.

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, ii, 163.

He that mocks a cripple ought to be whole.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

<sup>6</sup> For who so that mocketh shall surely stur This old prouerbe mockum moccabitur.

JOHN HEYWOOD, A Play of Love, l. 568. (1533)
He who mocks shall be mocked.

Scorning is catching. . . Some word it thus: Hanging's stretching; mocking's catching.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 200. (1678)

Mocking is catching.

SAMUEL PALMER, Moral Essays on Proverbs, p. 319. (1710) Cited by Kelly, Swift, Spurgeon.

If you mock the Lame, you will go so yourself in time.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2774. (1732)

<sup>7</sup> Mock not, quoth Mumford, when his wife called him cuckold.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 9/1. (1659) Cited by RAY, p. 186; FULLER, No. 3426.

<sup>8</sup> Mockery is often poverty of wit. (La moquerie est souvent l'indigence d'esprit.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Ch. 5. (1688)

Mockery is the fume of little hearts.

TENNYSON, Guinevere, l. 628. (1859) There is a Latin proverb, "Omnia risus, omnia pulvis, et omnia nil sunt" (All things are a mockery, all things are dust, and all things are nothing).

<sup>9</sup> Fools make a mock at sin. (Stultus illudet peccatum.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xiv, 9. (c. 350 B. C.)
Men made a mocke ther of.

WILLIAM GREGORY, Chronicle of London. (a. 1460)

An evil spirit would make a mock at him.

HALL CAINE, The Scapegoat. Ch. 5. (1891)

I could never forgive her for making a mock of me.

S. R. CROCKETT, The Raiders, p. 21. (1894)

<sup>10</sup> Mock no panyer-men, your father was a fisher.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 78. (1678)

Mock no Pannier-Man, if your Father was a Fisher.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3425. (1732)

MODERATION

See also Enough, Temperance

<sup>11</sup> To moderation in every form God giveth the victory. (παντὶ μέσῳ τὸ κράτος θεὸς ὤπασεν.)

AESCHYLUS, Eumenides, l. 529. (458 B. C.)

God willeth that ye use moderation in all things.

MOHAMMED, The Koran, v, 87. (c. 622)

<sup>12</sup> The [too] great mouthful of bread, thou swallowest it and vomitest it.

AMEN-EM-APT, Teaching How to Live. Col 14, l. 17. (c. 700 B. C.) Griffith, tr.

The morsel which thou hast eaten shalt thou vomit up. (Cibos, quos comederas, evomes.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxiii, 8. (c. 350 B. C.)

Let me not bite more off the cob

Than I have teeth to chew.

OGDEN NASH, Prayer at the End of a Rope. (1939) See also under BITING.

<sup>13</sup> Nothing moderate is pleasing to the crowd.
FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum Pt. i, bk. 6. (1605)

<sup>14</sup> Safer the craft that sails a moderate stream.
(Tuta mage est puppis modico quae flumine fertur.)

CATO. Disticha. Bk. ii, No. 6. (c. 175 B. C.)

It is pleasantest to walk close by the sea or sail close by the land. (πλοῦς μὲν ὁ παρὰ γῆν περίπατος δὲ ὁ παρὰ θάλασσαν ἡδιστος.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. ii, No. 91. (1523)

The Latin is, "Iucundissima navigatio iuxta terram, ambulatio iuxta mare."

1 To exceed is as bad as to fall short.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. xi, ch. 15. (c. 500 B.C.) Giles, tr.

2 I do not praise excess, but moderation; and with me wise men agree. (οὐτῷ τὸ λίαν ἥσσαν ἐπαινῶ | τοῦ μηδὲν ἄγαν | καὶ ξυμψήσουσι σοφοί μοι.)

EURIPIDES, Hippolytus, l. 264. (c. 428 B.C.)

Moderation, the noblest gift of heaven. (σωφροσύνη, | δῶρημα κάλλιστον θεῶν.)

EURIPIDES, Medea, l. 635. (c. 431 B.C.)

We should pursue and practise moderation. (σωφροσύνην μὲν διωκτέον καὶ ἀσκητέον.)

PLATO, Gorgias. Sec. 507D. (c. 375 B.C.) "And,"

Plato continues, "flee from excess with all the speed of which we are capable."

I judge moderation to be the greatest virtue. (Temperantiam, virtutem esse maximam, iudico.)

CICERO, Pro Rege Deiotaro. Ch. 9. (45 B.C.)

Moderation is the silken string running through the pearl-chain of all virtues.

BISHOP JOSEPH HALL, Christian Moderation, p. 6. (1640) Cited as an oriental proverb.

Quoted by THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: Of Moderation. (1642)

Moderate Things are best.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3428. (1732)

The choicest pleasures of life lie within the ring of moderation.

M. F. TUPPER, Proverbial Philosophy: Of Compensation, l. 16. (1838)

It is desirable in all things to preserve moderation and an even mind. (Il convient de garder en toutes choses le mesure et l'équité.)

ANATOLE FRANCE, Le Procureur de Judée. (1892)

3 Observe moderation; proportion is best in all things. (μέτρα φυλάσσεσθαι καιρὸς δ' ἐπὶ πάντων ἀριστος.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 694. (c. 800 B.C.)

The literal meaning of μέτρον is the mean between two extremes.

Moderation is best. (μέτρον ἀριστον.)

CLEOBULUS OF LINDUS, one of the seven wise men of Greece, who died 579 B.C. This was his maxim, and is said to have been inscribed on the wall of the temple of Apollo at Delphi. The Latin form is "Optimus modus." See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Cleobulus. Bk. i, sec. 93. AUSONIUS, Ludus Septem Sapientium, l. 152, quoting Cleobulus, gives both forms in one line, "ἀριστον μέτρον an sit optimus modus?" (Is not "ariston metron" "moderation is best"?)

In ruling men and in serving Heaven there is nothing like moderation.

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue). Sec. 59. (c. 550 B.C.) Old, tr.

Moderation is fitting in all things. (ἐπεταὶ δ' ἐν ἐκάστῳ μέτρον.)

PINDAR, Olympian Odes. No. xiii, l. 47. (464 B.C.)

One should mark the measure of all things by one's own station. (χρὴ δὲ κατ' αὐτὸν αἰεὶ παντὸς ὁρᾶν μέτρον.)

PINDAR, Pythian Odes. Ode ii, l. 34. (c. 475 B.C.)

Moderation first of all. (μετρίων πρώτα.)

EURIPIDES, Medea, l. 125. (c. 431 B.C.)

Moderation in all things is the best policy. (Modus omnibus rebus optimus est habitu.)

PLAUTUS, Poenulus, l. 238. (c. 200 B.C.)

Moderation is best. (Mediocritas optima est.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. xxxvi, sec. 130. (c. 45 B.C.)

Moderation is in every case commendable. (Mediocrité est en tous cas louée.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 13. (1545)

4 Better is due measure in all things. (ἀμείνω δ' αἴσιμα πάντα.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. vii, l. 310. (c. 850 B.C.)

The phrase is repeated in Bk. xv, l. 71. αἴσιμος means what is right and proper, and is used in another proverbial phrase, αἴσιμα εἰδῶς (To know what is right and proper).

There is due measure in all things. (Est modus in rebus.) There are fixed limits, beyond and short of which right can find no place.

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. i, l. 106. (35 B.C.)

Measure is medicine.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. Text A, i, 33. (1362)

Measure is a meri mene.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Richard the Redeles, ii, 139. (c. 1380) RUSSELL, Boke of Nurture.

(c. 1450) SKELTON, Magnyfycence, l. 385.

(a. 1529) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 17. (1670)

Measure is a mery meane, as this doth show, Not too hye for the pye, nor too lowe for the crow. The difference betwene starvyng and starke blynde,

The wise man at all tymes to folow can fynde.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

In every thing I woot, ther lyth mesure.

For though a man forbode dronkenesse,

He nought for-bet that every creature

Be drinkelees for alwey, as I gesse.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. ii, l. 715. (c. 1380)

Measure also, that restreyneth by resoun.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Persones Tale. Sec. 73. (c. 1389)

An olde proverbe—"Mesour is tresoure."

JOHN LYDGATE, Minor Poems (Percy Soc.), p. 82. (c. 1430) And on p. 208, Lydgate has,

"Men wryte of oold how mesour is tresour."

SKELTON, Magnyfycence, l. 126. (a. 1529)

In Speak, Parrot, l. 64, Skelton has, "In measure is treasure." FULLER, Gnomologia.

No. 6321 (1732) has, "Measure's a Treasure."

There is measure in every thing.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing, ii, 1, 73. (1598)

There is a measure in all things.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 129. (1633)

Due measure in everything is best. (Modus in omni re est optimus.)

PONTANUS, Collectio Proverbiorum, p. 114. (1778) The French say, "En toutes choses a mesure," the Germans, "Maas ist gut in allen Dingen."

<sup>1</sup> With judgment she plied the lash. (νόψ δ' ἐπέβαλλεν ἰμάσθλην.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. vi, l. 320. (c. 850 B.C.)

<sup>2</sup> Moderation is the languor and sloth of the soul. (La modération est la langueur et la paresse de l'âme.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 293. (1665) A moderately honest man with a moderately faithful wife, moderate drinkers both, in a moderately healthy house: that is the true middle class unit.

SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists. (1903)

<sup>3</sup> Close not thy hand too tightly, neither open it too widely. For else thou wilt be deserving of blame, or wilt reduce thyself to privation.

MOHAMMED, The Koran, xvii, 29. (c. 622)

Practise charity without either reckless prodigality or niggardly miserliness, and keep the golden mean in all things.

MOHAMMED, The Koran, xxv, 67.

<sup>4</sup> Seek not, my soul, the life of immortals, but enjoy to the full the things which are within thy reach. (μή, φίλα ψυχά, βίον ἀθάνατον | σπεῦδε, τὰν δ' ἐμπρακτον ἀντλεῖ μαχανάν.)

PINDAR, Pythian Odes. No. iii, l. 61. (c. 474 B.C.)

In Pythian Odes, iv, 92, Pindar warns that men should "aim only at loves within their reach."

Moderation means nothing to a woman. (Postremo modus mulieribus nullus.)

PLAUTUS, Poenulus, l. 230. (c. 200 B.C.)

<sup>5</sup> Give me neither poverty nor riches. (Mendicitatem et divitias ne dederis mihi.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxx, 8. (c. 350 B.C.)

In modesty of fortune there are the fewer dangers. (Ex mediocritate fortunae, pauciora pericula sunt.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. xiv, sec. 60. (c. A.D. 116)

The Germans say, "Mitteglück, das Beste" (Moderate fortune is best). See also LIFE: THE SIMPLE LIFE.

<sup>6</sup> Moderate things endure. (Moderata durant.) SENECA, Troades, l. 259. (c. A.D. 60)

Short is the duration of things which are immoderate. (Immodicis brevis est aetas.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. vi, epig. 29, l. 7. (c. A.D. 90)

II—Moderation: Nothing Too Much

<sup>7</sup> I should blame one who loves overmuch or hates overmuch: better is due measure in all things. (ἀμείνω δ' αἰσῖμα πάντα.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xv, l. 71. (c. 850 B.C.)

Drain nothing to the dregs, neither good nor ill. If you milk a cow too much, you draw blood, not milk. (Nunca apurar, ni el mal ni el bien. . . . Y sacará sangre por leche el que esquilmaré a lo tirano.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 82. (1647)

Let moderation on thy passions wait; Who loves too much, too much the lov'd will hate.

ROBERT HERRICK, Moderation. (1648)

There is moderation even in excess.

DISRAELI, Vivian Grey. Bk. vi, ch. 1. (1827)

<sup>8</sup> Neither too little nor too much. (Neque defiat neque supersit.)

PLAUTUS, Menaechmi, l. 221. (c. 200 B.C.)

<sup>9</sup> Nothing in excess. (μηδὲν ἄγαν.)

SOLON, Maxim. (c. 600 B.C.) See DIOGENES

LAERTIUS, Solon. Bk. i, sec. 63. Solon was one of the Seven Wise Men, and the saying has also been attributed to two others, Chilon and Thales. The Latin form is "Ne quid nimis." It was inscribed upon the wall of the Temple of Apollo at Delphi, together with the even more famous, γνῶθι σεαυτόν, "Know thyself."

Nothing in excess; moderation is best in all things. (μηδὲν ἄγαν σπεῦδειν πάντων μεσ' ἄριστα.)

THEOGNIS, Sententiae. No. 335. (c. 550 B.C.)

Nothing to excess. That is enough, or precept too will run to excess. (Nil nimium. Satis hoc, ne sit et hoc nimium.)

ANACHARSIS, Apothegm. (c. 525 B.C.) See AUSONIUS (?), Septem Sapientum Sententiae, l. 49.

The virtue of a young man consists in doing nothing to excess. (τὸ μηδὲν ἄγαν.)

SOCRATES, Apothegm. (c. 410 B.C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Socrates. Bk. ii, sec. 32. Quoted also by Euripides. See AUSONIUS, Ludus Septem Sapientum, l. 156.

By far the most useful rule in life is nothing to excess. (Adprime in vita esse utile, ut ne quid nimis.)

TERENCE, Andria, l. 61. (166 B.C.)

Nothyng to muche. (Ne quid nimis.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. vi, No. 96. (1508)

Taverner, tr., fo. 20. (1550) Taverner adds, "Or (as we comenly say in Englysh): To much of nothyng is good. . . . Some can not do but they ouer do." Erasmus devotes nearly a page to the proverb, citing its use in one form or another by many writers, from Homer to Plautus.

The rule of Nothing too much, commanded by Chilon. (La règle de Rien trop, commandée par Chilon.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 26. (1580)

The rule of not too much, by temperance taught.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xi, l. 527. (1667)

Of "Nought too much," the fact is, All preach the truth—none practise.

(Rien de trop est un point

Dont on parle sans cesse, et qu'on n'observe point.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: Rien de Trop. Bk. ix, fab. 11. (1678)

This modest charm of not too much.

WORDSWORTH, To May, l. 95. (1833)

III—Moderation: The Golden Mean

1 Thus learne I by my glasse, that merrie meane is best.

GEORGE GASCOIGNE, Posies, Flowers, 41. (a. 1575) So greatly . . . is the merrie meane commended.

SURFLET AND MARKHAM, tr., The Countrie Farme, 580. (1616)

2 He [the wise man] will be neat, and in his mode of living will be unhappy in neither direction. (Mundus erit, . . . atque | in neutram partem cultus miser.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 2, l. 65. (35 B.C.)

Between excess and famine lies a mean;
Plain, but not sordid; tho' not splendid, clean

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 2, l. 47. (1732)

Whoso cultivates the golden mean avoids the poverty of a hovel and the envy of a palace. (Auream quisquis mediocritatem | diligit, tutus caret obsoleti | sordibus tecti, caret invidenda | sobrius aula.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 10, l. 5. (23 B.C.)

That middle state of poverty, which so long, and so often, has been termed Golden.

TIMOTHY DWIGHT, Travels in New England, ii, 269. (a. 1817)

3 The mene is cleped suffisaunce,
Ther lyth of vertu the abondance.

(La meiens a non soufissance;

La gist des certuz l'abondance.)

JEAN DE MEUNG, Roman de la Rose, l. 11275. (c. 1270) Chaucer (?), tr., l. 6527. (c. 1365)

4 In many things the middle have the best;
be mine the middle station. (πολλὰ μέσοισιν ἀριστα· μέσος θέλω ἐν πόλει εἶναι.)

PHOCYLIDES, Gnome. (c. 500 B.C.) As quoted by ARISTOTLE, Politics. Bk. iv, ch. 9, sec. 7.

The Blessed One preaches a Middle Path, avoiding extremes.

SAKYAMUNI, Samyutta Nikāya, xii, 15. (c. 500 B.C.)

The middle course of life is the best. (τὸν μέσον ἀναγκαῖον βίον εἶναι βέλτιστον.)

ARISTOTLE, Politics. Bk. iv, ch. 9, sec. 2. (c. 330 B.C.)

Neither worst nor first. (οὔτε κάκιστος οὔτε πρῶτος.)

THEOCRITUS. (c. 270 B.C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iv, iv, 22, "Neque pessimus neque primus." The middle place is best.

In everything the middle course is best. All excess brings trouble to mankind. (Modus omnia nimium exhibent optimus est habitus. | nimia omnia nimium exhibent negoti hominibus ex ce.)

PLAUTUS, Poenulus, l. 238. (c. 194 B.C.)

In the middle is the safest path. (Medio tutissimus ibis.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. ii, l. 137. (A.D. 7) A similar Latin proverb is "Mediocria firma" (Things which are moderate are safe). And another, "In medio virtus" (Virtue lies in moderation).

Keep between either extreme. (Inter utrumque tene.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. ii, l. 140.

Whoever leaves the middle course never fares in path secure. (Quisquis medium defugit iter | stabili numquam tramite currit.)

SENECA, Hercules Oetaeus, l. 675. (c. A.D. 60)

Always to pursue the middle course in everything is artistic and in good taste. (Ἐντεχνον δὲ τὸ τὴν μέσῃ ἐν ἀπασὶ τέμνειν ἑμμελές τε.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: Education of Children, 7B. (c. A.D. 95)

Take the top and you'll get the middle. (ἄκρον λάβε καὶ μέσον ἔξεις.)

ZENOBIUS, Adagia, i, 57. (c. A.D. 130) ERASMUS,

Adagia, ii, iii, 25, gives the Latin, "Summum cape et medium habebis."

Neither Lydian saucers nor the snap of the whip. (μήτε Λυδῶν κάρυκας μήτε μαστίγων ψόφους.)

ZENOBIUS, Adagia, v, 3. Rendered by ERASMUS, Adagia, iv, iv, 97, "Necque Lydorum carycas."

The middle course between coddling and cruelty.

He knows to live who keeps the middle state.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 2, l. 61. (1732)

Middle-measure is the best street. (Mittelmass, die beste Strasse.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 337. (1856) A German proverb.

It is good to be neither too high nor too low. (Kao pu tē pu te chiu hao.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 842. (1875)

5 Choose the life that is seated in the mean. . . . this is the greatest happiness for man. (τὸν μέσον βίον.)

PLATO, Republic. Bk. x, sec. 619B. (c. 375 B.C.)

The proper mean. (Le juste milieu.)

VOLTAIRE, Letter to Comte d'Argental, 29 Nov., 1765.

6 Moderation was held by the ancient sages to be golden. (Mediocrité a esté part les saiges anciens dicte auree.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, Prologue. (1548)

7 The middel waie of mesure is euver guldene.

UNKNOWN, Ancren Riwle, p. 336. (c. 1200)

The golden meane is best.

UNKNOWN, A Mirror for Magistrates, i, 52. (1587)

The face of golden Meane:

Her sisters, two Extremities,

Strive her to banish cleane.

EDMUND SPENSER, The Faerie Queene. Bk. ii, canto ii, Arg. (1590)

The golden mean is good for all things. Solomon doth not forbid to eat honey, but eat not too much, lest thou surfeit.

HENRY SMITH, Sermons (1866), i, 162. (a. 1591)

The golden meane is free from trips.

STEPHEN GOSSON, Pleasant Quips, p. 14. (1596)

To keepe the golden meane is the leuell of their thoughts.

THOMAS CORYAT, Crudities, ii, 150. (1611)

Happy the golden meane!

MASSINGER, The Great Duke of Florence. Act i, sc. 1. (1627)

The golden mean, and quiet flow
Of truths that soften hatred, temper strife.

WORDSWORTH, Ecclesiastical Sonnets. Pt. iii, No. 11. (1823)

The golden mean. The ideal average; ideal moderation; avoidance of excess in either direction.

PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés. (1941)

MODESTY

1 With time modesty dies away in man. (ἐν χρόνῳ δ' ἀποφθίνει τὸ τάρβος ἀνθρώποισιν.)

AESCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 857. (458 B. C.)

2 If a man has modesty, what need has he of ornament?

BHARTRIHARI, Niti Sataka. No. 21. (c. A. D. 100)

My modesty (The jewel of my dower.)

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, iii, 1, 53. (1611)

When Modesty ceases to be the chief Ornament of one Sex, and Integrity of the other, Society is upon a wrong Basis.

STEELE, The Spectator. No. 6. (1711)

Modesty is the ornament of a woman.

PERCIVAL, Tamil Proverbs. No. 86. (1842)

The woman who is modest is sufficiently beautiful. (Hermosa es por cierto, la que es buena de su cuerpo.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs, i, 90. (1814) A Spanish proverb.

3 It is only the first obstacle that counts to conquer modesty. (Il n'y a que le premier obstacle qui coûte à vaincre la pudeur.)

BOSSUET, Pensées Chrétiennes et Morales. Ch.

9. (c. 1700) THE FIRST STEP THAT COSTS, see under STEP.

Modesty does not long survive innocence.

EDMUND BURKE, Impeachment of Warren Hastings, 17 Feb., 1788.

4 Women commend a modest man, but oftentimes do not care for him.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. (c. 500 B. C.) See TEHYI

HSIEH, Confucius Said It First, p. 86.

Women commend a modest man, but like him not.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5805. (1732)

5 Modesty is the citadel of beauty and of virtue. (αἰδώς τοῦ καλοῦ καὶ ἀρετῆς πόλις.)

DEMADES, Peri Dodekoetias. (c. 325 B. C.) See

MÜLLER, Oratores Attici. Vol. ii, p. 438.

Virginalis modestia, Maydenly modestie & shamefastness.

THOMAS COOPER, Thesaurus Linguae Romanae et Britannicae: Modestia. (1565)

Have you no modesty, no maiden shame?

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer Night's Dream, iii, 2, 285. (1596)

Modesty is the guardian of all virtue. (Verecundia est custos omnium virtutum.)

PONTANUS, Collectio Proverbiorum, p. 217. (1778)

6 Diffidence is the right Eye of Prudence.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1286. (1732)

Diffidence is the mother of safety.

BERTHELSON, Dictionary: Mother. (1754)

In prosperous fortunes be modest and wise,
For the greatest may fall, and the lowest may rise:
But insolent People that fall in disgrace,
Are wretched and no body pities their Case.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1743.

7 Modesty is not Bashfulness.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3431. (1732)

True modesty does not consist in an ignorance of our merits, but in a due estimate of them.

A. W. AND J. C. HARE, Guesses at Truth, p. 6. (1827)

8 I find modesty more valuable than the aid of mankind.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Peninim (Choice of Pearls). No. 100. (c. 1050) Ascher, tr.

The sage was asked, What constitutes modesty? He answered, The blush caused by our secret misdeeds.

IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Peninim. No. 328.

9 Modesty sets off one newly come to honour.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1060. (1650)

Modesty is to merit what shadows are to a painting; it gives it force and relief. (La modestie est au mérite ce que les ombres sont aux figures dans un tableau: elle lui donne de la force et du relief.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères: Du Mérite Personnel. Ch. ii, sec. 20. (1688)

10 A truly modest fellow. (Multum demissus homo.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 3, l. 57. (35 B. C.)

Modesty is what ails me. That's what's kept me under.

ARTEMUS WARD (C. F. BROWNE), His Travels. (1865)

I'm modesty personified!

W. S. GILBERT, Ruddigore. Act i. (1887)

11 It is better to dye with-out mony, then to liue with out modestie.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 229. (1580)

12 This modesty will be the ruin of you. (Perdet te pudor hic.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. x, epig. 98, l. 11. (c. A. D. 93)

An excess of Modesty obstructs the Tongue.

ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 231. (1711)

Modesty ruins all that it brings in to Court.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3432. (1732)

"Modest dogs miss much meat."

All men have their faults; too much modesty is his.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, The Good-Natured Man. Act ii. (1768)

Modesty in a man is a crime. Don't be modest. It is a woman's virtue.

FREDERICK WARDE, Interview, on his 80th birthday, 23 Feb., 1931. The Germans say, "Bescheidenheit ist eine Zier, | Doch weiter kommt man ohne ihr" (Modesty is an ornament, yet people get on better without it); the French, "Il n'y a que les honteux qui perdent" (None but the shamefaced lose).

1 Modesty is lovely, why put it to shame? Maidens must blush, why drive the hue from their cheeks? (τι γὰρ δεῖ τὸ τῆς αἰδοῦς κάλλος ἀσχεῖν;)

PHILO, De Specialibus Legibus. Bk. iii, sec. 25. (c. A. D. 40)

Modesty becomes a young man. (Decet verecundum esse adulescentum.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 833. (c. 200 B. C.)

2 Modesty is useless to a needy man. (Verecundia inutilis viro egenti.)

PONTANUS, Collectio Proverbiorum, p. 217. (1778)

Where there is fear there is modesty. (Ubi timor, ibi pudor.)

UNKNOWN. A Latin proverb. There is an expanded form, "Where there is fear there is modesty, where there is modesty there is honor" (Ubi timor, ibi pudor; ubi pudor, ibi honor).

3 Modesty cannot be taught, it must be born. (Pudor doceri non potest, nasci potest.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 501. (c. 43 B. C.)

Who steals away another's modesty loses his own. (Pudorem alienum qui eripit perdit suum.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 503.

4 Modesty, once dismissed, never returns to favor. (Pudor dimissus numquam redit in gratiam.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 507. (c. 43 B. C.)

Modesty, once gone, knows no return. (Qui redire cum perit nescit pudor.)

SENECA, Agamemnon, l. 113. (c. A. D. 60)

Modesty once lost, can never be recover'd in any Court of Justice or Conscience.

DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 187. (1709)

5 In the modesty of fearful duty I read as much, as from the rattling tongue Of saucy and audacious eloquence.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream, v, 1, 101. (1596)

6 Modesty is the certain Indication of a great Spirit.

STEELE, The Spectator. No. 350. (1712)

Great Modesty often hides great Merit.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1758.

7 The haughty for Hell and the modest for the Garden of Eden.

JEHUDA BEN TEMA, Mishna: Pirké Aboth, v, 31. (c. A. D. 200) Oesterley, tr.

MOHAMMED, see Mahomet

MOLE

8 A mole on the neck,
You shall have money by the peck.

CHARLOTTE BURNE, Shropshire Folk-Lore, p. 267. (1883) A Gloucestershire rendering is, "Mole on the neck, trouble by the peck." Burne notes two other forms, "Five moles in a span, You shall have houses and land," and "If you've got a mole above your chin You'll never be beholden to any of your kin."

9 A Mole wants no Lanthorn.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 329. (1732) Because it is blind. BLIND AS A MOLE, see under BLINDNESS.

10 The little gentleman in black velvet who did such a service in 1702.

WALTER SCOTT, Waverley. Ch. 11. (1814) The service referred to was the death of William III, caused, according to popular belief, by the king's horse stumbling over a mole-hill.

One may recognize him as "the little gentleman in black velvet" of Jacobite toasts, whose hillock gave William III his fatal fall from his horse.

UNKNOWN, The Times (London), 11 Oct., 1928, p. 19/6.

11 Well said, old mole! can'st work i' the earth so fast? A worthy pioneer.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, i, 5, 161. (1600)

The miners there must have been generations of human moles.

J. R. LEIFCHILD, Cornwall Mines, l. 151. (1855)

MOLLYCODDLE

12 Don't moddley-coddley, there's a good fellow. I like anything better than being moddley-coddled.

DICKENS, Mystery of Edwin Drood. Ch. 2. (1870)

I'm as well as ever I was, and I'm not going to be mollicoddled any more.

MISS BRADDON, The Golden Calf. Vol. iii, ch. 7. (1883)

13 Hold him up to scorn as a mollycoddle and a milksop.

THACKERAY, The English Humorists: Fielding. (1851) The English Dialect Dictionary (1903) says a mollycoddle is "A man who does household work," but O.E.D. says it is "one who coddles himself or is coddled; one who takes excessive care of himself; an effeminate man."

Mollycoddles instead of vigorous men.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Speech, Cambridge, Mass., 23 Feb., 1907.

The large mollycoddle vote—the people who are soft physically and morally.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Autobiography. Ch. 7. I can tell you what a mollycoddle is. It's a monkey dressed up by its mother and sent out to pick daisies on the lawn.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), Sociology in Serge and Straw. (1910)

Hes not the mollicoddle he was when you had him in hand.

SHAW, Fanny's First Play. Act i. (1911)

MOMENT

<sup>1</sup> That may happen in a moment, which may not occur again in a hundred years. (Accasca in un punto, quel che non accasca in cento anni.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. i, p. 169. (1814)

An Italian proverb. "Therefore," Bland adds, this time quoting Ovid, "Keep your hook always baited."

<sup>2</sup> I recommend you to take care of the minutes, for hours will take care of themselves.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 6 Nov., 1747.

The value of moments, when cast up, is immense, if well employed; if thrown away, their loss is irrecoverable. Every moment may be put to some use.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 18 Feb., 1748.

Take care of the minutes and the hours will take care of themselves.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 3. (1843)

Since our office is with moments, let us husband them.

EMERSON, Essays: Experience. (1844)

God works in moments. (En peu d'heure Dieu labore.)

EMERSON, Works and Days. (1870) Quoting an old French proverb.

<sup>3</sup> Since thou art not sure of a minute, throw not away an hour.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1738. Repeated in 1758.

<sup>4</sup> He who seizes on the moment, he is the right man. (Der den Augenblick ergreift, | Das ist der rechte Mann.)

GOETHE, FAUST. Pt. i; Studierzimmer. (1806)

Charles V. of Spain is credited by PRESCOTT, Philip II, bk. i, ch. 9, with attributing his success to "Myself, and the lucky moment." Anster renders Goethe's line, "Are you in earnest? Seize this very minute."

<sup>5</sup> To know the fitting moment is the best aim of knowledge. (νοῦσαι δὲ καὶ πρὸς ἀριστερόν.)

PINDAR, Olympian Odes. No. xiii, l. 48. (464 B. C.)

The supreme moment. Not 'the moment of death' (the original sense: French le moment suprême), but the moment of greatest happiness, the acme of triumph.

ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Cliché's: Supreme. (1941)

<sup>6</sup> Like as the waves make towards the pebbled shore,

So do our minutes hasten to their end.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. lx. (1609)

<sup>7</sup> Obey the spur of the moment. . . . Let the spurs of countless moments goad us incessantly into life.

H. D. THOREAU, Winter, 26 Jan., 1852.

<sup>8</sup> The psychological momentum, potent element, or factor. (Das psychologische Moment.)

UNKNOWN, Neue Preussische Zeitung, 16 Dec., 1870. The German paper was pointing out that very important psychological considerations were against opening the bombardment of Paris until the hopes of the Parisians for reinforcements or relief had been overthrown. The German phrase was mistaken for der psychologische Moment, the psychological moment of time, and became a jocular phrase for the fitting or proper moment. The O.E.D. says further that the real meaning is "The psychologically (or rather psychically) appropriate moment; often misused for 'the critical moment,' 'the very nick of time,' without any reference to psychology or to the mind."

The phrase became current and even fashionable. One used to say, 'I feel hungry; it is the psychological moment for sitting down to table.' (Moment psychologique.)

SARCEY, Siege of Paris. Ch. 10. (1871)

He knew the precise psychological moment when to say nothing.

OSCAR WILDE, The Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 2. (1891)

ON THE SPUR OF THE MOMENT, see under SPUR.

MONARCH

See also King

<sup>9</sup> I am monarch of all I survey.

WILLIAM COWPER, Verses Supposed to be Written by Alexander Selkirk. (a. 1800)

Cravin' to be monarch of all he surveyed.

H. C. BAILEY, Mr. Fortune Finds a Pig, p. 26. (1943)

<sup>10</sup> The quality of mercy . . . becomes

The throned monarch better than his crown.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, iv, 1, 189. (1597)

'Tis clemency which is the surest mark

By which the world may know a true monarch.

(La clémence est la plus belle marque Qui fasse à l'univers connaître un vrai monarque.)

CORNELLE, Cinna. Act iv, sc. 3. (1640)

<sup>11</sup> Restless he rolls about from whore to whore, A merry Monarch, scandalous and poor.

JOHN WILMOT, Earl of Rochester, Satire on the King. (C. 1665) Referring to Charles II.

This very Mayor afterwards erected a statue of his merry Monarch in Stocks-Market.

RICHARD STEELE, The Spectator. No. 462. (1712)

Monarchs seldom sigh in vain.

SCOTT, Marmion. Canto v, st. 9. (1808)

MONEY

See also Cash, Gold, Lucre, Riches

1 The love of money overcomes us all. (ἀλλ' εἰς τοῦ κέρδους πάντες ἤττονες.)

ARISTOPHANES, Plutus, l. 364. (388 B.C.) An adaptation of a fragment (325) from the Danaë of Euripides: κρείσσων γὰρ οὐδεὶς χρημάτων πέφυκ' ἀνὴρ.

The love of money is the mother-city of all evils. (τὴν φιλαργυρίαν μητρόπολιν πάντων τῶν κακῶν.)

DIOGENES, Apothegm. (c. 350 B.C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Diogenes. Bk. vi, sec. 50.

The love of money is the root of all evil. (ρίζα γὰρ πάντων τῶν κακῶν ἐστὶν ἡ φιλαργυρία.)

New Testament: 1 Timothy, vi, 10. (c. 62 A.D.) The Vulgate is, "Radix enim omnium malorum est cupiditas." The proverb is often incorrectly quoted, "Money is the root of all evil"—a typical shift from the abstract to the concrete, as more easily understood by the multitudes to whom proverbs appeal. The shorter Latin form, "Radix malorum est cupiditas" (The root of evil is desire for money), is frequently quoted; recently in BEEDING'S Ten Holy Horrors, p. 39. (1939)

The love of the world is the root of all evil.

MOHAMMED, Sunnah. (c. 630) Sayings of Muhammad, p. 118.

My theme is alway oon, and ever was—"Radix malorum est Cupiditas."

CHAUCER, The Pardoners Tale: Prologue, l. 5. (c. 1386) Both Mark Twain and Bernard Shaw are credited with a more realistic version, "The lack of money is the root of all evil."

2 Seith saint Paule, that "the rote of all harmes is Coveitise."

CHAUCER, The Persones Tale. Sec. 62.

The apostle seith, that "coveitise is rote of alle harmes."

CHAUCER, The Tale of Melibeus. Sec. 18.

The covetousness of money is the root of all evil.

THOMAS BECON, A New Catechism, p. 122. (1560)

3 Let every man divide his money into three parts, and invest a third in land, a third in business, and a third let him keep in reserve.

Babylonian Talmud: Baba Metzia, fo. 42a. (c. 450) Financial advice difficult to improve upon.

Put not your trust in money, but put your money in trust.

O. W. HOLMES, The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 2. (1858)

4 Bargaines, which for their greatnesse are few Mens money.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Riches. (1597)

Such a Discourse is of general Use, and every married Man's Money.

ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 482. (1712)

Mignonette's everybody's money.

HENRY MAYHEW, London Labour and the London Poor, p. 139. (1851)

5

There is commonly less money, less wisdom, and less good faith, than men do account upon. (Di danari, di seno, e di fede, Cè nè manco che non credi.)

FRANCIS BACON, Of the Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii, ch. 23. (1605) GIUSTI, Proverbi Toscani, p. 263, gives the proverb in shorter form, "Danari, senne e fede, ce n' è manco l'uom crede."

Of money, wit and virtue, believe one-fourth of what you hear.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 466. (1855)

6

He is a wretch that hath no money.

THOMAS BECON, Early Works, p. 223. (1542)

Without my money none careth for me.

THOMAS DELONEY, Jack of Newbury, i. (1597)

He that wants money wants all things.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Argent. (1611)

When we want money, we want all.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 24. (1633)

The skilfullest wanting money is scorned.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 18. (1670)

A Man without Money is a Bow without an Arrow. A Man without Money is no Man at all.

FULLER, Gnomologia. Nos. 316-17. (1732)

Want of money, want of comfort.

NATHAN BAILEY, Dictionary: Want. (1736)

In England, he that wants money wants everything.

RICHARD CUMBERLAND, The Fashionable Lover.

Act ii, sc. 1. (1772)

When you ain't got no money, well you needn't come around.

CLARENCE S. BREWSTER. Title and refrain of popular song. (1898) Quoted by HUNEKER, Painted Veils, p. 233. (1920)

Whether you are right or wrong, if you have no money you are wrong. With money you are a dragon, without it a worm.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 370. (1938) Chinese proverbs.

7

Money is the sinews of success. (τὸν πλοῦτος νεῦρα πραγμάτων.)

BION, Apothegm. (c. 275 B.C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Bion. Bk. iv, sec. 48. This is the Hicks rendering (Loeb). The more usual one is, "Money is the sinews of business." MONEY IS THE SINEWS OF WAR, see WAR: ITS SINEWS.

8

Public money is like holy water, every one helps himself to it.

H. G. BOHN, Foreign Proverbs, p. 101. An Italian proverb.

9

Money is a continuall traveller in the world.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Works, ii, e 5. (1616)

Money is a great traveller in the world.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 98. (1639)

10

No one is so stingy but that he will be prodigal with another's money. (Nullus tam parcus, quin prodigus ex alieno.)

CATO (?), Collectio Monostichorum, l.9. (c. 175 B.C.) See Minor Latin Poets, Loeb, p. 624.

1 Upon a good foundation a good building may be raised, and the best foundation in the world is money. (Sobre un buen cimiento se puede levantar un buen edificio, y el mejor cimiento del mundo es el dinero.)
CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 20. (1615)

2 The money paid, the arms broken. (A dineros pagados, brazos quebrados.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 71. (1615)
Broken, i.e. idle. Spoken of workmen, who put in a period of idleness spending their wages, after they have received them. The Portuguese have the same proverb. The French say, "Argent avancé, bras affolé" (Money advanced, arm out of joint).

How softly she goes! How one leg comes drawing after another! Now she has her money, her armes are broken.

MABBE, tr., Celestina (T.T.), p. 67. (1631)
A servant paid, his arm broke.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 257. (1666)

3 Papa's having and mama's having is not like having it one's self. (Fu yu mu yu wu ju tzü yu.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 185. (1872)

4 Money neuer commeth out of season. It is the fruit that is alwaies ripe.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca; Monie. (1633)
CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 220. (1639)

5 A man must tell golde after his owne father.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 208. (1633)
Tell money after your own father.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 90. (1639)
Count money after your own father.

FRANCIS OSBORNE, Advice to a Son, p. 26. (1656)
One gave him a fee of forty broad pieces: he took 'em and counted 'em (as a man may count money after his father, they say).

L'ESTRANGE, Fables, (1738), p. 353. (1692)
Always tell money after your father, sir.

COLLEY CIBBER, Rival Fools. Act v. (1709)
Reckon money after all your kin.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 284. (1721)
Count money after your own kin.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk. Ch. 8. (1869)

6 Weill worth aw, that gars the plough draw.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 108. (c. 1595) Cited by KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 354. (1721), and by HISLOP, Proverbs of Scotland, p. 313 (1862), with the explanation, "Anglice, Good luck to everything by which we earn money."

Account not that slavery

That brings in penny savoury.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 221. (1678)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6371. (1732)

7 Money is the chiefest woord in this house. (Denaro è il principal verbo in questa casa.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 30. (1578)

Wyl maketh the market, but money maketh payment. (Volonta fa mercato, & denari pagano.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 34.

8 It's just as bad to have money as not to have it. (Tam malum est habere nummum, non habere quam malum est.)

FLORUS, Epigrams. No. viii, l. 2. (c. A.D. 124)
To have money is a fear, not to have it is a grief.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 593. (1640)
Those who have money have trouble about it; Those who have none have trouble without it.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 488. (1940)

9 Some are justly laught at for keeping their money foolishly, others for spending it idly: He is the greatest fool that lays it out in a purchase of repentance.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1740

Money and Man a mutual Friendship show: Man makes false Money, Money makes Man so.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1742.

A patch on your coat, and money in your pocket, is better and more creditable, than a writ on your back, and no money to take it off.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1756

10 He who hath Money and Capers, is well provided for Lent.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2388. (1732)
Money cannot buy Merit. Money is a merry Fellow.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. Nos. 3434-36.
Samson was a strong Man, yet could not pay Money before he had it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4066.

11 Money is a privilege to act as you will, and also a prohibition against doing as you please.

MOSES GOLDMAN, Proverbs of the Sages. No. 282. (1911)

12 Good Lord what knacks are made for money, now adaies.

RICHARD HARVEY, Plaine Perciual (1860), p. 19. (1590)

O Gods, what things are made for money!

JOHN LYLY, Endimion. Act ii, sc. 2. (1591)

A cockney seeing a squirrell in a shop . . . said: Jesu God, what pretty things are made for money.

ANTHONY COPLEY, Wits, Fitts, and Fancies (1614), p. 145. (1594)

What pretty Things Men will make for Money, quoth the old Woman, when she saw a Monkey.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5503. (1732)

13 Money refused loseth its brightness.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 448. (1640)

The money you refuse will never do you good.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 510. (1855)

14 The love of money and the love of learning rarely meet.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1159. (1650)

Much money makes a country poor, for it sets a dearer price on everything.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1169. (1650)
Money wants no followers.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1173. (1650)
1

Where coine is not common, commons [provisions] must be scant.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 1. (1546)
Cited by Draxe, Clarke, and Ray.

2
Money will be slave or master. (Imperat aut servit collecta pecunia cuique.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 10, l. 47. (20 B. C.)
Money is a good servant but a bad master. (L'argent est un bon serviteur, mais un méchant maître.)

BACON, Aphorismi et Consilia. (a. 1626) Quoting a French proverb. The Scots say, "Ne'er let your gear owergang [overmaster] ye."

I must grant, Riches, well got, to be a useful servant, But a bad master.

PHILIP MASSINGER, A New Way to Pay Old Debts. Act iv, sc. 1. (1633)

Money is a Servant to him who can make use of it, otherwise it is a Master.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 64. (1666)

If Money be not thy Servant, it will be thy Master.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2694. (1732)

This is of course on the supposition that you are master of money, that the money is not master of you.

LORD AVEBURY, The Pleasures of Life. Pt. ii, ch. 2. (1887)

3
He has lost his belt. (Zonam perdidit.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 2, l. 40. (20 B. C.)

The belt in which the Romans carried their money. ERASMUS, Adagia, i, v, 16, credits this phrase to Lucilius. There is a Latin proverb, "Pecuniam perdidisti: fortasse illa te perderet manens" (You have lost your money, but perhaps it would have lost you had it remained).

Nothing stings more deeply than the loss of money. (Nec quicquam acrius quam pecuniae damnum stimulat.)

LIVY, History. Bk. xxx, sec. 44. (c. 10 B. C.)

A household bewails the loss of money with louder lamentations than a death. (Maiore tumultu | planguntur nummi quam funera.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiii, l. 130. (c. A. D. 120)
Lost money is wept for with real tears. (Ploratur lachrimis amissa pecunia veris.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiii, l. 134. (c. A. D. 120)

Quoted by RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 42. (1545) Juvenal is saying that when money is lost "no one is content to rend the top of his garment, or to squeeze forced moisture from his eyes." His tears are real.

Men forget more easily the death of their father than the loss of their patrimony. (Li uominis dimenticano più presto la morte del padre che la perdita del patrimonio.)

MACHIAVELLI, Il Principe. Ch. 17. (1513)

When money is gone, all is gone alas! (Deficiente pecu deficit omne, nia.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 41. (1545)

Quoted from an unknown source. The French also say, "Quand argent fault tout fault."

Money is often lost for want of money.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 69. (1616)

4
As money grows, care and greed for greater riches follow after. (Crescentem sequitur cura pecuniam | maiorumque fames.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 16, l. 17. (23 B. C.)

The love of money grows as the money itself grows. (Crescit amor nummi quantum ipsa pecunia crevit.)

JUVENAL, Satires. No. xiv, l. 139. (c. A. D. 120)

The Germans say, "Je mehr man hat, je mehr man will."

Absolutely speaking, the more money the less virtue.

H. D. THOREAU, Civil Disobedience. (1849)

5
He that hath money in his purse cannot want a head for his shoulders.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 13. (1659)

That is, he will never want advisers and defenders. JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 14. (1678) ARTHUR MURPHY, The Citizen. Act i, sc. 2. (1763)

He who has money finds many cousins. (Chi ha danari, trova cugini.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 186. (1856) An Italian proverb. See also FRIENDS AND PROSPERITY.

6
Four farthings and a thimble

Make a tailor's pocket jingle.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 15. (1659)

Cited by RAY, p. 215; FULLER, No. 6328.

Fiddlers' money: all sixpences.

FRANCIS GROSE, A Classical Dictionary of the Vulgar Tongue: Fiddler. (1785)

Halves and quarters and dimes? Not for Sam Turner. "No chicken feed for me," he would say.

O. HENRY, Friends in San Rosario. (1909)

7
He that hath it, and will not keep it,
He that wanteth it, and will not seek it,
He that drinketh and is not dry,
Shall want money as well as I.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 21. (1659)

Cited by Ray and Spurgeon.

8
I will . . . take away all thy tin. (Auferam omne stannum tuum.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, i, 25. (c. 725 B. C.)

He has the wherewithal. (Habet unde.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 45. (c. A. D. 60)

Filthy lucre.

New Testament: I Timothy, iii, 3. (c. A. D. 60)
See under LUCRE.

Market, they say, needs not words but brass. (οὐ λόγων, φασίν, ἡ ἀγορὴ δεῖται χαλκῶν.)

HERODES, Mimes. No. vii, l. 49. (c. A. D. 100)

Cercidas (c. A. D. 350) also uses "brass" for money, where he says (Cercidea, 41), "None now would wed even Hera herself were she poor, but would rather choose to keep in his house as wife a Lydian harlot, if he got brass with her" (ἢν φέρῃ χαλκοῦς).

With hir he yaf ful many a panne of bras.

CHAUCER, The Reves Tale, l. 24. (c. 1386)

My lusty rustic, learn and be instructed. Cole is, in the language of the witty, money; the rhino. . . . Here's the cole, the ready, the rhino, the darby.

SHADWELL, The Squire of Alsatia. Act iv. (1688)
He leaves all his ready rhino to them.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws.
Ch. 2. (1843)

Perhaps a gold-mine, for aught I know,
Containing heaps of native rhino.

J. R. LOWELL, Biglow Papers: Leaving the Matter Open. (1848)

I am here in town without a rock in my pocket.

D. CORCORAN, Pickings, p. 143. (1846)

Cash, cash, cash, that's what we're looking for,
There's nothing like the good old Rhino!

M. H. ROSENFELD, There's Nothing Like It.
(1887)

[He was] "dropping his scads" at draw poker.

BRET HARTE, The Bell-Ringer of Angel's, p. 13.
(1894)

That's what I'm out for—the dust.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), Supply and Demand. (1909) "Dust" as a synonym for money originated in 1849 in California, where gold dust was used as a medium of exchange.

I never have a bean.

MICHAEL INNES, Comedy of Terrors, p. 234.
(1940)

She's got more dough than you could shake a stick at.

P. G. WODEHOUSE, Money in the Bank, p. 286.
(1942)

1 Money amassed with excessive care chokes many. (Plures nimia congesta pecunia cura | strangulat.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. x, l. 12. (c. A. D. 120)

2 God send me some money, for they are little thought of that want it, quoth the Earl of Eglinton at his prayers.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 113. (1721)

They may be false who languish and complain,
But they who sigh for money never feign.

MARY WORTLEY MONTAGU, Letter to James Stuart, 27 Nov., 1759.

Nothing like a little money in the sock to give you self-confidence.

ROSEMARY TAYLOR, Chicken Every Sunday, p. 176. (1943)

3 Bad money drives out good.

VINCENT LEAN, Collectanea. iii, 425. (1902)

Look for your money where you lost it.

VINCENT LEAN, Collectanea, iv, 36. A Stock Exchange Maxim, i. e. wait for a further fall.

4 Above money neither friend nor relative. (Sur argent amy ne parent.)

GABRIEL MEURIER, Trésor des Sentences. (1617)

5 A little wanton money, which . . . burned out the bottom of his purse.

SIR THOMAS MORE, Works (1557), p. 195. (c. 1530)

Sonne, think not thy monie purse bottom to burn, but keepe it for profite, to serve thine owne turn.

THOMAS TUSSER, Five Hundredth Pointes of Good Husbandrie. Ch. 10, st. 11. (1573)

Like an vnthrifts money that burnes in his purse.

SIR WILLIAM CORNWALLIS, Essays. Pt. ii, sig. P4. (1601)

My gold has burnt this twelve months in my pocket.

JAMES SHIRLEY, Hyde Park. Act iv, sc. 3. (1637)

Time hangs heavy on my hands, and my money burns in my pocket.

FARQUHAR, The Inconstant. Act v, sc. 3. (1702)

Tom's new purse and money burnt in his pocket.

THOMAS HUGHES, Tom Brown's School Days. Pt. i, ch. 6. (1857)

A man who has more money about him than he requires . . . is tempted to spend it. . . . It is apt to "burn a hole in his pocket."

SAMUEL SMILES, Thrift, p. 139. (1875)

Her money was burning a hole in her pocket.

LASWELL, Suds in Your Eye, p. 175. (1942)

6 A pistol protruded into the carriage. "Your money or your life!" said a rough voice.

JAMES PAYN, Lost Sir Massingberd. Ch. 29. (1864)

7 No chink, no drink.

THOMAS PECKE, Parnassi Puerperium, p. 64. (1659)

No money, no Swiss. (Point d'argent, point de Suisse.)

RACINE, Les Plaideurs. Act i, sc. 1. (1668)

Originally intended as a gibe at the venality of Swiss mercenaries, the phrase is now used to indicate that what one wants must be paid for in cash. Another form is, "Pas d'argent, pas de Suisses." The Germans say, "Kein Geld, kein Schweizer."

No silver no servant. The Suisses have a proverb among themselves, parallel to this. Point d'argent point de suisse. No money no Suisse. The Suisses for money will serve neighbouring princes in their wars.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 143. (1670)

After long observation, I find it to hold truer no money, no mistress, than no money, no Swiss.

THOMAS BROWN, Works, iii, 162. (a. 1704)

No Penny, no Pater-noster.

DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 200. (1709)

No Pay, no Swiss. No Silver, no Service.

FULLER, Gnomologia. Nos. 3614, 3629. (1732)

For these, like Swiss, attend;

No longer pay, no longer friend.

JOHN GAY, Fables. Ser. ii, fab. 9, l. 61. (1737)

"No money, no Swiss," is a proverb throughout the world.

COBBETT, Advice to Young Men. Let. v. (1829)

There never was a truer saying than "Point d'argent, point de Suisse."

MARRYAT, Olla Podrida. Ch. 35. (1840)

No tickce, no washee, i. e., "without the essential prerequisite, a desired object cannot be obtained," with its evident allusion to the Chinese laundryman, bespeaks for itself a recent origin.

ARTHUR TAYLOR, The Proverb, p. 11. (1931)

No money, no love. No tickce, no washee.

RICHARD SHATTUCK, The Snark Was a Boojum, p. 170. (1941)

1 Money, it has been said, is the cause of good things to a good man, of evil things to a bad man. (ἐπεὶ καὶ χρήματα εἴτια μὲν ἀγαθῶν, κακῶ δέ, ὡς ἔφη τις, κακῶν.)

PHILO, De Plantatione. Sec. 171. (c. A. D. 40)

2 The man who's made money quickly must economize quickly, or he'll quickly go hungry. (Qui homo mature quaesivit pecuniam, nisi eam mature parsit, mature esurit.)

PLAUTUS, Curculio, l. 380. (c. 200 B. C.)

As in a frost, a mud wall made of lome Cracketh and crummeth in peeces a sunder, So melteth his money, to the worlds wonder.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

3 We do as our means permit. (Efficimus pro opibus nostra moenia.)

PLAUTUS, Stichus, l. 695. (c. 200 B. C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, vii, 61.

4 You are the cause, money, that life is full of care. (Sollicitae tu causa, pecunia, vitae!)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. iii, eleg. vii, l. 1. (c. 22 B. C.) The Germans say, "Je mehr Geld, je mehr Sorge" (The more money, the more sorrow).

5 When the mind rules wisely, money is a blessing. (Bona imperante animo bono est pecunia.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 86. (c. 43 B. C.) Money, that blessing to the race of man. (Pecunia, ingens generis humani bonum.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. cxv, sec. 14. (c. 64 A. D.) Paraphrasing EURIPIDES, Danaë, frag. 324.

Money, the Life-blood of the Nation.

SWIFT, The Run Upon the Bankers, l. 9. (1720)

6 Lack of money is trouble without equal. (Faute d'argent, c'est douler sans pareille.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. ii, ch. 16. (1534)

Subject by nature to a disease, which at that time was called lack of money. (Suiect de nature à vne maladie qu'on appelloit en ce temps là, faulte d'argent.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. ii, ch. 16.

A certain disease which they called want of money. (Certaine maladie, qu'ilz nommoient Faulte d'argent.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 35. (1548)

7 Money is the 'other' blood. (Pecunia est alter sanguis.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 42. (1545)

Quoted from Antonio de Butrio, with a play on the more usual, 'alter ego.'

Money is man's life, and his best friend in time of need. (Pecunia est vita hominis et optimus fide jussor in necessitatibus.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 42. (1545)

Also quoted from de Butrio.

8 Money is wise, it knows its way. Sayes the poor man that must pay as soon as he receives.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 352. (1678)

There never was a five pound note but there was a ten pound road for't. The reply of a lady when asked what she did with all the money she got.

HISLOP, Proverbs of Scotland, p. 287. (1862)

9 They can find money for mischief, when they can find none to buy corn.

JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 409. (1678)

He'll find Money for Mischief, when he can find none for Corn.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2425. (1732)

10 Too much money makes men mad, the prouerb plaine doth show.

ROLLINS, Cavalier and Puritan, p. 117, citing a proverb of c. 1640.

The abundance of money ruins youth.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 18. (1670)

There are two variants, "Money ruins many," and "Money often unmakes its makers."

11 The merciful never have any money, while those who have money are always hard-hearted.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. vii, Apol. 19. (c. 1258)

Money hath no currency without its stamp.

SADI, Pand Namah (Scroll of Wisdom). Sec. 18. (c. 1260) Wollaston, tr.

12 The elegant simplicity of the three per cents.

WILLIAM SCOTT, BARON STOWELL, Epigram. (a. 1836) See CAMPBELL, Lives of the Chancellors, x, 212.

The sweet simplicity of the three per cents.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, 19 Feb., 1850. Endymion. Ch. 96. (1880)

13 O how much good time you lose over a bad matter! (O quam bonum tempus in re mala perdis!)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. 3, ch. 28. (c. A. D. 54)

Dunna waste a fresh haft on an oud blade. Don't throw good money after bad.

EGERTON LEIGH, A Glossary of Words Used in the Dialect of Cheshire, p. 96. (1877)

If they would . . . start free, instead of sending good money after bad—how much happier would be this world of ours!

JAMES PAYN, The Canon's Ward. Ch. 25. (1884)

14 A horn for my money.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing, ii, 3, 63. (1598)

English-men for my money.

WILLIAM HAUGHTON. Title. (1616)

Cambridge for my money.

DRYDEN, Sir Martin Mar-All. Act v, sc. 1. (1667)

The very man for our money.

SAMUEL LOVER, Handy Andy. Ch. 10. (1842)

1 Put money in thy purse.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, i, 3, 345. (1605)

My son, put money in thy purse.

EDMUND GAYTON, Don Quixot, p. 9. (1654)

My friend, keep money in thy purse; 'tis one of Solomon's Proverbs.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 17/1. (1659)

He that has a full purse never wanteth a friend.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 161. (1721)

Money in Purse will be always in Fashion.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3435. (1732)

Fuller gives a polish to an old proverb.

My son, put money in thy purse, and then keep it.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 456. (1855)

2 No man will take counsel, but every man will take money: therefore money is better than counsel.

JONATHAN SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects. (1706)

3 Come, miss, hold up your head, girl; there's money bid for you.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

As the saying is, there's money bid for you.

FREDERICK MARRYAT, Japhet in Search of a Father. Ch. 4. (1836)

4 We want our Money on the Nail.

SWIFT, The Run Upon the Bankers, l. 17. (1720)

5 For by long proofe, the prouerbe true doth say, That ready money euer will away.

JOHN TAYLOR, Works, p. 72. (1630)

Ready money will away.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 12/1. (1659) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 18. (1670)

Money comes like earth dug up with a needle; It goes like sand washed away by a flood.

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 481. (1872)

Up and down the City Road, in and out the Eagle,

That's the way the money goes—pop goes the weasel!

W. R. MANDLE (attr.), Pop Goes the Weasel. (c. 1880)

6 To despise money at the right moment is sometimes the way to make it. (Pecuniam in loco negligere maximum interdictum lucrum.)

TERENCE, Adelphoe, l. 216. (160 B.C.)

It is sometimes better to give your apple away than eat it yourself.

A penny is sometimes better spent than spared. He who greases his wheels helps his oxen.

Don't spoil the ship for a pennyworth of tar.

HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 322. (1869)

7 We often buy money very much too dear.

THACKERAY, Barry Lyndon. Ch. 13. (1844)

The price we pay for money is paid in liberty.

STEVENSON, Familiar Studies, p. 138. (1874)

8 It [money] has no smell. (Non olet.)

VESPASIAN, to his son Titus, when the latter criticized him for imposing a tax on urinals. (c. A.D. 75) See Suetonius, Twelve Caesars: Vespasian. Sec. 23.

The odor of gain is always sweet, whatever it comes from. (Lucri bonus est odor ex re | qualibet.)

JUVENAL, Satires. No. xiv, l. 204. (c. A.D. 120)

Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, vii, 13. "Vespasian," Erasmus adds, "who, but for his inordinate love of money, was one of the best of the Roman emperors, made use of this apothegm, in answer to his son, who had reproved him for laying a tax upon urinals. Taking a piece of money from his pocket, which he had received from that impost, and applying it to the nostrils of his son, he demanded whether he perceived any ill odor from it. (Ecquid ea pecunia puteret.) The French say, "L'argent n'a pas d'odeur," and it is perhaps worth noting that the public urinals along the boulevards are called Vespasians by the Parisians

The savour of lucre is good, howsoever a man come by it.

THOMAS BECON, Early Works (P.S.), p. 222. (1542)

So we get the chinks, | We will bear with the stinks.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, Metamorphoses of Ajax, p. 68. (1596) CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 293. (1639) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 4. (1670)

Of al odors he likes best the smel of Vrine, and holds Vespasians rule, that no gain is vnsauory.

BISHOP JOHN EARLE, Micro-cosmographie: Phisitian (Arber), p. 25. (1628)

Money is welcome though it come in a dirty clout.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 18. (1670)

Money is welcome in a dirten clout. Dulcis odor lucri ex re qualibet.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 249. (1721)

I have often heard people say, when they have been talking of money, that they could not get in, 'I wish I had it in a foul clout.'

DANIEL DEFOE, Colonel Jacque. Ch. 2. (1723)

We will bear with the stink, If it bring but in chink.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6277. (1732)

It did not follow that James need continue to take money from hands dipped in his mother's blood. Of money, however, from whatever quarter, James thought non olet.

ANDREW LANG, A History of Scotland. Vol. ii, ch. 13, p. 335. (1902)

He understood in the flesh the deep wisdom of that old proverb . . . that money has no smell.

ARNOLD BENNETT, Prohack. Ch. 3. (1922)

Money is the guiltiest thing in the world. It stinks.

WILLIAM SAROYAN, The Time of Your Life. Act iii. (1939)

They say money don't stink. I sometimes wonder.

RAYMOND CHANDLER, Farewell, My Lovely, p. 227. (1940)

9 Who in his pocket hath no money,
In his mouth he must have honey.

ROWLAND WATKINS, Flamma Sine Fumo. (1662)

Nothing but money, is sweeter than honey.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1735.

1 Money's a good plaster, and a wad of hundred-franc notes can be spread over quite a bruise.

P. C. WREN, The Uniform of Glory, p. 178. (1941)

2 Given for girdle-money. (ἐπὶ ζώνην δεδομέναι.)
XENOPHON, Anabasis. Bk. i, ch. 4, sec. 9. (c. 390 B.C.) Xenophon is saying, "The villages in which the troops encamped belonged to Parysatis, for they had been given her for girdle-money."

I give my said daughter Margaret my lease of the parsonage of Kirkdall Church . . . to by her pinnes withal.

Testamenta Eboracensia, vi, 160. (1542) This is a record of wills registered at York.

Caligula gave an 100000 sesterces to his Curtisan . . . to buy her pins.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy.

Pt. iii, sec. ii, mem. iv, subs. 1. (1621)

He told me I should have two hundred a year to buy pins.—Ah, my dearest, these Londoners have got a gibberidge with 'em would confound a gipsy. That which they call pin-money is to buy their wives everything in the varsal world.

VANBRUGH, The Relapse. Act v, sc. 5. (1697)

The Doctrine of Pin-money is of a very late date, unknown to our great-grandmothers.

ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 295. (1712) The quotation from Xenophon shows how wrong Addison was.

If she has any pin money or separate maintenance, it is said she may dispose of her savings thereout by testament, without the control of her husband.

SIR WILLIAM BLACKSTONE, Commentaries, ii, xxxii, 498. (1766)

The point was, whether a wife should or should not have pin-money.

MARIA EDGEWORTH, Manoeuvring. Ch. 9. (1809)

3 Xenias, the man of whom it was said he measured out with a bushel measure the money he received from his father. (Ξενίας, τὸν λεγόμενον μεδύμνῳ ἀπομετρήσασθαι τὸ παρὰ τοῦ πατρὸς ἀργύριον.)

XENOPHON, Hellenica. Bk. iii, ch. ii, sec. 27. (c. 360 B.C.)

So rich that he measured his money. (Dives ut metiretur nummos.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. i, l. 95. (35 B.C.)

She measures her money by the bushel. (Nummos modio metitur.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 37. (c. A.D. 60) A phrase which had by this time become proverbial.

He had money to burn.

JAMES HUNCKER, Painted Veils, p. 69. (1920)

She has money to burn—money to feed the birds.

E. C. BENTLEY, Trent's Last Case. Ch. 12. (1930)

She is rolling in money.

FRANCIS BEEDING, Eleven Were Brave, p. 20. (1941) The French say, "L'argent roule dans cette maison."

4 Why is the forme of money round?
Because it is to runne from every man.

UNKNOWN, A Help to Discourse, p. 120. (1619)
Money is round, and so quickly trills away.

JAMES HOWELL, Italian Proverbs, p. 2. (1659)
Moneys are round, and that makes them rowl away.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 64. (1666)

Money is round, so it has to roll. (Argent est rond, il faut qu'il roule.)

LE ROUX DE LINCY, Proverbes Français, ii, 110. (1859)

Money is round, and rolls away easily.

SPURGEON, John Ploughman. Ch. 12. (1869)

It is not for nothing that sovereigns are made circular, for they roll very rapidly, and 'riches take to themselves wings and fly away.'

ALEX. MACLAREN, Exposition of Matthew, ii, 256. (1905) The Scotch version is, "Money is flat and meant to be piled up."

A FOOL AND HIS MONEY, see under FOOL.

II—Making Money

5 The occupation which gives a man most pleasure is making money. (κερδαίων.)

BIAS, Epigram. (c. 570 B.C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Bias. Bk. i, sec. 87.

The only time that we do not grow weary is when we are making money. (κερδαίνοντες μόνον οὐ κοπιῶμεν.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia. Sec. 783F. (c. A.D. 95)
Quoted as a proverb.

The first of all English games is making money.

RUSKIN, Crown of Wild Olive. Ch. 1. (1866)

6 Whence the money comes nobody cares, but you've got to have it. (Unde habeas quaerit nemo, sed oportet habere.)

ENNIUS, Satires. (c. 175 B.C.) Quoted by JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiv, l. 207. (c. A.D. 120)
Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, vii, 13. "This," Juvenal says, "is the lesson taught by skinny old nurses to little boys before they can walk; this is what every girl learns before her Abc's."

How you get it, that is the question; whether by right or by wrong. (Quo modo habeas, id refert, iurene anne iniuria.)

PLAUTUS, Rudens, l. 1069. (c. 200 B.C.)

I don't care how, as long as I get it. (Mea nil refert, dum potiar modo.)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 320. (161 B.C.)

You must seek money first; virtue after pelf. (Quaerenda pecunia primum est; | virtus post nummos!)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 1, l. 54. (20 B.C.)
Make money, money by fair means, if you can; if not, by any means money. (Rem facias, rem, | si possis, recte, si non, quocumque modo, rem.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 1, l. 65. (20 B.C.)
Pope's rendering of this is,

Get Place and Wealth, if possible with grace;

If not, by any mean get Wealth and Place.

The Germans say, "Geld! Geld! | Schreit die ganze Welt" (Money! money! cries the whole world).

Nobody asks how you got your money, but merely what its total is. (Non quare et unde, quid habes, tantum rogant.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. cxv, sec. 14. (c. A. D. 64) What is infamy so long as our money is safe? (Quid enim salvis infamia nummis?)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. i, l. 48. (c. A. D. 120) The rule, Get money, still get money, boy; No matter by what means.

BEN JONSON, Every Man in His Humour. Act ii, sc. 5. (1598)

The gospel left behind by Jay Gould is doing giant work in our days. Its message is "Get money. Get it quickly. Get it in abundance. Get it dishonestly, if you can, honestly, if you must."

MARK TWAIN, In Eruption, p. 77. (1906)

1 He that hes twa huids, is able to get the third.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 40. (c. 1595)

He that has two hoards, will get a third.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 158. (1721) Money wou'd be gotten, if there were money to get it with.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 250.

2 Put twa half-pennies in a purse, and they will draw together.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 86. (c. 1595) Put two pennies in a purse and they'll creep together.

F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 99. (1902)

3 If thou wouldst keep Money, save Money.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2721. (1732) There is no way to make money so certain as to save what you already have. (Nullus tantus quaestus, quam quod habes parcere.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 294. (1869) See also under SAVING.

The easiest way to make money is to keep somebody else from getting it away from you.

RICE, Sunday Pigeon Murders, p. 79. (1942)

4 There are few ways in which a man can be more innocently employed than in getting money.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Remark, to Dr. Strahan. See BOSWELL, Life, 27 March, 1775.

5 You must spend money, if you wish to make money. (Necesse est facere sumptum qui quaerit lucrum.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 217. (c. 200 B. C.)

If thou wouldst reap Money, sow Money.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2722. (1732)

The Chinese say, "If a little cash does not go out, much cash will not come in."

6 Knowing how to make money and also how to keep it—either of these gifts might make a man rich. (Quaerendi et custodiendi scientia, quarum vel altera locupletem facere potuisset.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. ci, sec. 3. (a. A. D. 64) It is harder to keep money than to get it. (Il y a plus de peine à garder l'argent qu'à l'acquérir.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 40. (1580) The Germans put it the other way around, "Gewinnen ist leichter als Erhalten" (It is easier to get money than to keep it). They add, "Weise Hut behält ihr Gut" (Wise care keeps what it has gained).

Geer [property] is easier gotten, than guided.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 115. (1721)

See also GETTING AND KEEPING.

It's no use filling your pocket full of money if you've got a hole in the corner.

GEORGE ELIOT, Adam Bede. Ch. 9. (1859)

To spend money is easy; to make it difficult.

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2019. (1875)

Money is like the reputation for ability—more easily made than kept.

SAMUEL BUTLER, The Way of All Flesh. Ch. 19. (a. 1902)

7

The ways by which you may get money almost without exception lead downward.

H. D. THOREAU, Life Without Principle. (1854)

8

Where wealth is, there lightlie follows more.

GEORGE TURBERVILLE, Tragical Tales, p. 22. (1587)

Foul-cankering rust the hidden treasure frets, Gold that's put to use more gold begets.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 767. (1593)

They say . . . that it is against Nature for money to beget money.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Usury. (1625)

One bit draws down another.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 148. (1639)

Money, which lying long in the bank, comes home at last with a duck in its mouth.

RICHARD CAPEL, Epigram. (a. 1656) See SPURGEON, The Treasury of David: Psalms, ix, 18. Money's beget moneys.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 64. (1666)

Wealth goes to wealth.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 239.

Money begets money.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 116. (1678)

'Tis a vain thing to say, Money begets not Money; for that no doubt it does.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Usury. (1689)

Remember that money is of a prolific generating nature. Money can beget money, and its offspring can beget more.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Letters: To My Friend, A. B. (1748)

Money, says the proverb, makes money.

ADAM SMITH, The Wealth of Nations. Bk. i, ch. 9. (1776)

Money breeds money.

MARRYAT, The Poacher. Ch. 37. (1841)

We have got to recollect that money makes money, as well as makes everything else.

DICKENS, Our Mutual Friend. Bk. iii, ch. 5. (1865)

Money gets money. If you have but much, you must, in spite of yourself, have more.

BESANT AND RICE, Ready-Money Mortiboy. Ch. 2. (1872)

Money draws money, the proverb says.

MRS. OLIPHANT, The Greatest Heiress in Eng- land. Ch. 2. (1880) A proverb in many languages. The Italians say, "Danari fanno danari," or, "Il danaro è fratello del danaro" (Money is brother to money); the French, "Le bien cherche le bien," or, "L'argent ne se perd qu'à faute d'argent" (Money is only lost through want of money). There are two Spanish forms, "Dinero llama dinero," and "Cobre gana cobre, que no huesos de hombre" (Money gains money, and men's bones).

<sup>1</sup> He was 'making money like hay.'

WILSON, Tales of the Borders, i, 17. (1835)

Makin' money like dirt.

JOAQUIN MILLER, The Danites. Act i. (1877)

There is an old jingle of unknown authorship, "God made bees, and bees made honey; God made man, and man made money."

III—Money Makes the Man

<sup>2</sup> Money makes the man. (χρήματ' ἀνὴρ.)

ARISTODEMUS, Apothegm. (c. 730 B.C.) As quoted by ALCAEUS, Fragments. Frag. 149 Bergk. See EDMONDS, Lyra Graeca, i, 374; DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Thales, i, 31. The Latin form of the proverb is, "Divitiae virum faciunt." The Greek form illustrates the large group of classical proverbs in which the verb is lacking.

In those days, the Muse was not yet fond of gain, no, nor yet a hireling; nor did sweet warbling songs pass for sale, with their silvered faces, from out the hands of honey-voiced Terpsichore. But now doth she bid us heed the Argive's word that cometh nearest to the very truth. "Money, money maketh man," quoth he, when reft of wealth and friends alike. (χρήματα, χρήματ' ἀνὴρ.)

PINDAR, Isthmian Odes. Ode ii, l. 18. (472 B.C.)

The Argive was Aristodemus.

Money maketh the man.

THOMAS BECON, Early Works (Parker Soc.), p. 222. (1542) A proverb in many languages. The Germans say, "Geld ist der Mann"; the Italians, "Chi ha, è; chi ha non, non è" (Who has is, who has not is not); the French, "Les Affaires font les hommes" (Business makes men), or "Celui est homme de bien qui est homme de biens" (He is a good man who is a man of goods).

That will make readie money, and money maketh a man.

WILLIAM BULLEIN, A Dialogue Against the Fever Pestilence (E.E.T.S.), p. 102. (1564)

Monie maketh a man.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 131. (1616)

We commonly say . . . in the Change; 'Money makes a man,' which puts him in a solvable condition.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England: Hants (1840), ii, 5. (1662)

God makes and apparel shapes; but money makes the man. Pecunia vir. χρήματ' ἀνὴρ. Tanti quantum habetas sit.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 177. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1680 (1732), improves on Ray, "God makes; and Apparel shapes; but it's Money that finishes the Man." See also under DRESS.

Let all the learn'd say what they can,

'Tis ready money makes the man;

Commands respect where'er we go,

And gives a grace to all we do.

WILLIAM SOMERVILLE, Ready Money. (1727)

Money most truly and fearfully 'makes the man.' A difference in income, as you go lower, makes more and more difference . . . in all which polishes a man.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, Alton Locke. Ch. 2. (1850)

<sup>3</sup> Money purifies all baseness.

Babylonian Talmud: Kiddushin, fo. 71a. (c. 450)

Money hides many offenses. (Yu ch'ien kai pai ch'ou.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2663. (1875)

Money hides a thousand deformities.

H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs. No. 467. (1937) "Money will open a blind man's eyes and make a priest sell his prayer-books."

<sup>4</sup> Whosoever hath money may go where he list.

THOMAS BECON, Early Works (Parker Soc.), p. 223. (1542)

They say, if money go before, all ways do lie open. SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, ii, 2, 177. (1601)

Money makes all gates to fly open.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 163. (1666)

Eat boild or roast, or drink good Wine or Beer, But Money recommends you every where.

UNKNOWN, Poor Robin's Almanack. (1731)

Money makes a man free ilka where.

ALLAN RAMSAY, Proverbs. (1737)

"L'argento è un buon passepartout," money is a good passport, and "Quien dinero tiene, haze lo que quiere," he who has money, has whatever he pleases: and "Money," we say, "is welcome everywhere."

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. ii, p. 71. (1814)

<sup>5</sup> Money makes friends enemies.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Crossing of Proverbs, p. 6. (1616)

Money makes not so many true Friends as real Enemies.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3446. (1732)

<sup>6</sup> Money, th' only power

That all mankind falls down before.

BUTLER, Hudibras, iii, ii, 1327. (1664)

Money is the God of the World.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3440. (1732)

Yes! ready money is Aladdin's lamp.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xii, st. 12. (1822)

They say that knowledge is power. I used to think so, but I now know they meant money. . . . Every guinea is a philosopher's stone. . . . Cash is virtue.

LORD BYRON, Letter to Douglas Kinnaird, 6 Feb., 1822.

<sup>7</sup> My money doth make me full merry to be.

THOMAS DELONEY, Jack of Newbury, ii. (1597)

Money makes a man laugh.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Money. (a. 1654)
The Germans say, "Geld im Beutel vertreibt die Schwermuth" (Money in the purse drives away melancholy). The shorter English form is, "Money cures melancholy."

Money, which represents the prose of life, and which is hardly spoken of in parlors without an apology, is, in its effects and laws, as beautiful as roses.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Nominatist and Realist. (1844)

Money, as they say, is miraculous.

CARLYLE, Past and Present. Ch. 3. (1843)

How pleasant it is to have money.

A. H. CLOUGH, Dipsychus. Pt. ii. (1849)

I'm tired of Love; I'm still more tired of Rhyme;
But Money gives me pleasure all the time.

HILAIRE BELLOC, Fatigued. (c. 1930)

1 Money is a defense. (Protegit pecunia.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, vii, 12. (c. 250 B. C.)

Money answereth all things. (Pecuniae obediunt omnia.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, x, 19.

Money answers all things.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, tr., Quevedo's Visions, p. 38. (1667) WARD, The London Spy, p. 400.

(1700) As Voltaire remarked, "When it is a question of money, everybody is of the same religion."

2 Against the talking power of money eloquence is of no avail. (Auro loquente, nihil pollet quaevis oratio.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, iii, 16. (1523)

The tongue hath no force when golde speaketh.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, fo. 88. (1586) Pettie, tr.

Man prates, but gold speaks.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 179. (1666)

Money speaks sense in a language all nations understand.

APHRA BEHN, The Rover. Pt. ii, act iii, sc. 1. (1677)

Money will say more in one moment than the most eloquent lover can in years.

HENRY FIELDING, The Miser. Act iii. (1733)

Nothing is more eloquent than ready money. (Il n'y a rien plus éloquent que l'argent comptant.)

LEROUX, Dictionnaire Comique, i, 431. (1786)

Money talks.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), The Tale of a Tainted Tenner. (1907) WODEHOUSE, Something Fresh. Ch. 3. (1915) etc., etc.

When money talks it often merely says "Good-by."

UNKNOWN, Poor Richard Jr's Almanack, p. 17. (1906)

3 He that is of the opinion Money will do every Thing may well be suspected of doing every Thing for Money.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1753.

When a man says money can do anything, that settles it: he hasn't any.

E. W. HOWE, Sinner Sermons. (1923)

4 Be the Business never so painful, you may have it done for Money.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 857. (1732)
Money is a Word that can cut the Gordian Knot. Money is the best Bait to fish for Men with.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. Nos. 3437-39.

5 Money is the only Monarch.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3441. (1732)
Money governs the world.

BERTHELSON, Eng.-Danish Dictionary: Money.

(1754) The Germans have the same proverb, "Geld regiert die Welt."

Money is the most important thing in the world.

BERNARD SHAW, Major Barbara: Preface. (1905)

6 But briefe to bee, what can you craue,
That now for gold you may not have?

THOMAS HOWELL, Deuises (1906), p. 54. (1581)

That "every thing may be had for money," is no less ancient than true.

FRANCIS GROSE, ed., The Antiquarian Repository, ii, 395. (1775)

Ready money will buy any thing in stock. (Hsien ch'ien mai hsien 'huo.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 199.

(1875) The Germans say, "Geld ist heutzutage Alles feil" (Money buys everything nowadays).

Certainly there are lots of things in life that money won't buy, but it's very funny—

Have you ever tried to buy them without money?

OGDEN NASH, The Terrible People. (1933)

7 Moyer [interest] does mickle, but money does more.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 243. (1721)

8 'Tis that [money] which makes the pot boy (as the proverb says).

L'ESTRANGE, tr., Aesop's Fables, p. 305. (1692)

Money will make the Pot boil, tho' the Devil [spit] in the Fire.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3449. (1732)

9 Money is power—power for bread, and power for tinsel.

T. T. LYNCH, Self-Improvement Ch. 5. (1853)

10 The picklock that never fails.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Unnaturall Combat

Act i, sc. 1. (c. 1619) Referring to money

11 Whoever has money, sails in a fair wind. (Quisquis habet nummos, secunda navigat aura.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 137. (c. A. D. 60)

Wish for what you please, with money about you, and it will come. (Quod vis, nummis praesentibus opta, et veniet.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 137.

12 What disease is so desperate which money may not medicine? what wound so deadly which coin can not cure?

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 90. (1576)

Pecunia praesens, medicamen est praesentaneum:
Redie money, redie medicine.

JOHN CONYBEARE, Adagia. (c. 1580) In John Conybeare (1905), p. 46.

Ready money is a ready medicine.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Argent. (1611)
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1036. (1640)

Money carries medicine to the stomach and the chest. (Argent porte médecine A l'estomac et poitrine.)

GABRIEL MEURIER, Trésor des Sentences. (1617)
The modern form is, "Argent comptant porte médecine" (Ready money brings medicine),
"Cash cures all diseases."

Like Heav'n, it hears the orphans' cries,
And wipes the tears from widows' eyes.

JOHN GAY, Fables. Ser. i, fab. 6. (1727)

Money is sweet balm; it heals all wounds.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 272. (1817)

1
Ye immortal gods, doesn't money count! (Di immortales, obsecro, aurum quid valet.)

PLAUTUS, Aulularia, l. 266. (c. 210 B.C.)

That's what money does. (Argentum hoc facit.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus, l. 857. (c. 194 B.C.)

Lord, lord, To see what money can do!

JOHN WEBSTER, The Devil's Law-Case. Act iv, sc. 1. (1623)

Money will do anything.

THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 131. (1633)

What cannot gold do?

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 221. (1639)

It is pretty to see what money will do.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 21 March, 1667.

What will not money do?

WILLIAM ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis, 892. (1681)

What is not to be done with money.

MATEO ALEMAN, Guzman de Alfarache, i, 13. (tr. 1708)

2
Money is the ruling principle of all things. (Pecunia una regimen est rerum omnium.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 506. (c. 43 B.C.)

All things—worth, repute, honour, things divine and human—are slaves to the beauty of money, and he who has made his 'pile' will be famous, brave, and just. (Omnis enim res, | virtus, fama, decus, divina humanaque pulchris | divitiis parent; quas qui construxerit ille | clarus erit, fortis, iustus.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 3, l. 94. (35 B.C.)
Salomon seith: that "alle thinges obeyen to moneye."

CHAUCER, Tale of Melibeus, Sec. 49. (c. 1387)

All things obey money. (Pecuniae obediunt omnia.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. iii, No. 87. (1523) Usually rendered, "Money masters all things." Erasmus devotes an entire page to citations of variations of this proverb from the works of various writers. Horace's reference is to "Regina pecunia" (Queen Money). Included by TAVERNER, Translations from Erasmus, fo. 15 (1550), with the rendering, "Unto money be all thynges obeyent."

Money ruleth al things. (Il danaro ogni cosa.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 18. (1578)

The Spanish form is, "Todas las cosas obedecen a la pecunia" (All things are obedient to money); the Portuguese, "Dinheiro he a medida de todas as cousas" (Money is the measure of all things).

The old saying, that money does all things, is not much wide of the truth.

L'ESTRANGE, tr., Aesop's Fables, p. 359. (1692)

3
Money is that art which hath turned up trump.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 14. (1678)

Money is the Ace of Trumps.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3438. (1732)

4
Money makes the mare to goe.

JAMES SANFORD, tr., Hours of Recreation, p. 213. (1572) DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 62.

(1709) FOOTE, The Author. Act i. (1757)

TYLER, The Contrast. Act i. (1787) MALKIN, tr., Gil Blas. Bk. i, ch. 8. (1809) PURDON,

Folk of Furry Farm. Ch. 3. (1914) etc., etc.

Money makes the horses runne. (I denari fanno correre i cavalli.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 30. (1578) The Spanish form is, "Por dinaro bayla el perro" (The dog dances for money).

Money . . . makes . . . the olde mare trot, and the young tit amble.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Works, ii, L7. (1605)

Money makes the old wife trot.

UNKNOWN, Merry Drollery, p. 117. (1691)

FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 3433 (1732), expands this to, "Money, as well as Need, makes the old Wife trot." See under NEED.

Money makes the old wife trot, and makes the mare to go.

UNKNOWN, Money Masters All Things. (1698)

5
With money one may command devils; without it, one cannot even summon a man. (Yu ch'ien shih tê kuei tung; wu ch'ien 'huan pu tê jên lai.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2687. (1875)

6
Of evils current upon earth, the worst is money. It is money that sacks cities, and drives men forth from hearth and home; warps and seduces native innocence, and breeds a habit of dishonesty. (οὐδὲν γὰρ ἀνθρώποισιν οἷον ἀργύρος | κακὸν νόμισμα ἔβλαστε.)

SOPHOCLES, Antigone, l. 295. (c. 441 B.C.)

There is no fortress so strong that money cannot take it. (Nihil tam munitum, quod non expugnari pecunia possit.)

CICERO, In Verrem. No. i, sec. 2. (70 B.C.)

7
Money makes mastery.

UNKNOWN, Liberalitie and Prodigalitie. Act i, sc. 5. (1602)

This masters money, though money masters all things.

UNKNOWN, The Loyal Garland, p. 42. (1686)

IV—Money: Use It or Lose It

1 I never saw them put their money to any use except to count it. (πρὸς οὐδὲν ἕτερον ἢ τὸ ἀριθμεῖν χρημένους ὄραν.)

ANACHARSIS, of the Greeks. (c. 600 B.C.) As quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 78F.

There was one that found a great mass of money digging under ground in his grandfather's house: and being somewhat doubtful of the case, signified it to the emperor that he had found such treasure. The emperor made a rescript thus: "Use it." He writ back again that the sum was greater than his estate or condition could use. The emperor writ a new rescript thus: "Abuse it."

FRANCIS BACON, Apophthegms. No. 177. (1625)

2 Couetous vsurers . . . like vnto greate stinking mucke medin hilles, whiche neuer doe pleasure vnto the Lande . . . vntill their heapes are caste abroad to the profite of many.

WILLIAM BULLEIN, A Dialogue Against the Feuer Pestilence, p. 9. (1564)

I have lived

Like an unsavoury muck-hill to myself,
Yet now my gathered heaps being spread abroad,
Shall turn to better and more fruitful uses.

BEN JONSON, Every Man Out of His Humour. Act iii, sc. 8. (1599)

Money is like muck, not good except it be spread.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Seditions and Troubles. (1612)

Mr. Bettenham . . . used to say, that riches were like muck; when it lay in a heap it gave but a stench . . . ; but when it was spread upon the ground, then it was cause of much fruit.

FRANCIS BACON, Apophthegms. No. 252. (1625)

Riches like muck which stinks in a heap, but spread abroad, maketh the earth fruitful.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 19. (1659)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 22. (1670)

Money, like Dung, does no Good till 'tis spread.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3444. (1732)

3 Money is like an arm or a leg—use it or lose it.

HENRY FORD, Interview, N. Y. Times, 8 Nov., 1931.

4 Why is fortune mine, if I may not use it? (Quo mihi fortunam, si non conceditur uti?)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 5. l. 12. (20 B.C.)

Surely use alone

Makes money not a contemptible stone.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 26. (a. 1633)

5 The use of money is all the advantage there is in having money.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1737.

Money isn't worth a thing except to use in buying something.

E. S. GARDNER, The Case of the Drowsy Mosquito, p. 14. (1943)

6 It is better that money should be moving.

WILLIAM DE MARCH, Lord Treasurer to Edward I, when he seized the wealth laid up in the monasteries. (c. 1270) See CAMDEN, Remains, p. 284.

7 Blest is the man who has both money and sense,

For he employs the money well for what he should.

(μακάριος ὁστις οὐσίαν καὶ νοῦν ἔχει· χρήται γὰρ οὗτος εἰς ἃ δεῖ ταύτη καλῶς.)

MENANDER, The Bridal Manager, 114K. (c. 300 B.C.) The first line quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 34C.

In investing money the amount of interest you want should depend on whether you want to eat well or sleep well.

J. K. MORLEY, Some Things I Believe. (1937)

8 Why do you need money, if you can not use it? (Quid tibi pecunia opus est, si uti non potes?)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 618. (c. 43 B.C.)

9 It is not a custom with me to keep money to look at.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Letter to J. P. Custis, Jan., 1780.

MONK

10 Just as a fish without water is without life, so is a monk without a monastery. (Sicut pisces sine aqua caret vita, ita sine monasterio monachus.)

SAINT ATHANASIUS. (c. A.D. 370) The attribution is in a Greek Life of Saint Anthony. The saying has also been attributed to POPE EUGENIUS. See SOZOMAN, Ecclesiastical History, bk. i, ch. 13; SKEAT, Early English Proverbs, p. 89.

Thei weren out of ther cloistre as fishis withouten water.

JOHN WYCLIF, Gospel Sermons. (c. 1380) Works (Arnold), ii, 15.

A monk, whan he is cloisterles,

Is lykned til a fish that is waterles.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 179 (c. 1386)

A monk in the cloister is not worth two eggs, but when outside he is well worth thirty. (Monachus in clauastro non valet oua dua, sed quando est extra, bien valet triginta.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 42. (1534)

11 What the ant collects in the course of a whole year, the monk eats up in one night.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 80. (1817)

12 Despair makes the monk. (Desperatio facit monachum.)

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. 4, mem. 2, subs. 3. (1721) Quoted.

<sup>1</sup> He that cannot do better must be a monk.
JAMES DOUGLAS, NINTH EARL OF DOUGLAS, on being condemned to spending his last years in the abbey of Lindores. (1484) See SCOTT, Tales of a Grandfather. Ch. 21.

<sup>2</sup> Obseruant Friers spare theyr owne, and eate that which is other mens. (Fratī osseruanti sparagnano il suo, e mangiono quel d'altrui.)
JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 30. (1578)

<sup>3</sup> It was the friar of orders grey,
As he forth walked on his way.
SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, iv, 1, 148. (1594) A scrap of an old ballad, whose fragments were afterwards put together under the title, The Friar of Orders Gray, by BISHOP THOMAS PERCY, Reliques of Ancient English Poetry. Ser. i, bk. ii, No. 18. (1765) It begins:

It was a friar of orders gray
Walkt forth to tell his beades.
What baron or squire or knight of the shire
Lives half so well as a holy friar?
JOHN O'KEEFFE, The Friar of Orders Grey. (c. 1790)

<sup>4</sup> It is a common proverb to this day, to give a man the monk, when they would express the doing unto one a mischief. (Encores est le prouerbe en vsaige, de bailler le moyne à quelcun.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 45. (1534)
It was grown to a common proverb, A friar, a liar.

JOHN TRAPP, Commentary, 1 Timothy, iv, 2. (1647)

<sup>5</sup> The monastery faces the nunnery; there's nothing in it—and yet perhaps there is. (Nan sêng ssû tui cho nû sêng ssû; mu shih yeh yu shih.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2383. (1875)

<sup>6</sup> Dress and tonsure profit little; but change of heart and perfect mortification of the passions make a true monk. (Habitus et tonsura modicum confert, sed mutatio morum, et integra mortificatio passionum verum faciunt religiosum.)

THOMAS A KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Bk. i, ch. 17. (c. 1420)
Cucullus non facit monachum. (The hood makes not the monk.)

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, i, 5, 62. (1599)
See under APPEARANCE.

<sup>7</sup> A vagrant Monk ne'er spoke well of his Convent.

GIOVANNI TORRIANO, Piazza Unversale, p. 156. (1666)

A runaway monk never praises his convent.
H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 299. (1855)

MONKEY, see Ape

MONUMENT

See also Tomb

<sup>8</sup> I would much rather have men ask why I have no statue than why I have one. (μᾶλλον γὰρ βούλομαι ζητῆσθαι, διὰ τί μου ἀνδρίας οὐ κεῖται ἢ διὰ τί κεῖται.)

MARCUS CATO, when some one expressed amazement that many men of no fame had statues, while Cato had none. (c. 160 B.C.) See PLUTARCH, Lives: Marcus Cato. Ch. 19, sec. 4. The erection of a monument is superfluous; our memory will endure if our lives have deserved it. (Impensa monumenti supervacua est; memoria nostri durabit, si vita meruimus.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. ix, epis. 19, sec. 3. (A.D. 98)

Those only deserve a monument who do not need one.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 388. (1823)

No man who needs a monument ever ought to have one.

HAWTHORNE, English Note-Books: 12 Nov., 1857, Westminster Abbey.

<sup>9</sup> I fly from lip to lip, living in the mouths of men. (Volito vivus per ora virum.)

ENNIUS, Epitaph. (169 B.C.) See CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. i, ch. 15. sec. 34.

I have reared a monument more enduring than bronze and loftier than the royal pyramids. (Exegi monumentum aere perennius | regalique situ pyramidum altius.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 30, l. 1. (23 B.C.)
The most lasting Monuments are doubtless the Paper-Monuments.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4673. (1732)

<sup>10</sup> The monuments of noble men are their virtues. (γενναίων δ' ἀρεταὶ πόνων | τοῖς θανοῦσιν ἀγαλμα.)

EURIPIDES, The Madness of Hercules, l. 357. (c. 420 B.C.)

<sup>11</sup> To this man a statue of gold should be set up. (Huic decet statuam statui ex auro.)

PLAUTUS, Bacchides, l. 640. (c. 190 B.C.)

I will raise her statue in pure gold.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, v, 3, 299 (1595)

<sup>12</sup> In that dim monument where Tybalt lies.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, iii, 5, 203. (1595)

<sup>13</sup> If you would see his monument, look around. (Si monumentum requiris circumspecte.)

CHRISTOPHER WREN, Epitaph, for his father, Sir Christopher Wren, inscribed on the latter's tomb in St. Paul's cathedral, London. (1723) Horace Smith remarked that the line would be equally applicable to a physician buried in a graveyard.

MOON

<sup>1</sup> The eye of night. (νυκτὸς ὀφθαλμός.)
AESCHYLUS, Seven Against Thebes, l. 390. (467 B. C.)

<sup>2</sup> The Harvest-moon is also used to denote the month in which harvest is usually collected.

JOHN BRADY, Clavis Calendaria, i, 55. (1812)
An October moon is called the "hunter's moon."
MICHAEL DENHAM, Proverbs, p. 58. (1846)

The broad bright hunter's moon.
KINGSLEY, Westward Hol Ch. 5. (1855)

<sup>3</sup> Doth the moon care for the barking of a dog?
ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. ii, sec. iii, mem. 7. (1621) A rendering of the Latin proverb, "Latrantem curatne alta Diana canem?" (Does the lofty Diana care about the dog barking at her?)

We should in that but bark against the moon
HEYWOOD AND ROWLEY, Fortune by Land and Sea. Act i, sc. 1. (1655)

Believers resemble the moon, which emerges from her eclipse by keeping her motion; and ceases not to shine because the dogs bark at her.

SECKER, The Nonesuch Professor. Ch. 2. (1660)
To keep the moon safe from the wolves (Garder la lune des loups.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. ii. (1534) The French also say, "Dieu garde le lune des loups" (God guards the moon from the wolves)

But thou, as blynde Bayarde, berkest at the mone.
WRIGHT, ed., Political Poems, ii, 53. (1401)

They playe as the dogge doeth yt barketh at the moon all nyght.

ROBERT WHITINTON, Vulgaria, p. 72. (1520)
This dogge barketh agaynste the moone.

JEHAN PALSGRAVE, Dictionary, p. 443. (1530)
Eager Wolues bark at ye Moone, though they cannot reach it.

JOHN LYLX, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 386. (1580)

The moon does not heed the barking of dogs.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 208. (1678)

<sup>4</sup> If the moon be with thee, what needest thou care about the stars?

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 4. (1817)
Though the night was made for loving,
And the day returns too soon,
Yet we'll go no more a-roving
By the light of the moon.

BYRON, We'll Go No More A-Roving. (c.1815)

<sup>5</sup> To wexe and wane, . . . as dooth the faire whyte moon.

CHAUCER, The Hous of Fame. Bk. iii, l. 1026. (c. 1384)

The silver moon.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, iv, 3, 30. (1595)

Pale ports o' the moon.

FRANCIS THOMPSON, The Hound of Heaven, l. 29. (1897)

<sup>6</sup> Quod Pandarus, "thou hast a ful gret care Lest that the cherl may falle out of the mone!"

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. i, l. 1023. (c. 1380) The old fable was that a man who desecrated the Sabbath by burning brush was banished to the moon, and the spots on the moon's face were supposed to represent the man committing the irreligious act.

We have, however, an old, very old proverb . . . to wit: "Have a care lest the churl fall out of the moon."

MICHAEL DENHAM, ed., The Denham Tracts, ii, 57. (c. 1850)

A man which stale [stole] sumtyme a birthan of thornis war sett in the moone there forto abide for eueere.

REGINALD PECOCK, The Repressor of Over Much Blaming of the Clergy. Bk. ii, ch. 4. (c. 1449)

As farre from her thought as the man that the rude people saie is in the moone.

EDWARD HALL, Chronicle of Richard III, p. 37. (a. 1548)

Yet still she is the moon, and I the man.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, v, 2, 215 (1595)

The Woman in the Moon.

JOHN LYLX. Title of play. (1596) Then someone discovered that the spots on the moon really seemed to represent a woman, with long hair flowing back over her shoulders Myself the man i' the moon do seem to be.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream Act v, l. 249. (1596)

He'd no more right to our money than the man in the moon.

FANNY BURNEY, Evelina. Bk. i, p. 202. (1778)
My Sweetheart's the Man in the Moon.

JAMES THORNTON. Title of popular song. (1892)

<sup>7</sup> And hail their queen, fair regent of the night.
ERASMUS DARWIN, The Botanic Garden. Pt. i. canto ii, l. 90. (1791)

Now Cynthia, nam'd, fair regent of the Night.

JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. iii, l. 4. (1716)

The moon (sweet regent of the sky).

W. J. MICKLE, Cumnor Hall. (a. 1788)

<sup>8</sup> A new moon soon seen is long thought of.

MICHAEL DENHAM, Proverbs, p. 2. (1846)

An old moon in a mist is worth gold in a kist,
But a new moon's mist will never lack thirst

DYER, English Folk-Lore, p. 41. (1878)

<sup>9</sup> He was a mere child in the world, but he didn't cry for the moon.

DICKENS, Bleak House. Ch. 6. (1852) To cry for something impossible to get.

I might as well wish for the moon.

THACKERAY, Lovell the Widower. Ch. 5. (1860)

<sup>10</sup> Where the Sunne shineth, the Moone hath nought to doe.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 128. (1616)

The moon's not seen where the sun shines.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 178. (1678)

<sup>1</sup> They would make men believe . . . that the moon is made of green cheese.

JOHN FRITH, A Pistle to the Christen Reader. Works (1573), p. 105/1. (1529)

With this pleasaunt mery toye, he . . . made his frendes beleue the moone to be made of a grene chese.

NICOLAS UDALL, tr., Erasmus' Apophthegms (1877), p. 193. (1542)

Ye set circumquakues [circumlocutions] to make me beleue

Or thinke, that the moone is made of a greene cheese.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

They make them beleue, according to the Proverbe, that gloe wormes are lanternes, and that the Moone is made of a greene Cheese.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 76. (1574) Pettie, tr.

He wald gar a man trow that the moon is made of green cheis, or that the cat took the heron [herring].

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 48. (c. 1595) Of false persons.

(Wee say of such an Idiot) hee thinkes the Moone is made of greene cheese.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Arain. (1611)

Writing a great book, . . . in which he proved that the moon was made of green cheese.

KINGSLEY, The Water Babies. Ch. 4. (1863)

The saying, "The moon is made of green cheese," refers not to cheese that is green with age, but cheese that is green in the sense of not matured, since the moon, being new every month, never gets beyond the unripe stage.

F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 267. (1902)

<sup>2</sup> He needs to stand on tiptoes that hopes to touch the moon.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: Of Expecting Preferment. (1642)

He opens his hand to grasp the moon in heaven; He plunges into the sea to seize leviathan.

(Shu shou chiu cho t'ien shang yüh; ju shui neng ch'in 'hai chung ao.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 130. (1875)

<sup>3</sup> The Moon is a Moon still, whether it shine or not.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4654. (1732)

<sup>4</sup> A Saturday's Moon,
If it comes once in seven Years, it comes too soon.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6491. (1732)

A Saturday's moon,
Come when it will, it comes too soon.

MICHAEL DENHAM, Proverbs, p. 9. (1846)
Sometimes given as "Friday's moon."

A Saturday or a Sunday moon,
Comes once in seven years too soon.

Notes and Queries, iii, v, 209. (1864)

We have a local antipathy to a Saturday new and a Sunday full moon. . . . Saturday's new and Sunday's full, Was never fine, nor never wool [will].

EDWARD MOOR, Suffolk Words, p. 494. (1823)

On Saturday new, on Sunday full,
Was never good and never wool.

ROBERT FORBY, The Vocabulary of East Anglia, p. 417. (1830)

A Saturday's change brings the boat to the door;
But a Sunday's change brings it upon t' mid floor.

MICHAEL DENHAM, Proverbs, p. 18. (1846)

A Saturday's moon and a Sunday's prime
Never brought good in any man's time.

WILLIAM HENDERSON, Notes on the Folk Lore of the Northern Counties, p. 114. (1879)

<sup>5</sup> Feare may force a man to cast beyonde the moone.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 4. (1546)

To indulge in wild conjectures, or extravagant ambitions.

In loue I cast beyond the moone.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 78. (1579)

I will not cast beyonde the moone, for that in all things I know there must be a meane.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 389

But, oh! I talk of things impossible,
And cast beyond the moon.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, A Woman Killed With Kindness. Act iv, sc. 5. (1607)

<sup>6</sup> When the new moon lies on her back,
She sucks the wet into her lap.

RICHARD INWARDS, Weather Lore, p. 82. (1893)

There are scores of other weather proverbs about the moon, most of them of only local interest. See INWARDS.

<sup>7</sup> The sky-full of stars depends on the one Moon.

ARTHUR E. MOULE, Proverbs from Ningpo. (DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 327 1872)

<sup>8</sup> Ere hee bee come to the full Midsommer Moone, and raging Calentura of his wretchedness.

THOMAS NASHE, Have With You to Safron-Walden. Works (Grosart), iii, 55. (1596)

Why, this is very midsummer madness.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, iii, 4, 62. (1599)

'Tis Midsummer moon with you, i.e. you are mad.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 214. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2974. (1732)

What's this Midsummer-Moon? Is all the World gone a madding?

DRYDEN, Amphitryon. Act iv. (1691)

<sup>9</sup> Yf they saye the mone is blewe,
We must beleve that it is true.

ROY AND BARLOW, Rede Me and Be Not Wrothe (Arber), p. 114. (1528)

She would have trickes (once in a moone) to put the diuell out of his wits.

DEKKER, A Knight's Conjuring, p. 25. (1607)

That indefinite period known as a "blue moon."

EDMUND YATES, Wrecked in Port. Ch. 22. (1869)

A fruit pasty once in a blue moon.

MISS BRADDON, Joshua Haggard's Daughter. Ch. 24. (1876)

<sup>1</sup> The moon may be saved with a broken drum.
(P'o p'o ku chiu chiu yüeh.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2003. (1875)

<sup>2</sup> Under an inconstant moon. (Per incertam lunam.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. vi, l. 270. (19 B.C.)

O, swear not by the moon, the inconstant moon.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, ii, 2, 109. (1595)

MOONSHINE

<sup>3</sup> Our dissensions are about Moone-shine.

BISHOP WILLIAM BEDELL, Letters, ii, 49. (1624)

About nothing.

Their . . . delectable morsels will melt into moonshines.

RICHARD FRANCK, Northern Memoirs, p. 33. (1658)

I found the whole affair . . . a matter of moonshine.

BASIL HALL, Patchwork. Bk. ii, ch. 8. (1841)

<sup>4</sup> Moone-shine i' th' mustard pot.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 68. (1639)

Thou shalt have moonshine i' th' mustard-pot for it, i.e. nothing.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 76. (1678)

<sup>5</sup> The Moone shine i' th' water-pot.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 154. (1639)

"To run about moonshine in a can," to be employed in no useful purpose.

WILLIAM CARR, The Dialect of Craven, i, 329. (1828)

<sup>6</sup> The white brandy smuggled on the coasts of Kent and Sussex called Moonshine.

FRANCIS GROSE, Dictionary of the Vulgar Tongue. (1785)

Moon-light, moon-shine, smuggled whiskey.

J. T. BROCKETT, A Glossary of North Country Words. (1829)

<sup>7</sup> For moone shyne in the water. Pour une chose de riens. [For nothing.]

PALSGRAVE, La Langue Françoyse, 865. (1530)

Farewell (quoth I), i will as soone be hylt
As waite againe for the mooneshine in the water.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

O vain petitioner! beg a greater matter;
Thou now request'st but moonshine in the water.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, v, 2, 209. (1595)

I care little about that nonsense—it's a' moonshine in water—waste threads and thrums, as we say.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 26. (1817)

He will not break his heart for any moon in the water.

T. L. PEACOCK, Gryll Grange. Ch. 4. (1861)

<sup>8</sup> To give one a mouthful of moonshine.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 208. (1678)

A matter or mouthful of moonshine, a trifle, nothing.

GROSE, Dictionary of the Vulgar Tongue. (1785)

MORALITY

See also Manners and Morals

<sup>9</sup> Swim with the tide, so as not to offend others.
CONFUCIUS, Analects. (c. 500 B.C.) As quoted by CHUANG-TSZE, Philosophy. Ch. 7.

Morality: walking like others upon the path.

CHUANG-TSZE, Philosophy. Ch. 10. (c. 400 B.C.)

Giles, tr. That is, going with the crowd.

In common parlance, 'moral,' 'honorable,' means merely that which is held in popular esteem. (Ut enim consuetudo loquitur, id solum dicitur honestum quod est popular fama gloriosum.)

CICERO, De Finibus. Bk. ii, ch. 15. (c. 45 B.C.)

Quoted by MONTAIGNE, ii, 16.

Modern morality consists in accepting the standards of one's age.

OSCAR WILDE, The Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 6. (1891)

You know what our newspaper is, bloody patriotic as long as it helps our circulation, all the dirt we can get, and a high moral tone.

SOMERSET MAUGHAM, Christmas Holiday.

(1939) ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: High, says the phrase "a high moral tone" has been a banality since the beginning of the century.

<sup>10</sup> There is no place in the highest heavens above nor in the deepest waters below where the moral law does not reign.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. (c. 500 B.C.) Ku Hung Ming, tr., p. 24.

Two things fill the mind with ever new and increasing admiration and awe, the oftener and the more steadily we reflect on them: the starry heavens above and the moral law within. (Der bestirnte Himmel über mir, und das moralische Gesetz in mir.)

IMMANUEL KANT, Kritik der Praktischen Vernunft: Beschluss, opening words. (1771) The translation is by T. K. ABBOTT, Kant's Theory of Ethics, p. 260.

<sup>11</sup> Whate'er the story be, the moral's true.

DRYDEN, University of Oxford: Prologue. (1673)

To point a moral, or adorn a tale.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Vanity of Human Wishes, l. 222. (1748)

There's a moral in everything.

DICKENS, Dombey and Son. Ch. 2. (1848)

"Tut, tut, Child!" said the Duchess. "Every thing's got a moral, if only you can find it."

LEWIS CARROLL (C. L. DODGSON), Alice's Adventures in Wonderland. Ch. 9. (1865)

<sup>12</sup> Morality is weakness of the brain. (La morale est la faiblesse de la cervelle.)

ARTHUR RIMBAUD, Une Saison en Enfer. Ch. 5. (1873)

Morality is simply the attitude we adopt towards people we personally dislike.

OSCAR WILDE, An Ideal Husband. Act ii. (1893)

<sup>13</sup> What is morality? Gentility.

SHAW, Man and Superman. Act iii. (1903)

You can draw a line and make other chaps toe it.
That's what I call morality.

SHAW, Misalliance, p. 33. (1910)

Moral indignation is jealousy with a halo.

H. G. WELLS, The Wife of Sir Isaac Harman.
Ch. ix, sec. 2. (1914)

1 There is no such thing as sliding up hill. In morals the only sliders are backsliders.

THOREAU, Slavery in Massachusetts. (1854)

MORNING

See also Dawn

2 No time for mirth, no time for laughter,
The cold gray dawn of the morning after.

GEORGE ADE, Remorse, from The Sultan of Sulu. (1902) See DRUNKENNESS: THE MORNING AFTER.

3 Aurora [morning] is a friend to the muses.
(Aurora Musis amica.)

ERASMUS, Letter, to Christian Northoff. (1497)
First printed in his Colloquia: De Natione Studii. (1518)

4 In the morning thou shalt say, Would God it were even! and at even thou shalt say, Would God it were morning!

Old Testament: Deuteronomy, xxviii, 67. (c.
650 B. C.)

The proverb, may Morn be born from her mother Night! (ἡ παροιμία, | ἕως γένοιτο μητρὸς εὐφρόνης πάρα.)

AESCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 264. (458 B. C.)

5 The breezy call of incense-breathing Morn.

THOMAS GRAY, *Elegy Written in a Country
Church-yard*, l. 17. (1750)

The fresh air of incense-breathing morn.

WORDSWORTH, Ecclesiastical Sonnets. Pt. iii,
No. 40. (1822)

On such an occasion as this,
All time and nonsense scorning,

Nothing shall come amiss,
And we won't go home till morning.

JOHN B. BUCKSTONE, Billy Taylor. Act i, sc. 2.
(c. 1840)

6 As the prouerbe is, That by the morning it may be gathered how all the day will proue after.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, fo. 142.
(1586) Pettie, tr.

Cloudy mornings may turn to clear evenings.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 80. (1678) Ray adds the line from Horace, "Non si male nunc, et olim | sic erit" (If things look badly today, they may look better tomorrow).

A foul Morn may turn to a fair Day.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 115. (1732)

A misty Morning may have a fine Day.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 327. (1732)

7 In the morning mountains, in the evening fountains.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 475. (1640)

The morn to the mountain, The evening to the fountain.

MICHAEL DENHAM, Proverbs, p. 13. (1846)

8 The evening praises the day, and the morning a frost.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 637. (1640)

9 The morning, look you, furthers a man on his road, and furthers him too in his work. (ὥς τοι προφέρει μὲν ὁδοῦ, προφέρει δὲ καὶ ἔργον.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 579. (c. 800 B. C.)

All the speed is in the morning.

ALICE HARVEY, as quoted by her son, GABRIEL
HARVEY, Commonplace Book. (c. 1600)

'The morning has gold in its mouth.' . . . The earlier hours given to toil will yield larger and more genial returns than the later.

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, Ch.

5. (1853) Trench is citing an old German proverb, "Morgenstund' hat Gold im Mund."

There are a number of earlier forms, "Die
Morgenstundt hat die Arbeyt im Mundt"
(The morning has industry in its mouth);
"Die Morgenstund' hat das Brod im Mundt"
(The morning has bread in its mouth).

"Morning has gold in its mouth" emerges after a century or more as the preferred form. Some commentators have thought that an etymological pun was involved: "Aurora quia habet aurum in ore," but this was probably invented long after the proverb had come into existence. The French say,
"Travail d'aurore amène l'or" (Work in the morning brings in the gold), or "Heure du matin, heure du gain."

The first hour of the morning is the rudder of the day.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Proverbs from Plymouth Pulpit p. 7. (1887)

10 'Tis always morning somewhere in the world.

R. H. HORNE, Orion. Bk. iii, can. 2. (1843)

'Tis always morning somewhere.

LONGFELLOW, The Birds of Killingworth. St.
16. (1863)

11 The morning sun has now smiled upon the roofs. (Matutinus sol tectis arrisit.)

PETRONIUS, Fragments. Frag. 5. (c. A. D. 60)

Day, peeping in the East, made the Sky turn from Black to Red, like a boiling lobster.

PETER MOTTEUX, tr., Rabelais. Bk. v, ch. 8.
(1703) An interpolation by Motteux. Rabelais has simply, "Au point du jour."

The sun had long since, in the lap
Of Thetis, taken out his nap,
And, like a lobster boil'd, the morn
From black to red began to turn.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto 2, l. 29. (1663)

12 Till the morn's morning [i. e. tomorrow morning].

WALTER SCOTT, The Antiquary. Ch. 11. (1816)

[He] will be here betimes the morn's morning.
JOHN GALT, Sir Andrew Wylie. Ch. 60. (1822)

MORON

- <sup>1</sup> You've got the booby prize. (Βλαχες τὸ Μ.)
ERASMUS, Adagia. (1523) Quoting an old Greek proverb. The Greek word for stupidity was μυρός, from which the Latin morio (an arrogant fool), and the English "moron." The play in the proverb is upon its first letter.
Coriantor was the son of Moron. And Moron was the son of Ethem.
Book of Mormon: Ether, i, 7-8. (1830)
I don't know what a moron is,
And I don't give a damn.
I'm thankful that I am not one—
My God! perhaps I am.
HENRY PRATT FAIRCHILD, The Great Economic Paradox. Harper's Magazine, May, 1932.

MORTALITY

- <sup>2</sup> Esteem not mortal things over much.
(γίνυνσκε τὰνθρῶπεια μὴ σέβειν ἄγαν.)
AESCHYLUS, Niobe. Frag. 80, Smyth. PLUTARCH, On Banishment, x, 603A.
- <sup>3</sup> Singly they are mortal; collectively they are immortal. (Singillatim mortales; cunctim perpetui.)
APULEIUS, De Deo Socratis. (c. A. D. 155)
- <sup>4</sup> An everlasting law is made,
That all things born shall fade.
(Constat aeterna positumque lege est
Ut constet genitum nihil.)
BOETHIUS, Philosophiae Consolationis. Bk. ii, ch. 3. (A. D. 524)
Who then to frail mortality shall trust,
But limns on water, or but writes in dust.
SIR FRANCIS BACON, The World. Sometimes wrongly attributed to Sir Henry Wotton.
- <sup>5</sup> Grasse and hay, we are all mortall.
RICHARD BRATHWAIT, Whimsies, p. 73. (1631)
Grass and hay, we are mortal, let's live till we die.
TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 277. (1666)
- <sup>6</sup> Vn-knowe perfittly to any mortal man.
CHAUCER, Astrolabe: Prologue. (c. 1391)
No mortall man might ascend the Seat.
SAMUEL PURCHAS, Pilgrimage, p. 355. (1613)
For what wears out the life of mortal men?
MATTHEW ARNOLD, The Scholar Gypsy. (1853)
- <sup>7</sup> Remember that thou art mortal. (μέμνησ' ὅτι θνητὸς ὑπάρχεις.)
PHOCYLIDES, Sententiae. No. 109. (c. 550 B. C.)
Each body is mortal. (Omne corpus mortale sit.)
CICERO, De Natura Deorum, iii, 12. (45 B. C.)
Your lot is mortal. (Sors tua mortalis.)
OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. ii, l. 56. (A. D. 7)
All that belongs to mortals is mortal. (θνητὰ τὰ τῶν θνητῶν.)
LUCIAN, Epigram. (c. A. D. 170) See Greek Anthology. Bk. x, epig. 31.
Well, we are all mortal.
SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing, i, 1, 59. (1598)

All men are mortal.

- THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 39. (1616)
A man is known to be mortal by two things,
Sleep and Lust.
HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1150. (1640)
We are all mortal, and each is for himself. (Nous sommes tous mortels, et chacun est pour soi.)
MOLIÈRE, L'École des Femmes. Act ii, sc. 5, l. 4. (1662) See also DEATH THE INEVITABLE.
- <sup>8</sup> Mortal aims befit mortal men. (θνατὰ θνατοῖσι πρέπει.)
PINDAR, Isthmian Odes. Ode v, l. 16. (c. 476 B. C.)
- <sup>9</sup> There's nothing serious in mortality.
SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, ii, 3, 98. (1606)

MOSES

- <sup>10</sup> Holie Moyses; whose ordinary counterfeit hauing on either side of the head an eminence, or lustre arising somewhat in the form of a horne, hath imbouldened a prophane Author to style Cuckolds, Parents de Moysse.
RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Moysse. (1611)
It should be noted that "Holy Moses!" is often used as an expletive.
A man is said to stand Moses when he has another man's bastard child fathered upon him.
FRANCIS GROSE, A Dictionary of the Vulgar Tongue: Moses. (1796)
- <sup>11</sup> And they met Moses and Aaron, who stood in the way, as they came forth from Pharaoh (Occurruntque Moysi et Aaron, qui stabant ex aduerso, egredientibus a Pharaone.)
Old Testament: Exodus, v, 20. (c. 550 B. C.)
This is the end of the story of the bricks without straw, and gave rise to the proverb. "Cum duplicantur lateres, venit Moses" (When the tale of bricks is doubled, Moses comes). That is, when the burden becomes too heavy to bear, a deliverer appears. Cited by TRENCH, Lessons in Proverbs. Ch. 3. The Germans say, "Wenn man dem Volk die Ziegel doppelt, so kommt Moses." HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 69, cites a number of similar English proverbs: "When things are at their worst they sometimes mend"; "When misery is highest, help is nighest," etc. DARKEST BEFORE DAWN, see under DAWN.
- Whilst you are fighting (said Panurge) I will pray God for your victory, after the example of the chivalrous Captain Moses, leader of the people of Israel. (Pendant que combaterez, je prieray Dieu pour vostre victoire, à l'exemple du cheualereux capitaine Moses, conducteur du peuple israëlique.)
RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 37. (1548)
- <sup>12</sup> Now the man Moses was very meek, above all the men which were upon the face of the earth. (Erat enim Moyses vir mitissimus super omnes homines qui morabantur in terra.)
Old Testament: Numbers, xii, 3. (c. 550 B. C.)

Moses, the meekest man that was in his time upon the earth. (Moÿse, le plus doux homme qui de son temps feust sus la terre.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 50. (1534)

The meekness of Moses is better than the strength of Samson.

D. E. MARVIN, Curiosities in Proverbs, p. 140. (1916) MEEK AS MOSES, see under MEEKNESS.

<sup>1</sup> Where was Moses when the candle went out?

MARK TWAIN, Huckleberry Finn. Ch.17.(1884)

A popular joke of the day. The answer was, "In the dark." This was supposed to be very funny.

Where was Moses when the light went out?

Where was Moses? What was he about?

Now, my little man,

Tell me if you can,

Where was Moses when the light went out?

JOHN STAMFORD, Where Was Moses When the Light Went Out? (c. 1885)

MOTH

<sup>2</sup> The fate of the moth in the flame. (πυράστρου μόπος.)

AESCHYLUS, Fragments. Frag. 288. (c. 450 B. C.)

Another old Greek proverb is "Rejoicing with the moth's joy" (χαράν πυράστρου χαίρεις), as it flutters about the candle which will consume it.

Thus hath the candle sing'd the moth.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, ii, 9, 79. (1597)

The moth that dashes into the flame

And burns, has only itself to blame.

(Fei o p'u têng, tzu shao ch'i shên.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 864. (1875)

<sup>3</sup> There is no clothe so fine but moathes will eate it.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 188. (1576)

The usual proverbial form is, "No cloth too fine for moth to devour."

Doth not the Moathe eate the finest garment, if it be not worne?

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 111. (1579)

MOTHER

<sup>4</sup> Thou wilt scarce be a man before thy mother.

BEAUMONT, AND FLETCHER, Love's Cure. Act ii, sc. 2. (c. 1613)

He'll be a man before his mother.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 174. (1721)

Strive still to be a man before your mother.

COWPER, The Connoisseur. No. 3, Motto. (1754)

Ye'll be a man before your mother, Jack.

STEVENSON, The Black Arrow. Ch. 3. (1888)

<sup>5</sup> What the mother sings to the cradle goes all the way down to the grave.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Proverbs from Plymouth Pulpit, p. 61. (1887)

The mother's heart is the child's schoolroom.

BEECHER. Prov. from Plymouth Pulpit, p. 92.

What is home without a mother?

ALICE HAWTHORNE. Title of poem. (c. 1900)

They say there is no other

Can take the place of mother.

BERNARD SHAW, The Admirable Bashville. Act

i. (1926) Quoting the song. A Hebrew proverb says, "God could not be everywhere and therefore he made mothers."

Mother Knows Best.

EDNA FERBER. Title of story. (1927) A phrase which had been familiar for many years.

<sup>6</sup> And Adam called his wife's name Eve; because she was the mother of all living. (Et vocavit Adam nomen uxoris suae, Heva: eo quod mater esset cunctorum viventium.)

Old Testament: Genesis, iii, 20. (c. 550 B. C.)

"The mother of all living" is repeated in BEN SIRA, Ecclesiasticus, xl, 1.

<sup>7</sup> The good mother says not, will you? but gives.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 469.

(1640) RAY, Proverbs, p. 18. (1670)

The wise mother says not "Will you?" but gives.

EDWARD FITZGERALD, Polonius, p. 74. (1852)

<sup>8</sup> Cease at length to follow thy mother. (Tandem desine matrem.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 23, l. 11. (23 B. C.)

A pitiful mother makes a scald [scabby] head.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 649. (1640)

A child may have too much of his mother's blessing.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 117. (1678)

Mother's Darlings make but milk-sop Heroes.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3474. (1732)

Nothing like mamma's darling for upsetting a coach.

DISRAELI, Tancred. Bk. i, ch. 3. (1847)

Of me, in our country speech, it used to be said that I was "a mother's bairn."

ANDREW LANG, A Monk of Fife. Ch. 1. (1896)

A spoiled child.

Spoiled and petted—you might say he had the apron-string complex.

A. R. BOSWORTH, Full Crash Dive, p. 174. (1942)

<sup>9</sup> Rahel weeping for her children. (Rahel plorantis filios suos.)

Old Testament: Jeremiah, xxxi, 15. (c. 700 B. C.)

I arose a mother in Israel. (Surgetet mater in Israel.)

Old Testament: Judges, v, 7. (c. 700 B. C.) From the so-called Song of Deborah, celebrating the victory over Sisera.

The mother who has lost her children is not like the woman who weeps for hire.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 607. (1817)

"Pleureuses" or hired mourners. There is a similar well-known Latin phrase, "Stabat Mater Dolorosa" (There was standing the weeping mother), from the Mass for the dead.

<sup>10</sup> The mother's breath is as sweet.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 332. (1721)

Mother's truth Keeps constant youth. (Mutter-treu Wird täglich neu.)

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 31. (1852) The French say, "Tendresse maternelle Toujours se renouvelle" (A mother's love always renews itself).

1 You was never far from your mother's hip.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 370. (1721) Your minnie's [mother's] milk is no out of your nose yet.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 387.

2 And she asked me "How's your mother? Does she know that you are out?"

THOMAS MARTIN (?), Does Your Mother Know You're Out? Published in the London Mirror, 28 April, 1838, it quickly became a slang phrase in both England and America. Put into schoolboy Latin as "An bona te mater novit abesse domum?" See Notes and Queries. Ser. viii, vol. viii, p. 5.

Sir, does your mother know that you are out?

R. H. BARRHAM, The Ingoldsby Legends: Misadventures at Margate. (1842)

Depend upon it, his mother knows he's out.

F. E. SMEDLEY, Frank Fairleigh. Ch. 49. (1850)

3 A mother loves the child more than the father does, for she knows it's her own, while he but thinks it's his. (ἔστιν δὲ μήτηρ φιλότεκνος μάλλον πατὴρ: ἡ μὲν γὰρ αὐτῆς οἶδεν θυτ', ὁ δ' οἶεται.)

MENANDER, Fragments. Frag. 657 K. (c. 300 B.C.)

4 The best of mothers. (Optimam matrem.)

EMPEROR NERO, Watchword, given to the tribune of the guard on the first day of his rule, in honor of Nero's mother, Agrippina. (A.D. 54) See Suetonius, Nero, ch. 9.

Men are what their mothers made them.

EMERSON, The Conduct of Life: Fate. (1860) There are numberless variations on this theme. Napoleon Bonaparte is credited with saying, "The future destiny of the child is always the work of the mother"; John Quincy Adams is said to have said, "All that I am my mother made me"; and Abraham Lincoln, "All that I am or hope to be I owe to my angel mother," referring, not to his mother, Nancy Hanks Lincoln, who died when he was nine years old, but to his step-mother, Sarah Bush (Johnston) Lincoln, a widow whom Thomas Lincoln married the year after his first wife's death.

Tell him I said a boy's best friend is his mother.

JUDSON PHILLIPS, The Fourteenth Trump, p. 146. (1942) Quoting an old song.

5 Simply having children does not make mothers.

JOHN A. SHEDD, Salt from My Attic, p. 38. (1928)

6 Who ran to help me when I fell,
And would some pretty story tell,
Or kiss the place to make it well?
My Mother.

ANN TAYLOR, My Mother. (1804) Quoted by

DICKENS, The Old Curiosity Shop. Ch. 38. (1841) E. V. Lucas, in a note to his edition of Ann and Jane Taylor's poems, says, "It is, perhaps, no exaggeration to say that this is the best-known English poem."

The sweetest sounds to mortals given

Are heard in Mother, Home, and Heaven.

WILLIAM GOLDSMITH BROWN, Mother, Home, Heaven. (c. 1890)

II—Mother and Daughter

7 Like cowe, like calfe.

WILLIAM BULLEIN, A Dialogue Against the Fever Pestilence, p. 21. (1564)

Like hen, like chicken.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The City-Madame. Act i, sc. 1. (1632) The French say, "He that is born of a hen loves to be scratching."

8 If the mare have a bald [white] face, the filly will have a blaze [a white mark].

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 2. (1659)

D'URFEY, Quixote. Pt. iii, act i. (1696)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5596. (1732) There are many similar proverbs in all languages. The Spanish form is, "Qual el cuervo tel su huevo" (As is the crow, so is the egg); the Dutch, "The young ravens are beaked like the old"; the German, "As the old bird sings, so the young ones twitter"; the Japanese, "The spawn of the frog will become frogs"; the Arabian, "As the duck swims, so do the ducklings"; the Irish, "The young pig grunts like the old sow." See also under HEREDITY.

9 Every one that useth proverbs shall use this proverb against thee, saying, As is the mother, so is her daughter. (Sicut mater, ita et filia eius.)

Old Testament: Ezekiel, xvi, 44. (c. 600 B.C.) This was used against the inhabitants of Jerusalem, who had turned into evil ways.

Ewe follows ewe; as the acts of the mother so are the acts of the daughter.

Babylonian Talmud: Kethuboth, fo. 63a. (c. 450) Genesis Rabbah, lxxx, 1, has: "No cow is considered a gorer until her calf proves to be a kicker," that is, the mother is judged by the character of the daughter.

An olde prouerbe had long agoone be sayde
That oft . . . the mayde

Or doghter, vnto the mother wyll agre.

BARCLAY, The Shyp of Follys, i, 236. (1509)

Like father, like son; like mother, like daughter. (Saepe solet similis filius esse patri. Et sequitur leviter filia matris iter.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 41. (1545) Quoted. The literal translation is, "Oft wont is the son to be like the father, while the daughter lightly follows her mother's path."

Like mother, like child, they say.

MARRYAT, Jacob Faithful. Ch. 23. (1835)

Like mother like daughter.

CHARLES READE, The Cloister and the Hearth. Ch. 47. (1860) LIKE FATHER LIKE SON, see under FATHER.

1 If the old and trite proverb be true that the woman's side is the surer side and that the child followeth the womb, . . . the surer part is French.

HENRY V, as quoted by EDWARD HALL, Chronicle (1809), p. 101. (c. 1420)

The mother's side Being surer than the father's.
THOMAS MIDDLETON, Michaelmas Terme. Act i, sc. 1. (1607)

2 He that wipes the child's nose, kisseth the mother's cheek.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1030. (1640) The Danes say, "Who takes the child by the hand, takes the mother by the heart."

He that would the daughter win,
Must with the mother first begin.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 49. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6266. (1732) After the German, "Wer die Tochter will gewinnen, Mit der Mutter soll beginnen."

Make the young one squeak, and you'll catch the old one.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3326. (1732)

I make presents to the mother, but think of the daughter. (Der Mutter schenk' ich, Die Tochter denk' ich.)

GOETHE, Sprüche in Reimen. Pt. iii. (c. 1825)

Praise the child and you make love to the mother.

WILLIAM COBBETT, Advice to Young Men. Ch.

4. (1829) Quoted as "an old saying: and it is surprising how far it will go."

Woo first the mother if you'd win the daughter.

AUSTIN DOBSON, The Story of Rosina. (1877)

Felipe was wooing the daughter through the mother, as men have often done before him.

H. S. MERRIMAN (HUGH S. SCOTT), Tomaso's Fortune. Ch. 9. (1904)

3 Take a vine of a good soil, and the daughter of a good mother. (Di buona terra tò la vigna, di buona madre tò la figlia.)

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Italian, p. 45. (1813)

There is a Gaelic proverb, "Choose a good mother's daughter, though her father were the devil," and a Hindu one, "Marry the daughter on knowing the mother."

4 A light-heel'd mother makes a heavy-heel'd daughter. Because she doth all the work herself, and her daughter the mean while sitting idle, contracts a habit of sloth.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 53. (1670)

An olight [nimble] mother makes a sweir [lazy] daughter.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 22. (1721)

Light-heel'd Mothers make leaden-heel'd Daughters.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3214. (1732)

Quoted by FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1745.

The French say, "Mère piteuse fait fille tigneuse" (An indulgent mother makes a frowzy daughter); the Dutch, "A pitiful mother makes a scabby daughter"; the Portuguese, "Mãe aguçosa, filha preguiçosa" (A diligent mother, a lazy daughter).

5 There be four good mothers who have four bad daughters: Truth hath Hatred, Prosperity hath Pride, Security hath Peril, and Familiarity hath Contempt.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 490. (1940)

6 She would now and then show herself to be her mother's daughter, kitt after kinde.

CHRISTOPHER WORDSWORTH, Ecclesiastical Biography, ii, 112: Sir Thomas More. (1599)

She hath a mark after her mother.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 259. (1678)

The shapeless Mother Bunch, into the fac-simile of which she must eventually grow.

G. J. WHYTE-MELVILLE, Market Harborough. Ch. 8. (1861)

All women become like their mothers. That is their tragedy. No man does. That's his.

OSCAR WILDE, The Importance of Being Earnest. Act i. (1895)

GOOD COW MAY HAVE BAD CALF, see under CALF.

MOTHER-IN-LAW

7 Being no match for his mother-in-law, he turned against his wife.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 628. (1817)

Finding the actual enemy too powerful, he attacks the innocent.

8 The mother in law doth not remember that she hath been a daughter in law by her lease.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 36. (1659)

The Mother in Law remembers not, that she was a Daughter in Law.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4675. (1732)

9 Give up all hope of peace so long as your mother-in-law is alive. (Desperanda tibi salva concordia socru.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 231. (c. A. D. 120)

"If you have to choose," M. Victorien Sardou tells us, "between living with your mother-in-law and blowing out your brains, don't hesitate, blow out hers." ("Si tu as à choisir," nous dit M. Victorien Sardou, "entre demurer avec ta belle-mère et te brûler la cervelle, n'hésite pas, brûle-la-lui.")

MAX O'RELL, John Bull et Son Ile, p. 39. (1890)

However much you dislike your mother-in-law you must not set fire to her.

ERNEST WILD, Recorder of London, to a prisoner brought before him. (c. 1925)

10 Happy is she who marries the son of a dead mother.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 162. (1721)

"There is but one good mother-in-law, and she is dead." . . . It exactly corresponds with the German saying, "There is no good mother-in-law but she that wears a green gown," that is, who lies in the churchyard.

J. R. WISE, The New Forest, p. 179. (1863)

Green turf is a gude mother-in-law.

F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 99. (1902)

<sup>1</sup> The mother in law [shall be divided] against her daughter in law, and the daughter in law against her mother in law. (πενθερά ἐπὶ τὴν νόμφην αὐτῆς καὶ νόμφη ἐπὶ τὴν πενθεράν.)

New Testament: Luke, xii, 53. (c. A. D. 65) The Vulgate is, "Socrus in nurum suam, et nurus in socrum suam."

It is said that mothers in lawes beare a step-mothers hate unto their daughters in lawes.

RICHARD HYRDE, tr., Instruction of a Christen Woman. (1540)

Mother-in-law and daughter-in-law are a tempest and hailstorm.

HENRY G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 455. (1855)

She is well married who has neither mother-in-law nor sister-in-law by her husband.

BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 484. The Germans say, "Des Mannes Mutter ist der Frau Teufel" (The husband's mother is the wife's devil"; the Scots, "The gudeman's mither is aye in the gudewife's gait [way]."

<sup>2</sup> Never rely on the glory of the morning or on the smile of your mother-in-law.

J. W. R. SCOTT, Foundations of Japan, p. 121. (1922) Quoted as a proverb.

<sup>3</sup> People have made themselves believe that all mothers-in-law are harsh. (Ita animum induxerunt socrus omnis esse iniquas.)

TERENCE, Hecyra, l. 277. (165 B. C.)

MOTIVE

See also Purpose

<sup>4</sup> Never ascribe to an opponent motives meaner than your own.

J. M. BARRIE, Rectorial Address. St. Andrew's, 3 May, 1922.

Motives, like eggs, lose their fertility when hard-boiled.

ANONYMOUS, Meditations in Wall Street, p. 139. (1940)

<sup>5</sup> Do away with the motive, and you do away with the sin. (Quitada la causa, se quita el pecado.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 67. (1615) In the works of man, as in those of nature, it is really the motives which chiefly merit attention. (In den Werken des Menschen wie in denen der Natur sind eigentlich die Absichten vorzüglich der Aufmerksamkeit wert.)

GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa. (1819)

MOUNTAIN

See also Alps, Hill

<sup>6</sup> The mountain labored and brought forth a mouse. (ᾠδινεν οὖρος εἰτα μὴν ἀπέτεκεν.)

AESOP, Fables: The Mountain in Labor. (c. 600 B. C.) ERASMUS, Adagia, i, ix, 14, gives the Latin, "Mons parturibat. deinde murem prodidit."

A mountain was in labor, sending forth dreadful groans, and there was throughout the land the highest expectation. But it brought forth only a mouse. This is designed for you, who, when you have threatened great things, produce nothing.

(Mons parturibat, gemitus inmanes ciens.

Eratque in terris maxima exspectatio.

At ille murem peperit. Hoc scriptum est tibi,

Qui, magna cum minaris, extricas nihil.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. iv, fable 23. (c. 25 B. C.)

The mountain labors and a ridiculous mouse is born. (Parturient montes, nascetur ridiculus mus.)

HORACE, De Arte Poetica, l. 139. (20 B. C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, ix, 14. A similar proverb, also cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, i, 20, is μὴν ἀντὶ λέοντος ἀπέδειξε (He disclosed a mouse instead of a lion), of which Erasmus gives the Latin, "Murem ostendit pro leone." Still another is κέφος ᾠδινεῖ (The gull gives birth), the point being that the gull screams more loudly than would seem possible for so small a creature. BOILEAU, L'Art Poétique, chant iii, l. 274, puts Horace's line into French, "La montagne en travail enfante une souris."

As soon as Agesilaus landed in Egypt, the chief captains and governors of the king came down to meet him and pay him honor. There was great eagerness and expectation on the part of the other Egyptians also, owing to the name and fame of Agesilaus, and all ran together to behold him. But when they saw no brilliant array, but only an old man lying in some grass by the sea, his body small and contemptible, covered with a cloak that was coarse and mean, they were moved to laughter and jesting, saying that here was an illustration of the fable, "A mountain is in travail, and then a mouse is born." (τὸ μυθολογούμενον ᾠδίνειν ὄρος. εἰτα μὴν ἀποτεκεῖν.)

PLUTARCH, Lives: Agesilaus. Ch. 36, sec. 5. (c. A. D. 110)

The Mountain of Horace, which by the Poet was made to cry out and lament most enormously as a Woman in the Pangs of Childbirth, at which deplorable and exorbitant Cries and Lamentations the whole Neighbourhood being assembled in expectation to see some marvellous monstrous Production, could at last perceive no other but the paultry ridiculous Mouse.

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 24. (1545) For all their boasts, little or nothing was done; in whom these words of Horace may well be verified, . . . "The mountains swell up, the poor mouse is brought out."

HUGH LATIMER, First Sermon Before Edward VI (Parker Soc.), p. 92. (1549)

It is a pageant worth the sight, to beholde how he labors with mountaines to bring forth mise.

STEPHEN GOSSON, The Schoole of Abuse (Arber), p. 21. (1579)

Then might you thinke I had sweld with the mountains, and brought foorth a mouce.

ROBERT GREENE, Works (Grosart), xii, 7. (1599) The mountains travail'd and brought forth A scorned mouse.

BEN JONSON, tr., Art of Poetry, l. 199. (a. 1637)

Everybody thought that without doubt she would give birth to a city larger than Paris: she brought forth a mouse. (Chacun . . . crut qu'elle accoucherait sans faute | D'une cité plus grosse que Paris: | Elle accoucha d'une souris.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. v, fab. 10. (1668)
How the mouse makes the mighty mountain shake!

The mighty mountain labours with its birth.
SWIFT, Ode to Sir William Temple, l. 107. (1689)
From the mother's efforts we expected a boy.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 54. (1830)
Sons are much more desired than daughters throughout the East.

I waited for his mountain to bring forth its mouse.

MARK TWAIN, In Eruption, p. 181. (1906)
Many have slaved and sweated with nothing greater to show than the mus ridiculus.

FRANCIS WINWAR, Oscar Wilde, p. 258. (1940)
Mountain manufactures mouse.

J. J. CONNINGTON, The Twenty-One Clues, p. 166. (1941)

The mountain that was in labour and brought forth a mouse is familiar to us all; but none of us, I suspect, have ever heard of a mouse that was in labour and brought forth a mountain.

R. AUSTIN FREEMAN, The Unconscious Witness, p. 179. (1942)

See also WOOL: MUCH CRY AND LITTLE WOOL.

1 They came to the Delectable Mountains.

BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. i. (1678)

2 The mountains of today are not so lofty as the mountains of yore.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 370. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

3 To make a triumphal arch out of a sewer. (Arcum facere ex cloaca.)

CICERO, Pro Sestio. Sec. 40. (56 B.C.) A proverbial phrase for "much ado about nothing," which Cicero repeats in Pro Plancio, ch 40, sec. 95. (54 B.C.)

You are making an elephant out of a fly, as the saying is. (κατὰ τὴν παροιμίαν ἐλέφαντα ἐκ μύιας ποιεῖς.)

LUCIAN, Muscae Laudatio. Last sentence. (c. A.D. 170) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, ix, 69, with the Latin, "Elephantum ex musca facis," and the comment, "That is, from a petty thing, a lofty speech." Condensed in Moriae Encomium, sec. 2, to "Ex musca elephantem." The French say, "Faire d'une mouche un éléphant."

I see here a Yod [enlarged into] a city.

Babylonian Talmud: Kiddushin. fo. 16b. (c. 450) The Yod is the smallest letter in the Hebrew alphabet.

They make of a fly an elephant, and of a molehill a mountain.

THOMAS BECON, Catechism (P.S.) p.338.(1560)
Too much amplifying thinges yt be but small, makinges mountaines of Molehills.

JOHN FOX, The Book of Martyrs, ii, 1361. (1570)

To make huge mountains of small low molhils.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Letter-Book, p. 14. (1573)

According to the Proverbe, Make of the fle, an Elephant, and of a matter of nothing, a long tale, which Agesilaus finding fault with, saide hee liked not of that Shoomaker, which made a great shooe for a little foote.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 133. (1574) Pettie, tr.

And molehill faults to mountains multiply.

PHINEAS FLETCHER, Purple Island, vii, 63. (1633)

She takes me for a mountaine, that am but a mole-hill.

RICHARD BROME, The City Wit. Act iv, sc. 1. (1653)

Those people are ever swelling mole hills to mountains.

SAMUEL FOOTE, The Lame Lover. Act ii. (c.1760)

I told him his nerves were affected: every molehill was a mountain.

THOMAS HUTCHINSON, Diary, 5 May, 1778.

To make a mountain of a molehill.

FREDERICK MARRYAT, Peter Simple. Ch. 37.

(1834) DE MORGAN, It Never Can Happen Again. Ch. 38. (1909) WENTWORTH, In the Balance, p. 106. (1941) CHARTERIS, The Saint Goes West, p. 237. (1942) NASH, Said with Flowers, p. 103. (1943) etc., etc.

Making a mountain out of a mouse's cousin.

FRANK CASE, Do Not Disturb, p. 122. (1940)

He's apt to see a range of hills where you and I should see nothing but a couple of ant-heaps.

JOHN RHODE, Dead in the Night, p. 86. (1942)

Life is a great one for turning molehills into mountains, as the proverb has it.

RUTH FEINER, Young Woman of Europe, p. 42. (1942)

God save us from guys in love. It makes mountains out of molehills and tigers out of mice.

C.F. ADAMS, Up Jumped the Devil, p. 160. (1943)

Was Bill making a hurricane out of a bag of wind?

CHRISTOPHER HALE, Murder in Tow, p. 96. (1943)

4 Mountain mingles not with mountain (ὄρος βρεῖ οὐ μίγνυται.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. iii, cent. iii, No. 45.

(1523) Erasmus gives the Latin, "Mons cum monte non miscetur," which is cited by PONTANUS, Collectio Proverbiorum, p. 114.

Hylles do never mete, but acqwayntaunce dothe often.

PALSGRAVE, La Langue Françoyse, 635. (1530)

It is sene often That men mete now and than, But do so hylles never.

UNKNOWN, Mettyng of Dr. Barnes and Dr Powell. (c 1541)

It is an old saying, that mountains and hills never meet; But I see that men shall meet, though they do not seek.

ULPIAN FULWELL, Like Wil to Like. (1568)

Men may meet, though mountains cannot.

UNKNOWN, Three Lords. (1590) In HAZLITT, Old Plays, vi, 410.

It is a hard matter for friends to meet; but mountains may be removed with earthquakes, and so encounter.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, iii, 2, 196. (1600)

Men meet often, mountains never.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Montaigne. (1611) A rendering of the French proverb, "Deux hommes se rencontrent bien, mais jamais deux montagnes."

I found the proverb true that men have more privilege than mountains in meeting.

JOHN TAYLOR, Pennyles Pilgrimage. (1618) Friends possibly may meet (our proverb sayes) But mountains never.

GEORGE WITHER, Dark Lantern, p. 29. (1653) Friends may meet, but mountains never greet. Mons cum monte non miscbitur. Two haughty persons will seldom agree together.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 94. (1670) Men meet, mountains never.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1742. Mountains, it is said, may meet, and why not mortal creatures that have legs?

SCOTT, Quentin Durward. Ch. 31. (1823) MOUNTAIN AND MAHOMET, see MAHOMET.

1 The mountain is passed; now we shall get on better. (La montagne est passée; nous irons mieux.)

FREDERICK THE GREAT, Last Words. (1786)

2 A mountain and a river are good neighbours. HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 276. (1640)

3 The higher the mountain, the deeper the valley. (Si mons sublimis, profundior est tibi vallis.)

PONTANUS, Collectio Proverbiorum, p. 209. (1778)

After the high mountain, the deep valley. (Je hoher Berg, je tiefer Thal.)

CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 305. (1856) A German proverb. The Italian, "Ogni monte ha la sua valle" (Every hill has its valley).

4 If you don't scale the mountain, you can't view the plain.

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 17. (1875)

5 There is a wise German proverb which tells us that it is good . . . to be reminded that 'Behind the mountains there are people to be found.'

DEAN ARTHUR PENRHYN STANLEY, History of the Eastern Church, i, 2. (1861)

6 Longer shadows fall from lofty mountains. (Maioresque cadunt altis de montibus umbrae.)

VERGIL, Eclagues. Ecl. i. l. 83. (37 B. C.)

7 Thou wear'st upon thy forehead clear The freedom of a mountaineer.

WORDSWORTH, To a Highland Girl. (1803)

The mountaineer is . . . a lover of freedom.

CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, Seek and Find, p. 91. (1879)

As my correspondent says, 'Montani semper liberi.' [Mountaineers are always freemen.]

MAURICE HEWLETT, Wiltshire Essays, p. 41. (1921) See also under FREEDOM.

MOURNING

See also Lamentation, Weeping

8 Mourn for the dead, for [his] light hath failed.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus). xxii, 11. (c. 190 B. C.) Oesterley, tr.

See also DEATH: WEEP NOT THE DEAD.

9 I moorne as doth a lamb after the tete.

CHAUCER, The Milleres Tale, l. 518. (c. 1386)

10 It is better to go to the house of mourning than to go to the house of feasting. (Melius est ire ad domum luctus, quam ad domum convivii.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, vii. 2. (c. 250 B. C.)

11 Men mourn for those who leave fortunes behind.

H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs, p. 451. (1937)

12 Unminded, unmoved, go make your mone.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 9. (1546)

13 We mourn by the ordinance of Nature (Naturae imperio gemimus.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xv, l. 138. (c. A. D. 120)

Nature's law That man was made to mourn.

ROBERT BURNS, Man Was Made to Mourn. (1788)

14 If you mourn, you cannot sing; if you sing, you cannot mourn. (K'u tsê pu ko; ko tsê pu k'u.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 960. (1875)

15 'Tis not alone my inky cloak, good mother, . . . But I have that within which passeth show; These but the trappings and the suits of woe

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, i, 2, 76. (1600)

'Tis not alone the mourning suit, good masters; I've that within—for which there are no plaisters!

DAVID GARRICK, She Stoops to Conquer: Prologue. (1773)

Mourning is in the heart, not in the clothes. (Le deuil est dans le cœur et non dans les habits.)

HONORÉ DE BALZAC, Eugénie Grandet Ch. 3. (1833)

16 None mourn more ostentatiously than those who are rejoicing most. (Nulli iactantius maerent quam qui maxime laetantur.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. ii, sec. 77. (c. A. D. 116)

They weep with the most ostentation who are least afflicted. (Iactantius maerent, quae minus dolent.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 35. (1580) A saying which Montaigne could never forget.

See also GRIEF: VOCAL AND SILENT.

17 Then follows a mournful host with arms reversed. (Versis armis.)

VERGIL, Aeneid Bk. xi. l. 93. (19 B. C.)

MOUSE

<sup>1</sup> The mouse once saved the lion in his need.
BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Honest Man's Fortune. Act iii, sc. 1. (1613) See under LION.

<sup>2</sup> You have daily to do with the devil, and pretend to be frightened at a mouse.
H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 577. (1855)

<sup>3</sup> The tyranny of the cat rather than the justice of the mouse.

J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 177. (1817) The mouse bears a much worse character in the East than in the West. It is a symbol for wile and rapacity.

<sup>4</sup> Don't make yourself a mouse or the cat will eat you.

CHEALES, Proverbial Folk-lore, p. 105. (1875)

<sup>5</sup> The mouse had come amongst evil cats. (Tra male gatte era venuto il sorco.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto xxii, l. 58. (c. 1300)

The mouse tasting the pitch. (μὴς πίττης γεύεται.)

DEMOSTHENES, Against Polyctes. (c. 350 B.C.) "Mus in pice" is the Latin. Another Greek proverb for getting into trouble by one's own fault is μὴς ἐν ἄλμῃ (The mouse in the brine).

Alas! that I in my old age should have fallen into such a mess, like a mouse into a pot of pitch.

ERASMUS, Apothegm. (c. 1523) As quoted by FROUDE, The Council of Trent. Ch. 3.

She doth but quest and ferret, . . . entangling herself in her own work. . . Mus in pice A mouse in pitch.

JOHN FLORIO, tr., Montaigne. Bk. iii, ch. 13. (1603)

<sup>7</sup> A Mouse in the Pot is better than no Flesh.
B.E., A New Dictionary of the Canting Crew: Mousetrap. (a. 1700) HALF A LOAF BETTER THAN NO BREAD, see under BREAD.

<sup>8</sup> A Mouse must not think to cast a Shadow like an Elephant.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 332. (1732) No larder but hath its Mice.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3587. An older form is, "No house without mouse."

Pour not Water on a drowning Mouse.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3915. See under FALL.

<sup>9</sup> What mai the Mous ayein the Cat?

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. iii, l. 1643. (c. 1390)

Can a Mouse fall in Love with a Cat?

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1051. (1732) Mice care not to play with Kittens.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3412. (1732) The Spanish form is, "Con hijo de gato ne se burlan los ratones" (The mice do not play with the cat's son).

<sup>10</sup> Canst thou see no audience?—Nor man, nor mouse.

WILLIAM HAWKINS, Apollo Shroving. Act i, sc. 4. (1626) Not a creature.

Prince Maurice, sea-roving, . . . sank, in the West Indies, mouse and man.

CARLYLE, Life of Cromwell. Bk. v, ch. 79. (1845) Every living thing.

<sup>11</sup> The escaped mouse ever feels the taste of the bait.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 681. (1640) See also under EXPERIENCE.

<sup>12</sup> Little losse by length maie growe importable, A mouse in tyme maie byte a two, a cable.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

A Mouse in Time may shear a Cable asunder.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 331. (1732) By diligence and patience, the mouse ate in two the cable.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1736.

A mouse may stir what a man cannot stay.

F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 183. (1902)

See also under LITTLE THINGS.

<sup>13</sup> When the mouse laughs at the cat there is a hole near.

F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 120. (1902) An African proverb.

<sup>14</sup> Look on me and fear the gods. (ἐς ἐμὲ τῖς ὀρέωρ εὐσεβὴς ἔστω.)

HERODOTUS, History. Bk. ii, ch. 141. (c. 445 B.C.) Inscription on the statue of King Sethos, of Egypt, who holds a mouse in his hand, to commemorate the victory which a band of mice won for him over Sennacherib and his Assyrians. (c. 700 B.C.)

<sup>15</sup> An hardy mowse that is bold to breede In cattis eiris.

JOHN LYDGATE, Minor Poems (Percy Soc.), p. 167. (c. 1430)

Yet it is a wyly mouse

That can build his dwellinge house

Within the cattes eare.

JOHN SKELTON, Why Come Ye Nat to Courte, l. 753. (c. 1522)

It is a sotyll mouse that slepyth in the cattys eare.

HILLS, Common-place Book, p. 140. (c. 1530)

I have heard tell, it had neede to bee

A wyly mouse that should breede in the cats eare.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546) LVLV, Euphues, p. 63. (1579)

It is a bold mouse that nestles in the cat's ear.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 695. (1640)

It must be a wiley Mouse, that can breed in a Cat's Ear.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3040. (1732)

We ate like mice in a cat's ear.

R. L. STEVENSON, St. Ives. Ch. 14. (1894)

<sup>16</sup> The Mouse mumpeth so longe at the bayte, that at length she is taken in the trap.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 56. (1576)

1 Consider the mouse what a canny little beast he is. He doesn't ever entrust his welfare to a single cubbyhole, but has another refuge all picked and ready, if one is blocked. (Cogitato, mus pusillus quam sit sapiens bestia, | aetatem qui non cubili uni umquam committat suam, | quin, si unum obsideatur, aliud iam perfugium elegerit.)

PLAUTUS, Truculentus, l. 868. (c. 186 B.C.)

From this two medieval proverbs were derived, "Mus non uni fidet antro" (A mouse doesn't trust to one hole), and "Mus miser est antro qui tantum clauditur uno" (That mouse is in an ill case that hath but one hole to lurk in), as EVANS renders it, in Withals Dictionary Revised, sig. C3. (1586) See JOHN KEMBLE, Anglo-Saxon Dialogues of Salomon and Saturn, p. 57.

I holde a mouses herte nat worth a leek,
That hath but oon hole for to sterre to,
And if that faille, thanne is al y-do.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Wife of Bath's Prologue, l. 572 (c. 1388)

It goes hard with that mouse that hath but one hole to trust to.

JAMES MABBE, tr., Celestina (T.T.), p. 139. (1631)

The mouse that hath but one hole is quickly taken.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1133. (1640)

A sorry Mouse, that has but one Hole, or a poor Creature that has but one Shift.

B.E., A New Dictionary of the Canting Crew: Mousetrap. (a. 1700)

A Mouse that has but One Hole is soon Catch'd.

SAMUEL PALMER, Moral Essays on Proverbs. (1710)

The mouse that always trusts to one poor hole, Can never be a mouse of any soul.

POPE, The Wife of Bath, l. 298. (1717)

It is a poor fox which has only one hole. (Es ist ein armer Fuchs, der nur ein Loch weiss.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbs, p. 314. (1856) A German proverb.

Biddy took up her brogue as a tower of refuge. Bilingual races are up to the tactics of rats with a double hole.

R. D. BLACKMORE, Cradock Howell. Ch 17. (1866)

2 Mum, mouse in cheese. cat is neare.

HENRY PORTER, The Two Angrie Women of Abington (1841), p. 71. (1599)

She is like a mouse in a Holland cheese, her house and diet all the same.

RICHARD FLECKNOE, Enigmaticall Characters, p. 16. (1658)

He speaketh like a mouse in cheese.

ROBERT AINSWORTH, Thesaurus Linguae Latinae. (1736) See also under SPEECH.

3 When a building is about to fall down, all the mice desert it.

PLINY THE ELDER, Naturalis Historia. Bk. viii, sec. 103. (A.D. 77) See also under RAT.

4 You have come to the place where the mice nibble iron. (Venisti huc, ubi mures ferrum rodunt.)

SENECA (?), Ludus de Morte Claudii. Sec. 7

(c. A.D. 55) A proverb found also in HERODES iii, 76. Apparently the Land of Nowhere.

MAN OR MOUSE, see under MAN.

MOUSETRAP

5 You must not let your mouse-trap smell of cheese.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 11/1

(1659) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 18. (1670)

Let not the Mouse-trap smell of Blood.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3189. (1732)

The trap that wisht to catch a mowze, Shud never smell of blood.

JOHN WOLCOT (PETER PINDAR), The Middlesex Election. (1802)

6 He could invent the best mouse-trap.

JOHN WESTLEY, Journal, 14 Jan., 1772.

I trust a good deal to common fame, as we all must. If a man has good corn, or wood, or boards, or pigs to sell, or can make better chairs or knives, crucibles or church-organs, than anybody else, you will find a broad, hard-beaten road to his house, though it be in the woods.

RALPH WALDO EMERSON, Common Fame: Journals, 1855. Vol. viii, p. 528.

If a man can write a better book, preach a better sermon, or make a better mouse-trap than his neighbor, though he builds his house in the woods, the world will make a beaten path to his door.

R. W. EMERSON, as quoted by MRS. SARAH S. B. YULE, in Borrowings (1871), after hearing a lecture by Emerson, in April, 1871. Almost certainly a verbal variation of the preceding quotation from Common Fame. One of the most famous of "mystery quotations." For full account see STEVENSON, Famous Single Poems

If a man builds a better mousetrap than his neighbor, the world will not only beat a path to his door, it will make newsreels of him and his wife in beach pajamas, it will discuss his diet and his health, it will publish heart-throb stories of his love life.

NEWMAN LEVY, The Right to Be Let Alone. American Mercury, June, 1935.

MOUTH

7 To stop Philip's mouth with an unsoaked rush. (ἀπορράψαι τὸ Φιλίππου στόμα ἀλοσχοῖνυ ἀβρόχῳ.)

AESCHINES, On the Embassy. Sec. 21. (343 B.C.)

A proverbial phrase, meaning the job would be so easy that one need not pause to soak the fiber to make it pliable.

Give him a loaf, Thom;

Quiet his mouth, that oven will be venting else.

BEN JONSON, The Staple of News. Act. i, sc. 1. (1626)

1 Spit it out and cleanse thy mouth. (ἀποπύσαι δει καὶ καθάρασαι στόμα.)

AESCHYLUS, Fragments. Frag. 192, Smyth. (c.
 458 B. C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia: Of Isis and Osiris, 358E.

2 Keep watch over thy mouth, lest it be thy destruction.

AHIKAR, Teachings. Col. vii, l. 97. (c. 550 B. C.)

3 The fish is killed by its mouth. (Por la boca muere el pes.)

FRANCIS BEEDING, Heads Off at Midnight. Ch.
 8. (1940) A Spanish proverb.

4 If thou canst, answer thy neighbour, but if not—hand on mouth!

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus),
 v, 12. (c. 190 B. C.) Oesterley, tr.

5 Mouth: In man, the gateway to the soul; in woman, the outlet of the heart.

AMBROSE BIERCE, Devil's Dictionary, p. 225.
 (1906)

6 He who will stop every man's mouth, must have a great deal of meal.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 401.
 (1855) The Danes say, "He needs a lot of butter who would stop every man's mouth."
 See also under BRIBERY.

7 Govern your mouth according to your purse.
 (Gobierna tu boca segun tu bolsa.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Pro-verbes, p. 227. (1856) A Spanish proverb.
 Sometimes rendered, "Govern your appetite according to your purse."

8 A close mouth catches no flies.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 316. (1605)

Into a closed mouth no fly enters. (En bocca cerrada no entra mosca.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1605)
 I must remember the traveller of two good Italian proverbs: In bocca serrata mai non entro mosca. Keep close lips and never fear, Any flies should enter there.

FYNES MORYSON, Itinerary (1907), iii, 400.
 (1617) The French say, "Bouche serrée, mouche n'y entre."

Into a mouth shut flies fly not.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 221. (1640)
 The Spanish proverb . . . is necessary in dangerous . . . times: "where the mouth is shut, no fly doth enter."

THOMAS FULLER, The Appeal of Injured Innocence (1840), p. 302. (1659)

Not flattering lies

Shall soothe me more to sing with winking eyes
 And open mouth, for fear of catching flies.

DRYDEN, Fables: Cock and the Fox, 1799. (1700)
 Speak and speed: the close mouth catches no flies.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1742.

No flies will go down your throat if you keep your mouth shut.

SURGEON, John Ploughman. Ch. 6. (1869)

Concha, remembering . . . that no flies enter a shut mouth, was silent.

H. S. MERRIMAN (HUGH S. SCOTT), *In Kedar's
 Tents*. Ch. 23. (1897)

9 His mouth as greet was as a greet forneys.
 CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 561.
 (c. 1386)

Big i' th' mouth [given to boasting].

J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 32. (1917)

10 For al so siker as cold engendreth hayl,
 A likerous mouth moste han a likerous tayl.
 CHAUCER, *Canterbury Tales: The Wife of
 Bath's Prologue*, l. 466. (c. 1388)

Our Englysh proverbe . . . sayeth, A lycourouse mouthe, a lycourouse tayle.

RICHARD TAVERNER, Proverbs, fo. 36. (1539)

Likery she of tongue, lighte of taile.

WILSON, The Arte of Rhetorique, p. 66. (1553)

A liquorish tongue, a lecherous tail.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 16. (1670)

For 'tis as sure as cold engenders hail,

A liquorish mouth must have a lecherous tail.

POPE, The Wife of Bath's Prologue l. 217. (1714)

Lickerish Tongues, treacherous Tails.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3205. (1732)

11 He that any good would win
 At his mouth must first begin.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 136. (1639)

12 To fill the mouth with empty spoons.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 314. (1639)
 RAY, English Proverbs, p. 175. (1670)

You have put a toom [empty] spoon in my mouth. You have rais'd, and disappointed, my expectation.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 384. (1721)

13 She's as tight-mouthed as a bear trap.

OWEN DAVIS, Icebound. Act i. (1923)

14 The mouth utters lilies. (Kou shou lien 'hua.)
 JUSTUS DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 193.
 (1872) Meaning excellent discourse. "To make mouth-flowers," (ta tsui 'hua), on the other hand, means to utter mere words.

15 Be not rash with thy mouth. (Ne temere qui loquaris.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, v, 2. (c. 250 B. C.)

Now hold your mouth, par charitee.

CHAUCER, Sir Thopas, l. 180. (c. 1386)

That shall not stop my mouth.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1546)

16 These craftie foxes [cannibals] espying their enemies afar off, beganne to swalowe theyr spettle as their mouths watered for greediness of theyr prey.

RICHARD EDEN, *The Decades of the Newe
 Worlde*, p. 143. (1555)

These reasons made his mouth to water.

BUTLER, Hudibras, Pt. i, canto iii, l. 379. (1663)

Does it make your mouth water?

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii, (1738)

Never did my uncle Toby's mouth water so much for a pipe in his life.

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. vi, ch. 28. (1762)

1
Lo, I am silent and curb my mouth. (ἰδοὺ σιωπῶ καπιλάζυμαι στόμα.)

EURIPIDES, Andromache, l. 250. (c. 430 B.C.)

2
An unbridled mouth. (ἀχάλινον στόμα.)

EURIPIDES, Bacchanals, l. 385. (c. 410 B.C.)

Unable to keep his tongue within doors. (ἀθυρόγλωσσος.)

EURIPIDES, Orestes, l. 903. (c. 410 B.C.) The French say, "Bouche va toujours" (The mouth is always going).

3
Ye have a readie mouth for a ripe cherrie.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 112. (c. 1595) Cited by Kelly and Fuller.

4
He has a Mouth for every Matter.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1859. (1732)

Harry Smatter has a Mouth for every Matter.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1748.

There you go, shooting off your mouth.

N. P. LANGFORD, Vigilante Days and Ways, i, 295. (1890)

5
The Roman Orator was down in the mouth, finding himself thus cheated by the money-changer.

BISHOP JOSEPH HALL, Cases of Conscience, Bk. i, ch. 6. (1649)

You are damnably down o' the mouth.

PETER MOTTEUX, tr., Rabelais, v, 224. (1694)

He looks plaiguiely down in the mouth.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

He'll never more be down-at-mouth.

ROSSETTI, Dante and His Circle, i, 224. (a. 1850)

6
The wise hand doth not all that the foolish mouth speaks.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 248. (1640)

One mouth doth nothing without another.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1026. See also under SCANDAL.

Your mouth hath beguiled your hands.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 260. (1678)

7
The meale mouth hath woon the bottome of your stomacke.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)

More meete for mealy mouthed men.

GEORGE GASCOIGNE, The Fruites of Warre, lxxxvi. (c. 1572)

Flatterers and meal-mouthed merchants.

ABRAHAM FLEMING, A Panoplie of Epistles, p. 155. (1576)

This wench with the mealy mouth, is my wife.

THOMAS DEKKER, The Gentle Craft, i. (1600)

Ile not be mealely mouthed, I warrant em.

JOHN DAY, Ile of Guls. Act iv, sc. 4. (1606)

Nursed by mealy-mouth'd philanthropies.

ALFRED TENNYSON, The Brook, l. 94. (1855)

Well-fed Vicars of Bray . . . with mealy mouths and elastic consciences.

J. C. JEAFFRESON, A Book About Doctors. Ch. 13. (1862)

None of your mincing, mealy-mouthed fine ladies.

WALTER BESANT, The World Went Very Well Then. Ch. 16. (1887) Mealy-mouthed, soft spoken, not outspoken, afraid to speak one's mind.

8
To make up my mouthe.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546) According to the proverb old, My mouth I will up make.

THOMAS PRESTON, Cambyses. (c. 1570) In Hazlitt, Old Plays, iv, 175.

Commonly at great feasts . . . they use to serve up sturgeon last, as it were to make up the mouth.

COGAN, The Hauen of Health, p. 170. (1584) All the while she was at church, she made up her mouth as demurely as the rest of the congregation.

THOMAS BROWN, Works, iv, 202. (a. 1704) "A snack of bread and cheese to make up your mouth" is often the goodwife's suggestion to her farmer lord.

Notes and Queries. Ser. vii, vol. vi, p. 38. (1888) To finish one's meal with something especially delicious.

9
The hole too open under the nose
Breeds ragged shoes and tattered hose.

JOHN HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 10. (1659)

He has a hole under his nose and money runs into it.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Pictures, p. 39. (1880)

10
You wanted to . . . make a poor mouth to Mrs. Lapham.

W. D. HOWELLS, The Rise of Silas Lapham. Ch. 25. (1885)

11
Take some little care of what goes into the mouth, but much more of what comes out of it.

F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 204. (1902)

12
Thine own mouth condemneth thee, and not I. (Condemnabit te os tuum, et non ego.)

Old Testament: Job, xv, 6. (c. 350 B.C.)

Out of your own mouth. (Ex ore tuo.)

ENNIUS, Annals. Frag. 461, Loeb. (c. 180 B.C.)

Quoted by CICERO, Ad Atticum, vi, ii, 8.

13
A lying mouth is a stinking pit.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Veritas Proprium Hominis. (1616)

The mou' that lies slays the saul.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 259. (1678)

14
You never open your mouth but you put your foot in it.

P. W. JOYCE, English as We Speak It, p. 128. (1910)

One thing about my mouth, I never put my foot in it.

OGDEN NASH, Mr. Barclow's Breakdown. (1940)

Every time you open your mouth you put your big foot in it.

STEPHEN ACRE, Yellow Overcoat, p. 219. (1942)
I opened my mouth and put my foot in it.

CLAYTON RAWSON, No Coffin for the Corpse, p. 230. (1942)

1 Keep your trap shut for a minute.

BAYARD KENDRICK, The Odor of Violets, p. 58. (1941)

For God's sake, shut your bazoo.

WESTBROOK PEGLER, Fair Enough, 18 March, 1941.

You better put a zipper on that bazoo of yours.
PEGLER, Fair Enough, 31 March, 1941.

2 In a kissing mouth there lyeth a galling minde.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, (Arber), p. 75. (1579)

Sweet red splendid kissing mouth.

A. C. SWINBURNE, tr., Villon's Complaint of the Fair Armouress. (c. 1880)

3 All mouths have the same relishes.

MENCUS, Discourses. Bk. vi, pt. i, ch. 7, sec. 5. (c. 300 B. C.)

Of other care they little reck'ning make,
Then how to scramble at the shearers feast, . . .
Blind mouths! that scarce themselves know how to hold

A sheep-hook, or have learned aught else the least
That to the faithful herdman's art belongs!

MILTON, Lycidas, l. 117. (1637)

When your mouth eats, let it consult with your stomach.

ARTHUR E. MOULE, Proverbs from Ningpo. (Doolittle, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 326. 1872)

4 Keep your mouth shut and your eyes open.
SAMUEL PALMER, Moral Essays on Proverbs, p. 143. (1710)

Keep your Purse and your Mouth close.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3121. (1732)

Keep your mouth close an' your een open.

ALLEN RAMSAY, Scottish Proverbs. (1737)

He who seldom opens his mouth often shuts his eyes [in meditation].

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1128. (1875)

5 A naughty person . . . walketh with a forward mouth. (Homo apostata . . . graditur ore perverso.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, vi, 12. (c. 350 B. C.)

6 He that keepeth his mouth keepeth his life. (Qui custodit os suum, custodit animam suam.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xiii, 3. (c. 350 B. C.)

Whoso keepeth his mouth and his tongue keepeth his soul from troubles. (Qui custodit os suum, et linguam suam, custodit ab angustiis animam suam.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxi, 23.

7 Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings hast thou ordained strength. (Ex ore infantium et lactentium.)

Old Testament: Psalms, viii, 2. (c. 350 B. C.)

Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings thou hast perfected praise. (ἐκ στόματος νηπίων καὶ θηλαζόντων.)

New Testament: Matthew, xxi, 16. (c. A. D. 70)

8 A wise head hath a close mouth to it.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 143. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 469. (1732)

9 Out of the mouth calamities fly:

In by the mouth all sicknesses hie.

('Huo ts'ung k'uo ch'u: ping ts'ung k'uo ju.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 775. (1875)

The lion opens his mouth; the elephant shuts his: shut yours. (K'ai k'ou shih tzu; pi k'ou hsiang; pu k'o lan yen.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1031.

That which goes out of your mouth enters other people's ears. (Ch'u tsai ne k'ou, ju tsai jen erh.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1048.

ERNEST BRAHMAH, Kai Lung's Golden Hours, polishes this to, "That which passes out of one mouth passes into a hundred ears."

It is safer to keep the mouth shut than to open it. (K'ai k'ou pu ju hsien k'ou wen.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1050.

Shut your mouth like a bottle-neck; guard your thoughts like a city. (Shou k'ou ju p'ing; fang i ju ch'eng.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1104.

10 All is lost that goes beside your own mouth.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii. (1738)

11 It's in everybody's mouth. (In ore est omni populo.)

TERENCE, Adelphoe, l. 93. (160 B. C.)

12 He keepeth a fair castle that keepeth well his mouth.

UNKNOWN, Vernon MS., p. 340. (c. 1300)

GOD NEVER SENDS MOUTHS BUT HE SENDS MEAT, see under GOD.

MOUTH OF HONEY, HEART OF GALL, see under DIS-SIMULATION.

OUT OF THE ABUNDANCE OF THE HEART THE MOUTH SPEAKETH, see under HEART.

MUCH

13 Too much of nothing but of fools and asses.

JOHN CLAKE, Paroemiologia, p. 73. (1639)

NOTHING TOO MUCH, see under MODERATION.

14 Too much of a thing nauseates. (Omne nimium non bonum.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 304. (1869) "Joy surfeited turns to sorrow."

"Usque ad nauseam" (Even to nausea) is the proverbial phrase.

15 Too much spoiles, too little doth not satisfie.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs: Ital.-Eng., p. 12. (1659) FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 5268, has,

"Too much spoileth, too little is nothing."

Too much breaks the sack.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 244. (1666)

Too much breaks the bag.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 26. (1670)

1. Much will haue more.

WILLIAM LAWSON, The Country Housewife's Garden, p. 5. (1615) See also COVETOUSNESS; GREED.

2. The much that hangs on little was then set in motion.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Vittoria. Ch. 31. (1866)

3. Why, then, can one desire too much of a good thing?

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, iv, 1, 123. (1600)

A man may take too much of a good thing.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Manger. (1611)

The Germans say, "Man kann des Guten zu viel haben." On the contrary, there is an English proverb, "You cannot have too much of a good thing."

This (to use a very colloquial phrase) is surely too much of a good thing.

SYDNEY SMITH, Works (1867), i, 175. (1809) A phrase which has been greatly overworked.

See SMEDLEY, Frank Fairleigh. Ch. 6. (1850)

SHAW, Pygmalion, Act iv. (1912) BRUSH,

You Go Your Way. Ch. 1. (1941) HEYER,

Envious Casca, p. 132. (1941) etc., etc.

Too much even of a good thing creates disgust. (L'abondanza delle cose, ingenera fastidio.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. 1, p. 148. (1814)

An Italian proverb.

"Too much of a good thing" suggests that the Nemesis on departures from the golden mean applies to good things as well as bad.

R. G. MOULTON, Shakespeare as a Dramatic Artist, p. 46. (1901)

One cannot have too much of a good thing, you know.

AGATHA CHRISTIE, The Moving Finger, p. 94. (1942)

4. It is fouler and uglier to have too much than not to have enough.

H. D. THOREAU, Autumn, 18 Nov., 1855.

5. I hope . . . you and your good woman agree still?—Ay, ay, much of a muchness.

VANBRUGH AND CIBBER, The Provok'd Husband. Act i, sc. 1. (1728)

They are all pretty much of a muchness.

CHARLES READE, It's Never Too Late to Mend. Ch. 18. (1856)

You'll find 'em much of a muchness, I expect.

DICKENS, Edwin Drood. Ch. 4. (1870)

Men's men . . . they're much of a muchness.

GEORGE ELIOT, Daniel Deronda. Bk. iv, ch. 31. (1876)

6. To moche of on thyng was neuer holsome.

UNKNOWN, Abce of Aristotill. (c. 1450)

E.E.T.S., ser. ii, No. 8, p. 66.

Too much of one thyng is not good.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1546)

Over-much of one thing is nought.

UNKNOWN, Interlude of Youth. (c. 1554) In HAZLITT, Old Plays, ii, 19.

Too muche of one thyng, is nought. (Troppo di una cosa, non val niente.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 34. (1578)

Our English prouerbe saith, Too much of one thing is good for nothing.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, tr., Orlando Furioso: Allegory, p. 408. (1591)

Too much of anything is good for nothing.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Crossing of Proverbs.

(1616) BUTLER, Feminine Monarchie, p. 170.

(1634) SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii.

(1738) FIELDING, Amelia. Bk. xi, ch. 3. (1751) etc., etc.

Too much of ought is good for nought.

Notes and Queries. Ser. iv, vol. viii, p. 506.

(1871) The French say, "Assez y a si trop n'y a"; the Germans, "Allzuviel ist nicht gesund" (Too much is not healthy"; the Italians, "Spesso chi troppo fa, poco fa" (Often he who does too much does little"; and the Dutch practically the same thing, "Die te veel onderneemt slaagt zelden" (He who undertakes too much seldom succeeds).

7. Multum In Parvo: or a summary narrative on behalfe of prisoners captived for debt.

UNKNOWN, Title of tract. (1653) "Much in little."

The Little Lexicon, or Multum in Parvo of the English Language.

SAMUEL MAUNDER. Title of Book. (1825)

This is the kitchen: is it not admirably arranged? What a multum in parvo!

MARRYAT, Three Cutlers. Ch. 1. (1836)

A multum-in-parvo pocket-knife.

THOMAS HARDY, The Hand of Ethelberta. Ch. 43. (1876)

MUCK

8. You'll have his muck for his meat.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 170. (1639)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 186. (1670)

9. Bot forto pinche and forto spare,

Of worlde's muk to gete encreass.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. v, l. 4854. (c. 1390)

To disdeygne me, who mucke of the worlde hoordeth not.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

Look'd upon things precious as they were

The common muck o' the world.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus, ii, 2, 129. (1607)

I haue given over . . . moyling for mucke and trash.

WILLIAM ROWLEY, A Match at Midnight. Act i, sc. 1. (1633)

10. Muck and money go together.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 179. (1678)

The obvious meaning of the proverb is that where's there's a manure-pile there's money, but Ray gives this fantastic explanation:

"Those that are slovenly and dirty usually grow rich, not they that are nice, curious in their diet, houses, and clothes." Which, of course, is far from the truth.

He hath a good muck-hill at his door, i. e., he is rich.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 261. (1678)
There is an old proverb which says "The muck-midden is the mother of the meal-ark [meal-chest]."

MICHAEL DENHAM, ed., Denham Tracts, ii, 97. (c. 1850)

"The more muck the more money" is an East Anglian proverb.

WALTER WHITE, Eastern England, i, 127. (1865)
Where there's muck there's money.

J. G. NALL, Great Yarmouth, p. 605. (1866)
Wher ther's muck ther's luck.

F. E. TAYLOR, Lancs. Sayings, p. 11. (1901)
Muck's the mother of money.

J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 95. (1917)

MUCKRAKE

1 I have to scrape out his house with this iron rake. (σάλπειν αὐτοῦ τὴν οἰκίαν μ' ἀργάην δόμου.)

EURIPIDES, Cyclops, l. 33. (c. 440 B. C.)

The Interpreter takes them [Christiana and her company] apart again, and has them first into a room where was a man that could look no way but downwards, with a muck-rake in his hand. There stood also one over his head with a celestial crown in his hand, and proffered to give him that crown for his muck-rake; but the man did neither look up nor regard, but raked to himself the straws, the small sticks, and dust of the floor.

JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. ii. (1684)

Is the last and most admirable invention of the human race only an improved muck-rake?

H. D. THOREAU, Life Without Principle. (1854)
Muckrakes . . . persons who "fish in troubled waters," from their idea of raking up the muck to see what valuable waifs and strays they may find in it.

SCHELE DE VERE, Americanisms: Muckrakes. (1872)

Men, forgetful of the perennial poetry of the world, muckraking in a litter of fugitive refuse.

FREDERIC HARRISON, The Choice of Books, Ch. 4. (1879)

The men with the muck-rake are often indispensable to the well-being of society, but only if they know when to stop raking the muck.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Address, at the Gridiron Club dinner, Washington, 14 April, 1906.
The theme of President Roosevelt's address was the quotation from Bunyan given above, and it was he who really introduced "muck-raker" into the American language.

The pure gleam of the muck-raker in his eyes.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), The Man Higher Up. (1908)

People have a name for your kind of man. They call them "muck-rakers."

L. K. ANSPACHER, The Unchastened Woman. Act ii. (1915)

MUD

See also Mire

2 That's clear as mud.

R. H. BARHAM, Ingoldsby Legends: The Merchant of Venice. (1842) See under CLEARNESS.

3 Let me go where'er I will
I hear a sky-born music still: . . .

'Tis not in the high stars alone, . . .
But in the mud and scum of things,
There always, always something sings.

R. W. EMERSON, Music (c. 1870)

4 Mud chokes no Eels.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3488. (1732)

5 One's as deep in the mud as the other in the mire.

R. L. GALES, Vanished Country Folk, p. 205. (1914)

I'm going to be just as deep in the mud as you are in the mire.

GARDNER, Case of the Empty Tin, p. 211. (1941)

6 An ordinary person (born of the mud of the people).

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Arcadia (1629), iii. 238 (1563)

Scum of the mud of hell!

JOHN MARSTON, Antonio's Revenge. Act v, sc. 5. (1602)

Defoe said in his wrath, 'the Englishman was the mud of all races'!

EMERSON, English Traits: Race. (1856)

7 Never did two angry men of their abilities throw mud with less dexterity.

HORACE WALPOLE, Vertue's Anecdotes of Painting in England (1786), iv, 170. (1762)

No mud can soil us but the mud we throw.

J. R. LOWELL, Epistle to George William Curtis. (1874)

Mud thrown is ground lost.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 490. (1940)

MUGWUMP

8 These were mugquomps of the sons of Esau.
JOHN ELIOT, Indian Bible: Genesis, xxxvi, 15. (1663) An Indian word meaning "great chief," answering to the "dukes" of the English Bible.

The secret bulletin . . . has extensively circulated among the . . . Most Worshipful Mugwumps of the Cabletow.

UNKNOWN, The American Whig (Woodstock, Vt.), 24 August, 1832. See The Nation, lii, 414/3. Jocular for an important person, a "high muck-a-muck."

John A. Logan is the Head-Centre, the Hub, the King Pin, the Main Spring, Mogul and Mugwump of the final plot.

ISAAC HILL BROMLEY, Impeach Logan. Editorial in N.Y. Tribune, 16 Feb., 1877.

<sup>1</sup> Mugwump D. O. Bradley.

UNKNOWN, Headline in N.Y. Sun, 23 March, 1884. This is the first authenticated use of the word as applied to anyone holding himself aloof from or superior to party politics, although it is alleged to have been so used by the Indianapolis Sentinel in 1872. In its issue of 15 June, 1884, The Sun definitely applied the word to the independent Republicans of the Blaine-Cleveland campaign, who refused to support the party ticket. It was soon widely accepted.

We have yet to see a Blaine organ that speaks of the independent Republicans otherwise than as Pharisees . . . mugwumps, or something of that sort.

UNKNOWN, Editorial, N.Y. Evening Post, 20 June, 1884.

A mugwump is a person educated beyond his intellect.

HORACE PORTER, Speech, October, 1884, during Blaine-Cleveland campaign. The Nation, more moderately, defined a mugwump as "a man who for some reason or other, is unable to vote his regular party ticket." Thomas B. Reed defined mugwumps as "long-tailed birds of Paradise," and Harold Willis Dodds, President of Princeton University, said, "A mugwump is a fellow who has his mug on one side of the fence and his wump on the other," a definition echoed by Albert J. Engel, in a speech in the House of Representatives, 23 April, 1935.

I'd have believed anything but that you [a Democrat] would be a dashed Mugwump.

P. L. FORD, The Honorable Peter Stirling, p. 302. (1894)

MULTITUDE

See also Crowd, Mob, People

<sup>2</sup> Permit thou not me to be judged according to the mouths of the multitude.

Book of the Dead. Ch. i, l. 16. (c. 4000 B. C.)
Turin Papyrus.

<sup>3</sup> The angry buzz of a multitude is one of the bloodiest noises in the world.

LORD HALIFAX, Maxims: Works, p. 219. (1693)

<sup>4</sup> The multitude, who require to be led, still hate their leaders.

HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 425. (1823)

<sup>5</sup> Thou art a many-headed beast. (Belua multorum es capitum.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 1, l. 76. (20 B.C.)
Referring to the people of Rome. Pope renders the line, "The people are a many-headed beast."

The multitude of the grosse people, being a beast of many heads.

NICOLAS UDALL, tr., Erasmus' Apophthegms (1877), p. 122. (1542)

O weak trust of the many-headed multitude.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Arcadia (1893), p. 226. (1580)

The blunt monster with uncounted heads,
The still-discordant wavering multitude.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV: Induction, l. 18. (1598)

The many-headed monster mutinous rowt.

JOHN FLORIO, Montaigne. Bk. i, ch. 23. (1603)
An expansion of Montaigne's "tourbe mutine." A few lines farther along Florio renders "ce monstre ainsi agité" by "this monstrous faced multitude."

That beast with many heads, The staggering multitude.

MARSTON AND WEBSTER, The Malcontent. Act iii, sc. 3. (1604)

He himself stuck not to call us the many-headed multitude.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus, ii, 3, 17. (1607)

The beast with many heads butts me away.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus, iv, 1, 1. (1607)

This many-headed monster, Multitude.

SAMUEL DANIEL, The Civile Warres. Bk. ii, ch. 12. (1609)

The many-headed monster, The giddy multitude.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Unnaturall Combat. Act iii, sc. 2. (c. 1619)

What is this giddy multitude? this beast
Of many heads?

JOHN WILSON, Andronicus Comnenius. Act iii, sc. 2. (1664)

The Mob has many Heads, but no Brains.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4653. (1732)

The many-headed monster of the pit.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 1, l. 305. (1732)

The public is a many-headed monster and hard to please.

DAVID GARRICK, Correspondence, i, 527. (1773)

Thou many-headed monster-thing,

Oh, who would wish to be thy king?

WALTER SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto v, st. 30. (1810)

I will tell you [the public] what you are; you are a great, ugly, many-headed beast.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, The Doctor. Interch. 21. (1834)

<sup>6</sup> I do not hunt for the votes of the inconstant multitude. (Non ego ventosae plebis suffragia venor.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 19, l. 37. (20 B. C.)

<sup>7</sup> Woe to the multitude of many people, which make a noise like the noise of the seas. (Vae multitudini populorum multorum, ut multitudo maris sonantis.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, xvii, 12. (c. 725 B. C.)

<sup>8</sup> There was not that variety of beasts in the ark, as is of beastly natures in the multitude

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Vulgi Mores. (1616)

<sup>9</sup> Nothing is so difficult to weigh as the minds of the multitude. (Nihil tam inaeestimabile est quam animi multitudinis.)

LIVY, Ab Urbe Condita. Bk. xxxi, ch. 34. (c. 25 B. C.) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, ii, 16.

<sup>1</sup> All go free when multitudes offend. (Quidquid multis peccatur inultum est.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. v, l. 260. (c. A. D. 60)

<sup>2</sup> There is often more virtue in one man than in a multitude. (Plus esse in uno saepe quam in turba boni.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. iv, fable 5. (c. 25 B. C.)

<sup>3</sup> To please the multitude is to displease the wise. (τοῖς πολλοῖς ἀρέσκειν τοῖς σοφοῖς ἐστὶν ἀπαρέσκειν.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: Education of Children. Sec. 6B. (c. A. D. 95)

They that study to please the multitude are sure to displease the wise.

JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 136 (1579)

<sup>4</sup> Was ever feather so lightly blown to and fro as this multitude?

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, iv, 8, 57. (1590)

Look, as I blow this feather from my face,
And as the air blows it to me again, . . .
Such is the lightness of you common men.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI, iii, 1, 84. (1591)

<sup>5</sup> The views of the multitude are neither bad nor good. (Neque mala, vel bona, quae vulgus putet.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. vi, sec. 22. (c. A. D. 116)

If by the people you understand the multitude, the hoi polloi, 'tis no matter what they think; . . . their judgment is a mere lottery.

DRYDEN, Of Dramatick Poesie. (1668) οἱ πολλοὶ the many, was the Greek proverbial phrase for the common people, the crowd, the multitude.

Hoi polloi trampled, hustled, and crowded him.

O. HENRY, Brickdust Row. (1907)

<sup>6</sup> The unstable multitude is cleft into opposite courses. (Scinditur incertum studia in contraria volgus.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. ii, l. 39. (19 B. C.)

MUM

<sup>7</sup> If wise you will keep mum. (Si sapis, mussiabis.)

PLAUTUS, Miles Gloriosus, l. 476. (c. 200 B. C.)

Go your way and keep your mouth shut. . . .
You keep still and I'll keep mum. (Tu abi tacitus tuam viam . . . tu taceto, ego mussitabo.)

PLAUTUS, Rudens, l. 1027. (c. 200 B. C.)

Mum is counsel.

JEHAN PALSGRAVE, Acolastus, sig. B2. (1540)

I will say nought but mum, and mum is counsel.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

No more words but mum.

ULPIAN FULWELL, Like Will to Like. (1568)

Seal up your lips, and give no words but mum.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, i, 2, 89. (1590)

Mum's the word.

THOMAS BROWN, A Walk Round the London Coffee Houses. Bk. iii, ch. 3. (a. 1704) COLMAN, Jr., The Battle of Hexham. Act ii, sc. 1.

MURDER

(1789) MULOCK, Agatha's Husband. Ch. 22.

(1852) WHEATLEY, Scarlet Impostor, p. 24.

(1942) etc., etc.

But mum for that.

THOMAS SHERIDAN, The Answer, l. 16. (1718)

Mumm's the word. Dr. Johnson . . . remarks of the word mumm, it may be observed that when it is pronounced it leaves the lips closed.

F. S. COZZENS, Sayings, p. 49. (1870)

MUMCHANCE

<sup>8</sup> He looks like Mumchance, who was hang'd for saying of nothing.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 290. (1670)

Mumchance, One that sits mute. He looks like Mumchance that was hang'd for saying of nothing.

B. E., New Dictionary of the Canting Crew, sig. H5. (c. 1690)

What an unreasonable thing 'tis to make me stand like mum-chance at such a time as this.

UNKNOWN, Terence Made English, p. 150. (1694)

Methinks you look like Mumchance, that was hanged for saying nothing.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

MURDER

<sup>9</sup> Rekke nat to been an homicyde.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Marchantes Tale, l. 750. (c. 1388)

Homicide's the great unweaver. Everything comes to light.

ZELDA POPKIN, No Crime for a Lady, p. 90. (1942)

<sup>10</sup> The guilt of murder is the same, whether the victim be renowned, or whether he be obscure. (Non alio facinore clari homines, alio obscuri necantur.)

CICERO, Pro Milone. Ch. vii, sec. 17. (52 B. C.)

He who slayeth one man is as guilty as if he killed the whole human race. And he who saveth a soul accomplisheth a deed as meritorious as if he had saved all humanity.

MOHAMMED, The Koran, v, 32. (c. 622)

<sup>11</sup> No murder without a motive.

J. J. CONNINGTON, Four Defences, p. 148. (1940)

They got away with murder.

ELIZABETH DALY, Murders in Volume 2, p. 12. (1941)

<sup>12</sup> On Murder Considered as One of the Fine Arts.

THOMAS DE QUINCY. Title of essay. (1827)

Murder leads to theft and theft to deceit. Haven't you read DeQuincy?

BELLA AND SAMUEL SPEWACK, Boy Meets Girl. Act ii, sc. 3. (1935)

<sup>13</sup> He that smiteth a man, so that he die, shall be surely put to death. (Qui percusserit hominem volens occidere, morte moriatur.)

Old Testament: Exodus, xxi:12. (c. 550 B. C.)

He smote them with a great slaughter. (Percussurunt eos plaga magna.)

Apocrypha: I Maccabees, v, 34. (c. 100 B. C.)
Slaughtered, as the saying goes, like oxen in the stall. (τὸ λεγόμενον τοῦτο, "βόες ἐπὶ φάτνῃ" σφαγέμεναι.)

PHILO, De Somniis Bk. ii, sec. 144. (c. A. D. 40)

Philo is quoting Homer's account of the murder of Agamemnon (Odyssey, iv, 535):
ὡς τίς τε κατέκτανε βοῦν ἐπὶ φάτνῃ.

<sup>1</sup> He will kill a man for a messe of mustard.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Three Hundred Epigrams. No. 207. (1562)

<sup>2</sup> Murderers, like artists, must be hung to be appreciated.

THOMAS JOB, Uncle Harry. Act i. (1942)

<sup>3</sup> Even those who do not wish to murder anyone, would like the power to do it. (Qui nolunt occidere quemquam, | posse volunt.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. x, l. 96. (c. A. D. 120)

<sup>4</sup> An intelligent Russian once remarked to us, "Every country has its own constitution; ours is absolutism moderated by assassination."

GEORGE HERBERT, COUNT MUNSTER, Political Sketches of the State of Europe, 1814-1867. p. 19.

Assassination has never changed the history of the world.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, House of Commons, May, 1865, on the assassination of Lincoln.

<sup>5</sup> Murder should not be atoned for by murder, nor blood by blood. (Neque caede caedum et sanguinem sanguine expianda.)

SALLUST, Ad Caesarem Senem. Ch. 3. (c. 46 B. C.)

<sup>6</sup> Killing no Murder.

SILIUS TITUS AND EDWARD SEXBY. Title of pamphlet to prove that the assassination of Oliver Cromwell would be lawful and laudable. (1657)

In this case, killing's no murder. . . . By the laws of society, any one who attempts the life of another has forfeited his own.

FREDERICK MARRYAT, Mr. Midshipman Easy. Ch. 18. (1836)

<sup>7</sup> One to destroy is murder by the law,
And gibbets keep the lifted hand in awe;
To murder thousands takes a specious name,
War's glorious art, and gives immortal fame.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. vii, l. 55. (1728)

One murder made a villain, Millions a hero.

BISHOP BELBY PORTEUS, Death, l. 154. (c. 1800)

<sup>8</sup> If three men journey upon a road, they are found to be two men; the greater number slay the less.

UNKNOWN, Admonitions of an Egyptian Sage, p. 13, l. 2. (c. 2100 B. C.) Leiden Papyrus. Gardiner, tr.

<sup>9</sup> Who killed Cock Robin?

"I," said the Sparrow,

"With my bow and arrow,

I killed Cock Robin."

UNKNOWN, The Death and Burial of Cock Robin. This nursery classic is probably an adaptation of the account of the sparrow's funeral in JOHN SKELTON's Boke of Phyllyp Sparowe (a. 1529), which in turn derives from CATULLUS, Elegies, iii, 3, "Passer mortuus est meae puellae."

II—Murder Will Out

<sup>10</sup> The funeral pyre quencheth not the spirit of a dead man, but after death he shows forth his anger; the dead maketh moan, and the murderer is brought to light. (ὀπτοῦνται δ' ὁ θνήσκων, | ἀναφαίνεται δ' ὁ βλάπτων.)

AESCHYLUS, The Libation-Bearers, l. 324. (458 B. C.)

Murder cannot be hidden. (Murtres ne puet estre celé.)

JEAN DE CHAPELAIN, Le Dû Dou Soucretain, l. 285. (c. 1250) MONTAIGLON, Recueil des Fabliaux, vi, 125. The same idea is expressed in a fragment of the same fable from another manuscript:

Par cest conte savoir poez,
Que nus murtres n'iert ja celez.

For-thi men sais into this tyde,

Is no man that murthir may hide.

UNKNOWN, Cursor Mundi, l. 1084. (c. 1300)

For al mot out, other late or rathe.

CHAUCER (?), House of Fame, iii, 1049. (c. 1383)

Mordre wol out, that see we day by day.

CHAUCER, Nonne Preestes Tale, l. 232. (c. 1386)

Mordre wol out, certein, it wol nat faille.

CHAUCER, Prioresses Tale, l. 124.

Ther may no man hele murdir, that it woll out atte last.

UNKNOWN, Tale of Beryn, l. 2293. (c. 1400)

Moordre wil out, thouth it abide a while.

JOHN LYDGATE, St. Edmund and St. Fremund Bk. ii, l. 225. (1433)

Murder will out.

JOHN LYDGATE, Fall of Princes. Bk. iii, l. 2741.

(c. 1440) MARMION, The Antiquary. Act v

(1641) SHADWELL, The Libertine. Act ii.

(1676) MURPHY, The Way to Keep Him. Act v.

(1760) THOREAU, Autumn, 16 Nov., 1850.

FOOTNER, Murderer's Vanity, p. 211. (1940) etc., etc.

Oho! the captain! now the murder's out.

GEORGE FARQUHAR, The Recruiting Officer. Act iii, sc. 1. (1706)

This truest of stories confirms beyond doubt

That truest of adages—"Murder will out!"

R. H. BARHAM, Ingoldsby Legends: The Hand of Glory. (1842)

Murderers will out.

OGDEN NASH, Why Can't Murders Be Mysterious? (1935)

Other sins only speak. Murder cries out.

ANNE HOCKING, Death Loves a Shining Mark, p. 302. (1943) Quoted.

1 The stones and the beams of one's house will testify against him.

Babylonian Talmud: Taanith, fo. 11a. (c. 450)

2 Blood, though it sleep a time, yet never dies. The gods on murderers fix revengeful eyes.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, The Widdowes Teares. Act v, sc. 4. (1612)

They seldom sleep soundly, who have blood for their bolster.

THOMAS FULLER, The Profane State: The Tyrant. (1642)

3 The water shallow, the stones appear. (Shui chien shih hsien.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 183. (1872)

One buried in the snow must in the end be discovered. (Hsüeh li mai jên, chiu 'hou tzü ming.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2427. (1875)

4 Murderer may pass unpunish'd for a time, But tardy justice will o'ertake the crime.

JOHN DRYDEN, The Cock and the Fox, l. 285. (1700) See also under PUNISHMENT; RETRIBUTION.

5 Nothing comes sooner to light, then that which is long hid.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 82. (c. 1595)

6 The heuens are just, murder cannot be hid.

THOMAS KYD, The Spanish Tragedie. Act ii, sc. 5. (1592)

How easily murder is discovered!

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus, ii, 3, 287. (1593)

Truth will come to light; murder cannot be hid long.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, ii, 2, 86. (1597)

Foul deeds will rise,

Though all the earth o'erwhelm them, to men's eyes.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, i, 2, 257. (1600)

For murder, though it have no tongue, will speak With most miraculous organ.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, ii, 2, 622. (1600)

Nay, guiltiness will speak,

Though tongues were out of use.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, v, 1, 109. (1605)

Man cannot cover what God would reveal.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Lockiel's Warning. (1801)

MUSES

7 Without envy are the doors of the Muses. (Expertes invidentiae musarum fores.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. ii, No. 85. (1523) He gives another form, "Spotless are the doors of the Muses" (Candidae musarum ianuae), and adds that the meaning of the proverb is (as Taverner puts it), that "Learned persons ought freely, gently, and without enuye admitte other unto them that desyre to be taught or informed of them."

MUSHROOM

8 Forever will I link together in sweetest union the Muses and the Graces. (οὐ παύσομαι τὰς Χάριτας | Μούσαις συγκαταμυγνύς, | ἀδίστατον συζυγίαν.)

EURIPIDES, Hercules Furens, l. 673. (c. 420 B. C.)

Narrow is the path that leads to the Muses. (Non datur ad Musas currere lata via.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. iii, eleg. i, l. 13. (c. 22 B. C.)

9 It is that Muse, that can not find a scuse. (Trista quella Musa, che non sa trouar scusa.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 33. (1578)

Naught is that muse that finds no excuse.

UNKNOWN, Book of Meery Riddles. Prov. 123. (1629)

10 The Muses starve in a Cook's Shop.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1758.

11 The Muses love the Morning.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4681. (1732) Quoted by FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1748. Franklin got many of his aphorisms from Fuller.

12 Happy is he whom the Muses love: sweet flows speech from his lips. (ὃ δ' ἄλβιος, ὃν τινα Μούσαι | φίλωνται· γλυκερὴ οἱ ἀπὸ στόματος ῥέει αὐδὴ.)

UNKNOWN, Homeric Hymns: To the Muses, l. 4. (c. 600 B. C.)

MUSHROOM

13 In one night growes a Mushrop. (In vna notte nasce vn fungo.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 30. (1578)

The greatest Mushroompe groweth in one night.

JOHN LYL, Euphuies (Arber), p. 62. (1579)

14 A night growne mushrump.

Such a one as my Lord of Cornwall is.

MARLOWE, Edward II, l. 581. (a. 1593)

I hear them scornfully calling a rising great man an upstart, a mushroom, a thing of yesterday.

NICHOLAS AMHERST, Terrae Filius. No. 13. (1721)

15 He is of the race of the mushroom; he covers himself altogether with his head. (Fungino genere est; capite se totum tegit.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus, l. 851. (c. 194 B. C.) He wears a broad-brimmed petasus, or travelling hat.

He has sprung up like a mushroom. (Subito crevit fungi instar.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 423. (1869) A variation of the proverb as usually given, "Fungino genere est; subito crevit de nihilo" (He is one of the mushroom kind; he has suddenly sprung up out of nothing).

16 He that high growth on cedars did bestowe, Gave also lowly mushrumpes leave to growe.

ROBERT SOUTHWELL, Poems, p. 69. (1595)

MUSIC

I—Music: What It Is

1 Music, the greatest good that mortals know,
And all of heaven we have below.

ADDISON, Song for St. Cecilia's Day, l. 27. (1694)

O Music, Sphere-descended Maid,
Friend of Pleasure, Wisdom's Aid.

WILLIAM COLLINS, The Passions, l. 95. (1750)
Music is well said to be the speech of angels.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Essays: The Opera. (c. 1840)
Music . . . the only cheap and unpunished rapture upon earth.

SYDNEY SMITH, Letter to the Countess of Car- lisle, Aug., 1844.

Music is the poor man's Parnassus.

EMERSON, Poetry and Imagination. (1875)

2 Music is the eye of the ear.

THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 136. (1616)

3 Musick is said to be the rejoysing of the hart:
Musicke comforteth the mynde, and feareth
the enimie.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 70. (1578)

4 Music is nothing else but wild sounds civilized into time and tune.

THOMAS FULLER, The History of the Worthies
of England: Ch. 10, Musicians. (a. 1661)

5 O sweet and healing medicine of troubles. (O laborum | dulce lenimen medicumque.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 32, l. 14. (23 B. C.) Referring to music.

Music is the medicine of a troubled mind. (Musica mentis medicina moestae.)

WALTER HADDON, Lucubrations Poemata:
Musica. (1567)

Musica est mentis medicina moestae, a Roaring Meg [a powerful cannon] against Melancholy, to rear and revive the languishing soul;
. . . it erects the mind and makes it nimble. . .
A most forceful medicine, Jacchinus calls it; . . .
Sweet melody repaireth sad hearts, saith Eobanus Hessus. . . The fear of death, as Censorinus informeth us, musick driveth away. . . It is a sovereign remedy against Despair and Melancholy.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy.
Pt. ii, sec. ii, memb. vi, subs. 3. (1621) The entire sub-section is devoted to praise of music.

Music's the cordial of a troubled breast,
The softest remedy that grief can find.

JOHN OLDHAM, An Ode on St. Cecilia's Day. (a.
1683)

Music's the medicine of the mind.

JOHN LOGAN, Danish Ode. (a. 1788)

6 It is the only sensual pleasure without vice.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, (c. 1776) See HAWKINS,
Johnsoniana.

Music is the only one of the arts that can not be prostituted to a base use.

ELBERT HUBBARD, A Thousand and One Epi- grams, p. 39. (1900)

7 The only universal tongue.

SAMUEL ROGERS, Italy: Bergamo. (1822)

Music is the universal language.

JOHN WILSON, Noctes Ambrosianae. No. 27.
(1826)

8 If music be the food of love, play on.

Give me excess of it, that, surfeiting,

The appetite may sicken, and so die.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, i, 1, 1. (1599) An adaptation of the Latin proverb, "Incitamentum amoris musica" (Music is an incitement to love).

Music, moody food Of us that trade in love.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, ii, 5, 1.
(1606)

Is not music the food of love?

SHERIDAN, The Rivals. Act ii, sc. 1. (1775)

Music is love in search of a word.

SIDNEY LANIER, The Symphony. (1875)

Music is the brandy of the damned.

SHAW, Man and Superman. Act iii. (1903)

9 Music hath caught a higher pace than any virtue that I know. It is the arch-reformer.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 8 Jan., 1842.

II—Music: Apothegms

10 Nothing is well capable of being well set to music that is not nonsense.

JOSEPH ADDISON, The Spectator, 21 March,
1711. Quoted as "an established rule."

For music any words are good enough.

J. R. PLANCHÉ, tr., The Birds of Aristophanes,
i. (1846)

11 Diogenes called an ill musician Cock. "Why?"
saith he. Diogenes answered, "Because when you crow, men use to rise."

FRANCIS BACON, Apothegms. No. 267. (1625)

12 Consort not with a female musician, lest thou be taken in her snares.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus).
ix, 4. (c. 190 B. C.) Oesterley, tr.

As froward as the Musition, who being entreated, will scarce sing sol fa, but not desired, straine aboue Ela.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England: Epis- tle Dedicatory, p. 213. (1580)

He could reach B. in alt.

SWIFT, Apollo, l. 28. (1731) ABSOLUTELY IN
ALT, see under ANGER.

13 Where there's music there can't be mischief.
(Donde hay musica no puede haber cosa mala.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 34. (1615)
Reminiscent of Cardinal Mazarin's famous,
"Ils chantent, ils payeront" (They sing, they will pay), when he heard the Parisian populace singing after the imposition of some new taxes.

1 Music hath charms to soothe a savage breast,
To soften rocks, or bend a knotted oak.

WILLIAM CONGREVE, The Mourning Bride. Act I, sc. 1, l. 1. (1697)

Music's force can tame the furious beast.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Solomon, ii, 67. (a. 1718)

"Music hath charms to soothe the savage beast,"
And therefore proper at a sheriff's feast.

JAMES BRAMSTON, The Man of Taste. (1733) It was Bramston's misquotation—or perhaps deliberate twisting of the line—which was afterwards most widely quoted.

With him music certainly seemed to have charms to soothe the savage breast.

JONATHAN STAGG, Turn of the Table, p. 27. (1940) See also ORPHEUS.

2 Rabelais' unpleasant 'quarter' [mauvais quart d'heure] is by our more picturesque people called facing the music.

JAMES FENIMORE COOPER, as quoted by DE VERE, Americanisms, p. 601. (a. 1851)

A strong determination to face the music is everywhere manifested.

The Worcester (Mass.) Spy, 22 Sept., 1857.

I will not refer to the vulgar colloquialism that I was afraid to face the music.

CECIL RHODES, in Westminster Gazette, 6 Jan., 1897, p. 5/1.

I suppose she just felt she couldn't face the music.

AGATHA CHRISTIE, The Tuesday Club Murders. Ch. 13. (1933)

3 You make as good music as a wheelbarrow.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5938. (1732)

4 Ride a cock-horse to Banbury cross,
To see an old lady upon a white horse,
Rings on her fingers and bells on her toes,
And so she makes music wherever she goes.

J. O. HALLIWELL, Nursery Rhymes of England, p. 67. (1842)

5 Music helps not the tooth-ache.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 534 (1640) Cited by Ray and Fuller

6 Why should the devil have all the good tunes?

ROWLAND HILL, Sermons (a. 1833) See BROOME, Life, p. 93

7 When the morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy. (Cum laudarent simul astra matutina. et iubilarent omnes filii Dei.)

Old Testament: Job, xxxviii, 7. (c. 350 B.C.)

The celestial music. (La musique céleste.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 22. (1580)

I had rather hear you solicit that
Than music from the spheres.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, iii, 1, 122. (1599)

The music of the spheres! List, my Marina

SHAKESPEARE, Pericles, v, 1, 231. (1608)

And left so free mine ears,

That I might hear the music of the spheres.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, The Teares of Peace. (1609)

There is a musick where ever there is a harmony, order, or proportion: and thus far we may maintain the musick of the Sphæars.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. ii, sec. 9. (1643)

8 Instruments sound sweetest when they be touched softest.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 473. (1580)

Great strokes make not sweet music.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 27. (1640)

The greatest strokes make not the best music.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 12. (1670) The French say, "C'est le ton qui fait la musique" (It is the tone that makes the music).

It is often said that melody can be heard farther than noise, that the finest melody farther than the coarsest.

H. D. THOREAU, Autumn, 20 Nov., 1851.

9 Hidden music counts for nothing. (Occultae musicae nullum esse respectus.)

NERO, when arranging to make his debut as a singer. (c. A.D. 58) See under TALENT.

10 Music and women I cannot but give way to, whatever my business is.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 9 March, 1666.

11 Education in music is most sovereign, because more than anything else rhythm and harmony find their way into the secret places of the soul. (εἰς τὰ ἐντὸς ψυχῆς ὁ ρυθμὸς καὶ ἁρμονία.)

PLATO, The Republic. Bk. iii, ch. 12, sec. 401D. (c. 375 B.C.) Plato adds, "The man who has music in his soul will be in love with the loveliest."

Where gripping grefes the hart would wounde,

And dolefulle dumps the mynde oppresse,

There musicke with her silver sound

With spede is wont to send redresse:

Of trobled mynds, in every sore,

Swete musicke hathe a salve in store

RICHARD EDWARDS, A Song to the Lute in Musike. (c. 1560) See PERCY, Reliques. Ser i, Bk. ii, No. 5. "This song," Percy comments, "is by Shakespeare made the subject of some pleasant ridicule in his Romeo and Juliet, iv, 5, 128" (1595). Shakespeare quotes the first three lines of the song and then continues:

Peter: Why 'music with her silver sound'?

First Musician: Marry, sir, because silver bath a sweet sound.

Second Musician: 'Silver sound'. because musicians sound for silver

12 Excuse the rough music of tongs and hammer
UNKNOWN, British Apollo. No. 56, p. 3. (1708)
A number of boys attended with shovels, playing the rough music.

UNKNOWN, Annual Register: Chron. 74. (1770)
Saucepans, frying-pans, poker and tongs, marrow-bones and cleavers, bull horns, etc., beaten upon and sounded in ludicrous processions.

FRANCIS GROSE, A Classical Dictionary of the Vulgar Tongue: Rough Music. (1796)

III—Music: Deaf to the Lyre

<sup>1</sup> The jackdaw knows nothing of music. (Nil cum fidibus graculo.)

AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticae: Praefatio.

Sec. 19. (c. A. D. 150) Quoted as an old saying. Like the ass, deaf to the lyre. (ὄνος λύρας.)

BOETHIUS, Consolatio Philosophiae. Bk. i, ch. 4. (c. A. D. 520)

The Jaye is unmete for a fyddell. (Nihil graculo cum fidibus.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. iv, No. 37

(1508) TAVERNER, tr., fo. 55. (1550) Taverner says that the proverb means that since the jay is a chattering bird it has no business where there is music. He adds, "Aulus Gellius applyeth this prouerbe verye featlye to these grosse and rude men, haters of all humanitie and good letters, which be wonte to skorne all good lernynge."

<sup>2</sup> The lute which affords sweet music to princes is not appreciated by weavers.

Babylonian Talmud: Joma, fo. 20 b. (c. 450)

I perceive you delight not in music.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona, iv, 2, 66. [1594]

The man that hath no music in himself, Nor is not moved with concord of sweet sounds, Is fit for treasons, stratagems and spoils.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, v, 1, 83. (1594) Often misquoted "music in his soul."

Music sweeps by me like a messenger

Carrying a message that is not for me.

GEORGE ELIOT, The Spanish Gypsy. Bk. iii. (1868)

MUST

<sup>3</sup> Must is a bitter herb. (Muss ist ein bitter Kraut.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 338. (1856) A German proverb. The Germans also say, "Muss ist eine harte Nuss" (Must is a hard nut), the first phrase of the English proverb, "Must is a hard nut, but it has a sweet kernel."

<sup>4</sup> Is must a word to be used to princes?

QUEEN ELIZABETH. (c. 1600) See LINGARD, History of England, vi, 310.

Must is for kings,

And low obedience for underlings.

DEKKER AND CHETTEL, Patient Grissil. Act iv, sc. 2. (1603)

Must is for a king.

THOMAS FULLER, The Appeal of Injured Innocence (1840), p. 354. (1659)

Must is a king's word.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 250. (1678)

Must is for the king.

JOHN BUNYAN, Come and Welcome. (1681)

Must! why, colonel, Must's for the king.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

With Must there is no arguing.

BERNARD SHAW, The Revolutionist's Handbook. Sec. 10. (1903)

<sup>5</sup> We do what we must, and call it by the best names.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Considerations by the Way. (1860) See also NECESSITY.

<sup>6</sup> In Things that must be, it is good to be resolute.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2830. (1732)

What must be must be.

WARREN, Ten Thousand a Year. Ch. 1. (1841)

Shall remain!

<sup>7</sup> Hear you this Triton of the minnows? mark you

His absolute "shall"?

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus, iii, 1, 88. (1607)

Come, mighty Must! Inevitable Shall!

In thee I trust.

W. S. GILBERT, Princess Ida. Act ii. (1884)

<sup>8</sup> For do we must what force will have us do.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, iii, 3, 207. (1595)

Whither I must, I must.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, ii, 3, 109. (1597)

Well, if we must we must.

SHERIDAN, The Critic. Act. ii, sc. 2. (1779)

MUSTARD

<sup>9</sup> For fear they were not the proper mustard. he had that dog man sue him in court.

ANDY ADAMS, Log of a Cowboy, p. 237. (1903) I'm not headlined in the bills, but I'm the mustard in the salad dressing, just the same.

O. HENRY, Cabbages and Kings, p. 101. (1903) Why don't you invite him if he's so much to the mustard?

O. HENRY, The Trimmed Lamp, p. 217. (1907) Kid each other, you cheap skates, Tell each other you're all to the mustard.

CARL SANDBURG, Slabs of the Sunburnt West, p. 7. (1922)

<sup>10</sup> He looked around and found a proposition that exactly cut the mustard.

O. HENRY, Heart of the West, p. 163. (1904)

"She cut the mustard," he said, "all right."

O. HENRY, Roads of Destiny, p. 99. (1909)

<sup>11</sup> It is even as good as Mustard after dinner (Moustarde apres disner.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 10. (1595)

After meat comes mustard. When there is no more use for it.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 119. (1670)

The proverb, After meat comes mustard.

PETER MOTTEUX, Rabelais. Bk. v, ch. 27. (1694)

An interpolation by Motteux, which he uses also in his translation of Don Quixote, pt. i, bk. iii, ch. 8. (1712) The Germans say, "Senf nach der Tafel," the Dutch, "Mostaard na den Maaltijd" (Mustard after the meal); the French, "Après manger assez cuilliers" (Plenty of spoons after eating); the Bengalis, "They fetch the salt after the rice is eaten."

After Meat comes Mustard.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 169. (1709) "I have seen this actually verify'd at many Tables," says Dykes, "through the Negligence and Oversight of thoughtless Servants. When the Beef was all eaten up, in came the Mustard. When the Guests had done sucking their Thumbs, the Napkins were brought in to wipe their Fingers."

<sup>1</sup> His wit's as thick as Tewksbury mustard.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, ii, 4, 262. (1598)

He looks as if he had lived on Tewkesbury mustard. Spoken of such who always have a sad, severe, and tetrick countenance.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies, i, 353. (1662)

<sup>2</sup> Hee is very snappish, for if you meddle with him, he will strait take you by the nose.

UNKNOWN, A Strange Metamorphosis of Man, sig. D8. (1634) Referring to mustard.

Your mustard is very uncivil. . . . it takes me by the nose, egad.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

MUSTER

<sup>3</sup> The latter verse is neither true nor pleasant. and the first verse may pass the musters.

GEORGE GASCOIGNE, The Making of Verse. (1575) To undergo muster or review without censure.

Such a ship . . . may well pass muster for a man of warre.

CAPTAIN JOHN SMITH, A Sea Grammar. Ch. 12. (1627)

She may pass muster well enough.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

Enough good looks to make her pass muster.

THACKERAY, Newcomes. Vol. ii, p. 106. (1855)

MUTE

<sup>4</sup> Damme, sir, if he wasn't as mute as a poker.

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 28. (1844)

They one and all . . . became suddenly as mute as mice.

BESANT AND RICE, The Chaplain of the Fleet. Bk. i, ch. 5. (1881)

<sup>5</sup> You can be secret?—Mute as a mackrel.

SAMUEL FOOTE, The Minor. Act. i. (1760)

We were as mute as mackerel.

UNKNOWN, Metropolis, iii, 154. (1819)

<sup>6</sup> For selden get a domb man londe,
Take that proverbe, and understonde.

GOWER, Confessio Amantis, vi, 318. (c. 1390)

The prouerbe is "the domb man no lond getith."

HOCCEVE, La Male Regle, l. 433. (1406)

Dumb folks get no lands.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 83. (1670)

A dumb Man never gets Land.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 84. (1732)

<sup>7</sup> Dom as a stoon, without stering.

GUILLAUME DE LORRIS, Roman de la Rose (c. 1240) Chaucer (?), tr., l. 2409.

As domb as a dore.

LANGLAND, Piers the Plowman, A, xi, 94. (1362)

And, also domb as any stoon,

Thou sittest at another boke.

CHAUCER (?), House of Fame, ii, 656. (c. 1383)

For trewely, confort ne mirthe is noon

To ryde by the weye domb as a stoon.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 775. (c. 1386)

Dumb as a drum with a hole in it.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers, Ch. 25. (1837)

<sup>8</sup> More mute than a statue. (Statua taciturnius.)

HORACE, Epistles Bk. ii, No. ii, l. 83. (20 B.C.)

As mute as a statue. (ἀνδριάντος ἀφωνότερος.)

SYNESIUS, Dion. Sec. 55D. (c. 410)

Be silent, mute, Mute as a statue.

MIDDLETON AND ROWLEY, The Changeling. Act iii, sc. 3. (1621)

<sup>9</sup> Muter than a fish. (Mutis quoque piscibus.)

HORACE, Odes. (23 B.C.) As quoted by

ERASMUS, Adagia, i, v, 29.

I'll be more mute than a fish. (πολὺ ἀφωνότερος ἔσομαι τῶν ἰχθύων.)

LUCIAN, The Dream. Sec. I. (c. A.D. 170) The Greeks had a number of similar proverbial phrases: "Mute as a frog from Seriphia," which, when transported to Scyrus, refused to croak (DIOGENIANUS, i, 49); "He gave not a grunt," credited to ARISTOPHANES; "As close-mouthed as a saucepan" (συστομώτερος σκάφης). See SUIDAS, Lexicon, xiii, 3.

Dowmbe as the flysh.

BURGH AND LYDGATE, Secrees. St. 330. (c. 1450)

Muter than a fish. (Magis mutus quam pisces.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. v, No. 29. (1508)

A number of animals were used in similar comparisons. HORACE, Satires, ii, 3, 219, speaks of "Muta agna" (The dumb lamb); STATIUS, Thebais, iii, 334, of "Armenta" (Dumb cattle).

More mute than fishes. (Plus mutz que poissons.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 24. (1545)

The modern form is, "Muet comme un poisson."

What, mute?—Ay, as fishes.

BEN JONSON, Poetaster. Act. iv, sc. I. (1601)

She shall be as mute as a fish.

JOHN MELTON, Astrologaster, p. 38. (1620)

Meek as a lamb, mute as a fish.

JOHN BUNYAN, Building of the House of God. Ch. 9. (1688)

Thou art both as drunk and as mute as a fish.

WILLIAM CONGREVE, The Way of the World. Act iv, sc. 9. (1704)

<sup>10</sup> They must be as muet as a stone.

JOHN LYDGATE, Reson and Sensuallyte, l. 6267 (c. 1407)

A tunge I haue, but wordys none,

But stonde mut as any stone.

UNKNOWN, Compleynte. (c. 1440) In Temple of Glass, p. 59.

Be thou eke as mewet as a mayde.

GEORGE GASCOIGNE, The Steele Glas (Arber), p. 67. (1576)

MUTTON

<sup>1</sup>
Let us return to the sheep. (Revenons à ces moutons.)

PIERRE BLANCHET, La Farce de Maistre Pierre Patelin. Sc. 19, l. 1291. (c. 1460) In the play, a cloth-dealer prosecutes a shepherd for stealing some of his sheep, and employs the advocate Patelin to represent him, but suddenly, while he is on the witness-stand in the midst of his evidence, he perceives that Patelin is wearing a suit made from some cloth which had also been stolen from him. This so confuses him that his mind wanders from the stolen sheep to the stolen cloth, and the judge tries to keep him to his story by saying repeatedly, "Revenons à ces moutons." The phrase became proverbial, as "Revenons à nos moutons."

Returning to our muttons. (Retournant à nos moutons.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 1. (1534)
He would return to his muttons. (Retournoit à ses moutons.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 11.
Let us return to our muttons. (Retournons à nos moutons.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 34. (1545)
I return to my barrel. (À mon tonneau ie retourne.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, Prologue. (1545)
There is a Latin proverb, "Redire ad nucs" (To return to the nuts), meaning to return to childish amusements. See under NUT.

But let us return to our muttons.

THACKERAY, The Fine Arts. Lect. ii. (1838)
"Mouton" is French for both sheep and mutton, and British wags transformed the phrase into the supposedly humorous "Let us stick to our muttons," i. e. the subject.

To return to my mutton, as the Mounseers have it.

F. E. SMEDLEY, Frank Fairleigh. Ch. 40. (1850)
Let us revenue to our lamb chops.

O. HENRY, What You Want. (1910)
But let us get away from our mutton.

O. HENRY, The Unprofitable Servant. (1911)
Let's get back to our knitting.

E. S. GARDNER, Case of the Empty Tin, p. 130. (1941)

Let's get back to our flock of sheep, shall we?
ANNE HOCKING, Death Loves a Shining Mark, p. 162. (1943)

<sup>2</sup>
One shoulder of mutton draws down another.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Appetit. (1611)
RAY, English Proverbs, p. 128. (1670)

Col.: I think the more I eat the hungrier I am.
Spark.: Why, colonel, they say, one shoulder of mutton drives down another.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)
JANE AUSTEN, Sense and Sensibility. Pt. ii, ch. 3. (1811) LORD LYTTON, Pelham. Ch. 25. (1828) etc., etc.

<sup>3</sup>
Flesh of a mutton is food for a glutton.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Mouton. (1611)

Flesh of mutton is cheere of glutton.

JOHN WODROEPHE, The Spared Houres of a Souldier on His Travels, p. 514. (1623)

Mutton is meat for a glutton.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 42. (1666)

<sup>4</sup>
Of all Birds give me Mutton.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No.3695.(1732)
A friendly swarry, consisting of a boiled leg of mutton with the usual trimmings.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 37. (1837)
There are wholesale eaters who can devour a leg of mutton and trimmings at a sitting.

THOMAS HOOD, Review of Arthur Coningsby (1838)

<sup>5</sup>
Mutton is sweet, and gars folk die e'er they be sick. That is, makes people steal sheep and so be hang'd.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 250.(1721)

<sup>6</sup>
When the shoulder of mutton is going. 'tis good to take a slice.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 350. (1678)
When the Mutton's going, it's good to take a Slice.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No.5598.(1732)

<sup>7</sup>
He wyll lowys scheppis flesche,
That wettyth his bred in woll.

UNKNOWN, The Good Wyfe Wold a Pylgrimage, l. 71. (c. 1460)

He loveth well moton, that weteth his bred in woll.—Optat eius carnem, tangens in vellere panem.

HILIS, Commonplace-Book, p. 131. (c. 1530)
He loueth well sheeps flesh, that wets his bred in the wul.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)
He loves mutton well that dips his bread in the wool.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 123. (1670)
He loves mutton well that can dine upon the wool.

THOMAS D'URFEY, The Comical History of Don Quixote. Pt. iii, act. i. (1696)

He lov'd mutton well, that lick'd where the ewe lay. Spoken to those who will sip the bottom of a glass where good liquor was, or scrape a plate after good meat.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 125.(1721)
He loves Mutton well, that eats the Wool.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No.1979.(1732)
They liked mutton weel that licket where the yowe lay.

WALTER SCOTT, The Antiquary. Ch. 44. (1816)

<sup>8</sup>
As holsome for a man is a woman's corse,
As a shoulder of mutton for a sick horse.

UNKNOWN, Scholehouse of Women, l.95.(1541)
Counsel to him is as good as a shoulder of mutton to a sick horse.

BEN JONSON, Every Man in His Humour. Act. ii, sc. 1. (1598)

As fit for him as a shoulder of mutton for a sick horse.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 4. (1639)

MYSTERY

<sup>1</sup> An Archimedean problem. (πρόβλημα 'Αρχιμήδειον.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. xii, epis. 4. (46 B. C.)
A problem for a Philadelphia lawyer.

<sup>2</sup> Mysteries are not necessarily miracles. (Geheimnisse sind noch keine Wunder.)

GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa. (1819)

<sup>3</sup> Half-Mast Murder. A satisfactory whodunit.

DONALD GORDON, American News of Books, July, 1930. Settling the question as to who coined the word to describe a detective story.

The hell! Whodunit?

JOHN BENTLEY, Mr. Marlow Stops for Brandy, p. 4. (1940)

In a whodunit it's swell.

ANTHONY BOUCHER, The Case of the Seven Sneezes, p. 204. (1942)

<sup>4</sup> Sacred mysteries. (Arcana sacra.)

TACITUS, Germania. Sec. 18. (A. D. 98) The proverbial phrase is usually quoted as "Arcana celestia" (Heavenly mysteries). There is also "Arcana imperii" (Mysteries of empire).

Holie misteries.

ASCHAM, The Scholemaster, i, 82. (a. 1568)

Divine mystery.

RICHARD HOOKER, Ecclesiastical Politie. Bk. v, ch. 52, sec. 1. (1597)

Sacred mysteries.

SIR DAVID BREWSTER, Life of Sir Isaac Newton. Vol. ii, ch. 24. (1855)

<sup>5</sup> I cannot . . . make of euery meane matter a mystery by whispering it in the eare.

WILLIAM TIRWHYTT, tr., Letters of M. de Balzac. Bk. iii, ch. 10. (a. 1618)

Making a mystery of nothing.

ARCHIBALD LOVELL, tr., Travels into the Levant. Ch. 1. (1687)

He made no mysteries, but told all that he was asked to tell.

HARRIET MARTINEAU, The Farrers. Ch. 3. (1834)

<sup>6</sup> Mysteries are born of Mysteries.

SIR SAMUEL TUKE, The Adventures of Five Hours. Act v, sc. 3. (1663)

All things being are in mystery; we expound mysteries by mysteries.

M. F. TUPPER, Proverbial Philosophy: Of Mystery. (1839)

<sup>7</sup> Mystery is the wisdom of blockheads.

HORACE WALPOLE, Letter to Horace Mann, 2 Jan., 1761.

N

NAIL

<sup>8</sup> A nail is driven out by a nail, as the proverb goes. (ἡλφ γὰρ ὁ ἥλος, ὥσπερ ἡ παροιμία.)

ARISTOTLE, Politics. Bk. v, ch. 9, sec. 7. (c. 330 B. C.) ERASMUS, Adagia, i, ii, 4, gives the Latin, "Clavum clavo pellere," and adds a variant, "Peg is driven out by peg" (Paxillum paxillo pepulisti), adding, "that is to say, One evil is driven away by another evil (Malum alio malo depulisti)." JULIUS POLLUX, bk. ix, combines the two proverbs into one, "By nail nail, by peg peg" (ἡλφ τὸν ἥλον, πασσάλῳ τὸν πάσσαλον), which Erasmus Latins, "Clavo clavum, paxillo paxillum."

Driving out one nail with another, as the saying goes. (ἡλφ, φασίν, ἐκκρούεις τὸν ἥλον.)

LUCIAN, Philopseudes. Sec. 9. (c. A. D. 180) See also SYNESIUS, Dion, sec. 186 A. (c. A. D. 400)

Worldly philosophers are wont to drive out an old passion by a new one, as you drive out an old nail by hammering in another. (Philosophi saeculi solent amorem veterem amore novo quasi clavum clavo expellere.)

ST. JEROME, Epistles: To Rusticus. Epis. cxxv, sec. 14. (A. D. 411)

Al so as on neil driueth ut then otherne.

UNKNOWN, Ancren Riwle, p. 404. (c. 1200)

Thanne the kyng drof out on nayle with another.
JOHN DE TREVISA, tr., Polychronicon, vii, 25. (1387)

A nail is driven out by another nail, habit is overcome by habit. (Clavus clavo pellitur, consuetudo consuetudine vincitur.)

ERASMUS, Colloquia: Diluculum. (1524)

One nayle driueth out an other.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs, p. 144. (1546) Cited by Ray, Fuller, Hazlitt, Bohn, and practically all other collectors of proverbs.

One danger is expelled by an other, As one nayle is driven out by an other.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iv, p. 144. (1574) Young, tr.

One nayle is driuen out with an other. (Si puol cacciar chiodo con chiodo.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 34. (1578) The Italians have two other forms, "Chiodo con chiodo da se si cava," and "Un chiodo caccia l'altro," which the French duplicate with "Un clou chasse l'autre." The German form is, "Ein Keil treibt den andern"; the Spanish, "Un clavo saca otro."

Even as one heat another heat expels,

Or as one nail by strength drives out another,
So the remembrance of my former love

Is by a newer object quite forgotten.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona, ii, 4, 192. (1594) ONE LOVE DRIVES OUT ANOTHER, see under LOVE.

One fire drives out one fire; one nail, one nail.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus, iv, 7, 54. (1607) See also under FIRE.

One nail drives out another, at least!

OWEN MEREDITH (EDWARD BULWER-LYTTON),
The Portrail. (a. 1891)

1 Let hym . . . dryve not the nayle to the head.

JOHN DAUS, tr., Sleidanes Commentaries, fo. 278b. (1560) To push a matter to a conclusion.

He will be sure to driue the nailes of his extortions to the head.

SAMUEL HIERON, Works, i, 536. (1604)

Drive the nail to the head.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 3. (1639)

One knock after another, drives the naile home to the head.

JOHN TRAPP, Commentary on Deuteronomy, ix, 7. (1650)

2 That's the nail we've got to find the hammer for.

BERNARD DOUGALL, The Singing Corpse, p. 15. (1943)

3 You can't . . . drive a nail of wax.

EDWARD FITZGERALD, Polonius, p. 39. (1852)

4 He drove that nail . . . which would go best.

THOMAS FULLER, Church-History of Britain. Bk. ii, sec. 4. (1655)

Hence politicians, you suggest,

Should drive the nail that goes the best.

JOHN GAY, Fables, Ser. ii, fab. 9. l. 14. (1738)

You must drive a nail where it'll go.

THOMAS HUGHES, Tom Brown's School Days. Pt. ii, ch. 2. (1857)

5 For sparinge of a litel cost

Ful ofte time a man hath lost

The large cote for the hod [hood].

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. v, l. 4785. (c. 1390)

The Frenchmen have a military proverb: "The loss of a nail, the loss of an army." The want of a nail loseth the shoe, the loss of a shoe troubles the horse, the horse endangereth the rider, the rider breaking his rank molests the company so far as to hazard the whole army.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons (1861), ii, 359. (1629)

For want of a nail the shoe is lost, for want of a shoe the horse is lost, for want of a horse the rider is lost.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 501. (1640) The Spanish form is, "Por un punto se pierde un zapato" (For want of a nail a shoe is lost); the modern Greek, διὰ τὸ χᾶρει τὸ πέλδον (For the nail he loses the shoe). A proverb in many languages. Expanded into a story, it has found a place in the Household Tales of the Brothers Grimm. Cited by FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1752, SMILES, Duty, p. 270, and many others. Additional lines are sometimes given, for example, "For want of a rider the battle was lost, For want of a battle the kingdom was lost, And all for want of a horseshoe-nail."

6 A few familiar facts . . . have been suffered to pass current so long that it is time they should be nailed to the counter.

O. W. HOLMES, Medical Essays. (1842) In Works (1891), ix, 67. A proverbial phrase derived from the habit small shopkeepers had of nailing to the counter any counterfeit coins which had been passed upon them. "To nail to the counter" is to expose a counterfeit or sham for all men to see.

7 To clinch the Nail.

WILLIAM HUGHES, The Man of Sin. Bk. ii, ch. 3, p. 53. (1677)

It drives like a Nail, we want nothing now but a Parson, to clinch it.

VANBRUGH AND CIBBER, The Provok'd Husband. Act iv, sc. i. (1728)

Drive not a second Nail, till the first be clinched.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1334. (1732)

8 He has gone off at the nail . . . means that he has gone out of all bounds of reason.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 173. (1721)

Ye're terrified, and think I'm going off at the nail.

JOHN GALT, Sir Andrew Wylie. Ch. 47. (1822)

9 Tell me haue you a minde to anie thing in the Doctors Booke! speake the word, and I will help you to it vpon the naile.

THOMAS NASHE, Have With You to Saffron-Walden. (1596) Works (Grosart), iii, 59.

Upon the spot, at once.

[He] paid the whole debt downe right on the naile.

HOLLAND, tr., Livy. Bk. vi, ch. 14, sec. 225. (1600)

That could not pay
One single halfpenny downe vpon the naile.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, Pleasant Dialogues. (1637)

We want our money on the nail.

SWIFT, Run of Bankers. (1720)

I'll pay you down upon the nail.

JOHN GAY, Polly. Act i. (1729)

We should drink brown ale,

And pay the reckoning on the nail.

SALA, Twice Round the Clock: 6 A. M. (1859)

10 You've hit it. (Tetigisti acu.)

PLAUTUS, Rudens, l. 1306. (c. 200 B. C.) Sometimes quoted as "Acu rem tangere."

He hyt the nayle on the hede.

JOHN SKELTON, Colyn Cloute, l. 33. (1501)

Thou hittest the nayle on the head.

JOHN STANBRIDGE, Vulgaria, sig. B5. (c. 1520)

HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 11. (1546)

You hit the naile on the head (as the saying is).

WILLIAM CUNNINGHAM, The Cosmographical Glasse, p. 19. (1559)

Certis you haue hit the naile on the head. (Certo voi hauete colto il chiodo su la testa.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 38. (1578)

Every man cannot hit the nail on the head.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 321. (1605) HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 8. (1659)

You have hit the nail on the head.

SIR THOMAS URQUHART, tr., Rabelais. Bk. iii, ch. 34. (1653) This is Urquhart's translation of Rabelais' "C'est bien rentré de treuffles noires." It is the usual modern form, too frequently used to need further citation.

No hand so steady as always to hit the nail on the head.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England: Lincolnshire, p. 305. (1662)

He has hit the right nail on the head.

MARRYAT, Peter Simple. Ch. 12. (1834)

You have hit the right nail on the head.

DICKENS, Oliver Twist. Ch. 42. (1838)

He [the poet] will hit the nail on the head, and we shall not know the shape of his hammer.

H. D. THOREAU, A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers: Friday. (1849)

Mr. Gladstone showed in argument a knack of hitting the nail not quite on the head.

JAMES BRYCE, Studies in Contemporary Biography, p. 461. (1903)

He hits the nail on the head pretty often.

P. A. TAYLOR, Six Iron Spiders, p. 191. (1942)

One can't always hit the nail on the head.

JOHN RHODE, Dead of the Night, p. 96. (1942)

<sup>1</sup> A Bungler thus, who scarce the Nail can hit,
With driving wrong, will make the Pannel split.

SWIFT, To Mr. Gay, l. 131. (1731)

<sup>2</sup> Care to our coffin adds a nail no doubt.

JOHN WOLCOT, Works (1795), ii, 100. (1789)

Every minute he lies here is a nail in his coffin.

WALTER SCOTT, Redgauntlet. Ch. 16. (1824)

A dram which . . . drives nails into the victim's coffin, according to the expressive vulgar saying.

A. FOUBLANQUE, England Under Seven Administrations, iii, 321. (1836)

Frederick William IV renounced all his sovereign rights over Neuchâtel. . . . But the incident preyed deeply on the sensitive spirit of the King. It drove a nail into his coffin.

CHARLES LOWE, Prince Bismarck, iii, 51. (1885)

To do anything that tends to shorten life is "to drive a nail into one's coffin." When the smoking of cigarettes started to become general in the United States (c. 1900), the common name for them was "coffin nails," because of their supposed deleterious effects on health.

II—Nail: Fingernail

<sup>3</sup> Clip nails on Tuesday, beards on Wednesday, hair on Friday. (Ungues Mercurio, barbam Iove, Cypride crines.)

AUSONIUS, Eclogues. No. xxvi, l. 1. (c.A. D. 390)

Quoting an old saying.

He will not . . . paire his nailes while Munday, to be fortunat in his loue.

THOMAS LODGE, Wit's Miserie, p. 12. (1596)

You may neuer pare your nailes vpon a Friday.

BARTEN HOLYDAY, Technogamia. Act. ii, sc. 6. (1618)

What a cursed wretch was I to pare my nails to-day! a Friday too; I looked for some mischief.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, Anything for a Quiet Life. Act iv, sc. 2. (c. 1626)

Thou'rt . . . as melancholic as if thou hadst . . . pared thy nails on a Sunday.

CONGREVE, Love for Love. Act iii, sc. 9. (1695)

Cut them on Monday, you cut them for health;
Cut them on Tuesday, you cut them for wealth;
Cut them on Wednesday, you cut them for news;
Cut them on Thursday, a new pair of shoes;
Cut them on Friday, you cut them for sorrow,
Cut them on Saturday, see your true-love to-morrow;

Cut them on Sunday, the devil will be with you all the week.

ROBERT FORBY, The Vocabulary of East Anglia, p. 411. (1830)

A man had better ne'er been born

As have his nails on a Sunday shorn.

MICHAEL DENHAM, Proverbs, p. 12. (1846)

Cut your nails on a Sunday, you cut them for evil,

For all the next week you'll be ruled by the devil.

UNKNOWN, The Athenaeum, 5 Feb., 1848. Both of these are evidently attempts to improve the last line as given by Forby above.

HENDERSON, Folk-Lore of the Northern Counties, p. 18, gives the first five lines of the jingle as Forby does, and then goes on:

Cut them on Saturday, a present to-morrow;

But he that on Sunday cuts his horn,

Better that he had never been born.

<sup>4</sup> The see doth ebbe and flowe,
And varyeth not a nayle.

JOHN BALE, Three Lawes, l. 261. (1538)

The position . . . which we maintaine . . . and from which we will not depart the breadth of one naile.

GEORGE GILLESPIE, English-Popish Ceremonies, ii, i, 9. (1637)

He may not swerve a nailes breadth.

S. DU VERGER, tr., Admirable Events: To the Reader. (1639) HAIR'S BREADTH, see HAIR.

<sup>5</sup> A nail in the wound. (Unguis in ulcere.)

CICERO, De Domo Sua. Ch. 5, sec. 12. (57 B. C.)

<sup>6</sup> I beseech him that high sits,

Thy wife's ten commandments may search thy five wits.

JOHN HEYWOOD, The Four PP. (c. 1540) See

HAZLITT, Old English Plays, i, 381. The ten finger-nails, especially of a woman.

Her ten commandments She fastens on hys face.

UNKNOWN, Philip and Mary. (c. 1560) See

WRIGHT, Political Songs of England, p. 202.

Could I come near your beauty with my nails,

I 'ld set my ten commandments in your face.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, i, 3, 144. (1590)

Your harpy that set his ten commandments upon my back.

DEKKER AND WEBSTER, Westward Ho! Act v, sc. 3. (1607)

I'll set my ten commandments in the face o' the first loon that lays a finger on him.

WALTER SCOTT, Waverley. Ch. 30. (1814)

Don't put your tongue into your cheek at me or I'll write the ten commandments in your face.

MARRYAT, The King's Own. Ch. 40. (1830)

1

As he wrought his verse he would often scratch his head and gnaw his nails to the quick. (In versu faciendo saepe caput scaberet, vivos et roderet unguis.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, No. x, l. 70. (35 B. C.)

No biting of nails to the quick. (Nec demorsos sapit unguis.)

PERSIUS, Satires. No. i, l. 106. (c. A. D. 58)

Quoted by QUINTILIAN, x, iii, 21.

You had as good eat your nails.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs, p. 241. (1678)

Say a word more, and you had as good eat your nails.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

2

To have yellow speckles on the nailes of one's hand a great signe of death.

JOHN MELTON, Astrologaster, p. 45. (1620)

White specks presage our felicity, blew ones our misfortunes.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Pseudodoxia Epidemica.

Bk. v, ch. 23. (1646)

A white speck upon the nails made them as sure of a gift, as if they had it already in their pockets.

UNKNOWN, The Connoisseur. No. 59. (1755)

White specks are commonly called "gifts."

A gift, a friend, a foe.

A lover to come, a journey to go.

ANNE E. BAKER, Glossary of Northamptonshire

Words and Phrases: Gifts. This is what children say, beginning with the thumb and ending with the little finger, as they count the specks on the nails. Baker also notes,

A gift on the thumb is sure to come,

A gift on the finger is sure to linger.

3

The task is always hardest for those whose clay has reached the stage where they must use the finger-nail. (τὸ ἔργον οἷς ἂν εἰς δυνῆα ὁ πηλὸς ἀφίκηται.)

POLYCLEITUS, Fragment. (c. 450 B. C.) As quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 86A and 636C. Polycleitus was a Greek sculptor contemporary with Phidias, and the reference is to the finishing of a piece of statuary. It was the custom of sculptors to give the final touches with the finger-nail, or perhaps to pass the finger-nail over the marble in order to test the smoothness of its joint.

A man polished to the nail. (Ad unguem factus homo.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 5, l. 32. (35 B. C.)

"Ad unguem," from the Greek εἰς δυνῆα, meaning to a hair, exactly, perfectly, became a proverb, and is cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, v, 91. In his De Arte Poetica, l. 294. Horace repeats the image, "Praesectum deciens non castigavit ad unguem" (A poem refined ten times over to the test of the close-cut nail).

PERSIUS, Satires, i, 65, speaks of verses flowing so freely that "Per leve severos effundat iunctura unguis" (The critical nails glide smoothly over the joinings).

My peroration was never extempore, but always prepared beforehand, and polished to the nail.

SYDNEY MOSTYN (W. C. RUSSELL), Curatica, p. 43. (1891)

4

The King, for any thing he has to do in these Matters, may sit and blow his Nails.

ROBERT SOUTH, Sermons, 5 Nov., 1663.

5

Did you observe her nails? they were long enough to scratch her grannum out of her grave.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii. (1738)

Ye've nails at wad scrat your granny out of her grave.

W. C. HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 482. (1869)

6

Hippocrates has left direction how we should cut our nails—even with the ends of the fingers, neither shorter nor longer.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden. Ch. 1. (1854)

NAKEDNESS

7

To strip off her shift and play the Dorian. (ἐκδύσα κίθωνα δωραζεῖν.)

ANACREON. Frag. 58. (c. 500 B. C.) Quoted by

SCHOLIAST on EURIPIDES, Hecuba, 933:

"Leaving her dear bed in a single garment like a Dorian maid." "To play the Dorian" became a proverb for women who display themselves naked. See EDMONDS, Lyra

Graeca, ii, 167. The Latin proverbial phrase is, "In puris naturalibus" (In an absolute state of nature).

While his rivals were taking turns leading the pack, Willkie was pulling a Sally Rand on them. He went out and showed the country what he had.

EDSON BLAIR, Washington. Barron's, 17 July,

1940, p. 4. Sally Rand was a well-known strip-tease and bubble dancer.

The strip tease is the only entertainment indigenous to America.

DOUGLAS GILBERT, American Vaudeville, p. 5.

(1940)

8

Nakedness is uncomely, as well in Minde as Body.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Simulation. (1625)

9

I'm posing for Durien, the sculptor, on the next floor. I pose to him for the altogether . . . l'ensemble, you know—head, hands, feet—everything.

GEORGE DU MAURIER, Trilby, p. 18. (1894) It is Trilby speaking. "The altogether" became a popular phrase for nakedness.

He has a good idea how she'd look in the altogether, as they say.

VIRGINIA RATH, Posted for Murder, p. 159. (1942)

10

And they were both naked, the man and his wife, and were not ashamed. (Erat autem uterque nudus, Adam scilicet et uxor eius: et non erubescabant.)

Old Testament: Genesis, ii, 25. (c. 550 B. C.)

<sup>1</sup> Naked I seek the camp of those who desire nothing. (Nil cupientium | nudus castra peto.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 16, l. 22. (23 B. C.)

<sup>2</sup> Naked came I out of my mother's womb, and naked shall I return thither. (Nudus egressus sum de utero matris meae, et nudus revertar illuc.)

Old Testament: Job, i, 21. (c. 350 B. C.)

As he came forth of his mother's womb, naked shall he return to go as he came. (Sicut egressus est nudus de utero matris suae, sic revertetur.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, v, 15. (c. 250 B. C.)

As we brought nothing into the world at birth, so we take nothing out of the world at death. (Ut nihil pertinuit ad nos ante ortum, sic nihil post mortem pertinebit.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. i, ch. 38, sec. 91. (45 B. C.)

We brought nothing into this world, and it is certain we can carry nothing out. (οὐδὲν γὰρ ἐλθόντες καὶ οὐδὲν ἐξέρχεται τὸν κόσμον.)

New Testament: I Timothy, vi, 7. (c. A. D. 62)

The Vulgate is, "Nihil enim intulimus in hunc mundum: haud dubium quod nec auferre quid possumus."

Naked I was: so am I still. (Nudus eram: sic sum.)

AUSONIUS, Epitaphs. No. 30. (c. A. D. 385)

Naked I alighted on the earth and naked shall I go beneath it. (γῆς ἐπέβην γυμνός, γυμνός θ' ὑπὸ γαίης ἀνέμι.)

PALLADAS, Epigram. (c. A. D. 425) See Greek Anthology, bk. x, epig. 58.

Since man cometh naked from his mother, hence he will return naked to the earth.

FIRDAUSI, Iskander's Conversation. (c. 1000)

Naked I was born, naked I am, I neither lose nor gain. (Desnudo nací, desnudo me hallo: ni pierdo ni gano.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 25; ii, 8, 53, 55, 57. (1605)

Naked we come, and naked we go. (Ch'ih shên êrh lai, ch'ih shên êrh ch'u.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1776. (1875) Alexandre Dumas, père, is said to have remarked on his deathbed (1870), "I came to Paris with twenty francs—exactly the sum with which I die." He had spent in lavish living the immense sums earned by his books.

<sup>3</sup> To be naked is to be so much nearer to the being a man, than to go in livery.

CHARLES LAMB, The Decay of Beggars. (1822)

<sup>4</sup> A pretty girl is prettier naked than dressed in purple. (Pulchra mulier nuda erit quam purpurata pulchrior.)

PLAUTUS, Mostellaria, l. 289. (c. 220 B. C.)

In naked beauty more adorned.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 713. (1667)

BEAUTY UNADORNED, see under BEAUTY.

The nakedness of women is the work of God.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell. (1808)

<sup>5</sup> Thou to be strong must put off every dress; Thy only armour is thy nakedness.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Pallas and Venus, l. 16. (c. 1717)

II—Nakedness: Comparisons

<sup>6</sup> Naked as a robin.

CHARLOTTE BURNE, Shropshire Folk-Lore, p. 595. (1883)

Time was I wouldn't ha' married her . . . without her lands. You can send her now as naked as a robin, if you like.

MURRAY, John Vale's Guardian. Ch. 38. (1890)

<sup>7</sup> As naked as the cuckoo in Christmas.

THOMAS DEKKER, The Guls Horne-Booke, p. 20. (1609)

It is from the reported deplored condition of the cuckoo in winter that the proverb originates, "As naked as a cuckoo."

J. HARDY, in Folk-Lore Record, ii, 66. (1879)

<sup>8</sup> As naked as a statue. (ἀνδριάντος γυμνότερος.)

DIO CHRYSOSTOM, Discourses, ii, 34. (c. A. D. 50)

<sup>9</sup> Naked as from his mother's womb. (γυμνός ὡς ἐκ μητρός.)

DIOGENIANUS, Adagia, iv, 2. (c. A. D. 125) ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, viii, 44, gives the Latin, "Nudus tanquam ex matre," and calls it a proverb of hyperbole. Another of the same sort is "Bare as a peg" (πατράλου γυμνότερος), which ARISTÆNETUS (ii, 18) quotes and which ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, x, 100, gives as "Nudior paxillo." It may refer to poverty as well as to actual nudity. See under POVERTY.

As naked as euer thei wer borne.

NICOLAS UDALL, tr., Erasmus' Apophthegms, p. 59. (1564)

At our coming to Brazil, we found both men and women naked as they were born.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. ii, memb. iii, subs. 3. (1621)

There lay the canoe . . . with her crew . . . as naked as the day they were born.

SCOTT, Tom Cringle's Log. Ch. 12. (1829)

<sup>10</sup> More naked than a cast-off snake-skin. (Nudior leberide.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, i, i, 26. (1523) Similar ones are "More naked than a post" (Nudior paxillo), and "More naked than an egg" (Ovo nudior).

<sup>11</sup> I will make you dance a new dance call'd leap-frog. . . . And as naked as a frog.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Fair Maid of the Inn. Act iv, sc. 1. (1626)

<sup>12</sup> As naked and bare as a shorne sheep, as we say in our English proverb.

EDMUND GAYTON, Don Quixot, p. 88. (1654)

<sup>13</sup> Naked as a worm was she.

GUILLAUME DE LORRIS, Roman de la Rose. (c. 1240) Chaucer (?) tr., l. 454. (c. 1365)

Lat me nat lyk a worm go by the weye.

CHAUCER, The Clerkes Tale, l. 824. (c. 1388)
[He] laye there dyspoyly nakyd as a worm.

WILLIAM GREGORY, Chronicle of London
(Camden), p. 211. (a. 1470)

<sup>1</sup> Naked as a buck. (Que il estoit nuz com I. dains.)

GUILLAUME LE NORMAND, Du Prestre et d'Alison, l. 429 (c. 1250) MONTAIGLON, Recueil des Fabliaux ii, 22.

<sup>2</sup> Thou myghtest go as naked as my nayle.

JOHN HEYWOOD, The Play of the Wether, l. 922. (1533)

We . . . were led in prysoners naked as my nayle.

UNKNOWN, Myrroure for Magistrates. (1559)

Yet would I had her as naked as my nayl.

JOHN DAY, The Blind Beggar of Bednal-Green.
Act v. (1600)

Hee left them as naked as my Naile.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, The English Traveller.
Act ii, sc. 1. (1663)

<sup>3</sup> As naked as a lily. (κρίνου γυμνότερος.)

EMPEROR JULIAN, Misopogon. Sec. 181B. (c. A. D. 363)

<sup>4</sup> Strip him as naked as truth.

LORD JOHN SOMERS, Somers Tracts, v, 491.
(1647) THE NAKED TRUTH, see under TRUTH.

<sup>5</sup> In half a minute I was as naked as a pair of tongs.

MARK TWAIN, Connecticut Yankee, p. 32. (1889)

<sup>6</sup> He stod as nakyd as a ston.

WRIGHT, Songs and Carols, p. 3. (c. 1350)

<sup>7</sup> And ay is naked a nedill as natour tham schapis.

UNKNOWN, Alexander and Dindimus, l. 4027.
(c. 1350)

Bothe naked as a nedle.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. Text B, xii, 163. (1377)

There syr launcelot toke the fayrest lady by the hand . . . and she was naked as a nedel.

SIR THOMAS MALORY, tr., Le Morte Darthur.
Bk. xi, ch. 1. (c. 1480)

Nude as a needle.

P. J. BAILEY, The Age, p. 75. (1858)

NAME

<sup>8</sup> For my name and memory, I leave it to men's charitable speeches, and to foreign nations, and the next ages.

FRANCIS BACON, Will. (1626) See D'ISRAELI, Curiosities of Literature: The Persecuted Learned.

Let my name wither, so long as France is free. (Que mon nom soit flétri, que la France soit libre.)

GEORGES JACQUES DANTON, Speech, before the National Convention, 8 March, 1793. See CARLYLE, French Revolution. Vol. iii, bk. iii, ch. 4.

Let Switzerland be free, and let our names perish! (Que la suisse soit libre, et que nos noms perissent.)

ANTOINE LEMIERRE, William Tell. (1766) Evidently an echo of Danton.

<sup>9</sup> He that hath the name may as well enjoy the game.

R. D. BLACKMORE, Perlycross. Ch. 15. (1894)

When you've got the name, I say get the game.

EUGENE WALTER, Easiest Way. Act ii. (1908)

<sup>10</sup> Tak nat my name in ydel or amis.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Pardoner's Tale, l. 314. (c. 1387)

To take one's name in vain. To mention a person's name lightly, casually, disrespectfully; jocular. From the Biblical phrase for 'to utter blasphemy.'

ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés. (1940)

<sup>11</sup> Names are objectionable. (Nomina sunt odiosa.)

CICERO, Pro Roscio Amerino. Ch. 16, sec. 47. (80 B. C.) Adapted.

I have said everything when I have named the man. (Dixi omnia, cum hominem nominavi.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. iv, epis. 22. (A. D. 98)

Somebody hath been cozened, I name nobody.

JAMES SHIRLEY, The Wittie Faire One. Act v, sc. 3. (1633)

It is not fair to tell names.

SUSANNA CENTLIVRE, The Beau's Duel. Act i, sc. 1. (1702)

I name no names.

READE, Jack of All Trades. Ch. 5. (1858)

<sup>12</sup> Charm'd with the foolish whistlings of a Name.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Imitations of Vergil: Georgics. Bk. ii, l. 486. (1647)

Ravish'd with the whistling of a name.

POPE, An Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 283. (1733)

Some to the fascination of a name

Surrender judgment, hood-wink'd.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. vi, l. 101. (1784)

<sup>13</sup> When I myself am nothing but a name.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Ode Upon Occasion of a Copy of Verses of My Lord Broghill's, l. 24. (1656)

The Glory and the Nothing of a Name.

LORD BYRON, Churchill's Grave. (c. 1813)

<sup>14</sup> He hath not his name for naught.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 135. (1633)

You had not your name for nothing.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 261. (1678)

<sup>15</sup> Swoln 'bove any Greek or Roman name.

JOHN DRYDEN, On the Death of Lord Hastings, l. 76. (1667)

Above all Greek, above all Roman fame.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 1, l. 26. (1733)

<sup>1</sup> The Pyramids themselves, doting with age, have forgotten the names of their Founders.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: Of Tombes. (1642)

<sup>2</sup> Adam gave names to all cattle, and to the fowl of the air, and to every beast of the field. (Appellavitque Adam nominibus suis cuncta animantia, et universa volatilia caeli, et omnes bestias terrae.)

Old Testament: Genesis, ii, 20. (c. 550 B.C.) No stone without its name. (Nullum est sine nomine saxum.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili, ix, 973. (c. A.D. 60) Every godfather can give a name.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, i, 1, 93. (1595)

The poet's pen . . . gives to airy nothing

A local habitation and a name.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream, v, 1, 15. (1596)

When you christen the bairn, you know what to call it.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 347. (1721) Human pride

Is skilful to invent most serious names
To hide its ignorance.

SHELLEY, Queen Mab. Pt. vii, l. 24. (1813)

<sup>3</sup> I hate the man who builds his name
On ruins of another's fame.

JOHN GAY, Fables. Fab. xlv, l. 1. (1727)

<sup>4</sup> Take pity on me Before my name is mud.

J. C. GOODWIN, Wang: Elephant Song. (1891)

Your name'll be mud.

WENTWORTH, Dead or Alive. Ch. 13. (1936)

<sup>5</sup> I guess King George will be able to read that.
JOHN HANCOCK, Remark, on signing the Declaration of Independence, 4 July, 1776. His name, the first to be signed to the Declaration, was written in so bold a hand that "John Hancock" became the synonym for a signature.

<sup>6</sup> [The Roman's] name admonisht him of what he owed to his country.

J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth, i, 134. (c. 1830)

Nomina debita, says John Donne; that is to say, "Every man owes to the world the signification of name, and of all his name."

ALEXANDER WHYTE, Bible Characters: Stephen. (1901)

<sup>7</sup> The names of fools are always written on walls. (Nomina stultorum semper parietibus haerent.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 272. (1869) See under FOOL.

<sup>8</sup> He that exalts his name destroys his name; he who increases not decreases.

RABBI HILLEL, Mishnah: Pirké Aboth, i, 13. (c. 50 B.C.) Oesterley, tr.

<sup>9</sup> My name is Norval; on the Grampian hill
My father feeds his flock.

JOHN HOME, Douglas. Act iii. (1756)

<sup>10</sup> Sensitive ears delight in being called by the first name. (Gaudent praenomine molles | auriculæ.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 5, l. 32. (30 B.C.)

One name was ELIZABETH,

The other let it sleep in death.

BEN JONSON, Epitaph on Elizabeth, L.H. (a. 1637)

<sup>11</sup> Covet not an empty name.

KANG-HSI, Sacred Edict. Sec. 6. (c. 450 B.C.)

Man dies and leaves a name; the tiger dies and leaves a skin.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 355. (1938)

<sup>12</sup> The name that can be named is not the eternal name. (Mink 'k'o ming fêi ch'ang ming.)

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue). Sec. 1. (c. 550 B.C.) Carus, tr.

<sup>13</sup> The label (or name) is bigger than the bag. (μείζον τοῦπίγραμμα τῷ θυλακῷ.)

LUCIAN, Demosthenis Encomium. Ch. 10. (c. A.D. 170) Quoted as a proverb.

We take more care that men should speak of us, than how they speak: it is enough for us that our name runs in the mouths of men. (Nous nous soignons plus qu'on parle de nous, que comment on en parle: et nous est assez que nostre nom coure par la bouche des hommes.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 16. (1580)

<sup>14</sup> My name is Legion: for we are many. (Λεγιὼν ὄνομα μοι, ὅτι πολλοὶ ἐσμεν.)

New Testament: Mark, v, 9. (c. A.D. 65) The Vulgate is, "Legio mihi nomen est, quia multi sumus."

These Demoniacs let me dub

With the Name of Legion Club.

SWIFT, The Legion Club, l. 11. (1736)

Their name is Legion. They are very numerous. An adaptation (and originally a misapprehension) of Mark, v, 9.

PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: Name. (1941)

<sup>15</sup> Sticks and stones may break my bones, but names will never hurt me.

MARGARET MILLAR, Wall of Eyes, p. 189. (1943)

<sup>16</sup> Hasn't the fellow told you he does not know a word of the business? his name's Twyford.

PETER MOTTEUX, tr. Rabelais. Bk. v, ch. 13. (1694)

My name is Twyford; I know nothing of the Matter.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3502. (1732)

<sup>17</sup> I often forget my own name. (Frequenter nomen meum obliviscar.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 66. (c. A.D. 60) See under FORGETFULNESS.

If before daylight you start from the first part of my name, it would take you till bedtime to reach the end of it. (Si ante lucem ire occipias a meo primo nomine, concubium sit noctis prius quam ad postremum perveneris.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus, l. 885. (c. 194 B. C.)

1 A name and an omen. (Nomen atque omen.)

PLAUTUS, Persa, l. 625. (c. 200 B. C.)

John Jewel [Bishop of Salisbury] . . . was born . . . 24th of May, 1552. . . . It may be said of his surname, nomen, omen; Jewel his name and precious his virtues.

FULLER, Worthies: Devon, i, 407. (1662)

2 The name of the Lord is a strong tower. (Turris fortissima, nomen Domini.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xviii, 10. (c. 350 B. C.)

3 As his name is, so is he; Nabal- [fool] is his name, and folly is with him. (Nabal: quoniam secundum nomen suum stultus est, et stultitia est cum eo.)

Old Testament: 1 Samuel, xxvi, 25. (c. 600 B. C.)

By the name one may know the man. (Au sur-nom cognoit-on.)

JEHAN MIRLOT, Proverbes. (c. 1450)

A noble duke, in nature as in name.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, i, 2, 23. (1599)

Names and natures do often agree.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 287. (1639)

4 Your fame shall (spite of proverbs) make it plain

To write in water's not to write in vain.

SIR WILLIAM SANDERSON, The Art of Painting in Water Colours: Preface. (c. 1658)

Among the many things he has requested of me tonight, this is the principal,—that on the grave-stone shall be this inscription: Here lies one whose name was writ in water.

RICHARD MONCKTON MILNES, Life of Keats: Letter to Severn. Vol. ii, p. 91. (1821) The wording on the tombstone is, "This grave contains all that was mortal of a young English poet, who, on his death bed, in the bitterness of his heart at the malicious power of his enemies, desired these words to be graven on his tomb-stone, 'Here lies one whose name was writ in water.'"

Below lies one whose name was traced in sand.

DAVID GRAY, His Own Epitaph. (a. 1861)

TO WRITE IN SAND, WATER, see under LABOR LOST.

5 My foot is on my native heath, and my name is MacGregor.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 34. (1818)

6 What's in a name? that which we call a rose By any other name would smell as sweet.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, ii, 2, 42. (1595)

A cabbage by any other name would swell as sweet.

CLYDE FITCH, Captain Jinks. Act ii. (1901)

7 Through superstition of a name. (Superstitione nominis.)

TACITUS, Histories, Bk. iii, sec. 58. (c. A. D. 109)

Referring to the name of Caesar.

8

I would rather make my name than inherit it.

THACKERAY, The Virginians. Ch. 26. (1858)

I AM MY OWN ANCESTOR, see under ANCESTRY.

Let be my name until I make my name.

TENNYSON, Gareth and Lynette, l. 563. (1872)

9

From whence comes Smith, albe he knight or squire,

But from the smith that forgeth at the fire?

RICHARD VERSTEGAN, A Restitution of Decayed Intelligence, p. 310. (1605)

Fate tried to conceal him by naming him Smith.

O. W. HOLMES, The Boys. (1859)

A measly little gum-drop name like Percival.

HARRY LEON WILSON, Spenders, p. 344. (1902)

10

In foord, in ham, in ley, and tun,

The most of English Surnames run.

RICHARD VERSTEGAN, A Restitution of Decayed Intelligence, p. 326. (1605)

The rhyme is true, that "In 'ford,' in 'ham,' in 'ley,' and 'ton,' The most of English surnames run." All names with this termination are local, and comprise a large proportion of our national nomenclature.

C. W. BARDSLEY, The Romance of the London Directory, p. 32. (1879)

11

The blackest ink of Fate was sure my lot,

And. when she writ my name, she made a blot.

GEORGE VILLIERS, DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM, The Rehearsal. Act iii, sc. 2. (1671) Quoted by FIELDING, Amelia. Bk. ii, ch. 9. (1752)

12

If I had spoken sooner, he would have sooner been here.

UNKNOWN, Jacke Jugeler. (c. 1550) In HAZLITT, Old Plays, ii, 116.

Sooner named, sooner come, as common proverbs say.

NATHANIEL WOODES, The Conflict of Conscience. Act iii, sc. 2. (1581)

13

The ill effects of possessing an extensive reputation, or as an old English Phrase expresses it, having one's name up.

UNKNOWN, The Loiterer. No. 43, p. 4. (1789)

When once my name was up, . . . I had very soon my court about me.

MALKIN, tr., Gil Blas. Bk. viii, ch. 10. (1809)

II—Name: Good Name

14

A good life hath but few days, but a good name endureth forever. (ἀγαθὴς ζωῆς ἀριθμὸς ἡμερῶν, καὶ ἀγαθὸν ὄνομα εἰς αἰῶνα διαμενεῖ.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xli, 13. (c. 190 B. C.) The Vulgate is, "Bonae vitae numerus dierum; bonum autem nomen permanebit in aevum."

A good report

Makes men live long, although their life be short.

ROWLAND WATKYNs, Flamma Sine Fumo: A Good Report. (1662)

1 It is writen, that "the good name of a man is sone goon and passed, whan it is nat newed ne renovelled."

CHAUCER, Tale of Melibeus. Sec. 77. (c. 1387)
A lost good name is ne'er retriev'd.

JOHN GAY, Fables: The Fox at the Point of Death, l. 46. (1727) The proverbial form is, "A good name is sooner lost than won."

2 When the honourable man forsakes virtue, alas! for his fair name. (Quun chee kheu yun oo hoo sung mung.)

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. iv, ch. 5. (c. 500 B. C.)
Marshman, tr.

If throughout life you'd keep an honored name, Shun, even in thought, the joys that end in shame. (Si famam servare cupis, dum vivis, honestam, fac fugias animo quae sunt mala gaudia vitae.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. iv, No. 17. (c. 175 B. C.)

3 Hee that is thought to rise betime, may lie abed till noon.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Bruit. (1611)
The Italian form is, "Acquista buona fama e mettite à dormire" (Get a good name and go to sleep); the Spanish, "Cobra buena fama, y échate à dormir"; the French, "Qui a bruit de se lever matin peut dormir jusqu'à diner."

He that hath the name to be an early riser may sleep till noon.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 11. (1659) Howell also gives another form, "Who hath once the fame to be an early riser may sleep till noon."

He that can do thus, . . . he shall have the name and fame he desires; he may lie a-bed till noon.

JOHN BUNYAN, Jerusalem Sinner Saved. (1688)
Get a name to rise early, and you may lie all day.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 112. (1721)
"I would not have a man depend too much upon this proverb," Kelly adds, "for a good name is soon lost, and hardly to be retrieved."

How different is this from Smedley!
(His name is up, he may in bed lie.)

SWIFT, A Christmas-Box. (1729)

If our name were thus once up . . . we might lie a-bed.

RICHARD GRAVES, The Spiritual Quixote. Bk. i, ch. 8. (1772)

4 He's born in a good Hour, who gets a good Name.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2455. (1732)

5 As the soule is more precious then the body, so is it a greater offence to take away one's good name, which refresheth the soule, then to defraud one of food, which sustaineth the body.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 66. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Is not the losse of goodes lesse, than of ones good name?

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 29. (1576)

Good name in man and woman, dear my lord,
Is the immediate jewel of their souls:
Who steals my purse steals trash; 'tis something,
nothing:

'Twas mine, 'tis his, and has been slave to thousands;

But he that filches from me my good name
Robs me of that which not enriches him
And makes me poor indeed.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, iii, 3, 155. (1605)

Take away my good name and take away my life.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 124. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4306. (1732) JOHN

TRUSLER, Proverbs Exemplified, p. 60. (1790)

A condensation of the Latin lines, "Omnia si perdas, famam servare memento, | qua semel amissa, postea nullus eris" (Though you lose all things, remember to preserve your good name, which, once lost, you will be as if you did not exist).

On the Rio Grande border if you take a man's life you sometimes take trash; but if you take his horse, you take a thing the loss of which renders him poor, indeed.

O. HENRY, A Double-Dyed Deceiver. (1909)

6 He who hath gained a good name hath gained something for himself.

RABBI HILLEL, Mishnah: Pirké Aboth, ii, 8.
There are three crowns: the crown of Torah [the Law], the crown of priesthood, and the crown of kingship; but the crown of a good name exceeds them all.

RABBI SIMEON (BEN JOCHAI), Mishnah: Pirké Aboth, iv, 19. (c. A. D. 150) Oesterley, tr.

Thou thinkest it honourable to go to the graue with a gray head, but I deeme it more glorious to be buried with an honest name.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 184. (1579)

7 My good name is unstained; and so far I have lived without reproach. (Fama tamen clara est. et adhuc sine crimine vixi.)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. xvii, l. 17. (c. 10 B. C.)

My good name, which was as white as a tulip.

WYCHERLEY, Love in a Wood. Act iv, sc. 1. (1672)

8 A good name, the best of all treasures. (εὖνυμον κτεάνων κρατίστην χάριν πορών.)

PINDAR, Pythian Odes. No. xi, l. 58. (474 B. C.)

A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches. (Melius est nomen bonum, quam divitiae multae.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxii, 1. (c. 350 B. C.)

A good name is better than precious ointment. (Melius est nomen bonum, quam unguenta pretiosa.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, vii, 1. (c. 250 B. C.)

Quoted by BACON, Essays: Of Praise, with the comment, "It filleth all round about and will not easily away. For the Odours of Oyntments, are more durable than those of Flowers."

If I can preserve my good name, I shall be rich enough. (Ego si bonam famam mihi servasso, sat ero dives.)

PLAUTUS, Mostellaria, l. 228. (c. 220 B. C.)

A good name is a second patrimony. (Bene audire alterum patrimonium est.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 96. (c. 43 B. C.)
"Do greet diligence" seith Salomon, "in keping of thy gode name; for it shal lenger abide with thee than any tresour, be it never so precious."

CHAUCER, Tale of Melibeus. Sec. 52. (c. 1387)
For Salomon seith: that "bette it is and more it availleth a man to have a good name, than for to have grete riches."

CHAUCER, Tale of Melibeus. Sec. 52.

A good name menny folde ys more worthe than golde.

UNKNOWN, Babees Book, p. 42. (c. 1430)

Gode name is golde worthe.

UNKNOWN, How the Good Wüf Taugte Hir Doughtir. (c. 1430)

Good renomme is bettir than riches, for riches wolbe loste and renomme wol laste.

EARL RIVERS, tr., Dictes and Sayenges of the Philosophirs, fo. 54. (1477) Quoting Socrates.

The first phrase cited by ALEXANDER BARCLAY, The Castell of Labour, sig. E7. (1506)

It is a common saying that it is good to have a good name, that is to say credit and reputation. (Il se dict qu'il fait bon avoir bon nom, c'est à dire credit et reputation.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 46. (1580)

For wise men and old

Seyne good name is worth gold.

UNKNOWN, Plasidas, l. 166. (1597)

A good name is better than great riches. (Más vale el buen nombre que las muchas riquezas.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 33. (1615)

A good name is a rich heritage. (Guter Name ist ein reiches Erbtheil.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbs, p. 338. (1856) A German proverb. The French say, "Bonne renommée vaut mieux que ceinture dorée" (A good name is worth more than a golden girdle); the Dutch, "Een goede naam is beter dan olij" (A good name is better than oil).

<sup>1</sup>
A good name keeps its lustre in the dark. (Bona fama in tenebris proprium splendorem tenet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 83. (c. 43 B. C.) Quoted by RAY, p. 18. (1670)

III—Name: Great Names

<sup>2</sup>
A name made great is a name destroyed.

Babylonian Talmud: Pirké Aboth, i, 13. (c. 450)

What a heavy burden is a name that has become too famous. (C'est un poids bien pesant qu'un nom trop tôt fameux.)

VOLTAIRE, La Henriade. Chant iii, l. 41. (1723)

<sup>3</sup>
Thy name liveth upon earth.

Book of the Dead. (c. 4000 B. C.) Papyrus of Pepl. MASPERO, Recueil de Travaux, iv, 51.

Thy name is established in the mouths of men.

UNKNOWN, Hymn to Osiris. (c. 4000 B. C.) LE DRAIN, Monuments Égyptiens.

<sup>4</sup>
For thou art Freedom's now, and Fame's:
One of the few, the immortal names,

That were not born to die.

FITZ-GREENE HALLECK, Marco Bozzaris. (1847)
One great name can make a country great.

R. W. GILDER, To James Russell Lowell. (1900)

<sup>5</sup>
I will give them an everlasting name, that shall not be cut off. (Nomen sempiternum dabo eis, quod non peribit.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, lvi, 5. (c. 725 B. C.)

Their bodies are buried in peace; but their name liveth for evermore. (τὸ σώμα αὐτῶν ἐν ἐρήρῃ ἐτάφη, καὶ τὸ ὄνομα αὐτῶν ζῆ εἰς γενεάς.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xlv, 14. (c. 190 B. C.) The Vulgate is, "Corpora ipsorum in pace sepulta sunt, et nomen eorum vivit in generationem et generationem."

Keeps from age to age an ever-living name.

(Aeternumque tenet per saecula nomen.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. vi, l. 235. (19 B. C.)

<sup>6</sup>
Great names debase instead of elevating those who do not know how to sustain them. (Les grands noms abaissent au lieu d'élever ceux qui ne les savent pas soutenir.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 94. (1665)

<sup>7</sup>
He stands the mere shadow of a mighty name. (Stat magni nominis umbra.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. i, l. 135. (c. A. D. 60)

Junius used an adaptation of this, "Stat nominis umbra," as the motto on the title page of his Letters.

Do not concern yourself with anxiety for the shadow of a great name. (Non sit tibi curae de magni nominis umbra.)

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Bk. iii, ch. 24, sec. 2. (c. 1420)

<sup>8</sup>
An illustrious and ancient name. (Clarum et venerabile nomen.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. ix, l. 203. (c. A. D. 60)

Victorious names, who made the world obey.

DRYDEN, Flower and Leaf, l. 518. (a. 1700)

He left a name, at which the world grew pale.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Vanity of Human Wishes, l. 221. (1748)

[He] beat his name on the drum of the world's ear.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: A Metropolis. (1839)

<sup>9</sup>
His name will live forever. (Sempiterno nominabitur.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 45. (c. A. D. 60)

A man dies, but a noble name never.

SAEMUND (?), Poetic Edda: Hovamol. St. 77. (c. 900)

Strong towers decay,

But a great name shall never pass away.

PARK BENJAMIN, A Great Name. (c. 1835)

Leaving here a name, I trust,

That will not perish in the dust.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, My Days Among the Dead Are Passed. (c. 1838)

<sup>1</sup> I have made thee a great name, like unto the name of the great men that are in the earth. (Fecique tibi nomen grande, iuxta nomen magnorum, qui sunt in terra.)

Old Testament: II Samuel, vii, 9. (c. 600 B. C.)

Then shall our names,

Familiar in his mouth as household words, . . . Be in their flowing cups freshly remember'd.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, iv, 3, 51. (1599)

Yet shall thy name, conspicuous and sublime, Stand in the spacious firmament of time, Fixed as a star.

WORDSWORTH, Poems Dedicated to National Independence. Pt. ii, No. 19. (c. 1820)

A name "fast anchored in the deep abyss of time."

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Table Talk. (1822)

IV—Name: Ill Name

<sup>2</sup> A man at whom everybody points dies without being ill.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 356. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

<sup>3</sup> An ill wound is cured, not an ill name.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 247. (1640)

The evil wound is cured but not the evil name.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 14. (1678)

An ill Wound, but not an ill Name, may be healed.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1753.

<sup>4</sup> He that hath a yll name, is halfe hang'd, ye know.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 6. (1546)

WILSON, Arte of Rhetorique, p. 186. (1560)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 114. (1678) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2133. (1732) The Italians have the same proverb, "Chi ha cattivo nome, è mezzo impiccato."

He that is evil deemed is half hanged.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 38. (c. 1595)

I am half hang'd already, for my good name is lost.

HEYWOOD, The Silver Age. Act ii. (1613)

It is a very ominous and suspicious thing to have an ill name. The proverb saith, he is half-hanged.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons (1861), i, 224. (1629) Your hero makes laws to get rid of your thief, and gives him an ill name that he may hang him.

T. L. PEACOCK, Maid Marian. Ch. 18. (1822)

Were not fama malum gravius quam res, and an ill name half hanged, . . . he would have been acquitted.

M. A. S. HUME, Raleigh, p. 270. (1897)

GIVE A DOG A BAD NAME, see under Dog.

NAPLES

<sup>5</sup> Naples a place of more pleasure then profit, and yet of more profit then pietie.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 35. (1579)

<sup>6</sup> You speak before a man to whom all Naples is known. (Vous parlez devant un homme à qui tout Naples est connu.)

MOLIÈRE, L'Avare. Act v, sc. 5, l. 47. (1668)

<sup>7</sup> "See Naples and then die," is the vainglorious saying of the Neapolitans.

G. A. SALA, Dutch Pictures. Ch. 16. (1861)

"See Naples and then die," says the proverb.

G. A. SALA, America Revisited, p. 284. (1882)

The Italian is, "Vedi Napoli, e poi muori."

This was the Highland's girl's devout belief; Vedi Napoli e poi muori; earth could not have anything to show more fair.

MRS. OLIPHANT, Kirsteen. Ch. 8. (1890)

<sup>8</sup> Naples sitteth by the sea, keystone of an arch of azure.

M. F. TUPPER, Proverbial Philosophy. (1838)

NAPPING

<sup>9</sup> Taken Nappynge as Mosse toke His Meare.

WILLIAM GREFFETH. Title of ballad. (1569) See ARBER, Stat. Registers, i, 193.

Tooke hum napping as Moss did his mare.

BRIAN MELBANCKE, Philotimus, p. 65. (1583)

Fortune feeding them as Mosse did his mare, through a hurdle, which made him take her so soone napping.

UNKNOWN, Discouerie of Knights of Poste, sig. C4. (1597)

Unlooked for; napping, as Mosse tooke his Mare.

COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Despourueu. (1611)

I took him napping, as Moss took his mare.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 187. (1670)

"Who this Moss was is not very material to know," Ray comments. "I suppose some such man might find his mare dead, and taking her to be only asleep, might say, 'Have I caught you napping?'"

To catch a person napping as Moss caught his mare.

J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 127. (1917)

<sup>10</sup> Our mortal enemy . . . hopeth . . . to take thee napping.

BISHOP JAMES PILKINGTON, An Exposition upon Nehemiah. (1562)

Desirous to take me napping.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 87. (1579)

Nay, I have ta'en you napping, gentle love.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, iv, 2, 46. (1594)

I should blush, I know,

To be o'erheard and taken napping so.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, iv, 3, 130. (1595)

NATION

See also State

<sup>11</sup> And hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth.

(ἐποίησεν τε ἐξ ἑνὸς πᾶν ἔθνος ἀνθρώπων κατοικεῖν ἐπὶ παντὸς προσώπου τῆς γῆς.)

New Testament: Acts, xvii, 26. (C. A. D. 65) The Vulgate is, "Fecitque ex uno omne genus hominum inhabitare super universam faciem terrae."

- 1
A nation is the unity of a people.
S. T. COLERIDGE, Table-Talk. (a. 1834)
Individuals may form communities, but it is institutions alone that can create a nation.
DISRAELI, Speech, at Manchester, 1866.
- 2
How much more are men than nations!
EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Progress of Culture. (1875)
- 3
Divers nations have sundrie waies to mittigate their grieffe. As for example: The high Almaine drinks out his sorrow; the Frenchman sings his out; the Spaniard consumes his in lamentations; and the Italian sleepes his out.
STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iv, p. 213. (1574) Young, tr.
The Irishman for his hand, the Welshman for leg, the Englishman for a face, the Dutchman for a beard.
THOMAS DEKKER, The Honest Whore. Pt. ii, act. i, sc. i. (1630)
An Irishman fights before he reasons, a Scotchman reasons before he fights, an Englishman is not particular as to the order of preference, but will do either to accommodate his customers.
C. C. COLTON: Lacon. (1820) The Scots put it differently, "The Englishman greets, the Irishman sleeps, but the Scotsman gangs till he gets it."
The Irish are hearty, the Scotch plausible, the French polite, the Germans good-natured, the Italians courtly, the Spaniards reserved and decorous—the English alone seem to exist in taking and giving offence.
WILLIAM HAZLITT, Manners Make the Man. (1829) A Spanish proverb says, "The Englishman a drunkard, the Frenchman a scoundrel, the Dutchman a farmer, the Spaniard a gentleman." Another, of Italian origin, asserts that "The Italian is wise before the deed, the German in the deed, the French man after the deed." The Germans say, "A Polish bridge, a Bohemian monk, a Swabian nun, an Austrian soldier, Italian reverence and German fasting are not worth a bean." Still another claims, "Italia par nacer, Francia para vivir, España para morir" (Italy the best place to be born—perhaps on account of its climate, France the best place to live—undoubtedly on account of its food and wine, and gaiety, and Spain the best place to die—on account of its piety).
- 4
The nations are as a drop of a bucket, and are counted as the small dust of the balance. (Ecce Gentes quasi stilla situlae, et quasi momentum staterae reputatae sunt.)
Old Testament: Isaiah, xl, 15. (c. 725 B.C.)
- 5
Let the nations be glad and sing for joy. (Laetentur et exultent gentes.)
Old Testament: Psalms, lxxvii, 4. (c. 350 B.C.)
- 6
It is a maxim founded on the universal experience of mankind that no nation is to be

- trusted farther than it is bound by its interest.
GEORGE WASHINGTON, Letter to Congress. (1778)
It is folly in one nation to look for disinterested favors from another.
WASHINGTON, Farewell Address, 17 Sept., 1796.
Nations are governed by self-interest, but they prefer to believe that their aims are altruistic.
W. S. MAUGHAM, Lord Mountdrago. (1939)
Right is whatever profits a nation, wrong is whatever harms it.
HANS FRANK, GERMAN GOVERNOR-GENERAL OF POLAND, Address, before the Academy of German Law, 3 Dec., 1939.
- 7
The sense of greatness keeps a nation great.
WILLIAM WATSON, True Patriotism. (c. 1920)

NATURE

- 8
Nature does nothing without purpose. (οὐθέν γάρ μάτην ἢ φύσις ποιεῖ.)
ARISTOTLE, Politics. Bk. i, ch. 1, sec. 10. (c. 330 B.C.) Quoted as a proverb.
A common Prouerbe, and almost in euery mans mouth, that neither God, nor yet Nature, did euer make any thing in vaine.
THOMAS WILSON, The Arte of Rhetorique, p. 49. (1553)
God and nature doo nothinge vainely or vily.
GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 65. (1576)
Doth not Cicero conclud and allowe, that if we followe and obey Nature, we shall neuer erre? Doth not Aristotle alledge and confirme, that Nature frameth or maketh nothing in any point rude, vaine, or vnperfect?
JOHN LYLX, Euphuus (Arber), p. 42. (1579)
Natura nihil agit frustra [Nature does nothing in vain] is the only indisputed Axiome in Philosophy.
SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i, sec. 15. (1642)
- 9
Nature is not governed except by obeying her.
FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum. Pt. ii, bk. 1, aphor. 129. (1605)
Nature, to be commanded, must be obeyed.
FRANCIS BACON, Novum Organum. (1605)
About nature consult nature herself.
FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum: Pt. iii, Introductio (1605) According to Bacon, this is "the sole and only way in which the foundations of true and active philosophy can be established."
Bacon has declared it: Natura non nisi parendo vincitur [Nature is conquered only by obeying her]: and the triumphs of Science since his days have proved how willing Nature is to be conquered by those who will obey her.
J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth, i, 166. (1827)
"God resisteth the proud but giveth grace unto the humble" is only a theological version of the scientific truism, "To conquer Nature you must obey her."
E. A. BURROUGHS, The Valley of Decision. Bk. iii, ch. 4, p. 285. (1916)

1 Nature is often hidden, sometimes overcome, seldom extinguished.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Nature in Men. (1597)

How hard it is to hide the sparks of Nature!
SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline, iii, 3, 79. (1609)

2 Believe one who knows: you will find something greater in woods than in books. Trees and stones will teach you that which you can never learn from masters. (Experto crede: aliquid amplius in silvis invenies quam in libris. Ligna et lapides docubunt te quod a magistris audire non possis.)

ST. BERNARD OF CLAIRVAUX, Epistles. No. 106. (c. 1145) To Henry Murdach, afterwards Archbishop of York.

Out of the book of Nature's learned breast.

JOSHUA SYLVESTER, tr., Devine Weekes and Workes. Week ii, day. 4. (1591)

And this our life, exempt from public haunt,
Finds tongues in trees, books in the running brooks,

Sermons in stones, and good in every thing.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, ii, 1, 15. (1600)

In nature's infinite book of secrecy

A little I can read.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, i, 2, 9. (1606)

And meditate the Book of Nature, ever open.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Autumn, l. 670. (1730)

Strange to the world, he wore a bashful look,
The fields his study, nature was his book.

ROBERT BLOOMFIELD, The Farmer's Boy: Spring, l. 31. (1798)

He is wholly serious: finding sermons in stones.
books in the running brooks, and fog in every-thing.

H. C. BAILEY, The Apprehensive Dog, p. 55. (1942)

3 Where man is not, nature is barren.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell. (1808)

4 You'll never lack supplies from Nature's hands,

If you're content with what your need demands.

(Commoda Naturae nullo tibi tempore derunt, si contentus eo fueris quod postulat usus.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. iv, No. 2. (c. 175 B.C.)

Nature requires very little. (Exiguum natura desiderat.)

SENECA, Ad Lucillum. Epis. xvi. (c. A. D. 65) See LIFE: LIVING ON LITTLE.

Allow not nature more than nature needs.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, ii, 4, 269. (1605)

TO LIVE ACCORDING TO NATURE, see under LIFE.

5 It is agayns the proces of nature.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Frankeleyns Tale, l. 617. (c. 1386) "Lusus naturae" (A freak of nature), is the Latin proverbial phrase.

6 There is no bandit so remorseless as Nature. In the whole universe there is no escape from it.

CHUANG-TSZE, Philosophy. Ch. 11. (c. 400 B.C.) Giles, tr.

7 Nature abhors annihilation. (Ab interitu naturam abhorrere.)

CICERO, De Finibus. Bk. v, ch. 11, sec. 31. (c. 45 B.C.)

Nature abhors a vacuum. (Natura abhorret vacuum.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 5. (1534)

A vacuum, which Nature abhors. (Vacuité, laquelle n'est tolérée en Nature.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel, Bk. iv, ch. 62. (1548)

Queen Joan . . . (hating widowhood as much as nature doth vacuum) married James King of Majorca.

THOMAS FULLER, The Profane State. Bk. v, ch. 2. (1642)

Whatever philosophy may determine of material nature, it is certainly true of intellectual nature, that it abhors a vacuum: our minds cannot be empty.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 20 June 1771.

The spirit abhors a vacuum more than nature.

H. D. THOREAU, Letter to Emerson, 12 Feb., 1843.

The world's most abhorred vacuum is in the pocketbook.

ANONYMOUS, Meditations in Wall Street, p. 146. (1940)

8 What is natural is never disgraceful. (οὐκ ἀλογὸν οὐδὲν τῶν ἀναγκαίων βροτοῖς.)

EURIPIDES, Fragments. Frag. 863. (c. 440 B.C.)

The Latin form is, "Naturalia non sunt turpia."

Whatever befalls in accordance with Nature should be accounted good. (Omnia autem quae secundum naturam fiunt, sunt habenda in bonis.)

CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. xix, sec. 71. (44 B.C.)

Nothing so much prevents one's appearing natural as the desire to appear so. (Rien n'empêche tant d'être naturel que l'envie de le paraître.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 431. (1665)

As natural to him as milk to a calf.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 287. (1678)

The natural alone is permanent.

H. W. LONGFELLOW, Kavanagh. Ch. 13. (1849)

Schiller has, "Nichts führt zum Guten, was nicht natürlich ist" (Nothing leads to good which is not natural).

The modern "nature-faker" is of course an object of derision to every . . . true nature-lover.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Everybody's Magazine, Sept., 1907.

9 Nature is the art of God. (Deus aeternus, arte sua, quae natura est.)

DANTE, De Monarchia. Bk. i, l. 3. (a. 1321)

Nature, the vicaire of th' almighty Lorde.

CHAUCER, Parlement of Foules, l. 379. (1382)
Nature, the Handmaid of God Almighty.

JAMES HOWELL, Familiar Letters: To Dr. T. P.
Bk. ii. (1645)

Nature . . . what the Earth-Spirit in Faust names it, the living visible Garment of God.

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. i, ch. 8. (1833)

Nature, which is the Time-vesture of God.

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. iii, ch. 8. (1834)

<sup>1</sup> Nature is a mutable cloud which is always and never the same.

EMERSON, Essays: History. (1841)

Nature hates monopolies and exceptions.

EMERSON, Essays: Compensation. (1841)

Nature, as we know her, is no saint. . . . She comes eating, drinking and sinning.

EMERSON, Essays: Experience. (1844)

Nature is what you may do. . . . Nature is the tyrannous circumstance, the thick skull, the sheathed snake, the ponderous rock-like jaw. . . .
Nature is no spendthrift, but takes the shortest way to her ends.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate. (1860)

<sup>2</sup> Nature is the right law. (La vera legge è la natura.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 32. (1578)

Nature in man's heart her laws doth pen.

SIR JOHN DAVIES, Nosce Teipsum. Sec. 26, st. 2.
(1599)

Against the law of nature.

MILTON, Samson Agonistes. l. 890. (1671) See under Law.

<sup>3</sup> Nature does not proceed by leaps. (Natura non facit saltus.)

RAOUL FOURNIER, De Sermonis Latini Studio.
(a. 1627) Also in similar form in Varia
Historica, ix. 247 (1613) and in LINNAEUS,
Philosophia Botanica. No. 77. (1751)
JACQUES TISSOT, Discours Véritable de la Vie du Géant Theutobocus (1613) has, "Nature in her operations does not proceed by leaps."

Nature hates all sudden changes. It is not safe for a man to change in his diet, behaviour, or way of living suddenly.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 267. (1721)

Though we can take leaps, nature nihil facit per saltum.

R. W. LIVINGSTON, Greek Genius, p. 206. (1924)

<sup>4</sup> He that follows Nature is never out of his Way.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2108. (1732)

<sup>5</sup> Ill natures, the more you ask them, the more they stick.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 111. (1640)

Ill Natures never want a Tutor.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3076. (1732)

<sup>6</sup> Nature's Darling.

THOMAS GRAY, The Progress of Poesy. Pt. iii, l.
84. (1754) Of Shakespeare.

<sup>7</sup> Nature draws more than ten teams.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 779. (1640)

Nature draws more than ten oxen.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 18. (1670) The Germans say, "Natur zieht stärker denn sieben Ochsen" (Nature draws stronger than seven oxen).

<sup>8</sup> Nature gives what no man can take away.

HILLS, Common-place Book, p. 129. (c. 1530)

<sup>9</sup> You may drive out Nature with a pitchfork.
yet she will ever hurry back. (Naturam ex-pelles furca, tamen usque recurret.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 10, l. 24. (20 B. C.)
Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, vii, 14. Included by TAVERNER in his Translations from Erasmus, fo. 44, with the rendering, "Thrust out nature with a croche, Yet wyll she styll runne backe agayne." Horace is using a proverbial phrase. See CICERO, Ad Atticum, bk. xvi, epis 2, "Furcilla extrudimur" (I am being turned out with a pitchfork).

Though your sons folly be thrust vp with a paire of hornes on a forke, yet being naturall, it will have his course.

JOHN LYLY, Mother Bombie. Act i, sc. 1. (1594)

That fork needing strong tines wherewith one must thrust away nature.

FULLER, The Holy State: Of Gravity. (1642)

Chase nature away, it returns at a gallop.
(Chassez le naturel, il revient au galop.)

PHILIPPE DESTOUCHES, Le Glorieux. Act iv, sc.

3. (c. 1730) The Italians say, "Vizio di natura dura fino alla sepoltura" (The bad habits of nature endure to the grave).

WHAT'S BRED IN THE BONE, see under BREED-
ING.

Though you expel nature with a pitchfork, she will always come back.

T. L. PEACOCK, Crotchet Castle. Ch. 1. (1831)

Drive out nature with a fork, she ever comes running back.

J. A. FROUDE, Short Studies. Ch. 1. (1867)

<sup>10</sup> Nature, fixed and unchanging, reverts to evil courses. (Ad mores natura recurrit | damnatos, fixa et mutari nescia.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiii, l. 239. (c. A. D. 120)

So nature ordains. (Sic natura iubet.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiv, l. 31.

<sup>11</sup> There is a great deal of human nature in man.
KINGSLEY, At Last. Ch. 2. (1871) Quoted.

<sup>12</sup> Nature is not benevolent; with ruthless indifference she makes all things serve their purposes. (T'ien ti'pu jen; 'i wan' wu wéi ts'u kou.)

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue).
Sec. 5. (c. 550 B. C.) Giles, tr.

<sup>13</sup> You bewraye your owne weakenesse, in thinking that nature may any wayes be altered by education.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 41. (1579)

Education can have no show where the excellency of Nature doth beare sway.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 41. (1579)
Nature passes nurture.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 80. (c. 1595) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 252. (1678)

A devil, a born devil, on whose nature Nurture can never stick.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, iv, 188. (1611)

Nature can do more than breeding.

ROBERT STAPLETON, tr., Juvenal, p. 189. (1647)
Nature is beyond all Teaching.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3305. (1732)
Nature has always had more power than education. (La Nature a toujours été en eux plus forte que l'éducation.)

VOLTAIRE, Life of Molière. (c. 1775)

Nature is more powerful than education.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Contarini Fleming. Pt. i, ch. 13. (1832)

Nature does sometimes overcome nurture.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Pictures, p. 70. (1880)

1

Nature will haue hir course.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 326. (1580) DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 137. (1633)

Your son's folly . . . being natural, it will haue his course.

JOHN LYLY, Mother Bombie. Act i, sc.1. (1594)
It is a true saying, Nature will not be hid.

GEORGE WITHER, Doubtfull Almanack, p. 6. (c. 1647) Goethe is credited with the line, "Die Natur weiss allein, was sie will" (Nature alone knows what she wants).

But nature's nature, and has more caprices Than I have time, or will, to take to pieces.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xv, st. 52. (1824)

2

Beldam Nature.

MILTON, At a Vacation Exercise in the College, l. 48. (1628)

3

Nature can do all, and doth all. (Nature peult tout, et faist tout.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 24. (1580)
Quoted as "the principal ordinance of Plato in his Republic."

Have I not seen, in Plato, this divine word, "that nature is nothing but an enigmatical piece of poetry?" (Ay je pas veu, en platon, ce divin mot, "que nature n'est rien qu'une poésie ainigmatique?")

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 12.

Leave a little to nature: she understands her business better than we do. (Laissons faire un peu à nature: elle entend mieulx ses affaires que nous.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 13. (1595)

Montaigne is speaking of illness and the proper way to treat it.

4

It is not possible to goe forward in any thing, Invita Minerva, nature not consenting thereto.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 249. (1576)

INVITA MINERVA, see MINERVA.

5

Neither the tawny fox nor the roaring lion changes his inborn nature. (τὸ γὰρ, | ἐμφυῆς οὐτ' αἰθων δλώπηξ | οὐτ' ἐρίβρομοι λέοντες διαλλάξαντο ἥθος.)

PINDAR, Olympian Odes, No. xi, l. 20. (476 B.C.)
It is difficult to change one's inborn nature. (ἄμαχον δὲ κρῦψαι τὸ συγγενὲς ἥθος.)

PINDAR, Olympian Odes, xiii, 13. (464 B.C.)
I can't change my nature. (Non possum in-mutarier.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 206. (161 B.C.)

It is difficult indeed to change nature. (Naturam quidem mutare difficile est.)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. ii, sec. 20. (c. A.D. 54)

Wolves grow old in the skin in which they were born. (Le loups vieillissent dans la peau où ils sont nés.)

MARIE DE FRANCE, Le Prêtre Qui Enseigne au Loup l'Alphabet. (c. 1220)

What comes through the vessel is that which is inside it.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. viii, Maxim 93. (c. 1258)

How impossible it is to make Nature change her biass, and that if we shut her out of the door, she'll come in at the window.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, tr., Aesop, p. 61. (1692)
Men may change their Climate, but they cannot change their Nature.

RICHARD STEELE, The Tatler. No. 93. (1709)

Believe if you will that a mountain has removed from one place to another; but if you are told that a man has changed his nature, believe it not!

SOUTHEY, The Doctor. Ch. 85. (1812) Quoting a Persian proverb.

Reynard is still Reynard, though he put on a surplice.

FIELDING, Proverbs of All Nations, p. 68. (1824)

It is harder to change human nature than to change rivers and mountains. (Chiang shan i kai, pên hsing nan i.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1492. (1875)

You can't change human nature. There's such things as the Eternal Verities.

H. G. WELLS, You Can't Be too Careful, p. xi (1942)

6

Just as the shoe is turned with the foot, and not the contrary, so do men's natures make their lives like themselves. (τὸ ὑπόδημα τῷ ποδὶ συνδιαστρέφεται.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: On Tranquillity. Sec. 466F. (c. A.D. 95)

7

Nature without learning is a blind thing, and learning without nature an imperfect thing. (ἡ μὲν γὰρ φύσις ἀνευ μαθήσεως τυφλόν, ἡ δὲ μάθησις δίχα φύσεως ἑλλίπεις.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: Education of Children Sec. 4B. (c. A.D. 95) See also LEARNING.

8

Every one follows the inclinations of his own nature. (Naturae sequitur semina quisque suae.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies, iii, 9, 20. (c. 26 B.C.)

1 When a good disposition is wounded, it is much more seriously incensed. (Bonus animus laesus gravius multo irascitur.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 66. (c. 43 B. C.)

Good nature is sometimes a kind of folly. (Interdum habet stultitiae partem facilitas.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 316.

Good nature, sensitive though it claims to be, is often stifled by the pettiest selfishness. (Le bon naturel, qui se vante d'être si sensible, est souvent étouffé par le moindre intérêt.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 275. (1665)
Good Nature is a great Misfortune, if it want Prudence.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1721. (1732)
Good Nature without Prudence, is Foolishness.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1723.

Good Nature is the proper Soil upon which Virtue grows.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1722.

Lord Smart: She is very good-humoured.

Neverout: Ay, my lord; so is the devil when he's pleased.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

Great Good-nature, without Prudence, is a great Misfortune.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1749.

Good Sense and Learning may Esteem obtain,
Humour and Wit a Laugh, if rightly ta'en;
Fair Virtue Admiration may impart;

But 't is Good-Nature only wins the Heart.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1757.

As full of good-nature as an egg's full of meat.

SHERIDAN, A Trip to Scarborough. Act iii, sc. 4. (1777)

Though good-natured at bottom, he was very ill-natured at top.

HORACE WALPOLE, Letter to Miss Berry, 26 May, 1791. Of Samuel Johnson.

Good-nature is stronger than tomahawks.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Clubs. (1870)

2 I delight in the law of God after the inward man; but I see another law in my members, warring against the law of my mind, and bringing me into captivity to the law of sin.

New Testament: Romans, vii, 22, 23. (c. A. D. 57)

Two hooks are pulling you in different ways. (Duplicid in diversum, scinderis hamo.)

PERSIUS, Satires. No. v, l. 154. (c. A. D. 58)

Whether to live a simple or debauched life; whether to save money or spend it.

I feel two natures struggling within me.

GEORGE GRAY BARNARD, Title of statuary group in Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York City. (c. 1910) Tartarin-Sancho: Tartarin-Quixote, is the classic example.

3 Nature never deceives us; it is always we who deceive ourselves. (Jamais la nature ne nous trompe; c'est toujours nous qui nous trompons.)

ROUSSEAU, Emile. Bk. iii. (1762)

There is no pure lie, no pure malignity in nature.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: New England Reformers. (1844)

Nature admits no lie.

CARLYLE, Latter-Day Pamphlets. No. 5. (1850)

4 O Nature, how we worship thee even against our wills! (Natura, quam te colimus inviti quoque!)

SENECA, Hippolytus. Act iv, l. 1116. (c. A. D. 60)
Nature is nothing but a display of goodness. (La nature n'est qu'un spectacle de bonté.)

ARTHUR RIMBAUD, Une Saison en Enfer. Ch. 2. (1873) Summed up in the American phrase, "Ain't nature grand!"

5 One touch of nature makes the whole world kin.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, iii, 3, 175. (1601)

One touch of nature may make the whole world kin, but two touches of nature will destroy any work of art.

OSCAR WILDE, The Decay of Lying. (1889)

It's one touch of nature, it makes the whole world kin.

E. B. MARKS, My Mother Was a Lady. (1896)
As the poet said, "A touch of nature makes the whole world kin."

RICHARD SHATTUCK, The Snark Was a Boojum, p. 62. (1941)

6 It's human nature. (Humanumst.)

TERENCE, Adelphoe, l. 471. (160 B. C.)

'Tis the nature of the beast.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 56. (1678)

7 There are no contradictions in nature. (Il n'y a point de contradictions dans la nature.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 289. (1746)

It can't be nature, for it is not sense.

CHURCHILL, The Farewell, l. 201. (a. 1764)

8 Nature is inexhaustible. (La nature est inépuisable.)

VOLTAIRE, Sur l'Ingratitude. (c. 1775)

NAUGHTY

9 The counsel of one naughty pack may make a wench too bold.

JEHAN PALSGRAVE, La Langue Françoyse, p. 632/1. (1530) The French is une ribaulde.

A Capuan wench, . . . a naughtie-pack and an harlot.

PHILEMON HOLLAND, tr., Livy. Bk. xxvi, ch. 12, sec. 592. (1600)

I never heard she was a naughty Pack.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

10 A naughty world.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, v, 1, 91. (1597)

It is a naughty house.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, ii, 1, 77. (1604)

The naughty reading in the Greek classics.

GEORGE FINLAY, History of the Greek Revolution. Vol. i, bk. i, ch. 3. (1861)

1
Some say it's naughty, but it's really very nice.
UNKNOWN, Title and refrain of English music-hall song. (1875)

She knew how to be "so naughty and so nice" in a way that society in London likes and never punishes.

OIDA (LOUISE DE LA RAMÉE), Moths. Ch. 15.

I know it is naughty, but then it is nice.

H. W. FOWLER, King's English, p. 58. (1906)

NEATNESS

2
Let every young man be neate, not nasty.

HEINRICH BULLINGER, Fiftie Godly Sermons, p. 154. (1577)

Rich, not gaudy.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, i, 3, 71. (1600)

Making this her impreze: Comely, not gaudy.

RICHARD BRATHWAIT, The English Gentlewoman, p. 399. (1631)

A little thin flowery border round, neat not gaudy.

CHARLES LAMB, Letters, i, 354. (1806)

Something neat but not too gaudy.

CLEVE B. ADAMS, The Black Door, p. 260. (1941)

3
Love neatness, but not showiness. (Dilige te ornari, sed parce dilige formam.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. iv, No. 4. (c. 175 B. C.)

We must present an appearance of neatness. (Adhibenda praeterea munditia est.)

CICERO, De Officiis, i, 36, 130. (c. 45 B. C.)

4
For whom dost thou tie up thy hair in simple neatness? (Cui flavam religas comam, | simplex munditiis?)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 5, l. 4. (23 B. C.)

We are charmed by neatness. (Munditiis capimur.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. iii, l. 133. (c. 1 B. C.)

Still to be neat, still to be drest

As you were going to a feast.

(Semper munditias, semper, Basilissa, decores, Semper compositas arte recente comas.)

BEN JONSON, Epicoene. Act i, sec. 1. (1609) An imitation of a Latin poem, printed in COLOMESIUS, Opuscula. Said to be by Bonifonius. See Whalley's note.

5
Neatness is never a mistake. (Munditia crimine nulla merent.)

OVID, De Medicamine Faciei, l. 28. (c. 1 B. C.)

Better be neat and tidy than tight and needy.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Brütches, p. 493. (1940)

6
As neat as ninepence.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 185. (1678)

As spruce as an onion.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 289.

As neat as a new pin.

JOHN WOLCOT (PETER PINDAR), Orson and Ellen. (1796) ALICE BROWN, Old Crow. Ch. 6.

Neat as wax.

SUSAN WARNER, The Wide Wide World. Ch. 16. (1850)

It was neat and clean as a new pin.

BELLAIRS, Murder Will Speak, p. 65. (1943)

NECESSITY

See also Must, Need

7
The might of necessity brooks no resistance. (τὸ τῆς ἀνάγκης ἔσθ' ἀδύητον σθένος.)

AESCHYLUS, Prometheus Bound, l. 104. (470 B. C.) There are two somewhat similar Latin proverbs, "Durum telum necessitas" (Necessity is a hard weapon), and "Ingens telum necessitas" (Necessity is a tremendous weapon). The Germans say, "Noth bricht Eisen" (Necessity breaks iron), and the Dutch have the same proverb. Mrs. Browning, in her translation of Aeschylus, renders the line, "Necessity doth front the universe | With an invincible gesture."

Necessity when threatening is more powerful than device of man. (Efficacior omni arte imminens necessitas.)

QUINTUS CURTIUS RUFUS, De Rebus Gestis Alexandri Magni. Bk. iv, sec. 3, l. 23. (c. A. D. 50)

One whip drives all. (μὴ μαστιγὴ πάντας ἐλαύνει.)

SUIDAS, Lexicon, x, 15. (c. 950)

Necessity the mistress. (Necessitas magistra.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. ii, p. 183. (1814)

8
Necessity is stronger far than art. (τέχνη δ' ἀνάγκης ἀσθενεστέρα μακρῶ.)

AESCHYLUS, Prometheus Bound, l. 513. (470 B. C.) The Latin form is, "Artis magistra necessitas" (Necessity is the mistress of art).

Nede taught hym wytte.

WILLIAM HORMAN, Vulgaria, fo. 52. (1519)

Necessitie, the inuentour of all goodnesse (as all authours in a maner, doo saye).

ROGER ASCHAM, Toxophilus, p. 134. (1545)

Necessity was the mother of eloquence. (Necessité feut inuentrice d'Eloquence.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, Prologue. (1548)

Surely necessitie is the deviser of all manner of shifts.

THOMAS UNDERDOWNE, Heliodorus (T.T.) p. 201. (1587)

Mister [necessity] makes men of craft.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 76. (c. 1595)

Necessitie is neuer without stratagems.

SAMUEL ROWLANDS, Greenes Ghost Hunting Conie Catchers, p. 32. (1602)

Art imitates Nature, and Necessity is the Mother of Invention.

RICHARD FRANCK, Northern Memoirs, p. 44. (1658)

Necessity, mother of invention!

WILLIAM WYCHERLEY, Love in a Wood. Act iii, sc. 3. (1672)

Necessity, doctor of stratagems. (Le besoin, docteur en stratagème.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. x, fab. 4. (1678) In x, 1, La Fontaine has, "Ingenious necessity furnished him an invention" (Nécessité l'ingénieuse Lui fournit une invention).

Want, the mistress of invention.

SUSANNA CENTLIVRE, The Busy-Body. Act i, sc. 1. (1720)

I soled my shoes with wood, which I cut from a tree. . . . No man could more verify the truth . . . that "Necessity is the mother of invention."

SWIFT, Gulliver's Travels. Pt. iv, ch. 10. (1726)

WALTER SCOTT, Journal, 11 July, 1830.

READE, Cloister and Hearth. Ch. 33. (1830)

Necessity—thou best of peacemakers,

As well as surest prompter of invention.

SCOTT, Pevenil of the Peak. Ch. 26. (1822)

Necessity is not only the mother uv invention, but the stepmother uv gardinsass.

JOSH BILLINGS (HENRY W. SHAW), (1858) Because neglected back yards become kitchen gardens in hard times.

We have got an old proverb . . . that "necessity is the mother of invention." Take away the necessity and the invention goes with it.

J. E. T. ROGERS, Industrial and Commercial History of England. Ch. 5. (1891) A proverb in many languages. The Italians say, "La povertà è la madre delle invenzioni"; the French, "Nécessité est mère d'invention"; the Germans, "Noth lehrt Kunst."

One of the essential differences between the English and the Spaniards is that the English describe necessity as the mother of invention, whereas the Spaniards refer to it as the enemy of chastity.

FRANCIS BEEDING, Heads Off at Midnight. Ch. 7. (1938)

1 Wise are they who do homage to Necessity. (οἱ προσκυνούντες τὴν Ἀνάγκησαν σοφοί.)

AESCHYLUS, Prometheus Bound, l. 936. (470 B. C.)

2 Is it a stern necessity? Yes, quite Diomedean. (καὶ ταύτ' ἀνάγκη μούστι; Διομήδεϊά γε.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Ecclesiazusae, l. 1029. (c. 393 B. C.) A Diomedean necessity was absolutely irresistible. ERASMUS, Adagia, i, ix, 4, has "Diomedea necessitas."

The proverbial necessity of Diomedes. (Διομήδεια λεγομένη ἀνάγκη.)

PLATO, The Republic. Sec. 493D. (c. 375 B. C.)

SCHOLIAST derives this proverbial expression from Diomedes binding Odysseus and driving him back to camp after the latter had attempted to kill him.

3 Necessity is a hard dart.

THOMAS BECON, A Newe Catechism, p. 601. (1560) Quoted as "the common proverb."

4 What you know to be necessary to you, never let slip. (Quod scieris opus esse tibi, dimittere noli.)

CATO (?), Dicta Catonis. Zurich Mss. 2. (c. 175 B. C.)

5 Al that comth, comth by necessitee.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. iv, l. 958. (c. 1380)

For which, men say, may nought disturbed be That shal bityden of necessitee.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde, li, 622.

It must be remembered that necessitas quod cogit defendit; that may be lawfully done which cannot be forborne.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Lives of the Poets: Pope. (1779) There are a number of law proverbs to the same effect; starting with Cicero's "Venia necessitati datur" (Pardon is given to necessity).

6 Necessity brings him to it. (Necessità 'l c' induce.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto xii, l. 87. (c. 1300)

Necessity makes an honest man a knave.

DANIEL DEFOE, Serious Reflections of Robinson Crusoe. Ch. 2. (1719)

Necessity does everything well.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Gifts. (1844)

7 Yet do I hold that mortal foolish who strives against the stress of necessity. (τῷ δ' ἀναγκαίῳ τρόπῳ | ὅς ἀντιτείνει, σκαῖον ἡγοῦμαι βροτόν.)

EURIPIDES, Hercules Furens, l. 282. (c. 420 B. C.)

A wise man never refuses anything to necessity. (Necessitati sapiens nihil umquam negat.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 473. (c. 43 B. C.)

8 Modesty bows to hard necessity. (ὁμῶς δ' ὅσοι γε δυνατόν αἰδεῖσθαι χρεών.)

EURIPIDES, Iphigenia at Aulis, l. 997. (c. 410 B. C.)

Necessity knows no shame. (Quidvis egestas imperat.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 671. (c. 200 B. C.)

9 Everything that depends on necessity is its slave in wise men's eyes. (πάν τοῦτ' ἀνάγκης δοῦλόν ἐστ' ἐν τοῖς σοφοῖς.)

EURIPIDES, Orestes, l. 488. (c. 410 B. C.)

Necessity will teach a man, however stupid, to be wise. (χρεία διδάσκει, καὶ βραδὺς τις ἢ σόφον.)

EURIPIDES, Fragments. Frag. 709. (c. 430 B. C.)

10 Necessity never made a good bargain.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1735

11 He saw that dire necessity was in very truth upon him. (ὦρα ἀναγκαίην ἀληθῶς προκειμένην.)

HERODOTUS, History. Bk. i, ch. 11. (c. 445 B. C.)

Nothing will fall upon men more dread than dire necessity. (οὐ γὰρ ἐτ' ἄλλοι | ῥίγιον ἀνθρώποισι κακῆς ἐπικείσεται ἀνάγκης.)

APOLLONIUS RHODIUS, Argonautica. Bk. iii, l. 429. (c. 225 B. C.) "Dire necessity" is used frequently by Apollonius. In bk. iv, l. 1390, he had "Constrained by necessity" (ἀναγκαίῃ βεβημένοι).

Before thee ever stalks the grim goddess Necessity. (Te semper anteit saeva Necessitas.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 35, l. 18. (23 B. C.)

Dire necessity. (Dira necessitas.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 24, l. 6.

Stern necessity. (Res dura.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. i, l. 563. (19 B. C.)

12 The two great gods, Persuasion and Necessity. (ὄνο θεοῦς μεγάλους, πειθῶ τε καὶ ἀναγκαίην.)

HERODOTUS, History. Bk. viii, ch. 110. (c. 445 B. C.) As Herodotus tells the story, Themistocles, besieging Andros with the Athenian fleet in 480 B. C., after the battle of Salamis, demanded money, adding that the Athenians had two great gods to help them get it, Persuasion and Necessity. The Andrians answered that they also had two great gods to prevent them from giving it, Inability and Poverty. The Andrians' gods won.

<sup>1</sup> Necessity weighs hard upon us. (ἀναγκαίη γὰρ ἐπέλγει.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. vi, l. 85; Odyssey, xix, 73. (c. 850 B. C.)

Strong necessity shall be laid upon thee. (κρατερὴ δ' ἐπικέλευσθ' ἀνάγκη.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. vi, l. 458; Odyssey, x, 273. Sometimes (as in xiv, 128) the phrase is simply, "Since needs must" (περ ἀνάγκη).

Unbending necessity is upon me. (κρατερὴ δέ μοι ἐπέλγει ἀνάγκη.)

UNKNOWN, Homeric Hymns: To Aphrodite, l. 130. (c. 600 B. C.)

Necessity constrains; I must submit. (ἀλλ' εἰς ἀνάγκην κέμεθ', ἦν φυλακτέον.)

EURIPIDES, Iphigenia in Taurica, l. 620. (c. 414 B. C.)

The hounds of Necessity were snarling at his heels.

VAN WYCK MASON, The Bucharest Ballerina Murders, p. 268. (1940)

<sup>2</sup> Necessity is the last and strongest weapon. (Necessitate quae ultimum ac maximum telum est.)

LIVY, Ab Urbe Condita. Bk. iv, ch. 28. (27 B. C.) Necessity is a powerful weapon. (Ingens telum necessitas.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. ii, cent. iii, No. 40. (1523) A mighty weapon is necessity. (Grande arma es la necessitas.)

CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 264. (1856)

<sup>3</sup> Necessity, the tyrant's plea.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 393. (1667)

Necessity, the Tyrant's Law.

SWIFT, Riddles, l. 23. (1724)

Necessity is the argument of tyrants.

WILLIAM PITT, Speech, 18 Nov., 1783.

<sup>4</sup> If it be bad to live in necessity, at least there is no necessity to live in necessity. (S'il est mauvais de vivre en nécessité, au moins de vivre en nécessité il n'est aucune nécessité.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 40. (1580)

No biting so grievous as that of enraged necessity. (Gravissimi sunt morsus irritatae necessitatis.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 47.

Circling about the spindle of Necessity. (Autour du fuseau de la Nécessité.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 12.

<sup>5</sup> Held fast by hard-forged necessity. (πίδκει σ' ἀφανούς σφυρηλάτους δεσμοῖς ἀνάγκας.)

PINDAR, Fragments. Frag. 207, Sandys. (c. 480 B. C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Consolatio ad Apollonium. Sec. 6.

<sup>6</sup> Even the gods do not fight against necessity. (ἀνάγκα δ' οὐδὲ θεοὶ μάχονται.)

PITTACUS, Apothegm. (c. 600 B. C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pittacus. Bk. i, sec. 77. Quoted by SIMONIDES, To Scopas (c. 475 B. C.); and by PLATO, Protagoras, 345D, and Laws, v, 741A. (c. 345 B. C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, iii, 41 (1523), with the Latin, "Adversum necessitatem ne dii quidem resistunt," with references to similar sayings by Homer, Euripides, Horace, Vergil, and others.

Not Ares' self wars with necessity. (πρὸς τὴν ἀνάγκην οὐδ' Ἄρης ἀνθίσταται.)

SOPHOCLES, Thyestes. Frag. 235. (c. 450 B. C.)

<sup>7</sup> Necessity gets what she wants from man. (Necessitas ab homine quae vult impetrat.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 448. (c. 43 B. C.) Necessity finds any weapon serviceable. (Necessitati quodlibet telum utile est.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 449.

Necessity makes beggars liars. (Necessitas egentem mendacem facit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 452.

Necessity takes what she wants, unless you give it. (Necessitas quod poscit nisi des eripit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 454.

What necessity hides is sought for in vain. (Necessitas quod celat frustra quaeritur.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 463.

How firm Necessity keeps her throne. (Necessitas quam pertinax regnum tenet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 464.

Necessity knows naught else but to conquer. (Nihil aliud scit necessitas quam vincere.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 470.

Necessity should be borne and not bemoaned. (Necessitatem ferre non flere addeceat.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 479.

<sup>8</sup> Necessity is coal-black.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 180. (1678)

<sup>9</sup> Necessity, which makes even the timid brave. (Necessitudo, quae etiam timidos fortis facit.)

SALLUST, Bellum Catilinae. Ch. 58. (c. 41 B. C.)

Need her corage taught.

SPENSER, The Faerie Queene. Bk. iii, canto vii, st. 26. (1590)

Necessity and Opportunity may make a Coward valiant.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3514. (1732)

Necessity makes even cowards brave.

THOMAS DAY, Sandford and Merton, p. 44. (1783)

<sup>10</sup> You cannot escape necessities; but you can conquer them. (Effugere non potes necessitates; potes vincere.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xxxi, sec. 3. (c. A. D. 64)

<sup>11</sup> Nature must obey necessity.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar, iv, 3, 226. (1599)

You'd swear that so divine a Creature Felt no Necessities of Nature.

SWIFT, Strephon and Chloe, l. 19. (1731)

1 He that stands upon a slippery place
Makes nice of no vile hold to stay him up.
SHAKESPEARE, King John, iii, 4, 137. (1596)
A man must plough with such oxen as he hath.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 125. (1678)

2 Necessity's sharp pinch!
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, ii, 4, 214. (1605)

3 Thy necessity is yet greater than mine.
SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, to a wounded soldier on the battlefield of Zutphen, 22 Sept., 1586. As Sidney was being carried from the field mortally wounded, a bottle of water was brought him to allay his burning thirst, but he passed it over, with the remark given above, to a wounded soldier whom he saw eyeing it longingly. See GREVILLE, Life of Sidney; HUME, History of England. Ch. 18.
My need is greater than his, as Sir Philip Sidney did not say.

J. J. CONNINGTON, Four Defences, p. 92. (1940)
4 I yield to hard necessity. (ταῦτ' ἀναγκάζει με δρᾶν.)

SOPHOCLES, Electra, l. 256. (c. 409 B. C.)
I was schooled by hard necessity. (ἐγὼ δ' ἀνάγκη προΐμαθον στέργειν κακά.)

SOPHOCLES, Philoctetes, l. 538. (c. 409 B. C.)
Necessity is a violent school mistress. (C'est une violente maîtresse d'école que la nécessité.)
MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 47. (1580)

5 The ordinary objection is of course raised: I have not the wherewithal to live. To this it may be retorted, Is there any reason why you should live?

TERTULLIAN, De Idolatria. Sec. 5. (c. A. D. 200)
I do not see the necessity of it. (Je n'en vois pas la nécessité.)

COUNT MARC PIERRE D'ARGENSON, to the Abbé
Pierre François Desfontaines, a famous French critic, who had been brought before him for publishing libels, and who excused himself by saying, "Après tout, il faut bien que je vive" (After all, I must live). (c.
1740) See VOLTAIRE, Œuvres Complètes, xlviii, 99. An echo of the French proverb,
"Il n'y a point d'homme nécessaire" (There is no man necessary), usually Englished, "No man is indispensable," the theme used by Wendell Willkie in his campaign against Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1940, when Roosevelt was running for a third term as President. Willkie usually put it, "There is no indispensable man."

6 What is the strongest thing? Necessity; for it alone masters all. (τί ἰσχυρότατον; ἀνάγκη μόνον γὰρ ἀνίκητον.)

THALES, Apolohegm. (c. 600 B. C.) See DIOGENES
LAERTIUS, Thales. Bk. i, sec. 35; also PLU-TARCH, Moralia: The Dinner of the Seven
Wise Men. Sec. 153D. Plutarch tells how Amasis, King of Egypt, sent a series of riddles to the seven wise men, and his own answer to "What is strongest" was τύχη (fortune, luck, or chance), but Thales disputed this and said that necessity was strongest of all because nothing could overcome it.

Not mine the saying is, but wisdom's saw:
"Stronger is naught than dread Necessity."

(λόγος γὰρ ἔστιν οὐκ ἐμὸς, σοφῶν δ' ἔπος. δεινῆς ἀνάγκης οὐδὲν ἰσχύειν πλέον.)

EURIPIDES, Helena, l. 513. (c. 430 B. C.) (Way tr.)
What thing is strongest? Necessitie, or else destinie, for it overcometh al accidentes. (Qual cosa è la piu forte? Necessita, ouer destino, perche vince ogni altro accidente.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 37. (1578)
Florio also is referring to the story told by Plutarch.

7 Whatever we are forced to do is distasteful.
(πᾶν γὰρ ἀναγκαῖον πῆγμ' ἀνιπαρὸν ἔφυ.)

THEOGNIS, Elegies, l. 472. (c. 600 B. C.) Quoted by ARISTOTLE, Art of Rhetoric, i, 11, 4, who says, "Compulsion is contrary to nature.
That is why what is necessary is painful."

8 Necessity empoisons wounds which it cannot heal. (La nécessité empoisonne les maux qu'elle ne peut guérir.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 249. (1746)
Necessity delivers us from the embarrassment of choice. (La nécessité nous délivre de l'embarras du choix.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 592. (1746)

II—Necessity Has No Law

9 Necessity has no law. (Legem non habet necessitas.)

ST. AUGUSTINE, Soliloquium Animae ad Deum,
c. 2. (c. A. D. 410) It may be worth noting that St. Augustine coined soliloquium, from solus loquor, a talking to one's self. LANG-
LAND, Piers Plowman, Text C, passus xiv, l.
45, gives the Latin phrase in the form in which it is usually quoted, "Necessitas non habet legem." "Feriis caret necessitas" (Necessity has no holidays) is another Latin proverbial phrase.

Nede ne hath no lawe.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. Text B, passus xx, l. 10. (1377) In the earlier English examples, it was always "need."

For as men sein, nede hath no lawe.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. iv, l.
1167. (1390) Dives and Pauper, fo. 123.
(1493) SKELTON, Colin Clout, l. 865. (a.
1529) etc., etc.

But this is a full olde sawe:

Nede had no maner of lawe.

UNKNOWN, Partonope of Blois, l. 8268. (c. 1440)

Not very fat fed, said this flebergebet;

But neede hath no lawe.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)
A necessitie which, after the common sayinge, hathe no law.

BISHOP NICHOLAS RIDLEY, A Piteous Lamentation for the Miserable Estate of the Church,
sig. D4 (a. 1555)

Touching the example of the poore which begge almes with glavering wordes, I answere, that necessitie hath no lawe.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 85. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Necessitie it hath no lawe.

SAMUEL ROWLANDS, Humours Looking Glasse, p. 9. (1608)

Signior Necessity, that hath no law.

R. C., Times' Whistle, iv, 1379. (1616)

Necessity hath no law. Feigned necessities, imaginary necessities, are the greatest cozenage men can put upon the Providence of God.

OLIVER CROMWELL, Speech, to Parliament, 12 Sept., 1654.

Necessity has no law. (La nécessité n'a point de loi.)

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Letter to General Corbinau, 7 Nov., 1806. The usually quoted French form is "Nécessité n'a pas de loi." A proverb in many languages. The Italians say (as quoted by FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 32). "La necessita no ha legge"; the Germans, "Noth kennt kein Gebot"; the Spaniards, "La necesidad carece de ley," and so on. Goethe put it, "Gesetz ist mächtig, mächtiger ist die Noth" (Law is mighty, necessity is mightier). "Necessity knows no law" probably refers, not to necessity in a general sense, but to necessity forced upon one by the need of self-defence. In other words, "Necessity knows no law" means "in defending one's self all means are legal." It was in this special legal sense, of course, that the proverb was used by the German chancellor, von Bethmann-Hollweg, in his speech before the Reichstag [August, 1914] in defence of the invasion of Belgium.

ARCHER TAYLOR, The Proverb, p. 91. (1931)

1 They say, Necessity has no Law. Now, this is a gross Mistake, as they interpret it, on Behalf of their unjustifiable Practices. There is no Necessity but this, not to do Evil upon any urgent Necessity whatsoever.

DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 193. (1709)

2 Necessity has no law; I know some attorneys of the same.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734.

Necessity has no Law. Why? Because 'tis not to be had without money.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1755.

Necessity knows no law, but it is intimately acquainted with many lawyers.

UNKNOWN, Poor Richard Jr's Almanack, p. 37. (1906)

3 Necessity gives the law; but does not obey it. (Necessitas dat legem, non ipsa accipit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 444. (c. 43 B. C.)

III—To Make a Virtue of Necessity

4 We give to necessity the praise of virtue. (Laudem virtutis necessitati damus.)

QUINTILIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae. Bk. i, ch. 8, sec. 14. (a. A. D. 80) Another Latin form is,

"Necessitatem in virtutem commutare" (To change necessity into a virtue). HADRIANUS JULIUS cites this form in his Additions to the Adages of Erasmus, referring to it as a very familiar proverb among his countrymen.

Make a virtue of necessity. (Fac de necessitate virtutem.)

SAINT JEROME, Epistles. Epis. liv, sec. 6. (c. A. D. 400) Repeated in slightly different form in In Libros Rufini, iii, 2, "Facis de necessitate virtutem" (You make of necessity a virtue). Jerome appears to have been the one who whipped the phrase into its generally accepted form.

Making of necessity a virtue. (Faciendo de necessitate virtutem.)

MATTHEW PARIS, Chronica Maiora (Record Ser.), i, 20. (a. 1259)

Thus maketh vertue of necessitee.

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde, iv, 1586. (c. 1380) Thanne is it wisdom, as it thinketh me,

To maken vertu of necessitee.

CHAUCER, The Knightes Tale, l. 2183. (c. 1386) I made vertu of necessitee.

CHAUCER, The Squieres Tale, l. 585.

He made of necessity virtue. (Faisoyt de nécessité vertus.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 11. (1534) The Italians say, "Il savio fa della necessita virtù"; the Dutch, "Van den nood eene deugd maken." It is a universal proverb.

Others made of necessity a virtue. (Autres faisoient de nécessité vertu.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. v, ch. 21. (1552)

Whereof followeth a vertue of necessitie.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 21. (1574) Pettie, tr.

It is a point of wisdom (saide Cavallero) to make a curtesie of necessitie, according to the olde Proverbe.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, iv, 148. By the vertue of necessity.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 100. (1576) They were enforced . . . of necessitie, to make a vertue.

THOMAS STOCKER, The Civile Warres of the Lowe Countries, i, 28b. (1583)

Shee was faine to make a vertue of her neede.

ROBERT GREENE, Pandosto, p. 10. (1588)

Are you content . . .

To make a virtue of necessity

And live, as we do, in this wilderness?

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona, iv, 1, 62. (1594)

Teach thy necessity to reason thus:

There is no virtue like necessity.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, i, 3, 278. (1595)

Need makes vertue.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 80. (c. 1595)

I made a vertue of necessity, and went to breakefast in the sunne.

JOHN TAYLOR, Pennyles Pilgrimage. (1618)

Industrious people . . . making a rare vertue of necessity, for the same thing which makes a Parrot speake, makes them to labour.

JAMES HOWELL, Instructions for Forreine Travell (Arber). Ch. 3, p. 62. (1642)

Making a virtue of necessity.

SIR SAMUEL TUKE, The Adventures of Five Hours. Act iv, sc. 1. (1663) SMOLLETT, Roderick Random. Ch. 30. (1748) SHAW, The Philanderer. Act iii. (1893) WENTWORTH, In the Balance, p. 62. (1941) etc., etc.

Make a merit of necessity.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 5. (1843)

NECK

<sup>1</sup>
A thousand necks, but not mine.

J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 2. (1817) Among the Arabs, a blow on the neck is considered a much greater affront than a slap in the face. Thus, "I struck him on the neck" means that I insulted him. The origin, possibly, of "He got it in the neck."

<sup>2</sup>
Would that the Roman populace had but one neck! (Utinam populus Romanus unam cervicem haberet!)

CALIGULA, when "angered at the rabble for applauding a faction which he opposed." (c. A. D. 40) See Suetonius, Caligula. Ch. 30, sec. 3. Dion Cassius and Seneca also credit the saying to Caligula, but other writers ascribe it to Nero.

<sup>3</sup>
She is welcome to the hospitalities of this neck of the woods.

ALICE CARY, Married, Not Mated, p. 137. (1856) Central Park ain't in it with this neck of the woods.

O. HENRY, Cabbages and Kings, p. 50. (1904) Of all the old blow-hards that ever come into this neck of the woods.

T. K. HOLMES, The Man from Tall Timber, p. 154. (1919)

<sup>4</sup>
He fell upon my neck. (In collum invasit.)

CICERO, Philippics. Phil. ii, ch. 31, sec. 77. (44 B. C.) Put your arms around my neck. (Collo dare braccia circum.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. vi, l. 700. (19 B. C.)

Arms hanging around your neck. (Pendentia braccia collo.)

TIBULLUS, Elegies. Bk. iii, eleg. 6, l. 45. (c. 10 B. C.)

He tried to embrace her neck. (Collum amplexu petebat.)

QUINTILIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae. Bk. iv, ch. 2, sec. 124. (c. A. D. 80)

He would . . . make two fellows who hated, embrace and fall upon each other's neck.

RICHARD STEELE, The Spectator. No. 76. (1711)

<sup>5</sup>
In the House of Commons . . . where the parties were, if I may use the expression, neck and neck.

JOHN W. CROKER, Croker Papers, i, 40. (c. 1812) They . . . entered the winning-field nearly neck-and-neck.

THEODORE HOOK, Jack Brag. Ch. 3. (1837) At Harton we ran a neck and neck race.

F. W. FARRAR, Julian Home. Ch. 31. (1859)

It's late in the day, and a neck and neck thing.
MORTIMER COLLINS, Marquis and Merchant, ii, 3. (1871)

<sup>6</sup>
Submit your neck to the yoke, and let your soul receive discipline. (Collum vestrum subiicite iugo, et suscipiat anima vestra disciplinam.)

Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, li, 26. (c. 190 B. C.)

Boweth your nekke under that blisful yoke.

CHAUCER, The Clerk's Tale. l. 57. (c. 1386)

My self . . . have stoop'd my neck under your injuries.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, iii, 1, 19. (1595)

Bending down His corrigible neck.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, iv, 14, 74. (1606)

Sturdiest Oaks Bow'd their Stiff necks.

MILTON, Paradise Regained. iv, 418. (1671)

<sup>7</sup>
We would slippe our heades out of the coler.

ARTHUR GOLDING, tr., Calvin on Deuteronomy, cxxv, 772. (1583)

Now thy proud neck bears half my burthen'd yoke;

From which even here, I slip my wearied head.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, iv, 4, 112. (1592)

He draweth his necke out of the collar.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 189. (1633)

Religion . . . will not teach thy servant to slip his neck out of the collar.

DANIEL DYKE, Philemon, p. 242. (1633)

[Parsons], having got his neck out of the collar, accused others for not drawing weight enough.

THOMAS FULLER, Church-History of Britain Bk. ix, ch. 8, p. 30. (1655)

To slip one's neck out of the collar.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 350. (1678)

<sup>8</sup>
Fro Jerusalem unto Burgoyne

Ther nis a fairer nekke y-wis,

To fele how smothe and softe it is.

GUILLAUME DE LORRIS, Roman de la Rose (c. 1240) CHAUCER (?) tr., l. 554. (c. 1365)

His nekke whyt was as the flour-de-lys.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 238

<sup>9</sup>
To break the neck of an affair; to hinder anything being done; or, to do more than half.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Dictionary: Neck. (1755)

He had done enough (in his own language) 'to break the neck of the day's work'.

LOCKHART, Life of Scott. Vol. ii, ch. 14. (1837)

The neck of the winter was broken.

MRS. LYNN LINTON, Paston Carew. Ch. 42. (1886)

<sup>10</sup>
Haul in your neck, You've got it stuck out for trouble.

KATHLEEN KNIGHT, Rendezvous with the Past, p. 213. (1940)

Why should you stick out your neck?

G. H. COXE, Silent Are the Dead, p. 212. (1941)

I was a little tired of sticking my neck out for some one to hang a rope around.

CAROLYN DAWSON, Remind Me to Forget, p. 86. (1942)

<sup>1</sup> The liberty of the subject is brought in neck and heels, as they say.

ROGER NORTH, Examen, p. 72. (1740)

Chuck them neck and crop . . . down a dark staircase.

SCOTT, Tom Cringle's Log. Ch. 16. (1833)

We're going in neck and crop for Fashion.

DICKENS, Our Mutual Friend. Pt. i, ch. 15. (1865)

Now 'tis to turn us out of the choir neck and crop.

THOMAS HARDY, Under the Greenwood Tree. Pt. ii, ch. 2. (1872)

So he is turned out of the house, neck and crop.

S. BARING-GOULD, Arminell. Ch. 29. (1890)

<sup>2</sup> I'll get it in the neck. (Actumst de collo meo.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus, l. 595. (c. 194 B.C.)

Humble Virtue gets it in the neck.

WILL IRWIN, Love Sonnets: Epilogue. (1902)

You'll soon be getting it in the neck if you stay in politics.

D. G. PHILLIPS, The Plum Tree, p. 26. (1905)

You would have got it where the chicken got the axe.

JAMES STEPHENS, Desire. (1928)

The dean got it in the neck.

H. C. BAILEY, Bishop's Crime, p. 145. (1941)

<sup>3</sup> I'll first see thy neck as long as my arm.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 261. (1678)

<sup>4</sup> Neck or nothing. (A fiacca collo.)

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 347 (1678) A determination to take all risks.

To scamper, neck or nothing, after a mad galloping jade.

CIBBER, Lady's Last Stake. Act iii. (1708)

Worth venturing Neck or nothing for.

MYLES DAVIES, Athenae Britannicae, i, 321. (1715)

Neck or nothing, for the king loves no cripples.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 266. (1721)

"A profane jest upon those who are like to fall, wishing that they may either break their neck or come off safe; for breaking a limb will make them useless subjects."

Away went Gilpin, neck or nought.

COWPER, John Gilpin's Ride, l. 89. (1782)

She rides, to use the language of English sportsmen, "neck or nothing."

CLARKE, Travels in Russia, p. 333. (1810)

<sup>5</sup> Break the neck

Of that proud man that did usurp his back

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, v, 5, 88. (1595)

I had as lief thou didst break his neck as his finger.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, i, 1, 153. (1600)

Wilt thou set thy foot o' my neck?

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, ii, 5, 206. (1599)

And thus I set my foot on's neck.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline, iii, 3, 92. (1609)

Your foot is on our necks.

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. vi, l. 150. (1847)

<sup>6</sup> He's in this up to his neck.

A. M. STEIN, The Case of the Absent-Minded Professor, p. 103 (1943)

NEED

See also Must, Necessity

<sup>7</sup> "Symond," quod John, "by god, nede has na peer."

CHAUCER, The Reves Tale, l. 106. (c. 1386)

It is an old-said sawe That Nede hath no law.

JOHN SKELTON, Colin Clout, l. 864. (a. 1529)

NECESSITY HAS NO LAW, see under NECESSITY.

<sup>8</sup> They need much whom nothing will content.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 38. (1639)

Cited by RAY, p. 124; FULLER, No. 4969.

I may see him need, but I'll not see him bleed.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 42. Cited by

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 187 (1670), with the comment, "Parents will usually say this of prodigal or undutiful children; meaning, I will be content to see them suffer a little hardship, but not any great calamity."

He stands in great need that borrows the cat-dish

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 225.

<sup>9</sup> When the child is christ'ned, every man will be god father.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 283. (1639)

When the child is christ'ned, you may have god-fathers enough. When a mans need is supplied, people are ready to offer their assistance.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 69. (1670)

Now that I no longer need,

I can get full many a feed.

C. H. SPURGEON, Salt-Cellars. (1885)

<sup>10</sup> Once in tenne yeeres, one man hath neede of another. (Ogni dieci anni, l' uno ha bisogno del' altro.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 33. (1578)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3732. (1732)

One often has need of some one less than oneself (On a souvent besoin d'un plus petit que soi.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. ii, fab. 11. (1664)

<sup>11</sup> We live not as we would but as need drives us. (ζῶμεν οὐχ ὡς βουλόμεσθ', ἀλλ' ὡς ἡμέας ὁ καιρὸς ἔλκει.)

HERODES, Mimes. No. ii, l. 9. (c. A.D. 100)

<sup>12</sup> Nede taught hym wytte.

WILLIAM HORMAN, Vulgaria, fo. 52. (1519)

<sup>13</sup> Need makes greed.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 265. (1721)

<sup>14</sup> Calling them, Bisognosi d'honore, as much to say as needy of honor.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 34. (1580)

<sup>15</sup> Needs must. (Necessum est.)

PLAUTUS, Rudens, l. 1331 (c. 200 B.C.)

Nedes mot that nede schal.

GOWER, Confessio Amantis, i, 291. (c. 1390)

We beleuee them no more then needs must.

GRIMSTONE, Siege of Ostend, p. 185. (1604)

She shall go, if needs must.

BROWNING, Balaustion's Adventure, l. 2287. (1871)

Needs must when necessity drives.

WENTWORTH, Dead or Alive. Ch. 12. (1936)

NEEDS MUST WHEN DEVIL DRIVES, see under DEVIL.

1 Need will have its course.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 180. (1678)

2 How much there is I do not need. (Quam multa non desidero!)

SOCRATES, when a great quantity of gold and silver was being carried in procession. (c. 400 B. C.) See CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. v, ch. 32, sec. 91.

What is not needed is dear at a farthing. (Quod non opus est, asse carum est.)

CATO, Reliquae, 79. (c. 175 B. C.) As quoted by SENECA, Ad Lucilium, xciv, 27.

As much need on't, as he hath of the pip, or of a cough.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 187. (1678)

As much need of it as a toad of a side pocket.

FRANCIS GROSE, A Classical Dictionary of the Vulgar Tongue: Toad. (1785)

A bull's got no more use for religion than a toad for side-pockets.

QUILLER-COUCH, Troy Town. Ch. 10. (1888)

3 When need is highest, help is nighest.

W. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 61. (1852) The Germans say, "Wenn die Noth am grössten, ist die Hilf' am nächsten."

4 DARKEST JUST BEFORE DAWN, see under DAWN.

Toiling much and spoiling more, great charge small gains or none,

Soone sets thine host at needams shore, to crave the beggers bone.

THOMAS TUSSER, Five Hundreth Pointes of Good Husbandrie: The Inholders Posie. (1573)

Idleness is the coach to bring a man to Needome, prodigality the post-horse.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons, p. 466. (1629)

They are said to be on the highway to Needham who hasten to poverty.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England: Suffolk, iii, 161. (1662)

They are already a long way on the road to Needham.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk. Ch. 7 (1869)

5 Need (they say) maketh the old wife and man both to trudge.

UNKNOWN, New Custom. Act iii, sc. 1. (1573) Hunger breaketh stone-walls, and hard need makes the old wife trot.

TOPSELL, The Historie of Serpents, 780. (1608) Need makes the old wife trot. Need also makes the young and lusty, as well as the old and infirm, go trotting apace, to relieve their Wants. It forces Men too as well as Women, to stir their Stumps, in order to get their Living.

DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 192. (1709)

Modesty, as well as Need, makes the old Wife trot.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3433. (1732)

Just what gars the auld wives trot—nesheesity. WALTER SCOTT, Old Mortality. Ch. 8. (1816)

6 Neode makath heald wif eorne.

THOMAS WRIGHT, Essays on the Middle Ages, i, 149. Quoting a proverb of c. 1210.

Nede makyth the old wyffe to trotte.

RICHARD HILLS, Common-Place Book (1858), p. 140. (c. 1530)

Neede maketh the olde wife trot.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 10. (1546)

Cited by all later compilers of proverbs, and in frequent use. The French say, "Besoin faire vieille trotter"; the Italians, "Bisogno fa trotter le vecchia"; the Spaniards, "La necesidad hace á la viega trotar."

Need gars naked men run, and sorrow gars websters spin.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 82. (c. 1595)

Need makes the naked man run.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 225. (1639)

Need makes the naked quean spin.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 124. (1670)

7 Alacke, thought Robert, nede hath no cure.

UNKNOWN, Roberte the Devyll, 39. (1480)

NEEDLE

8 To go through St. Peter's needle. To have serious misfortune. Applied to a man who has become a bankrupt and is sold up.

J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 134. (1917)

THROUGH THE NEEDLE'S EYE, see under CAMEL.

9 To look for a bay-leaf in a wedding-cake. (Loreolam in mustaceo quaerere.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. v, epis. 20. (51 B. C.)

Wedding cakes were baked on bay leaves. Another form is the well known, "Acum in meta foeni quaerere" (To look for a needle in a pyramid of hay), that is, in a haystack. To seke out one lyne in all hys workes were to go looke a nedle in a meadow.

SIR THOMAS MORE, Works, p. 837. (1532)

The poore man . . . gropeth in the darke to find a needle in a bottle [bundle] of hay.

ROBERT GREENE, A Quip for an Upstart Courtier. (1592)

He is gone to seek a hare in a hen's nest, a needle in a bottle of hay.

HENRY PORTER, The Two Angrie Women of Abington. (1599)

By wondrous accident perchance one may

Grope out a needle in a load of hay.

JOHN TAYLOR, A Kicksey Winsey. Pt. vii. (1619)

I must rout among your letters, a needle in a bottle of hay.

SWIFT, Journal to Stella, 22. Oct., 1711. See also SHADWELL, Sham Prince. Act ii, sc. 1.

(1720) MARRYAT, Peter Simple, ch. 22.

(1834) STEVENSON, Kidnapped. Ch. 20.

(1886) etc, etc. The French say, "Chercher une aiguille dans une botte de foin"; the Germans, "Eine Nadel in's Heu suchen."

It's ill looking for a needle in a haystack.

KINGSLEY, Westward Ho! Ch. 30. (1855)

To feel for a needle in the bottom of the sea.
(‘Hai ti mo chên.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 193. (1872)
Like looking for a needle in a bundle of hay.

SHAW, John Bull's Other Island. Act iii. (1904)
There's plenty of haystack here to hide a needle in.

G. and D. COLE, Tooper's End, p. 158. (1942)
Somebody evidently lost a needle in my haystack.
CAROLYN DAWSON, Remind Me to Forget, p. 111. (1942)

It was the needle-in-the-haystack, the nigger-in-the-woodpile, the clue to something he did not know what.

MARGARET CARPENTER, Experiment Perilous, p. 221. (1943)

1
You will make me seek the needle where I stack it not.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 376. (1721)
You seek the Needle where you never stuck it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5988. (1732)
If you lose your needle in the grass, seek it in the grass. (Ts'ao li chih chên, ts'ao li hsin.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1974. (1875)

2
You might have heard a needle fall.
The hush was so profound.

H. S. LEIGH, A Last Resource. (a. 1883) See also under PIN.

3
You have touched it with a needle. (Tetigisti acu.)

PLAUTUS, Rudens, l. 1306. (c. 200 B.C.)
“You've hit it!”

4
Like as the am'rous needle joys to bend
To her magnetic friend.

QUARLES, Emblems. Bk. i, emb. 13. (1635)
And the touch'd needle trembles to the pole.

POPE, The Temple of Fame, l. 431. (1711)
True as the needle to the pole.

BARTON BOOTH, Song. (1733) See under TRUE.
So shakes the needle and so stands the pole.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 196. (1818)

5
No needle has two sharp points. (Chên wu liang t'ou li.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 51
(1875) No man can do two things at a time.

NEGATIVE

6
Euen those two Negatiues . . . would be conformable enough, to conclude an Affirmative.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Works i, 293. (1593)

In one speech two negatives affirm.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, The Metamorphosis of Ajax (1814), p. 126. (1596)

If your four negatives make your two affirmatives, why then, the worse for my friends and the better for my foes.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, v, 1, 24. (1599)

Two negatives make an affirmative.

THOMAS FULLER, Good Thoughts in Worse Times. Ch. 17. (1647)

In the English language two negatives amount to an affirmative.

SMOLLETT, The Adventures of an Atom. (1769)

7
One single positive weighs more

You know, than negatives a score.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Epistle to Fleetwood Shepherd, l. 131. (1689)

NEGLECT

8
A little neglect may breed great mischief.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, The Way to Wealth. (1736)

9
Nothing is easy to the negligent.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3662. (1732)

There are a number of legal proverbs about negligence, for example, “Culpa lata dolo aequiparatur” (Gross negligence is equivalent to intentional wrong), and “Culpa sua damnum sentiens, non intelligitur damnum pati” (He who loses by his own negligence is not considered to have suffered any damage)

10
In neglected fields there springs up bracken which you must burn. (Neglectis urenda filix innascitur agris.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. iii, l. 37. (35 B.C.)
My talent, injured by long neglect, is much inferior to what it was before. A fertile field, if it be not renewed by constant ploughing, will produce nothing but weeds and thorns. (Fertilis, assiduo si non renovatur aratro, nil nisi cum spinis gramen habebit ager.)

OWID, Tristia. Bk. v, eleg. xii, l. 23. (c. A.D. 11)

NEGRO

11
He was unable to change the complexion. (το μὲν χρώμα μεταβαλλεῖν.)

AESOP, Fables: The Ethiopian. (c. 570 B.C.)

The fable of the man who bought a negro and thinking his dark color was due to dirt, tried to scrub it off. The proverbial form, cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, x, 88, is. Αἰθιοπα οὐ λευκαίνεται (The Ethiopian cannot be whitened), of which Erasmus gives the Latin, “Aethiops non albescit.” Aesop uses another phrase, Αἰθιοπα σμήχειν (To whiten the Ethiopian), of which the Latin is “Aethiopem dealbare.”

I am endeavoring to wash an Ethiopian white (Αἰθιοπα σμήχειν ἐπιχειρῶ.)

LUCIAN, Adversus Indoctum. Sec. 28. (c. A.D. 170) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, iv, 50, with the Latin, “Aethiopem lavas,” and the comment that the proverb originated in Aesop's fable.

Hot baths never yet made an Ethiope white.

SADI, Bustan. Ch. v, Apologue 7. (c. 1257)

Here, therefore, do ye nothing else than, as the common proverb is, go about to make an Ethiope white.

THOMAS BECON, Early Works (P.S.), p. 40 (1543)

This is the blackamoor that by washing was turned white.

THOMAS DEKKER, The Honest Whore. Pt. ii, act i, sc. 1. (1604)

You wash the blackamoor white in endeavouring to make a Spaniard of a monsieur.

WILLIAM WYCHERLEY, The Gentleman Dancing-Master. Act iv, sc. 1. (1604)

I wash a Negro, Loosing both paines and cost.

MIDDLETON AND DEKKER, The Roaring Girl. Act i, sc. 1. (1611)

To wash the Moore, is labouring in vaine,
For th' colour that he has, is di'd in graine.

RICHARD BRATHWAIT, Omphale, 275. (1621)

The French say, "A laver la tête d'un More on perd sa lessive" (In washing the head of a Moor one loses his soap).

The Bath of the Blackamoor hath sworn not to whiten.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1103. (1640)

They saw one Fool and one Want-wit washing of an Ethiopian with intention to make him white, but the more they washed him, the blacker he was.

JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress (1877). Pt. ii, p. 336. (1684)

I should suspect the whole to be a plot set on foot to wash a blackamoor white.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Clarissa, ii, 160. (1748)

I have exhibited my imbecility in trying to wash the blackamoor white.

JOHN WOLCOT (PETER PINDAR), Nil Admirari: Postscript. (1799)

All the sympathisin' ladies in Old England can't make an Ethiopian change his skin.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws Ch. 5. (1843)

If any one could wash a blackamoor white, it would be Mrs. Beecher Stowe.

J. R. PLANCHÉ, Extravaganzas, iv, 280. (1853)

We may yet find a rose-water that will wash the negro white.

R. W. EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Works and Days. (1870)

1 It is said that the freedmen, in the first glow of their new rights, proposed to call the Whites Plain People, in return for the term Colored People, by which they were designated.

MAXIMILAN S. DE VERE, Americanisms, p. 281. (1871)

2 Do what you please for a negro, he will cheat you. . . . You know what their maxim is: "God gives black men what white men forget"

MARIA EDGEWORTH, The Grateful Negro. (1804)

3 Our Captain counts the image of God nevertheless his image cut in ebony as if done in ivory, and in the blackest Moores he sees the representation of the King of heaven.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: The Good Sea-Captain. (1642)

God made the white man, God made the black man, the devil made the mulatto.

UNKNOWN, Chambers's Encyclopedia, vi, 22. (1901)

4 All coons look alike to me.

ERNEST HOGAN, Title and refrain. (1896)

All towns looked alike to him as he worked mainly in the dark.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), The Man Higher Up. (1908) Of a burglar.

5 Do you permit a negro to be more of a gentleman than yourself?

THOMAS JEFFERSON, to his grandson, Jefferson Randolph, when the latter did not return the bow of a negro they passed while riding. See RANDOLPH, Domestic Life of Thomas Jefferson, p. 337; HIRST, Life and Letters of Thomas Jefferson, p. 576.

6 Can the Ethiopian change his skin, or the leopard his spots? (Si mutare potest aethiops pellem suam, aut pardus varietates suas.)

Old Testament: Jeremiah, xiii, 23. (c. 700 B. C.)

The old Greek proverb is, τὸν Αἰθίορα ἐκ τῆς ὀφθαλμοῦ (The Ethiopian is known by his looks).

Can the Aethiope chaunge or alter his skinne? or the Leopard his hiew?

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 42. (1579)

In a leopard the spots are not observed.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 662 (1640)

Wash a dog, comb a dog, still a dog remains a dog.

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 11. (1869)

A leopard does not change his spots. (Pardus maculas non deponit.)

HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 317.

7 He soon discovered the "nigger in the woodpile."

FRANK MOORE, Rebellion Records, i, iii, 21. (1861)

There's a nigger in the fence somewhere.

THURLOW WEED, Autobiography, p. 477. (a. 1882)

Once 'twas the nigger in the woodpile; now it's the nigger in the steeple.

JOEL C. HARRIS, Mingo, p. 186. (1884)

He was always looking for a nigger in the fence

HERBERT QUICK, Yellowstone Nights, p. 286 (1911)

It is indeed difficult to know just how many Africans are hid away in this woodpile.

Debate, U.S. Congress, 19 Jan., 1932.

Swallowed the woodpile including the niggers.

OGDEN NASH, They Don't Speak English in Paris. (1935)

There's an enigma in the woodpile.

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, Kitty Foyle, p. 282. (1939)

The nominee who seems to be

The turkey in the straw.

PHYLLIS MCGINLEY, Ballad of the Pre-...tion Vote. (1940)

If there is a nigger in the local fence, he's not just an ordinary citizen.

JOHN RHODE, Signal for Death, p. 31. (1941)

We've been through the woodpile and the Ethiopians are still under Mussolini.

R. L. GOLDMAN, Murder Behind the Mike, p. 59. (1942)

You're the colored man in that woodpile.

CLAYTON RAWSON, No Coffin for the Corpse, p. 268. (1942)

The trail may lead to a colored gent in the woodpile.

LEE THAYER, Murder Is Out, p. 181. (1942)

There must be a nigger in the woodpile. Or a blonde.

PHILIP WYLIE, Corpses at Indian Stones, p. 280. (1943)

He's the nigger in the stockpile.

LESLIE FORD, All for the Love of a Lady, p. 158. (1944)

NEIGHBOR

<sup>1</sup> A great thing is neighbor unto neighbor. (μέγα γείτονι γείτων.)

ALCMAN, Fragments. Frag. 51. (c. 630 B.C.)

Quoted by SCHOLIAST, Iliad, xxii, 305, who comments on the omission of the word "good." See EDMONDS, Lyra Graeca, i, 85. More freely rendered. "Neighbors mean much to each other."

<sup>2</sup> Do not irritate a quarrelsome neighbor.

AMEN-EM-APT, Teaching How to Live. Col. xxii, l. 20. (c. 700 B.C.) Oesterley, tr.

An Attic neighbor. (Ἀττικὸς πάροικος.)

ARISTOTLE, Rhetoric. Bk. ii, ch. 21, sec. 13. (c. 330 B.C.) Proverb: for a restless and threatening neighbor; founded on the description by THUCYDIDES, bk. i, ch. 70, of the restless and troublesome Athenians.

<sup>3</sup> What a man does should not worry his neighbors. (ἃ γὰρ τις αὐτὸς ποιεῖ ταῦτα λέγεται τοῖς πέλας μὴ νευεῶν.)

ARISTOTLE, Rhetoric. Bk. ii, ch. 6. (330 B.C.)

Mole don't see w'at his naber doin'.

JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS, Uncle Remus: Plantation Proverbs. (1880)

<sup>4</sup> Nothing is more troublesome than neighbors. (οὐδὲν γειτονίας χαλεπώτερον.)

ARISTOTLE, Rhetoric. Bk. ii, ch. 21, sec. 15. (330 B.C.)

Hateful and searching is the eye of a neighbor. (δυσημερής καὶ βάσανος ὁ τῶν γειτόνων ὄφθαλμός.)

ALCIPHON, Letter to Eucymon. (c. A.D. 200)

<sup>5</sup> Better is it for a man to fling himself into a fiery furnace than to cause his neighbor to blush in public.

Babylonian Talmud: Kethuboth, fo. 67b. (c. 450)

Let the honor of your neighbor be as dear to you as your own.

Babylonian Talmud: Pirké Aboth, ii, 15.

A man will destroy his own house in order to take revenge on his neighbor.

Babylonian Talmud: Sanhedrin, fo. 102b.

Woe to the wicked and woe to his neighbour; happy the pious and happy his neighbour.

Babylonian Talmud: Sukkah, fo. 56b.

<sup>6</sup> He slayeth his neighbour that taketh away his [means of] living.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xxxiv, 26. (c. 190 B.C.) Oesterley, tr.

<sup>7</sup> In the name of thy neighebour thou schalt understande the name of thy brother.

CHAUCER, Personnes Tale. Sec. 442. (c. 1386)

<sup>8</sup> He's an ill neighbour that is not missed.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 75. (1639)

<sup>9</sup> Who more ready to call her neighbour scold, than the arrantest scold i' th' parish?

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 79. (1639)

Who more ready to call her Neighbour Scold, than the arrantest Scold in all the Street?

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5712. (1732)

<sup>10</sup> You must ask your neighbour if you shall live in peace.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 203. (1639)

Cited by Ray and Fuller.

No man can live longer in peace than his neighbour pleases.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 258. (1721)

The most pious may not live in peace, if it does not please his wicked neighbor.

SCHILLER, Wilhelm Tell. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 124 (1804)

<sup>11</sup> He lives well at home, that is beloved abroad

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Bien. (1611)

All is well with him who is beloved of his neighbours.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 11. (1640)

<sup>12</sup> Hast thou heard a word against thy neighbor? Let it die within thee, trusting that it will not burst thee.

Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, xix, 10. (c. 190 B.C.)

<sup>13</sup> Love your neighbour, yet pull not down your hedge.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 147.

(1640) Quoted by FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1754. The Germans have the same proverb, "Liebe deinen Nachbar, reiss aber den Zaun nicht ein." They also say, "Zwischen Nachbars Garten ist ein Zaun gut" (A hedge is a good thing between neighbors' gardens).

A wall between preserves love.

SAMUEL PALMER, Moral Essays on Proverbs, p. 168. (1710)

You may love your Neighbour, and yet not hold his stirrup

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5953. (1732)

You have taught me to be cautious in this wide world. Love your neighbor, but don't pull down your hedge.

ARTHUR MURPHY, The Citizen. Act i, sc. 2. (1761)

A hedge between keeps friendship green.

CHEALES, Proverbial Folk-Lore, p. 93. (1875)
They were so friendly that it was once proposed to cut it down . . . but the end of it was that the hedge remained.

MRS. OLIPHANT, Neighbours on the Green. Ch. 1. (1889)

Shut your door, and you will make your neighbour a good one.

F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 103. (1902)
Good fences make good neighbors.

ROBERT FROST, Mending Wall. (1914) Quoted.

1
Here is a talk of the Turk and the Pope, but my next neighbour doth me more harm than either of them both.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1164. (1640)
Here's talk of the Turk and the Pope, but it's my next neighbour that does me the hurt.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 4. (1659)
Cited by Ray and Fuller, both with "harm" for "hurt."

2
A bad neighbor is as great a plague as a good one is a blessing; he who enjoys a good neighbor has a precious possession. (πῆμα κακὸς γείτων, ὄσσον τ' ἀγαθὸς μετ' ὄνειαρ.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 346. (c. 800 B. C.)
Men seyn an olde sawe, who hath a goode neighbour hath a goode morowe.

UNKNOWN, Merlin, p. 434. (c. 1450)
You have a good neighbour then, And by consequence a good morrow.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, p. 57. (1591)

A good neighbour, a good morrow.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 124. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 165. (1732)

Good Neighbours, and true Friends, are two things.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1724. (1732)
A good neighbor is a great blessing. (Vicus bonus, ingens bonum.)

PONTANUS, Collectio Proverbiorum, p. 218. (1778) Similarly, "A bad neighbor is a great evil" (Vicus malus, ingens malum). The Spanish form is, "Quien tiene buen vezino, tiene buen amigo" (He who has a good neighbor has a good friend).

Better good neighbors near than relatives far off. (Yüan ch'in pu yü ch'in lin.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 184. (1872)
To have a good neighbor is to find something precious.

HART, 700 Chinese Proverbs. No. 352. (1937)

3
Your own property is at stake when your neighbor's house is on fire. (Tua res agitur, paries cum proximus ardet.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 18, l. 84. (20 B. C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, vi, 71.

As usual, there is a proverb on the other side, "Alienos agros irrigas, tuis sitientibus" (While you water your neighbor's field, your own is parched with drouth).

The house of Ucalegon, your next-door neighbor, is burning. (Proximus ardet Ucalegon.)

VEROIL, Aeneid. Bk. ii, l. 311. (19 B. C.)

When a neighbor's house is on fire the flames are with difficulty kept from your own. (Proximus a tectis ignis defenditur aegre.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 625. (c. 1 B. C.)
Whan my neybour's house is a fyre, I can nat be out of thought for myn owne.

WILLIAM HORMAN, Vulgaria, fo. 126. (1519)
He remembred the prouerbe that sayth, when thy neyhboures house is a fyre, thy staffe standeth nexte the doore.

EDWARD HALL, Chronicle, p. 438. (1548)

When our neyhbours house is on fier, we haue neede to bestirre vs.

UNKNOWN, Passionate Morrice, p. 75. (1593)
When thy neyhbours house doth burn be carefui of thine own.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 335. (1605)
Look to thyself when thy neyhbours house is on fire.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 250. (1639)

When thy neyhbours house doth burn,
Take heed the next be not thy turn.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England: Cumberland, i, 340. (1662)

When thy neyhbours house is on fire, beware of thine own.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 105. (1678)

Ray also cites the Scottish form, "When thy neyhbours house is in danger tak care o' your ain."

My next neighbour's skathe is my present peril.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 245. (1721)

Kelly quotes the line from Horace, and renders it, "No time for sleeping with a fire next door." The Germans say, "Steht deines Nachbars Haus in Glut, | Es dich auch selbst betreffen thut" (If your neighbor's house is in flames, it also concerns you).

When the next House is a Fire, it's high Time to look to thy own.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5599. (1732)

When a neyhbours roof is in flames one's own is in danger.

P. PERCIVAL, Tamil Proverbs. No. 125. (1842)

If Ucalegon's house catches fire, his neyhbours are in extreme risk of the conflagration extending.

J. E. T. ROGERS, Industrial and Commercial History of England. Ch. 4. (1891)

4
Every man's neyhbours is his looking-glass.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 3. (1659)

5
We can live without our friends, but not without our neyhbours.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 348. (1721)

6
That's the world! Everyone imagines himself to be above his neyhbours. (Voilà le monde! chacun s' imagine être audessus de son voisin.)

LE SAGE, Gil Blas. Bk. v, ch. 1. (1715)

Whate'er the passion—knowledge, fame, or pelf—
Not one will change his neyhbours with himself.

POPE, An Essay on Man. Epis. ii, l. 261. (1732)

7
If you are neyhbours to a neyhbours who is bad, you must in every way learn to suffer

what is bad. (ἐὰν πονηροῦ γέιτονος γέιτων ἔσῃ, | πάντως παθεῖν πονηρὸν ἢ μαθεῖν σε δεῖ.)

MENANDER, Fragments. Frag. 553 K. (c. 330 B. C.)

A bad neighbor brings bad luck. (Aliquid mali esse propter vicinum malum.)

PLAUTUS, Mercator, l. 772. (c. 200 B. C.) Quoted as a proverb and cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, i, 32. Included by TAVERNER, Translations from Erasmus, fo. 49, with the rendering, "Euyll betydeeth bycause of an euyll neyghbour."

Keep thy distance from an evil neighbour.

NITTAI THE ARBELITE, Mishnah: Pirke Aboth, i, 8. (c. A. D. 300) Oesterley, tr.

It is oftentimes sayd, he yt hath an yl neyghbour hath oftentimes an yll mornynge.

LORD BERNERS, The History of Arthur of Little Britain, p. 464. (c. 1530)

Our bad neighbour makes us early stirrers.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, iv, 1, 6. (1599)

Near neighbors are seldom good ones.

GOVERNEUR MORRIS. In SPARKS, Life, ii, 25. (1790)

1 Withdraw thy foot from thy neighbour's house; lest he be weary of thee, and so hate thee. (Subtrahe pedem tuum de domo proximi tui, nequando satiatuſ oderit te.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxv, 17. (c. 350 B. C.)

2 Neighbour-quart is good quart, i. e. giffe gaffe [give and take, mutual help] is a good fellow.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 180. (1678)

Neighbour's fare always is counted the best.

UNKNOWN, in Roxburghe Ballads (B.S.), iii, 419. (c. 1680)

Neighbour's fare's no ill-fare.

F. E. TAYLOR, Lancashire Sayings, p. 19. (1901)

3 The most high God sees and forbears: thy neighbour knows nothing, and yet is always finding fault.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Persian, p. 324. (1678)

It is not as thy mother says, but as thy neighbours say. The meaning is that we are not to regard the praises of a near relation, but to listen to what is said by the neighbourhood.

JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 398. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2995. (1732)

4 In the field of world policy, I would dedicate this nation to the policy of the good neighbor.

F. D. ROOSEVELT, Inaugural Address, 4 March, 1933. Developed by Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, as the "Good Neighbor Policy" with the countries of South America.

It is discouraging to try to be a good neighbor in a bad neighborhood.

W. R. CASTLE, Dragon's Teeth in South America. (1939)

5 Who befriends his neighbor befriends himself. (τις γὰρ ἐσθλὸς οὐχ αὐτὸν φιλοῖ.)

SOPHOCLES, Oedipus at Colonos, l. 309. (c. 408 B. C.)

You must live for your neighbor, if you would live for yourself. (Alteri vivas oportet, si vis tibi vivere.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xlviii, sec. 3. (c. A. D. 64)

6 Love thy neighbor. (ἀγάπα τὸν πλησίον.)

THALES, Maxim. (c. 600 B. C.) See STOBAEUS, Florilegium. Pt. iii, l. 59. "Thales among the Seven [wise men of Greece] the sage astronomer."—TIMON, Silli, frag. 23 Diels.

Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself. (Diliges amicum tuum sicut teipsum.)

Old Testament: Leviticus, xix, 18. (c. 570 B. C.)

New Testament: Matthew, xix, 19. (c. A. D. 50)

The Greek is, ἀγαπήσεις τὸν πλησίον σου ὡς σεαυτὸν. It will be noted that Jesus is quoting the Torah. Repeated in Matthew, xxii, 39; Mark, xii, 31; Luke, x, 27; Romans, xiii, 9; Galatians, v, 14; James ii, 8.

I ask from you nought but that ye love your neighbor. (Al-mawaddatu fil-qurbā.)

MOHAMMED, The Koran, xlii, 23. (c. 622)

God teacheth vs to loue our neighbors as our selues. (Dio ci insegna á amar il nostro prossimo come noi medisimi.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 14. (1578)

I love my neighbour as myself,

Myself like him too, by his leave.

JOHN BYRON, Careless Content. (a. 1763)

A system in which the two great commandments were to hate your neighbour and love your neighbour's wife.

MACAULAY, Essays: Moore's Life of Byron. (1830)

Fear thy neighbor as thyself!

EUGENE O'NEILL, The Great God Brown. Act ii, sc. 3. (1926)

7 He that hath not the spirit of accommodation in his heart is worthy neither of friend nor neighbor.

MRS. HARRIET NYE TOWNE. Of an unaccommodating neighbor. (1860) The Moroccans say, "Either do as your neighbors do, or move away."

8 No one can love his neighbor on an empty stomach.

WOODROW WILSON, Speech, in New York, 23 May, 1912.

9 Hold him not for a good neighbour that's at table and wine every hour.

JOHN WODROEPHE, The Spared Houres of a Souldier on His Travels, p. 521. (1623)

10 Better is a neighbore neige

Then a brother fer fro thin eye.

UNKNOWN, Minor Poems of the Vernon MS. 527/83. (c. 1340)

Our Englysh prouerbe, which speketh in this wyse, A nere neyghbour is better than a farre frende.

RICHARD TAVERNER, Translations from Erasmus, fo. 49. (1539)

NEMESIS

<sup>1</sup> She calls on Nemesis, . . . Goddess of al iust reuenge.

GEORGE GASCOIGNE, Philomene, 114. (1576)

Talbot . . . terror and black Nemesis.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry VI, iv, 7, 78. (1591)

Nemesis is that recoil of Nature, not to be guarded against, which ever surprises the most wary transgressor.

R. W. EMERSON, Journal, 1864.

This Nemesis is deeply imbedded in the popular mind and repeatedly crops up in its proverbial wisdom.

R. G. MOULTON, Shakespeare as Dramatic Artist, p. 46. (1901)

Nemesis comes clanging along, pede poena clado, as Horace puts it.

J. J. CONNINGTON, Four Defences, p.149. (1940)

NERVE

<sup>2</sup> Vp whose steepe side who swerues,
It behoues t'haue strong Nerues.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, Odes. Ode xiii, l. 30. (c. 1605)

The nerves, they are the man.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Montaigne. (1850) Quoting Cabanis.

<sup>3</sup> This utter'd, straining all his nerves, he bow'd.

MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 1646. (1671)

[They] strained every nerve to keep their own province in perfect order.

SAMUEL SMILES, Self Help, p. 164. (1860)

We strained every nerve to reach the top.

LESLIE STEPHEN, The Playground of Europe. Ch. 8. (1871)

NET

<sup>4</sup> While the fisherman sleeps the net fills.
(ἐὺδορτι κύπρος αἰπεί.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. v, No. 82. (1523) Erasmus gives the Latin, "Dormientis rete trahit," and in his Praise of Folly explains the origin of the proverb: "Thus Timotheus, the Athenian commander in all his expeditions was a mirror of good luck, because he was a little under-witted; from him was occasioned the proverb, The net fills though the fisherman sleeps."

The following often quoted or alluded to by Greek and Latin authors: The net of the sleeping (fisherman) takes.

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs. Ch. 5. (1852)

<sup>5</sup> Jadahel, as seith the bok,
First made Net and fisshes tok.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. ii, l. 83. (1390)

It is in vain to cast your Net where there is no Fish.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No.2966. (1732)

TO FISH BEFORE THE NET, see under FISHING.

<sup>6</sup> They attack other people's property with their white nets. (Albo rete aliena oppugnant bona.)

PLAUTUS, Persa, l. 74. (c. 200 B.C.) "White nets," perhaps in this case, legal documents; but usually a proverbial phrase for attacking anything in a delicate or skilful manner

<sup>7</sup> Surely in vain the net is spread in the sight of any bird. (Frustra autem iacitur rete ante oculos pennatorum.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, i, 17. (c. 350 B.C.)

The bird avoids the nets that show too plainly (Quae nimis apparent retia, vitat avis.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 516. (c. 1 B.C.)

In vaine (as the Proverb sayth) The net is pitcht in the sight of the birdes.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 52. (1574) Pettie, tr.

In vain is the net spread in the sight of this bird, anyway.

MANNING COLES, They Tell No Tales, p. 120 (1942)

TAKEN IN ONE'S OWN NET, see under RETRIBUTION

NETTLE

<sup>8</sup> Better be a nettle in the side of your friend than his echo.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Friendship. (1841) See also under FRIEND.

<sup>9</sup> Nettle's tender shoots, to cleanse the blood

JOHN GAY, Poems (1745), i, 167. (a. 1732)

Take an ounce of nettle juice.

JOHN WESLEY, Primitive Physick, p. 35. (1747)

Mugwort has long been famous as an uterine and antispasmodic.

CHAMBERS, Cyclopedia: Supplement. (1753)

If they would drink nettles in March,

And eat mugwort in May,

So many fine maidens

Wouldn't go to the clay.

MICHAEL DENHAM, Proverbs, p. 38. (1846) See also Notes and Queries, ser. vi, vol. v, p. 408

<sup>10</sup> In no place could she sit hir selfe to settle,

It seemd to him, she had [sat] on a nettle.

She nettled him, and he rattled her so.

That at ende of that fraie a sunder they go.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 10. (1546)

All these women that you hear . . . skolding thus, have seuerally [sat] on this bush of nettles.

ROBERT GREENE, The Upstart Courtier, sig. B3. (1592)

We have nettled him. Had we stung him to death it were but justice.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Parliament of Love.

Act iii, sc. 1. (1624)

<sup>11</sup> Hee which toucheth the Nettle tenderly, is soonest stoung.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 66. (1579)

Sin is like a nettle, which stings when it is gently touched, but hurts not when it is roughly handled.

WILLIAM SECKER, The Nonesuch Professor. Pt.

ii, p. 158. (1660)

He that handles a Nettle tenderly, is soonest stung.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No.2126.(1732)

Tender-handed stroke a nettle,
And it stings you for your pains;

Grasp it like a man of mettle,

And it soft as silk remains.

AARON HILL, The Nettle's Lesson. (1753)

"Nip a nettle hard and it will not sting you"—i. e. Strong and decided measures prevail best with troublesome people.

ROBERT FORBY, The Vocabulary of East Anglia, p. 430. (1830)

1
I can better take a blister of a Nettle, than a prick of a Rose.

JOHN LYLly, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 323. (1580) I can take a deep wound from an enemy better than a prick from a friend.

'Tis better to be stung by a Nettle, than prickt by a Rose; viz. To be wronged by a foe than a friend.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 18/2. (1659) Cited by Ray and Fuller.

2
Angry men make themselves beds of nettles.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Clarissa, vii, 307. (1748)

3
Out of this nettle, danger, we pluck this flower, safety.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, ii, 3, 10. (1597)

We call a nettle but a nettle and
The faults of fools but folly.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus, ii, 1, 207. (1607)

TO CALL A SPADE A SPADE, see under CANDOR.

4
The nettle groweth somtyme next the rose.

JOHN DE TREVISA, tr., Polychronicon, vi, 461. (1387)

5
I have touch'd a Nettle, and stung my self.

SIR SAMUEL Tuke, The Adventures of Five Hours. Act i. (1663)

Though you stroak the Nettle never so kindly, yet it will sting you.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5018.(1732)

A Latin proverb says, "Urit mature urtica vera" (The true nettle stings quickly).

NEVER

6
They will pay on the Greek Kalends. (Ad Kalendas Graecas soluturos.)

AUGUSTUS CAESAR, indicating that certain men will never pay. (c. 25 B. C.) See Suetonius, Lives of the Caesars: Augustus. Ch. 87, sec. 1. "The next day after never." As the Greeks used no Kalends in their reckoning of time, the phrase was used of anything that could never take place. Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, v, 84. There is another Latin proverb with the same meaning, "Paulo post futurum" (A little after the future).

The judgment shall be given out at the next Greek Calends, that is, never. (L'arrest fera donné es prochaines Calendes Grecques. C'est à dire: jamais.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 20. (1534)

But, quoth Pantagruel, when will you be out of debt? At the next ensuing term of the Greek Calends, answered Panurge. (Mais, demanda Pantagruel, quand serez vous hors de debtes? Es Calendes Grecques, respondit Panurge.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 3. (1545)

At the Grekish calendes . . . or a daye after domesday.

JEHAN PALSgrave, Acolastus, sig. v1. (1540)

Worthy King, know this your will

At latter lammas wee'l fulfil.

(Ad Graecas, bone Rex, fient mandata calendas.)

QUEEN ELIZABETH, to the Spanish Ambassador, after he had presented demands from King Philip that the Catholic religion be restored in England. (c. 1587) See FULLER, The Holy State. Bk. iv, ch. 15.

Yea, when the Grecian Calends come (quoth I).

THOMAS LODGE, A Fig for Momus. Epis. vii. (1595)

That . . . shall be paid at the Greek Kalends.

WILLIAM DRUMMOND, Considerations to the Parliament. (a. 1649)

It must be dated ad Graecas Calendas.

ROGER NORTH, Examen, p. 477. (1740)

The first Sunday in the middle of the week.

CHARLOTTE BURNE, Shropshire Folk-Lore, p. 596. (1883)

7
Nevere to thryve were to long a date.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Chanouns Yemannes Tale, l. 858. (c. 1386)

Never is a long term.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 260.(1721)

Never is a long day.

DICKENS, Nicholas Nickleby. Ch. 61. (1839)
Repeated in Barnaby Rudge, last ch. JAMES

PAYN, The Canon's Ward. Ch. 25. (1884)

She never could pay her rent. But "never is a long time," and . . . she stood clear of all debt now.

R. D. BLACKMORE, Springhaven. Ch. 17. (1887)

The French say, "Cent ans n'est guère, mais jamais c'est beaucoup" (A hundred years aren't long, but never is a lot).

8
When Dover and Calais meet.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5549.(1732)

9
Saint Tibb's evening, the evening of the last day, or day of judgement; he will pay you on St. Tibb's eve.

FRANCIS GROSE, A Classical Dictionary of the Vulgar Tongue: Tib. (1785) That is, never. He would return and claim her hand on "Tib's eve" an Irish festival which is stated to occur "neither before nor after Christmas."

W. H. MAXWELL, The Bivouac. Bk. iii, ch. 3. (1837)

Tib's Eve is used in Cornwall as equivalent to 'the Greek Calends.'

Notes and Queries. Ser. ii, vol. xi, p. 269. (1861)

With suggestions as to the origin of the phrase.

10
Art so mad as to turn French?—Yes, marry, when two Sundays come together.

WILLIAM HAUGHTON, English-Men for My Money. Act ii, sc. 2. (1616)

When two Sundays meet, i. e. never.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 271. (1678)
To-morrow come nivver—when two Sundays meet together.

JOHN T. BROCKETT, A Glossary of North Country Words, p. 150. (1825) The French say, "La semaine des quatre jeudis."

<sup>1</sup> When mules foal. (ἐπεὰν ἡμίονοι τέκωσι.)

HERODOTUS, History. (c. 445 B.C.) As quoted by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, v, 83, who gives the Latin, "Cum mula pepererit." Cited by SUTTONIUS, De Vita Caesarum: Galba. Ch. iv, sec. 2. Proverbial for never. HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 70, gives the form as "Cum muli pariunt."

<sup>2</sup> When the devil is blind, i. e. never.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 12. (1659)
RAY, English Proverbs, p. 70. (1678) A variant is, "When the devil is a hog, you shall eat bacon."

They'll pay me again when the devil is blind.

UNKNOWN, in Bagford Ballads, i, 7. (c. 1670)

I'll make you a fine present one of these days.—
Ay; when the devil's blind, and his eyes are not sore yet.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

Ay, Tib, that will be when the devil's blind,—and his een's no sair yet.

WALTER SCOTT, Guy Mannering. Ch. 22. (1815)

<sup>3</sup> It shall be done when the King cometh to Wogan.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 21. (1659)
Cited by GROSE, Provincial Glossary, p. 231, with the explanation, "Wogan is a small village, quite out of any thoroughfare, and therefore very unlikely to be ever visited by the king."

<sup>4</sup> On the day that Pluto lets the dead leave Acheron. (Quo die Orcus Acherunte mortuos amiserit.)

PLAUTUS, Poenulus, l. 344. (c. 194 B.C.)

<sup>5</sup> They'll come again, as Goodyers pigs did, i. e. never.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 235. (1678)
The story of Goodyer and his pigs has vanished from the memory of man.

When may we hope to see you again in London?
—Why, Madam, not till the ducks have eat up the dirt, as the children say.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

There is a similar African saying, "I will pay thee when the fowls cut their teeth." The Germans say, "Wann die Hühner vorwärts scharren" (When the hen scratches forwards); the French, "Quand les poules auront des dents."

<sup>6</sup> By the street of "By-and-by" one arrives at the house of "Never." (Por la calle de despues se va à la casa de nunca.)

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 75. (1852)

<sup>7</sup> And I wote wel that gabriel schal blow his horne or thai han preuyd the mynor.

JOHN WYCLIF (?), English Works (E.E.T.S.), xxvi, 382. (a. 1384)

When Gabriel blowes his horn, then this question will be decided.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 21. (1659) The Germans say, "Am Nimmermehrstag, wann die Eulen bocken" (At doomsday, when the owl kicks), or simply, "Sanct-Nimmerstag," Saint Never's Day.

<sup>8</sup> Faith youer Wars-ship will thrive att the latter Lammas.

UNKNOWN, Respublica. Act iii, sc. 5. (1553)

Many writers draw their sentences at length, & make an ende at latter Lammas.

GEORGE GASCOIGNE, Instruction Concerning the Making of Verse. (1567)

This your will At latter lammas we'll fulfil.

FULLER, The Holy State. Bk. iv, ch. 15. (1642)

At latter Lammas; at Nevermass.

WILLIAM WALKER, Paroemiologia, p. 52. (1672)

A treatise . . . which will be published probably . . . in the season of Latter Lammas, and the Greek Kalends.

KINGSLEY, Two Years Ago. Ch. 7. (1857)

NEW YORK CITY

See also under Gotham

<sup>9</sup> You can take a boy out of Brooklyn, but you can never get Brooklyn out of the boy.

W.T.BALLARD, Say Yes to Murder, p. 111. (1942)

<sup>10</sup> The Sidewalks of New York.

JAMES BLAKE and CHARLES LAWLOR. Song, later made famous by Al Smith. (1894)

<sup>11</sup> Give my regards to Broadway.

GEORGE M. COHAN. Title of song. (1904)

The Great White Way.

ALBERT BIGELOW PAINE. Title of play. (1901)

The Yappian Way.

O. HENRY, Modern Rural Sports. (1908)

You follow the Broadway trail down till you pass the Crosstown Line, the Bread Line, and the Dead Line.

O. HENRY, Thimble, Thimble. (1909) The Crosstown Line of trolley cars; the Bread Line, where men were given a hand-out every day; the Dead Line, just above the jewelry district of Maiden Lane, below which no crook was supposed to venture.

That ravishing, radiant roadway devoted to Thespis, Thais, and Bacchus.

O. HENRY, The Caliph and the Cad. (1911)

<sup>12</sup> New York is a sucked orange.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Culture. (1860)

The posthumous revenge of the Merchant of Venice.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Book of Epigrams. (1911)

Hubbard makes the usual mistake of thinking that Shylock was the merchant of Venice, whereas it was, of course, Antonio.

Crazed with avarice, lust and rum,
New York, thy name's Delirium.

BYRON R. NEWTON, Owed to New York. (1906)

Claimed by Newton in N.Y. Times Book Review, 26 April, 1925.

City of dreadful height.

JAMES BONE, Article, Manchester Guardian

<sup>1</sup> Little old Bagdad-on-the-Subway.

O. HENRY (WILLIAM SYDNEY PORTER), A Madison Square Arabian Night. (1907) Also, A Night in New Arabia, What You Want, and The Discounters of Money.

New York is the Caoutchouc City. . . . They [the rubber tribe] have the furor rubberendi.

O. HENRY, A Comedy in Rubber. (1908)

That Yaptown-on-the-Hudson called New York.

O. HENRY, A Tempered Wind. (1908)

The City of Too Many Caliphs.

O. HENRY, Next to Reading Matter. (1909)

Little old Noisyville-on-the-Subway.

O. HENRY, The Duel. (1910)

What else can you expect from a town that's shut off from the world by the ocean on one side and New Jersey on the other?

O. HENRY, A Tempered Wind. (1908)

"Little old New York's good enough for us."

O. HENRY, A Tempered Wind.

Babylon-on-the-Make.

LUCIUS BEEBE, Snoot if You Must, p. 1. (1943)

NEWNESS

See also Novelty

<sup>2</sup> Fresh from the bellows. (ἀπ' ἀκροφύλων.)

ARISTOPHANES, Fragments. Frag. 561. (400 B. C.)
Annas' oven. ("Ἀννας κριβανόν.")

SUIDAS, Lexicon, ii, 86. (c. 950) Annas invented an oven of earthenware in which to bake bread, and the phrase passed into a proverb for any novelty. ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, x, 89, has "Annas clibanum."

<sup>3</sup> What is valuable is not new, and what is new is not valuable.

LORD BROUGHAM, Essay: The Work of Thomas Young. In Edinburgh Review, c. 1839

<sup>4</sup> We have a keener appetite for the new than grasp on the old. (Acrius appetimus nova quam iam parta tenemus.)

CATO (?), Collectio Monostichorum, l. 33. (c. 175 B. C.) See Minor Latin Poets, Loeb, p. 626.
Men's ears are delighted with new things. (Aures hominum novitate laetantur.)

PLINY, Epistles. Bk. viii, epis. 18. (c. A. D. 100)
To som folk ofte newe thing is swete.

CHAUCER, The Legend of Dido, l. 154. (c. 1385)

Men seyn alle weys, that newe thynges and newe tydnynges ben plesant to here.

SIR JOHN MANDEVILLE, Travels. Ch. 31. (c. 1400)
It is natural to delite in thing that is newe.

JOHN LYDGATE, Troy Book, iv, 301. (c. 1412)

A love of new things. (Cupiditas novarum rerum.)

SAMUEL H. ADAMS, The Incredible Era, p. 91. (1935) Quoted as a saying of Cicero.

<sup>5</sup> Ther nis no new gyse [fashion] that it nas olde.

CHAUCER, The Knightes Tale, l. 1267. (c. 1386)
See also under FASHION.

There is nothing new except what has been forgotten. (Il n'y a de nouveau que ce qui est oublié.)

MADemoisELLE BERTIN, milliner to Marie Antoinette, Epigram. (c. 1785) The ascription is legendary. A variation, perhaps, of the motto of the Revue Rétrospective, "Il n'y a de nouveau que ce qui a vieilli" (There is nothing new but what has grown old). The Germans say, "Nichts ist so neu, als was längst vergessen ist" (Nothing is so new, as what has been long forgotten). The East Indian negroes say, "What the fox found out, the possum knew long ago."

It has all been done before.

CONAN DOYLE, A Study in Scarlet. Pt. i, ch. 3 (1887)

Everything has been done before.

H. C. BAILEY, Meet Mr. Fortune, p. 284. (1942)

<sup>6</sup> Men loven of propre kinde newfangelnesse.

CHAUCER, The Squires Tale, l. 602. (c. 1388)

To the wode he wol and wormes etc;

So newefangel been they of hir mete,

And loven novelryes of propre kinde.

CHAUCER, The Squires Tale, l. 609.

A Pedlers packe of newe fangles.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 116. (1579)

May's new-fangled mirth.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, i, 1, 106. (1595)

More new-fangled than an ape.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, iv, 1, 152. (1600)

<sup>7</sup> Every new thing lookes faire. (Au nouveau tout est beau.)

COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Nouveau. (1611)

Every thing new is fine.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 81. (1640)

New things are fair.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1115.

A new, everything is handsome.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 171. (1666)

All new things are apt to please.

BROWN, tr., Scarron's Works, ii, 248. (1700)

New Things are most look'd at.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3537. (1732)

<sup>8</sup> There is no new thing under the sun. (Nihil sub sole novum.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, i, 9. (c. 250 B. C.)
Wyclif renders it, "No thing under the sunne is newe."

Nothing new under the heavens. (Nihil novi sub caelo.)

PONTANUS, Collectio Proverbiorum, p. 127. (1778)

Alas! there's nothing new beneath the sun.

The ancients with their hooks have reap'd the field.

JOHN WOLCOT (PETER PINDAR), Ode on the Ancients. (1816)

There is nothing new under the sun.

SHAW, Man and Superman. Act iii. (1903) AGATHA CHRISTIE, The Moving Finger, p. 67. (1942) etc., etc.

1 That was new, in last Year's new Almanack.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No.4375.(1742)

2 Preserve the old, but know the new.
H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs. No. 679. (1937)

BE NOT THE FIRST BY WHOM THE NEW IS TRIED, see under WORD.

3 Men praise that song the most which comes newest to their ears. (δοιδὴν μᾶλλον ἐπικλείουσ' ἄνθρωποι, | ἢ τις ἀκούοντεςσι νεωτάτη ἀμφιπέληται.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. i, l. 351. (c. 850 B.C.)
Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, ix, 38, who sums it up in two words, "Grata novitas" (Agreeable novelty).

A new song is sung with pleasure (Neue Liedlein singt man gern).

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbs, p. 339. (1856) A German proverb. Similarly, "Wenn ein neuer Heiliger kommt, so vergiesst man die alten" (When a new saint comes, men forget the old ones).

4 What is new is opposed, because most are unwilling to be taught.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler, 27 March, 1750.

I found that generally what was new was false.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, BOSWELL, Life, 1779.

"Old things need not be therefore true,"
O brother men, nor yet the new!

A. H. CLOUGH, Consider It Again. (a. 1861)

We are told that he knew little of art or music . . . It is true but not new. Hunt proceeds to say that Byron had no sentiment . . . ; it is new enough, but it is manifestly not true.

JOHN NICHOL, Life of Byron, p. 167. (1880)

A victim to the old slogan, "What is new cannot be true."

Times, London, 4 Feb., 1928. Usually quoted, "What is new is seldom true; what is true is seldom new." The Germans say, "Immer etwas Neues, selten etwas Gutes" (Always something new, seldom something good).

5 There is nothing so easy that at first is not difficult to believe, nothing so wonderful that in time men will not cease to marvel at. (Sed neque tam facilis res ulla est quin ea primum | difficilis magis ad credendum constet, itemque | nil adeo magnum neque tam mirabile quicquam | quod non paulatim minuant mirarier omnes.)

LUCRETIUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. ii, l. 1026. (c. 45 B.C.)

What is there that does not appear marvellous when it comes to your knowledge for the first time?

PLINY THE ELDER, Naturalis Historia. Bk. vii, sec. 6. (A.D. 77)

All, with one consent, praise new-born gawds,
Though they are made and moulded of things past,

And give to dust, that is a little gilt,
More laud than gilt o'er-dusted.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, iii, 3, 176. (1601)

Every new nonsense will be more acceptable than any old sense.

LUCIUS CARY, The Infallibilities of the Church of Rome, p. 98. (a. 1643)

A fine new nothing.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 342. (1678)

6 Nothing's new, and nothing's true, and nothing matters.

SYDNEY, LADY MORGAN, Epigram. (c.1845) Attr. "Ah," said my languid gentleman at Oxford, "there's nothing new or true—and no matter."

EMERSON, Repres. Men: Montaigne. (1850)

There's nothing new, and there's nothing true, and it don't signify.

Notes and Queries, vii, iv, 256. (1887)

"What does anything matter?" The farce will go on.

J. M. WHISTLER, The Gentle Art of Making Enemies, p. 31. (1890)

7 What can happen that is beyond belief? Or what that is new? (Quid incredibile, quid novum evenit?)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis.xcix,sec.22.(c.A.D.64)

8 The cok bigan of him to rewe,
And bouthe [bought] him clothes, al spannewe.

UNKNOWN, Havelok the Dane, l. 968. (c. 1300)

His tale ay was span-newe to biginne.

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. iii, l. 1665. (c. 1370)

Brave purple cassocks . . . spicke, and spanne newe.

SIR THOMAS NORTH, tr., Plutarch, ii,217.(1579)

Hee offered her a spicke and spanne new Geneua Bible.

THOMAS NASHE, Almond for a Parrot, p. 27 (1590)

Heres a coat spick and span new.

ANTHONY MUNDAY, John a Kent, p. 52. (1595)

My Lady Batten walking through the dirty lane with new spicke and span white shoes.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 15 Nov., 1665.

Span New, very new: that was never worn or used.

JOHN RAY, A Collection of English Words Not Generally Used, p. 114. (1691)

ALWAYS SOMETHING NEW OUT OF AFRICA, see under AFRICA.

NEWS

9 It's an ill office to be the first to herald ill. (κακὸν μὲν πρῶτον ἀγγέλλειν κακά.)

AESCHYLUS, Persians, l. 253. (472 B.C.)

The bearer of dread tidings needs must quake. (τὰ δεινὰ γὰρ τοι προσείησ' ἔκρον πολύν.)

SOPHOCLES, Antigone, l. 243. (c. 441 B.C.)

No man delights in the bearer of bad news.
(στέργει γὰρ οὐδεὶς ἄγγελον κακῶν ἐπῶν.)

SOPHOCLES, Antigone, l. 277. (c. 441 B.C.) See also MESSENGER.

Misfortune comes all too quickly to the bearer of bad news.

(De ceste chose me sovient
Que li mesaiges trop tost vient
Qui la male novele aporte.)

UNKNOWN, Du Guillaume au Faucon, l. 340. (c. 1250) MONTAIGLON, Recueil des Fabliaux, ii, 102.

My sone, be war, and be non auctour newe
Of tydinges, whether they ben false or trewe.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Maunciple's Tale, l. 255. (c. 1389)

The first bringer of unwelcome news
Hath but a losing office.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, i, 1, 100. (1598)

The nature of bad news infects the teller.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, i, 2, 99. (1606)

1
Let the reader of the letter be the one to break the news.

Babylonian Talmud: Baba Metzia, fo. 83b. (c. 450)

From peddlers news, from rags vermin.

Babylonian Talmud: Berachoth, fo. 51b.

2
When a dog bites a man that is not news, but when a man bites a dog that is news.

JOHN B. BOGART, City Editor of the New York Sun. (c. 1880) Usually attributed to Charles A. Dana, editor of the Sun, but Edward P. Mitchell, Dana's assistant for many years, stated positively that Bogart was the author. He was City Editor of the Sun from 1873 to 1890.

If a man bit a dog, that used to be news. It isn't any more. It has to be: "Father of Ten Bites Titled Woman's Chow."

TOD CLAYMORE, This Is What Happened, p. 243. (1939)

She poisoned his hot dog. Man bites dog and—zowie.

ELLERY QUEEN, Man Bites Dog. (1940)

3
Tidings make either glad or sad.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 148. (1670)

4
He that brings good news knocks boldly.
(Hardiment huerte à la porte qui bonne nouvelle y apporte.)

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Hardiment (1611) HOWELL, Proverbs: Span.-English, p. 18. (1659) TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 213. (1666)

He knocks boldly at the Gate that brings good News in there at.

JOHN WODROEPHE, The Spared Houres of a Souldier in His Travels, p. 487. (1623)

He that brings good news knocks hard.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 825. (1640)

5
An oven and mill are nurseries of news.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Moulin. (1611)

If you will learn news, you must go to the oven or the mill.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 11. (1659)

6
Ill news are commonly true.

JOHN DAVIES, Scourge of Folly, p. 42. (1611)

Ill news are too oft true.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 228. (1639)

Ill news are ay o'er true.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 221. (1721)

7
What's wan man's news is another man's troubles.

F. P. DUNNE, Mr. Dooley, Journalist. (1901)

8
News, the manna of a day.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 169. (1737)

9
Stay a little, and news will find you.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 332. (1640)

10
Good news may be told at any time, but ill
in the morning.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 876. (1640)

11
How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings. (Quam pulchri super montes pedes annunciantis bonum.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, lii, 7. (c. 725 B.C.)

As cold waters to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country. (Aqua frigida animae sitiēti. et nuncius bonus de terra longinqua.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxv, 25. (c. 350 B.C.)

12
No newis is bettir than evill newis.

JAMES I, in Loseley MSS, p. 403. (1616)

The best news is when we heare no newes.

DONALD LUPTON, London and the Countrey Carbonadoed. No. 12. (1632)

I am of the Italians mind that said, Nulla nuova, buona nuova, no news, good news.

JAMES HOWELL, Familiar Letters. Bk. ii, No. 18. (c. 1645) The French say, "Pas de nouvelles, bonnes nouvelles." (See MEILHAC AND HALÉVY, La Belle Hélène. Act ii, sc. 5. 1864.) Sometimes, "Point de nouvelles, bonnes nouvelles."

No news is good news sometimes, as the proverb goes.

GEORGE COLMAN, SR., The Spleen. Act i. (1776)

DICKENS, David Copperfield. Ch. 36. (1850)

JAMES PAYN, Lost Sir Massingbred. Ch. 20.

(1864) MOTTRAM, The Spanish Farm. Pt. ii.

(1924) etc., etc.

On the "no-news-being-good-news" system, . .
I dismissed the subject from my mind.

F. E. SMEDLEY, Frank Fairleigh. Ch. 10. (1850)

No news is good news, and what must be must be, and you'd never believe how it cheers me up

NOEL COWARD, Cavalcade. Pt. i, sc. 3. (1931)

13
He was scarce of news that told his father was hang'd.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 136. (1721)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2378. (1732) FITZGERALD, Polonius, p. 35. (1852)

1
Ill news comes often upon worse back.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 201. (1721)
Ill comes upon waur's back.
ALLAN RAMSAY, Scottish Proverbs. (1737)
2
It was too good to be true.
LYLY, Mother Bombie. Act iv, sc. 2. (1594)
The name of that news is called "too good to be true."
THOMAS HEYWOOD, The Wise-Woman of Hogsdon. Act iv, sc. 4. (1638)
It is good news, worthy of all acceptation, and yet not too good to be true.
HENRY, Commentaries: I Tim. i, 15. (a. 1714)
3
How much more readily than glad events
Is mischance carried to the ears of men!
(οἱμοι, το κακὸν τῆς εὐτυχίας ὡς μάλλον ἐς οὐς φέρεται θνητῶν.)
PLUTARCH, Moralia: On Curiosity. Sec. 518A.
(C. A. D. 95) Quoted as a saying.
Euil newes neuer commeth to late.
EDWARD HELLOWES, tr., Guevara's Epistles, p. 58. (1574)
Evil news flies faster still than good.
THOMAS KYD, Spanish Tragedy. Act i, sc. 3. (1594)
Ill news hath wings, and with the wind doth go:
Comfort's a cripple, and comes ever slow.
MICHAEL DRAYTON, The Barons' Wars. Bk. ii, st. 28. (1603) The French say, "Les mauvaises nouvelles ont des ailes" (Bad news has wings); the Italians, "Novella trista arriva presto" (Bad news arrives quickly), or "Le cattive nuove sono le prime" (Bad news knocks first).
Ill newes comes too soon.
WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 326. (1605) The French say, "Trop tôt vient à la porte qui mauvaises nouvelles apporte" (He comes too quickly to the door who brings bad news), or "Assez tôt vient à l'hôtel qui mauvaises nouvelles apporte" (He comes quickly enough to the house who brings bad news).
Ill news, madam,
Are swallow-wing'd, but what's good walks on crutches.
PHILIP MASSINGER, The Picture. Act ii, sc. 1. (1629) The Spanish form is, "El buen suena, y el mal vuela" (Good news drowns, and bad news flies).
Ill news comes unsent for.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 123. (1639)
It is an old saying that Ill News hath wings and Good News no legs.
DUCHESS OF NEWCASTLE, The Sociable Companions. Act i, sc. 1. (c. 1660)
Evil news rides post, while good news baits.
MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 1538. (1671)
Ill news comes apace.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 161. (1678)
Ill news is wing'd with fate, and flies apace.
DRYDEN, Threnodia Augustalis, l. 49. (1685)
Bad news always fly faster than good.
UNKNOWN, Terence Made English, p. 46. (1694)

Ill news travels fast.
THOMAS HOLCROFT, The Road to Ruin. Act ii, sc. 1. (1792)
That's a true saying that nothing travels so fast as ill news.
DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 31. (1850)
Ill news travels fast.
DICKENS, Our Mutual Friend. Bk. iii, ch. 5. (1865)
Ill news has many feet, rides apace and needs no spurs.
STANLEY WEYMAN, Ovington's Bank. Ch. 38. (1922)
4
Let the greatest part of the news thou hearest be the least part of what thou believest, lest the greater part of what thou believest be the least part of what is true. Where lies are easily admitted, the father of lies will not easily be excluded.
FRANCIS QUARLES, Enchiridion. Cent. ii, No. 50. (1640)
5
All this while you tell me news, Mr. Attorney.
SIR WALTER RALEGH, at his trial. (1603) See Criminal Trials, i, 408.
Tell me what I know not.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 303. (1639)
Fiddle, fiddle, tell me it snows.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 8. Cited by Ray and Robertson, the latter with the addition, "Piscem natate doces" (You're teaching a fish to swim).
Tell me news.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 187. (1670)
My Lord Baldwin's dead. Used when one tells that for news which everybody knows.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 149. (1678)
Ray adds that this is a Sussex proverb, "but who this Lord Baldwin was I could not learn."
That's Jock's news. Spoken when people tell that for news which everybody knows.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 339. (1721)
What news, Mr. Neverout?—Why, Madam, Queen Elizabeth is dead.—I know that already; tell me news.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)
Tell not as new what ev'ry body knows.
WILLIAM COWPER, Conversation, l. 237. (1781)
Our story's a secret! Lord help you—tell 'em Queen Anne's dead.
GEORGE COLMAN, JR., The Heir at Law. Act i, sc. 1. (1797) THACKERAY, The Virginians. Ch. 73. (1859) D. C. MURRAY, Rainbow Gold. Bk. iii, ch. 5. (1885) The French say, "Henri Quatre est sur le Pont Neuf" (Henry Fourth is on the Pont Neuf), referring to the equestrian statue of Henry which has adorned the center of the bridge for a century and a half. They also say, "C'est vieux comme le Pont Neuf" (That's as old as the Pont Neuf), which is the oldest bridge in Paris.
If that is supposed to be information, so is Queen Anne.
JEFFERSON FARJEON, Murder at a Police Station, p. 73. (1943)

1 News value.

JULIAN RALPH. According to THOMAS BEER, The Mauve Decade, Ralph coined this phrase in 1892, during a talk at Columbia, to Brander Matthews's class in English.

Human interest. "A newspaper story must have human interest." This journalistic cliché arose from—and dates from—Lord Northcliffe's "do's for journalists."

ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: Human. (1941)

2 Go into the country to hear what news is in town.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 81. (1678)

3 Let another be the first to convey bad tidings.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. viii, Maxim 25. (c. 1258)

Neither give nor receive bad news unless it can help. (Las odiosas nuevas no darlas, ménos recibirlas.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 64. (1647)

4 What's the news? . . . News fitting to the night,

Black, fearful, comfortless and horrible.

SHAKESPEARE, King John, v, 6, 19. (1596)

There's villainous news abroad.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, ii, 4, 367. (1597)

What news on the Rialto?

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, i, 3, 39. (1597)

5 I wish I may never hear worse news.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

6 Don't expect news, for I know no more than a newspaper.

HORACE WALPOLE, Letter to George Montagu. 3 Nov., 1746.

NEWSPAPER

See also Press

7 It is better to appear in hell than in the newspapers.

FRANCIS BEEDING, Heads Off at Midnight. Ch. 19. (1938) Quoted as a Spanish proverb.

8 I know nothing but what is in the papers.

JOHN BRIGHT, Letter to Charles Sumner, Dec., 1861.

All I know is what I see in the papers.

WILL ROGERS, often repeated in his speeches and newspaper articles. (c. 1928)

9 The press [is] the only tocsin of a nation.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to Thomas Cooper. (1802)

The press is the best instrument for enlightening the mind of man.

JEFFERSON, Letter to M. Coray. (1823)

Newspapers are the schoolmasters of the common people.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Proverbs from Plymouth Pulpit: The Press. (1887)

10

Newspapers serve to carry off noxious vapors and smoke.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to Kosciusko. (1802) Were it left to me to decide whether we should have a government without newspapers, or newspapers without a government, I should not hesitate a moment to prefer the latter.

JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. vi, p. 55. (c. 1802) Advertisements contain the only truths to be relied on in a newspaper.

JEFFERSON, Letter to Nathaniel Macon, 1819. The man who never looks into a newspaper is better informed than he who reads them, inasmuch as he who knows nothing is nearer the truth than he whose mind is filled with falsehoods and errors.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to John Norvell. (1807)

Blessed are they who never read a newspaper, for they shall see Nature, and, through her, God.

H. D. THOREAU, Essays, p. 254. (c. 1862)

NIAGARA

11

Shooting Niagara.

THOMAS CARLYLE, title of article in Macmillan's Magazine, 1867 Undertaking a desperate venture

We shall shoot Niagara.

LESLIE STEPHEN, Life and Letters. Ch. 11. (1868)

12

That Niagara of sound.

T. L. PEACOCK, Gryll Grange. Ch. 14. (1861)

A Niagara of blood.

JOHN RUSKIN, Fors Clavigera. (1872)

The Niagaraian flood of denunciation.

J. G. HOLYOAKE, in Nineteenth Century, July, 1882, p. 95.

NICE

13

Nice as nip. Just the thing to a nicety.

ANNE BAKER, Northants Glossary: Nice. (1854)

14

Sodeinly waxen as nyse

As it had been a halporth of syluer spoones.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546) As dent and nice, as an halpeny worth of siluer spoons.

UNKNOWN, Jacke Jugeler, p. 40. (c. 1550)

15

He is as nice as pie this afternoon.

G. B. McCUTCHEON, Green Fancy, p. 275. (1917) As nice as pie.

JAKE FALSTAFF, Jacoby's Corners, p. 102. (1938)

16

I warrant you, thei can make it more nice then wise.

BARNABY RICH, Farewell to the Militarie Profession (Shakes. Soc.), p. 139. (1581)

More nice than wise.

HENRY BUTTES, Dyets Drie Dinner: Epistle Dedicatory. (1599) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 187. (1670)

Men more nice than wise.

JOHN BUNYAN, Greatness of Soul. (1682)

More nice than wise. Spoken when people out of bashfulness leave a thing unsaid, or a person unspoken to, which would have contributed to their interest.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 249. (1721)
Some people are more nice than wise.

COWPER, Mutual Forbearance, l. 20. (1782)

1 Over-niceness may be under-niceness.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Clarissa, vi, 213. (1748)

2 She's nice by name and nice by nature.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

3 Some be nyse as a nanne hene.

UNKNOWN, in Reliquiae Antiquae, i, 248. (c. 1450)

As nice as a nuns hen.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 1. (1546)

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 202. (1670)

I knewe a Prieste that was as nice as a Nonnes Henne when he would saie Masse.

WILSON, Arte of Rhetorique, p. 223. (1553)

NIGHT

4 O mother Night! (ὦ μήτηρ Νύξ.)

AESCHYLUS, Eumenides, l. 321. (458 B.C.) Repeated in ll. 844 and 876.

5 I have scattered the gloom of night.

ANI, Papyrus: Book of the Dead. Ch. ix. l. 3. (c. 4000 B.C.)

6 Night that puts to rest the works of men. (Νύξ ἔργων ἀνδρῶσι.)

APOLLONIUS RHODIUS, Argonautica. Bk. iv, l. 1059. (c. 225 B.C.)

The night cometh, when no man can work. (ἔρχεται νύξ ὅτε οὐδεὶς δύναται ἐργάζεσθαι.)

New Testament: John, ix, 4. (C. A.D. 70) The Vulgate is, "Venit nox, quando nemo potest operari." Boswell notes that Dr. Johnson had this Greek sentence "inscribed on the dial-plate of his watch."

Work while it is called Today, for the Night cometh wherein no man can work.

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. ii, ch. 9. (1834)

Work, for the night is coming.

ANNA L. COGHILL, Work Song. (c. 1860)

7 Night was created for sleep.

Babylonian Talmud: Erubin, fo. 65a. (c. 450)
Ye nyghts . . . gyueth triews [true] to alle labours, and by slepyng maketh swete all peynes.

WILLIAM CANTON, tr., The Boke yf Eneydos, xxiv, 90. (1490)

Night is the sabbath of mankind,
To rest the body and the mind.

BUTLER, Hudibras, iii, i, 1349. (1664)

Night is the time for rest;

How sweet, when labours close,

To gather round an aching breast

The curtain of repose.

JAMES MONTGOMERY, Night. (a. 1854)

In the night there is peace for the old and hope for the young.

SHAW, Heartbreak House. Act iii. (1913)

8 Derk was the night as pich, or as the cole.

CHAUCER, The Miller's Tale, l. 545. (c. 1386)
Night with his mantel, that is derk and rude,
Gan oversprede the hemisperie aboute.

CHAUCER, The Marchantes Tale, l. 554

9 Stones of small worth may lie unseen by day.
But night itself does the rich gem betray.

COWLEY, Dauides. Bk. iii, l. 37. (c. 1650)

The night

Shows stars and women in a better light.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 152. (1818)

10 Long is the night to him who is awake.

DHAMMAPALA, Commentaries. Verse 60. (c. A.D. 75)

How long the night seems to one kept awake by pain. (Qu'une nuit paraît longue à la douleur qui veille!)

BERNARD JOSEPH SAURIN, Blanche et Guiscard
Act v, sc. 5. (c. 1760)

11 It was euen a fine night to run away with another man's wife.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, p. 165. (1591)

Here were a night to chuse to run away with Another man's wife, and do the feat!

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Lovers' Progress. Act iii, sc. 2. (c. 1630)

They say a moonshine night is good to run away with another man's wife.

ROWLEY, A Match at Midnight. Act iv. (1633)

A fit night to steal away a fair lady, viz. A cleer moonshine.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 6. (1659)

Oh! 'twas a delicate night to run away with another man's wife.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

12 To a great night, a great Lanthorn.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 733. (1640)

13 Drawing black night over the face of the earth, the giver of grain. (ἔλκον νύκτα μέλαιναν ἐπὶ ζείδωρον ἀρουραν.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. viii, 486. (c. 850 B.C.) The phrase, "Earth, the giver of grain" is repeated in the Odyssey, iii, 3.

14 O nights and feasts divine! (O noctes, cenaecque deum!)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 6, l. 65. (35 B.C.)

15 Watchman, what of the night? (Custos, quid de nocte?)

Old Testament: Isaiah, xxi, 11. (c. 725 B.C.)

16 Sober, Neighbour, the night is but young yet.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 295. (1721)

17 At night counsel cometh to the wise. (ἐν νυκτὶ βούλη τοῖς σοφοῖσι γίγνεται.)

MENANDER, The Flute Girl, l. 150. (c. 300 B.C.)
In the night came counsel. (ἐν νυκτὶ βούλην.)

MENANDER, The Arbitrants, l. 35. Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, ii, 42 (1523), with the Latin, "In nocte consilium."

The nyght is the moother of thoughtes. (La notte è Madre de pensieri.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 31. (1578)

Quoting Angelo Poliziano. The French have the same proverb, "La nuit est la mère des conseils."

Untroubled night, they say, gives counsell best.

EDMUND SPENSER, The Faerie Queene. Bk. i, canto i, st. 33. (1589)

Night gives advice; we say, take counsell of your pillow.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Conseil. (1611)

Night is the mother of Councils.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 748. (1640)

The night brings counsel

STEVENSON AND HENLEY, Admiral Guineo. Act iii, sc. 4. (1884) A proverb in many languages. The French say, "La nuit a conseil," or "La nuit donne conseil"; the Germans, "Guter Rath kommt über Nacht" (Good counsel comes during the night); the Spaniards, "Dormireis sobre ello y tomareis acuerdo" (Sleep over it and you will come to a decision).

<sup>1</sup> What hath night to do with sleep?

JOHN MILTON, Comus, l. 122. (1634)

Most glorious night!

Thou wert not sent for slumber!

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 93. (1812)

<sup>2</sup> Night knows no shame. (Nox pudore vacat.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. i, No. vi, l. 60. (c. 13 B.C.)

Night is the cloak of sinners. (La noche es capa des peccadores.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs, i, 171. (1814)

<sup>3</sup> Night is sadder than the hours of daylight. (Tristior nox est, quam tempora Phoebe.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 585. (c. 1 B.C.)

Night brings our troubles to the light. (Nox exhibet molestiam.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lvi, sec. 6. (c. A.D.

64)

As sad as night.

SHAKESPEARE, King John, iv, 1, 16. (1596)

<sup>4</sup> Making night hideous.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, i, 4, 54. (1600)

Silence, ye wolves! while Ralph to Cynthia howls,

And makes night hideous.

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. iii, l. 165. (1728)

<sup>5</sup> If he fall in, good night!

SHAKESPEARE, 1 Henry IV, i, 3, 194. (1597)

All my conquests, all my charms, good night!

POPE, The Wife of Bath, l. 225. (1714)

<sup>6</sup> This will last out a night in Russia,

When nights are longest there.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, ii, 1, 139. (1604)

Calmes doe the roughest stormes that are attend,
And th' longest night that is will haue an end.

GEORGE WITHER, Abuses Stript and Whipt, i, xvi. (1613)

There never was night that had no morn.

DINAH M. M. CRAIK, The Golden Gate. (c. 1860)

The night brings the morrow.

BAILEY, The Bishop's Crime, p. 237. (1941)

Remember the Arab proverb—"It is but for a night, oh Muleteer."

ETHEL WHITE, Fear Stalks the Village, p. 139. (1942)

<sup>7</sup> The night is no man's friend. (Die Nacht ist keines Menschen Freund.)

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, Ch. 3. (1852)

<sup>8</sup> Black night broods over the deep. (Ponto nox incubat atra.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. i, l. 89. (19 B.C.)

Black night flies round them with her hollow shade. (Nox atra cava circumvolat umbra.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. ii, l. 360. (19 B.C.)

Night rushes down and clasps the earth with dusky wings. (Nox ruit et fuscis tellurem amplectitur alis.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. viii, l. 369. (19 B.C.)

Night's black mantle covers all alike.

JOSHUA SYLVESTER, tr., Devine Weekes and Workes. Wk. i, day 1. (c. 1591)

<sup>9</sup> Ev'n silent night proclaims my soul immortal. EDWARD YOUNG, Night-Thoughts, i, 102. (1742)

<sup>10</sup> Youle make as good a night of it heere as if you had beene at all the houses in the towne.

UNKNOWN, Twelfth Night Merriment, p. 4 (1602)

I'm resolved to make a night on't.

CONGREVE, Old Batchelour. Act iv, sc. 9. (1693)

Didst thou make a night on't, Boy?

CIBBER, Love Makes a Man. Act i, sc. 1. (1701)

I' faith, we'll make a night of it.

SHERIDAN, The Duenna. Act iii, sc. 1. (1775)

II—Night and Day

<sup>11</sup> The glade night is worth an hevvy morow!

CHAUCER (?), The Complaynt of Mars; Proem, l. 12. (c. 1379)

What is done by night appears by day.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5495. (1732)

Merry nights make sorry days.

Folk-Lore, Vol. vii, p. 377. (1896)

<sup>12</sup> They had neuer an ill day that had a good evening.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 98. (c. 1595)

Hee never hath a bad day that hath a good night

UNKNOWN, Berkeley Mss., iii, 32. (1639)

It is never a bad day that hath a good night.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 6. (1670)

A bad day never hath a good night.

BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 281. (1855)

<sup>13</sup> The night is for the day, but the day is not for the night.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Success. (1870)

<sup>1</sup> Who seeth thee in the day time, wil not seeke thee in the night. (Chi ti vede di giorno, non ti cercherà di notte.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 29. (1578)

<sup>2</sup> Every day cometh night.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 33. (1578)

The morning sun never lasts a day.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 14. (1678)

Every day hath its night, and every weal its woe.

MICHAEL DENHAM, Proverbs. (1846) The French say, "Nul jour n'est sans vèpre" (No day without Vespers).

There is no day however beautiful which has not its night. (Il n'est si beau jour qui n'amène pas sa nuit.)

UNKNOWN, Inscription, on tombstone of Jean d'Orbesan, at Padua.

<sup>3</sup> Thus he planned that, by turning night into day, he might make his six years twelve. (αὐτὸς ἡμέρας ποιεῖμεναι.)

HERODOTUS, History. Bk. ii, ch. 133. (c. 445 B. C.) Of Mycerinus, King of Egypt, Cheops' son, to whom an oracle foretold that he had only six years to live.

They wear out day and night. (Noctemque diemque fatigant.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. viii, l. 94. (19 B. C.)

Adding night to the day's work. (Noctem addens operi.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. viii, l. 411.

Of one day to make two is my delight. (De una die duas facere, nihil malo.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 72. (c. A. D. 60)

Cut short the night; use some of it for the day's business. (Circumscribatur nox, et aliquid ex illa in diem transferatur.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. cxxii, sec. 4. (c. A. D. 64) HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 327, quotes another phrase from Seneca, "Pervertunt officia noctis et lucis" (They turn night into day).

Be thou the grasshopper of the night. (Esto cicada nocturnum.)

ST. JEROME (HIERONYMUS), Letters. No. xxii, sec. 18. (A. D. 384) Be as active at night as the grasshopper is in the daytime.

We did sleep day out of countenance, and made the night light with drinking.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, ii, 2, 181. (1606)

I must become a borrower of the night For a dark hour or twain.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, iii, 1, 26. (1606)

What I take from my nights, I add to my days. (Ce que j'ôte à mes nuits, je l'ajoute à mes jours.)

JEAN ROTROU, Venceslas. (c. 1640)

The best of all ways To lengthen our days Is to steal a few hours from the night, my dear.

THOMAS MOORE, The Young May Moon. (a. 1835)

<sup>4</sup> Day and night. (νύκτες τε καὶ ἡμέρα.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xi, l. 183. (c. 850 B. C.)

Always, night and day, he was in the mountains (διὰ πάντων νυκτὸς καὶ ἡμέρας ἐν τοῖς ὀρέμασιν.)

New Testament: Mark, v, 5. (c. A. D. 65) The

Vulgate is "Semper die ac nocte."

Weped and mornd night and dai.

UNKNOWN, Cursor Mundi, l. 10421. (a. 1300)

Bot nyht and day as I am now

I schal alwey be such to yow.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis, i, 104. (1390)

Time comes stealing on by night and day.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors, iv, 2, 60. (1593)

<sup>5</sup> Night has a thousand eyes.

JOHN LYLIV (?), The Maydes Metamorphosis.

Act iii, sc. 1. (1600)

The day hes eyen, the night has ears.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 96. (c. 1595)

The Night has a thousand eyes,

The Day but one;

Yet the light of the bright world dies

With the dying sun.

F. W. BOURDILLON, The Night Has a Thousand Eyes. (a. 1897)

<sup>6</sup> Day unto day uttereth speech, and night unto night sheweth knowledge. (Dies diei eructat verbum, et nox nocti indicat scientiam.)

Old Testament: Psalms, xix, 2. (c. 350 B. C.)

<sup>7</sup> This night methinks is but the daylight sick.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, v, 1, 124. (1597)

Come, seeling night,

Scarf up the tender eye of pitiful day.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, iii, 2, 46. (1606)

Night begins to muffle up the day.

WITHER, Mistresse of Philarete. (a. 1620)

<sup>8</sup> Night is the older by one day. (ἡ νύξ μιὰ ἡμέρα πρότερον.)

THALES, when asked which was the older, night or day. (c. 585 B. C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS. Thales. Sec. 36.

O majestic Night!

Nature's great ancestor! Day's elder-born!

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Nt. ix, l. 549. (1745)

NIGHTINGALE

<sup>9</sup> A nightingale dies for shame if another bird sings better.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy.

Pt. i, sec. ii, mem. 3, subs. 6. (1621)

The nightingale got no prize at the poultry show.

SIR WALTER RALEIGH, Epigram. (c. 1920)

<sup>10</sup> Nightingale and cuckoo sing both in one month.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 106. (1639)

<sup>11</sup> The magpie is competing with the nightingale. the hoopoe with the swan. (Pica cum lusciniā certat, epopa cum cygnis.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, i, viii, 72. (1523) Quoting Theocritus. A similar one is "A magpie aping a siren" (Pica Syrenem imitans)

If I cannot sing, said he, so pleasantlie as the Nightingale, yet will I croake at the least like a Crowe.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iv, p. 166. (1574) Young, tr.

<sup>1</sup> A Nightingale cannot sing in a Cage.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 335. (1732)

Nightingales can sing their own Song best.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3542.

I HAVE HEARD THE NIGHTINGALE, see IMITATION.

<sup>2</sup> The croaking of frogs is well known, and from that in fenny countries they are stiled Dutch Nightingales.

PENNANT, British Zoölogy, iii, 5. (1769)

I cannot persuade myself to find a true bill against these poor persecuted Dutch nightingales.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, Omniana, ii, 33. (1812)

Dutch nightingale, a frog, from its melodious note in the spring.

W. T. SPURDENS, A Supplementary Volume to Forby's Vocabulary of East Anglia. (1840)

<sup>3</sup> I'm afraid of song failing the nightingale. (Luscinolae ne defuerit cantio.)

PLAUTUS, Bacchides, l. 34. (190 B. C.)

The nightingale is sovereigne of song.

EDMUND SPENSER, The Shepheards Calender. November, l. 25. (1579)

The nightingale, if she should sing by day, When every goose is cackling, would be thought No better a musician than the wren.

How many things by season season'd are

To their right praise and true perfection!

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, v, l. 104. (1597)

<sup>4</sup> The lovely-voiced harbinger of spring, the nightingale. (ἦρος ἀγγελος ἡμερόφωνος ἀήδω.)

SAPPHO, Fragments. Frag. 138. (c. 610 B. C.)

Quoted by SCHOLIAST on Sophocles, who also calls the nightingale "the messenger of Zeus," because she is a sign of spring. See EDMONDS, Lyra Graeca, i, 277.

The Nightingale, sweet Harbinger of the Light.

JOHN FRYER, A New Account of East India and Persia, p. 248 (1698)

NILE

<sup>5</sup> Nylus breedeth the precious stone and the poysoned serpent.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 196 (1579)

<sup>6</sup> It is said that dogs run when they drink in the river Nile, lest they should be seized by crocodiles. (Canes currentes bibere in Nilo flumine, | a crocodilis ne rapiantur, traditum est.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. i, fab. 25, l. 4. (c. 25 B. C.) The Latin proverb is, "Ut canis e Nilo" (Like a dog by the Nile), meaning restless and ill at ease.

Imitate the dogge of Aegypt, which drinketh at the river Nyle, and then runneth his way.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 90. (1574) Pettie, tr.

He [Ancillon] read many of these, but not with equal attention—Sicut canis ad Nilum, bibens et fugiens.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Curiosities of Literature, i, 11. (1791)

<sup>7</sup> For what cause, Father Nile, or in what lands may I declare that thou hast hid thy head? (Nile pater, quanam possim te dicere causa | aut quibus in terris occuluisse caput?)

TIBULLUS, Elegies. Bk. i, eleg. 7, l. 23. (19 B. C.)

There is a Latin proverb concerning the sources of the Nile, "Facilius sit Nili caput invenire" (It would be easier to discover the sources of the Nile).

NIMBLE

<sup>8</sup> As nimble as an eel.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Womans Prize. Act iv, sc. 1. (c. 1613)

As nimble as an eele riggling in the mud.

UNKNOWN, The Mistaken Husband. Act i, sc. 3. (1675)

As glib and nimble As tail of eell.

THOMAS WARD, England's Reformation, p. 83. (1710)

As nimble as an Eel in a Sand-bag.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 719. (1710)

<sup>9</sup> The "nimble ninepence" being considered "better than the slow shilling."

HENRY MAYHEW, London Labour and the London Poor, ii, 263/1. (1851)

'E gamboled over the yat [gate] as nimble as ninepence.

MRS. CHAMBERLAIN, A Glossary of West Worcestershire Words, p. 13. (1882)

Not a bad instance of the nimble ninepence.

SIR JOHN ASTLEY, Fifty Years of My Life, ii, 68. (1894)

<sup>10</sup> The salvages by the nimbleness of their heeles well escaped.

CAPTAIN JOHN SMITH, The Generall Historie of Virginia. Bk. iii, ch. 1. (1624) See also under HEEL.

He presumed to depend on . . . the nimbleness of his horse.

THOMAS LEDIARD, tr., The Life of Sethos. Bk. ii, ch. 9. (1732)

<sup>11</sup> As nimble as a blind cat in a barn.

UNKNOWN, in Berkeley MSS, iii, 30. (1639)

As nimble as a cat on a haite back-stane.

GEORGE MERITON, Praise of Yorkshire Ale, p. 83. (1683)

NIMROD

<sup>12</sup> Nimrod the mighty hunter before the Lord. (Nemrod robustus venator coram Domino.)

Old Testament: Genesis, x, 9. (c. 550 B. C.)

Nimrod is associated with a number of old legends. It is said that his might as a hunter was derived from the garments of skin worn by Adam and Eve when they were driven from Paradise. The garments had first belonged to Enoch, then to Methusaleh, and then to Noah, who preserved them in the ark. Then Ham stole them and finally gave them to his son Cush, who in turn presented them to Nimrod. They made Nimrod invincible, so that he overcame not only all the beasts of the forest, but also the King of Babylon, in whose place he reigned.

Proud Nimrod first the bloody chase began,
A mighty hunter, and his prey was man.

POPE, Windsor Forest, l. 61. (1704)

I look upon you to be the . . . Nimrod among this Species of Writers.

ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 371. (1712)

NIP AND TUCK

1 There we were at rip [probably a misprint] and tuck, up one tree and down another.

J. K. PAULDING, Westward Ho, i, 172. (1832)
For several minutes it was nip and tuck.

W. F. CODY (BUFFALO BILL), The Wild West, p. 337. (1888)

It was nip and tuck.

H. L. WILSON, Land Claimers, p. 114. (1911)
The Giants were having a nip and tuck game.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON, Pitching, p. 113. (1912)

NO

See also Yea and Nay; Woman:
A Woman's No

2 The Everlasting No. (Das ewige Nein.)

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. ii, ch. 7, heading. (1831)

Resolutely whispered "no's."

RUSKIN, Ethics of the Dust, p. 97. (1865)

3 You won't take no for an answer.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 5. (1843)

I don't mean to take "No" for an answer.

LEE THAYER, Accessory After the Fact, p. 38. (1943)

4 Come what come would, I thought er we came there,

That if the woorst fell, we could have but a naie.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

5 Would, No, I thank you, had never been made.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 77. (1678)

"No, thank you," has lost many a good butter-cake.

HARLAND AND WILKINSON, Lancashire Legends, p. 201. (1873)

6 Pray, don't say no, till you are asked.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

7 I have not skill

From such a sharp and waspish word as "No"
To pluck the sting.

HENRY TAYLOR, Philip Van Artevelde. Act. i, sc. 2. (1834)

There is something wanting in the man who does not hate himself whenever he is constrained to say no.

R. L. STEVENSON, Familiar Studies of Men and Books, Ch. 4. (1882)

8 He lernyd tymely to steyll that couth not say nay.

UNKNOWN, Towneley Mysteries: Second Shepherd Play, 524. (c. 1460)

He gangs earlie to steal, that cannot say na.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 42. (c. 1595) Cited by KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 170 (1721), with the comment, "Because men will make a prey of his liberal disposition."

It's a good thing you weren't born a girl. You'd be in the family way all the time. You can't say "No."

GEORGE TRYON HARDING, to his son, Warren G. Harding, (c. 1884) Harding's off-the-record speech at National Press Club Banquet, Washington, 1922.

NOBILITY

I—Nobility of Character

9 The noble man is always noble. (ὁ δ' ἐσθλὸς ἐσθλός.)

EURIPIDES, Hecuba, l. 597. (c. 425 B.C. In a fragment from Danae, Euripides says, "Unto the noble everything is noble." And there is a Greek proverb, "ἅπαντα τοῖς καλοῖσιν ἀνδράσιν πρέπει" (Everything is becoming to the noble), which CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum, paraphrases, "Homines frugi omnia recte faciunt" (Noble men do everything rightly).

No sir, pardon me, nay rather. I wyl tel you a prety demaund, that was asked of one. There was one that asked Diogenes which was the noblest man in the world: he answered, He that can despise riches, glory, and then life, & also ouercome the contraries to these, that is, Pouertie. Infamie, Sorow, and death, and suffer them with an inuincible hart.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 41. (1578) This aphorism has not been traced to Diogenes or to any other writer. Florio perhaps found it in PEDRO MEXIA, Silva de Varia Lecion, translated into English by Thomas Fortesque in 1571.

True nobility is exempt from fear.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, iv, 1, 129. (1590)

10 Serve a noble disposition, though poor, the time comes that he will repay thee.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 370. (1640)

A noble plant suits not with a stubborn ground.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 624.

Noble plants suit not a stubborn soil.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 21. (1670)

11 Praise the noble. (ἐσθλὸν αἰνεῖν.)

PINDAR, Nemean Odes. No. iii, l. 29. (c. 475 B.C.) Quoted as a precept.

II—Nobility of Birth

See also Aristocracy

<sup>1</sup> Relationship compels. (τὸ . . . συγγενὲς . . . ἐναγκαλίζει.)

AESCHYLUS, Prometheus Bound, l. 291. (470 B. C.)

The nobly born must nobly meet their fate.

EURIPIDES, Alcmene. Frag. 100. (c. 410 B. C.)

Noblesse oblige. (Nobility compels it.)

DUC DE LEVIS, Maxims. No. 73. (1808) COMTE DE LABORDE, Notice to the French Historical Society (1865), states that this is the first appearance of the phrase in this form. It has been variously translated—"Nobility constrains us," "Birth compels it"—its meaning being that noble birth imposes the obligation of noble actions.

Noblesse oblige; or, superior advantages bind you to larger generosity.

R. W. EMERSON, Progress of Culture. (1875)

Noblesse oblige, that paternoster of princes.

OUIDA (LOUISE DE LA RAMÉE), Moths. Ch. 5. (1880)

All fat men are jolly—he is compelled an air of jollity because it is expected of him, sort of noblesse oblige.

FRANK CASE, Do Not Disturb, p. 143. (1940)

Noblesse oblige. Good breeding (noblesse, noble birth or rank) demands or expects it. Litttré, "Quiconque prétend être noble, doit se bien conduire" (Whoever pretends to be noble, should conduct himself well).

PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés. (1941)

<sup>2</sup> The more noble, the more humble.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 140. (1633)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 19. (1670)

The more noble any one is, the more humble.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Clarissa, iv, 238. (1748)

<sup>3</sup> The nobleman is he whose noble mind is filled with inborn worth, unborrowed from his kind.

DRYDEN, The Wife of Bath's Tale, l. 384. (1700)

Those who think nobly are noble.

ISAAC BICKERSTAFFE, The Maid of the Mill.

Act ii, sc. 1. (1765) See also under THOUGHT.

<sup>4</sup> All nobility in its beginnings was somebody's natural superiority.

EMERSON, English Traits: Aristocracy. (1856)

<sup>5</sup> I take but small account of noble birth; For me the virtuous is the noble man; The vicious, though his father ranked above Great Zeus himself, I still would base-born call.

(ὁ μὲν γὰρ ἐσθλὸς εὐγενὴς ἔμοι γ' ἀνὴρ, δ' ὁ δὲ οὐ δίκαιος, καὶ ἀμείνωνος πατρὸς Ζηνὸς πεφύκει, δυσγενὴς εἶναι δοκεῖ.)

EURIPIDES, Dictys. Frag. 10. (c. 430 B. C.) A bit of moralizing used in varying forms by many Greek and Roman writers. It became a definite Stoic doctrine, in line with other aphorisms about the worthlessness of riches as compared with wisdom and virtue. Many of them are given by STOBÆUS, in his Florilegium.

Who is of noble birth? He who is by nature well-fitted for virtue. . . . A hall full of smoke-begrimed busts do not make the nobleman. (Quis est generosus? Ad virtutem bene a natura compositus. . . . Non facit nobilem atrium plenum fumosis imaginibus.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xlv, sec. 5. (c. A. D. 64)

The man whose natural bent is good, though Ethiopie, is nobly born. (ὅς ἂν εὖ γεγονὼς ᾗ τῇ φύσει πρὸς τὰγαθά, | καὶ Ἀθιοψ ᾗ, ἐστὶν εὐγενής.)

MENANDER, Fragments. Frag. 533 K. (c. 300 B. C.)

The one and only nobility is virtue. (Nobilitas sola est atque unica virtus.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. viii, l. 20. (c. A. D. 120)

This is the shortest and best known statement of the aphorism in ancient letters. Gifford renders it, "Virtue alone is true nobility."

For all that faire is, is by nature good;

That is the signe to know the gentle blood.

EDMUND SPENSER, An Hymne in Honour of Beautie, l. 139. (1596)

'Tis virtue, and not birth, that makes us noble.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Prophetess. Act ii, sc. 3. (c. 1613)

To labour for Vertue, which is true Nobility.

JOSIAS SHUTE, Sermons: Sarah and Hagar, p. 142. (1641)

What tho' no grants of royal donors,

With pompous titles grace our blood;

We'll shine in more substantial honours,

And to be noble we'll be good.

UNKNOWN, Winifreda. (1726) PERCY, Reliques, bk. iii, No. 13, says, "The beautiful address to conjugal love, a subject too much neglected by the libertine Muses, was, I believe, first printed in a volume of 'Miscellaneous Poems, by several hands,' published in 1726. It is there said, how truly I know not, to be a translation 'from the ancient British tongue.'"

'Tis only noble to be good.

TENNYSON, Lady Clara Vere de Ver. (1842)

<sup>6</sup> Many nobly born prove to be knaves. (πολλοὶ γὰρ οὖντες εὐγενεῖς εἰσιν κακοί.)

EURIPIDES, Electra, l. 551. (c. 413 B. C.)

There are many, whom their noble birth maketh ignoble.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 189. (1574) Pettie, tr.

A man borne wel, and living yll, is a monstrous thing, and wortheie to be abhorred.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, ii, 191.

<sup>7</sup> Send your noble Blood to Market, and see what it will buy.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4099. (1732) The Danes have a proverb, "The older the blood the less the pride" (Jo ædlere Blod, jo mindre Hovmod). See also under BLOOD.

Noble blood is an accident of fortune; noble actions characterize the great. (Il sangue nobile è un accidente della fortuna; le azioni nobili caratterizzano il grande.)

CARLO GOLDONI, Pamela. Act i, sc. 6. (c. 1775)

1 Wisdom is the noblest pedigree and love the choicest tie.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Peninim (Choice of Pearls). No. 24. (c. 1050) Ascher, tr. Benhamelech Vehanazir has: "He who is void of intrinsic nobility will derive no benefit from a noble pedigree." See ASCHER, Choice of Pearls, p. 138.

2 It was not nobility that gave land, but the possession of land that gave nobility.

HENRY GEORGE, Progress and Poverty. Bk. vii, ch. 2. (1879)

3 A famous writer, speaking of the nobilitie of the world, maketh it nothing else then aun-cient riches.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 177. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Nobility is nothing but ancient riches: and money is the idol the world adores.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 66. (1678) See under GENTILITY.

4 Who can be called noble who is unworthy of his race, and distinguished in nothing but his name? (Quis enim generosum dixerit hunc qui indignus genere et praeclaro nomine tantum insignis?)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. viii, l. 30. (c. A. D. 120) Nobility, without ability, is like a pudding without suet. Both want the principal ingredient.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 259. (1721)

5 We must give the name of noble only to the temperate and just. (χρὴ μόνους λέγειν εὐγενεῖς τοὺς σώφρονας καὶ δικαίους.)

PHILO, De Virtutibus. Sec. 189. (c. 40 A. D.)

6 They be most noble who are commended more for their perfection, then their petegree.

JOHN LYL, Euphuus and His England (Arber), p. 390. (1580)

He is noble that hath noble conditions.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 119. (1678) The Germans say, "Edel ist, der edel thut" (Noble is that noble does).

7 A noble fool was never in a fault.

POPE, January and May, l. 165. (1709)

A saint in crape is twice a saint in lawn.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. i, l. 136. (1732)

8 The nobility think scorn to go in leather aprons.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, iv, 2, 12. (1590)

It becomes noblemen to do nothing well.

CHAPMAN, Gentleman Usher. Act i, sc. 1. (1606)

Idleness is an appendix to nobility.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. i, sec. ii, mem. 2, subs. 6. (1621)

9 A sprig of the nobility.

JAMES SHIRLEY, Hyde Park. Act i, sc. 1. (1632)

10 Whoe'er amid the sons
Of reason, valour, liberty, and virtue,
Displays distinguished merit, is a noble
Of Nature's own creating.

JAMES THOMSON, Coriolanus. Act iii, sc. 3. (1749) Hence, "Nature's nobleman."

He is one of nature's noblemen.

HENRY B. FULLER, Striking an Average. (1901)

NOD

11 As good is a becke [bow, nod], as is a dewe vow garde [dieu vous garde, God keep you].

JOHN BALE, Three Lawes. (1538)

And thus with a becke as good as a dieu garde.
She flang fro me.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)

A becke of yours is as good as a Dieugarde.

BRIAN MELBANCKE, Philotimus, sig. F4. (1583)

A winke, a cast of the eye . . . a becke is as good as a Dew guard.

JOHN FLORIO, tr., Montaigne. Bk. ii, ch. 5

(1603) Florio's rendering of "une oeuillade, une inclination, une parole, une signe."

12 A Nod of an honest Man is enough.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 336. (1732)

A Nod from a Lord is a Breakfast for a Fool.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 338.

Nods of lords are dinners for a fool.

JOHN WOLCOT (PETER PINDAR), Odes of Consolence. (a. 1816)

13 And Cain . . . dwelt in the land of Nod, on the east of Eden.

Old Testament: Genesis, iv, 16. (c. 550 B. C.)

The Vulgate does not use the phrase, but has simply, "In terram ad orientalem plagam Eden."

I'm going to the land of Nod.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii. (1738)

A pun on the Biblical place-name.

There's queer things chanced since ye hae been in the land of Nod.

WALTER SCOTT, The Heart of Midlothian. Ch. 30. (1818)

14 The son of Cronos spake, and bowed his dark brow in assent. (ἦ καὶ κτανέσθην ἐπ' ὀφρύσι νεύσει Κρονίων.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. i, l. 528. (c. 850 B. C.) Pope paraphrases this, "Shakes his ambrosial curls and gives the nod. The stamp of fate, the sanction of the god." (l. 684) Bryant renders it, "Behold, I give the nod." HOMER SOMETIMES NODS, see under HOMER.

He caused all Olympus to tremble with his nod. (Totum nutu tremefecit Olympum.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. ix, l. 106. (19 B. C.)

With ravish'd ears | The monarch hears;

Assumes the god, | Affects to nod,

And seems to shake the spheres.

JOHN DRYDEN, Alexander's Feast, l. 37. (1697)

With a Word or a Nod, absolutely commanding the whole City.

ROBERT SOUTH, Sermons, p. 395. (1684)

Nations obey my word, and wait my nod.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Solomon. Bk. ii, l. 944 (1718)
They watched his nod; they trembled at his frown.

EDWARD GIBBON, History of the Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire. Ch. 34. (1781)

<sup>1</sup> Eche moment at death his nod and beck.

JOHN MAPLET, A Greene Forest, p. 29. (1567)
A nod and a wink are very often treacherous and false.

SAMUEL PALMER, Moral Essays on Proverbs, p. 100. (1710)

<sup>2</sup> Duck with French nods and apish courtesy.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, i, 3, 49. (1592)

<sup>3</sup> A wink's as good as a nod with some folks.

DOROTHY WORDSWORTH, Journal, i, 129. (1802)
I shall say no more at present, a nod is as good as a wink.

BENJAMIN H. MALKIN, tr., Gil Blas. Bk. ii, ch. 9. (1809)

A wink's as gude as a nod to a blind horse.

SCOTT, Heart of Midlothian. Ch. 16. (1818)

A nod is as good as a wink.

SCOTT, The Fortunes of Nigel. Ch. 25. (1822)

A nod's as good as a wink to a blind horse.

FREDERICK MARRYAT, Peter Simple. Ch. 51. (1834)
HALIBURTON, Wise Saws. Ch. 2. (1853)
WENTWORTH, Pursuit of a Parcel, p. 33. (1942) etc., etc.

"To a blind Horse a Nod is as good as a Wink."
Which some learned chap, . . .
Perhaps would translate by the words Verbum Sap!

R. H. BARHAM, The Ingoldsby Legends: The Old Woman Clothed in Grey. (1842)

A nod is as good as a wink to such a dark horse as you are.

JUSTIN MCCARTHY, Red Diamonds, ii, 28. (1893)
The nod even of your Prime Minister is no more good than a wink to the blind horse.

FRANCIS BEEDING, Eleven Were Brave, p. 171. (1941)

Neither a nod nor a wink is necessary to a clear-sighted horse.

P. C. WREN, The Uniform of Glory, p. 65. (1941)

A nod was even better than a kick in the ribs to a sharp-sighted horse.

P. C. WREN, The Uniform of Glory, p. 87.

<sup>4</sup> A nod to the wise is sufficient; the fool requires a blow.

UNKNOWN, Alphabet of Ben Sira. No. 12. (c. 1000)
Cited as a maxim in Proverbs Rabbah, xxii, 15.

A nod for a wise man, and a rod for a fool.

JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 413. (1678)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 337. (1732)

The wise with a wink, the fool with a kick.

JOHN LEWIS BUECKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 64. (1817)

A WORD TO THE WISE, see under WORD.

NOISE

<sup>5</sup> The noise of the hammer and the anvil is ever in his ears. (Vox mallei innovat aurem eius.)
Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, xxxviii, 28. (c. 190 B. C.)

<sup>6</sup> What is odious but noise, and people who scream and bewail.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Culture. (1860)

Noise: A stench in the ear.

AMBROSE BIERCE, Devil's Dictionary. (1906)

<sup>7</sup> Thou that are full of stirs. (Clamoribus plena.)
Old Testament: Isaiah, xxii, 2 (c. 725 B. C.)

<sup>8</sup> Pharaoh king of Egypt is but a noise. (Vocate nomen Pharaonis regis Aegypti, tumultum.)
Old Testament: Jeremiah, xli, 17. (c. 700 B. C.)

<sup>9</sup> Noiseless as fear in a wide wilderness.

JOHN KEATS, The Eve of St. Agnes. St. 28. (1820)

<sup>10</sup> The noise of many waters. (A vocabis aquarum multarum.)

Old Testament: Psalms, xciii, 4. (c. 350 B. C.)

<sup>11</sup> He that loves noise must buy a pig. (Quien quiere ruydo, compre un cochino.)

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Spanish, p. 143. (1813)

<sup>12</sup> Their . . . mystical Learning hath made the greatest noise in the world.

BISHOP EDWARD STILLINGFLEET, Origines Sacrae. Bk. ii, ch. 2, sec. 6. (1662)

Such persons as have made a noise in the world.

JOSEPH ADDISON, Ancient Medals. (1702)

I have made noise enough in the world already.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Remark, at Saint Helena. (1816)
Echoing Danton. See O'MEARA, Napoleon in Exile. Napoleon might have quoted another French proverb, "I do not like noise unless I make it myself."

<sup>13</sup> The noise is so great, one cannot hear God thunder. (Le bruit est si fort, qu'on n'entend pas Dieu tonner.)

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs. Ch. 6. (1863)

NONSENSE

<sup>14</sup> You're talking nonsense. (λῆρον ληρῆς.)

ARISTOPHANES, Plutus, l. 517. (388 B. C.)

Let us have no more of this nonsense.

WALTER SCOTT, The Antiquary. Ch. 13. (1816)

STUFF AND NONSENSE, see under STUFF.

<sup>15</sup> As charms are nonsense, nonsense is a charm

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734.

<sup>16</sup> No one is exempt from talking nonsense; the misfortune is to do it solemnly. (Personne n'est exempt de dire des fadaïses; le malheur est de les dire curieusement.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 1. (1595)

Learned Nonsense has a deeper Sound,
Than easy Sense, and goes for more profound.
SAMUEL BUTLER, Remains, i, 222. (a. 1680)

1

The era of wonderful nonsense.

WESTBROOK PEGLER, 'Tain't Right: Mr. Gump Himself. (1936) Pegler first used the phrase to describe the spending antics of a comics artist made rich by the popularity of his drawings, and later to characterize the bubble prosperity and orgy of speculation which ended in the crash of 1929.

2

His word was still.—Fie, foh, and fum,
I smell the blood of a British man.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, iii, 4, 188. (1605) The first line of the doggerel spoken by the giant in the nursery tale, Jack the Giant Killer, when he discovers the presence of Jack.

The bloody villain is at his fee, fa, fum, already.
DRYDEN, Amphytrion. Act ii, sc. 1. (1690)
"Fee, faw, fum"; nonsense.

The valiant Thumb, Facing the castle glum,
And the giant's fee-faw-fum!

ROBERT BROWNING, A Lover's Quarrel, l. 16.

3

There was 'no nonsense about him.'

SIR GEORGE STEPHEN, Adventures in Search of a Horse, i, 4. (1836)

Mr. Ogilvie would allow 'no nonsense' of late rising.

MISS MULOCK, The Ogilvies. Ch. 2. (1849)

A doosed fine gal—well educated too—with no biggodd nonsense about her.

DICKENS, Little Dorrit. Bk. i, ch. 33. (1857)

4

A careless song, with a little nonsense in it now and then, does not misbecome a monarch.

WALPOLE, Letter to Sir Horace Mann, 1774.

A little nonsense now and then
Is relished by the wisest men.

UNKNOWN, Old nursery rhyme.

Nothing like a little judicious levity.

STEVENS AND OSBOURNE, The Wrong Box.
Chap. 7. (1889)

NORTH

5

Do my northern cloth zhrink i' the wetting, ha?
BEN JONSON, Bartholomew Fayre. Act iv, sc. 3.
(1614)

Three ills come from the North, a cold Wind, a shrinking Cloth, and a dissembling Man.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 1/1.
(1659) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 19. (1670)

Cold weather and knaves come out of the North.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 15. (1678)

Three great evils come out of the North, a cold wind, a cunning knave, and shrinking cloth.

GEORGE MERITON, Yorkshire Ale, 83. (1683)

6

You shall find me too far north for you.

TOBIAS SMOLLETT, Roderick Random, i, 124.
(1748) Too clever for you.

She was what I call too far north for that.

MRS. A. M. BENNETT, The Beggar Girl, iii, 28.
(1797)

7

Out of the North all ill comes forth.

UNKNOWN. (a. 1588) See CHEVIOT, Proverbs of Scotland. Harleian Miscellanies, vii, 199.
(1649)

There hath beene an old saying, that all ills rise out of the North.

SIR RICHARD BARCKLEY, The Felicitie of Man, iv, iii, 339. (1598)

No good comes from the North.

FORD AND DEKKER, The Sun's Darling. Act v.
(1656)

NOSE

8

My father was a freedman, who wiped his nose on his sleeve. (ἐμὸς ὁ πατὴρ μὲν ἦν ἀπελεύθερος, τῷ ἀγκῶνι ἀπομυσσόμενος.)

BION, Apothegm. (c. 250 B.C.) See DIOGENES
LAERTIUS, Bion. Bk. iv, sec. 46.

Thus they wold, if we will beleve,
Wypen our nose with our owne sleve.

UNKNOWN, Libelle of Englyshe Polycye. (1437)
See WRIGHT, Political Poems, ii, 176.

Make you wype your nose vpon your sleeue.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)
For any recompence he is like to haue at mine handes, he may wype his nose in his sleeue.

RICHARD STANYHURST, Description of Ireland,
fo. 8. (1577)

They wipe his nose with his owne sleeue, his taile with his owne shirt: they allow him meat, or meanes, out of his own money.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Nez. (1611)

It was used in that good old world, when men wiped their nose on their sleeve (as the French men sayes).

ROBERT JOHNSON, tr., The Worlde, p. 160. (1630)

He wiped his nose with his own sleeve, viz. he couzened him neatly.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 22. (1659)

9

I see by his nose that of al potage he loueth good Ale.

WILLIAM BULLEIN, *A Dialogue Against the
Feuer Pestilence* (1888), p. 79. (1564)

Your nose bewrayes what porredge you loue.

LODGE, Rosalynde (Hunt Cl.), p. 91. (1590)

Nose, nose, jolly red nose,

And who gave thee this jolly red nose?

Nutmegs and ginger, cinnamon and cloves,

And they gave me this jolly red nose.

THOMAS RAVENS-CROFT, Deuteromelia. Song No.
7. (1609) Quoted by BEAUMONT and FLETCH-
ER, Knight of the Burning Pestle. Act i, sc. 4.

One may tell by her nose what pottage she loves.

NATHANIEL FIELD, A Woman is a Weathercock.
Act i, sc. 2. (1612)

As the drunkard goes, is known by his nose.

JOHN WODROEPHE, *The Spared Houres of a
Souldier in His Travels*, p. 491. (1623)

I know by your nose what porredge you love.

JAMES MABBE, tr., Celestina (T.T.), p. 104.
(1631) Cited by Ray and Fuller.

You may know by his looks what porridge he likes.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 179. (1639)

Their noses blossom as the Lobster.

ARTEMUS WARD, Fourth of July Oration. (1859)
Bottle-nosed. Having a nose created in the image of its maker.

AMBROSE BIERCE, Devil's Dictionary. (1906)
A red-nosed man may not be a drunkard, but he will always be called one.

H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs.
No. 568. (1937)

1
Great is the ornament that the Face receiveth
by the Nose.

JOHN BULWER, Anthropometamorphosis, p. 77.
(1650)

2
Round was his face, and camuse was his nose.
CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Reeves Tale,
l. 14. (c. 1386) Short and flat, a pug nose.

A gentleman and a pug nose is a contradiction in terms.

E. A. POE, Marginalia. (c. 1845)

3
Chuse his Bread, and hang a Nose to Leekes.
GEORGE DANIEL, Trinarchodia: Henry V, CXXV.
(1649) To have a hankering for.

If there be in my Kitchin any better than another . . . this Gallant will hang a nose after it.
SOREL, History of Francion, viii, 19. (1655)

4
Wipe your nose and do not blame God.
(ἀπόμυξαι καὶ μὴ ἐγκάλει.)

EPICETUS, Discourses. Bk. ii, ch. 16, sec. 13.
(c. A. D. 100)

He that snites [wipes] his nose and bath it not, forfeits his face to the king.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 86. (1678)

5
As plain as the nose on your face.

ERASMUS, Praise of Folly, sec. 25. (1516) See under PLAIN.

6
She shall ne'er recover To bore my nose.
FLETCHER AND SHIRLEY, The Night-Walker. Act
ii, sc. 3. (1625) To cheat me.

I have known divers Dutch Gentlemen grosly guld by this cheat, and som English bor'd also through the nose.

JAMES HOWELL, Instructions for Forreine Tra-vell, p. 44. (1642)

7
This Text holdeth their noses so hard to the grindstone, that it clean disfigureth their faces.

JOHN FRITH, A Mirrour to Knowe Thyselpe
(1829), p. 273. (1539)

And also I shall, to reueng former hurtis,
Hold their noses to grinstone, and syt on theyr skurtis.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 5. (1546)
We . . . contemn, insult, vex, torture, molest, and hold one another's noses to the grindstone hard.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy.
Pt. iii, sec. i, mem. 3. (1621)

To hold one's Nose to the Grindstone.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5187.
(1732) Frequently thereafter.

A man may, if he know not how to save as he gets, keep his Nose all his Life to the Grindstone, and die not worth a Groat at last.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1758.

I would not let my nose be kept to the grindstone, as yours is, for any one living.

MARIA EDGEWORTH, Popular Tales: Contrast.
Ch. 1. (1801)

His nose shall be kept to the grindstone.

DICKENS, Our Mutual Friend. Bk. iii, ch. 14.
(1865)

Never a word of excuse from the grindstones with millions of noses pressed to them.

ANONYMOUS, Meditations in Wall Street, p. 35.
(1940)

Work day and night with your nose to the sawmill,

If you're sawmill.

OGDEN NASH, Oh to Be Good. (1940)

His nose had worn a groove in the grindstone.

A. A. FAIR, Double or Quits, p. 65. (1941)

8
An Inch on a Man's Nose is much.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 634. (1732)

9
Keep your nose clean and you'll keep out of trouble.

E. K. GOLDTHWAITE, You Did It, p. 41. (1943)

MANNING LONG, False Alarm, p. 137. (1943)

10
The nose is placed above the mouth, to this ende, that all those things wherewith we feede our bellies, must first paie tribute to the nose, and from thence have their pasporte and assurance for consequent and due nourishment in our bellies.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iv,
p. 147. (1574) Young, tr.

Therupon it is sayd, That the nose cannot bee cut without bloddying the mouth.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, iii, 87.

11
Hir nose was wrought at poynt devys,
For it was gentil and tretys.

GUILLAUME DE LORRIS, Roman de la Rose.
(c. 1240) CHAUCER (?) tr., l. 1215. (c. 1365)

12
"Scant o' cheeks" maks a lang nose.

ALFRED HENDERSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 86.
(1832) Another Scottish proverb is, "Folk wi' lang noses aye tak' till themselfs." The Germans say, "Lange Nase, spitzes Kinn, Da sitzt der Teufel leibhaft drin" (Long nose, pointed chin, The devil himself sits within).

13
How can she geue a kysse sowre or sweete?

His chin and his nose, within halfe an inche meete.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 1. (1546)
Her nose and chin they threaten ither.

ROBERT BURNS, Sic a Wife as Willie Had. (c.
1789)

14
Hee deuised a shifte howe to wype the by-shoppes nose of some of his golde.

RAPHAEL HOLINSHED, Chronicles of England.
Vol. ii, p. 323/2. (1577) To cheat.

I have wiped your nose, and Nicks too, you must weare the willow garland.

DELONEY, The Gentle Craft. Ch. 14. (c. 1597)
There's . . . the Dutchman with my mistress;
my nose is wiped to-day.

JOHN DRYDEN, Amboyna. Act ii, sc. 3. (1673)
I wiped his nose on't.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 343. (1678)
I durst lay my life thow wipest this foolish knight's nose of his mistress at last.

COLLEY CIBBER, The Rival Fools. Act i. (1709)

1
I turn up a scornful nose. (Ego naribus uti.)
HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 19, l. 45. (20 B. C.)
[He] turned up his nose with an expression of contempt.

MADAME D'ARLAY, Diary, 20 Oct., 1779.
The nose furnished the principal expression of derision in the countenance.

JOHN FERRIAR, Illustrations of Sterne, iv, 103.
(1798)

Antonia, . . . turning up her nose, with looks abused Her master.

LORD BYRON, Don Juan. Bk. i, st. 159. (1818)
[She] turned up her nose at a midshipman.

MARRYAT, Mr. Midshipman Easy. Ch. 24. (1836)
The better classes turn up their noses at these odoriferous delicacies.

FORD, Hand-book for Spain. Ch. 1. (1845)
To turn up his nose at his father's customers.
GEORGE ELIOT, The Mill on the Floss. Bk. iii,
ch. 5. (1860)

2
The child could not live long, because he had a blue vein across his nose.

ROBERT HUNT, Popular Romances of the West of England, p. 431. (1865)

If he has blue veins on the nose,
He'll never wear his wedding clothes.
Notes and Queries. Ser. vii, vol. vii, p. 216. (1889)

3
Therefore will I put my hook in thy nose . . .
and will turn thee back. (Ponam ergo circulum in naribus tuis.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, xxxvii, 29. (c. 725 B. C.)
To lead by the nose, as they say. (τῆς ᾠρὸς. φασί, ἔλκων.)

LUCIAN, Dialogues of the Gods. Ch. 7, sec. 3.
(c. A. D. 170) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, i, 19, with the Latin, "Naribus trahere." The proverb originated from the custom of leading animals by rings passed through their nostrils. Erasmus cites a similar proverb,
"Pedibus trahere" (To drag by the foot), deriving from Homer, who tells how Achilles dragged Hector by the foot behind his chariot around the walls of Troy.

False idolatry ledeth hem by the sleue.

LYDGATE, Assembly of Gods, l. 1680. (c. 1425)
Men . . . suffer themselves to be led by the noses like brute beasts.

ARTHUR GOLDING, tr., Calvin on Deuteronomy, cxxi, 745. (1583)

Menar par il naso, to leade by the nose, to make a foole of one.

JOHN FLORIO, The Worlde of Wordes: Menar.
(1598) The French say, "Mener par le nez."

The Moor . . . will as tenderly be led by the nose

As asses are.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, i, 3, 407. (1605)
Though authority be a stubborn bear, yet he is oft led by the nose with gold.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale, iv, 4, 835. (1610)
They will make others most devout and suspicious, . . . and lead them by the nose like so many bears in a line.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy.
Pt. iii, sec. iv, mem. i, subs. 2. (1621)

Under pretence of opening the queen's eyes, [he] did lead her by the nose, captivating her judgment instead of directing it.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy War. Pt. ii, ch. 31
(1639)

Go, go, you must not suffer yourself to be led by the nose.

JOHN OZELL, tr., Molière, iii, 92. (1714)

They [the great] have favourite domestics who lead them by the nose.

TOBIAS SMOLLET, tr., Gil Blas, iii, 77. (1749)
I heard her say myself that she could lead you
by the nose.

GARRICK, Neck or Nothing. Act ii, sc. 1. (1766)
A mob of fools and knaves, led by the nose.

KINGSLEY, Plays and Puritans, p. 211. (1873)

4
He that has a mickle nose, thinks every body is speaking of it. People that are sensible of their guilt, are always full of suspicion.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 172. (1721)
He that has a great Nose, thinks every body is speaking of it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2129. (1732)
I went to the Court for the first time today, and like the man with the large nose, thought everybody was thinking of me and my mishap.

WALTER SCOTT, Diary, 24 Jan., 1826.

